MR. ALEX HESS

Williamsburg village lost one of its most highly respected citizens in the person of the late Mr. Alex Hess whose death occurred at his home on Saturday morning, September 21st, 1929, after a lengthy illness.

The late Mr. Hess was a faithful member of the United Church and a man of sterling qualities, one whose word was as good as any bond and he will be missted not only by his immediate family, but also by all his old neighbors and a host of friends and acquaintances.

Mr. Hess leaves to mourn his loss his widow, his only son Byrtle, at home, and his only daughter Opal, R.N. of Rochester, N.Y.

The funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. A.M. Russell, from his late home to the United Church, after which the remains were followed to their last resting place in Mountain cemetery by a large and sympathetic procession of old friends and relatives.

MRS. WM. PIELOW

The death occurred on Sunday, Sept. 22nd, of Mary Catherine Caselman, wife of William Pielow, at her home in Prescott. The late Mrs. Pielow had been ill for over two years, and never really recovered from an operation that she underwent at that time.

Surviving besides her husband and parents, are two sons, Hugh, of Prescott, and Harold, who is in the Canadian Narthwest; also two sisters, Mrs. E. Garlough, Williamsburg and Miss Pearl Casselman, Ogdensburg; and one brother, Vincent, of Williamsburg.

The funeral service was held on Tuesday at 9 a.m. to St. Mark's R.C. church and the body was then taken to Williamsburg for interment.—Prescott Journal

FRIENDS HONOR MRS. CALVIN GALLINGER

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest R. Styles, Morrisburg, on Sept. 5th, when a surprise birthday party was given in honor of the latter's mother, Mrs. Calvin Gallinger, Gallingertown, it being her 59th birthday. The house was prettily decorated with ferns, dahlias and gladioli. The honored lady was escorted to the dining room on the arm of her brother, Mr. Jas. S. Morgan, Brockville (who drew the lucky name to dine) at six o'clock, where her chair was placed and decorated with flowers and ferns, also a crescent formed around her plate with flowers, spelling the words, "Honored Guest", presented by Mrs. H. A. Hayunga. The table was daintily arranged in pink and white, with the cake for the occasion (which was made by Mr. Jas. S. Morgan, brother of Mrs. C. Gallinger), daintily trimmed with pink and white candles displaying a pale glow over all the goodies and burning the fifty-nine years.

After dinner was served, the hostess carried a yellow and white basket trimmed with golden glow and white asters to "Mother", where the beautiful gifts were opened. Mrs. Gallinger replied in a few well-chosen words, thanking the people for the kindness shown towards her.

The party broke up at 12 o'clock, everyone wishing Mrs. Gallinger many more happy birthdays, and having had a very enjoyable evening

CHOICE OF CONSERVATIVE CANDIDATE IS POSTPONED

Conservatives of Dundas County met in open convention at Winchester Springs on Sept. 23rd for the purpose of selecting a candidate for the Ontario Legislature. There was a good attendance, and Hugh Stewart, M.P. for Leeds, addressed the meeting briefly. Four nominations were received: Reeve Strader of Iroquois; Colonel Lorne Mulloy, the "Blind Trooper," of Iroquois; Reeve George Challies of Morrisburg and J. F. Ault of Morrisburg.

On motion of one of the nominees Reeve Strader, it was decided that instead of selecting the candidate at an open convention, as constituted on Monday, the standard-bearer should be selected at a meeting to which delegates would be elected by the various polling sub-divisions in the riding. This delegated convention will be held at Winchester Springs on Monday Sept. 30.

The meeting on Monday was a quiet one, but the indications are that there will be a keen fight for the nomination next week.

EELS INFEST RIVER

Duck hunters report that millions of eels are infesting the St. Lawrence east of Prescott. It is believed that food for ducks placed there by sportsmen attracted swarms of the eels last season, and that it has become a breeding place for them.

With the opening of the duck-hunting season, the St. Lawrence was dotted with boats, the occupants of which took advantage of the opening day to bag some game. According to reports, ducks are plentiful this year.

Arabs Becoming More Humane

London.—Animal lovers will learn with satisfaction that kindness to animals is becoming much more general than formerly among the Arab population along the Southern Mediterranean coast.

Miss Nina M. Hosali, hon. secretary of the Society for the Protection of Animals in Northern Africa, writes, appealing for funds to further the work of the society.

In Algeria, Tunisia, and French Morocco, with the collaboration of the authorities, animal protection work is yielding rapid and most encouraging results, she says. Kindness is being taught in the schools, and the Arab boy of to-day is beginning to regard the patient donkey as a sentient creature needing intelligent care, and not a mere thing with huge untended sores, to be goaded by a nail or packing needle.

The older men gratefully bring their animals for veterinary treatment to the free clinics which have been established.

In the larger towns, such as Algiers, definite reforms have been made, including the abolition of the "serette," an iron instrument with sharp teeth which is used on the noses of horses, mules and donkeys. The barbarous practice of "hanging" unwanted dogs at the pound is also being stopped. Humane killers have been provided for animals injured in street accidents.

Almost every day appeals are being received from fresh districts for the formation of a branch of the society.

The Higher Culture

Kansas City Star: It is said that the per capita book sales in this country are somewhat less than one book each year. This must be very depressing to those in the book business, but they'll just have to be patient. We're busy just now making every family in America a two-car family. When that is accomplished, then we'll see about the two-book families.

THE "CANARY" MURDER CASE

© Charles Scribner's Sons

by S. S. VAN DINE AUTHOR of THE BENSON MURDER CASE

THE STORY THUS FAR:

Spotswoode told Markham it was he who had gone out with Margaret Odell the night she was murdered. When he left her apartment he told Jessup to call him a cab. While waiting they heard a scream from the "Canary's" apartment. Both rushed back and were told everything was all right. But the next morning the girl was found strangled. Vance believes two men were in the apartment at the time of the murder, the strangler and a man who hid in the clothes closet. There is no way to account for the presence of anyone in the apartment. All the circumstances point to the impossibility of the girl's having been murdered, but her strangled body gives the lies to such a conclusion.

CHAPTER XIV.

"Your Long Island Don Juan has certainly not supplied you with any footprints in the snow," said Vance.

"Anyway, his coming forward at this time closes one line of inquiry over which we might have wasted considerable time."

"If many more lines of inquiry are closed," remarked Vance, drily, "you'll be in a distressin' dilemma, don't y' know."

