All Yellow Fire Pumper For Cardinal

Yellow's higher visibility at greater distance at night has prompted its use for emergency vehicles. Recently the Cardinal, Ontario Fire Department took delivery of a pumper painted "chrome" yellow rather than the conventional red.

Built by Nordic International of Mississauga, Cardinal's new fire pumper is equipped with the latest in efficient lightweight fire fighting equipment supplied by Wilson and Cousins, including 2½ and 1½ inch Elkhart nozzles; Wilson and Cousins wyes, pike poles, axes and extinguishers, plus related accessories.

The pumper is built on a GMC chassis with a V8 427 gasoline engine and incorporates a 625-IGPM single stage, centrifugal, class "A" mid-ship mounted, fire pump manufactured by Barton American Fire Pump Co.

Wilson and Cousins is the oldest manufacturer of fire fighting equipment in Canada and supplies the broadest range of equipment to all fire apparatus manufacturers.

TODAY'S CHILD

These Children Really Do Get Adopted

Do these children really get adopted?

That's the question often asked about Today's Child and the boys and girls who are featured there.

The answer is yes, they really do.

Adopting a child (or children) is a private affair, just as producing your own child is, so it is not possible to give specific details about individual adoptions. But a half-yearly report will help to answer that opening question.

One hundred and thirty one children who have appeared in Today's Child so far this year are now living with their adopting parents.

Many more will be moving into their new homes as summer goes on, because school vacation is a convenient time for children to be transplanted and for prospective parents to travel to meet their new child (or perhaps children).

Today's Child originates with the Ministry of Community and Social Services, as part of the Ontario government's program for the welfare of children in this province.

Every adoption is special because every one means that a child who has been waiting for parents has to wait no longer. The child has found a place of his or her own and a mother and father with home and hearts open.

But two of this year's adoptions are unusual enough to deserve extra special mention.

The first concerns one child only. The other is a family group.

The one child is Mark, four years old, a handsome bright boy who was born without legs and with only stumps or arms ending above the elbow. Mark appeared three times in Today's Child. Twice in previous years, possible parents were interested in adopting him but it didn't work out.

The third time led to a permanent home for this boy. Mark is now settled with a mother and father, two big brothers and a sister. He will grow up as part of a family.

Dear little Mark, while finding a mother and father for himself, has helped other children with handicaps as well.

Forty families expressed a desire to adopt him. Of course only one could.

Some of the 40 did not follow through on plans for adoption. Others have adopted children with different kinds of problems-problems not quite so grave as Mark's, but serious enough to affect these children's lives.

The special family group is seven - four sisters and their three brothers. The children are Canadian Indians, ranging in age from two to nine.

They were adopted by a couple who already had five children, three of them adopted. The parents and their natural children are white. The three children adopted are Indian.

These people had already applied to their Children's Aid Society for the adoption of one more child, preferably of Indian background, when they saw the family of seven.

PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Duivenvorden from Jacquet River, N.B., were guests last week of Mr and Mrs. Job VanderPoel, R. R2, Iroquois.

Commissioning of HMCS Iroquois

Canada's newest destroyer, HMCS Iroquois, was commissioned July 29 at christening ceremonies held at Sorel, Quebec. Mrs. Roland Michener, wife of the governor-general, christened the 4600-ton, helicopter-carrying destroyer, one of four being added to Canada's naval strength.

Invited to attend the ceremonies from Iroquois were Reeve Ken and Mrs. Kirkby and Councillor Jack and Mrs. Fetterly. The ship's bell from the first "Iroquois" which had been on display at the Civic Centre was presented by Reeve Kirkby to the new ship's commander and in return the bell from the new Iroquois was presented to Iroquois by Rear-Admiral R.W. Trimbrell, DSC, CD.

The new ship had recently completed three weeks of sea trials and Capt. John Allan of defence headquarters, Ottawa, project officer, said she exceeded her design speed of 27 knots plus. Her exact speed is classified information.

It is the first ship of its size anywhere to use gas turbines exclusively, giving it full power in less than half an hour from a cold start, compared to a half-day using steam.

The computer system for each of the four warships costs $12 million. Its weaponry includes anti-aircraft missiles, a five-inch surface gun and homing torpedoes which can be fired either from the ship or its two Sea King helicopters. The missiles and gun can be fired without a gun crew, through remote control.

The skipper named to command the ship is Cmdr. Darrock MacGillivray, 38, of St. John's, Nfld.

There will be 280 officers and men on board to man the ship.

Following is the story of the original HMCS Iroquois and its distinguished service to Canada and its peoples.

The original HMCS Iroquois was the first tribal class destroyer to commission in the Royal Canadian Navy and her arrival marked a new departure in naval warfare for the rapidly expanding Canadian Navy. Agressively armed, the Iroquois was designed as a hard-hitting, swift-moving ship of war to operate with the Royal Navy's Home Fleet destroyers in the North Atlantic and in the danger-studded waters about the British Isles.

The Iroquois' keel was laid down in the Vickers-Armstrong's yard at Newcastle-on-Tyne on 19 September 1940. The following year, on 23 September, she was launched by Mrs. Vincent Massey, wife of the High Commissioner for Canada. She commissioned into the RCN on 30 November, 1942.

The Iroquois, the Canadian pioneer in the tribal class destroyers, experienced all the frustrations, set-backs, and tribulations which accompany the adoption of a new class of warship. Many of the difficulties which had plagued the Iroquois during her long and tedious "work-up" resulted from the fact that since the original tribal structure had been developed by the Admiralty, a vast amount of new equipment and armament had been added and the ship's hull had not the strength to carry it. It was not until the Iroquois had been adequately strengthened that this trouble was finally overcome.

