The New Recruiting System.

The new plan of recruiting which has now gone into force should have a stimulating effect in securing many new men for the battalions overseas. It is what is known as the territorial system and when a man signs up he does so with the corps at the front from his district, he will know when he goes overseas and reaches his destination he will be with men from his own home section and will be sure of friendly faces to welcome him. First he will have some training in Canada and then some with the reserve battalion in England and finally he will do his fighting with the boys from his old home town. Thus this neighborly spirit will be introduced into this most unneighborly business of war. In Canada each district will try to do as well as its neighbor in producing men to keep the fighting force up to strength on the battle line. There must have been a good many men who were sorry they did not go with the 154th Battalion and on Saturday next these will have a chance of signing up with the reinforcing company of the 156th which with the 154th represent this district overseas.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry McLaughlin Honoured

On Friday evening of last week Mr. and Mrs. John Pitcher threw open their house to the neighbours and friends for a farewell gathering in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Henry McLaughlin before their departure to their new home at Berwick. About thirty assembled and after a very enjoyable evening had been spent with music and games, a bountiful repast was served and Mr. and Mrs. McLaughlin were presented with an address accompanied by a handsome rocker. Mr. McLaughlin replied in behalf of himself and Mrs. McLaughlin, and although he stated he was not a speech maker he very appropriately thanked all the neighbors for the kindness shown to them while residing there. Toward the small hours of the morning one and all pronounced they had thoroughly enjoyed themselves and left for their homes after singing "God Save the King" hoping that allwould be spared to meet again.

Pertinent Questions by a Ratepayer

The Winchester Press in its last issue made its first brief reference to what is agitating the people of this vicinity more than anything else except the war—the high schools tangle.

The Press should be in a position to give the people a lot of information on this subject but instead reference is made to "muddling and meddling". Who are the muddlers and meddlers? Do they belong to the village or township? Are the township ratepayers correct in thinking that the attempt is being made by the villages to bleed the township ratepayers for more than their fair share of these school expenses?

Could the Press give its readers the amount of high school taxes actually paid by the farmers along the boundary lines, comparing the Winchester township ratepayer with the one across the boundary of either Mountain or Williamsburg townships for the year 1915. The taxes in Winchester township not having been levied for as yet for 1916, is the reason for going back to 1915, and in this connection the Press might also state if the pupils from all of these townships have the same rights and privileges at any of the county high schools.—RATEPAYER.

Mr. J. D. McPhail of Russell who has been an inmate of the Ottawa General Hospital for the past number of weeks, from reports received is gradually recovering, and his many friends hope for a speedy return to his old time vigor.

New President Elected.

The Conservative meeting on Monday at Winchester Springs was attended by a representative gathering from the old riding and considerable work was done looking to having the machinery in smoothe working order for the next ordeal. Mr. Ira Christie of Winchester was elected president and the other officers all left as they were before. Delegates were appointed to meet others to be appointed from the townships of Finch and Osnabruck when an organization would be effected for Greater Dundas in the matter of federal affairs. Hon. Andrew Broder delivered a short address after whom Mr. Hilliard occupied considerable time going over the programme of the government for the present session. He announced what has been since confirmed from Toronto, that it was the intention of the government to grant votes to women at the present session. Mr. Hilliard also took advantage of the occasion to go thoroughly into the High School question as it has been manipulated from the Winchester end. He has no sympathy whatever with the plotting from Winchester which has endeavoured to set aside the petition of the township ratepayers which was acted upon by the Counties Council leaving the maintenance of the High Schools with the villages where they are situated and relieving the township ratepayers from an unjust taxation which is nothing more or less than the payment by them for a considerable portion of the village pupils' education.

PLATINUM IS SCARCE.

Its Price Is Soaring, and There Is No Substitute In Sight.

Platinum is now selling at $100 an ounce, and many concerns are even getting a larger price for it. Not so long ago one could buy all this metal wanted for $24 an ounce. Jewelers are finding it unusually difficult to obtain it, and some refiners will not sell it to any one except jewelers.

Metals which are frequently mixed with platinum are osmium, iridium and palladium. The fumes from osmium are very dangerous, and workers with this metal must exercise the greatest care in making alloys, etc. Platinum is generally hardened with 5 or 10 per cent iridium, which is also used to tip fountain pen points.

Platinum is also used extensively in the electrical industry, and now, owing to its scarcity, molybdenum is being substituted. Many attempts to make other substitutes for platinum to be used in jewelry have been made but without much success. These include cheap alloys as well as white gold, which latter in many cases, however, eventually turns yellow. The success of white gold was rather precarious owing to the difficulty in making people believe that it was really gold, every one having been taught from childhood up that gold is yellow.

A Banquet For Horses.

Banquets prepared exclusively for animals are not altogether unknown in England. The aged inmates of the Home of Rest For Horses, Westcroft farm, Cricklewood, celebrate each New Year's day with a sumptuous repast. The menu for the last banquet consisted of lumps of sugar, chopped carrots, apples, brown and white bread and biscuits. These were mixed together in a wooden box and placed outside each stable door.—London Telegraph.

How the Natives Treat Gorillas.

Natives in the countries inhabited by great apes regard them always as human beings of inferior types, and it is for this reason that for a long time it was found impossible to get hold of an entire gorilla skin, because the savages considered it religiously necessary to cut off the hands and feet of the animals when they killed them, just as they do with their enemies, possibly for the purpose of rendering them harmless in case they should by any chance come to life again.

Wounds of the Heart.

In wounds of the heart itself the escape of blood is never in large quantity, and the lethal consequences are due to the fact that the escape of blood from within its cavity of cavities into the surrounding sac of the pericardium mechanically interrupts the alternate contraction and expansion by which its pumping action is maintained. Accordingly the results of the wound of the heart are usually identical with those of gradual suffocation. — Exchange.

Fined for Getting Married.

