Our Column

A very little telling goes a long way—especially if you tell it to a woman.

A wise man is too wise to try and impart much of his wisdom to others.

Last Sunday was an ideal spring day, and as a conseqence cars on the highways were numerous.

The Easter Season has become the season for showing your new car, not your new millinery.

There will be a partial eclipse of the moon on Sunday night April 13th, or rather on Monday morning between 1 a. m. and 2 a. m. If you feel like setting up you may get a glimpse of it.

Cold—Well We Say So

The sudden change from the warm spring day of Sunday to the cold, chilly blast of Tuesday and Wednesday is something to make one set up and take notice. That wind on Tuesday and Wednesday cut like an knife, and it made the sunny side street loafers seek shelter, even as the newly arrived birds. Mrs. VanAllan of Rose Haven, wrote up last Friday about a robin that had arrived at their place. Poor bird, he has had a chilly time of it, but will be well taken care of at Rose Haven. But it is the young man who wants to show off his new spring suit and hat, and the young lady with her new hat, that are suffering most. For their sakes let us hope for a warming Easter.

F. M. Eagleson Tendered Banquet

No citizen ever left a community carrying with him greater respect and esteem than did Mr. F. M. Eagleson when he left on Saturday last for Orillia, where in future he, with his family, will reside, he having been appointed to a position on the Trent River Canal System at that point. And as an evidence of that respect and esteem about fifty of the leading citizens of Winchester gathered at Hotel Winchester on Thursday night to say good-bye and good luck to one with whom they had for many years been associated with in a social and business way. On the shortest possible notice Mr. Singleton of Hotel Winchester, prepared a very choice banquet, and the gathering in the dining room was one that those present will remember with keenest pleasure.

Reeve J. H. Ross acted as chairman, and after those present had most heartily enjoyed the splendid menu provided by mine host J. H. Singleton, the toast of 'Our King" was most heartily responded to by all singing the National Anthem. The chairman, in a few introductory remarks, explained that the gathering was to say farewell to one who for many years was one of our leading and most esteemed citizens, one who had been active in our municipal life and whose judgment and unselfish service had been of much benefit to all. The gathering was one called not only to say good bye, but to do honor to the one who was about to leave our midst The toast of Canada was responded to by Mr. W. J. Cass, and Rev. J. A. Waddell eloquently upheld the honors of "The Church" Municipal and Educational Institutions were responded to by Messrs Dr. McKendry, Hart Melvin, Albert Johnston, Geo. E. Earle, Thos. Bailey and A. E. Goodfellow. Mr. D. H. Weir spoke on "Business Relationship" while Messrs Joseph Robinson and B. L Carr told about their association with the guest of the evening in "Good Road Building" Then came the presentation of an address read by Mr. J. D. Steward, and the presentation of a very handsome Club Bag, made by Mr. N. W. Beach.

Winchester, Ontario,
April 3rd, 1930.

Dear Mr. Eagleson:

It is with sincere regret that the citizens of Winchester learned this week of your intended departure from our village, to take a responsible position at Orillia, Ontario; and while we rejoice with you that the change is one that may result to your benefit, we will nevertheless greatly miss your valued and unselfish services to our municipality as well as your personal influence in our social, moral and religous life.

The best evidence of your sterling worth as a citizen is the fact that during the many years of your residence here you have not only merited, but retained the respect and esteem of all classes, because of your upright character, fair dealing, and strict adherence to duty, as well as, by unselfish service as a member of the Municipal Council and Public School Board, where your good, sound judgment and careful attention to business details have resulted to the benefit of this community. We need not remind you that the removal of yourself and your family is deeply regretted, but we do desire that you and your estimable family will carry away the assurance that you leave behind many warm and sincere friendships, and our best wishes for your future prosperity and good fortune.

We have not the least doubt of your ability to fill any responsible position with which you may be entrusted. Believe us when we assure you that this token of our appreciation and respect is but a slight, yet, a very sincere expression of those who know your real worth, and have faith in your splendid Christian Citizenship.

Signed on behalf of the Citizens of Winchester.

To this address and presentation Mr. Eagleson made a feeling reply. He referred to his twenty-two year residency in Winchester and said they had been the happiest years of his life. He had enjoyed friendships that would never be forgotten As to his services he knew they were being overestimated. He had only done his simple duty, and was glad to do it. He regretted the necessity of having to leave Winchester, but it had come about through circumstances over which he had no control. He thanked one and all for their many kind remarks and good wishes.

Others present who spoke of Mr. Eagleson's many good qualities were Messrs A. Sweet, H. B. Fetterly, T. A. Scott, T. O Keyes, N. W. Beach, J. Gibson. The several toasts were interspersed with singing of popular selections, and the gathering broke up with all joining hands in "Auld Lang Zion"

Mr. Eagleson left for Orilla on Saturday morning but his family will remain here until after school closes. Mr. Eagleson is to be on the Engineering Staff of those engaged in the Construction of the Trent River Canal from Lake Simcoe to the Georgian Bay, which work is being done by the Dominion Government. They will reside in the town of Orrillia.

The funeral service was held at the United Church at Pakenhom on Tuesday afternoon and was conducted by her pastor, Rev. H. H. Hillis of Pakenham, assisted by a friend of the family, Rev. J. A. T. B. Testing

Editor Press—I have been asked to explain to the farmers of this vicinity a system of self protection against loss by reactors in T. B. Testing. It is simply co-operation among the cattle owners, by paying a small stated sum per animal on a carefully worked out plan whereby the owner will receive an amount of money, in addition to the compensation paid and the price of the flesh of the animal. There are two plans by which the owner will get from $10.00 to $40 00 per head extra. It is not a scheme whereby any person will make money for himself, and it has the approval of many of our most intelligent men. I will be pleased to give more information if desired.

Lenten Service of Y. P. A.

The Devotional Committee of the Young People's Society of the United Church arranged a most helpful and impressive program for Monday evening's session. The opening devotional exercises were led by Miss Stella O'Neill, Miss Greta Jorgensen and Mr. Waddell, while Mrs. Ernest Steele contributed a beautiful Easter solo. The topic for the evening was "What Think You of Christ" and Mr. Leroy Boyd read most effectively a story in keeping with this challenging questionr This was immediately followed by a most impressive message by the Rev. J. A. Waddell, who coupled the topic of the evening with "What then will you do with Christ." The entire service was in keeping with the Lenten season and the young people were deeply impressed and gave evidence of serious thinking on this vital question so forcefully presented. Miss Laura Dukelow and her committee have charge of the program next Monday evening.

Prison and Lashes

Magistrate McCormick had two serious cases to try at Morrisburg yesterday, and the evidence demanded, in the name of justice, severe sentences - One case was that of the two young men, James O'Malley and Philip Castigner, who were arrested by Provincial Constable Jakeman on the charge of holding up, beating and robbing Mr. J. R. Reddick of Morrisburg, on Saturday night, March 29th. Reddick has the use of only one arm and could not defend himself. The young men hid behind a tree near Reddick's house, and as he approached, struck him and then took from him over one hundred dollars. At first the young men elected to be tried by the County Judge, but the evidence was so conclusive that they decided to throw themselves on the mercy of the Magistrate and pleaded guilty. They were each sentenced to three years in Penitentiary and to receive 10 lashes, 5 on entering prison and 5 later

The other case was that of a man named Isador Hutt, who was up on a charge of stealing coal and selling it. He has a bad record, and was once charged of forging a cheque. He was found guilty, and because of his record, was sentenced to spent two years in Kingston penitentiary.

Sir Arthur Currie Asks Improvement In Pension System

Almost Impossible to Prove Disability Due to War Service

MANY DISSATISFIED

Ottawa.—With Sir Arthur Currie and a large delegation of the Canadian Legion present at the first business meeting of the Pension Committee last week, an overcrowded attendance necessitated a move to the largest room in the House.

A senatorial committee was present to watch the proceeding and avoid duplicate of effort when the bill goes to the Upper House. Col. Lefleche, head of the Canadian Legion, asked a hearing for Sir Arthur Currie. Chairman Power invited the commander of the Canadian Corps in the war to give his views on the legislation.

Sir Arthur expressed his appreciation of his consideration of the present and past committees on pensions. He regretted that after 11 years there was still an urgency for the further consideration of soldiers' problems. The feeling was widespread that the obligaitons of the country toward the returned men had not been fulfilled as they should be.

INTERESTED IN VETERANS

He was profoundly interested in the men, whom he knew and with whom he served. He knew their strength and their weakness, knew how they bore themselves in battle; knew their pride in themselves and their faith in each other. However, he did not appear solely as a representative of the men who served at the front. The returned men were as much concerned in the welfare of the country as any other group. They did not wish to add one unnecessary cent to the burden of the country. It was only a question of setting up the machinery to fulfil the intentions of the people of the country.

The returned soldiers thought only as the public thought.

It was now almost impossible, Sir Arthur said, for the applicant in many cases to prove hat his disability was due to war service.

Sir Arthur did not speak for any malingerers in the war, but only for the deserving. He did not appear to make any destructive criticism, but showed a desire to help out the committee in its problems.

He went on to outline broadly the British pension system based on a contract.

It helped their morale to know that their dependents would be looked after and a pension would go with any disability.

NO FAULT WITH SCALE

"We can find no fault with the Canadian scale of pensions; it is higher than that of any country I know," declared Sir Arthur, who said the Pension Board, in applying the act, was a court of law and equity. Many thought the machinery was not functioning properly and it was for the committee to find out why. One dissatisfaction arose from the fact that the Pension Act is a legal document. Many applying for a pension were not aware of this, while people who were not entitled to it often applied. It would be better if, when a pension is rejected, the applicant should be told why. Failure to do so bred dissatisfaction.