The Iroquois sailed independently from Londonderry on 24 February 1943 and first arrived at Halifax on 6 March. Arriving back at Scapa on 24 March, the Iroquois was immediately assigned for duty with the Home Fleet and later transferred to the Plymouth Command.

Throughout the spring and summer of 1943 the Iroquois saw constant and varied service with the Home Fleet on escort duty for such mighty warships as the battleships HMS King George V, HMS Malaya and HMS Ramilles. Then, from Plymouth, she saw duty as escort to convoys to and from Gibraltar.

On 9 July 1943, the Iroquois sailed as part of the escort for the liners California, Duchess of York, and Port Fairy, bound from Britain to Freetown, Sierra Leone, where the transports were to embark troops for service in the Middle East. Towards evening on 11 July the convoy came under enemy fire from attacking Focke-Wulfs. The California and Duchess of York were soon mortally ablaze.

Vows Exchanged at Cornwall

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the St. John's Presbyterian Church in Cornwall on Saturday, July 29th when Yvette Gareau, only daughter of the late Dr. & Mrs. Romeo Gareau was united in marriage to John Allen Merkley, only son of Mr. and Mrs. John Wallace Merkley of Iroquois. Rev. Dr. W.L. Machellon officiated.

The bride looked lovely in a sheer autumn rust dress. She was attended by her sister-in-law, Sophie Gareau of Oshawa. Cousin of the groom, William Alherton of Brockville attended the groom.

The happy couple left amid showers of confetti on a honeymoon trip to Hawaii. They will reside in Ingleside.

Summer Going Fast

One cannot help but remember that Summer is fading away when we have quite cool evenings, and whether we like it or not we are heading into the final phases of the warmer season.

Most people will have had their holidays by the end of this month and it will be back to the "grind" for another year.

Due to the many many days of wet weather we have had in this area, those who chose to stay at home or those who picked this area for a holiday, haven't had what they usually could expect. As one drives through the countryside you come to realize quickly why farmers are seeking government assistance. You can see first hand that the crops are a disaster, that hundreds of acres of corn and grains will not be worth harvesting.

One also realizes that the farmer who stands to lose his entire crop has already put many dollars into planting, cultivating, spraying, etc., and for those who this year had to buy more equipment, there looms the prospect of bankruptcy.

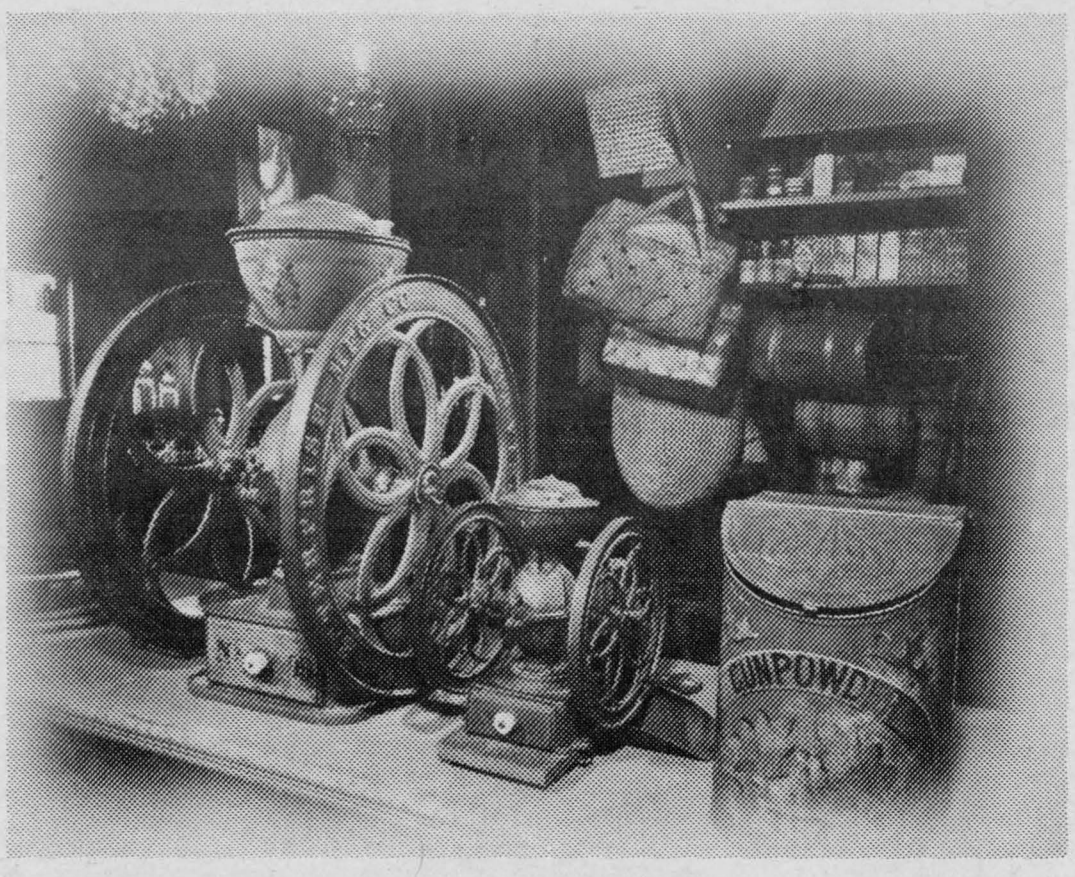
We have mentioned before that the entire area relies to a great extent on the fortunes of the farming community. It bears repeating that if the farmer doesn't receive help which will enable him to survive this disaster, our entire county will suffer the effects of his losses.

