You'll Skate Faster and with Greater Comfort in a

C.C.M.

Skate & Shoe Outfit and there are no better values.

From $2.75 Up.

The best boosters for C.C.M. Skate and Shoe Outfits are those who have worn C.C.M.'s for a season or two, and then tried some other outfit. They are always glad to come back to C.C.M.'s. They know, by their own experience, that for speed and comfort there is nothing to equal a C.C.M. Outfit. C.C.M. Skates give you more speed because they are designed for more speed. They have the right ice lay. The heel and sole plates are the correct height to give you perfect balance. The steels for the blades are milled to C.C.M.'s own specifications, and heat-treated by C.C.M.'s own process to get the correct temper for speed, as well as for strength, and also to enable the blades to take and hold a keen edge.

C.C.M. Shoes are made on lasts different from any other skating shoes. They are shaped to give you a better fit at the top, around the heel, across the toes and under the arch. In other words, comfort is shaped and built into them.

Because of the big demands for C.C.M. skate and shoe outfits, C.C.M. is able to give outstanding values. And in judging values, remember that it is the hidden qualities in steel and leather, in workmanship and design, that really make C.C.M. outfits worth more than ordinary skates & shoes.

MR. HARRY WINSTANLEY

Seldom has a death caused expressions of more general regret throughout this community, than has the sudden passing of Mr. Harry Winstanley, who, as briefly announced in The Morrisburg Leader last week, was stricken with a heart attack while actively engaged on the farm of Mr. M.J. Casselman, Riverside, on Friday Dec. 7th, looking over some timber to be used in the construction of the local dock.

Recognized as one of the outstanding contractors in Eastern Ontario, specializing in cement work, he came into contact not only with some of the leading builders of the Province, but his services as superintendent were ever sought when the Government undertook any public work in this district. It was while engaged in this capacity as superintendent for the Government, at the building of the new dock, that the deceased was suddenly taken ill.

Mr. Winstanley was born in London, England, on Sept. 15th, 1870, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Winstanley. He received his preliminary education in his native city, and when about twenty years of age, he immigrated to Canada, locating in Ottawa, where he spent his first ten years in this country. The laying of the first cement walks years ago in Morrisburg, brought the deceased contractor to town, to become a permanent resident. For many years Mr. Winstanley was employed as inspector by the Government, in the building of macadam roads and bridges, as well as participating in many other individual contracts.

In 1912, he was united in marriage to Mrs. Lydia Weegar, of Morrisburg, who survives. He is also survived by one sister, Mrs. Annie Parry, Stockport, England.

The funeral, attended by a very large number of relatives and friends was held on Monday, to St. James Anglican Church, Rev. Holmes, Rev. Fraser Weegar and Rev. Jenkins Burkholder conducting the services. The Masonic service, under the auspices of Excelsior Lodge No. 142, A.F. and A.M., usually held at the grave, was also held in the church, due to the extremely cold weather.

Interment was made in the family plot in Mount Pleasant cemetery.

MRS. J. S. GOODFELLOW

Mrs. J.S. Goodfellow, who in September last underwent a critical operation at the Toronto General Hospital, died at her residence, Morrisburg, on Sunday evening, December 9th.

Deceased, whose maiden name was Lillian Smith, daughter of the late Rev .Frederick and Mrs. Smith, of Bradford, Ont., was born in Amherstburg, Ont., in 1874, where she resided until she was nine years of age, when she moved with her parents to Markham, Ont. Seven years later, the late Rev. Frederick and Mrs. Smith returned to Bradford, and deceased, who resided with her parents, was united in marriage to Dr. J.S. Goodfellow, who at that time practised his profession in Alburgh, Vermont. Mrs. Goodfellow resided with her husband in Alburgh until 1916, when they moved to Morrisburg, where they have since resided.

A noble woman, possessed of the cultured attributes of her sex, a perfect lady at all times, having rare executive ability, she will be missed in the community, and particularly in social and church work, having held the offices of corresponding secretary of the Brockville Presbyterial, Glad Tidings secretary of Knox auxiliary, W.M.S.; leader of the choir; a teacher in the Sabbath school, a former treasurer of the Ladies' Aid Society, and other offices in Knox Church.

She is survived by her husband, Dr. J.S. Goodfellow; one daughter, Miss Marjorie Goodfellow, R.N., a graduate of St. John's Hospital, Toronto; one sister, Mrs. Duncanson, of town; and two brothers, Mr. B.F. Smith of Winchetser, and Mr. W.R. Smith, Travers City, Mich.

The funeral was held on Tuesday at her late home, where the service was conducted by Rev. Jenkins Burkholder. Interment was made in Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

Many beautiful floral offerings were received from friends and the various organizations to which Mrs. Goodfelow belonged.

ONTARIO FORMING NEW HEALTH UNIT

Hon. Dr. J.A. Faulkner, Ontario Minister of Health, has announced immediate formation of the Province's first rural health unit, including the counties of Stormont, Glengarry, Prescott and Russell. A $33,000 grant has been made from the Rockefeller Foundation for use in the next five years, and under the legislation of the 1933 session, a full-time staff will be named to develop the health unit.

The administrative officer and his nursing staff of five will conduct health administration and education, sanitation, public health nursing and control of communicable diseases. At present, 2,000 children in the four muncipalities have received dental attention, and 100 per cent. have received immunization from diphtheria.

Plans call for the municipalities contributing two-thirds and the Ontario Government one-third of the cost. The international health division of the Rockefeller Foundation endorsed the scheme, and the first payment of the grant will be $9,000.

When the $33,000 five-year grant ends, the counties and the Government will bear the full cost, although Government assistance will be gradually reduced with the counties taking over the increased share.

Approximately 90,000 persons live in the four counties, sufficientt to provide the health department with records of various ailments. Dr. Faulkner said in explaining, that it was an experiment in public health study. Two years ago, a survey was started by physicians and nurses of the Department in Eastern Ontario. At present, the Border Cities maintain the only other health unit in the Province.

DOCK IN WRONG LOCATION

Rumor is rife on Main Street, and business men are discussing the Government Dock situation in Morrisburg and district. It is hoped that the plans will be changed to the Third Easterly Crib, straight into shore, onto No. 2 Highway on the point of Block L, east of Farlinger Street.

The public at large in Morrisburg approves this location, for it will give Morrisburg a beautiful harbour and the Customs Office facing Main Street. As it seems a very simple matter to have the contractor change operations to No. Three crib into shore, it is fervently hoped that the Federal Government will make the change, for the mutual benefit of all concerned in Morrisburg.

One of the most unfortunate points at crib No. two, which is the centre old crib, is that it is surrounded by shallow water and a narrow shipping lane—confusion and congestion will take place there, if and when it can be used. The town being whole-heartedly in support of the crib No. three site, which is the farthest crib easterly to Block L point above Water Street to Main Street on No. 2 highway, a change would be enthusiastically accepted as a compliment from the Government to public opinion in Morrisburg.

MRS. H. M. OUDERKIRK

Mrs. H.M. Ouderkirk, who for the past two years had not been enjoying good health, was stricken with three paralytic strokes, following in quick succession on Wednesday, from the effects of which she failed to rally, gradually sinking until she passed away Thursday morning, Dec. 13th.

It had been the hope of relatives and friends, that tender and special care would restore to normal health, an esteemed citizen who, irrespective of race, religion or social standing, was ever ready to hold out a helping hand, and sympathize with the distressed, and to bring a ray of sunshine to her fellow citizens, but the struggle for recovery failed, and a real home-maker, a devoted mother whose chief ambition had been to educate and train her children, passed to her eternal reward.

The deceased, whose maiden name was Clarissa Martha Weegar, daughter of the late Ira and Elizabeth Weegar of Elma, was born at Elma on April 4th, 1871, where she resided until her marriage to Mr. Harvey M. Ouderkirk of Athens, in 1896. She then lived with her husband in Athens for about six months, when they moved to Williamsburg. After residing in Williamsburg for 17 years, Mr. and Mrs. Ouderkirk moved to Cardinal, where they engaged in hotel business for four years, after which they became permanent residents of Morrisburg, having purchased the "Windsor", an hotel which has since become one of the most popular in this district, and the success of which to this day was undoubtedly due to the united efforts of an affectionate, untiring union.

Mrs. Ouderkirk is survived by her husband; one son, Percy; two daughters, Miss Anne Ouderkirk and Mrs. Wm. McGannon, and one grandchild, Beverly Ann McGannon, all of Morrisburg; one sister, Mrs. Celia Lawrence of Massena, N.Y.; three brothers, Mr. Darwin T. Weegar of Aultsville, Mr. Ira S. Weegar of Elma, and Dr. Percy Weegar of Buffalo, N.Y.

The funeral will be held on Saturday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock, at her late residence on Lock Street. The service will be conducted by her pastor, Rev. Jenkins Burkholder. Following the service, the remains wil lbe conveyed to Williamsburg, will be conveyed to Williamsburg.

Beautiful floral tributes have been offered by her many friends, as silent tokens of the high esteem in which Mrs. Ouderkirk was held.

The late Mrs. Ouderkirk for several years has held the office of past noble grand of Daisy Rebekah Lodge, Morrisburg, and also of the Cardinal Lodge.

FAR-SIGHTED

From Rimbey, Alta., comes a report of a local agent who has sold 18 pianos in the district this Fall. That is a great uplift to the poultry business too, as 18 piano boxes would mean 18 good chicken coops.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

CAR THEFTS IN TORONTO

The Ottawa Journal reports 504 motor cars stolen in that city in two years, and all but two of them recovered.

The Toronto record is 2,842 in two years, which, in a city with five times Ottawa's population and seven times it motor registration, may be regarded as a fairly comparable figure. In Toronto 51 of the cars were still missing when the chief constable's report was issued in the following year, but some have doubtless been recovered since that time.

In a large city it is much more difficult to trace automobiles when they disappear, and probably a larger percentage are stolen "for keeps" as distinct from those which are merely appropriated for joy ries.—Toronto Star.

A DANISH PAPER

There is a romance in printing a newspaper—whether it be a metropolitan daily or a small rural weekly—that captures the imagination of most everybody. And throughout the world there are ventures being lived, even today, in newspaper publishing.

One of these is on a farm near Kentville, Nova Scotia, where an enterprising Danish-American, Mr. Odin Kuntze, prints the bi-monthly "Danske Herold." He has a linotype machine and a flat--bed press and a few racks of type, and with this modest equipment, plus a maximum of ingenuity, he issues his neat eight-page publication, full of Canada-wide Danish news sent in by a small army of correspondents, and tastefully brightened by illustrations. The subscription list, and this is an excellent indication of the value of "Danske Herold," is not only Canadian but it also extends to Denmark, where the paper enjoys great popularity among the "home folks" whose sons and daughters have settled in a new land.

