MUNICIPAL ELECTRIC ASS'N ISSUES STATEMENT ON HYDRO

In view of the fact that the Ontario Municipal Electric Association is holding its annual convention in Toronto this week, the announcement about Hydro affairs, which appears elsewhere in this newspaper, is of unusual public interest.

A popular misconception about the great public utility, known as the Hydro-Electric System, or more familiarly as "Hydro," is that it is owned by the Government of Ontario, or the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. Under the caption, "Who Owns Hydro?", this announcement makes it clear that neither the Government nor the Commission own the Hydro System.

While operated and administered by the Commission acting in the capacity of trustee, the Hydro System is really owned by the Hydro municipalities who purchase power in "blocks" from the Commission and distribute it to homes and factories. The Government enters the picture only as banker for the Commission. In other words, Hydro is the property of the people of the associated Hydro municipalities represented by the Ontario Municipal Electric Association.

After declaring that "statements have been made and published with respect to the Hydro System of Ontario that are not in accordance with the facts," the resolution regarding publicity, embodied in the Association's announcement, states:

> "The Municipalities of Ontario are the owners of the Hydro System, in which they have an investment of some three hundred millions of dollars; and anything which would create distrust in the minds of the people as to the proper and efficient conduct of this great Public Utility would tend to impair the value of the investment of the Municipalities in the Hydro System."

In the pursuance of this resolution it is understood that the Association will publish further announcements from time to time, setting forth facts about Hydro and what Hydro ownership has accomplished for the people of Ontario.

HOWITH—CORNELIUS

A wedding ceremony of interest and charm was solemnized in St. Bartholomew's church, Ottawa, on Saturday last, when Miss Martha Mary Cornelius, daughter of Mr. Charles A. Cornelius, was united in marriage to Mr. Harry Halsey Howith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Howith, all of Ottawa. Venerable Archdeacon Netten, M.A., the rector of the church, officiated.

The groom is a brother of Mr George D. Howith.

ANNUAL MEETING, KNOX CHURCH

The annual meeting of Knox Presbyterian Church, Morrisburg, was held in the lecture room of the church on Wednesday evening, January 4th, at 8 p.m., Rev. J. Burkholder in the chair. Considerable progress was reported in the various church societies and organizations, the Sunday School and Young Peoples Association reporting increases in membership. The choir also reported an increase in membership. Mr. J.H. Meikle gave a report of the financial standing of the church at the end of the year, and it was learned that there was a favorable balance carried forward. Plans are being made by the church managers for a canvass of the congregation. Mr. F.R. Chalmers, Mr. W.K. Farlinger and Mr. R.F. Lyle were appointed managers for three years. A motion was unanimously passed, thanking Mrs. (Dr.) Goodfellow for her services as choir leader and also to Mr. J.H. Meikle for his services as treasurer of the congregation.

General discussion followed, and the meeting closed about nine-thirty with the Benediction by Rev. J. Burkholder.

STAYS IN BUSH OVERNIGHT, OVERCOME BY STROKE

Forced to remain in the bush over Friday night in near-zero weather, when overcome by a slight stroke, Mr. James Millross of Pleasant Valley is recovering at his home. Mr. Millross went to the bush two concessions north of his home to chop wood on Friday, and during the day began to feel ill and prepared to go home. But before he could get his horse unblanketed and ready to return, he was overcome by a slight stroke. He remained sitting in the sleigh all night in nearly zero weather, until found next morning by a neighbour, who went in search of him when relatives became alarmed at his absence.

When he did not return in the evening, his family thought he had gone to his brother's, nearby, but when he did not appear next morning, alarm was felt, and Mr. Ralph Fetterly, a neighbour, was told of his absence. He went to Mr. Millross' brother's home, and, not finding the missing man there, went to the bush where he found him sitting on the sleigh bottom, resting against the seat, and unable to help himself.

ACCIDENT BLOCKED HIGHWAY

The skidding of a large moving van and trailer across the highway near Manotick late Monday afternoon blocked south and westbound traffic. The Ottawa to Kingston bus service that evening was cancelled.

VOTE ON SEAWAY FEB. 10 IS OPPOSED

Washington, Feb. 1—A proposal by Chairman Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, to obtain a vote on the controversial St. Lawrence waterway treaty on Saturday, February 10, was opposed today by Senator Norris, Repn., Neb., who told the Senate the he would object to any attempt to shut off debate on the measure at this time.

Senator Lewis, Lem., Ill., previously had interrupted a speech by his colleague, Senator Dietrich, to suggest a vote at the end of this week.

Norris said: "It isn't fair for some Senator who has taken two or three days on this subject, to say when we will vote."

However, Norris gave natice that he would support any limitation proposal "when debate is exhausted."

WILL SPEND $100,000 ON UNITED COUNTIES ROADS

After much discussion by the Roads Committee at Counties Council, of the report of J.G. Cameron, road superintendent, on the proposed construction and maintenance of county roads during the coming year, the committee recommended that an appropriation not exceeding $100,000 be provided for maintenance and construction during the current year under scheme 1, as outlined in the road superintendent's report. The appropriation will be $100,000 providing that the relief board subsidy of $25,000 will be received, otherwise the appropriation will be $75,000 plus the amount received from the relief fund. The committee also recommended that the advisory road committee also take into consideration repairs to road No. 8, Williamsburg, and the construction of one mile of road on road No. 1, Matilda, and give due consideration to the Crysler bridge.

To finance the work on the county road system for the current year, the warden and treasurer were authorized to borrow against the direct levy and an stimated subsidy, a sum not exceeding $100,000 on a contemplated expenditure of $100,000, and that the necessary by-laws be introduced and passed.

The Warden and Clerk were also authorized to sign all contracts and documents in connection with relief work.

HIGH SCHOOL TEACHERS' SALARIES ARE REVIEWED

Believing that there is a marked discrepancy in the salaries paid teachers which is causing dissatisfaction and discontent, the committee recommended that the secretary-treasurer of the several high schools and continuation schools within the United Counties bring before their boards the suggestion of the county council that said boards get together and agree on a more uniform rate of salaries. It was also recommended that the clerk notify the trustees of the several high schools and continuation schools within the counties, who are appointed by the counties, to appear before the committee at the June session at a day and hour to be named by the chairman of the committee and the clerk, and that a copy of the resolution be forwarded to each of the secretaries of the high and continuation schools. Trustees attending the June session will be allowed their out-of-pocket expenses.

The following trustees were appointed: Chesterville, Ingram Cross; Winchester, J.D. Stewart; Morewood Wilburn Marcellus; Williamstown Jas. A. Sangster; Alexandria, J.J. McMaster; Cornwall, F.D. McLennan; Morrisburg, Thomas Coligan; Iroquois, Orval Seeley; Avonmore A.D. McMillan; Finch, D.A. McIntosh; Maxville, Peter A. Munro. The resignations of D.A. Ross, Williamstown, and Donald Cameron, Finch, as high school trustees were received and accepted, and the vacancies were filled by John McGregor, Martintown, and Joseph Cameron, Finch. Owing to the fact that Milton Shaver, trustee for Chesterville High School district, was no longer a resident within the county, that position will be occupied by George Cross, Chesterville.

Trustees of the various Continuation Schools were named as follows: Wales, Clare Markell, Wales; Aultsville, Frank Dafoe, Aultsville; South Mountain, Christopher Mellan, Brinston, R.R.; North Mountain, J.E. Crowder, Mountain.

The remains of John Milross Parlow, who died in Calgary, Alta., on Monday Jan. 22, from the effects of a fall as he was entering his boarding place, reached Iroquois on Monday afternoon, Jan. 29, via C.N.R., met by his brother George of Ottawa, and relatives and friends who formed a cortege to the vault at Point Iroquois cemetery. Here the burial service was conducted by Rev. Thos. Knowles, pastor of the United Church.

He was the eldest child of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Parlow; was born at Moulinette, Ont. in 1856. In 1881 he married Bertha Beatrice Bolton, of Cardinal, who predeceased him in 1923. He was the fourth John Parlow, of U.E. Loyalist stock, the first known being L. Parlow, in Government employ as an artificer on Carlton Island. SYNOPSIS.

Jean Graham and her brother Euan stay on the Riviera with Geoffrey Winton and his wife Doreen, who leads Euan on to gamble at the Casino. Jean coaxes him to go to Paris. On the road to Paris Jean finds a string of pearls in Euan's pocket. He snatches the case from her and the car crashes. The accident is discovered by Jerry Grant, who takes her back to his hostess, Helen Gorst. Upon learning of Euan's disappearance, Doreen behaves in a strange manner. M. Rivaux, French inspector, investigates. Geoffrey Winton tells Helen that his wife's pearls are missing. Rivaux confronts Jean with this as the reason for Euan's disappearance. Jean visits Euan's friend, de Laurier, whom she dislikes, and learns that Euan is in debt to him. Meanwhile Jerry Grant meets M. Perichon, famous detective, who promises to help them. Rivaux discusses the case with Perichon. Perichon goes over the different aspects of the case while seated alone in his hotel.

If Miss Graham loved her brother so much, and that brother was so deeply in debt....Perichon saw her fingers reaching out towards some pearls. Perhaps at first the impulse had been involuntary, just a nervous reaction of the hands to a mind which might have been thinking: "If I had those pearls I could clear Euan." Then someone had come, Suzanne the French maid, and almost as involuntarily her fingers had caught up the pearls. She had not meant to take them, but feeling guilty at the thought which had passed through her head, and being startled, she had grabbed them. Then, frightened perhaps or even succumbing to the temptation into which she had fallen, she had kept them, passing them perhaps to her brother—

Suddenly Perichon broke off, for there, sitting a few yards away, was the girl herself. Covertly he stared at her, his practiced eye taking in her long slim lines, her well made but simple dress, and her attractive face beneath the shady straw hat. It was pale and judging by the way she occasionally bit her lips rather nervous as her eyes rested on the lift door. Perichon found himself liking her. She was simple and no thief—no, certainly not. But if she had loved her brother so much—too much—if he had been in great trouble—? Who was she waiting for? Her nice impatient Englishman? No, she would look more happy. M. Perichon's question was answered almost instantly, for a man hurried up to Jean Graham, bowed over her hand and seemed to be offering her profuse apologies of some kind. When the man turned, however, and he saw that it was none other than Baron Max de Laurier, the detective's eyes narrowed, for he said to himself: "What is the connection between these two more dissimilar people?" He would have liked to have watched them but they went immediately into the restaurant, at the door of which the Maitre d'Hotel accorded them a sweeping bow.

Perichon's eyes smiled, but they noticed two things: That several people sitting about them nudged each other and whispered as they passed, and that a man who had been reading in a corner got up and followed them. Today this man wore a blue suit, but the other day he had worn brown.

With a sigh Perichon got up.

"Allons, Papa, we too will take lunch," he told himself, and beamed when the head waiter placed him in the category of the notorious by making him as he passed over the threshold a flatteringly low obeisance.

Jean sat facing de Laurier in the window of the restaurant. In the far corner an orchestra played, but was almost drowned by the clatter of plates and the chatter and laughter of the company. The Baron had ordered a very excellent lunch and was distressed that his young guest seemed to take small interest in it and ate very little. But Jean had accepted the man's invitation for one purpose only, and she was wondering how to lead the subject round to it. That she was being far from entertaining she realized, but she could not bear the way her host kept looking at her, openly admiring her with his eyes and flattering her with his tongue.

To avoid his glance she gazed about the room and saw at a single table a little to the left and almost behind de Laurier an oldish man with a grey moustache from the ends of which he was wiping some drops of soup. The process fascinated her and she watched him for a while, wondering vaguely who he was.

The Baron watched her, his eyes gleaming with the reflected light of an inner smile; a smile because it pleased him genuinely to have anyone as pretty at his table and a smile for other and more sinister reasons.

It was not until afterwards, when they were seated in a corner of the lounge with coffee on the table before them that Jean began:

"Baron, what exactly did you mean by your last remark when I left you the other day?"

He pulled his chair nearer to hers and replied in the whisper of a conspirator: "Ah, the pearls! But we must be careful that the police do not hear of them."

