It is suggested that wherever possible church services should begin at such hours as may be convenient in order to insure that there shall be a pause in the service at 11 a.m. for observation of the period of silence."

MURDER CHARGE LAID AGAINST MOUNTAIN MAN

A charge of murder has been laid against Christopher Moore, farmer, of Mountain Station, who, it is alleged, shot and fatally wounded Thomas Hart, 19 year old English immigrant, the night of October 31.

The charge was preferred by Provincial Officer B. A. Kennard, acting under instructions of Crown Attorney J. G. Harkness of Cornwall.

Moore has been under arrest since November 1, from which time he has been in Cornwall jail. He had been held as a material witness but investigation by provincial police has resulted in the murder charge being laid.

For the purpose of conducting the preliminary hearing, Magistrate John McCormick went to Mountain Wednesday afternoon.

The charge of murder is the aftermath of a series of Hallowe'en prank at Moore's home during which it is alleged Thomas Hart annoyed Moore causing the latter to fire a rifle, one bullet of which fatally injured the young immigrant.

Cornwall police state Moore has worried considerably since his incarceration in the jail there and while he has not made any statement to them it is evident he feels his position keenly. He has been far from communicative and, police say, he spends the greater part of the day in thought.

MRS. S. WALPOLE

(Cornwall Standard)

On Sunday, November 4th, our community was deeply shocked to hear of the sudden passing of one of our most respected residents, in the person of Mary Phifer, wife of Samuel Walpole. Although in failing health Mrs. Walpole was able to be about her household duties till the end, and her death was a shock to her family and friends. The deceased had been a resident of this village for some time and had a host of friends among old and young. She was ever ready to lend a helping hand to all in need. The late Mrs. Walpole is survived by her husband, her aged mother, Mrs. Phifer, Morrisburg; three sisters, Mrs. Loucks, Mrs. Fetterly, Mrs. P. Nash, Morrisburg; a sister-in-law, Mrs. Dixon, who resided with her. The funeral was held Tuesday morning from her late home to Our Lady of Grace Church and Cemetery, Rev. J. W. Dulin officiated at the Requiem Mass and at the grave.

The relatives present were A. J. Walpole, Toronto; Mrs. Fetterly and Mrs. Nash, S. P. Ryan, Morrisburg; J. Lagree, Louisville, N.Y. Mrs. F. Snetsinger, Cornwall; Mrs. H. Daye, Massena. The deepest sympathy is extended to the bereaved relatives.

MR. HARRIS STRADER

Death came suddenly to Harris Strader, at the residence of his nephew, Calvin Strader, Winchester.

Mr. Strader was born and spent his lifetime in Matilda, the son of the late Solomon and Elizabeth Strader. For several years he was the only surviving member of a family of twelve children.

Kindhearted and genial, he enjoyed an unusually wide circle of friends, many of whom gathered to pay him tribute.

His wife having predeceased him in 1898, he gave tender care to his three children, Willis of Matilda, Ogal of Sault Ste. Marie, and Mrs. Oscar Barkley of Williamsburg.

ANGUS PRICE, CHESTERVILLE, KILLED BY TRAIN

Angus Price, aged sixty, of Chesterville, laborer in a C.P.R. section gang, was instantly killed at 8.34 Thursday morning when struck by a west-bound freight train directly opposite the platform at Chesterville station. Mr. Price was working between the rails of the westbound track just at the eastern end of the platform while the other members of the gang were a little to the east of him as a freight came west with sixty-five empty cars. He was stooping at his work as he was struck when he straightened up, his pick falling on top of the pilot of the engine as he rolled under the wheels. His right leg was severed below the knee, the left leg broken, nose broken and a severe wound sustained on the ankle.

MRS. MARY A. BOUCK

One of Morrisburg's most highly respected citizens in the person of Mrs. Mary A. Bouck, daughter of the late Martin Munroe of Inkerman, passed to her eternal reward at her home in Morrisburg, on Friday, November 2nd, after an illness extending over more than a year. She was 71 years of age. Her husband the late Mr. R. M. Bouck, predeceased her about six years ago.

The funeral was held on Sunday, at 2.30 p.m. from her late home, Victoria street, to Fairview Cemetery Rev. Lawson officiating.

She is survived by four daughters and three sons: Mrs. Florence Smyth, Brockville; Mrs. Ogal Mallen, Toronto; Mrs. E. H. Robertson, Morrisburg; Mrs. C. W. Wereley, Morrisburg; Dr. Douglas Bouck, Grand Ledge, Mich.; Spencer Bouck Toronto; Ralph Bouck, Ottawa.

MR. JAMES ISABEL

One of Iroquois' oldest residents, and one who had spent his life in Dundas County, probably never being farther from home than 10 or 15 miles, passed away Thursday Nov. 1, in the person of Mr. Jas. Isabel, at the age of 103. The funeral took place from the home of his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Jess Barkley, in the second concession of Matilda, to Point Iroquois Cemetery, where interment was made in the family plot.

His two last birthdays were celebrated in bed, where he had been since October 9 of last year, his birthday being the 15th. Until that time Mr. Isabel was a sturdy, healthy man, never seeming to have known what illness meant, but when riding with another daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Beatty, of College Street, Iroquois, the car overturned, throwing the occupants out, the shock affecting Mr. Isabel to the extent that the remainder of his days were spent in bed passing quietly away at the last. Rev. Thos. Knowles, pastor of the United Church, conducted the obsequies. For a number of years Mr. Isabel's attendance at Division Court was commented on, being apparently his one and only recreation, though seldom having any real occasion to attend, except to listen and enjoy proceedings.

Surveyors Back From Hudson Bay

Member of Party Describes Eskimos as "Jolly But Dirty"

Halifax, N.S.—Flight Officer Brian Carr-Harris, of Ottawa, one of the six picked Canadian pilots who have been making a hydrographic survey of the Hudson Straits for the past 15 months, returned to Halifax recently on the steamer Canadian Voyageur, six days out from Port Burwell. The remainder of the party are en route home aboard the steamers Larch and Montcalm, the former due at Halifax some time this week, and the latter proceeding to Montreal. Two mechanics also returned on the Voyageur and two of the six Fokker 'planes used by the party, were landed here.

The expedition sailed from Halifax in the summer of 1927 to make a complete hydrographic survey of the movements of ice in the straits, to chart the coast line and to determine the feasibility of a sea route whereby western grain might be shipped to world markets via Hudson Bay. The findings of the expedition are expected to have a large bearing in deciding the old argument as to whether or not the Hudson Straits are a safe summer route for steamships.

Disease is rampant in the northland, it was said, 19 natives having died in Port Burwell alone while the expedition was there. White men's habits were decimating the Eskimos, the airmen stated.