Certainly there are some farmers who may be financially able to carry their loss and be able, next Spring, to start all over again. But what of those who have been struggling to make a living and gradually build up their farms so that they could make a decent living?

This county has changed considerably in the past few years and many farmers have had to go into cash crop farming to stay in business. They have had to go into debt to get into this form of farming and a crop failure at this time may very well mean the end of their farming career.

The unemployment situation is such that even if all farmers were young men there aren't enough jobs in industry for them. And many a farmer still able to operate his farm is past the age when he could find a job in industry.

For many years we have watched the smaller farmer forced into leaving his farm, of the remaining farmers having to take on larger acreages to make a living, of their having to abandon mixed farming as we once knew it, so that they could stay in agriculture. This year with its extreme weather conditions will deal the final blow to some; let's not let it happen to them all.



COFFEE, TEA AND CORNPLASTERS

There aren't many of us left who remember Sixbey's General Store. It was more than a store; it was a gathering place, a news bureau, a bright spot in a boy's summer afternoon.

You would come in from the hot dusty street, and the shaded store was cool. Immediately you encountered a tantalizing blend of scents — apples, licorice, spices and smoked ham. Grown-up conversation enhanced your feeling of excitement as they viewed and reviewed town happenings. You always took a long time to decide between a chocolate or a lemon drop, so that this exciting visit could be prolonged.

Our town has changed since then. For those of us whose memories linger in Sixbey's Store, it hardly seems the same place.

Yet one thing's the same. At the corner of Elm and Main, St. Mark's steeple still points skyward. Man's need for God never changes. And the Church remains constant as it teaches the truths of God's love and presence.

Bill Smiley

NOW I KNOW IT WAS ALL GUFF

by Bill Smiley

I've suddenly discovered that my wife isn't such a lazy bum after all, and that most women aren't appreciated by their husbands.

Last week I wrote an idyllic column about how peaceful and beautiful it was at Grandad's, out in the country, overlooking the bay, quiet, restful and all that guff.

It wasn't guff at the time, but it is now. It's neither peaceful or quiet around here, though it's still beautiful.

Yes, we're still here. On the eve of our departure, my silly old woman stepped out of the car, twisted her silly old ankle and broke the silly old thing.

We didn't know it until next day. I thought it was probably a bad sprain. But on the morrow it was the shape and colour of a fully matured beet, so off to the hospital for X-rays.

That was quite an experience. It was one of those dripping hot days, and also a Saturday. Normally, a small-town hospital is a pretty quiet place. But on a Saturday afternoon in midsummer, in tourist country, the emergency ward is a bit of a mad-house.

We were lucky. The girl at the desk had gone to school with my wife and had our names written down before I could open my mouth. Another school friend is a nurse, and though off duty, came in and helped in many ways.

There was one doctor and one medical student on the job. In poured the patients, and I couldn't help admiring the way the staff coped, in the appalling heat.

I hope Doc Leeson, another old friend, had his breakfast that morning, because he certainly didn't have any lunch. Here's an Indian girl with a sick baby. Here's a twelve-year-old boy being carried in by a worried father. The boy has cut his leg badly. Tourists.

Here's a young kid who has burned his hand badly. Here's a young fellow with his hand all mangled. Here comes a very pregnant lady, just about ready to pop.

I see the doc in the office, a cup of coffee he's trying to snatch held in one hand, phone in the other. I know it's a bad one, because he's lost his joking, jovial, personal manner and looks grave.

Two orderlies and the medical student tear down the hall in the direction of the ambulance garage. Running, flat out. Sure enough, it is a bad one. Plane crash just a few miles out of town.

The doc can't leave. He has to read X-rays, bandage wounds and deliver a baby. But he phones for help at the accident scene and goes right back to work. He's disturbed, because he's a flying buff himself.

But he doesn't show it. He goes right on toiling with ailing humans, joking, calling them by their first names, doing six things at once. (Later he told me there were two killed, father and son, in the crash.)

He finally got a look at my wife's X-rays, cheerfully told her yep, it was broken, and swiftly and skillfully made and slapped on a walking cast.

The nurses, though running in all directions, found time to put her in a wheelchair, get us out to the car, and loaned us a walker, a thing you push ahead of you, hopping on one foot.

What a difference from the impersonality, and even inefficiency so often found in a big city hospital. There, too, there are dedicated people doing their best, but there's a mass of paperwork, a coldness, a lack of intimacy that is rather off-putting.

Well, I've digressed, but the hospital scene impressed me deeply. It's the way a

Warning from the IBC

Although it may seem unlikely, the easiest way for a burglar to enter your house is through a door, the Insurance Bureau of Canada warns.

The IBC, which represents most of Canada's fire, casualty and automobile insurance companies, says a burglar will invariably try all of the doors in your house before he attempts to get in through a window. Often, the thief will find the door unlocked and that's just like inviting him in.

Even if you lock your doors they are an easy target if there are any glass panes close to the lock. The burglar then only has to break the glass to unlock the door. With sliding glass doors, you should put a bar in the floor track, the Bureau advises, so that, even if the thief breaks the lock, he can't slide the door back.

If you lose a set of keys to your house, you should immediately have your locks reset. This is especially important if, like many people, your key chain has your identification attached to it.

