St. Andrews, South Mountain Celebrate 94th Annual Meeting

Members of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, South Mountain, sat down to a sumptuous pot luck supper, Wed. evening, Jan. 9th, in the Fellowship Hall, as part of the 94th Annual Meeting of the congregation, designed to be a time of both honouring the past work and celebrating the present possibilities. The ladies' Guild was commended for the able way in which the tables were set and the food presented.

The meeting itself was constituted with prayer by the Rev. John Hibbs, pastor, followed by the reading of Luke 17: 4-10 and a number of old-time hymns of the Church. The Minister was appointed chairman for the evening and Miss Lou Hunter recording secretary. Minutes of the previous annual were duly approved, including a special congregational meeting.

Reports were received, in summary form, from the Kirk Session for the spiritual oversight of the congregation during the past year, presented by Elders Ted Robinson, Gordon A. Cumming, the Rev. Hibbs, and Miss Lou Hunter. Highlights noted was the participation of the congregation in an outreach of ministry to the Church-at-large, through the General Assembly Budget, the Inter-Church-Aid Appeal "Development is People", the Seaway Community Services summer camp program and White Gifts Appeal, Armagh Home, the Women's Missionary Society allocation and bale to Scott Mission, Toronto, and the Presbytery and Synod allocation, all requests being duly met. It was noted, through a blackboard presentation by the Rev. Hibbs, that the distribution of resources by the congregation in 1973 showed 28% to needs outside of the congregation, symbolically expressed in the fact that more families participated in the General Assembly Budget needs this past year than ever before. Wholehearted support of worship and special events, including a shared ministry with the congregation of Knox Church, Iroquois, was notably presented in the Session's detailed report.

The reports of the Board of Managers, for the upkeep and maintenance of local needs, were presented by the Chairman of the Board, Arnold Shaver (secretarial) and Miss Lou Hunter (Church treasurer) showing an excellent response on the part of the congregation to meet all expenses of 1973 and to enter the new year in good stead. A new working agreement with Knox Church, Iroquois, regarding the distribution of support, was noted in a report by G.A. Cumming, following which the 1974 Estimates were approved. Mr. Cumming also commended the Church treasurer, on be-

Tribute Paid Memory G. Elmer English

George Elmer English, a highly respected lifetime resident of the 2nd concession, Matilda, passed away suddenly at his residence on Sat. evening, January 5th.

He was born in 1896, the son of the late James E. English and Eliza Jane Sloan. In 1918, he married Lulu Vern Glover, who survives. Two sons, Orean and Arlie of Matilda, R.R.#2; a daughter, Mrs. Harry Bryant (Iris) of Stratfor, and Grand-daughter, Mrs. Robert Smith, (Veronica) of Stratford, also survive. A sister, Mrs. Kenneth McCaslin, (Arleen) predeceased him in 1966.

He was educated in Matilda and farmed before his retirement. In his younger years, he was a member of Iroquois Victory Band and of different orchestras. His home was always a centre for musical entertainment in the community. He attended Iroquois United Church.

Final tribute was paid to Mr. English at the funeral service held at Fitzsimmons Funeral Home on Tuesday, January 8th, at 2 p.m.

His Minister, Rev. Brian Gee, spoke comforting words on the Christian faith of the deceased. Rev. John Hibbs, Minister of Knox Presbyterian Church, rendered the solo "How Great Thou Art" with Mrs. Ruby Bell at the piano.

Pallbearers were: Frank Bueley, Charles Fisher, Robert Hanes, Dwight Merkley, Garnet Sloan and Robert Sloan.

The many beautiful floral tributes and Heart Fund Contributions testified to the high esteem in which the deceased was held.

Lions and Log Cabins

Did you ever dream of a rustic 'resort' all your own, away from the rush of life? How about a log cabin, 26 feet by 30 feet, with five bedrooms upstairs, a spiral staircase, fireplace, and all the comforts of home? Put it on an acre of land, with a 350 foot lake frontage, and your dream comes true!

"What's the catch?" you ask. "None, really, provided you are willing to invest about $6000 in property and materials, plus the summer holidays and every long weekend you can find for twelve years. You'll get what you want."

That's what Lion Danny Robertson is doing 50 miles north of Belleville. And he told the Lions Club all about it on Monday night at their regular meeting. He took pictures of his dream-come-true, from the very beginning until now, and the results are beautiful to behold. (There is still two years' work until total completion, which will actually be three years' ahead of schedule at that).

The main "cabin" which looks like a lodge fit for a Bay Street executive, is all equipped for comfortable living, and has a porch fronting on the lake on both upstairs and downstairs levels. Behind, there is a sturdy equipment and woodshed, plus an elegant log "privy."

To follow through with the rustic, away-from-it-all atmosphere, there is no electric power. Propane gas provides the lighting, and fuel for the stove, as well as power for the refrigerator.

Lion Danny showed slides of all seasons of the year. Whether it is summer and the livin' is easy, or fall with all the brilliant colours, or winter with three feet of snow, Danny's log cabin looks most inviting, and goes a long way to fill the most imaginative dream, of getting close to the pure beauty and serenity of this province's out-of-the-way places.