Jean strove to keep her voice level as she said: "I don't know what you mean."

"But you have heard of the loss of Mrs. Winton's pearls, surely?"

"Of course, but what has that to do with my brother?"

The Baron cast her a sidelong glance, then looked down at his hands. Staring stonily at the sleek black head, Jean waited. In spite of the warm day she felt cold, shivering almost with apprehension. She had thought that only she knew about the pearls, whereas apparently this man knew something as well—more perhaps than she.

"I think that your remark call for an explanation, Baron," she said coldly.

He shugged his shoulders: "It is difficult if Mademoiselle does not know. I had thought that you would have known."

Jean moved exasperatedly: "Please speak more plainly. I don't know what you mean. What is it that I do not know?"

De Laurier appeared to consider a moment, then before she could prevent him, he had taken her hand and held it in his, as in a gently sympathetic voice he said:

"Miss Graham, I hate to tell you, but if you wish it—"

"I do," she jerked, withdrawing her hand.

"Then, on the morning that you left Monte Carlo your brother showed me Mrs. Winton's pearls. Oh, please do not be angry!" he cried, for the girl had made a sudden movement of violent protest. It seemed to her outrageous that he should say such things to her—he, a practical stranger—and yet those pearls—that row of lovely pink-tinged pearls which Euan had tried to grab from her—"How dare you!" she gasped.

"But, Mademoiselle, I am telling you the truth," the Baron protested, looking at her earnestly. "Graham showed them to me as security for the money he owed me. He said that in a day or two he would be rich—"

Desperately, Jean asked: "If he did show you some pearls, how do you know that they were Mrs. Winton's? Did he say so?"

"Not in so many words, no. But I know those lovely pearls, Mademoiselle. I have seen them so often.

M. Perichon, seated over his coffee and cigar at some distance across the lounge, appeared to be blowing smoke rings and ruminating, but his eyes, through the screen of smoke with which he yas clouding his interest, were watching Jean and de Laurier.

"Why? Why?" he asked himself over and over. What were they up to, those two? Before lunch the girl had seemed nervous, but now—What was that expression on her face? Horror, amazement, fear? Yes, all three and possibly more, beneath an innate crusting of reserve. He noticed the rigid way she was sitting, very upright and still, excepting for her hands which were kneading themselves together in her lap, and her face, which at lunch had been flushed with the heat of the restaurant, was pale again. What was the Baron saying to her? The Baron—for a moment Perichon's thoughts left Jean and turned to de Laurier. He was a good deal older than the girl, older even than he looked, he felt sure. Had he ever seen him before? Gustave Perichon closed his eyes, and for a while looked like a somnolent old pelican as he stared at the twirl of mental pictures which swam before his inner vision, and listened to the voices which memory reproduced for him. The pictures cleared and crystallized into one—Longchamps on a summer's day, the gay crowd, the horses, a blue sky and, crossing before his line of vision, the notorious Annia Dushkin, painted as ever and dressed to the nines, and leaning on the arm of a tall dark man—"Ah!" Suddenly the detective opened his eyes and stared over at de Laurier. "The same," he muttered, frowning again as he wondered whether the Baron had had any professional connection with the Dushkin, or whether, like many another man, he had merely been her dupe?

In the corner de Laurier was covertly observing the English girl's distress. Laying his hand over hers, he murmured: "You are upset, Mademoiselle. It is a shock to you?"

Moving slightly away from him, she was silent whilst controlling her voice. At last she said: "I don't know what to think."

"Ah, you do not believe me?" exclaimed the Frenchman. Jean raised her eyes to his face and gave him a steady stare, which he returned unflinchingly. Incredible as it was, she found herself believing him. Euan had actually been fool enough to show the man those pearls, whoever they belonged to. In an agony of shame she gripped her hands together and fought for control. She must not let the Baron gauge the depth of her dismay and yet she felt as if she were drowning slowly, singing into depths of darkness.

De Laurier's face did not reveal the true trend of his thoughts. He merely looked intensely concerned that the girl should be so hard hit.

"Madamoiselle, I am desole to make you suffer," he whispered, warmly. "I hoped in telling you to bring you comfort. You see, I thought you knew that Graham had the pearls, and perhaps, also, that you knew he had shown them to me. I thought that you would be afraid I would tell the police—"

Involuntarily Jean let out a gasp of horror, whispering: "Oh, you wouldn't!"

"I have not, I assure you, Miss Graham."

"Oh, thank you!" For a moment her hand covered her eyes. It was a very rapid gesture, but it was observed by two people in the lounge, M. Perichon and the man in the blue suit.

"I—I think I must go." Jean got up.

"So soon?" de Laurier smiled.

850 Words To Do Work of 500,000

Simplification of English Tongue to Provide Solution of World Language Problems

London.—"Basic English," a simplification of the English tongue intended to provide a workable solution to the language communications problems of the world, has been launched by the Orthological Institute of Cambirdge, England.

Failure of many attempts to provide an "invented" language that could be used throughout the world as a means of communication between the people of all nations who speak 1,500 living languages led to the effort to adapt the English tongue for the purpose.

New Level

The new form of English, introduced to Canada at the Institute of Pacific Relations Conference at Banff in August, contains only 850 words, 600 of them nouns, 150 adjectives, 16 verbs or names of operators and the rest adverbs, prepositions or names of directions.

These, in addition to numbers, weights and measures, the calendar and such words as club, radio and telegram, already internationalized, do the work of 500,000 words of English at a level of ordinary communication.

English was chosen for the new medium because it is the natural or administrative language of 500,000,000 people, and because no other language is susceptible to the ame kind of simplification. With no inflections and analytic in structure it is not only closer to the language habits of many Orientals but, for the same reason, is easier to learn.

In Japenese Schools

The interest with which persons in all parts of the earth have turned to this form of English (in which this paragraph is written)gives its backers the belief that it may be put to a great number of uses. Letters have come into the Orthological Institute in Cambridge by the thousands from all parts of Europe, the Far East, and the United States. Schools in the states on the American Pacific Coast are interested in it as a way of helping the young Chinese and Japanese to a good knowledge of English. In China, where English is the second language, there is much interest in it, and Japanese teachers are about to put it in their schools.

Telescopic Terms

Widely differentiated uses of a word are eliminated in the new medium, such as "for" in the same sense of because," "that" in the sense of a relative pronoun, or "bit" as part of a horse's harness. It makes use of the fact almost all verbs can be analyzed into one of a few fundamental operations in combination with a directive. The simplest combinations of these give equivalents for 2,000 common verbs such as "put in" for insert," "go up" for climb," "take out" for "extricate," and "go against a law" for "break a law."

In the same way, by descriptive analysis, many names of things are reduced to telescopic terms. A "journalist" becomes a newspaperman" and a "desk" a writing table."

Springtime Babies Win Health, Says Scientist

Stockholm. — Babies born in the spring have a better chance for future life and health than those born in the fall or winter, says Professor Ivar Broman, Swedish scientist.

In the animal world, he declares, nature has arranged the time of birth so wisely that the young usually are born early in summer.

He says statistics tend to show that even in the case of man nature attempts to regulate the time of birth—at least in Scandinavia, where the greatest number of children are born in March or April.

Flatterers are the worst kind of traitors, for they will strengthen thy imperfections, encourage thee in all evils, correct thee in nothing, but so shadow and paint thy follies and vice as thou shalt nver, by their will, discover good from evil, or vice from virtue.—Sir Walter Raleigh.

Life Goes On

(From The Yale Review)

Let not your life become a Pharaoh's tomb
Of buried memories, hopes embalmed,
Shut in hot airless silence
Where day by day nothing stirs, nothing lives,
Gold in the darkness never gleams,
The drugged soul broods in a passive swoon
Sightless over unseen treasures softly rotting
In the hot darkness through dusty months.
Youth may be furnished like a kind
With crystal dreams and golden ecstasies,
But when the proud king leaves for a far journey
And is lost in the cold wake of the world
In starry seas, the lively palace
Sinks dark and sullen as a tomb.
Let the rain and wind of tears and sighs storm through it,
With swift wreckage tarnishing the gold,
With lightning of despair and long low thunder
Of the world's sorrow, until the tomb is broken
And the moon gleams through.

Mourn not for the wreckage, but as the moon fades
In the quick dawn, break from the ruins,
For life goes on.
Taste then the morning air
However biter and however cruel,
Receive in nakedness those darts of light
Whether in kindness or in anger thrown,
Tread humbly on the sacred breast of earth,
And grasp revered water's touch.
Oh, no more gold and crystal in high rooms,
But rain-washed rock and tender fugitive water
Under the old sky worshiped with new eyes,
For life goes on.

—Richard Aldington.

Electricity Used in a Test of How Long Fish Will Keep

At Gloucester, Mass., were the artists go every Summer, the United States Bureau of Fisheries maintains a station where Drs. Maurice E. Stansby and James M. Lemon are substituting science for the hand, the eye and the nose in judging the freshness of fish. You see them grinding up a haddock, shaking it up with some water, then adding a little quinhydrone and finally passing a feeble electric current through the mass. A voltmeter, familiar to radio enthusiasts as a potentiometer, tells how many volts are passing through and hence indicates how fresh the fish is. The test means simply that more electricity can be passed through a fresh than through a stale fish.

Clearly this is no test to housewives. But dealers who buy and sell fish by the carload and shipload can make money by use of it. "It is necessary to tell how long it has been since a fish was caught," say Stansby and Lemon, "but it is important to know how much longer a fish may be expected to keep if handled properly."

After a fish is landed it stiffens, which explains why firm flesh has always been the housewife's tried and true test of freshness. Soon a softening process sets in. First the complex proteins break down. Later the bacteria set to work and bring about further decomposition. Mere softening detracts from the value of a fish but not from its edibility. Bacteria spoil the fish.

Since fish is packed in ice for as long as two weeks, during which softening may occur, the test is of commercial importance. Stansby and Lemon believe that their method may be equally applicable to meat and other packing house products.

"I'll tell you one thing about radio—no one can say 'this is good enough' or 'this will get by'."—Eddie Cantor.

Children of Large Families Lead In Self-Reliance, Italy Teaches

Milan, Italy.—In its endeavor to induce the Italians to rear more children, the government has set out to convince them that quality is increased with quantity as regards the brood.

Census results showing that no one of Italy's sixty-three centenarians is an only child have been given prominent display as indicating that physically, at least, the advatage is on the side of the person who has brothers and sisters.

These have been accompanied by statistics revealing that soldiers coming from large families win more decorations for valor than those from the so-called "crisis" or small families. The figures were arrived at after duly idscounting the greater representation of large family soldiers in the service.

The newspaper "Il Popolo D'Italia," owned personally by the Duce, printed an article pooh-poohing statistics purporting to show that in American elementary schools children from small families give evidence of more intelligence than do those from among numerous progeny.

This, it said, is explained by the greater aid the former receive from their parents, but the intelligence that counts in the long run is that born of the self-reliance leared through an absence of molly-coddling in the large families.

Regarding valor, "it is only natural," said the article, "that the child whose existence has been protected by doting parents will prove less courageous than the child who, because he is one of many, was never subjected to this elaborate protection."

"Laid Off Until Monday"

Mary Graham Andrews

Recently I read of a little boy who had heard much "depression" talk. He came home from kindergarten on Friday and announced: "I have been laid off until Monday."

That same day I met Mrs. Delk, who complained, "O, dear, what shall I do with Jimmie? He makes a nervous wreck of me on Saturday and Sunday when he is not in kindergarten. I can't understand it; his teacher tells me that he is a most reliable child, that if she asks him to do a thing, she can depend upon his doing it, that he is always courteous and cheerful."

"Isn't he like that at home?" I questioned.

"No, he is not! He is always tagging after me, begging to do one thing after another. He torments me with silly questions. Finally, I get so irritated, I make him sit on a chair. He stays, but stages a tantrum. 'I won't stay here,' he screams."

I recalled the boy who said he had been "laid off until Monday" and I told Mrs. Delk about him, and suggested: "Jimmie is restless and resentful because you have laid him off until Monday."