The only other way into your house, obviously, is through a window. You should make sure all of these are locked and the locking mechanism

By resolution of the Legislature of Ontario a select committee was appointed on June 30, 1972 to examine, study and inquire into the following matters regarding land drainage in Ontario:

(1) The objectives of land drainage as an agricultural practice and the benefits to be derived from such practice.

(2) The associated problems of competing land use in the urban fringe and in wetlands, as influenced by land drainage projects.

(3) The problem of public interest in land use over the drainage of private lands by individuals.

(4) The prior evaluation of the benefits and costs of a drainage project.

(5) An evaluation of the petition procedure for initiating a drainage project.

(6) A review of the construction improvement and maintenance procedures under "The Drainage Act" in achieving the objectives.

(7) A review of the appeal procedures under "The Drainage Act".

(8) A review of the financial procedures and assistance under "The Drainage Act" and other drainage programs.

(9) A study of the costs of land drainage and what influences such costs and how they may be reduced, i.e. engineering costs, etc.

(10) An evaluation of construction practices in general and erosion and weed control of drainage ditches in detail.

(11) A review of the administrative practices and methods in carrying out responsibility under "The Drainage Act".

After due study and consideration to recommend such changes in the laws, procedures and processes as in the opinion of the Committee may be necessary and desirable.

The Committee has the intention of visiting all areas in the Province and to hold public hearings on the questions associated with the above terms of reference.

This therefore, is to invite all interested parties, individual or otherwise, to indicate to the Committee, by (AUGUST 15, 1972) their intention to submit written briefs or their desire to attend the hearings and make oral representations.

The response to this invitation will determine the times and places of hearings. A written notice setting out the time and place of the public hearings will be given as soon as possible to all persons who have filed notice of intention to make written or oral submissions.

Grow Your Own Shrubs

If you want a flowering shrub like one you have admired, why not grow it yourself? Russ Gomme, horticultural specialist, says that it can probably be propagated by taking cuttings. Nearly any flowering shrub will root this way.

The first step is to prepare a small area in the garden for the young plants OR use a wood box at least 6 inches deep. An ideal soil mixture is sifted sand and vermiculite. Some shredded peat moss is also good. Mix it well then tamp to a level surface.

Take cuttings from healthy mature plants. They can be pulled from the shrub easily. Use your thumb and forefinger to pull away side shoots growing from the main stems. The butt-end will contain wood from the previous year's growth. To prevent withering, place the cuttings in a pail of water and plant as soon as possible.

Thoroughly soak the soil and insert each cutting as deeply as possible. At least half the cutting should be under the soil surface. For the next 3 to 4 weeks, keep the soil damp. During hot weather, the cuttings can be shaded with a sheet of burlap to prevent wilting and drying.

hospital should be: friendly, concerned, and with a minimum of red tape.

Anyway, the old girl is lying on the chesterfield with her leg propped up and feeling furious and frustrated. She's the type who does everything in the house at about eighty miles an hour, and the speed at which I do them, about one-tenth of that, is driving her insane.

Every time she remembers that she's going to be hobbling for six weeks, can't go swimming or play golf, can't get at her washing, she gets angrier. I try to cheer her up by saying she's lucky she isn't in a full leg cast, in traction for six months. It doesn't seem to help. To her, immobility is anathema.

Meantime, I'm re-learning a lot of the things I used to do when the kids were little, but have sloughed off, ever so casually, over the years.

Cooking. Last night for dinner, small new potatoes, boiled in their skins, buttered young carrots and beans, sirloin steak and salad. Tonight, sausage, broccoli spears and whatever else turns up.

Housework. I've made my bed, after only three days, vacuumed the rug and done about eight thousand dishes. Just finished washing out a brassiere and some socks. I'll cope.

However, it will be a joyful day when the lady of the house can get off her backside and get back to doing all those things that take her so short, and me so long. Housewives of the world, I salute you. I'll never again ask, "What in the world do you do all day, when I'm at work?" Never. Now I know.

They quickly changed their ideas. It seems they had always wanted to have children!

This is the second family of seven to be adopted through Today's Child. The first, also four girls and three boys, was adopted in Canada's Centennial Year, 1967.

The only other seven ever to appear here will be remembered because they attracted admirers and would-be parents from all across Canada. They are seven young sisters, hoping to be adopted as a family so they can grow up together.

That all-girl family has not been adopted yet, but undoubtedly will be. It takes longer when there are so many possibilities to be considered.

The next largest family was five - four sisters and their brother. They were adopted by two different families as a trio and a pair. The families are neighbors and close friends so the children will grow up together even though they have different parents and different names.

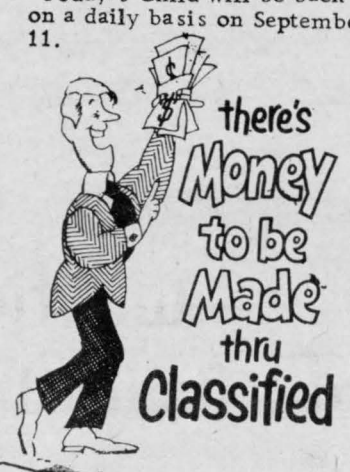
Two families of four found their adoption homes through Today's Child as did two threesomes. At least two more trios will be in their permanent homes before school starts.

Ten pairs were adopted by parents who saw them here.

Of course the majority of children are adopted one at a time. The singles this year have been mostly older children- a glance at the list shows ages of four, seven, nine, twelve and even fourteen. Today's Child has had almost no babies but there have been a few - three months, five months, nine months, sixteen months. Every one has been adopted.