His readers find it a source of pleasure and instruction, and there is no doubt that the paper makes a genuine contribution to Danish life in Canada. — Winnipeg Free Press.

ARMIES AND ARMAMENT

The building of armaments is a provocation of war, not because artillery provokes an irresponsible urge in the breasts of peaceful burghers to blow up bridges and knock down church steeples, but because these inanimate things require an army to operate them, and if an army is to be any good you must love it.—Hamilton Herald.

A NEW HONOR?

Earl Willingdon, it is reported, is to be made a Knight of the Garter. The fine service rendered by this former Governor General of Canada as Viceroy of India during an exceedingly difficult period fully entitles him to this honor.—Brockville Recorder.

THE AIR-MAIL

A London correspondent of The Ottawa Journal has some significant comment on air-mail development in the British Isles. Such is the growing volume of business mails now being carried by air between London and Glasgow, he writes, that it is merely a question of time before a regular direct service is instituted.

The present service, which delivers le ters at one end one the evening of the same day that they are airmailed from the other, is not a direct line, but takes a zig-zag route to serve other cities, but he is told that "our postal experts regard the business between London and Glasgow, which are after all the first and second cities of the Kingdom, if not of the Empire, as amply justifying a direct individual service."

And these observations apply with equal force to this country. The basis of commercial aerial development in Canada must be the air-mail; and as soon as the state of the public finances permit, air-mail services will undoubtedly be established on an extensive scale.—Halifax Herald.

TOUGH FOR THE FISH

We read of a naturalist who has discovered fish that live on land. It seems foolhardy, considering that experienced farmers can hardly do it. —Regina Leader-Post.

RISING INCOME

There is great cause for satisfaction in certain New York figures released recently and having to do with the income of the American people. Leading trade analysts, it is stated, place the 1934 income at around $9,000,000,000 more than last year. In 1929 the national income was estimated at $86,106,000,000. The depressiion starting late that year, pulled the total down in rapid fashion. In 1933 it was believed to have been reduced to approximately $49,560,000,000. — Border Cities Star.

TAX ON PYJAMAS

We are reliably informed by one of them that farmers do not wear pyjamas, and along with this news comes the suggestion that city fellers should pay a stiff tax for doing so.

This may be meant as another "nuisance" tax on the rich.

As an Algoma man is behind the idea, this column is for it, or for anything else that will irritate the social strata who have forsaken the good old nightshirt which is also an outgrowth of an effort to achieve culture as we gather from the experts

Why should anybody effect the modern gewgaws that the sissy magazines flaunt in our faces in a variety of gaudy patterns?? Should any man put on extra style merely to hit the hay? For science tells us (and what science doesn't think it knows can be put in your left eye), that the normal man shifts every few minutes when he is asleep, thus revealing that the nocturnal fight with the bed clothes is a sign of a good day's work.

Whether a man retires as a squirrel does, without brushing his teeth or doing his daily half dozen, or sleeps in his clothes like an occasional lumberjack, there seems to be no real excuse for pyjama making except as a relief measure.

As for the reasonable needs of the women folks, we refrain from expressing any view. — Sault Ste. Marie Star.

RECKLESS DRIVERS

Men who never lost sight of safety when at work become careless and reckless when they get behind the wheel of a car. Men who would never think of taking a chance in handling a piece of factory machinery will try to save five minutes on the drive home by cutting corners, passing on curves and at intersections, or doing one of the many other things which cause our annual automobile death toll to increase.—Chatham News.

A MUSEUM FOR FAKES

The British Museum authorities are understood to be considering the establishment of a museum of forgeries. We hope that they may see their way to create such a collection, as it would be of undoubted interest and value to the public, and would act as a deterrent to the forger, who has in many instances made large sums out of clever impostures.—London Daily Mail.

178 KILLED IN ONE WEEK

The sharp rise in the graph of fatal road accidents in Great Britain is as puzzling as it is disquieting. During the week ended on Saturday, 178 people were killed or died from their injuries—a total which is only two below that for the first week in July, the worst return since these records were first introduced in March. A relatively heavy death-rate in midsummer can be understood if it cannot be excused. But what are we to say about equally grim returns at the beginning of November, when a large number of cars have been withdrawn from the roads?—Glasgow Herald.

SAVE THESE MOTHERS

In the last ten years science has advanced at all points, but the most important point of all; while the birth-rate has fallen the toll of mothers' lives has increased. Life-saving in most other fields of human activity has become a national concern but mothers have been allowed to die unheeded except by those who mourn them. For a great majority of these deaths sheer neglect alone is responsible—neglect to take advantage of modern methods, to seek new methods, to dispel ignorance and superstition, to ensure proper pre-natal care, to warn mothers againstt improper feeding and other dangers.—Manchester Sunday.

EMPIRE FREE TRADE

We are the happiest nation in the world. In this country there is work for many, as the rising figures of employment tell. We require to advance the movement so that there is work for all. We enjoy a peaceful form of government. There is need for dispersing such elements of disturbance as exist in our politics. When men are busy at work they have no mind for trouble. The rapid development of Empire trade is opening up new prospects of business and employment. We must accelerate that development. It is the only way to prosperity.

Finish Of World's Greatest Air Race

Here are the first pictures to be received of the finish of the London to Melbourne air race in which two British fliers won with a margin of days over speed fliers from many other countries in the sensational time of less than three days. In the upper picture the winning plane is seen being run into a hangar. The lower picture shows Sir Macpherson Robertson, the donor of the prizes, congratulating C. W. A. Scott and his co-pilot, T. DRESSY MAYORS

Bulgaria Insists Mayors Be Fashion Plates on $35 to $100 a Month.

One of the chief ideals of the new Government is to find ways in which the village masses may profit from the knowledge and ability of the educated people. And one of these ways is held to be the appointment of university graduates only to the posts of village mayors.

Hitherto the mayor has been a local celebrity. He, the priest, and the teacher were the ruling triumvirate. In many cases the mayor was neither educated nor cultured. He sometimes ruled as a local despot.

The new Government however has set out to regenerate peasant life. It has decreed, also, that the mayors should be lawyers. And in addition to performing their administrative work they are to serve as judges.

Their salaries also have been fixed. In communitis of less than 50 inhabitants they will receive $35 a month and in the larger villages $40. City mayors are to receive as high as $100 monthly.

The plan is that the mayor is to be a village father. He is to be a teacher and missionary. His family is to serve as an example to all.

But opponents of the scheme cannot imagine white collared lawyers doing all this for $35 a month!

HIGH TANKS AND QUAKES

The Building of Water Towers a Subject for Research

When an earthquake rocked Long Beach, Calif., last year, elevated water tanks were damaged, some so badly that they had to be taken down. Parts of the city were dry. Here we have the inspiration for the studies that A. C. Ruge is making at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology to discover how water tanks should be built.

The first thing that Ruge does is to make a scale model. A. 60,000 gallon tank about twenty feet in diameter and weighing half a million pounds becomes a miniature imitation five inches in diameter, weighing five pounds, and holding two and a half quarts. The slowest artificial quake that can be produced shakes such a model much too rapidly. Ruge allows for that. The artificial quakes are produced by shaking a table on which the model is mounted. All the motions are magnified and photographed.

What do the records show? Water tanks are not built to resist earthquakes. Paradoxically enough, moderate strengthening does more harm than good.

All that is usually expected of a water tower is resistance to wind pressure and strength enough to carry the load of water. This is good enough in regions where earthquakes are unknown. In shaky regions of the earth another type must be designed. What this is Ruge has still to discover.

NEW CIRCUIT BREAKER

Speed and Economy Claimed For Power Line Device

Unusual features are embodied in a new high voltage, large capacity oil circuit breaker for electric power lines. Radically different in design, each single-pole unit of the new breaker is shaped like a cross in contrast to the tank-like construction of conventional equipment. Among the claims offered for the new equipment, which was developed by the General Electric Company, are higher breaking speeds and short arckink times and the use of very little oil.

Only ninety-six gallons of oil per pole are stated to be required by a breaker with an interrupting rating of 1,500,000 kilovolt amperes, at 138 kilovolts, compared with about 1,700 gallons per pole for a conventional breaker of an equivalent interrupting rating.

NEW TYPE OF CONTAINERS.

Horizontal containers, not much larger than conventional bushings, enclose the interrupting mechanisms. These containers are mounted on vertical central supports which, in addition to serving in an insulating capacity, also house current transformers when such equipment is required.

The operating mechanism is located in the base of each single-pole unit, and an insulated operating rod passes up through the central support to the container.

The interrupting elements consist of several sets of contacts in a line, and the inside of each container is so arranged that oil driven by a piston, is positively directed across the arc path of each of the several arc breaks per pole during circuit interruption.

British Generals Of 1917 Criticized By Lloyd George

London—Mr. David Lloyd George, Britain's chief "elder statesman," has followed up recent sharp criticisms of his late naval and civil colleagues with an equally outspoken indictment of British generals, in the latest volume of his lively "War Memoirs."

Mr. Lloyd George finds in particular that the whole series of military operations which were continued for a number of months in 1917 in the quagmires of Passchendaele in France were "one of the blackest horrors in history."

He supports this allegation with voluminous extracts from official records. He brings forward also personal evidence so detailed and so well documented as to be caulculated to keep official apologists busy for a generation endeavoring to disprove his thesis.

"It is," Mr. Lloyd George says, "one of the bitterest ironies of war that I who have been ruthlessly assailed in books, in the press and in speeches for 'interfering with the soldiers' should carry with me as my most painful regret the memory that on this issue I did not justify that charge."

It is thought in some circles here that nothing is to be gained by recalling such grim events as those to which Mr. Lloyd George refers. On the other hand the view is also widely held that such light as he is now endeavoring to supply may help prevent the recurrence of such happenings.

Mr. Lloyd George thus has warm supporters as well as fierce assailants in the controvery he has started.

METHOD SOUGHT TO KEEP DANUBE OPEN ALL WINTER

Soviet Plan of Keeping Rivers Free of Ice to Be Studied

GALATZ, Roumania—Efforts are to be made to maintain freight traffic all winter on the Danube River, between Vienna and the Black Sea, according to a decision of the International Danube Committee at its sitting here.

Since the realization of this plan requires that a track be kept free from ice, traffic experts are to be sent to the Soviet Republic to study the methods used by the Russians for keeping their navigable rivers open in the winter.

The movement of freight up and down the Danube is much cheaper than shipping it by train and no less than six states profit from this waterway, but for several months each year traffic is stopped by the ice.