"Please tell me what to do," she said, earnestly.

"Have you ever thought that a child grows bored when there is nothing definite to do all day? Why don't you give Jimmie a chance to help you? Give him an opportunity to get acquainted with you and the interesting home world about him. Why don't you stop laying him off until Monday?"

Mrs. Delk decided to test out a few simple suggestions:

1. Not to let Jimmie oversleep on Saturday, because that would bring his breakfast later than on the first five days of the week.

2. To let him help set the table, carry out the dishes and put the newspapers and magazines in order upon the tables.

3. To schedule his play time.

4. To permit him to go to Sunday School with the other children of his neighborhood.

A chart was posted and checked each week-end. This checking took on the spirit of a game. Mrs. Delk was very careful to pass lightly over the failures and commend the successes warmly.

It was not a magic formula but Mrs. Delk feels that the suggestions were of real value to her.

The same ideas can be used or adapted to fit any individual case and bear character-building results. Parents should realize that a child is happier and becomes more self-respecting if he discovers that he is depended upon to do certain things regularly and well. After all, is it not an important matter that each child be permitted to do something each day that develops self-reliance? Doesn't our kindergarten bless our child with such privileges?

Prepare your child's schedule with special care for your busy hours, because these are the hours when parents are apt to grow impatient. Children need to be definitely employed when at home. If they are living on a character-building program in kindergarten five days a week, please don't "lay them off until Monday." If you do, don't be surprised that they grow restless and depressed just as unemployed adults so often do.—Issued by the National Kindergarten Association, New York City. These articles are appearing weekly in our columns.

Noodles For a Change

If you have yolks of eggs left from cake-making, you can save them from going to waste by making up a batch of noodles. Noodles always are a valuable addition to the emergency shelf, but the home-made ones especially are considered a treat when they well made. Since it takes but little more time to make enough for several meals, add on or two whole eggs to increase the quantity and quality of the noodles. One tablespoon water is added for each egg yolk.

Noodle soup makes a splendid winter luncheon dish. Or noodles cut in tiny straw-like lengths add much to the cup of dinner consomme or bouillon. When noodles are served in the clear dinner soup, they should be boiled in salted water and drained before adding to the prepared meat stock.

A noodle ring filled with creamed meat or fish makes a delightful party luncheon dish.

A platter of fried noodles garnished with halves of hard cooked eggs and served with a smooth cream sauce is inviting and nourishing and can be quickly and easily prepared for any emergency supper or luncheon.

Noodles

Three egg yolks, 1 whole egg, 3 tablespoons water, 1½ teaspoons salt, 2 2/3 cups flour (about).

Beat yolks of eggs, water and whole egg until thoroughly blended. Add salt and enough sifted flour to make a very stiff dough. Knead well on a lightly floured molding board. Divide into six parts and roll each part as thin as possible. Cover with a clean towel and let stand for 30 minutes. Roll each sheet separately, like any jelly roll and cut in very thin slices. Shake out slices and toss lightly on board to dry. When thoroughly dry, store in covered jars o rboxes for future use. When wanted cook 20 minutes in boiling meat broth or salted water. In calculating quantities it is worth keeping in mind that one egg or its equivalent of one egg yolk and one tablespoon water will make enough noodles to serve four persons with a generous amount of noodle soup.

Cut in Squares

Instead of cutting the dough into strips it can be cut in two-inch squares and used to make noodle balls. This is a good way to use left-over meat or the meat from the soup bone. Carefully trim off fat and gristle, and chop meat very fine. Season well with salt and pepper and parsley or onion finely minced. Add one unbeaten egg and mix well. Add milk if necessary to make moist enough to stick together. Fill squares of noodle dough with prepared meat mixture and draw corners together. Dampen edges with a little cold water and press firmly. Drop into boiling salted water or meat broth and boil 20 minutes. Serve on a hot platter and garnish of parsley.

To prepare noodles for chow mein, sprinkle 2 tablespoons salad oil over one pound noodles and steam fifteen minutes, lifting noodles carefully with a fork in order to separate well. Spread on molding board and let cool. Then fry until crisp and a golden brown in deep hot oil or fat. Drain thoroughly and use.

Codfish Souffle

There are many excellent brands of salt codfish on the market and they offer economical ways and means to vary the winter menu.

A dinner of cream of tomato soup, codfish souffle, brown bread and butter, shredded cabbage with dressing and bread pudding with liquid sauce is a nourishing, well balanced inviting and economical meal.

Creamed codfish is another good, old-fashioned dish. Served with plain boiled potatoes or baked potatoes, hashed buttered beets and fruit whip, this makes an appetizing and satisfactory dinner that is inexpensive but rich in food value.

If hearty breakfasts are not wanted, codfish balls may be served at luncheon or dinner. A creamed vegetable, or a cream soup, should be included in the menu to ensure the proper amount of milk in the diet.

Following are simple rules for codfish balls and codfish souffle:

Codfish Balls

Two cups sliced raw potatoes, 1 cup shredded codfish, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 egg, ¼ teaspoon paprika.

Freshen fish in lukewarm water for two hours, changing water three times. Put fish and potatoes into sauce pan with boiling water to cover. Cover pan and cook until potatoes are tender. Drain and shake over the fire to permit mixture to become quite dry. Mash thoroughly and add butter, paprika and beaten egg. Beat until the mixture is very light. Drop from spoon into deep hot fat. The balls should brown in two minutes. Drain on brown paper and serve at once.

Codfish Soufflie

One cup shredded cooked codfish, 2 cups mashed potatoes, 3 eggs, 1 cup milk, 3 tablespoons butter, ¼ teaspoon pepper.

After freshening fish, pick very fine with a fork or cut with scissors. Simmer just below the boiling point for 30 minutes. Drain. Add fish, butter, milk and pepper to hot mashed potatoes and beat well. Add yolks of eggs beaten until thick and lemon colored and cook and stir over fire until thick. Fold in whites of eggs beaten until stiff and dry and turn into a well buttered baking dish. Bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven. When firm to the touch, the souffle is done. Serve at once from baking dish.

Paris Styles

Paris—Mauve and silver brocade evening gown with a cape of the same material trimmed with two yellow iris. It might be called "pervenche blue," or periwinkle. From Molyneux.

Night Blue Velvet evening dress with coq feathers cape shaded from dark blue to very light blue. From Molyneux.

Pale Blue Silver Brocade crinkled crepe evening ensemble with a deep periwinkle cape. From the same house.

Royal Blue Chiffon with a cape effect around the arms but molded over the shoulders. For dinner.

Black Chiffon for evening with a belt of gray iris. Cape effect with shoulders but not to detract from the rather daringly exposed areas.

Gold Salvage Panne Velvet makes a stunning effect. Brown ostrich feathers trim the bodice and brown shoulder straps and brown gloves complete the ensemble.

"Panne sauvage" in black with molded shoulders and a cape effect with black flowers of the same material around the arms.

Facial Masks

Masks are valuable beauty agents. They purge the pores, stimulate circulation and make the complexion clearer and finer in texture.

To give yourself a beauty treatment, first cleanse your face with facial oil. Apply beauty mask from the base of your throat right up over your forehead. Lie down and relax until the mask is dry and hard.

When you get up, wring a towel out of warm water and place it over your face and neck to dissolve the mask. With upward and outward strokes, remove every trace of the mask. Then cleanse again with facial oil. Pat on a little skin tonic and you're ready for fresh makeup.

Soup Secret

If one knows the proper method to use it is no more difficult to make cream of tomato soup than it is to bake a potato or toast a piece of bread, but one must know how because two foods exactly opposite in chemical composition are combined in a cream of tomato soup.

In order to make cream of tomato soup, the housewife first must master the secrets of a perfect white sauce; for in tomato as in most cream soups, a thin white sauce forms the foundation.

Undoubtedly the cook's greatest difficulty lies in combining the white sauce with the tomato puree. Too often the mixture curdles and an unappetizing soup is the result.

The following rule is carefully worked out and produces a delicious smooth cream soup. The method, as well as the proportions, is important.

Many recipes add soda to cream of tomato soup. It is better to avoid doing this because the soda does not improve the flavor. I: fact, when making a small amount of soup it is almost impossible to add soda in small enough amount not to ruin the flavor of the soup entirely. If 1/16 teaspoon soda to one pint of tomato is used, the flavor is affected very slightly and the acid of the tomato is neutralized sufficiently to prevent curdling of the milk.

Cream of Tomato Soup

Two cups canned tomatoes, 1 small onion, 2 teaspoons sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, celery tops, 3 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 cups milk, 1/8 teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 6 peppercorns.

Melt 1 tablespoon butter in sauce pan and add onion, peeled and cut in thin slices. Cook over a low fire for five minutes and add tomatoes, sugar, salt, celery tops and peppercorns. Cover pan and simmer fifteen minutes. Rub through a sieve. In another pan melt remaining butter and stir in flour. Cook and stir until bubbly. Slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Season with pepper and bring to the boiling point. Boil one minute, stirring constantly. Take the sauce from the fire ad add the sifted tomato pulp which has been kept hot while the thin white sauce was being made. Pour the tomatoes slowly and stir constantly. Add parsley and serve at once. This soup will separate or curdle if allowed to stand or if reheated.

Whipped cream may be served on this soup. Whip cream until firm and season lightly with salt. Drop one dessertspoonful on each plate of soup.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Freshening Ham

When freshening ham, try using sugar instead of soda. Simply throw about a quarter of a cup of sugar into a pan of very hot water, put the ham in the pan and allow it to stand for fifteen or twenty minutes. All of the salty flavor will be gone, leaving a fresh, sweet taste.

To Clean Suede Shoes

Suede shoes should be cleaned with a steel brush but be careful not to rub hard enough to injure or wear out the suede. Just a few gentle strokes should be sufficient.

Child's Blankets

It is difficult to keep the blankets clean on a child's bed, as children are usually more restless and the coverings are handled a great deal more. One mother solved the problem of constant blanket washing by putting the good wool blankets between the folds of an older double cotton blanket. It made a lovely warm covering and the outside blanket took all the hard knocks, keeping the wool blanket clean and in order.

Kitchen Curtains

When making kitchen curtains it is wise to put a three-inch hem at top and bottom. If they shrink after washing one has sufficient material to let them down. They can also be reversed if the hems are even, which means when new wear.

To Remove Soot

The painted wall over a gas jet is very apt to become blackened with soot. Place over the spot a layer of starch mixed to a paste with cold water. Allow to dry and when thoroughly dried out brush off with a soft brush. The soot will have disappeared.

Newspaper "Ads" For Isle of Man

Official Says Campaign Never So Profitable — To Increase Expenditure

Ramsey, Isle of Man.—Newspaper advertising has so well paid the Isle of Man this year that the Official Publicity Board is asking the Manx Government for an additional sum of $7,500 for advertising next season to supplement the customary grot of $35,000 which legislature annually makes for this purpose.

Publicity board officials report they have never previously received so many applications for guides to the island in one year.

W. A. Clague, the secretary, said the efficiency of a judicious newspaper advertising campaign in attracting visitors had long been proved by his board. It was not just a matter of chance—the results could be counted upon.

Sunday School Lesson

Lesson IV.—January 28. Standards of the Kingdom. — Matt. 5.1-48. Golden Text—Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God.—Matt. 5:8.

TIME—Midsummer of A.D. 28, the second year of Christ's ministry.

PLACE—The Horns of Hattin, a hill west of the Sea of Galilee.

"And seeing the multitudes." The great multitudes that had gathered around him, attracted by his miracles of healing. "He went up into the mountain." The traditional "Mount of the Beatitudes" is Kurn Hattin, or "Horns of Hattin," a two-peaked hill about sixty feet high near the centre of the west coast of the Sea of Galilee, two or three miles from the sea and seven miles southwest of Capernaum. "And when he had sat down." Oriental teachers sat as they taught, they did not stand. "His disciples came unto him." The twelve whom he had just chosen, who were grouped most closely about him.

"And he opened his mouth and taught them." Distil the meaning and message of this sermon into a sentence! Is it not this,—God is Father, man is his child?