For the rest of the summer, this column will appear once a week instead of daily and will always feature a family group. The next family is a five-some- four lively, pretty little girls and their brother who are anxious to be adopted together.

Today's Child will be back on a daily basis on September 11.



CAN YOU BAKE A CHERRY PIE

Maybe you'd rather not on a hot August day, but you could freeze fresh sour cherries and bake that pie in the fall when the weather is a little cooler.

Food specialists at the Ontario Food Council, Ministry of Agriculture and Food predict a bumper crop of sour cherries at reasonable prices. With the cool spell in June, the cherry harvest is expected to be later than usual, reaching its peak from the last week of July until mid-August.

Sour cherries are exceptionally easy to freeze. The convenient 6-quart basket will make about seven 9-inch pies. Remember to select firm, ripe cherries. To prepare them for freezing, chill well and pit. For each 9-inch pie, combine 4 cups of cherries with ½ teaspoon ascrobic acid and 3/4 to 1 cup sugar. Place in a plastic bag, seal and freeze immediately.

Rain, Rain

That is about all it seems to be doing these days. The crop situation in Eastern Ontario as everyone knows, has been greatly affected by the wet conditions.

The lack of hay and pasture is becoming a major problem on many of the farms. Pastures are being badly trampled such that many will have to be plowed in the fall. Also, at this time much of the grass has been grazed off which in turn is causing a drop in milk production. A lot of our hay is still standing in the field and that which has been harvested is of poor quality. When storing hay, you the farmer should check to make sure that it is dry. I expect there is going to be quite a few barn fires this year because of damp hay.

The corn and grain fields are also greatly depressed. Crops on tiled land are in fair condition and should yield an average crop. Because of the possible feed shortage this fall, I feel a lot of herds are going to be heavily culled over the next few months. If this does happen the good cattle prices now present will fall. Also along with this, the dairy farmer who sells cattle off, may have a problem in filling his milk quota.

Herd Management

Weather - we don't have control over, but let us do what we can. One thing to keep an eye on is the incidence of foot rot. Because of the many mud holes, there will be a lot of foot rot. So, if you see it - treat it. Don't forget the heigers. Some people seem to forget about them after they are turned out in the spring. And while you are checking for foot rot, also check for pink eye. Pink eye, if not caught in time, could cause blindness.

Agriculture Representative.

NOW HERE'S AN INFORMATIVE SIGNBOARD TO READ

Up at Iroquois Point there used to be a very nice, well-appointed sign giving information on the only Canadian Seaway Locks and a beautiful flower-bed nearby for all visitors to enjoy. After efforts a year ago, the flower-beds were cleaned up. This year the rock-garden area was let go and again after a letter to the Seaway Authority by Iroquois Council, the Authority announced it was going to clean out the rock-garden and grass the area. It makes one wonder, taking a look at that unsightly and disgraceful sign, why individuals should have to take repeated action to get something done. As Canadians we deplore the lack of adequate administrative decisions such as this and feel strongly that such federal lands should be showplaces not only for Canadians but in this case for the thousands of tourists who visit this Seaway Lock area each year.

Watering Lawns Early Morning Is Best

Most lawns are in good condition right now because of abundant rainfall. But that doesn't mean you should put the garden hose away, says John Hughes, horticultural specialist, Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food.

Most homeowners tend to water their lawns too often and too lightly. This method of watering encourages shallow root growth and increases the possibility of damage during the hot summer months. Generally it is better to water a lawn heavily and less frequently

The amount of water needed varies, depending on the soil, the weather and the grass variety. At the first sign of wilt hook up the sprinkler, for the top inch dries rapidly. To gauge the amount of water applied, place a pan in the area covered by the sprinkler. For most soils, an accumulation of 1 to 1½ inches of water in the pan is adequate. It may be necessary to move the sprinkler several times to prevent puddling.

The best time to irrigate is in the early morning so the water can move down into the soil. When a lawn is watered later in the day, much of the water evaporates. Care should be taken when watering in the early evening. On warm nights water remains on the leaves and may lead to disease.

Abolition Of Capital Punishment

Permanent abolition of the death penalty for murder is urged by a department of the United Church of Canada.

In a recommendation to go before the 25th General Council of the Church at its biennial meeting here this month, the Division of Mission in Canada asks that the federal government make abolition of capital punishment a permanent feature of the Criminal Code.

Canada's five-year experiment of imposing life prison terms, instead of death, upon convicted slayers - except in the slaying of police officers or guards in penal institutions - ends December 29.

At that time the policy comes up for parliamentary review and a free vote in the House of Commons has been promised by the Trudeau administration. During the past five years, no convicted slayer has been hanged in Canada.

Police chief associations and other groups have pressed for reinstatement of capital punishment, particularly in cases of premeditated murder and slayings of police officers, and perhaps with this in mind the lengthy preamble to the Division of Mission's resolution says:

"The tenor of the country at the present time is one of punitive rather than of reforming aspects of correction; there is no indication that there has been any change in the incidence of homicide during the present term without capital punishment and most homicide is not sufficiently premeditated to make the provision of an example of capital punishment a relevant one."

The resolution, to be discussed August 17, fourth day of the assembly that opens August 14, asks the 25th General Council to reaffirm the stand taken in 1956 by the 17th General Council for abolition of the death penalty.

Each member of the United Church, which claims a total of 2.2 million members and adherents, is asked to write his member of Parliament "requesting the permanent change to abolish capital punishment and to establish suitable alternatives for a civilized society".