It is realized that great difficulties have to be faced in undertaking the scheme to keep the river open because usually the river does not freeze over solidly, but is covered with large quantities of loose ice floating rapidly down stream. It is not easy to see how ice breakers can keep a channel open under such conditions and ordinary freight boat cannot long withstand the strain of this floating ice.

If this attempt at defying winter here does succeed, it will greatly facilitate trade in southeast Europe.

King John's Treasure May be Buried in Castle Grounds

History books telling how King John's treasure was lost in the Wash may soon have to be rewritten.

Documents have been found in ancient Rockingham Castle revealing that the crown and jewels were hidden at Rockingham Castle, then a royal residence.

It was from Rockingham Castle that John set out on the journey which took him across the Wash. The documents, which are in code, have been decphered and point to the actual part of the grounds where the treasure lies buried.

The Rev. O. R. Plant, rector of Rockingham, told the reporter these facts. With the consent and assisance of Lady Seymour, mother of Sir Michael Culme-Seymour, owner of the castle, he has for several months been making investigations in the castle.

ANCIENT TUNNEL

"I had always thought it unlikely that the king would have taken his crown and jewels with him on a dangerous journey," said Mr. Plant.

"Besides these documents I found the blocked-up entrance to an old tunnel, where, I believe, is hidden a great deal of gold and silver plate and coin which disappeared from the castle chapel about the same time as the treasure.

"I could open that tunnel in ten minutes if I had Sir Michael's permission. He is now in Canada.

"The tunnel appears to lead from inside the castle right down to the village.

"I feel sure that besides King John's treasure will be found the original Magna Carta . . . It was drafted at Rockingham, and the king had it with him here."

OUTSIDERS BARRED

The rector said it was unlikely that further researches will be made until Sir Michael Culme-Seymour, who is acting as aide-de-camp to Lord Bessborough returns to England next June.

"He will almost certainly wish to be present when such historical finds take place on his own lands," said Mr. Plant.

"If permission is given to dig before Sir Michael returns, we shall wait until public interest has died down. We shall employ no workmen or outsiders. Only myself, Lady Seymour, and some friends will take part in the work, and it will be done in the greatest secrecy."

Toll of Preventable Diseases

(Brantford Expositor)

Every year thousands of Canadians die for diseases which could be prevented. The Canadian Social Hygiene Council is authority for the statement that on a average one person in three thus dies ahead of his time, and an analysis of Ontario statistics would indicate that the average for this province is even higher, with 34 per cent. of deaths postponable. Again, it is contended that from two to three per cent. of the population of the population of Canada is continuously on the sick list and that more than half of all disabling sickness could be prevented.

WAS CONSTIPATED FOR THIRTY YEARS

Woman's Long Search For a Remedy

The trouble with most remedies for constipation, as this woman found, is that they give only temporary relief. Having at last found a permanent corrective, she writes to tell us about it:—

"For upwards of 30 years I was a victim of acute constipation. I tried practically everything that it was possible to try. I admit I was a chronic case, and every new remedy I tried helped for a day or two—after that I was just as bad as ever. Three months ago I took my first taste of Kruschen Salts, and every morning since, and every morning as long as I live, my first duty upon arising is my Kruschen. I honestly feel a different woman. My bowels act to the clock, and my friends remark how well I am looking. My only regret is that I didn't try Kruschen years ago."—(Mrs.) A. M.

Kruschen Salts is Nature's recipe for maintaining a condition of internal cleanliness. The six salts in Kruschen stimulate your internal organs to smooth, regular action. Your system is thus kept clean of those impurities which, allowed to accumulate, lower the whole tone of the system.

Explaining The War Debt Issue

(By Irving Brant in St. Louis Star and Tifes).

Q.—What are the War Debts?

A.—Debts owed to the United States government by our Allies in the World War, for loans made to them during and after the War.

Q.—How much were the total loans?

A.—$10,350,000,000.

Q.—How much was loaned before the armistice?

A.—$7,000,000,000.

Q.—How was the money sent to Europe?

A.—The money was not sent to Europe. It was paid to American manufacturers, farmers and other business men by a Committee of the American Ward Industries Board.

Q.—What for?

A.—Munitions of war, food, cotton and other supplies sent to our Allies; transportation, shipping interest.

Q.—How much was loaned after the armistice.

A.—$2,500,000,000 in relief supplies.

A.—It was not sent to Europe. It was practically all spent in the United States for the purchase of war supplies, cereals and cotton sent to our Allies.

Q.—Why were these loans made to the Allied Powers after the armistice?

A.—The principal reason given by the Secretary of the Treasury was that these loans would enable American business men to complete their war-time contracts with the Allied Powers. If these war-time contracts were suddenly cancelled, he said, it would have an injurious effect upon American business.

Q.—How much of the total loan has been repaid?

A.—Approximately one billion of the principal and two billion in interest.

A.—About $11,500,000,000.

Q.—How can that be? It was less th... that in the first place.

A.—For several years no interest was paid. Part of the accrued interest was added to tht debt.

A.—No. There have been two cancellations of interest.

Q.—Why was that done?

A.—The original rate was 5 per cent. Congress concludtd that was pretty high, so it authorized the Treasury to figure accrued interest at 4½ per cent., the same as on our Liberty bonds. That cancelled part of the back interest. Later, when funding agreements were made with the different nations owing money to us, interest was figured at a lower rate still. Great Britain's average interest over sixty-two years is 3.3 per cent., so in the case of the British debt the United States canceled the difference between 5 per cent. and 3.3 per cent. In the case of France we canceled the difference between 5 per cent. and 1.6 per cent. In the case of Italy we canceled all but four-tenths of one per cent interest.

Q. — Why was there such a difference?

A.—It was based upon a supposed difference in ability to pay.

Q.—Why should England pay 3.3 per cent. while France pays only 1.6 per cent.?

A.—Because England was looked upon as a wealthy, powerful nation, while French was poor and struggling.

Q.—How much does England owe?

A.—$4,300,000,000.

Q.—How much gold has England?

A.—$800,000,000.

Q.—How much does France owe?

A.—$3,800,000,000.

Q.—How much gold has France?

A.—$3,400,000,000.

Q.—Then is France really a poorer and more struggling nation than England?

A.—Not poorer, but more struggling. France struggles much harder to keep her gold.

Q.—With all that gold, why did France refuse to pay the $19,999,999 instalment of December, 1932?

A.—Because Germany had stopped paying reparations.

Q.—What did that have to do with it?

A.—The French people had expected to pay the debt with money obtained from Germany.

Q.—Where did Germany get the money?

A.—Germany borrowed it from the United States.

Q.—So the United States loaned money to Germany with which to pay France so that France could use it to pay the United States?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Then the United States hasn't collected a cent?

A.—Not a cent. We have merely loaned the money with which we have been repaid.

Q.—Why did Germany quit paying reparations?

A.—Because tht United States quit loaning money to her.

Q.—Then the war-debt payments have stopped in reality because we have stopped loaning our debtors the money with which to repay us?

A.—Exactly.

Fly 600 Tons To Aid Mine

Two Freight Planes Carry Heavy Machinery Over Andean Heights

In June 1933, the Compania Exploradora Cotabambas turned over to the Pan American Grace Airways Inc., the job of transporting from Cuzco, the railhead of the Southern Railway of Peru, to its mine site at Huanaco-Cuzco some fifty-five tons of machinery for a complete hydro-electric installation to develop 1,500 horsepower, consisting of water wheels generators, switchboards and transformers.

This year the total load to be transported by airplane will be in the neighborhood of 600 tons. The machinery consists of an addition to the hydroelectric power plant of 750 horsepower; and a complete milling, amalgamating and cyaniding gold plant to treat 150 tons of ore every twenty-four hours. The primary crushing will be made by jaw crushers, secondary milling by falling stamps of 2,200 pounds weight each.

A normal trip from Cuzco to the mine by mule back requires from ten days to three weeks. The airport at Cuzco is at an altitude of 10,900 feet and the field at Huana-copampa is about 12,500 feet above sea level. The plane has to fly over an intervening mountain range 15,000 feet high.

The mine itself is located on the western side of the Rio Santo Tomas which flows from a southerly direction through the Apurimac Valley.

The plane selected for this work is a tri-motored Ford, similar to the ones used in regular scheduled passenger operation of Panagra and converted to a cargo plane. A hatch nine and three quarter feet long and four and one half feet wide was cut in on the top of the fuselage for loading. The interior was fitted with a small trolley on rails and connected to a hand winch in order to place the cargo in proper relation to the centre of gravity. Tests were made at Las Palmas airport, Lima, to prove that the plane could continue in level flight at 16,000 feet on only two motors.

In the course of the thirteen days an average of four flights per day was made. The transportation of the freight continued and some days as many as five round trips were made, and occasionally even six were made. Up to September 7th, 128 round trips had been accomplished in the twenty-nine days in which freight flying was done. The total weight of machinery transported amounts to almost 212 metric tons. The largest pieces carried weighed 1,983 kilos. The average load per trip was about 1,70 kilos. A Fairchild monoplane was sent to Cuzco as an auxiliary plane and has made eighteen round trips to Huanacopampa transporting a total weight of 11,-051 kilos.

To Speed Passenger Service

Pan American-Grace will probably announce its schedule this week for operation from the Canal Zone through Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Chile, across the Andes to Buenos Aires and Montevideo on the Atlantic side, with its four new Douglas liners

Meantime part of the fleet of the Fords capable of cruising at 115 to 120 miles per hour which the new craft will replace, will be used for local service and others for further transportation of heavy machinery to Andean points reached heretofore by the patient pack mule.

Flying Fur From The Canadian North Proves A Useful Mission For Planes

Fur worth thousands of dollars is flown each year from the far north of Manitoba. Frequently the airplanes bring out from the region early in the year skins which by any other means could not have reached the market till the following Autumn. Facts about this little-known branch of commercial aviation, contained in a bulletin issued by Canadian Airways, afford fresh proof of the benefits brought by air transport to the remote corners of the earth.

The fur-bearing territory lies far north of the mining areas, beyond the railway and the Churchill River; in area it is almost as great as the old Province of Manitoba. Since 1928, when the first air-borne consignments of furs moved south, each year has seen an increased use of the plane. Nowadays the majority of the chief fur trading companies transport bales of fur regularly from the trading posts to railhead, or even as far as Winnipeg, by air.

"The fluctuating condition of the fur markets," the reports says, "and the shortened period over which the fur trader has to finance his purchases, have been the most important factors in selling air transportation to the fur trader. Independent trappers working hundreds of miles from railhead or trading post found that after long months of Winter trapping, the 'open' season was too short for them to make the trip to the post by canoe and return to their trapping grounds before freeze-up. By breaking camp in April, adandoning their canoe and traveling by dog team it was possible for the trapper to spend a few weeks on the fringe of civilization before returning with an entirely new outfit and new canoe."