Eskimos delighted in airplane riding, the aviators said, and would work almost a week for a chance of taking a flight.

"What are they like as a people?" a member of the expedition was asked.

"Jolly, but dirty," was the reply.

British Immigrants

Ottawa Journal: When Mr. Mackenzie King told the Canada Club in London that "no bigger untruth was ever offered in respect to a nation and a country than to say that Canada does not wish to have immigrants from the British Isles," he spoke what every fair-minded Canadian knows to be the truth. The Journal would not want to go bail for the immigration record of Mr. King's Government; we think of Mr. King's Government; it has never included antagonism to British immigration. How that notion—the notion that there was a conspiracy somewhere in Canada hostile to British immigrants—came into being we cannot for the life of us understand.

How An Idea Is Born

We get many an idea for a work of art which gradually sinks into our unconsciousness, reaching a condition which we think and speak of as forgetfulness. But it continues to figure in our experiences, mysteriously drawing sustenance from them and developing independently of our efforts or knowledge. "And one day it may happen to emerge again out of the depths of the mind. It is remarkably altered, and seems to admonish us: Now at last I am ripe for the purpose which I was meant to serve from the beginning; now for the first time we are worthy of each other. Let us both fulfill our destiny; create your work. —Arthur Schnitzler in Vanity Fair.

Earth Speeds Up Baffling Science

Shrinkage in Crust Believed to be Responsible for Phenomenon

Cambridge, Mass. — Calculations showing that the earth is continuing to rotate faster than its regular speed of 24 hours per day were presented to the American Association of Variable Star Observers in annual convention here last night.

The interest to many people in the calculations lies in their possible application to the study of earthquakes, raher than to any appreciable change of the faster speed is suspected to be the contracting of the earth's crust. Explanation was made of periods in which the rotation of the earthly crust and of the possible relation of both contraction and swelling to earthquakes.

Thec alculations were presented by Ernest Brown, Sterling professor of mathematics at Yale University. They were based on 30 observations in 1927 taken all over the world, of occultations of the moon; that is, of the obscuring of stars when the moon passed in front of them. The varitwo-thirds of these observations.

"The earth's rotation," said Prof. Brown, "is our clock for determinging time. We might also, if we wished, use the moon or any other body in the solar system as the clock, but comparison of the earth with the other bodies showed that one of the clocks was wrong, and observations have fixed upon the earth's rotation as the time instrument which varies.

"Of course we know about the slowing down of the earth's rotation due to the friction of the tides. That is an old story. But the periodic variations, in which the rotation is sometimes too fast, and sometimes too slow are something different. The first indication of these variations was given by Simon Newcombe, the American astronomer, about 50 years ago, but only in late years have we been able to test the matter. The rotation will sometimes hold the same pace for many years together. Some of the changes have occurred very abruptly. They amount to about one-thirty millionth of the day, or one three hundredth of a second.

"The cause of the variations is unknown. The only theory that seems to fit the facts is that the earth swells or contracts from time to time. How it does so, and why, we do not know. The amount of swelling, if it exists, is very small at most, only a few inches, perhaps 1 or 12, and this would be unobservable, because everything, sea and land, would move in the same way."

The Miner-Harvesters

Toronto Mail and Empire: In this successful experiment there is a lesson that should be turned to account by our Immigration Department. Why not adopt as a permanent practice the plan of bringing thousands of selected British people here every year for a season's probation. The miners, with relatively few exceptions, proved themselves fit to make an honest living here, and proved themselves acceptable to the country. If every year a like opportunity were held out to British workers to make a test of their adaptability to this country and its needs, there is scarcely a doubt that the result would be extremely beneficial to Canada and conducive to the welfare of the British workers thus tried out.

Oil Shale and Tar Sands

Canada has vast resources of oil shale and bituminous sands, the former occurring in the Maritime Provinces and the latter in Alberta. These deposits have long been considered as potential sources of products generally obtained from crude petroleum. As a result of recent modifications in refining methods these raw materials may now be seriously considered as sources, to be drawn upon when needed to help in supplying the rapidly increasing demand for motor fuel.

Stop Coddling British Doctor Warns Against Common Error

Stop coddling children, warns Dr. Leonard Hill, foremost British child specialist, writing in the November issue of "The Forum".

"Let mothers and teachers see to it," he writes, "that by adequate exposure to open air and sunshine, by well-chosen food, by inculcating temperance in all things and strengthening character, they raise up a fine race of men.

"A charter for the freedom of children ought to be drawn up. To dress them up like dolls and limit their activity for fear of spoiling their clothes is criminal. They should be allowed to tumble about scantily clad in the open air and join in healthy games with their fellows. Above all, they should be kept in their mental training from sentimentality and introspection. Let us scrap the perambulator and stop coddling them."

Dr. Hill, in his "Forum" article, advocates exposure to cold. "Children when ill with feverish complaints are confined to stagnant, heated air with clothes piled on them, when they need the very opposite—open-air treatment."

Empire Preference

Rockhampton Capricornian (Queensland): Empire preference, to be anything more than a mere sounding-board for windy orators, has to effectively protect the markets of the Dominions in Britain for raw products and foodstuffs, as well as the markets in the Dominions for British manufactured goods. Nothing short of that will count.

Activity in Aeronaultics

Increased activity in flying in Canada has led to the establishment of flying schools by commercial firms, to fill the growing demand for pilots and air engineers. The Department of National Defence, to encourage the popular use and knowledge of aeronautics, is assisting in the establishing of flying clubs in the principal cities of the Dominion.

Discovery of Gold Opens Canada Rush

World Spreads of Find in the Patricia District Between Cat and St. Joseph Lakes

Interest in Manitoba Tin

Toronto.—Another gold rush is on. For several days word has been spreading of a gold find in the district of Patricia, situated between Cat Lake and Lake St. Joseph.

It was at first believed this had reference to the gold discoveries in the Kawinagans River, Pickle Lake and Crow River. But this is not the case. The new discovery had been kept a close secret.

Montreal and Toronto mining men are showing great interest in the discovery of tin ore in the Province of Manitoba, including interests connected with the Lindsleys. Noah Timmins has been considering participation through purchase of a large block of stock.

Gold in Canada

The chief sources of Canada's gold production continue to be the gold quartz ores of Porcupine and Kirkland Lake, Ontario; the copper-gold, sulphide ores, and the quartz veins of British Columbia; and the placer deposits of Yukon. small amount of placer gold is obtained also in British Columbia. Lode gold is recovered from quartz veins in Nova Scotia and Manitoba, and as by product of the treatment of copper ores in Quebec.