"There are enough still open to keep me busy," said Markham, pushing back his plate and calling for the cheque. He rose; then pausing, regarded Vance meditatingly. "Are you sufficiently interested to want to come along?"

"Eh, what? My word! . . Charmed, I'm sure. But, I say, sit down just a moment—there's a good fellow!—till I finish my coffee."

"The case was pried open with a specially made cold chisel such as only a professional burglar would know how to use."

I was considerably astonished at Vance's ready acceptance, careless and bantering though it was, for there was an exhibition of old Chinese prints at the Montross Galleries that afternoon, which he had planned to attend. A Riokai and a Moyeki, said to be very fine examples of Sung painting, were to be shown; and Vance was particularly eager to acquire them for his collection.

We rode with Markham to the Criminal Courts building and, entering by the Franklin Street door, took the private elevator to the district attorney's spacious but dingy office which overlooked the graystone ramparts of the Tombs. Vance seated himself in one of the heavy leather-upholstered chairs near the carved oak table on the right of the desk, and lighted a cigaret with an air of cynical amusement.

"I await with anticipat'ry delight the grinding of the wheels of justice," he confided, leaning back lazily.

"You are doomed to not hear the first turn of those wheels," retorted Markham. "The initial revolution will take place outside of this office." And he disappeared through a swinging door which led to the judges' chambers.

Five minutes later he returned, and sat down in the high-backed swivel chair at his desk, with his back to the four tall narrow windows in the south wall of the office.

"I just saw Judge Redfern," he explained—"it happened to be the midday recess—and he verified Spotswoode's statement in regard to the poker game. The judge met him outside the club at ten minutes before midnight, and was with him until three in the morning. He noted the time because he had promised his guests to be back at half past eleven, and was twenty minutes late."

"Why all this substantiation of an obviously unimportant fact?" asked Vance.

"A matter of routine," Markham told him, slightly impatient. "In a case of this kind every factor, however seemingly remote to the main issue, must be checked."

"Really, y' know, Markham"—Vance laid his head back on the chair and gazed dreamily at the ceiling—"one would think that this eternal routine, which you lawyer chaps worship so devoutly, actually got one somewhere occasionally; whereas it never gets one anywhere. Remember the Red Queen in 'Through the Looking-Glass—'"

"I'm too busy at present to debate the question of routine versus inspiration," Markham answered brusquely, pressing a button beneath the edge of his desk.

Swacker, his youthful an energetic secretary, appeared at the door which communicated with a narrow inner chamber between the district attorney's office and the main waiting-room.

"Yes, Chief?" The secretary's eyes gleamed expectantly behind his enormous horn-rimmed glasses.

"Tell Ben to send me in a man at once"

Swacker went out through the corridor door, and a minute or two later a suave, rotund man, dressed immaculately and wearing a pince-nez, entered, and stood before Markham with an ingratiating smile.

"Morning, Tracy." Markham's tone was pleasant but curt. "Here's a list of four witnesses in connection with the Odell case that I want brought down here at once—the two phone operators, the maid, and the janitor. You'll find them at 184 West 71st Street: Sergeant Heath is holding them there."

"Right, sir." Tracy took the memorandum, and with a priggish, but by no means inelegant bow went out.

During the next hour Markham plunged into the general work that had accumulated during the forenoon, and I was amazed at the man's tremendous vitality and efficiency. He disposed of as many important matters as would have occupied the ordinary business man for an entire day.

Swacker bobbed in and out with electric energy, and various clerks appeared at the touch of a buzzer, took their orders, and were gone with breathless rapidity. Vance, who had sought diversion in a tome of famous arson trials, looked up admiringly from time to time, and shook his head in mild reproach at such spirited activity.

It was just half past two when Swacker announced the return of Tracy with the four witnesses; and for two hours Markham questioned and cross-questioned them with a thoroughness and an insight that even I as a lawyer had rarely seen equalled. His interrogation of the two phone operators was quite different from his casual questioning of them earlier in the day; and if there had been a single relevant omission in their former testimony, it would certainly have been caught now by Markham's gruelling catechism.

But when at last they were told they could go, no new information had been brought to light. Their stories now stood firmly grounded: no one—with the exception of the girl herself, and her escort, and the disappointed visitor at half past nine—had entered the front door and passed down the hall to the Odell apartment from seven o'clock on; and no one had passed out that way.

The janitor reiterated stubbornly that he had bolted the side door a little after six and no amount of wheedling or aggression could shake his dogged certainty on that point. Amy Gibson, the maid, could add nothing to her former testimony. Markham's intensive examination of her produced only repetitions of what she had already told him.

Not one new possibility—not one new suggestion—was brought out. In fact, the two hours' interlocutory proceedings resulted only in closing up every loophole in a seemingly incredible situation. When, at half past four, Markham sat back in his chair with a weary sigh, the chance of unearthing a promising means of approach to the astonishing problem seemed more remote than ever.

Vance closed his treatise on arson, and threw away his cigarette.

"I tell you, Markham, old chap," he grinned, "this case requires contemplation, not routine. Why not call in an Egyptian seeress with a flair for crystal-gazing?"

"If this sort of thing goes on much longer," returned Markham, dispiritedly, "I'll be tempted to take your advice."

Just then Swacker looked in through the door to say that Inspector Brenner was on the wire Markham picked up the telephone receiver, and as he listened he jotted down some notes on a pad. When the call had ended, he turned to Vance.

"You seemed disturbed over the condition of the steel jewel-case we found in the bedroom. Well, the expert on burglar tools just called up; an he verifies his opinion of this morning. The case was pried open with a specially made cold chisel such as only a professional burglar would carry or would know how to use. It had an inch-and-three-eighths beveled bit and a one-inch flat handle. It was an old instrument—there was a peculiar nick in the blade—and is the same one that was used in a successful house-break on upper Park Avenue early last summer. . . Does that highly exciting information ameliorate your anxiety?"

"Can't say that it does." Vance had again become serious and perplexed. "In fact it makes the situation still more fantastic. . . . I could see a glimmer of light—eerie and unearthly, perhaps, but still a perceptible illumination—in all this murkiness if it wasn't for that jewel-case and the steel chisel."

Markham was about to answer when Swacker again looked in and informed him that Sergeant Heath had arrived and wanted to see him.

Heath's manner was far less depressed than when we had taken leave of him that morning. He accepted the cigar Markham offered him, and seating himself at the conference table in front of the district attorney's desk, drew out a battered note-book.