Planes which bring furs out from the region carry in loads of merchandise and supplies to the trading posts. Important officials of the trading companies make regular inspection tours by air. Last Winter, for example, one inspector visited posts in twenty-six flying days during a tour which would have taken two Winters on the ground.

Shoe Development Greatly Improved In Last Century

It Is Now Recognized That Health Begins From the Ground Up

Less than a hundred years ago the man behind the counter selling shoes to the suffering public did not even know the difference between the right shoe and the left shoe. It was a case of putting the best foot forward under a bad bargain. The fact of the matter remains, and it seems almost impossible to believe there was no difference as both shoes were made made on an identical last. With due respect to the cobblers of eighty-five years ago it seems their intelligence must have been at a rather low ebb. Nature has been careful to draw a distinct difference between the formation of the right and left foot and to allow any artisan to ignore the primary principles of anatomy appears to our modern culture nothing short of criminal.

Fortunately those "good old days" have gone and are now forgotten. Today an incorrectly fitting shoe is now worthless; it is recognized that our health begins from the ground up. If the delicate bones of the feet are badly placed in time they become dislocated and the tortures of the middle ages could not be more excruciating.

Short Shoe Folly

The short shoe is the swiftest route to foot misery and many a successful bunion owes its origin to the careless fitting of an ignorant shoe salesman. Further, it must be understood and recognized that the foot is actually quite a bit longer when standing and bearing the weight of the body. Measurements should be taken with the customer standing.

Length is not the only factor in this recipe for foot comfort, because the width is of vital importance and too wide or too narrow a shoe is the greatest hot bed for corns and other troubles of that kind.

The sources from which leather is garnered for the male footwear is not lacking in interest. From Argentina, Texas and Europe comes leather for soles, inner and outer, the counters, box toes, welting and heels. Various weights of leathers are cut from different parts of the hide. The choicest animals are found in Argentina; the next in quality are the hides of our own Canadian animals. Patent colt, cordovan and regular colt is not real leather, but a muscle located under the skin. Then comes buckskin from Brazil, China and Java, and kangaroo from New Zealand and Australia, kid hailing from Brazil, Indo-China, Spain and calfskin from the skins of calves in continental Europe, in Scandinavia and to some extent in America.

A Long Story

It is a long story this building up of footwear from the hoof to the pedal extremities of the human animal. Care must be taken first in the choice of the leather; its curing and tanning must be of the best to be had. Then the cut is a consideration and the various intricate finishings that call for both hand and machine work.

Never in the history of the human race has the foot received so much consideration as it does today and the study of its anatomy is the life long work of many a great orthopaedic scientist.

Are You Nervous, Weak?

MANY folks have thin, pale blood—they're weak, feel tired, logy and dull. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery increases the appetite, eliminates poisons from the intestines, stimulates the digestion, enriches the blood. Read what Mrs. Geo. Bushell of 364 Homewood Ave., Niagara Falls, Ont., says: "I could hardly see from nervous headaches, had pains in my back, and was so weak I was not able to do very much. I could not sleep, felt all tired out and was discouraged. Before I had finished one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery I felt stronger. When I had taken two bottles I was able to do all my housework—I felt like a new person." All druggists. New size, tablets 50 cts., liquid $1.00.

Bishop, Noted War Ace Learns To Fly Again

Montreal—The strange spectacle of one of the greatest of wartime fliers taking flying instruction to obtain a pilot's license was to be seen at the Montreal Light Airplane Club Field. Lieut. Col. W. A. Bishop, V. C., who accounted for seventy-two German planes while flying on the Western front, decided ,after spending twelve years on the ground, that it would be quicker to fly between Montreal and his home in Muskoka, Ont., than to spend a whole day in trains and steamers.

He made his first flight with an instructor, but so little had he forgotten that within an hour he was flying solo.

News And Information For The Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Most of the poultry being offered on the makret this year is being graded in accordance with government standards, with the class and grade marked by tags affixed to the breast of the bird. There are two classes of poultry, "Milkfed," distinguished white fat, and "selected," distinguished by yellow fat. Within these classes are the grade "Milkfed A," "Milkfed B," "Selected A", "Selected B" and "Selected C". Grading of the birds in this mannr nables the householder to choose good dressed poultry with great ease.

Meal Mixtures for Pigs in Winter

For pigs newly weaned and up to four months of age, the following meal mixture is recommended: Middlings, 3 parts; oats, 2 parts; shorts, 1 part; bran, ½ part. Three pounds of skim-milk or buttermilk per pound of meal mixtur eshould be fed at this stage.

The following meal mixture is recommended when the pigs are between four and five months old: shorts, 2 parts; oats, 2 parts; barley 1½ parts; bran, ½ part. With one pound of this mixture, feed two pounds of skim-milk or butter milk.

From the time the pigs are five months old, and weigh about 150 pounds, up to market weight, they may be fed the following finishing ration: shorts, 1 part; oats, 2 parts; barley, 2 parts. With one pound of this mixture, feed one and one-half pounds of skim-milk or buttermilk.

Purchasing Feed Stuffs

The advantage of co-operative purchase of feed stuffs is sometimes lost through the feeding of those feeds which can be purchased in carlot quantities without regard to balance or suitability of rations. Carlot purchase of feeding stuffs should be undertaken from the standpoint of both economy and efficiency. Dollars per ton is not the all-important angle. hTe cost per pound of food nutrients is more important, and, better still, the price per unit of feeding value and the suitability for balancing home-grown or other feeds are the important factors to consider. There are several steps to follow in the purchase of supplementary feeds. They are: (1) Know what is on hand in the form of home-grown feeds. (2) Know what best balances the feeds on hand, taking into consideration both quality and cost. (3) Purchase supplementary feeds in quantity sufficient to take advantage of the best prices and the lowest freight rates. (4) Know the production records of the livestock fed.

Care Means Cash on the Farm These Days

One of the very practical lines of instruction given to all regular students at the O.A.C. is in the adjustment repair and care of farm machinery and other farm equipment such as tools, harness, ropes, belts, etc.

So great is the need for care and economy on the farms just now that it has been decided to offer a course in instruction and practice along these lines to any young men who attend the ten-day short course at the college, January 2 tto 11, and who wish to spend their time on this kind of work.

These men will participate in the same evening program of games and entertainment as those taking other lines of work in the daylight hours.

Big "O" Brand Lacking

Writing from London, Andrew Fulton, overseas fruit representative, declares: "One of the greatest tragedies this season, as far as Ontario is concerned, is the lack of the Big "O" brand apples on the United Kingdom markets. After five years work in buildng up this brand to the stage where the trae have come to recognize the quality of this pack, it is a great isappointment to be unable to meet the demand and to continue building up a reputation for Ontario apples. I fully appreciate that this isappointment is equally as great for the Ontario growers who have had their trees damaged and have no apples to ship. goin gto remain in the export business, there should have been a special effort made by shippers to continue shipping under the Big "O" brand, if only a few cars from each packing house, in order to keep the name before the trade." Mr. Fulton recommends that the packing houses and growers organize an export apple association entirely separate from any other organization, so that the welfare of this phase of the industry can be looked after.

Great Shorthorns Too

"hTat was a great story in last week's press about your remarkable Holstein cow an her large family," said a visitor at the College this week, "but have you no outstanding beef cattle to show to young farmers who come to your short course in January?"

"Plenty of them," said Professor Raithby, "Shorthorns, Herefords and Angus. oFr instance, there is our fine Shorthorn cow, Angustta Fancy —166122. She is 15 years old, and has just dropped her thirteenth calf. Three of her heifers are still in the College herd, and six of her seven bull calves have been sold for breeding purposes.

"Then, too, we have in the herd many of the offspring of Augusta Fancy's grand old half-sister, College Augusta VI, who, when she was 17 years old, gave us her 16th calf. A fine, sturdy strain they are, of good type and great usefulness.

"Yes, we have lots of good cattle of both beef and dairy breeds for our demonstrations in January, and we expect to have several hundred keen young fellows here to handle and discuss these cattle and to enjoy ten days of real active, intimate College work and life".

Weekly Crop Report

Prevailing weather in most parts of nOtario until the first week in December was quite exceptional. Whereas last year cattle ha been fed for five or six weeks prior to this time, the open fall this year permitted farmers to leave their cattle on pasture, thus shortening the winter feeding period materially. It was a fine autumn for plowing too. Grey county reports that never for the past few years has so much grain been marketed. This is largely due to the fact that prices of cattle were low, grain was comparatively high, and there were exceptional grain crops this year. Several carlots of livestock have been shipped from Brant and Haldimand counties to the United States in the past few weeks. Copious rains relieved the water shortage in many districts so far as wells and cisterns were concerned. First-grade poultry is selling in Lincoln at 25c to 28c lb., with wholesale prices, 20c to 23c. Young turkeys are bringing 27c lb. in Wentworth. A strong demand for hay is noted in aHstings, with mixed hay selling at 14.00 a ton.

In Peterborough county, potatoes have been selling at 45c to 50c a bag, and McIntosh apples at $1.60 a bushel, and Northern Spes at $2.00 to $2.25 a bushel. Frontenac reports that cheese products produced this year have decreased 15 per cent while butter production has increased equally. Butterfat prices range around 19c lb.

MR. J. A. ADAMS

There passed away on Monday morning, Dec. 3rd, an old and respected resident of Matilda Township, Joseph Alexander Adams, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Harold Whittaker, of Williamsburg township, in his 78th year.

His funeral was conducted at Hanesville church, on Wednesday morning, at 11 o'clock, service being conducted by Rev. Cronmiller of Williamsburg. Music was rendered by some of the members of the Lutheran Church, Wiliamsburg, assisted by some of Hanesville United Church. Burial was made in Hanesville cemetery. The pall bearers were Messrs Fred Cunningham, Lee Casselman, Jacob Whittaker, Willis McIntosh, Ben Pennington and John Benton.

He leaves to mourn his loss, his widow, whose maiden name was Annie Blair of Glen Stewart, and the following sons and daughters: Alex Adams, Etonia, Sask.; John Adams, Auburn, N.Y.; Mrs. Jennie Whittaker, Williamsburg township; Mrs. Lize Carkner, Winchester Springs; Roy Adams, Laporte, Sask.; Joe, also of Laporte, Sask., and Mrs. Archie Casselman of Dundela; fourteen grandchildren; one brother, Ben Adams of Kemptville, Ont., and one sister, Mrs. Martha Allan of Hallville, all of whom have the sympathy of the community.