Graf Zeppelin Once More Ventures Across the Atlantic

Takes Northern Route

Lakehurst, N.J.—The Graf Zeppelin took off for Germany at 1.54 a.m. to-day (Monday).

Dragged tail first from the hangar at 1.35, the greatest of all airships lifted easily into a moonlight night and was soon but a vanishing smudge against the stars.

On the trip started this morning it was expected to follow the northern great circle course and, with the aid of favoring winds, to complete the flight in about fifty hours.

At 1 o'clock the passengers were bundled on board and the ground crew surrounded the ship.

Officers said that the wind was only seven miles an hour and down hangar, permitting the ship to be safely taken out the east doors.

There were many, however, who clung to the conviction that there would be no take-off this morning.

At 1.15 sailors grasped the cables dropped from the great bag and prepared to walk the Zeppelin from the wide-open eastern doors into the moonlight night.

Germany Prospers

Berlin to Build "Palace of Youth" As $1,000,000 Welfare Center

Berlin—Plans for the construction of Berlin's "Palace of Youth" have been approved calling for expenditures totalling $1,000,000.

It is designed to serve as a social welfare center where organiations connected with the German Youth Movement will have their headquarters. The former kaiser's Bellevue Palace was considered at one time, but proved too small.

Great building projects are afoot in other parts of the capital. These include a new Department of Justice building costing $2,500,000 and the largest covered swimming pool in the world. A glass dome 500 feet in diameter will span a water sourse sixty-five feet wide. A sandy shore with artificial sunshine and seaside mural paintings will create the impression of outdoor bathing.

It will be heated in winter and cooled in summer and will provide accommodations for 32,000 bathers daily. There will be medical baths of all kinds and physical exercise halls equipped with modern apparatus. The cost is estimated at $3,000,000 and a small entrance fee will enable the promoters to operate the establishment at a profit.

Our New Industry

Value of Tourist Industry to Canada Placed at $300,000,000

"The tourist industry in Canada is growing by leaps and bounds, and the season just closing is regarded as a record in the number of tourists it has brought from other countries into Canada, and in the volume of travel engaged in by Canadians themselves," said C. W. Johnston, assistant general passenger traffic manager of the Canadian National Railwys.

"The value of the tourist industry to the Dominion of Canada has now reached a total in excess of $300,000,000 annually. This brings the export of memories of Canada's scenery into second place among our exports in point of total value," he pointed out.

While the figures for the year 1928 are not yet available, railway bookings show a tremendous increase over those of the previous year. Holiday resorts in all parts of the Dominion have been filled to capacity with Canadians, Americans and people from the European countries during the season, and the fine weather of this autumn has resulted in an extension of the holiday season into September and October this year.

As a result many of the operators of holiday resorts have found that their bookings extended well into October for the first time in their history. In addition there is an increasing number of conventions being held in Canadian cities each season.

"They have respected my wish to keep my visit purely private, with the result that I have enjoyed a perfect holiday in glorious sunshine, amid lovely scenery and with the kindest and most hospitable of friends.

"I thus start on my homeward journey with health completely restored, and ready to resume the heavy work and great responsibilities which await me on my return to London."

Why Did London Carry Mond Up to 43

The buying that carried Mond Nick The buying that carried Mond Nickel up to 43 when the big rush in the market was on is attributed to have come from London. In view of this, the puzzle remains unsolved, as to why the stock has sold off to 31, with International at around 175. The apparent answer is that Mond and International Nickel will get share and share alike in the new company to be formed, after International Nickel shares have been split 6 for 1. This would mean, of course, that International shares should sell at a price six times that of Mond.

While International shares are holding to-day around 175, Mond shares have been moving up gradually and went above 33 recently. If London interests, and they were important, were not entirely fooled, there may be something left unsaid.

Suppose that when the basis of the merger is announced it was found that Mond shareholders would be given 1½ shares in the holding company for each share held and International shareholders 1 split share. This would mean that Mond shares should have a valuation of something better than 43.

The matter of a basis for the merger raises another question. Is International Nickel as it stands to-day worth 6 times as much as Mond Nickel, having regard to physical assets, earning power, net current assets, plant and capital, etc.

Teck Deep Program Well Advanced

It will be about six months before Teck-Hughes starts the actual opening up of its ore zone on the six new levels, 20th to 25th, inclusive, according to the Northern Miner. The shaft is now down below the 21st level, large 40-foot stations have been cut at the 20th and 21st levels and at the present rate of progress the first stage of the present shaft sinking program should be completed in five months. On all the levels the zone can largely be looked for less than 100 feet from the shaft. At the 19th level the ore was 90 feet from the shaft and it is expected that it will be about 200 feet on the 25th level. The 25th will be a little over 3,000 feet vertical depth.

Below the 19th level a crushing station and loading facilities were prepared for during shaft-sinking. It is calculated that one-third of the work of getting from the 19th to 25th level is already done.

Sinking of the new shaft, 600 odd feet south of the present central shaft, is now going ahead at a good rate. The first level of this will be the 25th and the second the 30th, 3,600 feet. From the 25th level and inclined shaft is to follow the zone to the 30th, being more or less a continuation of the present central shaft.

Turning an Elephant Charge

One large elephant in a rage is enough to paralyze the bravest hunter, but when seven of the monsters charge two lone hunters it is only a miracle that saves the men. W. S. Chadwick recites his one and only elephant charge encounter in the November issue of "Field and Stream."

"Then the native behind us carelessly trod upon a rotten stick," says this article, "and at the sound the two bulls and five cows came inti line, facing us. A moment they stood with lifted trunks searching for our scent, and then with screams of rage they started toward us.

"'Stand steady,' I heard Ben say. 'Aim at the centre bull and give him all you've got! Work your bolt like hell!'

"From behind us I heard the native call: 'Look out, master. They're going to flight!' and the sound of running feet showed his effort to efface himself.

"The next two minutes are rather blurred in my recollection. I felt as a beetle might in th shadow of a great boot, or a man bound to the rails in front of an express train. It seemed impossible to stop that mighty oncoming force. But I worked my rifle bolt desperately and placed shot after shot in the chest of the centre animal of the line, while beside me Ben's express roared unceasingly.

At perhaps thirty yards, the two centre animals—a young bull and a cow—leaned drunkenly against the animals on their right. The two on the outside left closed in, and like a troop of soldiers on parade they wheeled to the right into the forest, the left flank animals passing within twenty-five paces of us!"

TO THE MOTHERS OF ALL PALE GIRLS

If Your Daughter Shows Signs of Anaemia a Tonic is Needed.