There are certain sections and communities who penalize marriage, and regard it in the light of a punishable offence. It is the rule, for instance, at All Souls' College, Oxford, that a Fellow forfeits his Fellowship if, when studying the classics, he should marry. In such an event he must not only pay the penalty, but must also present his college with a memorial in the shape of a silver cup.

By payment of a fine of £25 he can, however, retain an honorary membership, but, of course, he cannot enjoy the privileges of this select band of non-marrying men.

There is a similar organization in Germany—the Jungesellen Club. Whenever there comes to the officials of this club any intimation that a member contemplates matrimony he is immediately summoned for trial in the club court, with the president as judge. The culprit is allowed to plead in extenuation of his offence, and upon his skill in presenting such plea depends the amount of his fine, which ranges from £20 to £200.

The humorous feature of the fine consists in the purpose to which the money is applied. The money is devoted to a dinner, whereat all members appear in mourning attire. At the conclusion of the repast the president solemnly reads the sentence of expulsion, and the delinquent is led from the room amid the groans and lamentations of his erstwhile clubfellows.

Mushrooms Stewed.

Take one and a half pints of button mushrooms, clean them, put into an enameled stewpan with three ounces of butter first melted and allowed to brown a little. Stir them gently and shake over a moderate fire in order that the butter may be well distributed over the mushrooms; then add a very little powdered mace or nutmeg with salt, white pepper and cayenne to taste. Cover and cook till done. Serve around or at one side of bread patties.

How to Cook Potatoes

In a pamphlet about to be issued by the British Board of Agriculture, entitled "Economy in Using Potatoes," will be emphasized the best way to cook this vegetable. The potato consists largely of water, and its richest constituents are next to the skin. Not only this part, but a good proportion of the "flesh" is lost by thick paring. The average loss, according to the Board of Agriculture, amounts to one pound in every five pounds.

Pared potatoes put into cold water lose more than one-sixth of their protein, or flesh-forming substance, more than one-fifth of their mineral matters, and some of their starch. Boiled in their "jackets" they lose but 1 per cent of protein, a little over 3 per cent of mineral matter, and practically none of the starch.

The following are some of the useful hints given in the pamphet for economizing the food value of the potato;—

When boiled or steamed in its jacket, a cut in the skin at each end will prevent the potato from becoming stodgy.

Before baking, the tubers should be pricked and then cooked slowly, so that the skin does not "bake" on the flesh".

When potatoes must be pared owing to bruised surface they should be steamed or cooked in the smallest quantity of boiled water, to which a little salt has been added.—Tit-Bits.

"So you are twenty-four. How much older is your sister than you?"

"I don't know. She's been losing a year every birthday lately. I expect that we shall be twins before long."

Women to Vote in Ontario Next General Election

Toronto, Feb. 30.—Women will be given the suffrage vote by the Ontario Legislature this season. That the government had its mind pretty well made up was indicated in the House, by Sir William Hearst, in the opening round of the debate on the Speech from the Throne, and what doubts remained were dissipated by the caucus of the Conservative members today. The Government laid before the members their decision to give the women the vote, and while there were considerable discussion of details there was little opposition.

It is stated that the Government is not greatly concerned about the fact that local assessors are now preparing the lists, and that legislation this session will be to late too put women on the lists in time for the next general election. The remedy under consideration is an extension of the time for completing the lists to probably June 1st.

British Win Victory at Ancre Many Prisoners Captured

London, Feb. 18—Again the British have struck on both sides of the Ancre, cutting a wide gap in the German lines and pushing within a few hundred yards of Petit Miraumont. A successful attack Saturday captured trenches on a front totalling more than two miles to an almost uniform depth of a half mile.

It was another of the thoroughly-planned attacks the British have delivered recently on the Somme-Ancre front, far different from trench raids. Its main object was to push closer to the immediate objectives of Miraumont and Petit Miraumont, north and south respectively of the Ancre and on the road to Bapaume.

On Sunday the Germans tried to regain the positions taken from them by the British, but their attempts were fruitless. Attacking in waves, the Germans came under the concentrated fire of the British guns and were swept back to their trenches, suffering heavy casualties. At no place did the attacking forces reach the British line and the British suffered no casualties. The British captured 780 officers and men.

"The British on Saturday carried out an attack on a two-mile front west and south of Miraumount on both sides of the Ancre for the purpose of gaining the higher ground commanding that town, toward which the Germans retired after evacuating Grandcourt. It was estimated at corps headquarters that approximately 800 prisoners had been passed back, with more expected.

Not one of these prisoners had had food in 24 hours, some having been for 48 hours without food, as during this time the British guns had cut off all supplies from behind the lines. The prisoners virtually all were Prussians, and the first request made was for food.

"The British troops easily attained the first objective. Then they continued to go forward just south of Miraumont in an effort to gain entire control of all the high ground. The first fog in five weeks interfered with the artillery, but to-night the fighting was still in progress. British aeroplanes ventured boldly into the fog banks, but could see nothing by which to direct gunfire.

"One of the most daring incidents of the day's operations came toward the close of the preliminary bombardment, when an artillery officer crawled out of the trenches with a telephone, stationed himself forward in a shell-hole and calmly directed the fire which cut the German barbed wire to pieces. An English sergeant, losing his way, was captured, and was being escorted back by two Germans when the British barrage crept up to them. The captors fled and the sergeant returned to his own lines directly through the curtain of fire. He was wounded badly, but managed to reach a dressing station unaided, where he was able to give valuable information concerning the German positions."

Fresh Air is the Best Preventative of Disease.

"Cold weather," she says, "is to many mothers the signal to paste up the windows and close the doors.

"Certainly we do not want to 'heat the whole out-of-doors,' but neither do we want to breathe 'second-hand' air, and that is exactly what we do, unless a sufficient supply of fresh air is permitted to enter.

"Air is not fresh once it has been taken into the lungs and breathed out again. When it is taken into the lungs it contains oxygen, but when it is breathed out again it contains carbonic acid gas, which in small quantities is dangerous and in large quantities is a poison.