"(Saying) Blessed are the poor in spirit." It is characteristic of Christ that his first great utterance points the way to happiness. We are happy if our spirits are poor; literally, if we are beggars in spirit, having nothing and depending on the gifts of another for the very necessities of life. This cannot necessarily mean external poverty, for that is consistent and indeed often found linked with pride or covetnousness, while this is the beatitude of humility. "For theirs is the kingdom of heaven." Poverty of purse may prove irreparable; wealth awaits the poor in spirit.

"Blessed are they that mourn." This is a hard saying; experience is needed for its understanding. Every one shrinks from sorrow at first, and needs to learn its blessedness in the school of Christ. "For they shall be comforted." Comfort is from two Latin words, "fortis," strong, and "con," together: 'made strong together." The Christian comfort means the strength that comes from fellowship with Christ.

"Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth." It is the meek who really inherit the earth—the unselfish, the humble, the religiously minded, who regard it as one of the many rooms in their heavenly Father's mansion, which they, as his children, are free to use and enjoy.

"Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled." This Beatitude shows us a man ravenous with hunger, parched and panting with thirst, and tells us that when we long for goodness as much as such a man longs for food and drink, then we are among the blessed of the Lord.

"Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy." Blessed are those who, having heard the moan of misery, have run to its relief.

"Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God." Purity of heart makes possible the vision of God, and the vision of God leads the soul into a higher purity.

"Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called sons of God." Let us remember how the herald angels at Bethlehem song of peace on earth. These sons of God were not, it must be noticed, the Peace-Lovers or the Peace-Talkers; they were the Peace-Makers, the constructive agents of tranquillity, the efficient contributors to security, the mediators of peace.

"Blessed are they that have been persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." Our Saviour, looking ahead through the centuries, beheld a long series of conflicts between his church and the world. Whoever is for righteousness, strongly and altogether, must expect the bitter opposition of those who are for unrighteousness.

"Blessed are ye when men shall reproach you, and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake." This is the key-phrase which locks up the whole list of Beatitudes: "For Christ's sake." It is this that transmutes poverty of spirit into heavenly humility, that brings comfort to the mourning, and glorious riches to the meek, and plenty to those that hunger and thirst after righteousness.

"Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven." A Christian must, if he would follow Jesus, be a joyous and jubilant man. "For so persecuted they the prophets that were before you." Hebrews 11th is a glorious list of God's persecuted saints, and the chapter is full of their recompense or reward.

"Ye have heard that it was said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor." Christ quotes from Lev. 19. "And hate thine enemy." This clause is not in the Old Testament, but the rabbis added it, regarding it as a legitimate inference from the first clause.

"But I say unto you." The Saviour did not hesitate to place himself in direct opposition to the Jewish religious leaders, and to condemn as false doctrine the teachings of their rabbis. "Love your enemies, and pray for them that persecute you." Not merely endure your enemies, be patient with them, ignore them, but actively love them and intercede with the Father for them.

"That ye may be sons of your Father who is in heaven." See verse 9: sons of God, because like God, partaking of the divine nature, for God is love. "For he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and the good, and sendeth rain on the just and the unjust. Shall we say that God, whose sun shines so equally on all, cares nothing for either good or bad? No; but impartial nature has this good news to tell, that the Father in heaven cares for all his children.

"For if ye love them that love you, what reward have ye?" Love for those who are kind and love for kindred requires no special grace and is deserving of no particular reward. "Do not even the publicans the same?" The most despised of all men were the publicans or tax-gatherers for the Romans, since they used their power usually to extort and oppress.

"And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others?" Reference is made, not to casual greetings, but to the long and formal salutations in which the Orientals indulged. "Do not even the Gentiles the same?" The heathen, men of other than Jewish faith, universally scorned among the Jews.

"Ye therefore shall be perfect, as your heavenly Father is perfect." The absolute perfection of God is not attainable, but love which is perfect—relatively to man's capacity and condition is.

Ten Best-Dressed Women in the World

Poll of Leading Paris Dressmakers Places Baroness Eugene de Rothschild, Mrs. Richard Norton and Princess Colonna Among Winners

Paris.—Ten among the millions of beautiful, well-gowned women of the world were elected recently to the halls of feminine immortality as the best dressed women in the world.

A poll of leading Paris dressmakers showed surprising accord and resulted in the unseating of several previous queens of the wardrobe.

The Baroness Eugene de Rothschild is the best dressed woman in Paris. She entertains extensively in her elegantly furnished town house and at her country chateau. She is typically Parisienne in her love of black and of black and white, and wears beautiful diamonds, uses the finest perfumes and has an air of complete distinction.

London's fashion queen is the Honorable Mrs. Richard Norton, tall, slender and dark eyes. She is a frequent visitor to Paris and travels extensively in Europe. She likes solid colors, rich materials and bright accessories.

Mrs. Harrison Williams, famed hostess, polled the greatest vote as the best dressed woman of the United States.

Dark, stately, with a lovely complexion, she leans toward bright colors and her costumes this season favor reds, blues in all shades, and black. She wears gorgeous jewels and furs.

Mrs. Williams was Mona Shrader Bush, of Lexington, Ky. She married Harrison Williams, utilities magnate, in 1926.

Other Winners

Other winners in the fashion election, for their countries, were: The Princess Colonna, of Rome; the Duchess D'Alba, of Madrid; the Countess de Saab, of Cairo; Mme. Paz de Anchorena- Buenos Aires; the Baroness von Krieger, Amsterdam and The Hague; the Countess Georges Potocky, Istanbul, and the Countess Jean Theotoky, Athens.

These ten women by no means end the list of ultra smart dressers as indicated by Paris couturiers. An imposing list of names and titles could be made up of those included in the voting—the extraordinarily chic Begum Aga Khan, the Maharani Holkar of Indore, Princess Nicholas of Rumania, Princess Dora Ruspoli and Marquise Nicolete Visconti of Rome; the Duchess D'Arion of Spain, Countess Zouboff and Countess Arrivabenem, twin Italians who live in Paris, and the Princess de Bourbon Parma.

Other smart women include Mme. Arturo Peralta Ramos, the former Millicent Rogers; Mrs. Flora Whitney Sebastian; the Baroness Cartier de Marchienne, wife of the Belgian Ambassador in London; and Lady Mendl, the former Elsie de Wolfe, who has long been famous for her sport ensembles.

The outstanding feature of the costumes of these women whose smartness is now enjoying international reputation is said by the Paris dressmakers to be that of conservatism, with a rare and well chosen use of eccentricity. Richness of material, sobriety of color emphasis on line and desing adapted to each personality are the A.B.C.'s of the queens of fashion.

Wearing of Trains And Veils Optional At Drawing Room

Governor-General and Countess of Bessborough Will Open Ottawa Social Season Jan. 26

Ottawa.—The wearing of veils, feathers and trains will be optional at the drawing room which the Governor-General and the Countess of Bessborough will hold in the Senate Chamber here on Friday evening, January 26.

This important social event always follows closely upon the opening of Parliament which, this year, is set for Thursday, January 25. It marks the opening of the Ottawa social season, and is generally attended by many persons from outside the capital who come to Ottawa for the session, or especially to be presented to Their Excellencies.

The announcement from Government House states that if trains are worn by women "they should be straight from the shoulders to the ground, and should not exceed two yards in length nor extend more than 18 inches from the heel of the wearer. The white tulle veil attached to the feathers should not be longer than 45 inches."

Men will wear full or evening dress.

In the case of women intending to be presented for the first time, it is requested that application be made in writing to the Aide-de-Camp in Waiting at Government House before January 22. It is announced that no further applications can be entertained after that date.

Good Work Done by Toronto Women

For 50 years Mrs. R. B. Hamilton, of Toronto, has collected and made knitted articles and toys for children of the various city hospitals, having of course, the assistance of friends in the undertaking. For days before Christmas her home looked like a wholesale toy emporium.

Another Toronto woman who lives near a market garden which produces savory herbs, dried out and packed up small parcels to go to women in the north who can never get the real home-made flavor of marjoram, sage and summer-savory, but must rely on the occasional tin of herbs which comes their way, and seems a luxury.

"I felt like a pioneer mother," this philanthropist declared. "So they must have worked over their storing of herbs in old days."

$400 Ships Planned in England

Some American airplane manufacturer had better get busy and start turning out those $700 airplanes Eugene L. Vidal, director of aeronautics in the Department of Commerce, has been talking about. A. Bristol, England, airplane engine manufacturer is about to market a motor for less than $200, and several British designers are now figuring out a $400 ship to go with it.

News And Information For The Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Reduced Freight Rate

An important reduction in freight rates on certain export cattle from feeder points in Eastern Canada to Montreal, St. John and Halifax, is announced in advices to the Ontario Marketing Board. The reduction apples only to cattle in transit, that is cattle to which the railways had previously carried to the feeder points. The rate will be cut in half and will mean a saving to the farmer shipping, for example, from a point in Ontario to St. John or Halifax, of approximately $30 a carload.

Choosing the Breeding Male

Where pedigree breeding of poultry is followed, the first choice male should be one that has passed through a breeding season and has shown by the production of his daughters that he has the ability to pass on the desired characters for the high production of large sized eggs. The second choice should be a cockerel selected for vigour, size and breed type, from a heavy laying large egg dam and a sire similarly bred, whose daughters, the cockerel's sisters, have shown their ability for high production.

Where pedigree breeding is not followed, it will pay to purchase males such as these.

Reforestation Encouraged

Continuing its campaign to stimulate the reforestation of waste areas in the province and to encourage the planting of trees by farmers, the Ontario Forestry Branch announces that owing to the fact that it has on hand a surplus of trees this year the former limit of 3,500 trees for reforestation purposes to one person will not be adhered to, and that no charge will be made for additional quantities over this number. For windbreak purposes, however, no increase in number will be made, 500 being the limit to each applicant. It is interesting in this connection to note that the Ontario Statutes declare that "any part of a farm used for forestry purposes or being "woodland", is exempt from taxes, provided that such exemptions shall not be greater than one acre in ten acres of such farm, and not more than twenty acres held under a single ownership.

Choosing a Fertilizer Mixture

While it is customary to select a fertilizer mixture which has been found specially adapted to the crop to be grown, the nature and past treatment of the soil should also be taken into consideration. For example, if the soil is of a very light, sandy nature, the fertilizer should contain a good percentage of potash, but on heavy clay loams, only a small amount of this element may be required by the plant for early growth. On soils which have recently been well manured and are well supplied with organic matter, a fertilizer relatively high in phosphoric acid may be required for maximum crop production.

Fresh Lamb Season Longer As Result of Experiment

The Ontario Marketing Board states that as a result of an experiment conducted by the Dominion Government, fresh-killed lamb will be easily available to consumers throughout the remainder of the winter.

Last fall, some 3,000 lambs were brought to Ontario from Saskatchewan, and placed for finishing with 26 farmers in the vicinity of Toronto. After making unusually great gains, these animals are now going to the killing plants, and will be placed on the market gradually during the next four or five weeks.

Being fresh-killed, and finished on grain, the quality and flavour, this variety of lamb is as different from frozen lamb as a milk-fed chicken is from the ordinary variety.

Formerly, all Canadian lamb was marketed in the fall, with a limited portion held over for the Christmas trade. However, in order to spread the season for fresh lamb, and to increase the market for Ontario grain, the Dominion Government assisted in bringing these western lambs into Ontario.

Judging by the success of the experiment, this procedure will be made a regular practice in future

Time for Farmers to Take Stock

The important work of taking stock and making a plan for farming operations during the coming crop season should not be delayed any longer. The farmer who does this will be able to order his fertilizers, spraying material, insecticides, etc., in good time. It will enable him to cut out unprofitable cows and hens and other animals, and show him where, by better farming methods, more adequate fertilization, etc., he can cut the costs of production.

Ship Purebred Dairy Cattle to Britain

"The Ontario Government is assisting dairymen of the Province to open the British market for purebred dairy cattle," Hon. Thomas L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, announced recently.