"We've had a little good luck," he began. "Burke and Emery—two of the men I put on the case—got a line on Odell at the first place they made inquiries. From what they learned, she didn't run around with many men—limited herself to a few live wires, and played the game with what you'd call finesse. . . . The principal one—the man who's been seen most with her—is Charles Cleaver."

May Now Probe Dept. of Finance

Hyndman's Shortage May Lead to Royal Commission

Ottawa, Sept. 21. — It is believed here that should G. W. Hyndman, Assistant Deputy Minister of Finance, be found guilty of defalcations from the Department of Finance on which he is now awaiting trial, there will be a call by the Opposition in Parliament for a thorough investigation ct this department.

It is stated that the broadcasting throughout the country of the news of Hyndman's arrest will cause considerable uneasiness and that a Royal Commission may be appointed to go thoroughly into the details of the department and show how it is possible for speculations to ocur over such a long period of time without the guilty parties being discovered.

Reports state that the amount missing from the department in liberty bonds may amount to a very large figure.

This is the second time in the past six years that a finance department official has been charged with the theft of liberty bonds.

In the first case the accused was convicted and received a sentence of three years.

The charge was only for a fe wthousand dolars but it is understood that the actual amount involved was over $50,000.

It has been definitely stated here that further charges would be laid against Hyndman, who is now on remand awaiting trial o nfour charges of theft of bonds amounting to $4,000.

Continued investigation by the special auditors and by Finance Department Investigator, Duncan, are disclosing further deficiencies. It is also learned that it is not yet definitely established whether any other persons are involved.

Arthur G. Claght, K.C., prominent Toronto barrister, who has acted on many occasions for Guarantee companies in similar cases, has been retained by the government as an advisory counsel and to assist in the prosecution. Mr. Slaght has been in close conference during the week with officials of the Justice and Finance departments.

Movement to Reinstate Deposed Police Chief

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.—A considerable movement has grown up in the Sault seeking the reinstatement of Chief S. B. Graham, who was recently dismissed by the police ommission following a technical breach in borrowing for a motor tour a car on which the driving and operating licenses had been cancelled.

Following a petition signed by all the clergy of the city, Dr. George Thornlee, retired Archbishop of Algoma, has written to the commission suggesting that they reconsider their decision, and several other petitions are in circulation in the city.

Magistrate Elliott favors the reinstatement of the chief and Mayor Irwin opposes it, while Judge Stone, the chairman, is non-committal, merely stating that the petitions will receive consideration.

30 Horses Entered Lindsay Fall Fair

Lindsay, Ont.—Lindsay's 53rd annual fall fair opened Wednesday. Prospects for record entries and attendance are bright. Over 30 horses from Ontario, Manitoba and United States are here for the trials of speed. Entries in live stock are surpassing last year.

Canon Cody, of Toronto, will open the fair officially.

Wednesday's horse shoe pitching contest was won as follows: 1, Walwin and Henry, of Janetville; 2, McLaughlin brothers, of Burketon; 3, Ray and McKay, of Lindsey; 4, Brown and Coulter, of Toronto.

Labor Repudiates A.B.C. and Guild

London, Ont., Sept. 19.—At their regular meeting last night, members of the London Trades and Labor Council passed a resolution stating that they wished to go on record that they have no connection with the Amalgamated Builders' Council or Heating and Plumbing Guild, or any such combine, and that organized labor in London does not support any such methods but believes in fair competition and just and honorable methods of doing business.

Ald. John Ashton declared nothing more cowardly has happened in the history of the city, and that offering to return the graft money would not right the wrong.

Fields the Cause of Ex-service Men

Quebec.—The cause of the ex-service man, grown prematurely old in consequence of intangible injuries sustained during the war, and for whom no pension scheme has been devised, was pleaded eloquently by Major-General Griesbah, president of the Dominion Army and Navy Veterans' Association, the annual convention of which opened under his chairmanship here on Sept. 18.

Premier Ferguson Starts Campaign

Huge Banquet Marks Opening of Government's Election Activities

There will be no plebiscite on liquor nor on any other matter of public poliy so long as Hon. G. Howard Ferguson is head of the government of Ontario.

Standing firm on established British constitutional practice, Premier Ferguson will continue to take responsibility at the polls for his handling of Ontario's affairs.

In such words, the prime minister fired his opening gun of the 1929 provincial general election campaign with a frontal attack on the position taken by W. E. N. Sinclair, K.C., the Liberal leader.

It was a campaign opening unequalled in size, enthusiasm and resplendence in the history of the Conservative party in Ontario. Nearly 8,000 cheering government supporters packed every available dining room of Toronto's two largest hotels, the Royal York and the King Edward, while hundreds of others for whom there was no room rowded the lobbies.

To all these and to a vast unseen audience all over the province, reached by the largest radio hook-up ever arranged in Canada, the premier reviewed the financial history of his government, sketched the work being done on the humanitarian problems attached to the care of the underprivileged, pleaded for a courageous, farseeing development of the resources of the north, and finally made his trenchant declaration for a fully responsible government.

One Killed, Two Hurt In Crossing Mishap

Stratford.—When the light service truck in which they were riding was struck by a C.N.R. passenger train in the Village of Atwood at noon on Wednesday, Royal Todd, age 21, was fatally injured, and John O. Killer, age 23, and Fred W. Ritchie were injured but not seriously.

Todd died in the Listowel Memorial Hospital from a punctured lung and fractured skull, while Killer and Ritchie are confined to the Stratford General Hospital. All are Stratford men and employees of the Ontario Department of highways.

The three men ,comprising a survey party, left the city about 11 o'clock Wednesday morning and in little more an hour laterhtier gdad than an hour later their truck was struck and demolished at the crossing in Atwood. How the accident occurred is not yet known definitely, but witnesses believe that Ritchie, the driver of the truck, did not see the express train approaching. The truck drove on to the crossing directly in the path of the train and the engine crashed into the front of the light truck, hurling it approximately 40 feet along the tracks.

The train, C.N.R. No. 195, bound for Kincardine, was in charge of Engineer D. Freeland and Conductor G. Becker, both of Palmerston. It was slowing down prior to coming into the station when the crash occurred. The truck was travelling at about 22 miles an hour.