New Rector at St. Johns

Robinson, will announce this week the appointment of the Reverend Francis Gooch as first rector of the newly amalgamated parish of Riverside, Morrisburg, Iroquois and South Mountain. In addition to this parochial duty, Mr. Rogers will have the pastoral oversight of a ministry to the residents of senior citizen complexes throughout the city.

Back to the Woodpile

There was a time when the lowly stove wood wasn't given a second glance but in the past few months many people have turned to that source as another means of heating. As a matter of fact the interest in using wood has risen to the point that it is extremely difficult to get stoves to burn the wood. People hurried to buy stoves late in the Fall when they first understood there might be a fuel shortage but it now seems that the shortages first predicted may not come about. The interest in burning wood, however, seems to have caught on and the sale of wood has risen dramatically. Especially it seems, have city people taken to burning more wood in their fireplaces not only as another means of heating but many have found for the first time, the pleasure there is in watching a good wood fire.

Many people don't have their TV's in their livingrooms and it could well be that the renewed use of wood may mean that people will once again get back to visiting with friends and neighbours and stay away from the TV a bit more.

The world seems to work in great cycles both in war and peace and some of the things we enjoyed as youngsters, clothing styles included, seem to come back every few years to give us added enjoyment. So it may be with the wood stove or the furnace or the fireplace. The wood pile may again be a familiar sight in the garage or back summer kitchen, or even those new metal tool sheds. Or piled against the side or back of the house until it is dry enough to burn.

You can't burn "green" wood as some people have found out this year when they tried their hand at starting a fire for the first time. It could be that they didn't know there was a difference in wood and that it must have time to dry properly before it can be used. But after a year or so of drying keen fire makers will find that wood is a great fire maker.

In our own area we haven't heard there is a shortage of the fuels most commonly used and none seems to be in the offing at present. A mild winter certainly would help this assurance but efforts to keep the oil and gas flowing seem to have been undertaken to assure there will be no cold homes and businesses in Eastern Ontario.

The government seems to be making long range plans to stave off any future problems in Eastern Canada and no doubt greater emphasis will be put on new pipelines to bring western fuel to the East.

The price of all fuels seems to be headed in one direction ... UP and none of us can believe that it will come far down again, if ever.

We have, so we are told, had low prices for fuel for a long time and now we are about to pay handsomely for what we are about to receive whether it be Western fuels or from other countries. It will take some getting used to and again will hit the guy at the bottom another great blow. With the dollar worth as little as it is today, these increases are going to have a great effect on the living standards of many Canada looks upon as "low income" people. Just how they will survive is anyone's guess but survive they will one way or another. That is the attitude being taken in many high places today it seems.

AID TO HOUSING

Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford told a news conference that the federal government has already committed $150 million to a five-year, $500 million land assembly program to hold down the rising cost of housing.

The minister said that most of this money has been allocated within the past six weeks during talks with provincial governments about new housing programs launched last summer.

CAT AND MOUSE GAME AND I'M THE MOUSE

by Bill Smiley

This week I've been batching it, and I must say that I miss my wife. It's not that I can't cook and wash dishes and make the bed and do all those other silly things that our poor wives have to do day after day, year after year.

No, there's no problem there. It's the danged cats. They're driving me out of the remnants of what was once a fine mind.

I'd rather live with a herd of goats than with two cats, I've concluded.

Take one elderly she-cat who has been spayed. She was quite content with life. She is beautiful and very, very distant, except when she's hungry.

There isn't a bone in her body that is friendly. She just wants you to keep your distance, feed her well, and let her bask on a sunny stair-tread. In return, she will guarantee not to make a mess in the house. I had just begun to tolerate her, if not like her, after about six years.

Now, add a boisterous young tom cat. He's as agile as an orang-outan, has an appetite like a polar bear, has the manners of a pig, and is sickeningly friendly.

He has completely disrupted what was a fairly quiet, peaceful household.

He is driving the old cat out of her nut. He follows her around, licking and kissing her, until she spits, takes a swipe at him and makes him back off long enough for her to skedaddle to one of her hideouts. He looks hurt.

All you have to do is settle down with a newspaper and a cup of tea, and he's quite likely to come flying through the air, sending the paper one way and the tea the other, as he seeks solace for his yearning heart.

Given any encouragement whatever, he'll climb all over you, digging his claws into your shoulders because he doesn't know any better, smooching your face and neck in a wet, disgusting fashion, before thumping himself down for a rest on your stomach or chest or any other part of you that suits his convenience.

Two minutes later, he hears the old cat sneaking around, digs his claws into your knee and takes a flying leap, off to court her some more.

There's absolutely no sex involved. He just wants to be loved by a second mother, but she is a happy, childless widow, and wants to stay that way.

You can't even feed them together. She is a dainty eater. He eats like a wolf who has just broken a long fast. Put down two bowls. He gulps his while she is sniffing hers, then shoulders her aside and gets into her grub, while she bats him ineffectually, then retreats in disgust to sulk under a bed.

She is a bed sneaker-under, since he arrived. And if there's anything more difficult than getting a determined old cat out from under a bed, I'd like to see it.

The only way to do it is go under the bed after her, with a broom or mop. You wind up, puffing, stuck under the bed, while she has darted off and is under one of the beds in one of the other rooms. She's as slippery as an eel and a heck of a lot more cunning.