"In view of the restrictions recently placed on the importation of Irish cattle into Great Britain and the greater demand for milk resulting from the operation of the British Milk Marketing Scheme, the possibilities of export from Canada of dairy cattle to England seem very considerable," the Minister continued, "and ther s no reason why our high class dairy cows could not meet the demand once all the facts are known.

"Some dairy cows of grade type have been going over to Great Britain during the last few months, and have had a very favorable reception and these shipments have given British dairy farmers some idea of the class of cattle Ontario is ready to supply. The Government through the Ontario Marketing Board, has arranged with the Holstein-Friesian Association to send over an experimental shipment to try out the British market for high grade Holstein cows of the finest Oxford County type obtainable. All animals are thoroughbred, from accredited herds, tuberculin tested and blood-tested. The shipment comprises a selection from twenty Oxford herds, and is made up of cows from four to six years old, mostly all heavy springers. The animals are in splendid condition and are from stocks with average records around 16,000 to 17,000 pounds of milk for 365 days.

"R.M. Holtby, Fieldman of the Holstein-Friesian Association, and wel-known Holstein authority, is accompanying the shipment to fully make known the merits of Ontario's large high producing purebred cows and to make a connection on the British market, to provide it with the type of Canadian dairy cattle now so much appreciated by American dairy experts for their nigh production records.

"This is the first experimental shipment, and will likely be followed by shipments of other distinctive dairy types, if this one proves successful."

FACTS ABOUT HYDRO—No. 1 of a series of official announcements by the Ontario Municipal Electric Association (O.M.E.A.), representing the Municipalities who own the Hydro-Electric System of Ontario.

ONTARIO MUNICIPAL ELECTRIC ASSOCIATION

Who Owns Hydro?

The great public service enterprise known as the Hydro-Electric System, or simply as "Hydro", while operated and administered by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario acting in the capacity of trustee, with the Government of Ontario acting as banker, is the property of the people of the associated Hydro municipalities.

Hydro-Electric power is distributed, through the agency of the Hydro municipalities, to the citizens who use this low cost electric service.

The Ontario Municipal Electric Association (O.M.E.A.) is an organization constituted to represent its member municipalities—the owners of Hydro—and to make representations to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the O.M.E.A., held in the City of Toronto on October 31, 1933, a Publicity Committee was appointed "to collect and disseminate information in respect to Hydro facts". At a subsequent meeting, held on November 30, 1933, the Executive Committee individually endorsed and unanimously passed the following Resolution regarding Publicity.

WHEREAS, from time to time, statements have been made and published with respect to the Hydro System of Ontario that are not in accordance with the facts, and which, if allowed to go unanswered, tend to create doubts in the minds of the public, and more particularly that section of the public which is not sufficiently interested, or will not take the time, to look into matters carefully enough to secure the information for themselves;

AND WHEREAS the Municipalities of Ontario are the owners of the Hydro System, in which they have an investment of some three hundred millions of dollars; and anything which would create distrust in the minds of the people as to the proper and efficient conduct of this great Public Utility would tend to impair the value of the investment of the Municipalities in the Hydro System:

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED: — THAT The Executive Committee of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association endorses the report of the Publicity Committee;

THAT we believe, with them, that the time is now opportune to carry out the repeated requests and suggestions which have been made from time to time by our Association;

THAT a campaign of publicity be carried on so that the people of Ontario, who have been responsible for the outstanding success of this great Public Utility during its twenty-five years of existence, shall be given from time to time all necessary information as to the administration and operation of the Hydro System and its branches in all parts of Ontario . . . . . .

In pursuance of this Resolution, the Publicity Committee of the O.M.E.A. will publish informative statements which will set forth, clearly and simply, what Hydro ownership has done for the people of this Province. The facts about Hydro speak for themselves.

The young people of the Williamsburg Luther League have enjoyed the way in which their devotional League meetings have been conducted during these cold, snowy weeks of winter. Each Friday evening the young people met at the parsonage, and in a group went to the home of someone unable to attend church and other activities. The following homes have been visited: Mrs. Luther Hall, Glen Becker; Mr. Herman Whittaker and Mrs. Elizabeth Pharoah. MR. GEORGE GORDON

News of the death of Mr. George Gordon, of Tottenham, Ont., which occurred recently, was learned with much regret by many relatives and friends in Williamsburg and district. The late Mr. Gordon passed away very suddenly at his home in Tottenham, near Toronto, while seated in a chair in front of the radio, "listening in".

Mr. Gordon, who was a son of the late William Gordon and his wife, Martha Wingard, was born about eighty years ago, in the home now occupied by Mr. R.F. Norval in Williamsburg village, where he spent his early years, and where he was so well and favourably known.

Besides his wife, he is survived by one daughter, Jean and one son, Murray, of Tottenham; two sisters, Miss Annie Gordon, returned missionary from Smyrna, Turkey and Mrs. Sam Hayes (Martha) of Leeton, Ont.; one brother, William Gordon of Sand Lake City, Mich.; a sister-in-law, Mrs. Thos. Gordon of Morrisburg; also a number of nephews and nieces. Mrs. Etta Algire and Messrs Isaac and George Wingard, all of Williamsburg, are cousins of the deceased.

CHEESE MARKETING TO BE MODERNIZED

Cheese-marketing methods in Ontario will be revolutionized under the plan announced by Hon. T.L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture.

Complete modernization of both production and marketing is the aim of the newly formed Ontario Cheese Patrons' Association, which, according to Colonel Kennedy's statement, "promises to restore our exports and largely increase domestic consumption and production."

Months of organization have preceded formation of the Patrons' Association, said Colonel Kennedy. Financial assistance will be given by the Government in the early stages, and all local officials of the Agriculture Department will be instructed to co-operate in organizing district branches. Financing will be effected through an assessment of 5 cents per 1,000 pounds of milk delivered at the cheese factory. Payment of this amount, Colonel Kennedy believes, will be paid gladly by the farmer, in view of the advantages obtainable from the system. Headquarters of the Patrons' Association will be at Belleville, under the management of J.L. Jones Secretary-Treasurer. The dairying section of the Province will be divided into five districts, each supervised by an executive member of the association.

Prepare Yourself

Down at Wheatley the other day a man fended off an attempted holdup with a newspaper he carrying in his hand. Now is the time to subscribe. You never know when a newspaper will come in handy.—Goderich Signal.

The Bible

When mankind ceases to believe in the fighting power of simple words, and the beauty of rhythmic, flowing sentences that go straight to the heart and the head, it will perhaps take heed of the myriad critics of the Bible. To countless millions, seeking the Bible, turning to it for help, for wisdom, for its beauty of words and phrase; turning to it because it breathes a message of divine inspiration, badly-published or not, it is heavenly poetry. These millions find no fault with it. The modern publishing house might produce a de luxe edition of some modernist's work, with illustrations by Dore. It is not likely to produce such music, such fundamental truth, such economy of expression with barren simplicity, as in the sentence: "The Lord is my Shepherd."—Vancouver Sun.

ntelligence Quota

A speaker tells a local service club that only five per cent. of the total population of the world are thinkers; the majority, he says, are mere imitators. However, the situation isn't as bad as it might seem, for probably about 95 per cent. class themselves as belonging to the five. They're satisfied, anyhow, and personal satisfaction, as we know, is the kind that counts.—Border Cities Star.

A Tip

Knees for automobiles have been invented and that they may be seen to best advantage the cars will probably be exhibited with tartan and sporran. —Port Arthur News-Chronicle.

Understandable

There is an old-world charm about the rejoicing of millions of Japanese over the birth of a son to the Emperor Hirohito and Empress Nagako. Even in this day of tottering dynasties and populistic ferment we of the British Empire can understand the Japanese rejoicing, for we have our own deep loyalty to the House of Windsor. In the case of the House of the Mikados, however, there was an especial urgency in the prayers for a male offspring, since under Japanese law a woman may not ascend the throne. In British history, on the contrary, some of our most illustrious sovereigns, such as Elizabeth and Victoria, have been reigning queens.—Montreal Star.

Sunken Treasure in Great Lakes

If dwellers along the Great Lakes were to read the government reports of disasters on these inland seas, says a writer in the New York Times, they would learn of treasure to the value of $15,000,000 sunk in them since the middle of the nineteenth century. The treasure is not in the form of doubloons, but some of it is of a nature to yield profit if recovered. The treasure is of various kinds. In Lake Erie between Cleveland and the Detoit River lies the steamer Clarion with a cargo of locomotives. In the middle of the same lake lies a vessel with 300 barrels of whiskey, while another like cargo is at the bottom of Lake Michigan sear Manitou Island. Between Dunkirk, Ohio, and Erie rests a boat with $50,000 worth of pig zinc which divers have failed to get. There are many cargoes, lost on the Great Lakes, to retrieve which no serious attempt has been made. There are possibilities of real profit if ocean diving equipment were brought in for this purpose.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

The Poor Rich

Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, who is shortly to become Miss Mary Pickford again, has given out a moving interview in New York all about God and life and Mary Pickford. Among other immortal sentiments uttered therein is the opinion that the best things in life are free and that wealth cannot buy anything worth while. No doubt this is true, but it is a curious fact that hardly anyone finds it out until after he has made a lot of money. And while wealth is recognized in every child's copy book and in every interview with the rich as a curse and a burden, yet hardly anyone ever attempts to escape it after acquiring it. —Victoria Times.

Well Earned

Lord Willingdon has been given four months' leave of absence from India. He has earned it by his combination of firmness, sympathy, tact and insight in dealing with India's political problems. The fact that he asks for a long vacation is proof that he fears no turmoil in the near future.—London Advertiser.

Plenty of Material

When Doris Warner, daughter of the president of Warner Bhos., screen producers, was married in New York, a sound film was made of the proceedings and presented to her. If this sort of thing extends to movie actresses many of them will soon have enough records to afford their friends a complete night's entertainment.—Brantford Expositor.

Unusual Winters

After three weeks of sub-zero weather Albertans are beginning to question if the province's famous "open winters" ever did have existence, except in the minds of some of the old-timers. Certainly it is a reflection on the local weather prophets who were confident that the Winter of 1933-34 was to be unusually mild.—Calgary Herald.

First Toronto Motorist

A notable figure in the life of Ontario passes from the scene in the death of Dr. P. E. Doolittle. He was the first man in Toronto to own and operate a motor car and his great interest in this form of transportation and its development, which continued until his death, made his name well-known throughout the province and, indeed, all over the Dominion.—Toronto Telegram.

Letters in Mourning

The year 1933 should bear a black mark in the English literary calendar. So far as can be judged at the moment, it has brought to light no work of outstanding merit, but it has removed from the scene several who had established themselves in the field of letters and an unusual number of those of lesser fame.—Vancouver Province.

Looks Like It

In Paris a man was arrested near the Courts of Justice clad only in his underwear. Lawyer won his suit?—Brantford Expositor.

Doctor Is "Mr."

The death of Mr. I. H. Cameron removes a very remarkable surgeon from the ranks of the great operators of the Dominion. He always insisted on being called Mr. Cameron, not Dr. He was a surgeon, he said, not a medical man, and chose to maintain the ancient tradition.—Hamilton Herald.

THE EMPIRE

High Praise for a Prince

And certainly, in close-fitting dark overcoat, with a pink carnation—presented to him by the little son of R. G. Clissold, chairman of the Edgbaston Occupational Centre—and his fair hair sleek in the winter sunshine, the Prince looked as handsome and healthy as any film star.—Birmingham, England, Gazette.

Selling a Pair of Socks

Here is a charming—and true—story of Lady Strathmore, the Duchess of York's mother. At her bazaar in London the other day there were dozens of pairs of socks and in the midst of selling some of them she looked up at her customer rather anxiously.

"You're a big man— wonder if these will be long enough in the foot for you," she said. "I know from my own boys that they are so uncomfortable if they are short.

"I'll tell you what to do. Take them with you and try them on, and if they are not long enough I'll knit new toes for you."—Overseas Daily Mail.

Risked Her Own Neck

A superintendent of police at Oxford spoke with commendable, even if unconscious, candor to a cyclist summoned during the past week for disobeying a traffic signal. As the lay press missed the whole point of his remark, we cannot let it pass without pointing the homily.