Larkin Says Hague Conference Model

High Commissioner to London Describes Reparations Meeting

Quebec.—A vivid description of the recent meeting of the Reparations Conference at the Hague, and the firm stand taken by Right Hon. Philip Snowden, of Great Britain, in seeking what amounted to return of the Spa Agreement, was given newspapermen by Rt. Hon. Peter C. Larkin, Canadian High Commissioner to London, upon his arrival in the Dominion on board the liner Montcalm.

Hon. Mr. Larkin, who was met at the dock by Premier Mackenzie King and Hon. Lucien Cannon, Solicitor General, stressed the friendly feelings that prevailed among all present when the conference adjourned, and of Hon. Mr. Snowden's triumphal return to London, but, he declared, one of the most important points of the entire conference, and one not concerned with reparations at all was the successful effort made by Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, of the British Cabinet, to persuade the French to hurry their evacuation of Germany.

When Mr. Snowden first presented his argument, declared Mr. Larkip, it was certainly not very favorably received by those who benefitted by the setting aside of the Spa percentages—the total amount Germany had to pay to the Allies.

It was claimed that the Commission of Experts, held in Paris, had no right to touch percentages, even though they had a perfect right to settle the amount Germany was apable of paying.

Everyone interested had naturally to take less, because the experts came to the conclusion that German could not continue the amount she was paying under the Dawes agreement.

The percentage each nation received of the total amount, was altered to the great disadvantage of Great Britain.

Canada Interested

"Canada was only indirectly interested, but naturally we wanted to help Great Britain, as we have an agreement with Britain that they shall pay us 4.35 per cent. of all the reparations she receives. We wanted Great Britain to get as much as she ould," declared Hon. Mr. Larkin.

Considerable discussion took place during the three weeks that followed Mr. Snowden's declaration as to the limit he would accept, and things looked most despairing, but there were some private entertainment and opportunities for private conversation, and eventually Mr. Snowden got practically back to the Spa percentages, sacrifices being made by Aristide Briand, of France, and M. Cheron, Minister of Finance in the French Government.

The French delegation met Great Britain in the most friendly spirit, and made sacrifices immediately. Later Italy and the remaining nations followed suit, and Mr. Snowden went home, a victor.

Even more important things were performed there than the public seemed aware of, chief of which was Mr. Henderson's fulfilling of his promise to get the British army out of Germany as quickly as possible, and his persuasion of France to hurry up their own evacuation.

This was a magnificent piece of work, declared the Canadian High Commissioner.

"At the end the spirit shown by all delegates was superb, and was all that could be wished for, with the greatest friendship existing. It was made lto the League of Nations," concluded Hon. Mr. Larkin.

Dominion to Care For Historic Sites

Premier King Announces Government's Intention Regarding Preservation

Quebec.—From now on the Dominion Government will look after the historic sites and monuments in Canada, an interviewer was informed by Premier Mackenzie King when he was in Quebec for the purpose of greeting Hon. Peter C. Larkin, Canadian High Commissioner to London.

Work will start on the ancient walls and fortifications of Quebec, but in addition to this province there are several other points which deserve consideration, among them Louisburg and Hudson Bay.

The Prime Minister said: "The policy of the Government is to maintain, and where necessary, to reconstruct, to such extent as may be in the public interest, the historic sites and monuments of Canada.

"In this connection, it is the Government's intention to see that the ancient walls and fortifications of Quebec are properly cared for and preserved. An appropriation of $50,000 was made during the recent session of Parliament for the restoration of one of the gates and the rebuilding of the Earl Grey Terrarce, which lies between the citadel and the river, and which, for some time past, has been closed to the public on account of the dilapidated and dangerous condition in which it has been left. I fully expect that this work will be completed this autumn.

"Provisions will be made at subsequent sessions for the effective prosecution of the Government's policy with respect to the maintenance of historic sites and monuments, including, in particular, the walls and fortfications of Quebec. It is, I believe, generally recognized throughout the Dominion that within the British Empire there is no monument of greater historical significance than is afforded by the Citadel and its immediate environments, including the properties at present under the immediate supervision of the Battlefields Commission."

Coal Comes Back

Victoria Times (Lib.): ("Electric power can now be generated cheaper by steam than by water-power."—Thomas Edison). This is good news for Vancouver Island, with her great coal resources. With the progress made and economic perfection lately attained by high pressure steam turbines, and the use of pulverized coal under boilers built on the unit system, the increased consumption of coal would appear to be assured. Last year the United States used in this way more than 15,000,000 tons of pulverized coal.

Long Point Light Slays 900 Birds

Lured by Deadliest Beacon in Canada, Warblers, Thrushes Killed

While flying southward one foggy night about two weeks ago, some 900 little warblers, sparrows an dthrushes were dashed to death against Long Point lighthouse—lured to their destruction by its brilliant beacon.

Mr. Saunders, well-known ornithologist, of London, Ont., hearing of the calamity, repaired to the wild inaccessible tip of the point which runs out into Lake Erie for some 20 miles from Port Rowan Ont. He counted about 850 victims, but estimates that more perished. Though stormbound for a day or so on the point, Mr. Saunders sent the Royal Ontario 95 specimens, not all in good condition, and about half of which the museum experts have skinned for mounting.

Gets Song Birds

For years Long Point light has been a menace to small birds. It stands right in the line of a main flight, and takes toll on both northerly and southerly migrations. Wild duck and plover, flying mostly by day, avoid it, but song birds, flying by night, succumb.

Mr. Lewis a Government ornithologist of Ottawa, has made a study of the destructiveness of Eastern Canadian lighthouses in this respect, and finds Long Point beacon, by reason of the quality of its light and its situation, the deadliest.

Silver Fox Fur Gains Favor In All Markets

Many Countries Now Seeking Pure Bred Stock From Canadian Ranches

The principal market for silver fox furs up to the outbreak of the war had been in Europe, but after hostilities began the silver fox breeder sought a market in the United States, where sales hitherto had ben comparatively small.

Despite the recent heavy duty levied by the United States on imports of silves foxes and their pelts, there is still an increasing demand in that country for Canadian silver fox stock.

Ranch-bred silver fox furs are an important item at the Canadian Fur Sales at Montreal, and there are also indications of a marked revival in the European market for these furs.

Large sales of live foxes for foundation stock are made to the New England States and to central and western United States and Canada, which, coupled with shipments to England, Scotland, Norway, Sweden, France, Germany, Switzerland, Cuba and other countries, indicate the wide distribution of Prince Edward Island purebred stock.