Meanwhile, during the half hour you chase the old cat, trying to grab any of her extremities so that you can throw her out, where she should have been long ago, his arrogant young nibs is having the run of the kitchen.

He's not a bed sneaker-under. He's a counter-walker. And a cupboard-door-opener. One leap and he's up on the kitchen counters, strolling, sniffing, licking. Don't leave the butter out. He'll down a quarter-pound, straight.

Give him three minutes alone and he's somehow opened the cupboard door below the sink and is gaily into the garbage.

The only time I have seen him a bit nonplused was on New Year's Day. Maybe he had a hangover. I was half-drowsing in a chair, and watching him out of a corner of my eye, in case he took a flying leap and threw his arms around my neck to kiss me, which I abhor.

He'd caught a mouse, it seemed, though we've never had mice in this house. He would slam his paw on it, pick it up in his teeth, chew it and swallow it. A tiny mouse.

Thank goodness he's good for something. Then he'd throw up the mouse, and go through the whole business again. I got a bit alarmed that he'd throw up more than the mouse one of these times, onto the rug. I investigated.

He was trying to digest one of those wide elastic bands. Every time he hit it, it would jump, so he thought it was alive and chewed it and swallowed it, but couldn't keep it down.

That's the kind of stupid cat he is. But he's getting smart very quickly. When I try to grab him and throw him out in the snow after a feeding, he goes by me like a cheetah going by a rhinocerous.

Sure wish my wife would get home. It takes two of us to handle the two of them.

TODAY'S CHILD

BY HELEN ALLEN

THE TORONTO SUN SYNDICATE

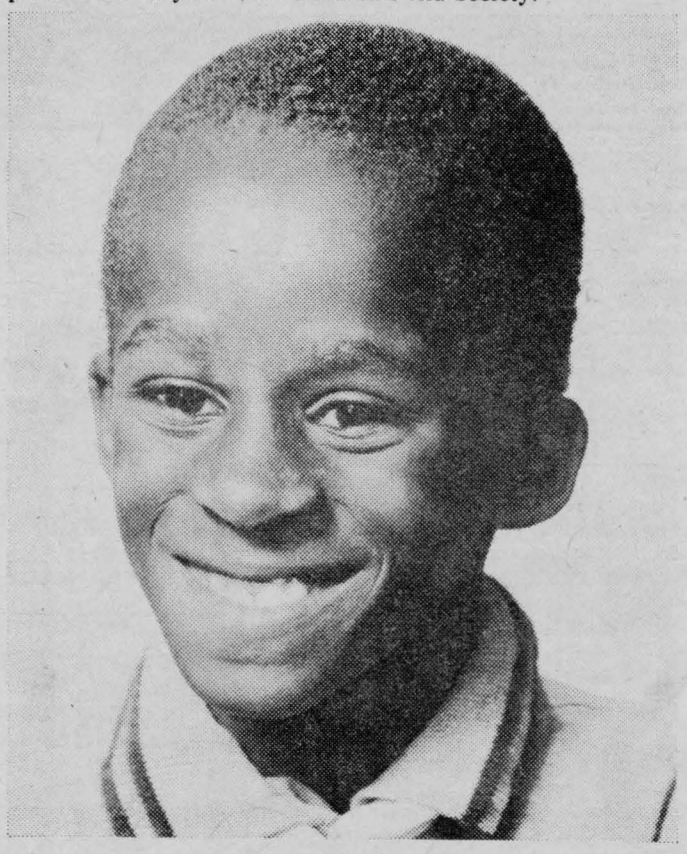

Ricky, 8, is doing well in Grade 3. He is above average in intelligence and is expected to be an achiever in school, especially if he is adopted by a family who will give him both encouragement and opportunities.

Good-looking Ricky has brown eyes, black curly hair and dark skin. He has flat feet but they do not inhibit his activities at all. His health is good. Although he may have some slight allergies, they have not been at all troublesome.

Ricky is a quiet lad, sincere and loyal in his friendships. Very inquisitive, he prefers to figure things out for himself rather than having them demonstrated or explained. He is not a sports enthusiast but is fond of camping. He likes music. His special interest is his stamp collection.

It is hoped a black family will be found for Ricky. He could be either the oldest or the youngest child, but there should not be a child close to his age. Ricky will be a wonderful addition to a family who will give him much love and attention.

To inquire about adopting Ricky, please write to Today's Child, Ministry of Community and Social Services, Box 888, Station K, Toronto M4P 2H2. For general adoption information, please contact your local Children's Aid Society.

DOES WELL IN SCHOOL

Sale of Rabbits Is Prohibited

Increasingly heavy hunting pressures and the desire to mainti maintain the rabbit strictly as a game animal has prompted the Ontario government to prohibit the sale of European hare, otherwise known as the jack rabbit, and the varying hare, or snowshoe rabbit.

Bill 164, given Royal Assent Oct. 30, 1973, amends the Game and Fish Act to include these two species in Section 47 (1) which states: Except under the authority of a license and subject to the regulations, no person shall sell, offer for sale, purchase or barter, or be concerned in the sale, purchase or barter of a game animal or possess a game animal for sale."

Traditionally in Ontario, farm boys could make a few extra dollars by selling rabbits bagged during spare time hunting. Recently, various fish and game organizations have become concerned about the number of rabbits being harvested in the countryside, especially around southwestern Ontario's densely populated urban centres, and being sold in downtown open markets.