Dissatisfaction also arose over the award of disability, for example, 10 per cent. being allowed. When a higher award is claimed, it was often physically impossible to prepare the case as the forms called for. A man should have assistance in preparing his case.

"I am not convinced that the soldiers advisers do their work as they should. I think the services of the Canadian Legion should be utilized."

DIFFICULTY IN MACHINERY

Sir Arthur asserted the difficulty does not arise in the act itself but in the machinery for the administration of the act. It needs revision and renewal, he said, pointing out the difficulty of the board at times in interpreting such things as attributability.

Sir Arthur described the case of a man who was really ill but insisted on staying in service nevertheless.

Afterwards he developed sciatica, and got a $6 pension. Finally, when the case was diagnosed as arthritis, the pension was cut off. He has to drag himself about to look after the chickens that provide him with the means of a living. Not a man in this country will say that this was was fairly dealt with.

The Soldiers' Allowance Bill, in his opinion, was social legislation which ought not to be administered by the Pension Board. If it went there, many a person entitled to a pension would be put off by it. The age should be 60 not 65. When a man, with such an allowance died it should be kept up for his widow and children for at least a year. He also expressed the opinion that in the committee administering the allowances there should be one or two experienced men and a representative of the legion.

EASIER APPEALS URGED

In all cases an appeal to the appeal board from the Pension Board should be possible. In conclusion, Sir Arthur reiterated that he did not wish to make everyone a potential pensioner or to add unnecessarily to the burden of taxation. He said that the problem was largely one of "interpreting" the act and providing it with the necessary machinery.

Sir Arthur thought the personnel of the Pension Board ought to be increased and it should be made an itinerant body.

To Chairman Power, Sir Arthur reiterated that he did not believe in having the act "wide open" so that everyone could be a potential pensioner. He will return for examination after the Legions' views have been presented.

Col. Lafleche of the Canadian Legion stated that for the first time all the soldiers' organizations appeared as one body. He spoke of the desirability of speedy action by Parliament in the final disposition of the case.

Regarding the onus of proof, Col. Lafleche stated that without actually putting it in the law and perhaps paving the way to the payment of "two or three billion dollars," the returned men demand "the substance of the benefit of doubt," in all applications for pensions on the ground of their attributability to war service.

The committee was also addressed briefly by Col. Wood, president of The Canadian Army and Navy Veterans, and Capt. Rev. Sydney Lambert of the Amputation Association, who both expressed appreciation of the work of the present and previous committees. 'Chubby" Power, the chairman, and Col. Lafleche, who "knows his business," were praised.

Ex-Soldier Finds Nurse After Ten Years

Brighton—After a ten year's search a Brighton man has found the pretty war-time nurse whose careful and devoted nursing probably saved his life when he was wounded during the war.

The other day he was admitted into a private nursing home for an operation for appendicitis. The nurse who attended him was the girl who served in the war hospital. The announcement of their marriage has just been made.

Mr. James Speighton, a London business man living in Brighton, told me the romantic story of the happy finish to his long quest.

Her Devotion

"I was pretty badly wounded with a piece of shell in the back and was invalided home to England in a serious condition," he stated. "My night nurse was a pretty girl and we soon became firm friends.

"One night I reached a crisis and it was touch and go whether I would pull through. It was only her devoted nursing that saved my life.

"I got better and was removed to another hospital. We corresponded for a time and then I was passed fit for duty again and rejoined my regiment."

When he came out of the Army Mr. Speighton attempted to find the nurse and advertised in several newspapers for news of her. Finally he learned that she had gone abroad in the capacity of nurse to an invalid.

"I had given up all hope of ever finding her again when I was admitted into the nursing home at Brighton," he said. "You can imagine my surprise when the nurse came in and I discovered it was she.

"We were not long in making up our minds to get married and as soon as I am fit again we intend to celebrate the wedding."

Western Notes

Winnipeg—Wallace W. Robinson, formerly employed in the local branch of Stobie, Forlong and Matthews, was released on two years suspended sentence after pleading guilty in police court to theft of several thousand dollars worth of mining stock from the company. Full restitution had been made.

Winnipeg — Unemployment has swelled by one-third during the past week, according to records at the Unemployment Service of Canada. About 1,500 men are now registered as seeking work in the city. Return of workers from lumber camps in the north and east is given as reason for the increased idleness.

Winnipeg.—Convicted of a serious charge against a girl, Charles Galsky, was given a 10-year term in penitentiary by Mr. Justice Dysart. A previous sentence of 10 years and 10 lashes when Galsky was found guilty last fall had been set aside by the Court of Appeal.

Winnipeg.—James Grant, president of the Manitoba Association of Unemployed Ex-Service Men, has resigned from the position. J. Feeney, acting-president during Grant's absence at Ottawa recently with an unemployment delegation, is the new head. Grant was remanded for one week on a charge of converting funds of the organization to his own use.

Sir Herbert Samuel On Religion In Russia

"For my own part I do not consider the present events in Russia are a reason for breaking off diplomatic relations. For us to have an Ambassador in Moscow, and to receive an Ambassador in England, does not in the smallest degree imply approval of any internal events in Russia.

"It did not imply approval of the oppression of the Tsars that we should have had diplomatic relations then. It did not imply approval of the recent oppression of Catholics in Mexico that we should have maintained diplomatic relations with that country. To maintain such relations all over the world is indispensable in order to handle trade affairs and other affairs of mutual concern.

"But it is right that the Russian leaders should know that the moral sense of mankind in all countries, among all classes and creeds, profoundly disapproves the attack upon the primary human rights of liberty of thought and action in which they are now engaged."

—Sir Herbert Samuel, M.P.

War Secrets Revealed by U-Boat King

198 German Submarines that Did not Come Back—Yost by Mines, Gunfire—Lost in Nets

Every German submarine which put to sea in the war years of 1915-18 owed its equipment and a large part of its fighting efficiency to a grey-haired, broad-shouldered man who sat the other night in the lounge of a London hotel.

He was Captain Gustave Luppe, formerly Senior Staff Officer in the Department of Submarine Operations, in charge of personnel and replacements.

Captain Luppe is no longer a German naval officer with a high command; he is now a commercial man engaged in negotiations with a group of English friends, but he carries in his memory more secrets of the intensive submarine warfare against England than any other German living.

Six Months' Training

"No one in your country—or in Germany for that matter,' he said to a representative, "has any real idea of the difficulties under which we labored to keep our submarine warfare in force.

"We lost in all 198 U-boats. What happened to many of them we never knew. They did not come back, that was all. They were lost by mines, by gunfire, in nets—in a variety of different ways.

"And as best we could we built to replace our losses, but from 1916 onwards we were building with indifferent material—material which was often makeshift. As the material fell away from the first class, so did our men.

"Towards the end of the war we were training crews in six months—altogether too short a time. Our submarines then were of such a class that after a month at sea they needed two months for refit and repairs.

"Thus, altogether at one time we had a total of 300, we never had more than 100 in readiness.

"We were short of torpedoes, short of everything. Our requirements in torpedoes at one period were 180 a week. We could not find that number. I remember I had to go to Austria to try to borrow torpedoes.

"The Austrian Navy used only fifty-seven torpedoes during the whole course of the war, but even so they were never able to provide us with any for our submarines.

"Why, when we sent four small submarines to Poland in sections for the use of the Austrian Navy we had to send our own workmen to put them together! We had to send food from Germany for our German workmen in the Austrian dockyards. The Austrians would never provide them with rations. Even when the submarines were built, the Austrian Navy never took them out against the enemy. They lacked the nerve.

The Civilian and The Next War

"We have seen that military opinion is urging the point that modern weapons are most effective when directed, not against the enemy's army only, but against the heart of his nation," Writes Mr. C. P. Stracey in the Queen's Quarterly. "And if war is allowed to break out once more the contending nations may certainly be expected to use their weapons in the most effective manner possible.

"Those who expect the civilian to go scot-free in a possible encounter between Great Powers in the future would do well to consider an observation made a year or two ago by a most disinguished British general officer, in the course of a lecture on modern tendencies in military theory delivered to a group of English undergraduates: "Well, gentlemen, in wars up to the present time the civilian has gone out on the pavement and cheered as the troops marched away, and then he has gone in and broken the top off his egg and read all about it in the newspapers. Well, gentlemen, . . . he's never going to do it again."

"In the event of the statesmen of the world failing to avert another great war, it is probable that that summation of the matter will prove to be highly accurate."

Girl Marriages Stir the West

Conditions in Saskatchewan are Almost as Bad as They are in India

Regina, Sask.—Canadian-born girls in Saskatchewan wed at too early an age.

Statistics just made public indicate that Canadian girls, under 16, outnumber brides of other nationalities in recent weddings.

Figures available here show that foreign-born girls are far more apt to marry at the "sensible age."

D. M. Ristich a Conservative party leader in Saskatchewan, drew up a report to answer charges made at Toronto that "child marriages" among foreign-born people in the West were increasing in alarming proportions.

Miss Nellie Forman, settlement worker in Regina for many years, told Toronto people that foreign girls of 14 and 15 years of age were being forced into marriages with men they scarcely knew.

Miss Forman was quoted as saying foreign-born citizens of Saskatchewan used their children as chattels, compelling the girls to marry while they were still children.

These statements caused much consternation in Regina, where Miss Forman enjoys a great deal of support.

Statistics covering a period of three years show that out of twenty marriages in 1926, of girls under the age of 16, seventeen of the girls were Canadian, one was French and two were born in the United States.

In the following year there were twenty-eight marriages of girls under 16.

Out of this number twenty-four of the girls were Canadian, one was from the British Isles, one from Finland, one from Poland and one from the United States.