The alternatives suggested are those approved by the Church in 1960:

"A statutory sentence of life imprisonment, subject to all prevailing powers of remission and parole. Each case would be the subject of review every three years on a basis analogous to that now provided in the Habitual Criminals Act.

"This means that no person will be released from care so long as his retention is essential to the well-being of society and to his reformation...

"We believe the Church must look upon prisons as it now looks upon hospitals and mental institutions, as places where those needing the help that modern medicine, psychiatry and other sciences can offer may receive treatment. The Church must see every man as capable of reformation and redemption."

The preamble to the resolution also states that the retention of capital punishment "can

BRITISH ARCHITECTURE 1972

Considering that the focal point in small towns and villages is usually the place of worship it is not surprising that some of the finest architecture through the ages has been lavished on churches. Stamps featuring churches, abbeys and cathedrals form a large international theme, though Canada has not so far shown the wide variety of churches to be found all over the country.

BY TOM TREMFIX

Q: My wife and I operate a vacation lodge which is open year 'round. Before the winter guests arrive we want to refinish the floors in some of the rooms and cottages and also in the dining room where a traffic pattern has developed. Will we have to strip off all the old varnish and if so, how do we go about it?

A: You won't have to strip if you use a polyurethane wood finish called Fasteron which comes in clear gloss or satin clear and dries in two hours. However, when using any wood finish you must be sure that all wax or polish is first removed and the floor is free of dust and dry Use pure turpentine to get rid of the old wax.

RE-FINISHING OVER OLD VARNISH

Sand any blisters or rough spots and wipe up dust with a clean rag dampened with turpentine. Touch up the worn areas with a brush and let them dry thoroughly. Complete the job by brushing on a coat of Fasteron to the entire floor. You'll be able to walk on it two hours later.

In an area where there is a lot of foot traffic, such as your dining room, you may wish to apply multiple coats.

This will give you a heavy-duty polyurethane finish which won't require waxing, won't water-spot, and is so tough it's highly resistant to marring even in heavy traffic areas.

GOOD ON BOATS

This finish can be used outdoors as well as inside, so if you have boats to maintain you might want to use it instead of varnish. It's non-explosive, and one imperial gallon will cover approximately 500 square feet.

For information on polyurethane wood finishes write to Tom Tremfix, The Tremco Manufacturing Company (Canada) Ltd., 220 Wicksteed Ave., Toronto, 17, Ontario.

CHEMICAL WEED CONTROL IN THE GARDEN

One of the most effective methods to eliminate weeds is to use the old-fashioned hoe, if you are prepared to spend time and effort. An alternative can be the use of chemicals for weed control, says R.W. Crawford, horticultural specialist, Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food.

Today, there are many highly effective chemicals which can provide good weed control when properly used by gardeners. Any local garden center carries a number of these chemicals at a reasonable cost and can provide instructions for their use.

Misuse of these chemicals can cause some unpleasant consequences. Over-treatment can damage or kill garden plants while under-treatment may be ineffective. The recommendations on the label are based on thorough testing. The rate of application, the plants the chemicals can be used on, as well as the precautions to follow are printed on the labels.

Fire Blight Can Be A Problem

A relatively wet spring and summer is causing some problems with fire blight. This bacterial disease attacks such common trees as pears, apples, ornamental and flowering crabs, mountain ash, june berry and other similar plants. If the attack is severe enough, the disease can kill the tree in one season, says Professor C.B. Kelly, Environmental Biology Department, University of Guelph.

Fire blight, as the name suggests causes the tree to look like it has been burnt with fire. The leaves turn a dark brown or black. The bark becomes discolored and brown and often becomes shrunken.

Once the disease is established, it can be spread by a variety of methods. Very succulent growth will attract aphids that may spread the bacteria. Leaf hoppers can do the same. The bacteria can also be spread during rain when the moisture hits the ooze from an infected part of the tree.

When commercial orchards are infected with fire blight, growers can spray with streptomycin during the bloom period. However, by the time the green shoots are established, the chemical may fail to give good control. Growers then use bordeaux mixture. However, these are strictly stop-gap measures, says Professor Kelly.

Once the disease is identified, the infected parts of the tree should be cut out. Suckers should be removed before they become infected. Infected branches should be cut back at least 10 inches below the visible infection. To help prevent the spread of the bacteria, pruning tools should be disinfected with a mixture of chlorine bleach and water. Any branches or shoots removed should be taken from the area and burnt or disposed of by other means. Another control measure recommended is to remove wild or neglected trees which could harbor the disease.

Then the Iroquois was singled out for attack, but a heavy barrage from her four-inch high angle guns and multiple pom-pom forced the plane to abort its attack. After the enemy withdrew, and in spite of submarines known to be in the vicinity, the Iroquois, and two other escorts began the arduous task of rescuing survivors. Together they succeeded in picking up some 1,880 survivors, 660 being accommodated in the Iroquois. The ship's company performed throughout the ordeal with great skill and determination; many feats of gallantry and devotion to duty were noted by the commanding officer. Long after midnight, the Iroquois shaped course for Casablanca where the survivors were disembarked.

The Iroquois sailed from Casablanca on 19 July, in company with her sister ship HMCS Athabaskan and the Polish destroyer Orkan, with orders to carry out a sweep against enemy submarines and shipping in the Bay of Biscay. The group saw ample action and recorded many successes against surface shipping in the weeks that followed. Upon completion of this mission the Iroquois was dispatched northwards to rejoin the Home Fleet at Scapa.