Storm Drifts In Roads

Heavy winds hit this area on Monday evening and north-south roads bore the brunt of the drifting causing many roads to be almost impassable during the early evening.

There was little snow falling in this area but other parts of Eastern Ontario were hit with both wind and snow.

Roads in the village and district have been kept in good condition this year despite a few heavy snowfalls.

Iroquois Tykes Tie Cardinal

Iroquois Tykes played to a 2-2 draw in Cardinal last Sat. Scoring for Iroquois were Jeff Kirker and Darren Smith.

Tim Patterson scored twice as our Atom "A" team tied Morrisburg 3-3. Steve Kirker scored our other goal and picked up an assist while Brennan received one assist.

Our Midgets played two fine games this week although losing in the end. The score in Cardinal last Wed. was 3-3 going into the final minutes of play. Steven Montpetit and Brian Moran each scored once on unassisted efforts. The third tally came off Moran's stick assisted by Jim Davies. Sunday's match ended up 2-0 in Edwardsburg's favour but it was only the superb netmending at the Spencerville end that kept Iroquois off the scoresheet.

The Pee Wee A squad playing in exhibition tilts this week defeated Cardinal 7-0 and lost a squeaker 4-3 to Morrisburg. In League play on Sunday the boys in black and yellow defeated Morrisburg 5-1. Mike Moran with 3 goals paced the team. Robin Adair and Bruce Armstrong added our other markers. Kim Adams and Adair picked up two assists apiece and Armstrong one.

Our Atom "B" team came up with a couple of big victories over the weekend. On Sat. morning Mark Nesbitt scored five times to lead the team to a 12-2 win over Chesterville. Two goals each went to Kevin McEwen, Mike Tryon and Alan Renwick, while Shannon Adams picked up a single.

In the afternoon encounter, Frank Lee up from the Novices, scored twice as our Atom B squad defeated Chesterville 4-1. Mike Tryon and Shannon Adams added our other 2 goals.

The Bantams defeated Morrisburg 4-1 on Sat. Barry Casselman scored twice while Steven Brennan and Robert Delegarde put one apiece behind Morrisburg's B goalkeeper. In 2 league games this week, the Bantams lost 3-0 and 4-0 to Edwardsburg and Kemptville respectively.

The Pee Wee B team played at Osnabruk where the game ended in a 1-1 tie. Earl Nesbitt unassisted accounted for our lone marker. In the return match on Sunday, Iroquois came up with a 4-0 win. Bruce Graham with a hat trick was the big gun while Steven Eddy from Peter Vanboven added our 4th goal. Neil Cherry Brent Mattice and Kent Smith received an assist apiece.

Our Novice A squad lost tight game 2-0 to Morrisburg on Sat. Kevin Ault in goal made some fine stops.

There's Increased Feeding Efficiency for You in Shur-Gain Bulk Feed Service from Us

You need hardly be reminded that livestock farming is a highly competitive business . . . that to succeed today, production costs have to be controlled today, in every way possible.

Feed costs, labour, time . . . these are all costs of production that you can probably reduce even more. If your herd or flock is large now, and likely to expand further, start calculating the production savings made possible by bulk feeds handling.

Behind SHUR-GAIN BULK FEED SERVICE is years of experience in feeding herds and flocks that number in the thousands. That experience is yours for the asking. Would you like to talk it over?

Walter Baker Resumes Parliamentary Comment

This is the first of my regular columns for the year 1974 and at this time, I would like to again publically thank this newspaper for the priviliege given me to communicate with the residents of Grenville-Carleton. This newspaper is following the great tradition of weekly newspapers in Canada and indeed the world, in bringing the activities and news-worthy community events into everyone's home in a way that cannot be duplicated by the large daily papers whose responsibilities are different. I am grateful for the courtesy and the co-operation which permits communication in this important way.

Parliament Resumes

After a short Christmas Recess, the Parliament resumed on the third of January with a number of things on its plate. I will discuss each of them below but it should be noted that Parliamentary 'Rumour Mills' indicate that the Government wants to complete this session before the Federal-Provincial First Ministers' Conference beginning on January 22, 1974. The 'Rumour Mill' also indicates that the government is anxious for a long adjournment before a new session because it has problems; it must regroup, perhaps undergo a Cabinet shuffle, and prepare a Throne Speech. Time will tell how accurate these rumours prove to be.

The legislation still to be dealt with is as follows:

Energy Allocation Bill

This is a Bill which is intended to give the Trudeau government the power to deal with the energy crisis. The Opposition supports the principle that a government should have these powers if there is a real emergency. However, the Progressive Conservative Party has insisted that the Bill be amended to ensure that the Trudeau Government must have either the consent or the ratification of Parliament before these powers are brought into force. After a lot of resistence, the government seems to have agreed to what appears to me to be a reasonable principle in a democratic society.