MRS. J. T. SERVISS

Following an illness of three months, Mrs. John T. Serviss died during Thursday night, at the home of her son, Frank Serviss, Cornwall. Mrs. Serviss went to Cornwall from Brockville about five weeks ago, being ill at the time, and had been a patient in a Brockville hospital prior to her departure from the Island City. She was 75 years of age, a native of Morrisburg, and a daughter of Nelson Holmes, her maiden name being Ruth Holmes. She spent many years in Brockville, where her husband died four years ago.

A daughter, Mrs. George Keeler, died some ttime ago. She leaves her son who is roadmaster on the C.N.R. at Cornwall; a grandson, Paul Serviss, Cornwall, and two granddaughters, Rita and Ruth Keeler, Montreal.

Burial will be made in Morrisburg on Friday afternoon, following service in Trinity Memorial Church.

MRS. PETER SMITH

Death has removed one of the most highly esteemed ladies of Mountain, in the person of Mrs. John Peter Smith. The deceased was in her 84th year, and was formerly Miss Martha Hyndman.

Mrs. Smith had lived in the community most of her life, where she had endeared herself to her many friends. She was among the pioneer settlers, and had learned the lessons of life from experience. She was always ready to offer the glad hand to anyone whom she could help, and her passing will be keenly felt by all with whom she came in contact.

Mrs. Smith had spent her married life in the home where she died. Her only son, Ernest, now occupies the old home, and with him and his family she had enjoyed the last years of her life, as her husband had predeceased her some years ago.

She leaves one son, Ernest; one daughter, Mrs. Banford, of Iroquois; and a brother, William Hyndman, of Mountain.

MR. ELMER FOSSITT

The funeral of Elmer Fossitt, who died Monday morning, Dec. 3rd, was held Wednesday from the residence of his brother James, Hanesville, where he had made his home for some time. He was the second son of Mr. and Mrs. John Fossitt, and had been in failing health for some time. He was 34 years of age, born on 30th of May, 1900.

Held in high esteem by all who knew him, the United Church at Hanesville, where the service was held, was filled to overflowing, and a long cortege followed him to his last resting place. Service was conducted by his pastor, Rev. E. Lacey, and special music was rendered at the service by the choir.

He leaves to mourn his loss, a loving father; one brother, James; five sisters, Mrs. Chas. Dewland of Williamsburg, Mrs. John Dorsey of Buffalo, N.Y., Mrs. Robt. Hanes, Mrs. Lloyd Cook and Miss Madeline Fossitt of Hanesville.

Interment was made in the family plot, Hanesville, Matilda township. Acting as pall bearers were Messrs Hilliard Fisher, Wm. Hanes, Ben. Johnston, John and Wilfred Thompson and Basil Reynolds.

Floral tributes: Gates Ajar, Father, Mother, Brother and Sisters; Wreath, Mrs. Mary Lennox and family; Pillow, Tom and Howard Fossitt; Sprays, Lula Dewland and Delbert Fossitt, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Murray.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. John Fossitt and family wish to thank their friends and neighbours for their many acts of kindness, sympathy and beautiful floral offerings tendered during their recent bereavement.

The TUDOR HOUSE

By MRS. STANLEY WRENCH

SYNOPSIS

Michael Borde, 40 unmarried, born and bred in a Birmingham slum, is now a wealthy motor manufacturer. One day he visits the countryside around his old home and rescues Daphne Eden from a menacing tramp. He falls in love and proposes. Daphne accepts and introduces him to her father, who greets him with the words "Get out of here you cur — you ruined my home — stole my wife — curse you!"

Daphne's father dies and she disappears. Michael explains to her friend, Mrs. Gregory that he was misrepresented. He buys the old Tudor House owned by the Hamill-Hardy's. Mrs. Gregory promises to mail a letter from him to Daphne arranging a meeting. Daphne does not appear. On the way home Michael collides with a car driven by Diana Hamill-Hardy.

Mrs. Gregory dies. Daphne hears from her solicitors.

Mrs. Eden notices an announcement of the engagement of Michel and Diana Hamill-Hardy.

Times had changed. History was being made in a different fashion. Michael Borde thought of that suggestion, so delicately made with regard to Birthday Honours. Um. It might come again, and then, with something much more to his credit, he might consider the idea of a title. Perhaps, in spite of her curious pride, Diana might like it. Diana! He smiled. Odd to think he could call her Diana now, after last night's queer business.

Well, he meant going on with that proposition of his, especially now he knew Lord Trottenleigh, and felt sure of his support. The amalgamation of the British motor industry might revolutionise the world, cut out foreign competition, put Britain on its feet . . he swelled with importance, as he visualised all his plans coming true. It was not a chimera, but a tangible possibility, if he could get the backing he required, and luck had thrown him a chance here by Lord Trottenhleigh's hospitality. With his name on his Board any Company was safe. Not only that, but now that he was closely in touch with people like these, county folk, their names would help to bring money. He knew. Michael Borde had not studied financial manoeuvres for nothing.

Over one thing, however, he was a little uneasy, although that vague uneasiness had not yet crystallised into anything definitely wrong Diana Hamill-Hardy was a gambler She had been pretty frank about it; indeed, since his stay here he had seen how large sums of money could be lost and won in a fashion he had never dreamed of. Cards, yes, he knew all about that kind of thing, but cards had never attracted him; bridge, he declared was too much of a fag after business hours, moreover, the hardships of his early years had instilled into him that slow caution which makes gambling an impossibility. Poker and chemmy were novelties, but like most novices Michael Borde was uncommonly lucky, indeed, his phenomenal luck attracted Diana Hamill-Hardy, that, as much as his stoicism after the accident he had caused.

That Noncomformist conscience of his, too, bequeathed to him by old David, who had brought him up strictly and with a moral code of high ideals, still pricked Michael Borde at whiles. No man can fling away traditions of his childhood, when they are the only traditions he holds. He had outgrown the horror of cards as "the devil's playthings," with which he had been brought up, but Michael Borde had not outgrown his ideas of women as home-makers. Cards and cradles did not synchronize.

However, there was plenty of time yet to accustom himself to new ideas. To tell the truth, he was not yet accustomed even to the idea that Diana had become engaged to him. As for thinking of her as his wife, the mother of his children, it was odd how Michael Borde dismissed that not merely as premature, but as unwelcome.

With a final glance at himself in the mirror, he quitted his room, and went slowly downstairs. That little bother over his tie had delayed him, and already several people were in the lounge. The butler was moving about offering cocktails, little bursts of laughter and conversation met him, as midway down the staircase he paused. Here a suit of armour stood in an alcove, and Michael Borde laid his fingers on this for a second. He stepped behind the mailed shell, a whim seizing him to stand as did the Crusader, peering down at the little group in the hall below. As he did this two figures separated from the rest, Diana and a lean-jawed young man in the early thirties, who had arrived that afternoon, each with glass in hand. They ascended a few stairs, seated themselves a few steps below the alcove, and Michael Borde realised suddenly that unless he chose to be and eavesdropper, he must step out at once and make his presence known.

He would have done so, but hearing his name spoken, he stiffened.

"Who the devil is this man Borde?" asked the man with the hard black eyes, sipping his cocktail. "I don't profess to know what you're playing at, Diana, but I should have thought you could have picked one of your own class."

Diana Hamill-Hardy laughed, and it was like ice striking ice, that laugh of hers.

"Oh, leave it to me, Tony," she drawled. "You don't suppose I'm not capable of handling my own affairs. It was my only way of getting back Werburge-Lucy."

The Tudor House! Behind that ancient suit of armour Michael Borde felt himself go cold. So the house was what she wanted; it was neither him nor his money, and remembering the spell it had cast over him he could understand. Besides, it had been the home of Hamill-Hardys, and she was the last of her house.

She smiled and lifted her glass. They drank together, but as Michael Borde saw her smile he felt uneasily that things had not come about altogether as he imagined. Her next words showed his suspicions were right.

"It has been child's play," she said. "Give me a light, Tony. One day I'll tell you the whole story. It'll amuse you. You might even write a play upon it. I've staged my episodes most artistically," he saw her long lean fingers curve over the jade cigarette holder, and felt like an onlooker watching a scene in a play. "Remember Ronald's bat? The one he scored with for Warwickshire? Well, it began with that," she laughed ironically, lighted another cigarette, he saw her bend towards him and bit his lip as he watched the look in the man's eyes.

So it was that, was it? This man, whoever he was, was in love with her, it was pretty evident, too, looking at Diana, that she cared for him.

The Lucky People

Some of you young people envy, or think you envy, the people who do not have to work, who get up in the morning when they feel like it and plan their days without regard to jobs or salaries. There have always been a few such people to be reckoned with, and always they have been envied by a goodly proportion of the world's workers.

Somehow, when you come to look into the matter, however, you do not find these people who are idle because they have everything without working for it, so fortunate as you might suppose. They are very likely to plunge into folly and dissipation, as though in using legitimate pleasures every day and all day, they have worn them out. The percentage of suicides among them is amazingly high.

Some of you are thinking that even if you were not obliged to work, you would not be lazy. You would work, however, only when you felt like it. The habit of working regularly operates like all other habits; it makes work easy. If you wait to work until you feel like it, you will find it needlessly difficult.

No one should be pitied because he has to work, nor envied because he is free to spend all day in play. The lucky people are those who have work they must do, and strength to do it.

Question Women's Eligibility To Be Municipal Candidates

Hamilton, Ont.—The intention of several women to enter the municipal elections here has raised a question of their elegibility as candidates without being assessed as property owners.

A judge may be asked to rule on the question. Officials point out that because a woman is a wife of a person assessed, she is entitled to vote, but she does not qualify as a candidate.

HIS AMAZING LOVE

(By JOSEPHINE KANE)

I was hurrying across the small plot of grass between the Hospital and the Nurses' Residence one fine morning on the way to my office when I encountered a youth loitering around.

"Are you wanting anything?" "Yes, I'm just waiting to see Nurse Robinson." "Well you'll hardly see her this early as, no doubt, she is on duty." "Oh yes I will, for I 'phoned her I'd be waiting around here about ten, and that she could see me by looking out of the window, but she hasn't come yet." He was very confident.

I scented a romance right there, and asked a few leading questions which brought forth: "Yes, he'd been a patient in the Hospital for five weeks, had been operated upon for Mastoiditis." He had no difficulty in pronouncing the word, I noticed —"and did I think Nurse Robinson would be long?" I did not, "for," I said, "it is my firm intention of telephoning right away, and telling her that there is a fine upstanding chap looking up at her window, and that will bring her on the run, I know."

He smiled, with some confusion, but with evident relief. "What Ward is she on, Ward J? All right, you wait just where you are for one minute."

I could not reach my office quickly enough; I was thrilled at my find. Here was a youngster anxiously waiting outside of a Hospital to obtain a glimpse of his nurse! Could you conceive of anything quite so lovely? One would imagine that the whole Hospital episode would make him eager to put miles between him and the place. But no, there he was, hungering for a look at the one who had bent over him in his pain. Just what tenderness, understanding of his plight, and real palship, had "Nurse Robinson" shown that had irresistably drawn him back to her?