The cyclist was a young lady who innocently imagined, when she found the red light against her, that she could become a "pedestrian" on the spot and walk forward, ahead of the motor traffic. She went to the unparalleled length of wheeling her cycle between two motor cars, which we imagine must be a very galling thing for a motorist to experience. In the police court she said she thought that if she walked she came under the "pedestrian category." The much-shocked superintendent retorted: "And risk your neck!" To which the depraved young lady replied: "Well, it is my own." She was fined a pound.

The temptation is to leave the facts without further comment — as the superintendent presumably did. But those who still walk should bear in mind his professional opinion that to become a pedestrian on the spur of the moment is to risk your neck. We propose to leave it to the pedestrians on the one hand and the speedsters on the other to argue the point whether a "modern pedestrian's" neck is still his own!—G. K.'s Weekly.

Gas and Destruction

We have been told that airplanes with poison gases could wipe out the population of a city in a night, but Lord Mottistone (formerly better known as General J. E. B. Seely) declares it "a complete and fantastic delusion to suggest that London could be paralyzed by one single blow from the air." Poison gases, to be effective, must be light enough not to spread themselves on the ground and heavy enough to resist dissipation in the atmosphere. There is perhaps as much tendency to overrate the danger from gas as there was to exaggerate the terrors of Big Bertha, which was able to project shells into Paris from 30 miles away, but for every shell that was fired less than one person was killed. No one desires to have a demonstration of gas warfare, but we must be prepared to defend ourselves, whatever be the consequence of attack from the air.—The Weekly Scotsman.

The English Birth-Rate

More marriages, fewer births! In the third quarter of this year the number of persons married was greater by 15,903 than the corresponding quarter of 1932 and greater by 35,408 than the number in the June quarter, but the births were 8,101 fewer than in the 1932 quarter and the birth rate dropped to 14.6 per thousand. France, Getrmany and Italy are now intent on raising their birth-rate. They realize that a nation's greatest asset is its citizens. Britain cannot afford a falling birth-rate now. — The Sunday Chronicle.

The "Royal Scot"

Now, if not before this time, the "Royal Scot" is the best known train in the world. To hundreds of thousands of "Century of Progress" visitors she is the incarnation of English railroading—even of England herself. And in every way she has done her country proud. Whoever conceived the idea of sending the "Royal Scot" to America—and whoever evolved the plan for her visit—knew his showmanship. The flying tour made by the train before she took her place at the "Century of Progress" was just sufficient to stimulate an enormous amount of public interest.—R. M. Van Sant, in Modern Transport.

Lindbergh's "Services" Worth $250,000 Stock

Washington.—An official of Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc., recently told United States Senate investigators 25,000 shares of the company stock were given to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh.

D. M. Sheaffer, chairman of the air company's executive committee, told of a complicated system used for what he said was "income tax purposes" in transferring the stock to the noted pilot.

He said the stock, valued at -250,-000, was given to Lindbergh in return for "services."

Melbourne to Oust Ugly Signs and Noise

Melbourne, Vic. — Fresh campaigns against city noises, ugly poster advertisements and pillar verandahs are being planned by the city council for the coming municipal year.

After tram noises, which the council cannot stop, the chief causes of noise are regarded as being squeaking car brakes, radio loudspeakers, and "spruikers" outside theatres and shops. The practice of having uniformed "spruikers" outside shops, announcing bargains in stentorian voices, has grown in recent years. All such noises, the council feels, could be subdued by stricter enforcement of the council's anti-noise by-laws.

Ugly boardings which do not comply with the council's regulation will be pulled down. Owners of buildings with pillar verandahs will be urged to demolish them, or to replace them with verandahs of the cantilever type, within the next five years. The council's view is that pillar verandahs, besides interfering with traffic, mar the appearance of the city streets. Many have been demolished in recent years.

Princess Alice Opens London Bazaar

A big London event recently was a church bazaar in aid of Anglo-Catholic home and foreign missions, held for two days in the Royal Horticultural Hall at Westminister. Out of the 50 special stalls, 10 represent Africa, south of the equator, and St. Helena. The bazaar was opened by Princess Alice, Countess of Athlone, in recognition of her special South African connection.

The Princess, who was attended by Miss Heron-Maxwell, said she was Miss Heron-Maxwell, said she was happy to support the work of English church missions at home and abroad. "I think those engaged in church work at home," she said, "often fail to realize what the life of the workers abroad is like. My knowledge is limited to my South African experiences, but during my seven years' residence in South Africa, I had ample opportunity to see the work done there by missionaries, and I learnt to appreciate the moral, social and physical help they give to the natives. The work is so extremely worth while, but none of it can be carried on without financial support."

14,200 Italian Settlers Flock to Reclaimed Lands

Littoria, Italy.—Trainloads of peasants arrive here every month and thousands of these hardy farmhands start lift afresh in this city, which was once the centre of the now reclaimed Pontine marshes. Here at least there is no depression.

These rugged folk come from the most varied points of the peninsular and their one wish is to till the soil. The vast expanses of the reclaimed Pontine marshes today make their life dream come true.

Veteran farmers stand at attention and mechanically click their heels together before uttering a monosyllable. A good many lately have been coming from the Friuli region. Property is so subdivided and scarce there and so thickly populated that lots destined for farm-sharing often measure less than a hectare. Hence they become wanderers in search of work, almost gypsy-farmers. The Pontine experiment is curing the disease. Men are falling in love again with their soil, their plow and oxen.

Famous Woman Spy Happily Married

Marthe Cnockaert, wife of Capt. McKenna, Ex-British Soldier

Yesterday I heard the truth about one of the Great War's greatest love romance, writes a woman correspondent of a London daily newspaper. It was the love story of a famous spy, who is now in Britain, told by her husband, Captain McKenna, ex-soldier.

"Out of the desolation of mud, rain, graves and crosses came the greatest happiness which we two had ever known," he said.

The other person of the "we" is Marthe Cnockaert, though I am breaking a promise in describing her in this manner.

"Captain McKenna is the husband of Madame McKenna, please, and I am the wife of a great soldier. The rest we are trying to forget." That is Madame McKenna's emphatic wish.

She is a wife now. Her husband is her hero. And like all good Belgian women, she left all the talking to him.

Cemetery Meeting

"We met on a bleak November morning just a week or so after the war. A friend and I were visiting the cemetery at Westrosebeke, looking for graves of some of my friends who were buried there," he said.

"We plodded over the field, and saw a woman standing a little way in front of us, looking over the field of crosses . . . That was Marthe.

"My friend spoke to her. He asked her if she knew the place. He spoke to her first. It was her home town, and she was coming back to it to find nothing but the ruin of all her memories.

"I like Marthe immediately, and it was some time later that I learned of her work. I felt even happier when I realized her bravery . . . But very humble. For she had done great work."

Wonderfully Happy

Marthe had listened to us till then, but she here interrupted.

"He did, too. He was a great soldier. The whole war he fought. Very near to me . . . And they gave him the Military Cross and bar and the French Croix de Guerre."

"But Marthe. . . ."

And to avoid any argument I intervened.

"You both served your country."

They are charming people. Wonderfully happy and very simple in their living.

"I was a spy," said Marthe. "I cannot regret it; I would be a spy again."

"And I am a spy's husband, and as Marthe is the spy I cannot regret that for one moment either," said Captain McKenna.

I left them together, one of the happiest married couples I have ever met.

Sydney Steel Plant Gets Large Order

Sydney, N.S.—Sir Newton Moore, president of the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation, has announced the corporation had closed a contract for an order of 6,000 tons of steel rods, to be rolled at the Sydney plant. He did not disclose the name of the firm purchasing the rods.

Hospitable Calgary Welcomes Visitors

Showers Them With Gifts and the "Glad Hand"

Calgary. — Western hospitality means something in Calgary, not just a handshake and "welcome to our city."

A "welcome wagon" awaits the newcomer and his family. It is covered but not drawn, like the pioneer ones, by plodding oxen or fiery steeds. It has an up-to-the-minute motor and at the wheel sits a genial driver-hostess. The "welcome wagon" is loaded with gifts from local merchants for the newcomers and letters of welcome.

First there is a letter from Mayor Andy Davison inviting them to "come up and see me sometime." And then an invitation to dine free at a cozy downtown tea room, followed by a complimentary ticket to a movie and a free taxi ride home.

But that is not all. The "welcome lady" greets the new Calgary housewife with two baskets laden with foodstuffs—a quart of milk; a loaf of bread; butter; a tin of meat; several packages of biscuits; a bag of flour and a host of other household supplies.

There is also a bouquet of roses; a complimentary library card and the man-of-the-house is not forgotten He may have his hat cleaned and blocked free and his car washed and oiled,, also without charge.

And then for good measure there is a nice, shiny yardstick, but you don't need one to gauge western hospitality in Calgary.

Millions in Check But Borrows Taxi Fare

Washington.—A $43,300,000 check in his pocket and not enough money to pay a taxicab bill was the predicament in which Mr. Lloyd Landau found himself.

Mr. Landau is a solicitor for the Public Works Administration.

The taxicab bill was 40 cents and he was in Chicago.

After displaying the federal check to the doubtful driver and a considerable debate as to his identity, the driver allowed him to enter the Union League Club to borrow 50 cents from the desk clerk.

The check was drawn in connection with a government transfer of funds in Chicago.

New Nationality Law Helps Women in Britain

London.—By the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, which recently received the royal assent the lot of British women who marry foreigners is somewhat mitigated The act, which was originally introduced into Parliament as the Nationality of Married Women bill, enables a British woman who marries an alien to retain her own nationality unless she acquires his.

In the case of a husband who relinquishes his British nationality after marriage, the wife may retain her British nationality. On the other hand, an alien woman, marrying a British subject, will only become British at her own request, while a British woman married to a citizen of an enemy country will have the right to return to British nationality.

Budapest Has Milk Row

Budapest.—Five thousand liters of milk were poured out in the streets of Budapest a few days ago as a demonstration of Hungarian milk sellers against a decree of the government.

The Ministry of Agriculture recently issued a decree forbidding the direct supply of milk to the consumers in the capital and forcing the producers to deliver their goods to the Budapest Dairymen's Association.

A number of "milk mothers" (as the milk sellers going from house to house are called in Hungary) refused to obey this summons and either delivered no milk at all to the capital or tried to force their way through the police cordons at the octroi-frontier. During the encounters a number of the angry women opened their cans and poured out the milk.

Soviet Buys Canadian Wheat for Siberians

Saskatoon.—The Soviet Government has bought 16,000 bushels of Western Canada wheat for distribution in districts of Siberia needing early wheat, according to information received by Neil Stewart of Dunblane, Sask., president of the Saskatchewan Registered Seed Growers Association. The grain, now stored in a Moose Jaw elevator, will go for February delivery at New York.

Airman at Edmonton Gets Rude Surprise

Edmonton.—Heat actually forced Captain Walter Gilbert, Canadian Airways pilot, to land here a few minutes after he took off from the city airport on a projected flight to McMurray.

With a ground temperature of 42 degrees, Captain Gilbert glided into the air and bumped into an air current of 60 degrees at 1,000 feet. With his machine regulated for frigid winter flying, the motor started to overheat and he hurried to the ground.

A Flag Incident In Germany

Germany has many incidents to relate these days and the flag industry is working overtime to supply the demand. Herr Hitler is in the saddle and the people in every city, town, village and hamlet are more than anxious to display the swastika emblem of the Nazi party—as the Nationalist Party is called.

When we were in Berlin last summer, Mr. Treadaway, the manager of Canadian Pacific there, told me that, for months, he had been trying to get a special house-flag made, to display in front of his office, but, when I was talking to him, he didnt know when to expect it. The reason for this was in evidence wherever we went; each community was decked out, as if for a gala occasion, and I assure you that it provided a brilliant effect.

The story I am going to tell is, however, about a different circumstance—this happened the summer before last.