"It is clear, then, that to have pure air in a room there must be a way for it to go out and also an inlet for fresh air; therefore windows should be opened at both top and bottom. Heated air is lighter in weight than cold and ascends and will go out through the higher opening, the cold, fresh air coming in through the lower.

"A draught is very bad, and an opening an inch wide will cause a more dangerous draught than if the window or door were wide open.

"As a rule, the curtains and blinds break the draughts at the top, and a window board should be used at the bottom Nail a piece of board six inches high to the lower sill and raise the window on this; then the air enters in through the space between the two sashes."

If Good Crops are Expected Good Seed Must be Sown

The quality of the seed grain sown on the farm next spring will depend upon the farmer himself. This is a matter which is entirely in his own hands. If good crops are to be expected, good seed must be sown. The farmer should prepare the seed now for the spring sowing. During the winter months, when other farm work is not pressing, is the best time to clean the grain for seed. The best grain grown on the farm should be used and it should be put through the fanning mill two or three times at least, or until all of the light or shrunken grain and the weed seeds are removed. There is a distinct loss in sowing weak seed and it is much more profitable to screen out the shrunken and weak grain and feed it than to sow it and lose it. It is also essential that weed seeds be not sown if weed growth is to be prevented.

The increase in total yield is practically all profit. A crop of wheat from ordinary seed may yield 25 bushels per acre, and cost 20 bushels per acre to produce, leaving five bushels per acre as net profit. If, by sowing well cleaned seed, the yield is increased one bushel per acre, the increase in net profit is 20 per cent. The cleaning of seed in spare time during the winter does not add one cent to the cost of production. When well cleaned seed is sown in place of ordinary grain, the gain in yield is, of course, much more than one bushel per acre. The net profit has often been increased 50 per cent or even doubled. This is one way of increasing production and profit.

"Now," asked the teacher, "who can tell me what an oyster is?"

Silence for a moment, while small brows were knit in strained effort at remembrance. Then little Tommy's facial muscles relaxed, and eagerly he raised his hand.

"I know," he triumphantly announced. "An oyster is a fish built like a nut."

Your SPRING Suit

It's Time to Order It.

If you want your spring suit for Easter it is time to be thinking about it.

There are only eight or nine weeks before Easter and there will be many suits to be made before then, and it is always "first come : first served".

I have a beautiful range of spring suitings now in the store and while all are of the choicest quality, some little difference in the shade or pattern may catch your fancy, and if you come and pick yours out now of course you will be sure of it and we will have plenty of time to make it up.

The question of help this year is going to be the big problem, and the earlier you order your Spring Suit the less likely you will be disappointed in getting it.

And another thing—it wont cost a bit more to order it now than it will later on.

From The Trenches.

I suppose we're a lot of heathens;
Don't live on the angel plan;
But we're sticking it here in the trenches,
And doing the best we can.

While preachers over in Canada,
Who rave about "Kingdom Come,"
Ain't pleased with our ability,
And are wanting to stop our Rum.

"Water," they say, "would be better,"
Water! Great Scott! Out here!
We're up to our knees in water—
Do you think we are standing in beer?

Oh, it sounds alright from a pulpit,
When you sit in a cushioned pew,
But try four days in the trenches,
And see how water will do.

They haven't the heart to say "Thank you"
For fighting in their behalf;
Perhaps they object to our smoking,
Perhaps it's a fault to laugh.

Some of these coffee-face blighters,
I think, must be German bred:
It's time they called in a doctor,
For it's water they have in the head!

Capt. Earl Merkley Second in Recent Examinations.

Seaford, Sussex, Jan. 29.

My Dear Mother and All,

Have been so busy since getting back from Chelsea that I haven't had an opportunity of writing and also I intended writing to let you know that out of the class of 250 officers I made second best in my exams, making 96%, the chap that beat me making 97%. Did I tell you in my last letter that at the bombing school at Bramshott I made distinguished. There are four classifications, 3rd class, 2nd class, 1st class and distinguished, being the only one out of the school to make this mark I think I made quite good. As I told you our old 137th Battalion is no more and we are now known as the 21st Reserve Battalion (Alberta). We train and get drafts ready for overseas, reinforcing the 31st and 50th Battalions, both of which are from Calgary. We are in a lovely place here and particularly will it be real fine in the summer. We are right on the ocean front and from our lines which are about five minutes walk from the shore we can see a great amount of marine traffic. The town of Seaford itself is only about ten minutes walk from the camp and is a lovely place and a great summer resort, there being a lovely beach. I shall try and get some snaps as soon as we get some sun and you can get an idea of what a lovely spot it is here. We have had very poor weather lately and for the first 25 days of January there was only 12 hours sunshine and for 14 out of those 25 days the sun did not shine at all so you will understand that conditions like that are not very encouraging and today's paper states that January has been more severe this year than it has been in 36 years and of course being unable to remember that far back and not having spent very many seasons here I am not in a position to judge of what a little more pleasant weather would mean. However we are quite comfortable and have no reason to complain.

Alex. is real well and wishes to be remembered to you all and Lieut. Charles Taylor has asked to be remembered to you and Dad. He is just the same Charlie as when you met him in Ottawa. We have not had any Canadian mail for ten days and so I am looking for some letters from you, and we must surely have some mail tomorrow or the next day.

We are having lectures and working nearly every night but our new organization will soon be completed and I will then have a little more time for writing.

Bye bye for now,
Lovingly,
EARLE.

George Finnigan, Barriefield, on Sunday morning shot a wild cat that weighed twenty-six pounds and measured forty-one inches from tip to tip. The animal, which is a beautiful specimen, is colored like a grey squirrel, but with more black hair. Mr. Finnigan was out with a rifle on the rear of his farm and discovered the wild cat playing in the snow.