These were the thoughts that chased through my mind as I tried, almost frantically, to get the switchboard, and my heart blessed her.

"Oh dear, line busy!" Another minute's wait, and still busy. It was really ridiculous how impatient I was. I gave a hurried glance through the window. Yes, he was still there, gazing intently towards the building. At last; "Is that Miss Robinson, yes? Well for mercy sake take time to show yourself at the back window, and view your young Romeo. Yes, Tommie L., do you remember him? Well step on the gas and end his agony of waiting, it's pathetic to see." With a merry laugh, and "I will," the receiver was hung up.

I looked out again. There he stood, with such a pleased and satisfied look on his young face. I feel impatient at my inability to picture him thus for others to see; the eager eyes, and such a winning shyness in his attitude as he stood there in the early morning sunlight, straight and slim as a sapling, with his arm up-raised drawing her gaze in his direction, and to my, perhaps romantic, eyes, showing just a hint of his not-too-far-away manhood. He was just twelve.

When he was leaving, I called him into my office. I was anxious to talk further with him, to draw him out, and obtain if I could, something of what was in his heart. But alas! he was not of the fulsome kind, and his eyes questioned: "Why all this interest?" "Oh, it hadn't been too bad; he wouldn't mind being back, only for the sick part, and of course he wouldn't like to be operated upon again for he might die." "Were the nurses good to him?" "Well, he'd say so, they were great!" That was about all he would commit himself to in words, but I had seen his eyes, and he had come back to the Hospital. That was enough to fire my imagination. "Come back again soon" I said as he left, "to see me as well as Nurse Robinson."

I sat down quietly at my desk, stirred at what had, so unexpectedly, been granted to me—the manifestation of an adoring love of a small patient for his nurse. A most wonderful movie had been enacted right before my astonished eyes, on a stage presenting a little green sward behind the towering walls of a large and old institution, the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto. I wish others could have shared it with me, but my eyes alone had seen it.

Had I been depressed that morning as I started out for my office? Well just a little, perhaps, but not now. The whole work had been glorified for me, and magnified. How privileged to be on the staff of an institution where not only were ailing little ones nursed back to health and strength, but where such an atmosphere of tender and understanding love abounded as to make these younsters eager to come back "to see Nurse Robinson," and which made possible such a lovely scene as I had witnessed. Was my share in it, humble as it was, worthwhile? I had been shown it was.

And so I am going to ask you to help us in this work of curing the sick little ones of Ontario. The need for funds is most urgent. Last year we nursed 7,511 patients in our cots and gave 93,789 treatments at our Out-Patient Department. This does not begin to tell the immensity of the work accomplished, it merely gives you a glimpse of what it must have been. Your contribution may be sent care of the Secretary-Treasurer, Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

No amount is too small—"Mony littles mak' a muckle."

SALT FOR HOOKWORM

Is Used To Kill Parasites In the Rand Gold Mines

Silicosis is the dread disease of miners. It is produced by rock dust. Breathe the dust day in and day out and the probability is strong that tuberculosis will result. In the Rand of South Africa, where the richest gold mines in the world are located, the problem thus presented has been the subject of more than one thorough governmental investigation.

The most obvious way to prevent silicosis is to lay dust. Wet the walls, the ground, the tools as they drill in rock, and there can be little or no dust. Reasoning thus, the mining companies of the Rand have been dowsing their deep workings. Out of the mines came whites and Negroes plastered with mud.

It looked for a time as if silicosis had been cheaply and effectively conquered. Then it was discovered that the miners had hookworm. Temperatures that run well over 100 degrees Fahrenheit must be faced in the "deeps" of the gold mines—ideal conditions for the propagation of the parasite, not to mention cockroaches, beetles, rats and other living disease carriers. The miners were dosed with carbon tetrachloride, in accordance with Dr. Maurice Hall's method, and thus rid of their worms.

But how were the mines to be freed? Salt is a well-tried remedy. So the superintendents ordered a general cleaning of all implements, cages and passages with salt water. The eggs of the hookworm cannot survive the treatment. The Rand mines are safe again.

Best Maple Leaf Is From Quebec

The most beautiful maple leaf found in Canada this autumn and submitted to judges appointed by the Royal Canadian Academy was sent in by Mrs. A A. Adams of Bay Mills, Que., the judges announced in Montreal last week.

More than 10,000 leaves were chosen by residents of every province. From this huge number the judges finally reduced the most beautiful in form and coloring to three, awarding Mrs. Adams first place and second honors to two leafs, submitted by Mrs. Guy H. Humphrey, Hampton, in King's county, N.B., and Marshall I. White, Milton West, Ont. Third prize was eliminated as the judges were unable to choose between the selections of Mrs. Humphrey and Mr. White.

What Does Your Handwriting Show?

(Editor's Note: Here is another interesting problem ,with which the author has had to deal. Have YOU any problem upon which you would welcome some advice and guidance? This well known handwriting expert repeats his invitation to readers following this week's article below).

A young lady of 19 writes me from the West, in part as follows: "For a few years, although I am still only just 19 years of age, I have going with a man of 33 years. We seem to be admirably suited to each other in spite of this difference in our ages, having much in common together. My friend is inclined to be somewhat sensitive, but I am the first girl to come into his life, and he got to be very fond of me.

"Over two years ago he asked me several times to marry him, but I was not ready for marriage, because I do not believe in early marriages, and I was ambitious to become a teacher. My parents also objected, on account of the difference in our ages. I may say here that he is earning a good living, and money matters would not trouble us. I wanted to wait for a few years before marrying him, but I couldn't bear to lose him.

"Since then he has been a different man, very despondent at times, and intensely jealous at others. We are both of a jealous temperament, but he has acted very bitterly. His despondency changed, and he accused me of going out with other men, which was not true. Whenever any young man would even pass our house, he would accuse me of being responsible. At first I laughed all this away, but it got so bad that I realized that he meant what he was saying.

"Over a year ago he turned to another girl because he was convinced that I was deceiving him, but after a few months that was over. Is there anyway in which I can convince him of the untruth of his statements? Or what do you advise?"

Here again we have this question of a marked difference in the ages of the two concerned. The man is 14 years older than the girl. This is not so bad, however, because their relative ages are still young. So that this age difference in the present case is not an insuperable obstacle. However, the matter of jealousy is a vital one.

There is one of the most insidious of characteristics. It grows on itself. This young man has lost his self-control entirely, and has shown precious little respect for the girl he wants to marry, in continually accusing her of the things he has.

The question arises —if he is so inordinately jealous of her now, when he is not even engaged to her, what would he be like when they were married?

Jealousy is one of those vices that MUST be cured before marriage. The mere ceremony of getting married does not destroy it; rather does it stimulate it. And a jealous husband is far worse than a jealous suitor, for a single girl can still give up the man whereas once married, a remedy is difficult — and only after a great deal of unhappiness and tribulation.

It seems to me that the man in question is likely to continue to be jealous, and I advise my correspondent to give him up, at any rate until she is assured that his jealously is cured. Better to cut the knot now than live to rue it later.

Jealously, unfortunately, is one of those vices that is really hard to cure. And it is far too great a risk for my correspondent to take, especially having regard to the difference in age. She is still young, and it will not be very difficult for her to gain new friendships.

CHEESE DISHES

Cheese is not a seasonal food, but the high percentage of fat which it contains makes it a particularly valuable food to use during the cold weather when the body requires extra heat. It's protein content should not be overlooked, for cheese is one of a limited number of economical foods which provides the body with the necessary tissue-building material. During the coming months the supper problem may be solved by preparing such nourishing, appetizing cheese dishes as:

Escalloped Potatoes with Cheese

Wash, pare and sliver very thinly, medium sized potatoes. Butter a baking dish and place a layer of potatoes in bottom. Season with salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Cover with grated cheese. Repeat until dish is full. Pour in sufficient hot milk to reach top layer of potatoes. Bake in a moderate oven until potatoes are cooked (about one hour). Cover during first part of the baking.

Spanish Rice

No. 3 can tomatoes.
[illegible] cup grated cheese.
1 [illegible] chopped fine.
1 green pepper, chopped or
2 tablespoons chopped passley.
2-3 cup uncooked rice.
Salt and pepper.

Combine all ingredients. Bake in a moderate oven (350-375 degrees F.) for one hour.

Macaroni Loaf

1½ cups cooked macaroni.
1 teaspoon onion juice.
1 cup soft bread crumbs.
1½ cups grated cheese.
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper, pimento or parsley.
2 eggs.
1 cup hot milk.
Salt and pepper.

Combine all ingredients except eggs and milk and place in a buttered baking dish. Add hot milk slowly to beaten eggs and pour over other ingredients. Place baking dish in a pan of hot water and oven-poach in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until set,—about 40 minutes. Serve with tomato sauce or hot chili sauce.

Cheese Biscuits

2 cups flour.
3 teaspoons baking powder.
2 tablespoons lard or butter.
¼ teaspoons salt.
¾ cup milk (about).
½ cup grated cheese.

Sift the flour, baking powder and salt together and rub in the fat evenly. Add the grated cheese and enough milk to make a soft dough. Roll, cut in shapes and bake in a hot oven. The dough should be handled as quickly as possible and mixed only enough to blend the ingredients.

Potato and Cheese Salad

Mix finely chopped or grated cheese with cold potatoes cut in cubes. Season with salt and pepper and moisten with salad dressing. Place by spoonfuls on lettuce leaves and serve cold. Chopped celery, finely minced onion or pimento in small pieces may be added and give variety to the salad.

AN ENGLISH RECIPE

Two or three kidney,s two rashers of bacon, pepper, salt and mustard, two or three large potatoes.

Split each kidney in half, rub with mustard, pepper and salt. Cut the potatoes in half and scoop out a little from the centre—large enough to take a half-kidney. Place the kidneys into the potatoes with the cut side downwards, cut the rashers in half, sprinkle with a little pepper, and place on top of each half-potato. Place two half-potatoes together and tie with a piece of string. Bake in oven for one hour or until potatoes are cooked. To attain the best results, choose very large potatoes.

LEMON MINCEMEAT

And here we have a recipe that results in a delicious flavor. The family is sure to enjoy pies with this filling.

Ingredients:
4 lemons.
2 apples.
1 pound currants.
½ cup raisins.
½ cup chopped nuts.
½ cup melted butter.
2 cups sugar.
1 teaspoon salt.
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon.
1 teaspoon ground nutmeg.
1 teaspoon ground cloves
1 teaspoon ground ginger.
1 teaspoon ground allspice.