We were driving through the Rhineland and had visited Heidelberg, the university centre known to many by the fact that it was the setting for the popular musical comedy, "The Student Prince." We visited the Castle there, with its English ivy garden, planted when an English princess lived there as the wife of the Elector. We saw the old buildings of the University, with its student prison walls cut with names of many generations of students. We had an opportunity to drink light or dark beer in the upper room of the tavern where the celebrated duels took place and examined the duelling sabres sharpened to a razor-like edge. Around the walls of this old room were many pictures of student groups, each class wearing its own distinctive uniform and, on the faces of many could be seen the ugly scars of which German students were so proud.

We did not stay in Heidelberg on this occasion, but went to the neighboring town of Mannheim to spend the night. Mannheim is a modern city on the Rhine and is the second largest river port in Europe. It is only half an hour away from Heidelberg and possesses one of the finest hotels I have ever been in. The city is also an industrial centre and contains the Sunlight Soap factory, the motor factory of Daimler-Benz and other large plants. Another unusual thing for an European city is the regular arrangements of the streets and the letters and numbers instead of names.

As we drove up to our hotel—a magnificent structure, built, it is said, with monies borrowed from the United States—we noticed three large flagstaffs in front of the building. On the outer staffs were the flags of Germany and Mannheim respectively, while on the centre staff was the Stars and Stripes. This did not excite any comment as many Americans were travelling and we thought it was a gesture made on their account. When we entered and were having our rooms assigned, the manager said, 'You notice we have your flag up." I immediately knew what he meant, but answered him, "No, I didn't notice it." His expression changed and he said, "What, are you not Americans?" To which I replied, "Oh, yes, we are Americans all right, but we do not happen to come from the part of America to which that flag belongs." I saw that he was disappointed and somewhat surprised that we were all from Canada, but nothing more was said. Imagine our surprise, a few minutes later, to see an attendant hauling down the Stars and Stripes and, in its place, putting up the Union Jack. Talk about service.

A little later, at dinner time, the hotel people wished to do us further honour. Apparently the orchestra had intended to play American airs for us, but did not have time to find suitable substitutes for the changed conditions. Remember we were in Germany, not so very many years after the late war, and judge whether we were surprised when the orchestra leader looked over at me, with a smile, and gave the signal for the band to start. What do you think? "Tipperary": the British soldiers' marching song, played by an orchestra in Germany- Of course we showed our appreciation, after we had recovered from the shock. One thing, they, as all other Europeans do, recognized the British connection and we were properly thrilled with this acknowledgment.

Many benefits accrue from travel besides pure emotional enjoyment. It should enlarge the mind, energize the imagination. It will vitalize the books you read and the pictures you see. Above all it should beget toleration and the better understanding of the people whom we call "foreigners."

Have you ever been in a salt mine? Next week the story will be about an interesting visit to the bowels of the earth—in the salt mines near Salzburg.

Are you looking for something different in the way of entertainment for your church, society, club or institute?

Capt. F. H. Reid, the well-known traveller, who has been contributing the series of articles to this paper, under the heading of "Travel Impressions," has what is, perhaps, the finest collection of European views in the country. Pictures taken with his own camera, beautifully coloured, showing some of the out-of-the-way places, as well as the localities about which you have read and heard. Portugal, Spain, France, Italy, Switzerland, Austria, Jugoslavia, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Germany, Holland, Belgium and British Isles are included in this unique collection.

Paris Seeks to Stem Tide Of Students Asking Help

Paris.—Paris is faced with a students' crisis. The Quartier Latin has closed those halcyon days of light-hearted Bohemians and the students crowd to the great schools in ever-increasing numbers, but as the students increase, jobs diminish.

Examinations are made more difficult, newspapers hold investigations, the authorities issue warnings, but still the students come and the problem grows. Five hundred of those who were graduated in science in 1932 are unable to find jobs. In arts 767 are still unemployed.

"Sometimes," writes Claude Belanger, general secretary of the Unione Nationale des Studients de France, "a medical doctor is engaged at 15 francs a day selling pharmaceutical preparations. But most of them remain without work with nothing in their pockets but a piece of parchment." The position of the art student is, if anything, worse.

Urgent action is advocated. Reorganization of the medical and legal profession is pressed. It is suggested that from the period of the elementary school the child's special aptitudes be studied and careful counsel given on the choice of a career.

Plays Great Game—Knows Baby Dead

Birmingham, Eng.—Joe Bradford, Birmingham's centre forward, played a great game in the local Derby against Aston Villa recently.

Yet a few hours before the match his baby had died.

The baby was born two days before and he had spent the long hours between then and the day of the game in an anguish of anxiety.

When the news of the baby's death reached the Birmingham club an official immediately asked Bradford if he would like to retire from the game.

"I will stay," he said.

And he played well.

Two years ago Joe Bradford was the hero of a cup final. He had been suffering for weeks from an injured leg, but it was decided to play him in the Wembley match between Birmingham and West Bromwich.

West Bromwich won 2-1. Bradford scored Birmingham's only goal.

Dislike Josephine Baker

Helsingfors, Finland.—Miss Josephine Baker, the colored dancer, is having an unhappy time in the Baltic countries.

Last week she was not allowed to perform in Estonia. Later her appearance on the stage of a Helsingfors theatre caused a riot.

The famous dusky artist was assailed with stink bombs, accompanied by an outburst of catcalls and whistling.

"Go back to Africa!" shouted the enraged Finns.

The performance had to be broken off.

Meanwhile, outside the theatre, the police had to be summoned to disperse an unruly crowd.

First Baby In Nuddist Colony

Paris.—The first baby to be born in Physiopolis—the nudist colony on an island in the River Seine—has arrived to the wife of a French professor.

He weighed eight pounds. The professor and his wife, both prominent members of the colony, decided upon a "100 per cent. nuddist birth," as a scientific experiment.

Despite the recent bitterly cold weather the mother has taken her morning swim in the Seine and walked five miles a day on the island.

Mother and child are doing well.

Charmed Life

London.—A war-time airman's remarkable record was revealed at London sessions recently when he pleaded guilty to driving a motor car to the danger of the public.

The man, Mr. Leo Philip Scott-Paine, was fined £25 and ordered to pay 25 guineas costs. His license was suspended for three years.

Sir Henry Curtis Bennett, K.C., defending, revealed that Mr. Scott-Paine served throughout the war in the Royal Naval Air Reserve; was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross and medals from other nations; flew continuously under bombardment at Dunkirk; in 1917 was shot down in the North Sea, was picked up after five er; was taken to Germany, where he ad a half hours by a German destroy-was confined at six different prison camps; escaped from three of them; and was consequently placed in solitary confinement for three months.

Mr. St. John Hutchinson, prosecuting, offered no evidence regarding a further charge of driving a car while under the influence of drink, to which Mr. Scott-Paine had pleaded not guilty. The jury found him not guilty of that charge.

Important Deal

London.—Mr. Peter Mazzina, the former managing director of the Ambassador Club with which Mr. Maundy Gregory was so closely associated, has bought the Bristol Grill, Cork Street W., for £20,000.

Mr. Mazzina is believed to have made the purchase on behalf of a syndicate. He is one of the youngest restaurateurs in London.

During his seven years at the "Ambassador" he met many society celebrities, for the club was designed to be the most luxurious in London.

It was reputed to have had a membership of 11,000.

Makes Predictions For This Year

French Prophetess Foretells Return of Prosperity

Paris.—A year of peace and returning prosperity opened for the world on January 1, 1934.

This was the prediction of Mme. Blanche de Paunac, the French prophetess who won fame by predicting in the middle of summer, 1918, that the war would end with an armistice on November 11. In an hypnotic sleep Mme. de Paunac made the following specific predictions for 1934:

Hitler's power will be unbroken in 1934, but will pass away in 1935.

No political revolutions will disturb the year.

A great German general and two famous French statesmen will die.

A king who was driven from his throne will return.

There will be a big French air catastrophe, a group of planes failing to return to their point of departure.

There will be a German sea disaster.

Mme. de Paunac foresees no fighting of any sort during the year. She states that Russia will act as the world's peacemaker, preventing several nations going to war, while France, Britain and Italy will reach a working agreement.

Mussolini is to enjoy good health and Italy's affairs to run smoothly.

The greatest change is to be the restoration of the monarchy in Spain during the year.

In making these predictions Mme. De Paunac does not use crystal globes or other such devices. She goes into a trance and after showing suffering begins to speak. During this time her Persian cat sleeps on her shoulder.

Teaching Hens to Lay

The average hen lays many more eggs per annum than formerly, in Gt. Britain, the highest laying record in a recent competition being 232 eggs per bird in the heavy breed section, represented by white wyandottes, and 238 eggs per bird in the light breed section, represented by white leghorns.

The cost of feeding was about 1½d. a week per bird, while the gross profit on the 2,000 birds entered was 11s. 10½d. per bird, per annum.

An experimental farm, with 500 poultry and all the latest devices to induce hens to lay more eggs, is to be set up at Hull by the British Oil and Cake Mills, Ltd, The farm will have the most modern incubators and penning facilities, and the promoters hope that the result will greatly improve British poultry.

Three hundred poultry breeders recently visited the firm's huge model poultry farm at Bilton, Hull, where they were shown the stock of 2,009 birds. They were told that the manufacturers of poultry food had still much to learn about the direct effect on egg production of any material used in the mixtures they prepared.

Heroic Rescue From Poison Gas

Son Dies for His Father—Deadly Vapor Takes Two Lives

Coventry, Eng.—A son died to save his father here recently.

The resident manager of the new Coventry Corporation Sewerage Works, Mr. Arthur Ceney, went into an inspection chamber on the main sludge channel and was overcome by poisonous fumes.

The works manager, Samuel Toone, a veteran with 35 years' experience of sewerage management behind him, went at once to his aid.

He, too, was overcome.

Then John Toone, Samuel Toone's 19-year-old son, an apprentice to the city engineer's department, shouted for help. He could not wait while the proper equipment was brought.

With the high imatience of youth he, too, plunged down the manhole shaft to rescue his father and his chief.

He, also, succumbed to the gas.

Firemen came to the rescue. Like divers, with respirators for helmets and equipped with ropes to haul them and their human freight to the surface they descended into the sea of poisonous vapor.

When they emerged artificial respiration was applied to the three victims. A new resuscitation apparatus was used.

Finally it was possible to remove Samuel Toone to the Coventry and Warwickshire Hospital, where he lies between life and death.

For two hours artificial respiration was continued on Ceney and John Toone—

In vain.

Swiss Believed Past Slump's Critical Stage

Berne.—Switzerland's economists say this country has passed the critical stage of the depression.

The money market is stable, and the gold cover and gold holdings in foreign currencies of the national bank have increased. Better conditions in the capital market permitted a number of loan conversions, lightening the burden on public bodies.

The Swiss government has embarked on a program to reduce the budgetary deficit, and a financial recovery law has been passed by Parliament which will effect economies of about $8,000,000 and yield $25,000,000 in fresh revenue.

The cost of living has fallen slightly, the index figure being 131, as compared to 100 for 1914. The balance of trade has improved also.

Other encouraging symptoms are an increase of 1 per cent. in retail business for September and a decline in the number of applications for jobs at the labor exchanges.

Wake up your Liver Bile —No Calomel necessary

For you to feel healthy and happy, your liver must pour two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels, every day. Without that bile, trouble starts. Poor digestion. Slow elimination. Poisons in the body. General wretchedness.

How can you expect to clear up a situation like this completely with mere bowel-moving salts, oil, mineral water, laxative candy or chewing gum, or roughage? They don't wake up your liver.

You need Carter's Little Liver Pills. Purely vegetable. Safe. Quick and sure results. Ask for them by name. Refuse substitutes. 25c. at all druggists. 56

Washington.—Spellers who misspell "misspell" can't win spelling bees.