"Canada In Khaki"

Have you a husband, brother, son, sweetheart or friend in khaki, in the 154th, 155 or 156th Battalions, or other District Units? If you have—and who amongst us has not—do not fail to see "Canada in Khaki" the greatest moving-picture of training ever produced. Husbands, brothers, sons all have gone through their period of training here in this country, learning to become the soldiers that have made the name "Canada" world-famous and you can pick out in this great picture of military life in Barriefield Camp, the faces of many of them. Who of us have not wished as we read their letters of training and camp life, that we could be there with them, and seeing get further understanding of all the things they write about? Imagine the thrills it would give you to see the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery galloping into action; the Highlanders with swinging kilts, "going over the top" in a wild charge; the bombers of whom we hear so much, learning their perilous work, and the men of the Field Ambulance busy with stretcher and first aid work.

This great spectacle, "Canada in Khaki" is free from the horrors of war, and yet we get all the thrills and see every part of the training from the "raw recruit" at the recruiting office to the trained soldier at the presentation of colors ready to embark for overseas. We have had other great pictures of the war but "Canada in Khaki" with its familiar faces, and scenes, holds a charm that makes it surpass all others in interest.

The 156th Battalion presents to the people of Chesterville this great spectacle of military life on Saturday Feb. 24th at the Town Hall.

Admission 25c Children 15c. Children will be admitted to special matinee at 3 o'clock P. M. for 10c.

Knitters Entertain.

A very enjoyabie affair took place in the town hall on Tuesday evening when the members of the knitting circle entertained their friends who had helped them in knitting over six hundred pairs of socks in the recent contest. Lunch was served and the evening passed pleasantly while the needles worked ceaselessly making still more socks. Miss Jean McKendry of Vernon contributed a couple of recitations.

It was announced that the Women's Institute would donate a prize to the person turning in the greatest number of pairs of socks for the soldiers before Easter.

The 12th of July will be celebrated at Kemptville this year under the auspices of the Grenville County L. O. L. A celebration will also be held at Inkerman.

Meter to Blame

"Since you've been courting my daughter, young man," said the old gentleman severely to the young soldier, "I find my gas bill has been considerably increased."

"Perhaps it is the fault of the meter, sir," suggested the young man timidly.

"Yes, it is," agreed the old gentleman, "You're the meter, and you meet her too often?"

"Don't you ever get tired of doing nothing" asked one.

"Oh yes," replied the other languidly.

"Well, what do you do then?

"Take a rest."

O'Grady acted as best man.

The bride was charmingly gowned in ivory duchess satin and carried a shower boquet of white roses and maiden hair fern. Her only ornament being a beautiful pearl necklace, the gift of the groom. The bridesmaid was dressed in champagne silk crepe de-chene and carried a boquet of pink roses and maiden hair fern.

After the ceremony, the young couple, accompanied by many of their near friends returned to the home of the bride where a sumptuous wedding dinner was prepared for them, to which the aunts and uncles had been invited.

In the evening about 130 of the young friends gathered in to take supper with the newly married couple. The evening was joyfully spent in music, games and dancing till the wee sma' hours.

The many beautiful and costly presents show the high esteem in which the young couple are held in their respective communities.

The guests from a distance were:—Mr. and Mrs. Dan O'Grady, Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. O'Grady and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Turner of Ottawa; Mr. John Ralph, Metcalfe; Mr. and Mrs. James J. Hogan and Mr. and Mrs. Louis O'Reilly, Peterboro.

They will reside at Metcalfe, Ont.

Peace With Victory.

Sunday's British victory on the Somme helps understanding of what Bethmann-Holwegg had in mind when he confessed the other day that unrestricted murder on the high seas was his country's last resort. Germany has become convinced of what Sir Douglas Haig predicted a few days ago, of what British arms have demonstrated once more; that the Kaiser's mighty war machine is at last overmatched, that victory for Prussian arms has been irretrievably lost.

When four months ago weather conditions saved the Germans from crushing defeat, Crown Prince Rupprecht boastingly declared that the Allied defensive had been "stifled in blood and mud," and that German valor prohibited its ever being renewed. Sunday's victory achieved, we are told, with comparatively light loss, reveals the hollowness of the German commander's boast. Despite all the lessons in defensive warfare that they must have learned during the past year, despite all their preparations of the past three months, despite all their boasted efficiency, German troops have again been beaten, German lines again been broken. It is a defeat which, coming after repeated promises of Prussian war lords to their people during the past few months, should make a painful and profound impression beyond the Rhine. For the first time since the war began Germany is showing visible signs of breaking. Surrounded on all sides by foes, with the British grip on her economic wind-pipe tightening, her people bled white and threatened with the grim spectre of famine, Germany is evidently at the beginning of the end. She has played her last and bloodiest card—and failed. Bethmann-Holwegg's boasted war map is being rolled up. Von Jagow's chips are running out, and the players refuse to quit. The end is not yet, but Sunday's advance may be taken as a harbinger of the gathering storm of Britain's might, and it may not be too much to hope that the next few months shall bring peace—peace with Allied victory.

The Growth of a Penny

Many a man has owed his start in life to a sudden realization of the latent earning power of a very small amount of money. Children who have been provided with lavish allowances for which they have done no work are not so likely to realize the value of a penny or a dollar as those who have been paid wages for a fair return in labor, or those who have been given a small amount of money as the nucleus for a greater sum to be obtained by their own efforts.

A Sunday school in Indiana wanted to build a chapel, and in return for $7 in pennies—one to each child—has reaped $175. One youngster with the cent bought an egg: from the egg a chicken was hatched, and finally the chicken was sold for a dollar. This case was typical.

The history of many large and flourishing concerns points back to inconspicuous origins. Men of great faith labored unceasingly in the day of small things, and those who now survey the imposing result can hardly bring themselves to believe that it was reared on a foundation far richer in honor and in determined intent than in money. The most valuable asset in any form of trade or business still is character. A man is not impoverished till he has pawned his honor. A penny saved is not merely a penny earned—it may leap to a dollar and thence by degrees to a fortune. The Sunday school that received a return of 2.400 per cent on its investment of $7 has learned a lesson as significant as the deeds of Saul and Samuel, or the movements of the tribes of Israel,

That saving is largely a matter of habit and it should be the duty of every family whose head has regular work to save a definite amount. The late James J. Hill said: "If you wish to know whether you are to be a success or a failure in life you can easily find out. The test is simple and infallible. Are you able to save money? If not, drop out, for you will lose. You may not think it, but you will lose as sure as you live. The seed of success is not in you."