Squeeze juice from lemons and cook peel until soft. Put through meat-chopper and then rub through a sieve. Add chopped apples and remaining ingredients, mix well and store in jars. Use as a filling for turnovers and pies.

FRUIT CAKES

And if you haven't started that all-important item—the Christmas cake—here is a good line-up to refresh your memory of the necessary ingredients.

½ cup butter.
1 cup sugar.
1 cup orange juice.
3 cups sifted flour.
4 teaspoons baking powder.
½ teaspoon salt.
½ cup seedless raisins.
¼ cup candied orange peel.
¼ cup candied lemon peel.
½ cup candied cherries.
½ cup chopped nuts.
Whites of 3 eggs.

Cream butter, add sugar and cream again. Add orange juice alternately with 2 cups flour sifted with baking powder and salt. Add remaining cup of flour with finely-chopped fruits and nuts. Fold in stiffly-beaten egg whites. Bake in loaf pan in a moderate oven (325 degrees) for one hour.

KINKS

Curtains Stay Clean Longer

If you have trouble in keeping freshly laundered curtains from becoming soiled by blowing out the window, take a heavy thread and fasten the ends with thumb tacks to the side of the window casing about six inches from the window sill. This prevents the curtains from blowing out and is scarcely observable.

With the Food Chopper

Fasten a paper bag over the end of the food chopper with an elastic band, when grinding stale bread for breadcriumbs, and there will be no cleaning up process afterward.

New Use for Muffin Pan

For tacks, screws, nails and such, use a set of muffin pans to keep them in. Have a tinner solder a handle across the pan, and it will be found very convenient to carry about and one can see at once just what is needed. If added to this is a set of tools that are found put up in a hollow handle, a hammer and small saw, one can repair many things about the house.

When Diners Are Late

To keep dinners hot, without having them dry out, place food on platters and vegetable dishes on which they are to be served, and put in the oven. Leave the oven turned on full and leave the door wide open.

Sunday School Lesson

LESSON XI—December 16
THE CHRISTIAN AND THE LORD'S SUPPER.—1 Corinthians 11 : 23-34.
GOLDEN TEXT—"For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye proclaim the Lord's death till he come.—1 Corinthians 11 : 26.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

Time—Paul wrote his first letter to the church in Corinth during his third missionary journey, A.D. 53-56.

Place—The letter was written in Ephesus, where Paul was making a long stay of nearly three years.

"For I received of the Lord." We must remember ever that the Lord himself instituted the communion feast, and it is not a man-made ordinance. We go to it at the invitation of the Son of God. "That which also I delivered unto you." What Christ impresses on our minds we are to pass on to other minds. "That the Lord Jesus in the night in which he was betrayed took bread." The writer might have set down the same night in which he washed the disciples' feet, with the fine suggestion of a moral and spiritual cleansing before men should eat and drink at the table.

"And when he had given thanks." Our Lord was in the habit of giving thanks before every meal, in gratitude to his Father who had provided the food. "He break it." "And said." He knew that, even after all his prophecies of his coming crucifixion, his disciples would not enter into the meaning of the rite unless he unfolded it to them plainly. "This is my body, which is (broken, margin) for you. "This do in remembrance of me." This do means, Take this bread and eat it, as more clearly in Matt. 26 : 26; Luke 22 : 19; Take, eat.

"In like manner also the cup, after supper." This implies that the bread was taken as part of the passover feast, and the wine after it. "Saying, This cup is the new covenant in my blood." The Old Covenant or Old Testament is the covenant the Lord made with Abraham and his people, sealed with sacrifices. The covenant idea runs all through the Old Testament. The New Covenant between God and man was also sealed with sacrifical blood, the blood of the Lamb of God, not needing renewal, like the Old Covenant, for the sacrifice was made for us once for all on Calvary.

"This do, as often as ye drink it, in remembrance of me." In His infinite tenderness and foresight Christ provided a universal and omnipresent reminder of himself.

"For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink the cup, ye proclaim the Lord's death till he come." The Lord's supper is a witnessing festival, and evangelizing feast. It makes a proclamation. It tells the story of the cross.

"Wherefore whosoever shall eat the bread or drink the cup of the Lord in an unworthy manner." Not merely, say Estius, with a mind distracted by worldly thoughts, though that is not to be commended, but in irreverent spirit, in a frame of mind unsuitable to so solemn an act; without faith in, or a thankful remembrance of, the great mystery therein commemorated. "Shall be guily of the body and the blood of the Lord." They are chargeable with insulting the memorials of Christ's death and so virtually the sacrificial death itself; on the same principle that he who insults his country's flag insults his country and is a traitor.

"But let a man prove himself." "Examine himself in the King James version. The Lord's table is not to be approached heedlessly and thoughtlessly, but after careful self-correction.

"And so let him eat of the bread, and drink of the cup." Let him take heed of the meaning and purpose of the supper, and so, — not merely and then, but so, — in that manner, in Christ's own way.

"For he that eateth and drinketh, eateth and drinketh judgment unto himself, if he discern not the body." That is, if a man does not partake of the Lord's supper as a sacred memorial of Christ's body sacrificed for his sin, he is taking into himself, at is were eating and drinking, his own condemnation. He is feasting on his own punishment.

"For this cause many among you are weak and sickly, and not a few sleep (the sleep of death). We are not always to connect sickness with sin. Sickness is often due to inherited weakness and often to accident or contagion. But there is no doubt that God often does punish sin with weakness, sickness, and death—probably far more frequently than any amined ourselves carefully and so avoided our sins), we should not be judged." The penalty need not fall upon us, because the sin need not be committed. God never punishes willingly.

"But when we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord, that we may not be condemned with the world." If the Corinthians were punished by the Lord, it was for their good. Their chastening was to free them from worldly entanglements, that they might not be joined with the world in its condemnation.

"Wherefore, my brethren, when ye come together to eat, wait one for another." Some of the Corinthians, in their greed, could not wait for the arrival of the other church members, one realizes.

"But if we discerned ourselves (except must fall to on the sacrificial feast without them—so low were their standards in those pioneer days.

"If any man is hungry, let him eat at home; that your coming together be not unto judgment." Eating at home before the communion service would prevent the display of gluttony and greed which the apostle so justly condemned. "And the rest will I set in order whensoever I come." Paul was soon to go from Ephesus through Macedonia back to Corinth. The abuses in the administration of the Lord's supper were reformed in two ways. The love-feasts preceding the sacrament were gradually abandoned, and the time for celebrating the Lord's supper was changed from evening to morning.

The Lord's supper is a great symbol. It sets before us the incarnation and sacrifice of Jesus Christ, our Lord. In the Lord's supper thus we confess our faith.

Should Mothers Fight Child's Battles

Generally Speaking "No" But Some Cases Are Exceptional and Need Special Handling

Should mothers fight their children's battles?

To all mothers, this question looms up, colors the earth, the air, the sky, at one time or another during their children's development.

There is the Big Bully at school; and there is little John....

"Oh, leave them alone," cries father when she gets all worked up about little John. "He will have to go through it sooner or later; and the less parents interfere the better a boy gets on at school. Why, when I was a youngster—"

But mother interrupts impatiently. For her child is always so much more liable to hurt than his father. "John is sensitive," she says. "He came home today, his nose pouring with blood. It was that horrid boy again. You know Robert, that aloof attitude of yours can be carried too far."

NOT INDIFFERENT

But it isn't that the father is indifferent. He loves his small son, his little daughter, with passionate tenderness. If he could he would divert all pain, all harm from them. It makes him, who should be their strong protector, their God, feel futile when they suffer. If they are ill the mother can dash about importantly, and do things, thrust a thermometer into their mouths, get hot water bottles, give a dose, stick on a poultice; while he just stands about, impotent, wrung by anguish.

When he sees his boys are having a hard time, being "put upon" by others, having their little noses punched, their heads sat upon, he would like to dash out and deal chastisement where chastisement is due. But he holds his arm. Sympathy, he feels, is also out of place. The youngsters must learn to fight their own battles.

A MOTHER'S PLAINT

Whereas the mothers. . . . But listen to what one mother says about it.

"I want you to tell me just what I ought to do," she says. "My husband's business takes him away a great deal, so the responsibility of bringing up the family devolves upon me. I have a little daughter of three and two boys, aged seven and nine. They have gone to a new school and at first were very happy, but now I find that the elder boy is constantly being set upon by another, the bully of the school.

"This boy makes the lives of all the smaller boys wretched and now it is evidently my son's turn. Recently he forced Ronnie to kneel down in the playground and before a jeering ring of others, recite the Lord's Prayer! I only heard of this by accident from my younger son, who made me promise not to say anything, but I am both indignant and worried. I feel like going out and talking to this bully myself next time he passes (he lives quite near) nor complaining to his mother.

"Ronnie is quite changed and looks thin and afraid. I know my husband would say that one should ignore all this, and that anyhow, it would 'all come out in the wash.' And my boy would hate it if I went to school and made a fuss. . . ."

WHEN FUSS IS NECESSARY

But it seems to us that a fuss is necessary here.

Bullying where it existed used to be tacitly ignored by the scholastic powers. Indeed many teachers regarded it almost as part of a curriculum which taught the youngsters that to "go through it" without squealing was all part of the game. But not now.

School is recognised as the training ground par excellence for after life. Here things begin to take on relative importances and values. And the whole scheme and system of character-forming this implies is upset if a strong, cruel and thoughtless boy is allowed to tyrannise over the younger and smaller fry.

Our correspondent will make a mistake, however, if she angrily tackles the bully herself or speaks to his mother who will, naturally, defend her son. The matter is one for the school to deal with, and one day, without saying anything to her children, she should go quietly to the Principal and lay before him this information. Not because the complaint specifically concerns her own child, but because he should know about it, as an item of importance in the life of the school.

For the modern school principal is not tolerant of ragging. Versed in psychology, he knows the dire effects of bullying on tender minds, and the complexes of fear and inferiority thus set up. He knows that one overbearing and cruel boy can do untold harm in a school, not only among his wretched little victims, but also in spreading the habit of cruelty.

She need not worry that her boy will suffer as the result of her visit. The principal, if he is wise, will not have the two boys hailed in front of him to face the mother, thus spreading the news in the school that the smaller boy had "told" and therefore was a "muff." He will watch, secure evidence, and take measures to deal with the bully, and see that the tendency to cruelty is wiped out.

Of course, in the larger issues, her husband is right. Things that are regarded as of great importance at the time, do "come out in the wash." And the young ones must learn to stand up for themselves. If they come crying every time anything happens and expect mother to go out and fight their battles for them, her hands will be full.