Election Expenses Bill

This Bill reshapes the whole field of election spending, fund-raising and broadcasting but it is much too detailed to review here. There is now a great encouragement to the average Canadian to contribute financially to the political candidate and Party of his choice because political donations will be tax deductible (to a point) in the manner set forth in the Bill. Perhaps the most important aspect is the duty to disclose. Robert Stanfield advocated this reform a long time before it was embraced by the government. Terry O'Connor, MP and Paul Dick, MP and others provided the focal point of the movement in legislation that was good in principle but which was originally presented to the House in such bad form that there were over 70 amendments that had to be presented in order to put it into shape. I intend to deal with this legislation in a special column in the near future.

Oil Export Tax Legislation

The Government is anxious to have this legislation in place before the First Ministers' Conference mentioned before. It provides for export 'Tax' on oil exported out of Canada up to Feb. 1, 1974, and there after an export 'Charge' on a great bearing on where and how these revenues are to be used. It is interesting to note that the highest tax anticipated by the Trudeau government was $4.00 a barrel. The latest round of price increases in off-shore oil have indicated just how far off the mark is that bit of forecasting by the Energy Minister, Macdonald!

Wiretapping Legislation

When this Bill is finally passed, we will have given to the Police Forces of our country the legal right to "bug" rooms, "tap" telephones, and to use the most modern technological devices to assist them in the detection of crime. This is a great issue. No one wants to see the police force without such powers but many Members (and I am among that group) do not want any group to have this right to invade privacy without the sanctions that ought to accompany this power - that is, basically, that any evidence so gathered cannot be used in a Court Room unless the bugging has been authorized by a Judge. Although the Police Associations have argued against this injunction, I must say that I could never support such legislation, however valuable, unless society was protected against its over-zealous or improper use.

A New Governor-General

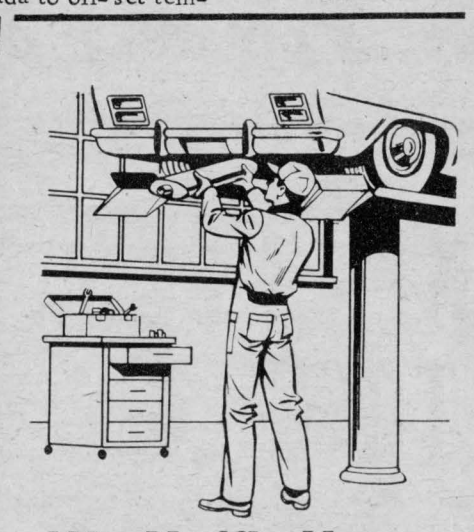

On January 14th, 1974, Mr. Jules Leger will be sworn in as Canada's fourth native-born Governor-General. It is a very important day. Mr. Leger will replace a great Canadian who has, by his kindness, grace and good humour, insured his place among our most distinguished public servants. Roland Michener has been a fine lawyer, a Provincial Cabinet Minister, a Federal Member of Parliament and the Speaker of the House of Commons. He has interested himself in the Arts, and carried out the duties of his office with great distinction and although one regrets that he must leave, every Canadian is grateful to him for the way that he has represented Her Majesty the Queen.

Energy

As 1973 ended, it is fair to say that all Canadians were perplexed about the position of our country in the manner of our oil resources and how we as Canadians, with perhaps the richest deposits, can assure ourselves that we will not be caught in the political blackmail game now being played by the Arab nations and supported by others against the rest of the world. There are some things that we must do in Canada without delay and positions that we should take. No Canadian worthy of the name can deny that we must

a) Build a pipeline or lines so that we will be self-sufficient in what ought to be a Canadian world of plenty.
b) Provide that all Canadians can purchase petroleum products at a price level that is lower than the world price.
c) Through tax relief and other devices encourage the development of storage facilities in Eastern Canada to off-set temporary emergencies.
d) Where necessary, provide that at least in home heating oils there be a system of shelter grants or payments, directly or indirectly, so that those in Eastern Canada caught in a price escalation can have a reasonable price maintained for this necessary fuel.
e) Provide the facility of allocation for what is a necessity of life in Canada and also to insure that industry and business will not have to lay off workers because of shortages.
f) Provide an atmosphere of certainty so that those who can develop the resources will be encouraged to do so and ensure, at the same time, that the interests of Canadians

TV Reception "Up In The Air"

by Jim Millard

Anyone who has even glanced through the daily papers or their TV Guide will be well aware that there is a new television network operating in Ontario. Known as Global Communications, the network operates out of Toronto with a series of transmitters across southern Ontario, reaching a potential seven million viewers. Service to this area at present comes from channel 6 in Ottawa. During the first week of operation, local viewers were for the most part, unable to get little more than snowy reception even with the best of antenna systems. Homes with ordinary antennas could get nothing. One local firm, Styles and McIntosh, cautions against making drastic changes in antennas for the present time since, according to their information, the station is not yet operating at full power. A phone call to Global's Ottawa control centre confirmed this fact. A spokesman for the station said that they hope to have the transmitter operating at full capacity in one to two weeks. At that time, local residents will be better able to assess what, if any, changes will have to be made to bring in the new station.

Unfortunately, this area is on the fringe area of two Global transmitters--channel 6 in Ottawa and a much more powerful one on channel 2 in Bancroft. The Bancroft transmitter is not yet on the air due to high winds and cold temperatures hampering the installation of the tower. Global spokesmen feel that our area may be just as well served by the channel 2 transmitter when it goes on.