In late August 1943 the Iroquois was assigned for service on the desolate Murmansk Run to North Russia. Her first task in Arctic waters was as part of a special naval force dispatched to Murmansk with vital war supplies and a number of important passengers.

In the ensuing months the Iroquois made several Murmansk Runs. Christmas day, 1943, saw the Iroquois as one of four Canadian tribals escorting the fateful convoy which was to lure the Scharnhorst to her destruction. At one desperate point, the senior officer of the convoy escort ordered the destroyers to form up for a torpedo attack on the shadowing Scharnhorst. However, the order was shortly cancelled when the German raider retired. She was soon caught and sunk by the superior guns of the Duke of York. All ships of the convoy were brought safely into Kola Inlet on 29 December 1943. As the year drew to a close, the Iroquois could look back on the first six months of her operational career with a feeling of pride and satisfaction.

But the Iroquois' severest tests and greatest triumphs were to come in 1944 - the year of the invasion, when the destroyer in company with other Allied warships, was to distinguish herself in a series of night actions off the French coast particularly in the Bay of Biscay.

Early in the year, the Iroquois along with HMCS Haida, was transferred to the Plymouth Command to strengthen the naval force pressing home the attack against enemy shipping along the French coast and to establish firm control of the entire channel in readiness for the grand assault in June 1944.

Throughout the tense days of June 1944, the Iroquois was secured alongside at Liverpool, her crew undergoing intensive courses in harbour training while new radar equipment was being installed. It was a frustrating time indeed - but plenty of action awaited her at sea. Iroquois' company would have many occasions to sing the praises of the new radar equipment being fitted.

In August the Iroquois really hit her stride, spending 28 days at sea that month on anti-shipping and hunter-killer assignments, steaming 9,750 miles. Most of this time was spent within sight of the French coast, and the majority of the nights at sea the ship's company was closed up at action stations. As part of Force 26 and Force 27, the Iroquois fought the enemy in several heated engagements along the coast of the Bay of Biscay. Small merchant vessels, heavily protected by armed trawlers, converted minesweepers, destroyers, and large "flak" ships were her targets. With her radar, Iroquois was often ordered to lead the ships of Forces 26 and 27 in to the attack - the convoys and escorts intercepted went down to almost total destruction. The Nazi coastal supply links were brought to a standstill. Toward the end of August 1944, the Iroquois' watchkeeping of the Biscay coast became almost routine. A final assignment to land armed parties at Les Sables d'Olonne in late September 1944, completed the Iroquois' operations in the Biscay area.

From 6 November to the middle of March, the Iroquois worked out of Plymouth as close escort for capital ships and troop transports in the dangerous coastal waters off the British Isles where schnorkel-equipped U-Boats lurked. Then, from mid-March to the final days of the war the Iroquois operated out of Scapa in the anti-shipping and escort role to and from Russia. The Iroquois' last convoy, RA-66 from Kola Inlet to Britain, arrived without loss, in spite of constant U-Boat harassment, at the Clyde, 8 May 1945, in time to celebrate the Allied victory in Europe.

For the Iroquois the job in European waters was over. On 4 June 1945, the Haida, Huron, and Iroquois sailed for Halifax. She was paid off on 22 February 1946.

However, her life was not over. Three months later she was recommissioned and served in a number of peacetime roles in the ensuing years. Again she was retired. But once more she answered the call of duty to help meet Canada's commitment to the war in Korea. In Korean waters, the Iroquois gained further fame as a stalwart member of the Train Busters Club. During the Iroquois' assignment in the area she was to suffer the only RCN casualties of the Korean War. A direct hit from shore batteries in B gun position killed one officer, two men, and wounded 10 others. The Iroquois' guns, in defiance, soon silenced the shore battery. After further war patrols in Korean waters and a turn at the peacekeeping role, the Iroquois, a tired "Fighting Lady", finally sailed for home on 2 December 1954, for the last time, from the Korean islands.

Until October 1962, the Iroquois remained busy with various peacetime exercises, refits, more exercises, and cruises back to her old wartime stomping grounds around Great Britain. Then came the end for this gallant veteran. On 24 October 1962, she was paid off for the last time to reserve at Sydney, N. S.

The navy declared her surplus. On May 11, 1966, she was sold for scrap.

Just to see Jean-Paul makes you want to hug him, because this appealing lad brings out the cherishing instincts in people.

Jean-Paul is seven, a delicate-looking boy, small for his age. He was born with a heart condition which may require surgery later on. Meantime, there are no restrictions on his activities but he tires easily and he does not go in for strenuous games.

French-Canadian in descent, he has big dark eyes, brown hair and olive skin. It is hoped a French-speaking home will be found for him, preferably with other children, because he does enjoy company.

Despite his heart, Jean-Paul is an active boy, very sociable, enthusiastic, talkative and excited over anything new. He is in Grade one and votes mathematics his favorite subject. He has made excellent progress in reading. Jean-Paul is not expected to be academically minded, but playing school with blackboard and chalk is his favorite game.

Jean-Paul likes swimming and is keen on snowmobiling. Children's television programs help him happily fill in the times when other boys are outdoors playing football.

This little fellow needs a father and mother who will give him attention, stimulation and love, and will not be demanding in their scholastic expectations.

To inquire about adopting Jean-Paul, please write to Today's Child, Box 888, Station K, Toronto. For general adoption information write your Children's Aid Society.

Grain Combine Clinic at Kemptville

"Adjustment for wear is as important as adjustment for regular threshing", C.A. (Arnott) neals of the Massey-Ferguson Company told the combine operators who attended the Grain Combine Clinic at the Kemptville College of Agricultural Technology on Thursday, July 27, 1972.