In 1928, the last year recorded in statistics, only twenty-one marriages of brides of minor age occurred in the province.

Out of this number fifteen were Canadian girls, two were Russian, and four Hungarian, Polish, Rumanian and Amercan, respectively.

Insect Control

Insects are costly, their control one of the greatest problems with which any country is confronted.

A New Menace To Canadian Wheat Farmer

Australian Growers Are Now Asking for a Bounty on Export Wheat

Ottawa.—A new menace to the Canadian wheat grower looms.

Australian farmers are asking their government to pay a bounty on the export of wheat, or guarantee the price at five shillings ($1.21½) per bushel, or both. They have already persuaded the government to appoint a Board to market their wheat and to make pooling compulsory.

But they are not content.

They want to be in the position of the German farmers who have been paid bounties to export wheat to the British market.

The Australian farmers will not be exporting much wheat this year, but if they have their way, they may be sending bounty-fed wheat to Britain in competition with Canadian wheat. It would not be the first time Australia paid export bounties with the idea of encouraging primary production. Some years ago it paid bounty on the export of butter. Canada regarded the entrance of bounty butter into her markets as dumping and imposed a countervailing duty.

The Australian farmers have their claim for an export bounty on wheat or a guaranteed price, or both, on the uncertainty of the results from wheat production. Some years, after allowing for interest on investment, the returns from the wheat crop leave nothing for the farmer's own, or hired labor. The average farmer producing wheat has to rely for one-third of his income on side lines, wool, lambs, eggs, cream, etc., it is claimed.

The average cost of growing wheat, on the basis of the experiments of the Australian Government Demonstration Farm at Turretfield over a period of seven years (1922-1928. inclusive), is 4s. 11d., while the cost of teaming to the elevators is 2.5 pence. The inclusive cost of growing and delivery to the market as represented by the elevator, is thus 5s. 1½ d., or $1.24½.

The estimate is for a 300 acre farm yielding 19.64 bushels of wheat per acre. The yield per acre on the Turretfield Demonstration Farm varied during seven consecutive years from 9.93 bushels per acre to 23.91 bushels per acre, but the average yield was 19.64 bushels per acre, with a range of 21.7 per cent. above and 49.4 per cent. below.

The cost of production per acre at the Experimental Farm was distributed as follows:

Labor	1.	4.	0
Use of Horses		16.	7
Use of implements		6.	5
Seed		9.	0
Essential Materials		12.	9.
Incidentals		4.	0
Int. on Working Capital		7.	2
Rent 18 months		16.	1
Totals	4.	16.	0

Divided by 19.64 bushels per acre this makes the cost per bushel on the farm 4s. 11d. or $1.21½ cents. On that basis the farmer has to receive a price of over $1.21 to make any net profit.

Another division of the average costs per acre on the Australian Demonstration Farm over the period 1922-28 is given as follows:

Preparation of fallows to March 31	1.	0.	0
Seeding Operations	1.	3.	11
Harvesting Operations		17.	0
Incidental Expenses		11.	10
Int. in Working Capital		7.	2
Rent for 18 months		16.	1
Total	4.	16.	0

Or 4s. 11d. per bushel on a yield of 19.64 bushels per acre.

Last year's production costs, the AAustralian farmers claim were higher than the average for 1922-28, and that to meet rising costs greater efforts must be made to increase the yield per acre. If a crop is badly put in, the chances are that the returns will not cover the cost of production, they say.

Australia's none too satisfactory financial position makes it imperative that her government use every feasible means of encouraging increases in exports.

Canadian Fans Seek Voice in Air Regulation

Form Groups to Express Desires for Program Presentation in Dominion

Montreal.—Dispatches from the western provinces of Canada indicate that listeners are showing keen interest in the recent recommendations on radio regulations of the Royal Commission. Groups are being formed, it is learned, with the avowed object of insisting the "consumer" shall have some voice in what kind of programs shall be broadcast. They also are making requests that attention be given to the problems of interference.

Steps have already been taken in Ottawa in the organization of listeners who are seeking to have some voice in the regulation of radio. Recommendations recently offered by the Royal Commission propose government subsidy of broadcast facilities. The plan is to organize a government owned company for the dissemination of radio programs.

"We are going to insist that the great body of radio listeners should have a say in what they shall listen to," declared an official here. "The stations already in existence will make strong representations to Parliament and if they have their way the danger exists that the 'consumers' will not be consulted."

A society will be formed which will have for its object the supporting of the report of the Royal Commission and making the desires of the radio listeners known to Parliament. It is expected that a measure incorporating the recommendations recently made by the commission will be introduced for debate shortly. P. J. A. Cardin, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, is having a bill drafted which incorporates the recommendations, it was disclosed last week.

In the Royal Commission's original draft for radio legislation nationalization of broadcasting in Canada and the erection of a series of superpowered stations at public expense was suggested. The encouragement of all Canadian programs, with the co-operation of the provinces, was recommended.

Mr. Cardin disclosed that the whole basis of the bill will be based on the Aird Commission report, but that, after being introduced in the House, it will be sent to the committee to consider both the principle and the detail.

At a recent meeting held in Toronto by the Canadian Association of Broadcasters it was stated that the suggestions contained in the report do not completely solve the problems. The meeting authorized that the association's board of directors present the views of the association to the parliamentary committee, which will be considering and revising the expected bill embodying the Aird report. This organization also seeks to formulate a policy or program which will combine the advantages of private ownership of stations and the better features of the Aird report. Representatives of practically all broadcasting stations in the provinces were at the meeting.

To Encourage Production in Nova Scotia

Great Need is to Increase Consumption of Fish in Upper Canada

Ottawa.—Seeing that the Maritime Provinces are only able to sell one-tenth of their fish catch, in point of quantity, probably less in point of value, in the other provinces of Canada, would it not be a good plan for the Dominion Department of Fisheries to use the proceeds of the tax it is now levying on the fish catches landed by steam trawlers in an endeavor, by publicity work, to expand the market for fish in Canada?

There is no good reason why that tax should be turned into the national treasury. The tax is an anomaly. In no other industry does the Government impose a tax intended to discourage the use of th most up-to-date machines. Being exceptional, the proceeds of a tax intended to limit production, should be expended to encourage consumption. The one-tenth of their quantity production which the Maritimes are able to market in the rest of Canada consists largely of haddock. That is recognized as the most popular of Atlantic food fishes, because of the fineness of the flesh structure. But other sea fish have an equally iodine content, a food requirement of importance to people far from the sea coast. Most of the mutton raised near the Atlantic coast is sold to hotels in the U.S., largely because it answers the iodine requirements, including the matter of taste.

The Maritimes, in view of the fact that they are required by the Dominion tariff to buy manufactured products of Canada, or—to cite motor cars as an instance—pay 25 per cent. more for imported catches, have reason to expect a bigger market for their fish in Canada.

An oyster industry in Prince Edward Island yielding $1,000,000 a year is a possibility, according to the experts of the Dominion Fisheries Departments. At present the oyster industry of P.E.I. is insignificant.

To encourage production in this, as in other branches of the fishing industry, the great need is to increase consumption in the Canadian market, which will become a stable market.

A Chinese Magna Charta

What may well prove to be an important step towards constitutional guarantees, hitherto significantly lacking in China, is discerned by some keen political students in a Bill of Rights which has been jointly sponsored by Dr. H. H. Kung, Minister of Industry, Commerce and Labor, and Mr. Chiao Yi-tang, a prominent Nationalist leader. This Bill of Rights has been widely printed throughout the Chinese press, and has attracted a good deal of attention both in the English press in China and from the newspapers of Japan.

According to despatches just received, the first article of this Chinese Magna Charta sets forth that the Chinese people, irrespective of race, caste, sex, or creed, shall enjoy full legal equality, and the second provides that no person shall be restrained or deprived of his liberty without due process of law. No one is to be subject to the jurisdiction of military courts except those in the service of the army, navy, or aerial forces engaged in war or in areas of occupation.

The principle of freedom of speech and of the press is affirmed by another article, which declares that everyone has the right, within the bounds of the law, to express his views by word of mouth, by writing or drawing, or by any other method that he may think of. It is also provided that within the limits set by the law the people shall have the right to assemble and to organize. The right of privacy as regards the mails, telephones, telegraphs and other means of communication is recognized.

Other articles lay it down that no dwelling-house may be searched without the consent of the owner and due process of law, that every person shall have the right to live and travel wherever he wishes, and that everyone shall be permitted to choose his own occupation, profession, or employment. No property is to be confiscated without due process of law, and every person is to have the right of free access to the courts.

Parents who have more children than they can care for can call upon the State for help; orphans, cripples and those enfeebled by age have also a claim to State assistance; while the right of the workless to ask the State for employment, the right of landless peasants to cultivate unowned land, and the right of poor people to free education are also fundamental principles of the Bill. Whatever else it does, it certainly gives indication that somebody in China has got a clear grasp of the best foundation upon which to build a really democratic Government.

Austria to Build Scenic Highways in Work Program

Vienna—The Austrian Economic Council, representative of all branches of trade, industry, commerce and agriculture, recently established by the Government to advise regarding the best means of overcoming the present economic crisis, has put forward a number of definite schemes of development which the Chancellor, Dr. Johann Schober, declares will be acted on forthwith.

To alleviate unemployment several new important roads will be built. One of these is through the Wachau along the Danube from Melk to Krems, which is one of the favorite tourist resorts in lower Austria. Another new route is from Gratz to Klagenfurt, known as the Packerstrasse, which will be an important link between Italy and Hungary.