So much has been made of the saving habit recently by the advertisements of the Finance Minister, who urges the people to save and buy war certificates by the banks and savings institutions of Toronto and other cities that a concrete example of just what systematic saving will do for a person is instanced in a magazine article. A man of twenty-five, earning $20 a week, who will put $5 a week into the savings bank at 4 per cent, drawing out the total each time it reaches the sum of $1,000 and investing in 6 per cent bonds, will at the age of fifty-three years, have an income of about $20 a week from his savings. It has been the experience of many who have saved by the small payment methods in vogue for various funds that they have not deprived themselves of any pleasure or comfort and still have a balance at the end of the year that they would not have had they not gone about saving in a systematic way. So save your pennies and make your money work while you sleep. By starting to save the pennies life habits will be fostered and matured and the children and the parent not only, but the State and society in general will be the beneficiaries. It is easy to conceive of whole families acquiring the saving habit from the inspiration given by a child saving pennies.

The Pets of Prisoners in a great Prison

There is an old aphorism that "misery loves company."

Perhaps this saying explains why there are, in most prisons of the land, collections of pets that range all the way from a doormouse that comes, perhaps, to keep some lonely prisoner company in the solitude, all the way up to the workhorse that winds "slowly over the lea," or through the great gate at the close of a long day's work.

Here in Sing Sing there are any number of pets, a fact which reflects the human longings and the heart which is in every man. A little saunter round the yard of this great prison by the Hudson reveals the facts that one must be careful or he will stumble over the pride of some inmate's heart, or trip over the toes of a pet dog or goat, and then there follows an apology or the fight starts.

The pride of Sing Sing, perhaps, is a goat called "Dolly" who is intelligent enough to have worked its way to the front office and the outer yard—a desire that has not been gained by many inmates. Dolly is closly followed in the affections of the inmates by "Bob," a work-horse at the coal-dock, who will take a load of coal to the yard without his guide, turn, and then back into the correct position, wait and then go back to the coal-barge without guidance.

One of the inmates of Sing Sing is the proud owner of one of the finest pigeoncotes in the State, and this collection of pigeons were gleaned in a predatory manner by a "flyer" who lured the others into the prison until there were a score of birds to share the cote with the flyer.

Cats are a cherished possession with which the inmates share their meals, and one Italian prisoner has a pair of rabbits of which much is expected in the line of progeny as the months go on.

No man is wholly bad who can love a pet in a sordid, gray prison, and the spectacle of a "lifer" bathing and washing a little dog or cat and sharing his meals with the pet is one to move a heart of stone,

Outside the walls of Sing Sing, is a little piggery, are perhaps the strangest pets of all, for there are three small pigs mansioned by the keeper of the piggery --they are bathed and scrubbed every day—and these pigs have the entire run of the outer institution with Dolly, the goat with whom they fraternize.

The love of pets, which all prisoners share, is best exemplified by the story of a prisoner who upon being released from Sing Sing, went to New York, and there seeing an Italian selling canary birds, bought the entire push-cart load and released them, for he had learned the priceless lesson that "liberty is a wonderful thing and a thing to grant to all of God's creatures."

"Who was this 'ero Nero, Bill? Wasn't 'e the chap that was always cold?"

"No; that was Zero—another bloke altogether."

Why the German Subs. Are Not Effective

Britain has a brand new navy, made up on 550 "submarine chasers," built secretly by the Submarine Boat Company an American company. The submarine chaser has taken the place of bigger ships, and the builders believe the scores of German submarines now at work around the British Isles will soon be driven away.

The contract taken by the American corporation was for the construction of 550 chasers in 550 days, and the last lot was received in Britain just before the new German ruthless warfare began.

These submarine chasers are 80 feet long, 12 feet beam, and draw but 4½ feet of water, thereby making torpedo attack ineffective. With 500 horse-power in their motors, they attain a speed of twenty-two miles an hour, and can turn in their own length. The intense, quick "stabbing" attack of these boats, mounting 3-inch rapid-fire guns (13 pounders) on their forward decks, has been the dominant factor of the anti-submarine defence. Their cruising radius is 700 miles, at twenty-two miles per hour, and 1,500 miles at fourteen miles per hour manned by ten officers and men. Their sea-keeping qualities are such as to allow for a sea patrol of ten days' duration.

Children and Gardening.

Gardening is a congenial and profitable occupation for the average child, and it is highly recommended as teaching thrift to boys and girls. It is astonishing what large sums have been made by children out of their gardens. In New Orleans two thousand children grew vegetables and small fruits in the gardens of thirty New Orleans schools and saved their parents the combined sum of $30,000, according to a statement just compiled by Miss Mary Reames, instructor of the classes at the Normal school in New Orleans. Many of the children maintained home gardens, and these all helped to cut down the cost of living.

To foster and encourage the growing of vegetables there is nothing like the little plot in the front or back yard of the child's home. That is the ideal garden. It is right under the eyes of the parent, it takes no time to get to it or from it, and in its growth and cultivation the parents will or should take as much pride as the child.

There are indications that the number of home vegetable gardens in Ontario, in the next growing season will be the largest in the history of the province. This will be the direct result of the appeal that has gone out to everyone to produce more.

Every family with a bit of ground should encourage the child to have a garden, even if only a few tomato vines are cultivated, that will supply the table with tomatoes and possibly produce enough for canning. As a start in interesting the kiddies, prizes may be offered for preparatory work, insect-killing and getting rid of pests, which the children can do so well.

The Useful Woodpecker.