Inclement weather, prospects of lower grain yields and delayed farm work did not deter farmers traveling from as far away as Bath to participate in the clinic at which representatives from five major companies discussed the correct adjustment, maintenance and operation of combines.

The intensive workshop covered the operation of the machine from cutting to cleaning, including hydraulics and engines. The companies brought machines so operators could not only hear about the machine but could receive supervised experience in making the adjustments. A.E. Bryson of International Harvester, London, even presented a slow motion film of a combine which had glass sides so the complete inside operation of a machine would be viewed.

Representatives from the Ford, Allis Chalmers and John Deere companies also assisted in the program.

The clinic was organized by John Clark, head of the College Engineering Division.

Dairy Princess Workshop

Thirteen Dairy Princesses from Eastern Ontario used the closed circuit television facilities in an intensive one day course in Communication and Dairying at the Kemptville College of Agricultural Technology on July 29, 1972.

Special instructors for the workshop were T.G. Meagher and B.P. Wren of the College English staff, as well as W.B. Derry, Regional Supervisor from the Dairy Commission. John Clark and Harold McKnight of the Engineering Division were in charge of the video taping.

The Kiwanis Club of Manotick sponsored the workshop in preparation for the Ontario Dairy Princess Competition at the C.N.E. in August.

A steak bar-b-que and lobster boil for the Princesses, instructors and the Club was held at Graham Reeves' home near Manotick following the day of intensive instruction.

We know that your new Postal Code isn't easy to remember, so we're suggesting that you make up sentences, or rhymes, or some other funny way to remember it.

And we'd like to add that it isn't that easy. So here's a tip.

The numerals are tough. For example, won, too, for and ate are usable. The rest are almost impossible.

Try it yourself. Or, better still, try it at your next party and see who comes up with the best sentence, or rhyme, or something.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Sir:

Our hospital has again been asked by the Canadian Red Cross Blood Transfusion Service to organize an Area Blood Donor Clinic, and this will be held in the Board Room of the hospital on Tuesday, August 15th from ? to 4 p.m. and 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

The Women's Auxiliary, together with its teenage volunteers, will be assisting us by canvassing for donors and helping in the hospital on the day of the clinic, under the direction of Mrs. Gordon Lancaster.

This year, the Blood Transfusion Service is celebrating its 25th Anniversary. This service was established in 1947 to ensure that blood would be available free of charge to hospital patients who needed it. Before the free service was established, patients had to pay for the blood they needed or had to replace it on a two for one basis. During the past 12 months, 389 bottles of blood were used in the treatment of the sick at this hospital.

A successful clinic will help us to continue to provide the best possible patient care to the residents of our area, and your support will be greatly appreciated.

With kind regards,
H. P. Stel,
Chairman, Blood Donor Committee.

Following is a list of those in the area who have made 25 or more donations:

Summer Care For Christmas Poinsettia

If you want your poinsettia to bloom again next Christmas, here are a few points to remember from R. W. Crawford, horticultural specialist, Ontario Ministry of Agricultur and Food.

Pinch back the plant several times between now and mid-September. This makes it bushier and does not harm the plant. Pinching also prevents ending up with a tall gawky poinsettia. Remove any of the shoots to keep the plant at the desired height.

Poinsettias require high natural light intensity. But remember, they must not receive any artificial light after September. Even the slightest amount of artificial light, such as from a street light, will prevent it from flowering.

Keep the plant out of all stray light and this popular favorite will renew itself in time for Christmas.

is in good working order. Breaking glass in a window to gain entry is noisy, but a loose lock can be pried open easily.

The Bureau also suggests that you lock away garden tools and ladders if you are going away for more than a day. If you don't, you may find your house broken into with your own tools.

When burglars enter a house, the main items they are looking for are those that are easy to carry and easy to sell. Therefore, you should keep a list of such items as radios, television sets, small appliances, cameras, tape recorders and hi-fi sets. The list, with serial numbers where possible, can help the police to trace criminals and will make it easy for you when putting in a claim to your insurance company.

When insurancemen advise people to make a list of their possessions, often the policy holder replies that he knows what he owns and doesn't need one. If you believe this, then try this simple test: sit in the kitchen and try to write down all of your possessions in the living room. You'll miss a number of items. Think how difficult it would be to supply a list once the items were stolen.

Prague's Old Town Clock

One of the tourist attractions of central Europe is the astronomical clock that faces onto the Old Town Square in Prague, the capital of Czechoslovakia.

The present clock is a reconstructed model of the old one which was damaged by fire at the tail-end of World War II and which pre-dated the birth of Christopher Columbus. Astronomical clocks were fashionable in those days and the Prague city council commissioned Master Hanus, an esteemed technician of the time, to construct this one. He succeeded so well that his clock soon became the talk of Europe.

According to legend, the city councillors, concerned that Hanus might build a better and bigger clock for some other city, had him blinded. Friends found him home in bed one morning in a state of fever, his eyes cauterized. The blinded man later asked to be taken before the clock where, after a moment of contemplation, he reached inside and stopped it. Years went by before anyone could be found to get it running again.

The clock is in two parts, an upper section showing movements of the sun and moon and time of day, and a lower part showing days of the week, months of the year and signs of the zodiac. Visitors to Prague today gather to watch the clock strike the hour, when small doors at the top open and statuettes of Christ and the Apostles appear in succession while one of the carved fugures on the side Death the Reaper, tolls the passing of time.