The third is known as Glacknerstrasse along the slopes of Austria's highest mountain in Salzkammergut which will considerably reduce the distance for automobiles between Bavaria and north Italy and open up a scenic area of unusual attractiveness. Further development of waterpower plants in the "Hohe Tauern" mountains in Salzkammergut and west Tyrol are planned. When these works are completed Austria will have large stores of electrical power for export, an item which it is hoped will compensate in its trade balance for the coal it lacks. The large sums required for these schemes must come principally from the new international loan Austria expects to float soon.

Does Grading Pay? Yes!

Canadian potatoes made a good start for 1930 by taking a premium in the Boston market over the State of Maine product. A report received by the Fruit Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture from the United States market report service shows that P.E.I. potatoes selling in 90 pound lots got a price of from five to fifty cents more per unit than was paid for the same class of product from the State of Maine selling in a 100 pound bag. Every carload and cargo of potatoes shipped out of P.E.I. was government inspected and certified. Yes—grading does pay.

Training Spiders For Commerce

"I hear of an interesting little enterprise in Canada for the commercial development of spiders' webs. The very fine threads which the spider spins are valuable in special kinds of photography and, I think, in gun-sighting," says the London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian.

"But it is not every kind of spider that spins a thread delicate enough for this delicate work, and in Canada the National Physical Laboratory, bringing the aid of science to commerce, sends out its spider experts to collect the right variety, and to cultivate them as factory workers, so to speak, much as bees are cultivated for their honey.

"The process of the education of these commercial spiders is interesting. They are induced, entirely by kindness, to walk round and round a stick, and as they do so the thread is wound round it, so that the spider is made to manufacture a sort of bobbin of inconceivably fine thread. This thread is afterwards wrapped round the prongs of a fork which has been painted beforehand with shellac to prevent the thread from sticking, and these forkfuls of gossamer are then put into cold storage. I believe these commercial cobwebs are wanted chiefly for aerial photography, the thread being stretched across the diaphragm of the camera to supply the sighting line.

"The spider thus joins the ranks of industrial workers, a prosaic addition to the exploitation of nature in the age of business. Perhaps there will be a spiders' protection society with proper trade union regulations. It seems rather a grim business for the spider, and certainly a contrast to the poetry of the spider's web, and one wonders what W. H. Hudson, who clad his etheral Rima in a diaphanous vesture of spider's gossamer, would have thought of it."

Agriculture Needs an Inventor

There is a real opportunity awaiting some enterprising genius who will evolve a machine which will effectively and economically dust wheat plants to prevent stem rust. The experts of the Dominion Department of Agriculture find that the only effective method of controlling this parasitic organism, which spreads with amazing rapidity, is to apply finely powdered sulphur to the stem of the growing plant as a toxic agent. A considerable fortune awaits some lucky person who has "dust on the brain" well enough to design a new form of machine for this purpose.

One Scotland Yard For United Kingdom

Memories of One of the First Big Five Officers and Their System

Yard Has Nothing To Learn From Foreigners

The need for a national detective force and the continuance of hanging and the lash to deter clever and desperate modern criminals were in an interview urged by Mr. Charles Arrow, sole survivor of the five detectives who, following reorganization constituted in 1906 the First Council of Five police headquarters.

The other officers were Chief Inspectors Forest, Fox, Drew, and Kane, and the system the five evolved has largely helped to secure for Scotland Yard its acknowledged eminence.

Best Scientists

Mr. Arrow said: "I firmly believe that there should be one Scotland Yard for the United Kingdom. By that I mean there should be one detective headquarters to which the best men of the country and city constabularies should be sent.

"I would not interfere in the slightest with the organization of local uniform police forces, but one central authority for criminal investigation would mean even greater efficiency than at present.

The British system of police work—and, of course, that means Scotland Yard—has nothing to learn from any foreign nation. Detection of crime is developing along scientific lines, but that does not mean that England should, like some other countries, develop a police scientific staff. We can always go to the very best men in the country, and we do."

Mr. Arrow said that thirty years ago there were perhaps more clever criminals than clever detectives.

"But to-day," he declared, "it is the other way about. The general cleverness of criminals is greater, and there are a number of outstanding crooks, but the general level of the detective force is very much higher."

No "Dr. Moriartys"

One popular idea was given short shift by Mr. Arrow.

"It is all nonsense to talk about British criminals working in big gangs. They simply do not do it, and when an officer gets up in the witness-box and tells the judge that the prisoner is a member of the "Forty Thieves," it is so much romance.

Nor are there any "Master Criminals." Two or three men may work together, and one is naturally the leader, but there is no great organizer and director of crime like "Dr. Moriarty"—except in works of fiction.

On the other hand, there always have been criminals of outstanding ability. I met one in the Strand the other day. He was a great worker here and on the Continent and I dare say, although he is an elderly man now, he is still operating. The really big receivers have gone. In the old days there were men of seemingly strict probity, pillars of the local church and all that. If anyone could be described as "Moriarty" they could, for they encouraged thieves and others to make profits out of their booty. But they have disappeared. Receivers now operate on a much smaller scale."

Fear of the Lash

Mr. Arrow denounced the proposed abolition of corporal punishment, saying:

"It will be one of the greatest mistakes our law-makers ever made if they abolish it. If hanging were abolished, there would be more murders, and more policemen would be killed. It is because we hang murderers that so few burglars carry weapons, but when at the utmost it could only mean a few years' more imprisonment if a policeman trying to make an arrest were killed, what burglar would hesitate to kill if he thought by so doing he had a chance of getting away?

"Crimes of violence are very properly punished by the lash. To those who advocate its abolition pause to think what the effect of being mauled about by a brutal ruffian must have on their women folk?"

"She has no physical infirmity, she could tell the truth if she liked," said a landlady, speaking of her lodger, at Shoreditch.

"Mayn't I be a preacher when I grow up?" asked the small boy. "Of course, you may, my pet, if you want to," his mother replied. "Yes, I do. I s'pose I've got to go to church all my life, anyway, and it's a good deal harder to sit still than to stand up and holler."

Dr. Williams Pink Pills Will Tone Up Your Stomach Making Mealtime a Pleasure

Are you afraid of meal-time? Does eating distress you? Would you rather go without food? That is the condition of many due entirely to indigestion. There can be no perfect digestion—hence no enjoyment of mealtime—unless you have rich, red blood. This pure blood is necessary to tone up your stomach and make it capable of properly digesting the food.

Many so-called stomach remedies merely try to digest your food for you. That is a mistake—nature should do that work and if nature does not do it serious results are bound to follow. Tone up your stomach by driving out the poisons that are in the blood. Make new rich blood and your appetite and digestion will soon be normal—meals will once more be a pleasure.

The one sure medicine to enrich the blood, restore strength and banish stomach trouble and indigestion is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Concerning them Mrs. Wm. T. Thompson, Brussels, Ont., says:—"For years I suffered with indigestion, headaches and dizzy spells. I tried a great many so-called remedies without relief. As a farmer's wife, with three little girls, it was almost impossible to be idle and I just dragged myself through my work. I suffered so I was actually afraid of meal time. A friend advised the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and although I had lost faith in ever being well again I purchased a supply and began taking them. Gradually the dizziness and headaches left me. My appetite improved and soon I was able to enjoy my meals. I gained in weight and my health in general is better than it has been for years. I feel I owe much to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for they relieved me of all my misery."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

British Widow Reburies Scarab from Tomb as Cause of Woes

Bradley, England.—A scarab taken from an ancient Egyptian tomb was blamed by Mrs. John Bertram Parkes for seven years of poverty and misfortune, culminating in widowhood. So she buried it in the woods near her humble home here.

The scarab was inscribed with part of the sixty-fourth chapter of the Egyptian Book of the Dead, which identified it with the heart of the deceased person and urged it not to betray him at the judgment before Osiris. It was found by her husband when he was in Egypt as a colonel in England's crack Grenadier Guards.

Shortly afterward he was demobilized. For a time he worked, first as a coal dealer and later as a market gardener, toy maker and firewood seller. Then for seven years he was unable to land a job of any sort.

Finally he was forced to build a two-room shack in the woods here in order to have shelter for his wife and four children. Then he died, leaving his family destitute.

Mrs. Parkes said her husband blamed all his misfortunes on the scarab.

Scientifically speaking, coal is of the same composition as the diamond." "Still, it is only a carbon copy."

WHY SUFFER FROM YOUR LIVER?

Why be handicapped with unsightly blotches on the face, eyes with yellow tinge and that tired and languid feeling? This indicates a torpid liver

Headache, Dizziness and Biliousness surely follow. You must stimulate your lazy liver, start the bile flowing with Carter's Little Liver Pills.

They also act as a mild laxative, purely vegetable, free from calomel and poisonous drugs, small, easy to swallow, and not habit forming. They are not a purgative that cramps or pains, unpleasant after effect following, on the contrary a good tonic. All Druggists 25c and 75c red pkgs.

Novelties Bring Sophistry

Materials Bring Symmetry of Line and Harmony

Feminine imagination will receive pleasant stimulus in the fabric surprises of the spring season. Many and delightful are the novelties in new materials and the manner of their use.

When the last word has been said, the true value of any fabric rests upon its ability to enhance feminine charm. Weaves and color combinations this spring offer the couturier wide range. Since sartorial enchantments depend upon symmetry of line, harmony of color, and the use of materials appropriate to the cut of gowns, the more diversified styling of materials is an incentive to greater originality in design.

Fabrics this spring combine body and suppleness. Satins of considerable weight and great elegance, some of them richly brocaded, some of soft, luscious crepe satin, proclaim the new era of formality. Flat crepes grow richly soft and take on new dignity, chiffons have more body, and laces of real worth, such as Alencon and Chantilly, supplant the sheerer and less impressive ones. Tulle, nets, and even horsehair braid add their originality to materials for evening and the brocaded chiffons and lames are sumptuous in their feeling and beautiful in design and color.