GAINING SELF-RELIANCE

And they will never learn self reliance and courage. Sometimes it is necessary for a mother, however much she loathes it, to stand by and let two combatants, of whom her son is one, fight it out. If they are evenly matched, her interference can do no good.

But, of course, fighting is a fool's game; and children must be educated into thinking of better ways. The only thing a mother can do is to give her boys and girls a groundwork of character which, because it will enable them to see things straightly and to deal fairly with others, will sustain them through troublous times.

Gaiety and light-heartedness are grand bulwarks against the petty storms of life. When the children come in with a long tale of woe, instead of encouraging them to self-pity they might be taught to laugh at things. To turn the tragic incident into a farce, even when one is the centre of it, is an art that cannot be too early learnt; and it carries one a long way.

"Arches," the original and most popularly selling book at the Dr. Locke Clinic, is too well known on this continent to require any extensive introductory publicity. It is, however, worthy of note that this famous book by John E. Phifer, is gaining popularity not only on this continent but in Europe as well. This week, the publishers (The Morrisburg Leader) received an order for a copy of "Arches" from Mrs. J. Greig, 56 Bannockburn Rd., Stirling, Scotland. This lady says: "I have heard about a book printed by you ('Arches', by John E. Phifer). If it is possible, please send me a copy." The price of this book is only 25c, and many thousand copies are sold each year.

A general election in Canada much earlier than has commonly been expected, looms on the political horoscope today, in the light of the summoning of Parliament for January 17. The prevailing idea has been that the election would not occur before September or October. Now, it is discussed as a possibility in June or even in April—if the Session is concluded by then.

Provincial Bailiff J.H. Fisk was in Cornwall Saturday, and removed five prisoners from the counties' jail to complete their sentences in provincial institutions. Three went to Burwash, one to Mimico and one to Guelph. Twenty-one prisoners were still left in the jail, but before the day was over, five went down from police court, so oficials still had 26 to look after.

IN MEMORIAM

DUVAL—In loving memory of Ezra Duval, who died December 15, 1931.

Sweet is the thought
That again we shall meet,
Kneeling together at Jesus' feet,
When Christ will clasp the broken chain,
Closer, when we meet again.

Y. P. S. MEET AT WINCHESTER

Members of Young Peoples' Socities of six churches of the Brockville Presbytery were present at a rally held Sunday night in St. Paul's Presbyterian church, Winchester, with Rev. W.D. Turner, the minister presiding. Society members and others from the congregations of Russell, Morewood, Chesterville, Dunbar, Winchester Springs and Winchester filled the church to capacity.

G. Brown of Russell assisted with the devotional exercises, while Mrs. John Gray of Spencerville gave an address. Rev. A. Nimmo of Morewood, also gave a short talk.

A mixed choir made up of members of the different congregations, rendered appropriate music, under the direction of Miss Clara Irving, accompanied by Mrs. Amelia McM. Lambkin of Chesterville. Numbers were sung by Misses Margaret, Dorothy and Evelyn Marselis of Dunbar; Harold Workman, Gordon Wilson, Hugh Wilson and Gordon Johnston, and a cello solo was played by Mrs. Lambkin.

CORNWALL TOWNSHIP ELECTION CONTESTED

Charging irregularities in voting at the Cornwall Township municipal election December 3, in which a candidate for reeve was defeated by but four ballots, and a candidate for the deputy reeveship by 14 votes, three interested parties filed notice of motion in the County Court at Cornwall this week, for an order declaring the election invalid and void. County Judge Francis T. Costello will hear evidence and argument in the matter on December 21.

Immediately following the election it was expected that John A. Lafave and Arthur Tessier, defeated candidates in contests for reeveship and deputy reeveship respectively, would ask for a recount of the votes. They decided, however, to apply for a court order voiding the election, and charge that persons whose names were not on the voters' list were permitted to vote without the proper procedure being taken, and that persons were permitted to enter the booths and vote in the place and stead of registered voters.

MILK ASSOCIATION FORMED

Herbert Carkner of Maple Ridge was elected president of the Association of Milk Producers for the Montreal Market, at a meeting held in the oTwn Hall at Winchester, on Friday night. Representatives from Morrisburg, Finch, Winchester, Inkerman, Mountain and Chesterville met under the chairmanship of Mr. Carkner, with H. Graham, B.S.A. of Morrisburg, Agricultural Representative for Dundas and West Stormont, acting as secretary.

D. Black, of Lachute, Que., past president of the Montreal Milk Producers' Association, and A.D. McDougall, Ontario representative on the advisory board of the assocation, outlined the purpose of the meeting, asking the shippers to form a local body which would be affiliated with the main body, which now controls 60 per cent. of the milk shipped into oMntreal. Plans were being made to ocnstruct a plant capable of handling all the surplus.

There was a credit balance in bonds of more than $14,000 of which $9,000 would be spent in equipment, the ablance to be used as a working capital. The association in Montreal would protect shippers in matters of tests, weights, and keep them advised as to the market for whole milk.

Many joined as associate members, and some stock in the Montreal body was bought at $10 per share.

hTe following other officers were chosen: Vice-pres., D.H. McIntosh, Finch; secretary-treasurer, Clifford Eligh; canvassers, arnham Allison, Chesterville; Fred Hutt, Inkerman, and W.M. Cameron, Mountain.

DR. L. D. MacINTOSH PASSES SUDDENLY

Stricken with a heart attack, Dr. L. Dec. MacIntosh collapsed at the wheel of his motor car in Hartland, N.B., on Tuesday, Dec. 11th, and passed away.

Born 57 years ago in Dundas, Dr. MacIntosh served as a captain during the Great War in France, Greece, Salonica, Egypt and the Balkans. After the armistice, he was nursing officer at a seamen's hospital in England. He was a prominent horseman, and had entries in meets at Woodstock, Fredericton, Fort Fairfield and Houlton, Me.

Survivors include two brothers, Dr. P.A. MacIntosh, Spencerville, and Clinton MacIntosh, Toronto; and two sisters, Mrs. Baldwin, Inkerman, and Mrs. Ross, New Westminster. B.C. Dr. E.F. MacIntosh, of this town, is a nephew.

DIED IN HOSPITAL

The death occurred in St. Vincent de Paul Hospital, Brockville, at 8.15 p.m. Thursday, of Mrs. Marie Berdine, 47, who had been admitted from Williamsburg that afternoon. The remains were sent to her home in Elma, Wash., for interment.

SPORT FLASHES

Last Saturday, Toronto sport scribes wrote columns on the impossibilty of the lowly New York Rangers defeating the high-geared Leafs. The "old guard" of the Rangers, however, took plenty of wind out of their sails, when they hammered in 4 Ranger goals, as the visitors trounced the highly-vaunted Toronto team 5-2. It was the first defeat of the season that the Leafs have sustained on home ice.

The Leafs secured ample revenge for this defeat on Tuesday, when they swamped the Rangers under an 8-4 round at Madison Square Garden.

The reason for the Leafs' defeat Saturday was probably that some of the players had themselves believing that they were really worth all that conversational money at which Con. Smythe valued them last week.

Wih the return of Georges Mantha and the acquisition of Savage on defense, the Montreal Canadiens, who had hitherto been having their ups and downs (but mostly downs), seem to be gathering power, as well as scoring punch. In the game Tuesay night against their fellow-townsmen, Maroons, the Canucks registered their third win of the season, the final score being 4-1. Of these goals, the minor Mantha scored two, and was also credited with one assist.

The leaders in the N.H.L. this week:

League Leaders: Toronto, won 10, lost 2, tied 0, 20 points.

Scoring points: Jackson, Toronto, 13 goals, 6 assists, 19 points.

Goals: Jackson, Toronto, 13.

Assists: Conacher, Toronto, 9.

Penalties: Horner, Toronto, 37 minutes.

Shut-outs: Thompson, Boston, 4; Chabot, Chicago, 4.

Right up with the leaders in the scoring race in the American section of the N.H.L., is the name of Ebbie Goodfellow, ace defenceman of the Detroit Red Wings. Goodfellow has 10 points, and is the most consistently scoring defenceman in the League. His manager, Jack Adams, recently said that he would not trade Goodfellow for any other player in the League.

Last night (Thursday) New York Americans downed the rugged Bruins by a 4-3 score in overtime, after one of the wildest games ever seen in Gotham.

The trouble all started when big Nels Stewart, burly Bruin centre, and Lloyd Klein, Amerk wingman, began swinging their war clubs. In the affray, Stewart was badly cut, and Klein was knocked out when Nels broke his hickory over Lloyd's cranium.

In the other N.H.L. games last night, Toronto Maple Leafs defeated Montreal Maroons 4-2, in overtime, and Detroit Red Wings fattened their scoring averages with an 11-2 win over the luckless St. Louis Eagles.

JUNIOR TOWN LEAGUE

The Executive will meet tonight (Friday, Dec. 14th) in the Agricultural Office, and it is expected the season's plans and rules for Junior Hockey in Morrisburg, will be completed.

As ice will probably be available in the Arena next week, teams in the recently formed Town League are looking forward to their first regular practice soon. A few of the brighter stars who have "signed up" with the different teams follow:

With the Maroons: Larry Eamon, defence; "Chick" Robinson, goal; Frank Smith, forward.

The Maple Leafs have Wilf Monpetit, goal; Howard Eamon, defense.

Notable on the Black Hawk roster are Charlie Weegar, defence; Cliff Hart and Art. Coligan, forwards, and Elmer Park, defence.

The Williamsburg Canadiens boast the services of their inimitable goalie Lyle Schell, the Gauthiers, and others

Another team, piloted by Donald Beckstead, will likely be added to the league at tonight's meeting. Chief among the stars on the prospective line-up of this team is the name of Dannie Locke, forward.

* * *

In a recent interview at New York, Harvey Jackson, probably the most brightly shining star in the whole Maple Leaf retinue, picked a few N.H.L. players who, in his estimation, are the pick of the League. The "Busher" thinks that Earl Seibert is the hardest defenceman to pass; Bill Cook, Joliat, Clapper and Robinson are the smartest forwards. Roy Worters is the pick of the goalies, and the Maroons are the best team in the circuit, according to the Leafs' leading marksman.

A meeting is called for Friday evening in Iroquois, for the organization of a senior hockey team there. According to reports, prospects look bright for a real good team this year.

BRIDE OF SIX MONTHS PASSES

As the result of an accidental fall sustained two weeks ago at her home in Cardinal, Mrs. Edgar Pryer, aged 20 years, a bride of six months, died Monday morning in a Brockville hospital. She was a former resident of Brockville, and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Kennedy, Mountain township.

She is survived by her husband, four sisters and two brothers: Mrs. Howard Prosser and George Merrill Kennedy, Mountain Station; Gertrude, Josephine and Bert Kennedy, Mountain township.