The projected Chicago skyscraper of the record height of just over a thousand feet is believed to be the outcome of an increasing desire to get away from the underworld.

Five-Gaited Horses Arouse Interest For Royal Fair

Exceptional interest, according to a Canadian Press message from Louisville, Ky., was manifested among state-wide gatherings of horsemen at the Kentucky State Fair in the announcement that the Royal Winter Fair at Toronto would introduce five-gaited horse classes at the big Canadian fair next November.

This pioneer move by the Royal Winter Fair was warmly commended by veteran rider-owners, including Mat Cohen, of California; Robert Moreland, Lexington, Ky.; H. S. Caywood, Middleton, Ky.; and others. Important entries are assured for the coming Royal Winter Fair, including horses from the Minton Stables at Barbourville, Ky., and Uplands, Pa.

After the sensational win of his Target in the gelding section of the $10,000 Seelbach stake over the cream of American five-gaiters, William M. M. Robinson, Philadelphia, the owned, remarked enthusiastically: "Now I can bring my stable to Toronto. I had no good reason to come before."

Five-gaited horses are claimed to be a special product of Kentucky. Old-time breeders bought Ontario horses of great speed and endurance to cross with American saddle horses. Marguerite Farlee Bayliss, well known throughout the United States as an authority on the history and bloodlines of horses, says that Peter the Great traced directly to a Canadian stallion of whom nothing is known except that he was brought south from Ontario. . . . He was also the ancestor of the southern saddle horse breed whose descendants form several strong strains throughout saddle horse history in Tennessee, Kentucky, West Virginia and Missouri.

The alert, animated movements of the five-gaiters should appeal instinctively to Canadian horsemen, as the type is virtually unknown in the Dominion. All through the "horse states" one hears of a coming boom for the saddle horse, especially the five-gaited type.

Three Barn Fires Within 48 Hours

Second Horse Victim of Flames — Authorities Seeking Firebug

Stratford.—The third barn fire within 48 hours, believed to have been set by a fire-bug, working in this city, caused $1,000 loss at an early hour on Thursday morning, when flames demolished a large barn, at the rear of the home of Fred Robinson, Milton Street. The main item lost was a valuable mare, owned by Mr. Robinson, which was suffocated before help could arrive. The other loss besides the frame building was in harness, equipment, and five tons of hay.

The other two fires were on Tuesday morning, a valuable racing horse being lost in one. Another fire of unknown origin destroyed the bowling club clubhouse early last Friday morning, causing over $2,000 damage.

A report is being made to Toronto by the local chief.

A STITCH IN TIME SAVES NINE

This age-old adage applies just as well to the eyes as to other things.

It is a peculiar fact, that in spite of the splendid facilities now available for the scientific examination and care of the human eye, many people disregard the Optometrist's existence until they have eye-strain to such a degree as to make them uncomfortable.

Many people who dread the thought of wearing glasses would never have to wear them, except perhaps for reading, if they would consult a competent Optometrist in time.

The best time to have your eyes examined is before you feel your eyesight failing, not after. It is dangerous to gamble with your eyesight.

Eyes should be examined at least every two years, and, under some conditions, more often. Phone for an appointment.

Sunday School Lesson

September 29. Lesson XIII—Review: Significance of the Exile and the Restoration—Isaiah 61: 1-9. Golden Text—The mercy of the Lord is everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him, and his righteousless unto children's children.—Psalm 103: 17.

We do not always see the full significance of events when they happen. We may be overwhelmed by some factor in the experience of the hour so that we fail to see the forces which have occasioned it or the direction in which it is leading us. Not until some time has elapsed, possibly years, are we able to see the deeper meaning of it all and discern the hand of Providence in it.

There can be no doubt that was the case with the people of Judah and Jerusalem. When the blow fell and the nation was torn away from its loved centre in Jerusalem and carried to a far foreign land it looked like a day of unrelieved disaster. But, viewed in the light of history and seen in its perspective, it is more readily understood and its educative and redemptive element more easily recognized. Throughout the second Quarter's lessons this year we saw something of the forces which led inevitably to the dissolution of the Jewish national life as it had been constituted. During this past Quarter we have seen these people in exile, at school, as it were, learning the deeper lessons of life from God through the prophets and teachers given to them. Then having learned—in some measure—that lesson, we have seen them transplanted once more to the old ground in Judah.

What differences can you point out in the Jewish life of Jerusalem in the re-established colony from the life of the old kingdom of Judah, as it was just preceding the exile? Was their religion ever again exclusively a national religion? Did not this "trip abroad" somewhat enlarge their national outlook and broaden in some measure the religious outlook as well? God was no longer confined to Palestine, but the God of the whole earth. What was the effect of Ezekiel's teaching on their conception of religion? Recall the emphasis Ezekiel placed on individual responsibility to God. The idea of getting rid of our personal accountability in the corporate religious life was no longer possible to these returned Jews. Do we ever read again of the Jews taking up any form of idolatry? Before the exile this had been the cause of much difficulty in their religious life, but never again was this a tendency of the Jewish church.

What effects had the exile on the character of the people? Probably here they developed those strong commercial tendencies which have marked them as a people since the restoration. In what way did this experience prepare the way for the coming of the Messiah and the Christian revelation of God? Glorying in past and present were largely cut off and hope pointed to a new day. Besides the broadened national outlook, though but slowly developed, prepared the way for the conception of a universal religion and a universal brotherhood as seen in Christ.

It would be interesting to recall the outstanding leaders who contributed so largely to the preservation and education of the exiles and gave them leadership in the difficult period of the restoration: Ezekiel, Daniel, Zerubbabel, Ezra, Nehemiah, Malachi.

Laurentian Night

With heaving lurch and spurt of flaming smoke
The last train cityward departs
Flinging its wailing cry to the echoing hills
While down the winding road
The homing line of autos starts.

Quiet falls the eve in each Laurentian village
Black spears, the lonely pines against the rose-red sky
Like blazing sparks the fireflies flash and vanish.
The whip-poor-will sends forth his plaintive cry,
The cow-bells tinkle thro' the growing darkness
And mountain mists make one of hill and sky.

The yellow moon climbs up
And o'er the lake
Stares in the mirror whih the waters make.