A Canadian bank manager recently boasted that he had shot seven woodpeckers in succession in his orchard, evidently under the impression that he was performing an exceedingly meritorious service in the community. He was destroying one of our most active insectivorous birds, and, though keenly interested in the conservation of his trees and of our forests, he was destroying a most useful ally in their preservation. Boring insects are deadly pests of trees, and woodpeckers are their special enemies, as they are able to reach these pests so secure from other enemies. No birds are more useful in the protection of our forests.

With the exception of the Sap-suckers our woodpeckers rarely attack healthy trees and are among the most beneficial of our insect-destroying birds. The Yellow-bellied Sapsucker has a black patch on his breast, while the top of the head from the base of the bill is red. These marks distinguish it from all other woodpeckers. It girdles the trees with holes in securing the sap which forms part of its food.

The different species of woodpeckers are the most important enemies of the bark-beetles and timber-boring beetles, these being the chief enemies of our forest and other trees. About seventy-five per cent. of their total food is animal food, and this consists chiefly of insects, among which the wood-boring beetles predominate. The Common Flicker is a great destroyer of ants, particularly on lawns, as many as 6,000 ants having been found in the stomach of a single bird. The little Downy Woodpecker and Flicker should be encouraged to come into gardens. They will readily accept nesting-boxes, and the encouragement of these birds is the best insurance policy that the tree-lover can take out.

Hubby—"Yes dear, you look nice in that dress; but it cost me a heap of money."

Wifie—"Freddie, dear, what do I care for money when it is a question of pleasing you?"

New System for Auto Licenses

Toronto, Feb. 18—With the object of facilitating the securing of motor licenses Hon. Finlay MacDiarmid, Minister of Public Works and Highways has approved plans of the Highways Department for the issuing of licenses through some forty officers of the department scattered throughout the province.

By the new plan a motor owner, instead of having to write to Toronto for his license will be able to apply to an official in his home county. The change will prove a great convenience to motorists outside Toronto, and each man authorized to issue licenses will be a special representative of the department, who can be called upon for information of any kind and attend to various local matters that crop up. The department will not pay definite salaries, the remuneration of the agents being in the form of a fee of 25cents for each license issued except those issued in Toronto, where only 15 cents each will be paid.

London, Feb. 18.—Development of operations on the western front each day on a larger scale leads to the belief that the long expected big operations there are at hand,

Importance is attached to the German official report of German airmen bombing ammunition dumps at the rear of the British lines. This fact recalls the liveliness of the British airmen before the Somme attack began last year. It is possible that the Germans are trying to emulate British methods in preparing the first blow of the forthcoming clash. Also it is the first time in many months that the German aviators have operated successfully in the British rear.

There is good ground for the belief that the big push may begin sooner this year than last. Both sides have rushed work on their lines of communication, and are now prepared to maintain the ammunition supply at all points without interruption.

The increased efficiency of both sides makes them independent of weather conditions, allows them to begin operations on a small scale and maintain ever increasing attacks until the ground thaws and dries and then deliver a knockout blow.

Sounds Fishy; But Who Can Tell.

Baltimore, February 16.—That the merchant submarine Deutschland has been captured, and that he saw her in Plymouth harbor with 186 other German submarines, was the statement made here to-day by William Palmer, second engineer of the American transport liner Mongolia. Palmer said that the British had captured 400 enemy submarines, and that 187 of them were in Plymouth chained together, and in the centre of a huge net work of chains attached to buoys and wharves.

Captain Koenig, commander of the sub-sea freighter, and his crew are in English jails, said Palmer. The Mongolia left Plymouth January 27, and arrived at New York, February 7. Palmer was formerly an engineer here with the Chesapeake Steamship Company.

Photographs of the Deutschland wrapped with the chains which held her to others in the harbor were on exhibition, Palmer continued, and it was generally known in shipping circles that the freighter had been captured. Where Captain Koenig and his crew were detained he did not know but said all were put in jail as soon as the vessel was brought to port. He did not learn how the Deutschland was captured.

Warm Wave Expected Next Week.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross continent Feb. 14 to 18, warm wave 13 to 17, cool wave 16 to 20. This was not expected to be of any great importance except that the week would average colder than usual, the storm being preceded and followed by lower than usual temperatures. Not much rain or snow expected in northeastern sections and in the far northwest. Long ago we predicted that following Dec. 27, the principal precipitation would leave the great central valleys, with a few exceptions in small localities, and go to the far northeast sections.

Then we predicted that precipitation, following Jan. 24, would gradually leave this continent and go to Europe. Six months ago we announced the failure of crops in South America for the winter of 1916-17. Their crop season runs from September to February, while ours runs from March to August inclusive. Our last warning as to the great drouth in South America was published in our Weekly Weather Bulletin, dated November 24, 1916.

South America is now in a ruinous condition, at the end of their crop season and at the end of a disastrous drouth. We thoroughly believe that we have the key to the crop weather forecasts and believe our advice on that subject will be of great value to the people of this continent.

Next warm wave will reach Vancouver about Feb. 20 and temperatures will rise on all the Pacific slope. It will cross crest of Rockies by close of Feb. 21, plains sections 22, Great Lakes and Ohio valleys 23, eastern sections 24, reaching Newfoundland about Feb. 25. Storm wave will follow about one day behind warm wave and cool wave about one day behind storm wave.

Not much importance attached to this storm wave except for about three days, while it is passing, the temperatures will average above normal. Forces and precipitation of this storm will be greatest of the month, except those of first week in February. The general precipitation of this storm will go to northern Europe and the Atlantic ocean about and north of Great Britain. Fish will soon begin to congregate in that section. Rains will increase on west coast of South America, Central America, Mexico and northern Europe.

March promises about normal temperatures, warmest near 1, 11, 21 and 31, and coolest near 4, 18, 23 and 27. A little earlier west of Great Lakes and a little later east of that longitude. Not much rain or snow during March. For that month the precipitation will concentrate on the west coast of Mexico, Central and South America, in northern Europe and the East Indies,

Storms of March will not be great. Most severe storms and most precipitation will occur near March 5, 15, 23 and 31. Southern truck gardeners should plant and sow early. Their last killing frosts average from March 1 to March 10. For them late killing frosts are not expected. Probably no frosts after March 4 and not much probability for that time.