Anaemia is simply a lack of blood. It is one of the most common and at the same time most dangerous troubles from which growing girls suffer. It is common because the blood so often becomes impoverished during development, when girls often overwork and overstudy. It is dangerous because of the stealthiness of its approach and because of its tendency to grow steadily worse. Every growing girl should occasionally take a tonic to ward off this insidious trouble. It is because of their powerful action in rebuilding the blood that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have made a world-wide reputation. The case of Miss Claire Sullivan, Pincher Creek, Alta., amply proves the value of this medicine. Miss Sullivan says: "During my school days I suffered a great deal from thin and watery blood. I was continually weak and tired; my appetite was poor, my sleep unrefreshing and I was troubled with backaches. To make matters worse I was attacked with acute appendicitis and the operation left me in a very weakened state. My mother, learning of the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, had me take them and after using them for some time I can say the result was simply wonderful, as they completely restored my health, and now when opportunity occurs I always recommend these pills to weak, pale girls suffering as I did."

You can get the pills from your druggist, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Use Water to Remove Rust

It's a fact. Gun dope from a marksman. Edward H. Proudman ran across an old Ballard rifle. It was in a terribly rusty condition, the action would not work. He proposed to soak it in kerosene, but Joe said no: "Water put him on, water take him off; soak him in water for three days."

Fool advice; but Joe knew his business. So, after removing the stock, Mr. Proudman soaked the barrel in water for three days. He was surprised at the amount of rust that came off. The action worked as well as ever. He then oiled it up and now declares it works O.K.—From The American Rifleman.

The necleus of the new city is the official quarter. This will consist of a modern palace, equipped with the latest facilities, and a number of huge government buildings which will house all state departments.

For they talk and they walk and they run and they play.
And they have their deep secrets for many a day;
And that boy has a comrade who thinks and who feels,
Who walks down the road with a dog at his heels.
He may go where he will and his dog will be there,
May revel in mud and his dog will not care;
Faithful he'll stay for the slightest command
And bark with delight at the touch of his hand;
Oh, he owns a treasure which nobody steals,
Who walks down the road with a dog at his heels.
No other can lure him away from his side;
He's proof against riches and station and pride;
Fine dress does not charm him, and flattery's breath ....
Is lost on the dog, for he's faithful to death;
He sees the great soul which the body conceals—
Oh, it's great to be young with a dog at your heels!

—Edgar A. Guest in "When Days is Done."

Mistakes

There are about three things a fellow can do when he makes a mistake. He can resolve that he will never make another, which is fine, but impracticable.

He may let that mistake make a coward of him, which is foolish; or he can make up his mind that he will let it be is teacher and so profit by the experience that if the situation comes his way again, he will know just how to meet it. There is a real wisdom in this attitude. Think it over.

Each of us must decide whether he will let his mistakes remain his enemies or become his friends. Why should we let a mistake, or even two or three, brake our spirit and sap our fighting strength?

A lad who showed that kind of disposition on the cricket field or on the football ground would never make the team. We all make mistakes, but if we let them be our teachers, counselling us, advising us, admonishing us, in due time we shall acquit ourselves all the better in the school of life.

Empire Settlement

Gabriel Wells in the Spectator (London): (In a letter headed "Unemployment and Emigration.") New enterprise is an essential element of the problem. Employers are needed before employment can be had. To increase the number of employers is part of the transfer of labor. What I would suggest, then (speaking with deference—not being an Englishman), is that the English Government turn itself into an agricultural and industrial employer on an extensive and diversified scale, both in Canada and the other Dependencies. Let the English Government in those places buy up tracts of uncultivated lands, and establish thereon farms, mills and cognate industries, even to the setting up of new centres of populations. The Government, like a father to his children, ought to take its sons and daughters by the hand and effectively help them to help themselves; and not set them adrift upon the uncharted seas of potentialities.

What Will you do When your Children Cry for It

There is hardly a household that hasn't heard of Castoria! At least five million homes are never without it. If there are children in your family, there's almost daily need of its comfort. And any night may find you very thankful there's a bottle in the house. Just a few drops, and that colic or constipation is relieved; or diarrhoea checked. A vegetable product; a baby remedy meant for young folks. Castoria is about the only thing you have ever heard doctors advise giving to infants. Stronger medicines are dangerous to a tiny baby, however harmless they may be to grown-ups. Good old Castoria! Remember the name, and remember to buy it. It may spare you a sleepless, anxious night. It is always ready, always safe to use; in emergencies, or for everyday ailments. Any hour of the day or night that Baby becomes fretful,, or restless. Castoria was never more popular with mothers than it is today. Every druggist has it.

EVERY HOUR FILLED FOR "ROYAL" VISITORS

If any of the five hundred Ontario farm boys who are to visit the Royal Winter Fair at Toronto this month have any time on their hands on which to be homesick, it will not be the fault of those who have arranged the program for their visit. Starting off with a bang-up dinner at Hart House, the famous social centre of the University of Toronto, on the night of their arrival, the boys will have three days crowded with interest, entertainment and instruction. Hon. John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture, will be the Chairman at the banquet, and the boys will hear addresses by Premier Howard Ferguson and Dr. H. J. Cody, the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the University.

On Wednesday Nov. 21st, the boys will be taken for a tour of the Union Stock Yards and the Packing Plants where they will witness the whole process of marketing livestock and the ultimate manufacturing of the animals into meat products. In the afternoon of the same day, they will be taken through the huge manufacturing plant of the Massey Harris Company, Ltd., and will see the different factory processes in the production of farm implements. They will be guests of Council of Canadian Meat Packers at luncheon and the Massey Harris Co. at supper. In the evening they will attend the Royal Winter Horse Show as guests of the Fair.

On Thursday they will visit large Toronto stores, but the greater part of the day will be spent in inspection of exhibits and studying the judging of livestock at the Royal Winter Fair. In the evening they will be the guests of the T. Eaton Co., Limited, at a banquet.

On Friday, the last day, the boys will be taken through the Ontario Parliament Buildings and will be given motor drive around the Capital City as guests of the City o Toronto. More time will be spent in inspecting exhibits at the Fair, and in the evening those boys that have survived three days of high living, and are not overcome by the pangs of indigestion, will be treated to another banquet by The Robert Simpson Company, Ltd.

The following are the boys from Dundas and West Stormont:

Harry Williams, R. R. 1, Mountain; Wm. McRoberts, R. R. 1, Mountain; Stanley Coleman, Hallville; Kenneth Hutt, R. R. 3, Winchester; Keith Graham, R. R. 1, Chesterville; Harry Allison, R. WHERE SUMMER SMILES

Summer weather lingers on Canada's Pacific Coast. Victoria and Vancouver are fanned by balmy breezes and bathed in mellow sunshine. Motoring is a joy; golf and other outdoor pastimes are a delight in this ideal environment. Thousands flock to the coast each winter to bask in its wonderful climate, and the Coast knows how to receive them and make them feel at home.