Original Global plans called for an Ultra High Frequency (UHF) transmitter on channel 29 at Maxville to serve this area. Since Global was originally intended to be an Ontario netword, the Canadian Radio Television Commission withheld the decision on the Maxville transmitter saying the signal would go into Montreal and that this would violate the terms of their license. The decision was pending in August. A recent call to CRTC headquarters in Ottawa confirms that the decision is still pending.

So local residents are left in the shadows for the time being. We can wait and see how the channel 6 signal improves. We can wait for channel 2 to come on the air and see if its signal reaches our area, or we can wait for the CRTC to reach a decision one way or another on the Maxville transmitter. It's enough to make a fellow give up on TV and go back to the library.

Letter To Editor

Dear Editor,

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, South Mountain, wish at this time, to express their appreciation to you and your staff for the splendid way in which you have handled the various items of news or advertising, that has been sent to you for publication in "The Post" during the year 1973.

Very Sincerely,
Lou Hunter,
Secretary of
St. Andrew's.

Dear Sir:

Enclosed is an item on my parents 70th wedding anniversary. Dad has frequently visited back there, as have several members of his family, including grandchildren and greatgrandchildren.

His parents were George Harvey Feader born in Matilda in 1838 and operated the Iroquois Tanneries until they were bought out by a Montreal firm in the 1880's. His mother was Ellen Maria Carman, born 1844, daughter of Matthew Carman and Mary Stanford.

I work on both the Feader and Carman genealogies (as an amateur) and would be pleased at this time if you would ask descendants of both family lines, whom I have never contacted, if they would get in touch with me. This includes Brouses and Coons in the Carman line.

Yours Sincerely,
Winnifred Kelly

New England's Loss Is Limerick's Gain

Limerick Forest, recognized only locally as a quiet, out-of-the-way spot for winter snowmobiling, some hunting and occasional summer "spooning" is unexpectedly getting a reputation as an excellent training area for sled dog teams.

The other pleasant surprise to Ontario ministry of natural resources staff administering the 6,000 acre mixed hardwood and conifer agreement forest is that reputation may be making the rounds in North America's grand champion sled dog circles, especially in the United States.

Last January, Lloyd Slocum of Gorham, Maine, trained in Limerick for a week with his champion huskies and then raced during a two-day local competition. A high-stakes championship race he had planned to enter in Idaho had been "melted out" and cancelled. This year, Dick Moulton of Centre Harbor, Maine brought his championship team to Limerick for four days training because the New England area was temporarily without sufficient snow.

Both drivers were winners of the Laconia in Laconia, New Hampshire, the Stanley Cup Playoffs of the sled dog racing world. Both travel across North America as far north as Alaska during the season on the sled dog racing circuit that builds up to the Laconia.

Their teams had to be in shape and Limerick with its packed snow trails and quietness for concentration, was ideal.

Nancy Scarthe, secretary of the Arctic Sled Dog Club, which, for the past two years has sponsored races at Limerick says there is a good chance the small forest surrounded by farmland 15 miles from the American border, crossing at Johnstown, could attract increasing numbers of American sled dog racers whenever New England is short of snow or when drivers are looking for a secluded training ground.

These visits provide local dog sledders with a chance to compare training notes and stories with the best drivers in North America. It also creates interest in a fascinating sport that for winners requires a dedicated effort to understand and communicate with animals.

The forest is definitely attracting more local sled dog owners who want some training elbow room. Two members of the Arctic Sled Dog Club trained regularly during the week in Limerick last year; this year four teams practice during the week.

Happily, Limerick has easily accommodated both snowmobilers and dog sledders. The few snowmobilers out during the week enjoy parking their machines at one of the forest picnic sites and watching the dog teams at work. During races they volunteer to help patrol trails, turn teams around and hitch up.

The sled dog drivers are also quite content about having the snowmobilers around.

"If it wasn't for the snowmobilers in the first place we wouldn't have these nice packed trails," says Nancy Scarthe who trains her team at Limerick during the week.

"During the races they also make up most of the spectators, and it makes a race a little more exciting to have people watching," she said.

Out of hundreds of snowmobilers last weekend for a two-day series of races there were only four "cowboy" drivers who almost interfered with the dogs. More than 30 teams from Eastern Ontario, Quebec and northern New York competed. The next race is planned for the first Sunday in February.

Crime and Punishment

Offenders under the Game and Fish Act in Eastern Ontario paid a total of $13,756 in hunting and fishing fines between April 1 and December 31, 1973.

Natural resources conservation officers laid 266 charges for hunting violations and 331 charges concerning fishing violations for a total of 597 charges. All but 76 of these cases have been settled to date.

Although the offences ranged over all sections of the Game and Fish Act, two of the most popular offences hunters committed were failing to wear a back patch and hunting without a license. Each offence accounted for 17 per cent of the total hunting charges laid.

Twenty-one per cent of the charges dealing with fishing violations were for possession of fish during closed season. Eleven per cent dealt with taking fish by means other than angling and 7.5 per cent of the fishing charges were for taking fish by means of a spear.

There are 21 field conservation officers to patrol the 10,000 square miles of land and water surface in the eastern region.

Hosts W.M.S. and Ladies Guild

Miss Jennie Cameron was hostess to the W.M.S. and the Ladie's Guild of St. Andrews Presbyterian Church, South Mountain, on Tuesday evening, January 8 at 8 p.m.