Farm Notes

Spreading Farm Manure

The use of a manure spreader as compared with hand wark was included in the study of the cost of producing farm crops carried on by the Dominion Field Husbandman and his assistants of the Field Husbandry Division of the Experimental Farms. When loads were hauled an average distance of 82 rods one man and a one-horse waggon disposed of 10¼ tons in a day. One man with two horses put out 12.43 tons, while two men with two horses loaded and spread on the field 15.62 tons. With the manure spreader one man with two horses was able to handle 18.23 tons, while when three horses were used on the spreader 21.03 tons were put out. These results are contained in Bulletin No. 115 of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa which covers studies extending over several years into the cost of producing farm crops in Eastern Canada.

Eradication of Couch Grass

It has been found by an experiment conducted by the Field Husbandry Division of the Experimental Farms that couch grass plants will be greatly weakened if the plant is kept clipped back to the surface of the ground for a period of two months. This clipping back was mechanically done and would correspond with close grazing. Clipping was continued up to the first week in October. The following spring the plants were so reduced in vitality as to produce only very weak shoots bearing no seeds by the month of September.

Another experiment with couch grass was carried out to ascertain the effect of cultivation so carried out as to cut up the plants into small pieces. The root stalks were separated into piees of inch and half-inch lengths and each piece containing a node or joint was placed in the soil under conditions suitable for growth. Eighty-eight per cent. of the inch pieces and fifty-two per cent. of the half-inch pieces produced healthy shoots.

Still another experiment by which the live couch grass root stalks were brought entirely to the surface was carried out. It was shown that under dry and hot weather conditions ten days exposure was sufficient to dry out the root stalks to such an extent that they were incapable of further growth.

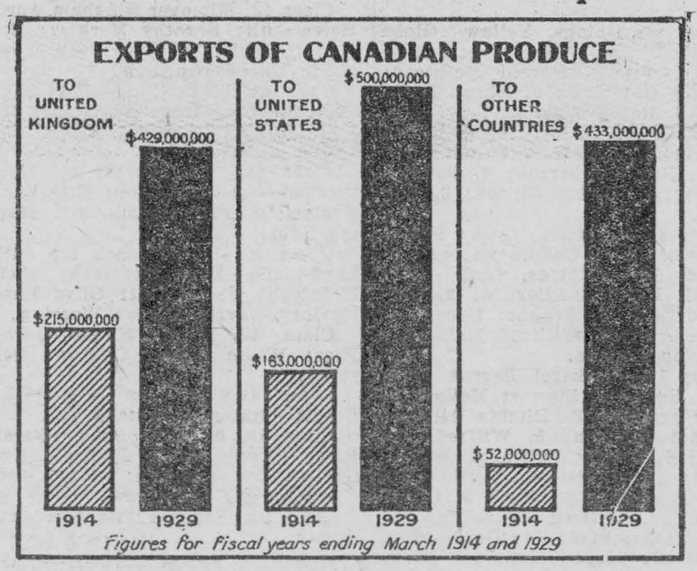
The report of E. S. Hopkins, the Dominion Field Husbandman, for 1928, gives the details of other experiments with couch grass and recommends a practical plan for the eradication. This consists in ploughing the sod about five inches deep immediately after the hay crop is removed and keeping it worked thoroughly with cultivation at frequent intervals until the autumn, when deep ploughing should be done. This report, published by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, covers a wide range of experiments in the handling of soil in farm practice.

Demonstrating the Value of Improved Live Stock

In the Eastern Provines, Manitoba, parts of Alberta and British Columbia, the Illustration Stations operated by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa are becoming centres of live stock improvement. At these stations fine dairy herds are being built up and flocks and herds of very good sheep and hogs are being established. The majority of the station operators are now using pure-bred sires. They are keeping individual milk records and making butter fat determina in order to learn the productio each cow. In his report for last the Chief Supervisor of the Ill tion Stations shows that the production of milk and butter fa fers greatly on the different S farms while the average prod of fat in the Station herds varied 408 to 121 pounds—a cow was that yielded only 74 pounds of fat. These ontrasts show the and possibilities of systematic t and selection. During the pas there were sold for breeding pu by the operators of Illustratio tions 2606 head of cattle, 301 ho 202 sheep.—Issued by the Dire Publicity, Dom. Department of culture, Ottawa, Ont.

Sex equality is still in its i we are told. Until it attains ity men can still be regarded men's equals.

The Growth of Canada's Exports



Figures for fiscal years ending March 1914 and 1929

Nowhere is the advance in the development of Canada's resources more vividly reflected than in the records of the Dominion's export trade. The sheer increase in the value of that trade is amazing enough in itself, but no less astonishing is the manner in which Canada's exports have spread out into new channels.

The United Kingdom and the United States have long been Canada's two great customers, and until recent years other countries have taken only a minor share of the Dominion's exports. Within the past fifteen years a remarkable change has occurred. During that period the Dominion's sales to the United Kingdom have doubled in value, those to the United tSates have trebled, and at the same time exports to "Other Countries" have risen more than seven-fold. These "Other Countries,' formerly a minor factor, now afford a huge market outlet for Canadian products. They bought from the Dominion last year a bill of goods greater in value than the whole export trade of Canada fifteen years ago.

To these widely scattered and lesser-known markets Canada's resources furnish an immense variety of products in natural adn manufactured forms. Silver and artificial silk to India, newsprint and sardines to Australia, potatoes to Cuba, lead and lumber to Japan, herring to China, foxes and lobsters to Sweden, oats and nickel to the Netherlands, salmon and furs to France, cheese and furniture to South Africa, rye to Norway, zinc and asbestos to Germany, codfish and opper wire to Brazil, aluminum and wood pulp to Italy, and, of course, wheat and flour to all quarters of the globe—these and a thousand and one other items help to extend the web of Canadian commerce across the seven seas.

Character and Intellect

"Antaeus" in the Spectator (London): (There is a widespread tendency in England to compare and ontrast intellect and character. It is believed that these qualities are mutually exclusive, and that the possession of the one implies the lack of the other. It is quite commonly assumed that intelligence cannot, in practice, be developed above a very humble level, save at the expense of character. If this confusion of thought has affected unfavorably the education of our youth—on whom our whole future welfare so directly depends—all other counts which can be brought against it may be regarded as of minor importance. But it does work great mischief in many other ways. It leads to a widespread preference for men of ordinary or of inferior intelligence for the conduct of public—and private—affairs. Large numbers of suh men are to be found in Parliament, on municipal and county councils, on the governing bodies of various public institution and on nearly all public committees. And in very many cases they owe their appointment to this popular belief—that lack of intelligence implies possession of character. The loss to the nation caused by this state of affairs is, in the aggregate, enormous. Its effects are felt everywhere. It impairs our national capacity to deal with current problems; and it detracts disastrously from our material and moral welfare. We cannot afford to persist in this error.