Imported Sophistication

An import from Lelong illustrates smartly the utilization of horsehair braid for evening gowns. It is an ultra-sophisticated gown, entirely of the horsehair braid, and the gleaming sheer blackness of its material gives it tremendous chic.

The entire gown is formed of horsehair braid of varying widths, commencing with narrow braid which fashions the smart bolero that flares slightly over the molded body-lines of the gown. Spiraling around the body to a line well below the hips, the braid is molded to the figure, giving the chic tubular line. From below the hips, wider braid makes a full skirt which billows like an irregular umbrella, swooping to the floor in the back.

The very character of the fabric insures its unusual flare and furnishes its own trimming. The black is unrelieved by any color and the gown represents one of the smartest creations from Paris for spring.

Lace Has Chic Role

For ultra-femininity, Alencon lace has no superior for an effective and extremely serviceable evening gown. For the lace gown finds itself perfectly at home on the most formal occasions and on those where less formality holds reign.

"Had a puncture, my friend," asked the cheerily inquisitive passer-by. The weary motorist looked up. "No old man" he said as calmly as he could. "I'm just giving the tires a change of air."

Use Minard's in the Stable.

Mrs. Longworth and Mrs. Gann are still at it. Maybe we're a little violentminded, but we'd kind of like to see those two girls get together some time at a bargain counter.—"Life."

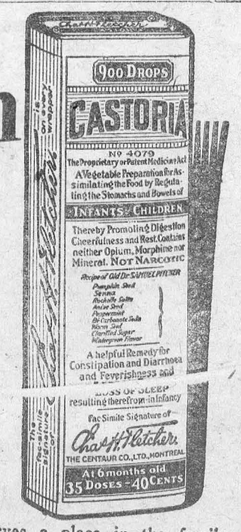
Children Cry for it



Children hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. And this pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and harmless as the recipe reads. (The wrapper tells you just what Castoria contains.)

When Baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria has him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea. When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, use it to keep the system from clogging. Your doctor will tell you Castoria deserves a place in the family medicine cabinet until your child is grown. He knows it is safe for the tiniest baby; effective for a boy in his teens. With this special children's remedy handy, you need never risk giving a boy or girl medicine meant for grown-ups.

Castoria is sold in every drug store; the genuine always bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature.

The Wealth of India

Calcutta Englishman: The general public, pathetically unversed in economics and exchange, do not realize the immensity of India's natural resources. They do not understand that their wealth remains; that though political tergiversation and corrupt and inefficient administration may make the winnowing of this wealth by the Indians and Europeans harder in the future than it has been in the past, the wealth remains and demands the application of ever greater capital and labor. Whatever the precise evolution of Indo-British politics, it is utterly unthinkable that any time, however distant, Britain will be false to her trust to the extent of letting India slide into Chinese chaos.

Eliza Christie Vibrans

Mrs. Eliza Christie Vibrans passed to her Eternal Home, March 22, 1930, in her sixty-ninth year. The late Mrs. Vibrans was born at Maple Ridge, the only child of Mr. Lewis Grant Christie of Maple Ridge and his wife, Elizabeth Houlehan of Chesterville.

More than sixty years ago, Mr. Christie went to the western part of the United States where he remained until his death. He was one of the prominent pioneers in opening up and developing this section of his adopted country as one of the builders of the Great Northern and Western Railway. When this work was completed, he purchased a ranch in Idaho and later on a more extensive ranch in Wyoming. The confidence and respect accorded Mr. Christie by the people of this state was tangibly proved by the fact that for years he represented Wyoming in the United States Congress at Washington.

His only child, the late Eliza Christie, married Mr. William Vibrans and spent her whole married life in the ranch in the State of Wyoming. It was here at her home in Border, Lincoln County, Wyoming, that she was stricken with fatal illness. She was taken to the Hospital in Seattle, Washington Territory, where the best medical aid was avaiable, but passed away in less than two days after her arrival at the hospital, before the performance of an operation could render her possible temporary relief. The sad tidings was forwarded to her cousin, Miss Leona M. Ker, B. Sc., M. A, of New York City, with the request that the wide connection of cousins in Winchester and in Chesterville be notified. Seven years ago, after an absence of almost fifty years, Mrs. Vibrans came east and spent three months with her beloved aunt, the late Mrs. Mary Christie Ker, in New York City. They visited Winchester and Chesterville, staying with another cousin Mr. Howard Nesbitt, the present Reeve of Winchester Township. But Mrs. Vibrans, perceiving the excitement and strain was too severe for her aged aunt, Mrs. Ker, who had then passed her eightieth year, prevailed on Mrs. Ker to return to New York City and complete the visit there. Thus many cousins whom they had purposed visiting were unable to renew the old ties of kin and of childhood with Mrs. Vibrans.

The bereaved family consists of the aged father and husband, Mr. William Vibrans, who is in a hospital so critically ill that the details of the sad tidings have not yet been communicated to him. The children are: Dr. Frank Christie Vibrans, Professor of Science in Chicago University; Mr. Lewis Grant Vibrans, who served with the United States Navy during the World War; Mr. George Vibrans in a ranch in Washington Territory; Mr. Charles Vibrans and Miss Ruth Vibrans at home with their parents and another daughter, Miss Mary Vibrans, who predeceased her mother some eight years ago.

The deep sympathy of the cousins and friends in Winchester and in Chesterville is extended to the bereaved family in their temporary separation from a devoted christian mother,—One of whom it can be truly said,—"Her children rise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her. A woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised."

Future of Canada Revealed in Past

Col. Bovey Reviews Growth of Country at Lions Club

Diminution rather than enlargement in the size of cities, an increasing importance of food production as a national industry, and the end of modern rush and worry, were amongst the guesses about the future of Canada made by Colonel Wilfred Bovey, when he spoke on "Looking Backward and Thinking Forward," in Montreal resently.

Colonel Bovey in a rapid review of Canadian history said in Canadian history books that too much stress was apt to be laid on the doings of politicians and too little attention was paid to the work done by the real pioneers of science and commerce. He was recently reading a history of the Dominion which devoted nine pages to the "Canadian Pacific scandal" and 10 lines to the building of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The only reference that it made to banks was one to Cartier's visit to the banks of the Newfoundland. That kind of history, he added, was all wrong.

Colonel Bovey recalled that during the war with America, James McGill founded the North West Company; John Molson operated steamships on the St. Lawrence three years before they were used in England, and Alexander Mackenzie had already blazed the trail for Confederation when he made his way to the Pacific Coast.

Again during the rebellion, Canada used its first locomotive, steamers were plying on the Lake Ontario, and St. Lawrence river between Montreal and Quebec was as busy as it was to-day.

That progress, said Colonel Bovey, never ceased till the years of the World War and during the war Canada so conducted herself that she won a plaec for herself in the counsels of the world. During the final battles of war the Canadian corps defeated as many German divisions and reconquered as much territory as the whole United States Army.

While little economic progress was possible in those years, the nation had found itself so that after the war the progress that had been made was astounding. Canada had discovered the North and the air. The future of the north was very well assured and the value of air transport to the Dominion was remarkably well realized.

It was because of that history that, said Colonel Bovey, he was prepared to make some guesses as to the future of the country. His last prophecy was that while Canadian patriotism, which was new, would become idealized, it would never cease. "Fifty years from now," he concluded, "our sons and daughters will still be inspired by love for Canada, the Canada that they will know far better than we ever may."

Therefore, it is not surprising that business men, in advertising for stenographers should specially say, "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

Getting Ready For 1930 Accidents

The tide of motor traffic will soon be swelling with the coming of summer. It is some comfort to know that, along with "Safety First" injunctions from many quarters, Bell Telephone linemen and construction chiefs will be found on many highways carrying on their big 1930 construction program. The Bell men are practically all skilled first-aiders. They undergo a thorough training in that useful art, and their timely aid in all parts of the province has saved the lives of many who, without skilled initial attention to injuries, would have been in grave danger. Over 2,300 Bell employees—men and women—successfully passed First Aid examinations in 1929. Sixty-three per cent of the 7,500 male workers are qualified First Aiders.

"Canada, How Do You Get That Way?"

Under the caption "And, Beside, Canada, How Do You Get That Way?" R.H.L., in the "Line O' Type or Two" column of the Chicago Tribune, expresses humorously and somewhat sarcastically a U.S. point of view on the proposed prohibition of the export of whiskey from Canada to the United States. He Writes:

They say up in Canada they must cut off our Canadian whiskey or there'll be war between these United States and that there now Dominion of Canada. Tut, tut! We used to think our Canadian whiskey came from Canada, too. And then we found out that most of the good old ten-year Canadian rye we got came from a cellar near the corner of Bruce and Spruce, on the west side. Or it may be on the south side or the north side, and quite probably on all sides. And it's ten years old if it was made day before yesterday.

And the warehouse labels and the Canadian Government stamp and the pretty lithograph on the front of the bottle telling what kind of Canadian rye whiskey it is. Well, they're all made right here. And the bottles and the cork and the good-will and the cobwebs that is thrown in with the twenty-year-old kind of Canadian whiskey—they're all made right here in Chicago, too, and while you wait.

Why, we can make just as good Canadian whiskey in this country in two hours as they can make up in Canada in ten years. Our boys are pretty smart that way. And better stuff. Oh, yes, indeed. Why, up in Canada they pour out their Canadian rye and hold it up in a glass and look at the color and the bead and the body of the stuff, and then take a drink of it and smack their lips a few times and say, "Yes, that's good old Canadian whiskey all right." Down here we pour out our home-made good old Canadian rye and sling a cast steel monkey wrench in it, and if the monkey wrench is dissolved in two minutes we know it's good old Canadian rye.