10 Members answered the roll call with the word "wisdom" in scripture verse. Mrs. Blow, the president, used the new study book entitled "For a Time Like This". Several members read portions in dialog form, after which Mrs. Blow fielded questions to the group, which led to an open discussion on "The Church of Today".

Notice was received as regards to the January Presbyterial, to be held in the First Presbyterian Church, Brockville, on Wed. Jan. 16th.

Mrs. Don Scott then took over for the Ladies Guild by reading a poem on the "New Year" and during the business part of the programme, plans were made for a Spring Tea; an apron to be sent around the congregation; and various other schemes for the months ahead.

After the singing of the hymn "The Church is one Foundation", the meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. Blow.

District Memorial Hospital Auxiliary Meet

The January Meeting of the Hospital Auxiliary opened with a reading, "As the Old Year Ends" by the President, Mrs. F.M. Cass.

Seven Units were represented, reporting increased membership.

Words of appreciation were expressed to Mrs. Brownlee for her generous donation, to all responsible for the pleasant party given to patients in First East.

Acknowledgement to other group donations had been sent from the hospital.

In most items of business, inflation seemed in evidence - no confirmed price until delivery.

The Red Cross have confirmed dates for Blood Donors in April and October.

Four Home Makers are now available in Dundas County.

Mr. Stel in his report explained explicitly the accommodation and term of occupancy for patients in First East.

A new approach for volunteers was discussed. Members were urged to submit ideas for social and special events.

The next meeting, Valentine's Day.

Alcohol or Gas? The Choice Is Important

In most snowmobile fatalities occurring on public roads at night, the driver crashes into a stationary object, usually a parked car.

The question is, Why?

Investigation very often reveals that alcohol has been consumed before starting out. Many of the fatalities involved drivers who were too drunk to control their machines, or even to realize what they were doing.

Alcohol affects the brain by decreasing its ability to take up oxygen. Reactions are slowed and the field of vision is reduced. Concentration becomes difficult and the driver's attention is easily diverted by persons, places, or objects along the way. He is often in a convivial mood and engages in animated conversation with others in his party.

In other words, alcohol tends to make him lose some of that clearness of intellect and self-control that he would normally possess.

After one large drink of liquor, the driver requires about 15% longer time to turn his machine, or apply his brakes in an emergency. His vision is not as shorp, and ordinary objects become darker and indistinct. Poorly lighted objects are lost entirely.

The driver needs all his faculties unimpaired, especially at night. He has to use considerable balance and body action to safely control his machine which affords him little or no protection in a collision or turn over. A drink or two before he goes out on his snowmobile lessens his inhibitions. Stimulated by this false confidence, he may actually believe he is driving better.

His normal cautious approach to travelling over frozen waterways can be weakened. During the past winter, 21 snowmobilers drowned when the machines they were riding on crashed through the ice. Liquor had been consumed in some of these incidents and its effect would have reduced the awareness of danger.

This brings us to the fact that alcohol and gasoline don't mix, and if you leave that "glass of cheer" until after your snowmobile jaunt is over, your chances of avoiding accidents will be greatly decreased.

Phosphate Fertilizers Not Required

Most Ontario soils do not lose their phosphorus easily. Once the phosphorus level is built up, it remains high for a number of years, says Professor T.E. Bates, Department of Land Resource Science, Ontario Agricultural College, University of Guelph. "If phosphate fertilizers were used only when needed there would be no shortage next spring," he adds. Phosphate fertilizers are already scarce in some parts of Ontario.

There is strong evidence that phosphorus levels in many fields in Ontario are now high enough to grow good crops for many years without adding phosphate fertilizer. However, farmers should base their fertilizer requirements on soil tests.

Last year, the soil testing service of the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food, at the University of Guelph, analyzed about 50,000 soil samples from Ontario farms. The average phosphorus test was 27. Phosphate fertilizers are recommended for corn and barley when soil tests 20 or less. Grain yield response to phosphate fertilizers normally stops at soil tests below 20.

Evidence based on these 50,000 soil smaples indicates that many Ontario farm fields contain sufficient phosphorus for corn and barley crops.

It's a shame that when success turns a person's head, it does not also automatically wring his neck just a little.

Aids In Conserving Land For Canadians

A 69-year old roofing contractor who has spent a lifetime helping develop land in Canada has just spent thousands of dallars to guarantee cottages and subdivisions will never touch at least one part of the country.

John W. Seeback and his son have donated $10,000 to the Crowe Valley Conservation Authority. The money was vitally needed to purchase the Callaghan's Rapids area, 400 acres of picturesque forest and rock outcrops on a one-mile stretch of the Crowe River three miles south of the town of Marmora.

At this point the Crowe boils over limestone ledges, rapids and through narrows creating several small waterfalls.

The gift, arranged by the Nature Conservancy of Canada, allows the conservation authority to provide their share of the money which now will be more than matched by the province so the land can be bought and set aside for canoeists, hikers, picnickers, naturalists, cross-country skiers and anyone who wants to enjoy a bit of fast-fading wilderness in southern Ontario.

One thousand dollars of Mr. Seeback's gift will be used for construction of nature trails, parking lots and facilities for the public.