The Struggle for Existence

J. de G. Delmege in the Nineteenth Century (London): Whenever in the past the more and the less civilized races have made any continued contact, at least in lands where the former could hope to find a permanent abode, it is the weaker and less developed people that has always gone to the wall. Where he has not been extirpated by fore of arms or by the operation of those fatal gift sof civilization, clothes, drink, and disease, primitive man—red, brown or black—has almost invariably succumbed to a kind of vital languor. His immemorial customs suppressed or drastically modified, his habits of thought disorientated, life has lost its savour for him, and with all his profoundly interesting cultures he has faded silently away. So, for example, the red man failed in North America, the Australian aboriginal followed the example of the red man, and it is only in the very nick of time that the decline of the gifted and chivalrous Maoris of New Zealand has been arrested, if arrested it proves to be. Alone the hardy and prolific negro tribes of Africa have been able to persist and multiply under the domination of the whites, and this persistence has come to be dreaded by the domiciled ruling community as likely in the course of time to overthrow their present supremacy, political and economic. That is the essence of the native problem of to-day.

France and Germany

Sisley Huddleston in the New Statesman (London): (At the time of the Snowden-Cheron duel at the Hague, French papers talked of substituting a Franco-German entente for the entente with Britain). In spite of superficial appearances, France and Germany can no more unite than can oil and water. Even if we assume that France, anticipating further struggles of another character, has need of the benevolent neutrality of Germany, it is inconceivable that Germany will find it in its interest to commit itself in this direction. Yet it is strange that at a moment when we hear so much about permanent peace, about European unity, about the abanodnment of the old diplomacy, there should be these more or less veiled threats of secret diplomatic soundings.

British Troops in Egypt

London Morning Post (Cons.): The presence of British troops in Alexandria and in the vicinity of Cairo, if it is resented by a few politicians, is popular with the mass of the population, who know well, if they reflect at all on the subjet, that our troops are their protection and security. In any event, the British soldier gets on well with the Egyptian people, and is besides a very present help in time of trouble to the foreign population. His departure from those cities would leave the respectable citizen very much at the mercy of an occasionally fanatical and murderous mob, which the unided Egyptian police may be unable to control.

Chicago and the Sea

Chicago Tribune: The agitation for a Great Lakes seaway has tended to blind the public to the fact that to-day there are two water routes, both of them in use, between the lakes and the Atlantic Ocean. There is no waterway from the lakes to the gulf, though

India's Agriculture Undergoing Reform

Bombay.—The nation-building departments of the Nizam's Government continue to do good work, according to the administration report of Hyderabad State for 1927, which has only recently appeared.

The record of the experimental farms in the state, of which there are six in the various districts, is commended. Experiments are being conducted in the economical growth of crops suited to the soil by the use of different fertilizers and improved types of implements.

A notable feature of the activities of the department is the propaganda carried on in popularizing the use of modern implements and machinery, and inducing the people to grow particular kinds of fruits for which parts of the state were once famous. Three foreign scholarships are granted by the Government for agricultural education.

The Department of Industries and Commerce has been particularly active. New roads comprising 230 miles of territory were completed by the public works department and opened for traffic. Addition has been made to the railways and some new lines are also in course of construction.

East Indians in South Africa

Madras Hindu Weekly: So far as the Nationalist Ministry in South Africa is concerned, it must be said that it has so far tried to stem the tide of white opposition to the elementary rights of Indians. But this negative attitude, useful as it has been, cannot be expected to redress the grievances, many and irritating, of Indians throughout the Union.. It will be necessary, therefore, for the Agent of the Government of India in South Africa to press them upon the atte[illegible] of the Government of South [illegible] with as much emphasis as he can [illegible] and put the issue boldly and square[illegible] before them that there can be no lasting friendship between Indians and Europeans unless and until the former are considered to be as much entitled to political and other rights as the latter.

British Army on the Rhine Comes Home With Knowledge that it Has Performed a Difficult Task Wisely and Well

The British Army of the Rhine will come home reluctantly, but with the knowledge that it has performed a difficult task wisely and well.

Whatever German propagandists may say to the contrary, it has gained the respect and confidence, and to a large extent the good will, of the civil population in occupied territory. It comes home leaving behind no trace of bitterness or enmity.

This self-contained organization has been superimposed on an alien population without affecting in any way the normal life o fthe latter; it has been a tangible thing, yet practially invisible; sharing the same towns and villages, even the same public resorts, aloof in every respect, while maintaining an entirely correct attitude in all dealings with the people and their officials.

The Rhine Army has grown into an institution. It has not only its own dress, language, business and family life, schools, hospitals, clergy, amusements and sports, but even its own newspaper and literature. It has created its own history and traditions, and even a kind of folklore based on the exploits and adventures of certain "personalities" associated with the early days of the occupation.

It has its heroes and its unpopular characters, and the stories about them have reached every British depot containing soldiers who have served in Germany. The gossip of the Rhine is current in the hill stations of India as well as in the barracks of Shanghai. The Army has even developed its own drama, with stars who are as firmly placed in popular opinion as any favorite of the London stage.

There have been many changes since the Army came into being in the first delirious days of peace. Generals, staff officers, and units have come, served, and gone again. Very few war ribbons are to be seen to-day. A new generation has succeeded to the British watch on the Rhine, but the spirit is the same as when every man in the Army of Ocupation arrived by way of the Western Front.

In its own quiet way the Army has been an able propagandist for Britain. The life of the civilian population has been carefully protected from undue interference. Orders to the troops have been framed in such a way as to avoid all unpleasant "incidents." Fraternization has been strictly avoided, and even sports competitions with the Germans have been forbidden, despite the often expressed desire of the latter to engage in friendly games with the soldiers.

Many of the old, bad illusions concerning the British troops, which survived after the war, have been effectually dispelled. British justice has been discovered by the natives to be a fine and fair thing.

A WARNING TO MOTHERS

Watch the Health of Your Little Ones at All Times

No mother can expect that her child will escape all the ills to which babyhood and childhood are subject, but she can do much to lessen the severity of these troubles. The mother should be constantly on her guard to prevent childhood ailments, or if they come on suddenly, as they usually do, to have the means at hand to relieve them. Thousands of mothers have found Baby's Own Tablets the ideal remedy for little ones—thousands of mothers always keep the Tablets in the house as a safeguard against the sudden illness of their little ones.