Canadian National train service is the favoured route to this pleasant land. Convenient from all eastern points, it takes the traveller through all the great Western cities, and crosses the magnificent Canadian Rocky Mountains at the lowest altitudes and on the easiest gradient; yet always within sight of their lofty peaks.

Full details may be obtained from any Canadian National Railways Agent or from the local ticket office.

Testing Children for Defective Hearing

The audiometer for determining the degree of hearing retained by deaf persons is one of the recent inventions of Bell Telephone Research Engineers. It has been found that to test the hearing of children in groups, rather than individually enables them to concentrate better on the hearing test. After the telephone receivers have been adjusted on the right ears of the children they are told to write down as many numbers as they can hear as the phonograph utters them. They hear numbers coming from the telephone receiver, the intensity of each successive number group being three sensation units less than that of the preceding group. The receivers are then changed to the left ears and the test repeated. Children's hearing can be much benefitted when defects are ascertained before it is too late.

DAN BARRY'S DAUGHTER

BY MAX BRAND

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Finding the lifeless bodies of his two partners at their gold mining camp, Harry Gloster flees southward, knowing that he will be accused of the crime. On the way Gloster is jailed after getting into a fight with several men over a girl.

Joan Barry, daughter of a famous rider of the old plains, helps Gloster to escape. After eluding a posse, Gloster retraces his steps to Joan's cabin and is confronted by her guardian, Buck Daniels; they finally call a truce, however. Joan, partly in answer to the call of wild life within her and partly in an effort to find Harry Gloster, joins a bandit gang in the mountains. Joe Macarthur, a quick-shooting scoundrel, is made chieftain of the gang when he appears with a scheme to rob the Wickson bank. Samuel Carney, cashier of the bank, has given him the combination of the safe, but later repents and tells the president of the bank what he has done. Gloster finds Joan but she refuses to leave the bandit gang.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

He said borely, after a moment: "Goodbye, Joan, for a little while."

"For both our sakes, Harry, it's goodbye forever."

Instead of answering he stepped closer to her and, taking her face between both his big hands, he tilted back her head and kissed her lips. They were as cold as her cheeks, and her eyes, he thought, looked up to him as if he were as far removed as the stars above them.

CHAPTER XXIX.

THE FOURTH WHITE PEBBLE

He went back to the entrance to the hollow and, looking around, he saw Joan still watching him. So he went on to Buck Daniels, still sleeping at the mouth of the gap. He shook Buck into wakefulness, and, when he was sitting up in his blanket, told him briefly and clearly everything that had happened. When he had finished he waited for a reply.

But, first of all, Buck found his pipe, filled it very slowly, and lighted it. He puffed away at it for a time.

"I knew when I hit the trail," he said at length, "that it ain't no good. It was the same way with the trails that I took after Dan Barry. Once I tried to bring him back to Kate. And the way I worked it was by insulting Dan. I hit him across the face in front of a lot of other gents.

"Then I turned and ran for it. He came fast, but I had a relay of hosses fixed up, and they got me back to the ranch in the nick of time. And handling Joan is like handling the ghost of Dan. There ain't nothing we can do for her. Our work is ended, Harry."

Harry shook his head.

"I can't give her up," he said. "And the farther she is away from me, the more I want her. Buck, I've got a plan that may sound crazy, but it's one I'm going to stick to."

"Lemme hear it."

"I'm goiny to join Macarthur's gang. That way I'll be close to Joan while she's with them. And when she leaves, I leave! And suppose that you, Buck, hung around in the offing and waited for a chance. I don't know what might come up, but there's always a chance, you know. Two men can do a lot. You and I might be able to get Joan away. Does it sound good to you?"

"To me," murmured Buck, "it sounds like fool talk."

He added: "But I was always nine-tenths fool myself. If you want to take the big chance, I'll take the little one. But nothing will come out of this but a considerable bunch of hell fire for all of us. You mark my words, Harry!"

But the big man could not be moved. He saddled his horse, while Buck did the same and started off down the mountainside to find covert. Gloster himself, mounting, rode straight back through the defile and into the hollow.

Straight to the door of the hut he went, dismounted, and striding into the room, stamped heavily upon the floor. Six figures started up. But only five guns glistened. For Gloster had stepped to Macarthur in the farther corner and as the chief started up, his wrists were caught and his arms were twisted up behind his back.

"Be quiet, Macarthur," said Harry Gloster. "Be quiet, or I'll break your arms for you. Boys, hold off with your guns till I have a talk with you. Macarthur here has a grudge against me. But I've come up here to join you if you'll take me. My name's Harry Gloster. And the country's too hot for me. What do you says?"

"Take him off!" groaned Macarthur, crimson with his mortilcation. "Blow his head off, Babe. The skunk took me by surprise—"

Macarthur leaped to his feet in a rage.

"Wait a minute," said Babe. "If there's only one, I guess that there ain't any need of making a hurry call on the lead. What are you aiming at, Gloster?"

"At a chance to talk without having Macarthur blow my head off."

Here he shifted both of Macarthur's arms, held them with the mighty grip of his one hand, and then snatched the weapons from the holsters of the leader, for Macarthur wore two guns.

"Thats a lot better," he declared, and stepped away fro mhis victim.

The leader lost some of his purple color of rage.

"We'll vote on this thing," he said. "Don't have to do it loud. Pick up some pebbles, boys. White ones let him in and black ones turn him out. There's my hat to drop them in."

Pebbles were immediately at hand, for most of the floor of the building was gravel.

The voting idea was eagerly taken up by the gang. They hurried to pick up their particular choice. And going to the hat they dropped in their votes. Macarthur raised his sombrero and poured out the contents into the palm of his hand.

"Three of us have voted him in," he remarked, "and there's three that want him to stay out. I'm one of them, and since by rights I ought to have two votes anyway, and vote again and that vote is to—"

"Wait a minute," broke in Gloster as he saw the tide turning against him. "I've got something to add."

He went to the end of the room and leaned over a projecting rib of limestone which the soot from the fire had only succeeded in turning gray. Over this he bent, laid hold upon it with his hands, and began to lift.

But the rock was lodged deep in the earth, and that earth had been tramped solid as the stone itself. Yet he increased his effort instead of giving up his purpose, whatever that might be. The members of the gang gathered to watch, half in wonder and half in appreciation.

For they needed no scales to tell them that Gloster was attempting to budge a great weight. Even the mass of stone which projected above the ground appeared more than any one man could stir and there was an unknown portion of the whole mass hidden from sight, besides which, it was fixed it its place.