Death in Strange Way Near Perth

Ferth, Ont., Feb. 15—A peculiar accident with a fatal result, happened at Rideau Ferry, a few miles from Perth early yesterday afternoon, John Coutts, of Loreburn, Sask., who was spending the winter with his brother-in-iaw, Edward Joynt, who lives near the Ferry, started out to the river for a load of ice when the sleigh he was driving collided with a fence, causing one of the boards to fly up hitting Coutts on the side of the head, but not injuring him apparently at the time.

Mr. Coutts continued on his way, getting the load of ice and returned to the home of his brother-in-law. About three o'clock in the afternoon he became unconscious and died shortly after from a hemorrhage on the brain.

He was 28 years of age and the only son of Peter Coutts, who for several years has conducted the summer hotel at Rideau Ferry.

Bowser Is Tender

He Comes Home and Finds Mrs. Bowser With a Headache.

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

When Mrs. Bowser arose the other morning she found herself heavy headed, and black specks floated before her eyes. It was a bilious attack, and she knew that she was in for a long day's headache. She said nothing to Mr Bowser, knowing how he regarded such things, but went down to breakfast with false cheerfulness. The sight of food nauseated her, and he, being busy thinking of a deal he had on hand and being in a hurry to get away from the house, noticed nothing unusual.

Ten minutes after Mr. Bowser had departed Mrs. Bowser was in bed again with throbbing temples. The cook came up to say:

"It is what you call appendiceetus, ma'am. I had a brother who was seized with the mortal ailment, and he looked just like you do."

"It is nothing but a headache, Maggie," was the reply.

"Are you sure it is not typhoid fever? I had a sister who came down with typhoid fever, and her eyes had the same glare yours have got."

"I told you it was only a bilious headache, and after you have laid a wet towel on my forehead I wish you would go down and leave me alone. It almost cracks my head open to talk."

"I will do as you say, ma'am, and I hope it won't be a case of consumption. I had a cousin who was tooken down with consumption, and we who stood watching over his bedside saw his ears twitch. I don't think yours are twitching any, however, and you may recover from it. There you are with the wet towel, and here I go, and I will come up every half hour to see if you are dead or living. If I find you dead I will run for the coroner and the police and the fire department. I have studied to be a trained nurse, and I know just what to do."

Mrs. Bowser dozed at intervals all day, and she had a bad day of it. One of the things that she worried about, sleeping or waking, was the return of Mr. Bowser at dinner time. She knew just how he would act and just what he would say. He would declare that it was all her fault; that she had gone around barefooted and caught cold; that she had eaten a whole cocoanut and thus upset her stomach; that she had done a dozen things no sensible woman would do. Having brought the headache on herself she must get over it by herself. He could have no sympathy for such a careless woman. Then he would go downstairs to eat his dinner alone and grow more vexed every minute, and when he was through with the meal he would go down to the furnace and slam and bang the door and toss the poker across the cellar to make all the noise he could. Mr. Bowser wouldn't do these things to be mean, but just as a moral lesson to teach her to be more careful of her health.

Mr. Bowser came home.

Mrs. Bowser heard him open the door and shivered.

The cook heard him come in and saw that the way was clear across the back yard to the alley in case she had to make a skip for it.

Not seeing Mrs. Bowser in the hall or the sitting room Mr. Bowser descended to the kitchen and asked:

"Has Mrs. Bowser gone shopping?"

"No, sir," replied the cook. "Mrs Bowser is lying on her dying bed upstairs and has been ever since you left the house this morning. If I knew how to work that telephone I should have had at least four doctors hours ago."

Having said this, she prepared herself for the impending outburst, but none came. Mr. Bowser turned pale and walked softly up two pairs of stairs and still more softly opened the bedroom door. Mrs. Bowser lay with closed eyes, and he tiptoed to the bed and kissed her and smoothed down her hair and whispered:

"Poor girl! Poor girl! I am so sorry for you. I'll go down at once and telephone for the doctor and tell him to let nothing interfere with coming at once."

"I wouldn't do it, my dear," replied Mrs. Bowser as she opened her eyes. "I have had one of those beastly bilious headaches all day, but I am getting the better of it now."

"Thank heavens!" exclaimed Mr Bowser as he raised his hands. "Maggie told me that you were as good as dead, and it took all my courage to come up here. Ah, yes, you are better, and probably by tomorrow you can be out of bed again. I am not a trained nurse, of course, but as any doctor will tell you, the first thing is for you to get some food in your stomach. Mrs. Bowser, how would you like some fried pork sausages?"

The invalid managed to restrain the smile which was coming to her face and the shudder which was going to shake the bed and feebly shook her head in reply.

"My grandmother always wanted fried pork sausages when she had a headache, but of course things have changed since her day. I wish Maggie had known enough to have a corned beef dinner. With a choice among the meat, cabbage, carrots, beets and grains you could probably have found something to tickle your palate."

"We will have such a dinner some day next week," replied Mrs. Bowser "I do not want anything to eat tonight."

"But a doctor would insist," persisted Mr. Bowser. "I will run downstairs and counsel with Maggie."

Maggie was of the opinion when gravely consulted that a cocoanut pie would be much better than anything in the meat line, and Mr. Bowser was not more than a minute in getting under his hat and inside his overcoat and starting on a run for the bakery. He was back in less than ten minutes with a bland and good natured look and cocoanut pie, and with his own hands he cut it in halves and hastened upstairs. Mrs. Bowser thanked him very sweetly, but declined to eat. She said that in about three days she would eat three cocoanut pies all at once if he asked her to.

"But there must be something," he went on as he scratched his head in a puzzled way. "How about chicken soup? I can get the chicken at the butcher's in five minutes."

"Let it go this evening, dear."

"But mutton broth?"

"You are very kind, Mr. Bowser, but we won't talk of anything more in the food line. You may wet and wring out the towel, if you will, and then I will try to sleep again."