Yes sir, Canada forbid all or any of your Canadian whiskey going out of your country and into the United States, and see if we care! And all the alky cookers down on this side of the boundary use that belongs to you is the word "Canadian." And they can steal that and make all the rest.

And then again Canada doesn't want a war with the U.S., because it would rather be invaded by an army of thirsty tourists from the United States than an army with banners and guns. For the army of tourists is much bigger than the other army could possibly be, and tourists have lots more money than soldiers and spend it much more freely. And the tourists don't have to be back in camp at taps every night and there's no officer to holler, "Hey! Yuh can't stand there, soldier!"

Danger Ahead

Red Society of Godless Aims At 70,000,000 Members by 1933

Moscow.—The recent religious "crusade" abroad against atheism in Russia was attacked again when the executive committee of the Society of Godless called for 70,000,000 members of the society by 1933.

The call of the committee, which just concluded its conference, doubled the original five-year plan for 35,000,000 members. The increase was described as due to "the excellent outlook" for atheist propaganda.

The conference condemned the use of force against believers and scathingly reprimanded members who have been guilty of coercive interference with freedom of worship. At the same time it made clear a plan for intensification of peaceful agitation against religion.

The society accused the Soviet commissariat of education with not cooperating sufficiently with the godless movement and demanded greater stress on atheism in schools.

Duty on Blueberries Hits Newfoundland

St. John's, Nfld.—Information that the United States Senate Tariff Commission has accepted the amendment proposed by Senator Hale of Maine to impose a duty of $1.20 per box on blueberries shipped from Newfoundland has brought dismay to those engaged in the local industry. With assurance that the tariff of 37½ cents per box would remain unchanged, plans had been made to develop the industry considerably this season and to pay the pickers 25 cents per gallon.

The announcement threatens to make the business unprofitable for both exporters and producers alike unless some modification can be affected. The business has grown since 1927 from an export of 65,094 to 556,547 gallons in 1929, with earnings to the pickers last year of over $120,000.

Canada's Lumber Industry

Of the $170,000,000 invested in the lumber industry in Canada, $56,000,000 is in British Columbia, $45,000,000 in Ontario, and $37,000,000 in Quebec.

Tourist Traffic From Coast to Coast

Everything Points to a Big Increase in Canada's "Visitor Business"

Vancouver, B.C.—A new high record will be created this year from coast to coast in Canada in connection with tourist traffic from the United States, according to exports here.

Backed by advance bookings, they are preparing for an enormous influx of visitors from south of the line. And strange enough, the cause is the recent collapse of the stock market in New York and other great financial centres.

Shortage of money has been responsible for cancellation of countless intended tours of Europe. But the families must have holidays, and a popular slogan has started "See This Continent First."

The campaign being conducted in numerous United States publications against prohibition is also responsible according to reports gathered here from large centres of the continent.

Americans are revolting against the mandate that they cannot do in their country what they can do in practically every country in the world.

With their high-powered autos they can tour Canada from coast to coast over improving highways and can rest at intervals in hotels, with excellent accommodation.

The outlay will be restricted to their own desires.

Anyone who contemplated a trip to Europe knew beforehand that the transportation costs would involve a double crossing of the Atlantic and incidentals a part from actual expenses for sightseeing.

But every province of Canada has attractions for residents of the Republic south of the line. Transportation will involve gas costs only. Many citizens there desire to personally inspect their investments in mining, lumber, industrials, fishing, pulp and paper mills and land. They have never taken the opportunity to do so because the distance was so short that they could get information by telegraph, telephone or mail.

Just as the Great War failed to insert a wedge between the Anglo-Saxon peoples, but united them in a common bond of understanding gained through personal contact, so shall the stock slump result in closer contact between the people of this continent and inevitable prosperity here through the greater appreciation of Canada's potentialities which shall be gained by those who have decided to "See This Continent First."

Canadian Railways' Revenue Decreases

Toronto, Ont.—Due to reduced tonnage through lighter grain movements the revenue of the Canadian railways shows a decided decrease in 1929 ,according to a statement made by T. A. Crerar, Minister of Railways.

Railway operating revenues show a reduction of $16,.52,949 over the revnues of 1928. The net revenue from railway operations last year was $45,062,080. The ratio of operating expenses to revenue was 82.66 per cent. as compared with 78.89 per cent. in the previous year. The government-owned railway, the Canadian National, spent $46,868,217 in 1929 on maintenance of way and structures and $48,460,840 on maintenance of equipment.

LIFE'S SHORTCOMINGS

Did you ever see a schoolboy tumble on the ice without stooping immediately to re-buckle the strap of his skates? And would not Ignotus have painted a masterpiece if he could have found good brushes and a proper canvas? Life's shortcomings would be bitter indeed if we could not find excuses for them outside of ourselves. And as for life's successes—well, it is certainly wholesome to remember how many of them are due to a fortunate position and the proper tools.—Henry Van Dyke.

A sports writer says there is no such thing as a dead certainty. Then what does he call the electric hare.

A man recently accomplished the journey to Switzerland, without challenge, on his wife's passport. The authorities, no doubt, merely assumed that the "lady" was traveling in her winter sports costume.

Map Makers Must Keep Pace

Before Settlement the Government Must Run Base Line and Produce Adequate Maps for Prospectors and Settlers Alike

Few people can resist the fascination of a modern map with its implication of travel and appeal to the imagination.

Particularly fascinating are the maps of Western Canada where the changes are swift and continuous. A case in point is the Humboldt Sheet of the Sectional Map of Canada embracing 4300 square miles of central Saskatchewan between townships 33 and 40, ranges 15 to 29, west of the second meridan, of which the 7th edition since 1902 is now off the press of the Topographical Survey, Department of the Interior.

The first edition of June, 1992, indicates two out of 104 townships surveyed into sections with the old Prince Albert Qu'Appelle trail and the Government Telegraph line along it representing the only facilities for travel or communication on the mapped area at that time. Cutting off the two lower tiers of sections the boundary line between Saskatchewan and Assinaboia, divisions of the old Northwest Territories, stands out as one of three east and west surveyed lines. At the centre of the region stood the Humboldt telegraph station, until 1892 one of the two telepgraph stations between Winnipeg and Edmonton to which the surveyors sometimes had to travel long distances in order to obtain by telegraph the time signal for the purpose of determining longitude. A Saskatchewan directory of 1888 gives a population of eight households for Humboldt, the telegraph operator and line men with a rancher and five others, either freighters or hunters. This represented the settlement over the whole area of 4300 square miles up to the time when the second tide of immigration reached the West well after the beginning of this century.

Then followed six more editions of maps of this area.

Differing from all of these is the seventh edition which is topographical not only to the extent of showing contours and all other natural features but which displays facilities such as telephone lines, ditches, classified roads differentiated in color, schools, churches, garages, etc. The mass of information necessary for the compilation of this truly fine example of the topographer's science was obtained from previous surveys and from data supplied by various Dominion and Provincial departments, and from the railway companies.

In very early days in the West people travelled about wholly by water. As the Humboldt area lies nearly forty miles from any water route it remained an unknown land except for occasional winter travellers until the construction in the '80's of the main line of the C.P.R. to the south, when Humboldt telegraph station became the half-way point on the stage route between Qu'Appelle and Prince Albert.

On his way north to survey a portion of the Arctic coast, in December, 1836, Thomas Simpson travelled diagonally across this area. His approximate course across the country is indicated by the line of the Canadian National Railway northwesterly. Taking observations on the way, as did most of those early explorers who had a working knowledge of surveying, Simpson appropriated the carriole intended for him for the carriage of his books and instuments, travelling himself all the way to Athabaska on foot.

Quill Lakes, on the southeast corner, 1703 feet above sea level, he refers to as "Lac aux Plumes," and informs us that they derived their name from the multitude of wild fowl that moulted there every summer. The portions of these lakes falling within the mapped area cover seven townships and have been reserved for a bird sanctuary, together with Lenore Lake at the north centre of the sheet, while Ponass Lake on the eastern boundary has been created "Public Shooting Grounds Reserve."

Simpson described his route across the eastern half of the tract as being from one deeply curved woods to another, "as if traversing successive bays of the sea to which these great plains that reach to the Rocky Mountains may well be likened." In spite of the fact that the district is well settled some of this forest cover still remains and the woods, tinted in green on the map, appear much as they did 94 years ago. Christmas day, 1836, he travelled 31 miles, passing over or near what are now the villages of St. Gregor, Muenster and Carmel, and the town of Humboldt. Northeast of Humboldt, from the summit of Mount Carmel, he and his guides obtained a view of the boundless prospect of the plains to the south with belts of woods to the north. When he saw a "seemingly endless tract of open underwood varied by gentle swelling eminences, thickets and hillocks, interchangeably with still further more open country varied by coteaus or bare ridges and here and there in the hollows large ponds."

This might be a terse description of the terrain as it now looks except that, where not a building or farmstead stood at that time, and few even sixty years afterwards, nowadays the expanse is dotted with the homes of settlers who have gone into the tract since 1902.

Some years after Simpson, in the midsummer of 1872, the Sandford Fleming expedition passed across the tract on their way to examine the Yellowhead Pass for the C.P.R. and to report on the intervening and extending countries. Climbing the same hill from which Simpson obtained a view in 1836, the secretary of the expedition commented rapturously on the roses, marigolds, and asters in such a profusion of color that his impression was of an earthly paradise, but he says sadly, "Where hundreds of homesteads shall yet be, there is not one!" Yet the new map now shows on the area 6,270 buildings exclusive of the towns and villages.