Baby's Own Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative. They regulate the bowels; sweeten the stomach and thus banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fever and make the cutting of teeth easy. The Tablets are absolutely guaranteed free from injurious drugs and may be given to the youngest child with perfect safety. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"Sprucing Up" The Farm House

Awards have been announced in a little contest held among some farmers around St. Johns, N.B., which might well be extended all through the country. Prizes were given for distribution among farmers whose properties fronted on two provincial highways to go to the men who made the greatest improvements in the appearance of their dwellings and their surroundings during the past summer season.

It is unfortunate but none the less true that very many country dwellers in Canada have never paid the attention they might to the appearance of their houses the creation of lawns, the planting of trees ,shrubs and flowers around them—above all, to the painting or even whitewashing of houses, barns or outbuildings. Far too often the Canadian farmhouse and its immediate surroundings constitute an eyesore rather than an attractive feature of the rural landscape.

Our American neighbors as a rule set us an example in this respect that we might well follow. To-day, at least in the older portions of their country, farm houses are neat, clean, attractive, with well-kept lawns, bright flowers, healthy and well-placed trees. The motorist who crosses the border can, too commonly, tell that he has done so if by nothing else than the change from the trim, progressive-looking country-homes south of the line to the down-at-heel, shabby and generally neglected appearance of large numbers of Canadian farm houses.

It would be a fine thing if the experiment that has just been concluded so successfully around St. Johns would attract wide attention and imitation. The cost and the labor involved would be very slight in comparison with the results to be obtained.

Science and Industry

Johannesburg Sunday Times: It would be well for Johannesburg—which is inclined to place material prosperity to the forefront of worshipful images—to dwell with some humility on the debt which industry (including gold-mining), in common with many other fields of human endeavor, already owes to pure and applied science. Your genuine scientist is a real servant of the public, seeking, more often than not, no other reward for his vast and complicated labors, beyond a bare living, than a successful conclusion to his investigations. Were such men recompensed on a scale commensurate with their service and ability they would indeed be rich. But few of them have great possessions, and they are content to spend their lives, and sometimes to sacrifice them, in the cause of human progress and enlightenment.

HAVING THE LAST WORD

An epitaph has given many a henpecked husband the opportunity of having the last word, and some of them have made the most of it No conventional respect for the dead stopped the man who had this apitaph carved on his wife's tomb:—

"Here lies my wife, poor Molly; let her lie.
She finds repose at last, and so do I."

It was a Cornish husband who found it in his heart to inscribe upon a tombstone:

"My wife is dead, and here she lies,
No man laughs, and no man cries,
Where's gone, or how she fares,
Nobody knows, and nobody cares."

Here is another:

"Beneath this stone a lump of clay
Lies Arabella Young
Who on the twenty-fourth of May
Began to hold her tongue."

WASTE NOT TIME

An Italian philosopher expressed, in his motto, that time was his estate; an estate, indeed, that will produce nothing without cultivation, but will always abundantly repay the labors of industry, if no part of it be suffered to lie waste by negligence, to be overrun by noxious plants.—Dr. Johnson.

Minard's Liniment—Used for 50 years

Department of Health

When the school bells rang in Ontario on September 3rd thousands of small boys and girls started on the greatest adventure of childhood — Going to school.

Every Starter a Healthy Scholar

Upon the health of the child as he enters school depends, to a large extent, his success or failure as a scholar. Everything that is done from the time a child is born to develop in him a strong, sound body is a contribution to his school success. Malnourished, sickly children not only are likely to miss school often, but they can not do the best work when they are in school. It takes a strong, vigorous child to get the most out of school life.

Parents who have children entering school for the first time this fall owe it to their children to have every possible handicap removed, every defect remedied which medical and dental science can correct. This common-sense idea of starting school without a handicap on the health score is fast becoming very popular in Ontario and hundreds of children are now entering school with health 100% perfect.

Protection Which Means Much

Diphtheria is disease which is particularly dangerous in childhood. There are very few deaths from this disease among grown-ups; it takes its greatest toll from among young children. In Ontario to-day there is no excuse for any child starting school without protection against diphtheria, for the reason that science has perfected a preventive which is supplied free of charge to physicians for the use of all children within the province. Toxoid is the name of this preventive; is given in three doses three weeks apart injected into the skin of the forearm.

Mothers and fathers would be willing to risk their lives to save a baby even if it meant pulling him from the railway track in face of an approaching train or dashing in front of a racing motor car. Yet the danger of diphtheria is an ever-present one for the unprotected child from one to ten years of age. Toxoid is a proven protection against this danger of childhood; it is insurance for the child and the parent—and is supplied free by the Department of Health of Ontario.

CIRCUMSTANCES

Man was meant to be not the slave, but the master, of circumstances; and in proportion as he recovers his humanity, in proportion as he gets back the spirit of manliness, which is self-sacrifice, affection, loyalty to an idea beyond himself a God above himself, so far will he rise above circumstances.—Kingsley.

DADDY CAN NOW EAT ANYTHING

He dearly loved a rich tit-bit. The spirit was willing, but the flesh was weak. Whenever he ate anything rich, his boys used to say, "Poor dad, he will pay the penalty to-morrow." Read the sequel in his own words:—

"Since taking the regular dose of Kruschen Salts it is quite different, and my boys enjoy themselves seeing me eat what I dare not touch before. My eldest son was the same, but since he has taken Kruschen Salts he can eat and enjoy whatever is put in front of him."

Modern artificial conditions, errors of diet, overwork, lack of exercise, and so on, are bound to have injurious effects in the long run providing due precaution is not taken.

Kruschen Salts should be your safeguard. Besides cleansing the body of impurities gently, surely and painlessly, they possess a vital power of giving new life and vitality to the countless millions of cells of which every body is composed. That is why physicians never hesitate to recommend Kruschen Salts.

Too Much ACID

Many people, two hours after eating, suffer indigestion as they call it. It is usually excess aid. Correct it with an alkali. The best way, the quick, harmless and efficient way, is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained for 50 years the standard with physicians. One spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in stomach acids, and at once. The symptoms disappear in five minutes.

You will never use crude methods when you know this better method. And you will never suffer from excess acid when you prove out this easy relief. Please do that—for your own sake—now.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drugstore.