Mr. Bowser hastened to do as she wanted and then patted her cheek in a loving way and walked softly out of the room. He went down into the kitchen and told Maggie that he had pulled Mrs. Bowser through the crisis and was quite sure she would live. He warned her against rattling the dishes or the stove lids and then went up to the sitting room and took a seat and folded his arms and waited. He felt a glad relief and did not kick at the cat when she came around to rub against his leg. He thought of telephoning to the doctor. But what could the doctor do more than he had done if he should respond? He thought of the way he had conducted himself on previous occasions, and he felt ashamed of himself.

Mr. Bowser heard autos and wagons going past the house with a rattling and a banging, and he wanted to rush out and throw frozen potatoes at the heads of the drivers.

A cat wailed out in the back yard, and he softly raised a window and made use of such words as promptly sent her jumping over a seven foot fence.

There was a boy yelled out in front of the house, and he wished that that boy had no less than six boils on his legs.

There came a long interval of silence, and Mr. Bowser was dozing off to sleep when there came a sharp ring at the door. He started up with muttered imprecations on the head of whoever it might be and tiptoed down the hall and opened the door. There stood a man who whiningly asked:

"Boss, can you give a poor fellow 10 cents for a night's lodging?"

"I will give you ten, twenty, fifty, a hundred!" shouted Mr. Bowser as loud as he dared, and he surprised that poor unfortunate by throwing him off the steps headfirst into a snowdrift and then picking him out again and throwing him over the fence. Neither of them enjoyed the performance very much—the tramp because he was the victim and Mr. Bowser because he had to be quiet about it.

The tender hearted guardian and protector of Mrs. Bowser returned to the house and his watch, and nothing further occurred to create a disturbance. Even the cricket on the hearth buttoned up his lips, as they used to term it.

Bowser nodded. Bowser slept. In his dreams he saw Mrs. Bowser dancing around the room and declaring that she had never felt so good in ten years.

The bells struck midnight. Bowser awoke. Mrs. Bowser stood before him and was saying:

"My headache is all gone, Mr. Bowser, and I want to thank you for your kindness."

"Y-e-s," he replied, with blinking eyes. "You had one of your durned old headaches and made me no end of trouble. You brought it on yourself by some careless act, and if you ever do it again it will mean but one thing—divorce!"

Bowser had recovered from his tenderheartedness. He was Bowser again.

Getting Even.

"When I left home twenty years ago nobody thought I would ever amount to anything," said the prosperous manufacturer.

"You fooled 'em, eh?"

"I should say so! Just for spite I leased every available billboard and plastered my name all over my native village."

WHY I should select a Mutual Policy!

FIRST -Because in a mutual company the assets are the sole property of the Policy-holders.

2—Because in a mutual company ALL of the profits go to the policy-holders.

3—Because in a mutual company the executive is directly responsible to the policy-holders: ALL the directors are policy-holders' directors.

4—Because mutual companies hold the record for stability.

5—Because mutual companies have all the "safety-first" features of stock companies with mutuality thrown in.

6—Because the largest American companies are already mutual or seriously considering mutualization, and already more than one-half of legal reserve insurance is mutual.

7—Because mutual companies are not built up in the interest of the FEW, but of the MANY.

Therefore I will take for mine

Audrey the daughter of Mrs. J. S. Kyle met with a somewhat peculiar accident on Sunday whereby her collar bone was broken. When she was awakened in the morning she arose quickly in the bed and becoming entangled in the bed clothes, fell heavily to the floor with the above result.

Morrissey—Morarity.

A quiet wedding was solemnized in the Hotel Dieu Hospital chapel at Kingston Tuesday morning at 8.15, when Rev. Father McNeil, professor of Regiopolis College, Kingston, united in marriage Mr. Herbert W Morrissey, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Morrissey, Jasper, to Miss Anna Moriarty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Morarity of Chesterville.

The marriage was to have been solemnized in Brockville at St. Francis Xavier church by Very Rev. Dean Murray, but owing to an unfortunate accident which occurred on Thursday last, whereby the groom, who is a popular trainman in the employ of the G. T. R., had his right hand badly mangled while operating a train at Gananoque Junction, the ceremony was peformed at the Hotel Dieu where he is at present a patient.

The bride looked particularly charming in a suit of blue silk poplin, with hat to match, and ermine furs, the gift of the groom, and carrying a white prayer book. She was assisted during the ceremony by her cousin, Miss Katherine Walsh, of Berwick, who was becomingly gowned in a black and white suit, with hat to match, and black fox furs.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a gold bar pin and to the groomsman a pearl scarf pin.

After the nuptial mass, the bridal party were served with a dainty weddfng breakfast by the Sisters of the hospital.

The popularity of the bridal couple was shown by the many handsome wedding gifts received. The bride was formerly a popular nurse on the Eastern Hospital staff, while the groom is deservedly popular among a wide circle of friends in town.

After the groom's recovery they will visit the eastern cities and will afterwards reside in Belleville.

Funeral of Late W. J. Carlyle.

(Calgary News-Telegram Feb. 14th.)

Mr. W. J. Carlyle, residing at Hubalta, a member of the Carlyle family of dairymen of this city, died at his residence on Friday, and was buried yesterday afternoon. He came west five years ago in search of health, and believed that he had quite recovered. He caught cold during the very severe weather which developed into a return of his old trouble, and died after a brief illness.

He had a large number of friends in the city. He was a member and elder ot St. Andrew's church. He was a very generous and hospitable man and his house was seldom without guests. He was a member of the council of Hubalta.

A few years ago he interested himself in securing pure milk for the babies of the city, believing that he could do a great amount of real good to the community in that way, and Calgary's low child mortality was due to some extent to his efforts.

His was the first break in a family of eleven children. He leaves a widow, a daughter and a son.

The funeral was held Monday afternoon at the home at Hubalta, and at St. Andrew's church. It was well attended, and was conducted by the Rev. A. McTaggart.