ON A PICTURE FOUND IN A SECOND HAND STORE

Time pushed it from a parlor-table, where
For long it stood, and with the tenderest care
'Twas handled, as some loved one viewed it there.
I found it folded in an old brown book
Among things faded, dusty and forsook,
And at the face I could not help but look.
She had it taken on a summer day;
'Twas long before Time's thieving took away
That hair's young gold—done in that girlish way.
She dressed for it, and tied that ribbon so,
And stood before the mirror, all aglow;—
The style says it was forty years ago!
'Twas given and received—a kindly thought,
Eyes lit with joy on getting it, I wot;
Now giver and receiver are forgot!
From home to home it went, as the owner moved,
And gathered the choice things the family loved;
By chance it was to this dim region shoved.
This picture served its day—recalled a face,
A world, jogged memory a while; I place
It back, but whose it was—I have no trace.

Birkenhead's Son Fluent Speaker

Viscount Furneaux Discusses Political Situation at Oxford Union

London—Viscount Furneaux, 22-year-old son and heir of the Earl of Birkenhead, revealed at the Oxford University Union more than a trace of that audacity in debates which first brought his father into notice when, after his maiden speech in the House of Commons, he was hailed as the "white hope" of Conservatism.

The Oxford Union was considering a motion endorsing Right Hon Stanley Baldwin's latest pronouncement—that he would submit to the people the question of import duties on foreign products, chiefly food, in the form of a referendum when the Conservative party was returned to power..

"I seem to see some similarity in two notable conversions—those of Lord Rothmere and, if one may say so without irreverence, of Saint Paul," remarked Viscount Furneaux. Speaking of the "comedy" provided by Lord Beaverbrook and Lord Rothmere, he described them as "those two noble Lords who eventually embraced with such screaming and disgusting exuberance."

On the whole, Viscount Furneaux said, he thought Lord Rothermere had finished a bad third to Mr. Baldwin, had accepted the Conservative leader's position and found himself "wheeling the free-food baby which he always loathed in an alien perambulator. "He might end by depositing the unwanted bantling either on Mr. Baldwin's doorstep or with the porter of the Daily Express office," he concluded.

It is understood Viscount Furneaux will "start first in the city"—the financial world, thus reversing his father's career. The Earl of Birkenhead after a brilliant political career is now a power in the financial world.

"Mistah Brown, what foh you call dat son of youh's Izaak Walton, when he was baptized George Washington?"

"Because, sah, dat rascal's reputashun foh veracity made date change imper'tive."

THE SPIRIT OF BEAUTY

The proof hat the spirit can shine through the sense; an evidence that the actual forms of life are unable to imprison the spirit of beauty; a protest in favor of a new heaven and a new earth, of a beauty more unblemished; and a symmetry more flawless; an attempt to figure in the mind and to express by the hand an ideal which is suggested by, and yet transcends, the visible.—Dr. G. Matheson.

Train Your Boy To Love the Dentist

Getting children to go willingly to the dentist is frequently among a mother's most perplexing problems.

The reason for this usually is that children make the acquaintanec of a dentist only when they are in great pain, Dr. Esther Schupack, a dentist, explains in Hygeia (Chicago). We read:

Mothers should plan to make the child's introduction to the dentist a painless one. This may be done by taking him early for examination and cleaning of the teeth, and establishing the habit of repeating the visit every six months. Thus friendship and confidence are cemented, which will be valuable if painful treatment is ever necessary.

Lying to a child is the way of failure. If one has a child's confidence, one can soothe him into patient and stoical endurance of great suffering.

Another important cause of fear of the dentist is in careless discussion of dental aches and pains in the presence of children. Nine out of ten who rebel fiercely at a necessary visit to the dentist are in a state of fear because of conversation overheard in the family circle. This can be avoided by the exercise of discretion.

AGAINST ODDS

When you get into a tight place, and everything goes against you, till it seems as if you could not hold on a minute longer, never give up then, for that's just the place and time that the tide will turn. — Harriet Beecher Stowe.

Manitoba Hydro Faces Best Year In its History

Winnipeg.—With a work program involving the expenditure of $2,660,-114, Manitoba Provincial hydro faces the biggest year in its history during the 1930 construction season.

At least 540 miles of transmission line will be constructed and every larger centre in the province will be hooked up with the system, and, of course, the system will pause to pick up all the business it can in the smaller centres.

The Legislature has voted $1,500,-000 for the work and the rest is made up of unexpended balances from preceeding years. The hydro commissioner, Douglas L. MacLean, expects that the same will be ample for providing transmission lines, sub-stations, generating plants, distributing systems and farm services.

During the year 1929 the system served 29,000 customers and had a surplus of several thousand dollars.

In 1930 it hopes to increase its customers to 1,000,000 and to increase its surplus to a very substantial amount once the new lines begin to carry loads on a commercial basis.

The service will be operated on a costs basis, however, with allowances for interest, depreciation and commercial reserve.

Chromite Mines in Canada

The principle chromite deposits in Canada are situated in the Coleraine district, Quebec, and are regarded as capable of producing large quantities of ore. Several interesting occurrences of good chromite ore at Obonga Lake, in the Thunder Bay district of Ontario, have recently been reported.

"Tonic" of War Tales

Mudie's is the great London circulating library.

It has stood for years under the shadow of the British Museum.

It circulates at present 2,000 copies of "All Quiet on the Western Front." But its manager tells a representative of the Manchester Guardian that he was "prepared to believe that the enormous demand for books about the war would soon be on the wane, but he had been advised that it was likely to continue for some time, and he suggested that people were finding in these harsh, vivid revelations something like a tonic."

Not a tonic so much as an intoxicant is what "Ian Hay" (Major Beith), the playwright and novelist, considers the war books. Also a slander on the soldier. In speaking in Coventry Cathedral recently on the subject of "Peace and War," as the London Daily Express reports him, he "vigorously denounced the impression created in recent novels of the life of the British soldier during the war." Thus:

"There was, he said, quite rightly expressed, a hatred of war and a determination to prevent another war, but certain other things were being done that were not so unassailable.

"The natural reprobation of war itself was being allowed to obscure our judgment to such an extent that we were inclined to transfer the horror and reprobation of war itself to the men who had fought. This was no new thing.

"The soldier suffered more ups and downs in popular esteem than any other man, and he could not help feeling that the soldier was being belittled even more vigorously than usual. He was being insulted.

"'We are,' said Major Beith, 'being submerged by a flood of so-called war books which depict the men who fought for us in the late war for the most part as brutes and beasts, living like pigs, and dying like dogs. Some of these books are conceived in dirt, and published for the profit dirt will bring. Nobody seems able to write on this subject without yielding to this tendency, and even if it is not the intention, it is so interpreted.

"'For instance, the brilliant play "Journey's End," which deals quite fairly with a certain rare, exceptional case of war-strain, has been claimed, quite against the author's intention, by some people to be a regular representative picture of a British soldier keeping his courage up by drink.'

"Major Beith said that he had found this had a most unfortunate effect, particularly in America, from which country he had recently returned. There were scores of men present who, he believed, would agree with him that these war books were enormously exaggerated, and the stories about the habits and life of the average soldier on active service were mainly untrue and unjust.

"These would-be realists had overlooked what were the things that kept our soldiers going during the years of mud and blood. There was the feeling that they were all in the same boat, whatever their rank or job, and that was always a very comforting and uniting reflection when they were in danger of their lives."

The Naval Conference

Rear-Admiral K. G. B. Dewar in the Nineteenth Century (London): If the London Conference does no more than abolish competition between the British Empire and the United States it will have done a great work by the removal of a virus of ill-will and suspicion, and it may ripen the way to an era of further disarmament and possibly to a new international outlook. In all civilized countries there is a growing current of opinion against the futility of war. Those who think that the best protection against a neighbor's birth rate is to be found in Howitzers, aircraft, and poison gas are condemned to a fatal stupidity which all the military talent in the world can never mask. It is this fatal frame of mind which, perhaps, the London Conference, by bringing the great nations together in friendly deliberation, will do something to dispel.

The 18th Amendment

Montreal Canada (Lib.): Are we likely to see before long the anti-prohibitionist struggle waged in other quarters than in the press and in Parliament? It is quite possible. After the violent debates in the Congress of the United States, the Senate of the State of Rhode Island has adopted a resolution demanding that a referendum should be taken next November on the following question: "Should the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution be maintained?" If the House adopts the same attitude, the problem will be set for the public opinion of a State to solve. Is Rhode Island going to take the first step?

Landlord Howe

Those of us who love the flavor of colonial days and delight in surviving monuments of that time cannot be too thankful for the preservation and continued use as an inn of the Red Horse Tavern in Sudbury. Sudbury was a great tavern town originally, and Longfellow, when he spoke of Landlord Howe's establishment simply as a wayside inn was giving it a perfectly correct description. For it was then only one of many. But, through the genius of the Poet of America this tavern has since become "the Wayside Inn, the most widely known and deeply loved of all the old taverns in New England. . .

Sudbury was one of the first towns settled by our Puritan forbears, Rev. Edmund Browne, who named the place after the Suffolkshire home of his childhood, being among the passengers who sailed on "the good ship Confidence," April 24, 1638, and settled here in "the wilderness." The place, however, had rich natural advantages, and these lusty young men from Old England were soon prosperous as a result of their choice of a home.