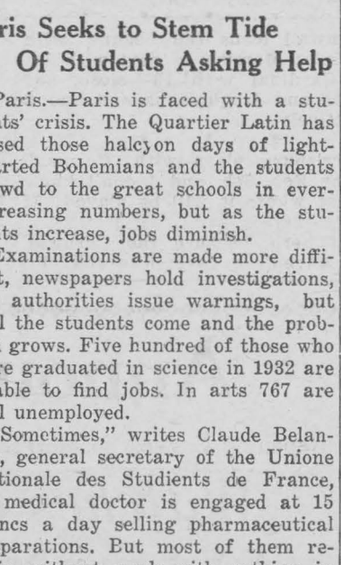
HER HIPS REDUCED 5 INCHES

Friends Wonder How She Does It

A KRUSCHEN SECRET



Those friends of Mrs. E. M. D., who have been wondering how that lady is reducing her hip measurement, are now let into the secret. She has been taking Kruschen. Here is a letter from her:—

"I was gaining in flesh and not feeling too well, so I started to take Kruschen Salts, and am nowon my third bottle. My hips used to be 47 ins., and the last three months I have got them down to 42 ins. So my friends who used to laugh at me are now wondering. I shall have the last laugh, for when I get my hips down to what I think is right I'll tell them. But I do know this—I am feeling better since taking Kruschen, and am really glad I kept on with it."—(Mrs.) E. M. D.

Here's the recipe that banishes fat—take one-half teaspoon of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast, modify your diet, and take gentle exercise. The stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels are tuned up, and the pure, fresh blood containing the six salts of Kruschen is carried to every part of the body. Then follows "that Kruschen feeling of energetic health and activity that is reflected in bright eyes, clear skin, cheerful vivacity and charming figure. Millions of people all over the world are already proving this daily. Why shouldn't you too?

Kruschen Salts is obtainable at all Drug Stores at 45c. and 75c. per bottle.

WADDINGTON WINS OVER BURGHS 4-3

With a former professional making his appearance on the line-up, Waddington sprung a 4-3 surprise victory on Saturday afternoon at the Auditorium, in Ottawa, against Burghs in the Intermediate City Hockey League bill.

With the score tied at 3-3 going into the last period, Waddington opened up and Pat Maloney, former pro., drifted one by Kennedy from outside the blue line for the winning tally. Maloney played a leading part in Waddington's close win, with a pair of neat goals. Burghs proved stubborn rivals for the first two frames, and held the blue and white clad squad even in the scoring column, but wilted in the final lap. Dalton Crowe played a smart game on the defence for Burghs, while Daley topped the list for the Rideau Warders with a brace of counters.

The teams:

New Edinburgh—Goal, Kennedy; defence, Crowe and Cherry; centre, Daley; wings, McGrath and McDonald; subs, Bradford, Blakely, Howard, Kuske, Powers, Dobbie, Crabtree, Simmons.

Waddington—Goal, Winges; defence, Maloney and Mills; centre Rabbe; wings, O. Fillman and P. Fillman; subs, Stiles, Butterworth, Dean, Hill, Morgan, Noffke, Manners, Russell.

Third Period

Waddington, Maloney 8.42
Penalties—Crowe, Mills.

On Monday night, Waddington nosed out Wanderers by a 2-1 count after a close battle.

Maloney and P. Fillman were the goal-getters for Waddington, with McGilton saving Wanderers from a shut-out. The losers put up a hard battle, but Fillman's third-period counter settled the issue.

The teams:

Waddington—Goal, Manners; defence, Maloney and Russell; centre, Rabbie; wings, C. Fillman and P. Fillman; alts., Butterworth, Morgan, Wentzloff, Dean and McLean.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

On Saturday evening last, Miss Simone Pigeon entertained at her home, at a delightfully arranged party, on the occasion of the celebration of her 16th birthday. The guests, numbering about forty, were received at the door by the hostess, and later all repaired to the living room, where Miss Pigeon displayed her gifts, and voiced her thanks for them. During the evening, the guests danced to music furnished by Mrs. Lanctot, Messrs E. Gauthier, M. Gauthier, G. Baker and Ray James.

At midnight, delicious refreshments were served. Greatly enjoyed by the guests was a beautiful birthday cake, adorned by sixteen candles, the gift of Mrs. Arthur Flynn.

All joined in singing "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow," before departing for their homes.

TIGERS SHUT OUT BY CANADIENS

Cornwall Canadiens retained their lead in the St. Lawrence League by whitewashing the Tigers in the local arena on Friday last. The largest crowd of fans of the season witnessed the match, and most of them were disappointed at the Tigers' failure to score. The game was handled by referee Roger Smith of Ottawa.

The Tigers rushed the play from the face-off, and Hermie Smith and Robinson missed a score only by inches. Sam McCallum was heavily bodied inthe centre zone by "Buck" Page, of Cornwall, during the next rush, but no penalty was called against Page. Still keeping possession of the puck, the Tigers, led by John Cross and Robinson, almost made it 1-0, but were outguessed by Wagoner. The lines changed, and right after the face-off, Bonneville stole the puck from Miller in the centre-ice area, and, flanked by Bus Cameron, he raced down on Tiny, who was left unprotected by the defence. After drawing Tiny to one side, Bonneville promptly slipped the disc to Cameron, who slapped it into the net. Halfway through the period, Beckstead took a shot from centre. John Cross, on the defence, tried to stop the puck, muffed it and it slid past Jones before he saw it. Just as the bell rang to end the first period, "Ticky" Latour scored Cornwall's third goal.

The second period opened with John Cross, of the Tigers, in the penalty box, and Cornwall proceeded to take advantage of this fact. Contant, Latour, and Marotte broke away on a three-man rush which ended in a score by Marotte. The other two drew assists. Tiny Jones then made two sensational saves in succession, from Chatelaine and Latour. John Cross came on and went right through the whole Cornwall team, but Wagoner came way out of his net, and checked John before he could shoot. Hermie Smith and Robinson went in for successive shots on the net, which Wagoner saved. Tiny then saved in succession from Latour, Contant, Cameron, Contant and Latour. Chuck Lapier and Robinson broke away, but were stopped by Wagoner. The second period ended with the score 4-0.

At the beginning of the third period, Marotte and Beckstead scored for Cornwall in quick succession to make the score 6-0. The Tigers began to come to life, and, playing five men up, rained shots all over the Cornwall defensive area. They hit the goal tender, the goal posts, the gallery—in fact everything but the twine. Bus Cameron was accidentally injured, but was able to continue. Morrisburg went in on the rampage again, only to have Ray James miss a wide-open net.

Taillefer cut Robinson on the face with his stick; Robinson retaliated, knocking "Ploeuf" to the ice with a straight left to the jaw. Taillefer got a five minute major penalty, and Robinson got two minutes. Joe Contant broke away with only a minute to go, and only the goal tender to beat. He drew Jones to one side of the net, slipped the puck in the other side, to make the score 7-0 as the game ended.

This is the first time this season that the Tigers have been shut out. The large score was due, in a great measure, to the ill-timed rushing of the Tigers' defence. The outstanding performers on the ice were John Cross, Hermie Smith and Tiny Jones for Morrisburg, and Bus. Cameron, Bonneville and Wagoner for Cornwall.

The teams:

Canadiens—Goal, Wagoner; defence, Page and Chatelaine; centre, Contant; wings, Cameron and Marotte; subs, Taillefer, Beckstead, Latour, Bonneville and McLaren (subgoalie).

Tigers—Goal, Jones; defence, Cross and Lapierre; centre, MacCallum; wings, Robinson and H. Smith subs, G. Smith, O'Malley, James and Miller.

CUSHION COMMENTS

Approximately five hundred and fifty fans were in the Arena here last Friday evening, when the "Canadiens" presented the "Tigers" with one of "them thar things" that we left in Iroquois.

The Tigers took a real trimming; they knew it was coming sooner or later, and they took it "on the chin."

Pride goeth before a fall"—truly said, eh? Tigers were travelling high wide and handsome for five games, then "socko"—they got in on the "button", and how!

Tigers have given their supporters five wins in a row—a splendid record—and the fans shouldn't kick. Some of our "village gossips" had a great old time after that game. I was fortunate enough to be able to listen in on some conversations. Oh, how they can pick a name to pieces!

Sorry to hurt anyone's feelings, but facts are facts, eh? And, if the shoe fits, put it on.

It was pleasing to see our fans from Waddington, N.Y., at the game. We certainly benefit by the M-W Ferry's fastest schedule on the old St. Lawrence.

* * *

Did you to to Cardinal Wednesday night? About thirty-five went from here.

The Tigers had Cardinal by the horns 1-0, with a down-hill pull until ten minutes of the last period—Mike O'Malley and John Cross drew simultaneous penalties, and the puck was faced at the Tigers goal line, with three Tigers on the ice, and Cardinal was lucky enough to bat one past Tiny, thus tying the score. Gee, folks, that was hard for me to take, when I had high hopes of leaving that "thing" in Cardinal that Cornwall left here.

John Cross started out on another of his long, lonesome rushes, and scored for the "Tigers" in the first period, before the game was very old.

There isn't a thing I can say for the "Tigers" individually, but I can collectively—they played the cleverest, fastest and most defensive game yet. I must say that Tiny Jones, our goalie, played a spectacular game (and that word isn't big enough). I counted seven shots at him at one time, in as many seconds, and Tiny had an idea that there were about ten pucks on the ice, at the rate they were flying at him. Tiny certainly was splendid. It's a treat to see him perform in the nets. He suffered a very painful injury in the overtime session, and John Cross nearly took the count with a twisted neck.

That makes three overtime games with Cardinal, and they haven't defeated us yet.

Happy Wells, from Aultsville, the Tigers goal umpire, didn't get much chance to flash the red light, but he'll need a new pair of eyes, after trying to keep them on that flying puck Wednesday night.

* * *

Cornwall leads the League with 18 points; Morrisburg next with 14, then Cardinal with 13—close, eh? Prescot and Iroquois have 6 and 3 respectively.

* * *

Morrisburg plays with Cornwall Monday Feb. 5th, and I don't know yet just where it will be played. If the weather is bad, well it will be played here, because the Cornwall team haven't a covered arena this year.

* * *

The schedule has been revised, in order that the play-offs of the St. Lawrence Senior League may be completed in time for the winning team to enter the district playdowns. You will find a copy of the revision in this paper.

* * *

Don't forget—Iroquois comes here next Thursday, the 8th, and they will be full of revenge. Don't miss it.

* * *

And don't forget, the sooner the tickets I have on hand are sold, the sooner I'll deliver, to some lucky person, that beautiful lamp and table that are exhibited in Marsh's window. If you can't get out, call me at 68 and I'll bring your ticket to your home.

* * *

So long—I'll be seeing you next Thursday at the Arena.

W.T. SHERMAN,
Tigers' Secretary

Cardinal won their sixth victory in the St. Lawrence Hockey League at Cardinal on Friday night last, by defeating Prescott 7-2 in a close-checking, uninteresting game played before a small crowd.

Prescott defeated Iroquois at the former's arena on Monday night, 5-4, in a game which was witnessed by a very small crowd, due to zero weather. The first period opened with Iroquois having the better of the play, and they succeeded in scoring three goals to Prescott's one. In the second period, Prescott went in the lead when they managed to secure three goals, and during the last period, each team secured a goal. Saunders, Bowers and G. Newsome did the scoring for Prescott, while Brouse, McDonald and Whittle tallied for Iroquois.

REVISED SCHEDULE

In order that the play-offs of the St. Lawrence Senior Hockey League may be completed in time for the wining team to enter the District Playdowns, it has been found necessary to make a revision of the last nine games of the second half of the schedule, which now stands revised as follows:

Tuesday Feb. 6—Prescott at Iroquois
Wednesday Feb. 7—Cornwall at Cardinal.
Thurs. Feb. 8—Iroquois at Morrisburg;
Cardinal at Prescott.
Fri. Feb. 9—Cornwall at Iroquois.
Sat. Feb. 10—Cardinal at Morrisburg
Mon. Feb. 12—Iroquois at Cornwall
Morrisburg at Prescott.
Tues. Feb. 13—Prescott at Morrisburg.

This will enable us to have the semi-finals played on Thursday and Saturday, February 15th and 17th, and the finals the following week, which will conclude our league in time for the winning team to enter the District Playdowns.