The others were much interested in the effort of Gloster. Their faces worked with the pain of sympathy and their hands closed. He had sunk to a half-crouching position, now. His back bowed with the immense pressure.

Now his shoulders began to rise. His head bowed between them and his swelled neck was purple with congested blood.

He sank a bit lower. The ground was not particularly moist, but his feet were sinking into it. The seam of his trousers over the bulging thigh parted. Now his whole body jerked up a fraction of an inch—the stone had been budged.

"By God!" whispered one. "He's winning!"

There was not a man who had not crouched in sympathy, saving only Dud Rainey, who was still rubbing his finger tips across his chin.

"Now!" they muttered in a faint chorus.

For suddenly the stone had risen six inches. They were beginning to guess at the full hugeness of its mass. But it caught again and then with a great wrench, Gloster tore it out. The entire lower section of it was gleaming white, a deep and ragged hole was left in the floor, and walking as though he were carrying a mere armful of wood, Gloster crossed the room and cast down the mass at the feet of Macarthur.

The very ground quaked under the impact. Gloster stepped back, his purple face distorted with the effort.

"You are wrong, Joe," he said. "There are four white pebbles instead of three! And I stay in the crowd, eh?"

Whatever hatred Macarthur might have felt for the new applicant, he was swept away for the moment by his enthusiasm for Gloster's physical power. He clapped him heartily on the shoulder.

"Harry," he said, "you're one of us, and as good a one as any!"

Then Macarthur spoke slowly.

"This gent comes up here,' he said, "talks to Joan, finds she don't want nothing to do with him, and then comes begging us to take him in. What he wants ain't action, but just a chance to be near her. Ain't that reasonable? Besides, what I say is that we don't want to have in the gang any skunk that would murder two harmless old sourdoughs. Am I right?"

"Right!" blurted out Babe Cooney.

"Right!" chimed in the others, with the exception of Dud Rainey. The latter, as usual when he was most thoughtful was rubbing his finger tips lightly over his chin.

"If he killed the two old boys," he said quietly, "we certainly don't want him."

"If he killed them?" roared Macarthur. "If he didnt, who the hell did?"

"Does he look like murder to you?" asked Dud, as quietly as ever.

All eyes swept to Harry Gloster, and the sight of his frank and open face told heavily in his favor.

"Besides," went on Dud, "what have you got against him, Joe?"

"You tell it," he said, turning on Gloster.

"We had a little argument," said Gloster. "That was all. But Macarthur took it to heart."

To Raze St. Lazare Prison

In the three-cornered struggle between French antiquarians, the Ministry of Justice, and humanitarians and hygienists the last have won, and the Ministry having failed to suggest improvements to their satisfaction it has reluctantly consented to he demolition of the notorious women's prison of St. Lazare at the junction of the Rue de Faubourg and the Boulevard de Magenta, Paris.

The old prison, some buildings of which date back to the twelfth century, was first used as a leper hospital, then as an abbey, and then as a seminary—all before the French Revolution. During the Revolution it was used to house debtors and political prisoners—some quite famous. It became a woman's prison in 1868, and at one time no fewer than 7,822 women crowded in its tiny cells and stuffy dormitories. Within recent years it guarded, while awaiting trial, the beautiful Mme. Steinheil alleged to have been perpetrator of th "studio crime"; Mme. Caillaux, wife of the former Premier, who slew Gaston Calmette in the office of Le Figaro, and the Anarchist girl, Germaine Berton, who shot down Marius Plateau in the office of Leon Daudet.

The principal defenders of the old prison have been the antiquarians; its principal enemies, the hygienists. Some months ago the latter succeeded in having the Ministry remove all the prisoners to other places of detention. Now M. Paul Fleurot, President of the Conseil General of the Seine Department, has submitted a proposal that the site of St. Lazare should be used for a new boys' school. This the Government has accepted, transferring the historic edifice to the Ministry of Education, which will immediately begin its demolition.

Annoying Bugs

River Jungles of Bolivia Hold Plague of Malignant Insects

In the jungle along the River Beni, in Bolivia, are found some of the most malignant blood-sucking insects in the world.

Here lives the apasana, a bird-eating spider, attaining a length of from eight to ten inches, whose poisonous bite is sometimes fatal. It has a body resembling a ball of wool, with black hairs on its body and red ones on its legs. Its eyes are black and quick moving, with a most malevolent expression. It is very active and jumps about two feet at a single bound.

The palo santo ant, a fire ant, which lives in hollow-stemmed trees, is common here. A touch on this tree brings down a shower of the ants, whose bites feel like red-hot coals, the sting lasting for hours.

Other plagues are the zaputama, an almost invisible insect which lies in the grass, bites the legs of men and causes an almost intolerable itching; the guanaco, a bug which lives in the sand and whose bite is usually fatal; the baregui, a sand fly with a painful sting; sweat bees, which suck the perspiration from the hair; the anopheles or malaria-carrying mosquito, and wasps, ticks and jiggers.

Sunday School Lesson

November 11. Lesson VI.—Peace and Good Will Among Men,—Romans 12: 1, 2, 9-21. Golden Text—Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.—Romans 12: 21.

ANALYSIS

I. THE NATURE OF THE CHRISTIAN LIFE, 1, 2.

II. THE EXERCISE OF THE PRINCIPLE OF LOVE, 9-21.

INTRODUCTION—The doctrinal teaching of the apostle in this Epistle is completed and now the writer turns to the problem of conduct. It was Paul's custom to first lay down his principles, and then to show how these must find their fruit in a higher type of living. See also Ephesians, Colossians, Thessalonians. The general object of this chapter is to cultivate peace and good will among all members of the church.

I. THE NATURE OF THE CHRISTIAN LIFE, 1, 2.

V. 1. The entire appeal for Christian service rises out of the infinite love of God. Paul does not rest his agreement on the power of God, but he appeals to the wonderful confession of the heavenly Father revealed in creation and redemption. The response of man to this confession should be complete, and this verse lays stress upon the body which is a very essential element in our Christian life. The Greeks were inclined to speak slightingly of the body and some of their teachers advocated the crushing out of the instincts of the body since the seat of sin lay in the flash But Christianity does not condemn the body, nor does it disparage its inbuence. Rather it urges us to purify and sanctify our body, that we may offer it as a sacrifice to God.