John Howe was among the first in the settlement to be admitted a freeman. In England he had been a glover, but, there being slight demand for gloves in new towns of the seventeenth century, he turned his attention to the trade of tavern-keeper. Very early, therefore, we find a How keeping a tavern. Longfellow, in accounting to an English friend for the coat of arms and justice authority with which his Landlord Howe is endowed said (Dec. 28, 1863) "Some two hundred years ago an English family by the name of Howe built in Sudbury a country house, which has remained in the family down to the present time. . . . Losing their fortunes, they became innkeepers, and for a century the Red Horse had flourished, going down from father to son."

Adam Howe was the antiquarian of the family and he spent a great deal of time tracing the family line back to the nobility of England. Apart from this, however, he did little to add to the lustre of the name. He kept the inn until 1830, when he was succeeded by his son, Lyman, whom Longfellow thus describes:

Proud was he of his name and race,
Of old Sir William and Sir Hugh,
And in the parlor, full in view,
His coat-of-arms, well-framed and glazed,
Upon the wall in colors blazed;
He beareth gules upon his shield,
An chevron argent in the field,
With three wolf's heads, and for the crest
A Wyvern part-per-pale addressed
Upon a helmet barred; below
The scroll reads, "By the name of Howe."

It is with this Landlord Howe that the 'Tales" are bound up.—From "Little Pilgrimages Among Old New England Inns," by Mary Caroline Crawford.

Canada to Employ 15,000 Census-Takers Next Year

Preparations are being made for taking another decennial census in Canada. Credit for taking the first modern and scientific census is claimed by Canada. This was taken of the Colony of New France in Canada in 1666, says 'Canada Week by Week." It was a systematic "nominal" enumeration of the people, taken on what was known as the de jure principle, of a fixed date, showing age, sex, occupation and conjugal and family condition. That census recorded 3,215 persons.

The census to be taken in Canada next year will give employment to 15,-000 persons, or about five times as many as the entire population of Canada when the first census was taken.

German Inventor Claims Damages

Is Suing the Ministry of Defence for Sum of $2,500,000

Berlin.—Freidrich Wilhelm Goebel, known as the originator of the military tank, has demanded 10,000,000 marks ($2,500,000) damages from the German Ministry of Defence. Now aged and enduring privation, Goebel bases his claim on the failure of the German military authorities to hay him any compensation for what is said to have been the first tank in history.

His story is perhaps similar to the tragedies of many inventors, but Goebel's statement that the Kaiser's war chiefs failed to recognize the importance of the tank lends his tale particular poignancy.

In 1913 Goebel, descendant of a long line of inventors, first exhibited his tank in the Berlin stadium, where it firmly caterpillared up a 50 per cent. grade amid the applause of high imperial officers.

"The officers clapped their approval," Herr Goebel said, "as though I were a vaudeville artist. I shouted at them, 'Gentlemen, this is no toy; you see before you a terrible weapon, which will decide the outcome of the next war."

"They smiled at me, but I told them that the future would demonstrate whether their smiles or my assurance were justified. My model tank was exhibited in the courtyard of the Reichstag throughout the war. It grew rusty, and Germany lost the war."

Goebel is now an old man, his shoulders stooped, his hands gnarled and his voice betraying a slight tremor as he enunciates his plea of injustice.

"I've suffered 16 years of indescribable privation because I wanted to save the Fatherland," he declared in a letter to the Minister of Defence, Gen. Wilhelm Croener. For the last 12 years I've been demanding a square deal from the Ministry of Defence. Although the Reichstag has thrice expressed its wish that I receive proper remuneration, the Ministry of Defence has not shown me this scant consideration."

The tank is merely one among a long list of Goebel's inventions, ranging over the field of aviation, shipping, electricity and warfare. An electric bulb glows in front of the house of one of Goebel's ancestors, also named Goebel, and, according to German historians, the man who invented the electric light before Edison. Even Goebel's enemies concede that he refused offers to manufacture his war machine for foreign armies, because he wanted Germany to have the benefit of his inventive ideas.

THE UPWARD CLIMB

Not all ascents are followed by descents. Some mountains have only one side. "The road continued up, up," writes a traveller in Persia, "the gorge became narrower until we could cross it by a short bridge, and then wound from ridge to ridge across the top of the mountain. The view was grand. As far as the eye could see were the crests of the mountains; between, the beginning of valleys and river courses. There were so few trees that the whole configuration was spread out before us. Finally the horses began to go a little easier, and we knew we were over the top, but there was no going down on the other side of the mountain. Before us stretched out a wide, almost level plain, sloping away very gently from the crest we had crossed. In 60 miles we had ascended 4,500 feet, but in the next 170 miles did not descend 700 feet. It gives one a queer sensation after spending so much time climbing a mountain not to go down the other side." This is life. The heights which we scale we keep. Life is not meant to be up and down. It is meant to be up and up; and beyond the steep ascent lie the tablelands of God.

National Broadcasting

Quebec Soleil (Lib.). There can be no doubt that the vast majority of Canadians are in favor of the control of broadcasting by the State. Having regard to this opinion of the general public and the conclusion of the Aird Commission, the Government will pass a law this year putting to an end the anarchy which at present reigns in the realm of broadcasting. This will give pleasure to some hundreds of thousands of owners of radios, who have had quite enough of the present medley of noises.

Scarlet-Fever Epidemic

Scarlet Fever is increasing in this district and the real cause of this spreading of the disease is the carelessness of parents who do not take the precaution to have a physician and keep their children in quarantine. Fortunately it is a mild type, but that does not lessen the danger of the complication that may follow an attack, and it is up to parents to be very careful to watch the health of the child and on the slightest evidence of illness to have a physician call and examine them.

How the L. C. A. Educates

The following, from an exchange, is not an uncommon occurrance these days, and is further evidence of how the L. C. A. is educating the people and promoting temperance:—Antonio Beteston, of Milton Heights, invited four fellow-countrymen to a party in the room in a house in Milton Heights one day last month. The sole program of the party he declared in his evidence was drinking rum—a favorite brand. The five then consumed four quart bottles of rum between after dinner and eleven o'clock at night. They went home feeling good—and drunk. Last Thursday, after the stories of the five of them had been told with singular uniformity, in Police Court at Milton before Magistrate Moore, Beteston was fined $25 00 and costs for permitting drunkenness in his room. The officers were quite convinced that Beteston did not supply his $10.00 worth of rum for nothing, but were unable to adduce sufficient evidence to prove it.

An Honest Policeman

Notwithstanding the revealed corruption and dishonesty of Ottawa civic and government officials, it is refreshing to receive evidence of the outstanding honesty of the Ottawa police force. Last Friday a Winchester lady was unfortunate enough to lose her hand bag containing a fair sum of money and a cheque made payable to her husband for a good amount. She dropped the bag when getting into the car, and did not miss it until about to leave the city. Returning to the place where she thought she had dropped it, it couldn't be found and no evidence of it. The lady returned home feeling very much depressed over her loss, and with little hope of recovering the money. Imagine her joy and surprise when two days later she received word from the Ottawa Police Dept. that her bag had been picked up by a policeman on patrol, and handed in to the Chief to be returned to its owner. Fortunately there were papers in the bag that showed who its owner was. The evidence of honesty and uprightness on the part of the policeman was almost as much satisfaction to the good lady and her husband as was the recovery of the bag and money.

The United Church

(Contributed)

Rev. C. H. Brown in his interesting talk to the boys and girls on Sunday morning illustrated how the first time you do something it is easy to break away, the second time not so easy and when the habit is formed, we need God's help to free us. From John 15:5, he gave an earnest and helpful message saying:—"We are living in a wonderful day in a wonderful land." He referred to the Laurentian Mountain Range which geogolists tells us is the oldest and richest part of the world, also the Rockies—the finest range of mountains with the best scenery in the whole world. He also spoke of the great engineering accomplishment in the Quebec bridge, but the most wonderful of all God's creation is man made in the image of God. The greatest man is he who keeps in close fellowship with God, and allows the power of God to work through him. God has placed within the reach of all the life-giving vine. There is work for the branches in the life-stream of God. "Without Me, ye can do nothing, but linked up with God, all things are possible."

At the evening service, Rev. R. E Newman gave a splendid message from Kings I., 21;2 on "The Value of the Christian Church in the Community." He emphatically showed the Church to be invaiuable saying that all are debtors to it, asking:, "What is it worth to you that Jesus died that you might live? "Our great need to-dav is God touched men," said he. We are unable in any way to give in return for what God has given us. The choir sang "Let God Arise," and "Lord God, We Worship Thee." "Despised and Rejected," was well sung as a duet by Mrs. P. Durant and Mr. C. B. Timmins.

BODIES by FISHER

Complete with every modern comfort and convenience feature

TODAY, "Body by Fisher" denotes the world's standard of quality in automobile coachcraft. And among all cars in the lowest price field . . Fisher Bodies are exclusive on the new Chevrolet Six.

That is the reason for Chevrolet's outstanding beauty . . for the graceful fleetness expressed in its long, low lines . . the instant impression of luxury conveyed by no other car near its price.

In the appointment of Chevrolet's roomier interiors, no refinement which could conceivably add to beauty, comfort or convenience has been omitted. In the sedan, for instance, are found satin-covered assist cords, arm rests, decorative door panels and attractive smoking sets. Draft-proof piping in all closed models seals the seams where doors and body meet, Seats are wider and deeply-cushioned, with form-fitting backs.

Chevrolet brings striking beauty . . and more. It combines six-cylinder performance . . the smooth, quiet power which nothing less than a six can give . . with low initial cost and exceptional economy. With all its advanced features, that ensure safety, handling ease and riding comfort, the Chevrolet Six is available at new extremely low prices. More than ever before is its matchless dollar-for-dollar value apparent. See the new Chevrolet Six today . . drive it yourself. And ask about the attractive G.M.A.C. Deferred Payment Plan.