Mr. Seeback's son, John, a partner in the roofing firm, said both he and his father have been city dwellers for the past 30 years but their experiences have brought them into close agreement on one thing especially: someone has to help preserve farmland and wilderness areas in southern Ontario before it's lost forever to the average person.

"We don't kid ourselves. My dad, and now myself, have built a business and made money because of land development like the new suburbs that have eaten up a lot of the old prime farmland north of the 401 here in Toronto. We want to put something back," said John.

His father, a plain-spoken, hard-working man, spent his youth homesteading with his parents near Dallas, Manitoba. The Seeback's had immigrated from Holland and with hundreds of other families were struggling with horse and plow to build a farm on the prairies. During the Depression, the elder Seeback worked at any job he could find and after the war started a small roofing business in Toronto. After 30 years of business in the city, he still has the honest, open-faced, ruddy look of a prairie farmer.

"My father and I have driven up through the Muskokas, Haliburton, around Parry Sound and have seen the trees go down and the cottages go up," said John. "And it's not only the Americans. Canadians are worse. To find wilderness now, you have to drive for hours. Unfortunately, just by finding it, we destroy it."

John said he became concerned about preserving natural landscape and wildlife while studying biology a university and he and his father influenced one another just talking about it.

This isn't the first time the elder Seeback has given up some of his profits to channel money into the Nature Conservancy of Canada, a fund-raising organization which supports nature preserve projects, sportsman's and outdoor shows and tries to find among, mainly among private industry, to buy up land for wildlife sanctuaries and conservation areas.

Mr. Seeback senior became interested in the Nature Conservancy's work after receiving a brochure from them in the mail years ago. Up until just recently, however, his contributions have been smaller.

Walter VanSteenburgh, Crowe Valley Conservation Authority chairman, said if it wasn't for the Seeback's, Callaghan's Rapids would have been snapped up as private summer resort property. The area has been a long-time favourite of local campers, anglers and canoeists.

John Seeback, the son, refers somewhat jokingly to his family's contribution as 'conscience money", but Mr. VanSteenburgh said even the hardest cynics would have to admit the donation goes far beyond that.

"It's also a prime example, I think, of how private industry is often unjustly criticized by the more self-righteous environmentalists around today. Many times its private industry who quietly contribute money for no ther reason than a desire to do some public good", said the Crowe Valley chairman.

The Crowe Valley Authority covers all or parts of 12 municipalities affected by the Crowe River which drains 775 square miles from above Paudash Lake in Haliburton County, down through Hastings, Peterborough, Northumberland-Durham Counties to its outlet into the Trent River above Campbellford.

70TH Anniversary For Western Couple

On Nov. 25th, 1973, Mr. and Mrs. Miles Feader celebrated their 70th Wedding Anniversary at home, 845 Temperance St., Saskatoon, by having a Come and Go Tea for relatives and friends.

Miles E.A. Feader married Grace A. Osborne at Moosomin, Saskatchewan, in 1903. At that time, Mr. Feader was a farmer in the Moosomin area, having started the farming operations with horse and oxen, after completing his education at Stanley School, near Fleming.

Mrs. Feader was born in March, 1884, in Fleming Saskatchewan, at that time part of the Northwest Territories, and is one of the oldest white women born in the Province still residing here.

Mr. Feader was born in July 1879, at Iroquois, Ontario, a town located near the banks of the St. Lawrence River; and came West to the Moosomin area with his parents and their family in 1889.

Following his farming career, Mr. Feader was in the fuel and automobile business in Moosomin for a few years, then went into hotel operations by purchasing the Queen's in Moosomin. Subsequent to the sale of the Queen's Mr. and Mrs. Feader purchased and operated hotels in Wynyard, Young, Hanley and Craik, retiring from Craik in 1945, when they moved to Saskatoon. The 845 Temperance Street property had been purchased by them in 1927.

Their nine children were born in Saskatchewan: Stanford, the eldest, lives in Calgary; Helen Sayer, Mill Valley, California; Florence Fielding, Winnifred Kelly, Dorothy Van Velzer, William and Garnet, the youngest, all in Saskatoon; two sons, Daniel and Edwin, deceased.

They have fourteen grandchildren, also all born in Saskatchewan, and sixteen great-grandchildren.

Congratulatory messages were received from Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth; Prime Minister Trudeau; Governor-General Mitchener; Lieutenant-Governor of Saskatchewan Worobetz; Premier Blakeney of Saskatchewan; and other dignitaries, including Mayor Bert Sears of Saskatoon.

We welcome your Personal news items.

WALTER BAKER COMMENTS

rank ahead of the international oil companies.

g) Move quickly to develop alternate sources of energy.

Parliament is prepared and will grant the power to the Trudeau Government to do these things - only time will tell whether, in fact, such power is utilized. No amount of political talk or vague promises of future action will heat our homes or operate industries this year or next - we have had too much talk and too little action in the past ten years where there was time to put in place the transportation facilities to supply Canadians with their own resources.

The New Year

The year 1974 will have new challenges for all of us. In my heart I do not believe that there is nay problem that this country and its people cannot face and eventually solve if we have but the will and the leadership to do it. My wife and family join me in expressing every good wish to you for all your hopes and endeavours in this year, and if I can help you in any matter at any time, I would consider it a privilege.