V. 2. But the mind rules the body, and those thoughts which are most often welcomed ere long find their expression in outward conduct. As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he. Therefore, Paul urges his readers to ponder increasingly the will of God. Let all learn to submit with full consent to his divine will. The three adjectives which he uses in this regard should be careful noted, as they set forth the apostle's conception of the nature of God. (1) It is good. God will what is good for his creatures. He is not like me who are so often envious and malicious. All of God's purposes are for the welfare of his children. In Jesus, called "the Good Shepherd," we have the incarnate example of the divine goodness. (2) It is acceptable. It is well pleasing to them who accept it. They who fall in with God's plan for their lives may sometimes imagine that it seemed hard and forbidding, but in the end they will come to rejoice in it, and will have a joy such as nothing else can give. The Psalmist said, "I delight to do thy will," and Jesus said that it was his meat to do the will of his Father. (3) It is perfect. This adjective comes from a word meaning "end," and may mean here that which has reached its end, or goal and, therefore, is complete. God's will is in this sense perfect or complete. It is final, and we shall reach our goal or final perfection only when we fully accept this perfect will of God. "Be ye perfect even as your Father in heaven perfect."

II. THE EXERCISE OF THE PRINCIPLE OF LOVE, 9-21.

V. 9. In the preceding verses, 3-8, Paul has spoken of the different gifts possessed by the members of the church, and of the way in which these are to be exercised. Now he passes on to discuss the graces which they must develop and the first and greatest of these is love. This must be absolutely sincere and based upon the highest motives.

V. 10. Love of the brethren is a special form of love which is to exist between members of the same church. This will manifest itself in a fitting modesty.

V. 11. Joy was one of the great outstanding qualities of the early church. It was revealed in the teaching and life of Jesus, and then it was manifest in his followeds. It has been claimed that joy as a moral virtue was the creation of the Christian religion. Paul shows that joy is quite consistent with suffering. The persecutors of the early Christians did not crush out their happiness. The words of Matthew 5: 11, were abundantly fulfilled.

V. 13. Paul was himself very generous, and had spent much time in collecting money for the poor saints in Jerusalem. Here he urges the form of generosity which shows itself in hospitality—a grace very needful in those days when travel was so common and inns so poor and dangerous.

V. 16. This is a verse on humility. It forbids all wrong ambition and desire to lord it over others; while in a specific case he urges an interest in poor people, a very wise and worthy counsel.

V. 18. Paul remembers the beatitude of the peacemakers. If there must be discord, then let it come from outside the church.

Vs. 19-21. Revenge. These verses take for granted that good men will call forth the hostility of evil men, and Paul warns the Christians against every act of retaliation. The only way open to the Christian of showing his feeling is by caring for the best interests of the enemy. In doing good to him he will heap coals of fire on his head, which probably means the burning pangs of shame, which will fill the heart of the man who comes to see that good is being returned for all the evil he is doing. He will be so filled with a deep sense of self-accusation that he will repent. This great moral lesson is summed up in the famous saying of verse 21 which teaches that all revenge is wrong and that we must seek to win over one for whom we have a dislike by a display of true Christian love towards him. Love is the only world conqueror.

New Ways to Serve an Old Friend

HAMBURG WITH ORANGE

Season a pound of hamburg with salt and pepper and make it into a piece about an inch thick; dip this in flour and place it in a greased casserole; dot over with bits of butter and a few bits of bay leaf. Peel and quarter two oranges and place these around the steak, add a quarter of a cupful of water and bake until thoroughly done, basting often. Serve on a hot plate and alternate oranges with sprigs of parsley. Make a gravy with the essence in the dish and serve over it.

BROILED WITH PINEAPPLE.

Hamburg broiled with pineapple makes a particularly pleasing combination. Form the meat, after seasoning with salt, pepper and a dash of cayenne, into flat cakes and place them on a well-oiled broiler; cook until partly done without turning. Turn each cake and cover with a slice of canned pineapple and broil until cooked through and serve on a hot plate.

STANLEY STYLE.

The hamburg cakes are good, too, pan-broiled with bananas. Put the cakes into a hot greased frying pan and cook quickly, turning them once or twice. While they are cooking cut bananas lengthwise, then crosswise, add a few drops of lemon juice to them and fry to a golden brown in bacon fat; serve them around the meat cakes.

WITH OLIVES

Hamburg roast with olive sauce is splendid. Have two pounds of round steak ground fine and add to it three-quarters of a cup of rolled oats, a dozen olives, chopped, a teaspoon of grated onion, two cups of tomatoes, a quarter of a teaspoon of salt. Bake in a greased bread pan about an hour and serve with a sauce made by blending well two tablespoons each of melted butter and flour, to which add a cup of good stock; stir until smooth and thick. Add a scant tablespoon of Worcestershire sauce and eighteen chopped olives, a little salt and pepper, and simmer a few minutes.

HAMBURG BISCUIT ROLLS

Hamburg surprise is an interesting dish for luncheon or supper. Roll the hamburg into pieces about the size of a sausage, partly cook in a hot pan, then wrap each little roll in baking-powder biscuit dough and bake in a hot oven.

TAMALE PIE

Tamale pie calls for half a pound of hamburg. Brown this; add one chopped onion, one chopped green chili pepper, one cup of tomatoes, one cup of chopped raisins and half a teaspoon of salt and cook five minutes. There should be ready to use three-quarters of a cup of white cornmeal cooked forty minutes in three cups of boiling water; to this add a cup of ripe olives, chopped, and spread half of it over a greased baking dish, then add the hamburg and pour over it the remainder of the cornmeal and bake half an hour.

CROQUETTES WITH ONION FRITTERS

Hamburg croquettes with fried onion rings is a splendid dish. Take two cups of highly seasoned cooked hamburg and add to it three-fourths of a cup of thick tomato sauce, blend well, spread on a plate and shape into finger rolls; chill well, then roll in crumbs, egg and crumbs again and cook quickly until a delicate brown in hot fat. Dip rings of Bermuda onions in butter and fry them; serve the croquetes on the rings and garnish with springs of parsley.

WITH SPAGHETTI

A good leftover hamburg dish, if you have as much as two cupfuls, is as follows: Cook one and one-half cups of spaghetti in boiling salted water until tender; drain and pour cold water through it and add a dash of cayenne, a quarter of a teaspoon of pepper and a teaspoon of salt and line buttered timbale molds with it. To the hamburg add half a cup of finely minced nutmeats, put the mixture into the molds and cover the tops with spaghetti and add as much as the molds will take of the following: Soften one and a half teaspoons of cornstarch in a third of a cup of cold milk, add two egg yolks beaten slightly, then a cup of milk, half a teaspoon of salt and fold in the beaten whites. Cook the molds in a pan of hot water half an hour. Serve with tomato or onion sauce.

STUFFED PIMIENTOS

Hamburg stuffed pimientos will be found very fine. Arrange half a dozen pimientos in greased ramekins. Have blended a cup of hamburg, put through the fine chopper, half a cup of cooked rice, a teaspoon of pepper and one well-beaten egg. Put this mixture into the Pimientos, cover with bread crumbs, dot with butter and bake until the egg has stiffened the pimientos.

HAMBURG DUMPLINGS

Hamburg dumplings are made by mixing a pound of ground meat with half a cup of dry uncooked rice, a tablespon of minced onion, half a green pepper, chopped, and salt and pepper to taste; make into small balls and boil in salted water to cover for half an hour, then add a cup of tomatoes and drop a tablespoon of dumpling batter on top of each meat ball, cover well and steam twelve minutes and serve with the gravy in which cooked.

The School Lunch

The great majority of school children get their lunches away from home. Usually a good lunch is obtainable at the school cafeteria, where the food is well prepared. But a large number of city children either snatch a sandwich at a lunch counter and the country children bring a box lunch from home.

The home-prepared lunch is the safest way to insure the proper nourishment. A box lunch should be as cerefully planned as the meals you serve at home. There should be a hot drink, some fruit and a few appetizing sandwiches. Nothing has ever been able to compete with the sandwich when it comes to putting up a packed lunch. And nowadays so much attention is being paid to making sandwich fillings that are unusual, tangy and nourishing that a sandwich need no longer be prosaic and dry.

A good quality, close-grained bread should be used for sandwiches. And it should be fresh if the sandwich is to be moist. Nobody wants a dry sandwich, not even a hungry youngster. The slices of bread should be thin and the filling generous.

Sandwich Fillings

The number of ready-made sandwich fillings available in almost every grocery store stimulate an interesting variety in luncheon menus. Cheese of all kinds is put up in small and large packages. It is cheaper to buy the large size packages and, since they are so carefully packed, there is no waste. It's an economy of time and thought, too, to have these cheeses always on hand. Cheese spreads and other sandwich fillings are good as they come from the package, but may be varied a bit as suggested in the following recipes:

Cheese and Apple Butter

Mix equal portions of a creamy yellow cheese and apple butter. For variety you could add one or two drops of lemon juice. Place a generous portion between two thin slices of bread.

Cut green peppers and pimuentos into slender strips, being sure that the pepper is not too strong and that all of the seeds are washed away. Between thin slices of bread spread a layer of a creamy cheese and lay pimiento strips on this. Then add another slice of bread spread with creamy cheese or a meat paste made of finely chopped meat and mayonnaise. Wrap in waxed paper, held in place with rubber bands.

Apricot Paste

Wash and clean dried apricots thoroughly. Soak for a few hours in a small amount of water. Cook them in this same water until they are soft enough to mash and have little or no juice left on them. Add sugar if necessary. This filling, when cold, may also be spread between sugar cookies.

Fish and Celery

Mix together chopped pimiento, chopped celery, minced tuna fish, chopped sweet green pepper and salt to taste. Moisten with mayonnaise. Use as a filling for white or whole bread sandwiches, making them thin and dainty.

Honey Nut Sandwiches

Shape and butter the bread and then spread lightly with honey, taking care not to spread it quite to the edge. Sprinkle with chopped nuts. Cover with the top layer, which has been buttered and spread with honey, and press the slices together.

Egg and Cheese Mixture

Spread one piece of bread with butter, then soft, yellow cheese, and cover with a piece of lettuce. Spread the second slice of bread with butter, a commercial sandwich spread, or one you have made yourself with a little mayonnaise, chopped lettuce and pickle. On top of the sandwich spread slice or dice a hard cooked egg. Put the sand ich together. It makes a delicious combination.

Date and Cream Cheese Spread

For a double deck sandwich which is delicious and filling try this one. Chop very fresh dates into a paste. Add a little lemon juice to give them a little tart taste and then mix, with an equal portion of cream cheese. Butter three slices of bread and lay on two generous layers of this mixture. Cover with the third slice and wrap in waxed paper.

Egg Salad Sandwich

This one is very simple. Chop a hard cooked egg and mix with mayonnaise and diced green pepper. For very young children use chopped lettuce or celery instead of the green pepper. Place in a sandwich with leaf of lettuce.

Apple Tapioca Whip

Heat one and one-half cups of water to boiling point, add one-third cup of granulated sugar and one-half cup of tapioca. Stir constantly for five minutes. Cook in double boiler fifteen or twenty minutes or until tapioca is transparent. Remove from fire and beat in one and one-half cups of thick, unsweetened whites of two eggs. When well blended, pour into a small mayonnaise jar and chill overnight in the ice-box for the school lunch.

Fruit Bread Pudding

Scald two cups of milk and pour over one cup of fine, stale, dry bread crumbs. Let stand until the crumbs are soft. Then add two beaten eggs, one-half cup of sugar, one-half teaspoon of salt, one cup of crushed fruit (apricots, pineapple or apple sauce) and one teaspoon of grated lemon rind or the juice of half a lemon. Pour into a well greased pudding dish and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 40 minutes or until firm and brown. Cut in squares. Place one square in a small jar and pour over it enough fruit juice to moisten it thoroughly.

The Lunch Box

There are small lunch boxes now on the market which are easy to keep in good condition. Each box contains a thermos bottle just large enough to hold a glass of milk, hot chocolate or whatever drink you wish to combine with the school lunch. These boxes have separate metal compartments for the sandwiches and fruit.

The Curse of Progress

Blackwood's (Edinburgh): We are forgetting our ancient habits of tranquility and calm. We have set up for our worship the twin idols of done so much in recent years to retard literature and the decent arts of life, and put in their place the dangerous results of science misapplied. We have given to progress—always a foolish thing—a fresh interpretation. According to the new meaning of the word, progress consists of moving with insane rapidity from one place to another.

Mental Deficiency

Spectator ((London): Segregation must for long remain an impossible ideal. . . . Sterilization—though the word frighten those who do not understand it—is the only practical remedy that has yet been proposed. . . . The problem must in any case be tackled promptly and effectively, not only for the sake of the unhappy beings who ought never to be born, nor only on account of their cost to us. Man has attained his place in nature by his kind, and by mental evolution he has created civilization The existence of the sub-human and mentally defective is a peril and an affront to the dignity of man.

Party Desserts

Glorified Cranberry Cake

Cream half a cup of butter and one and a half cups of light brown sugar and blend with them the well beaten yolks of three eggs. Sift together two cups of flour, a teaspoon each of cinnamon and nutmeg, half a teaspoon of cloevss and one teaspoon of soda and add gradually to the eggs and sugar mixture. Have ready a cup and a half of cranberries that have been cooked, put through the colander and slightly sweetened; fold into the cake and lastly the whipped whites of the eggs. Bake in two layers and ice with white icing colored with the strained juice of cranberries.

Virginia Fruit Cake

Mix one pound of currants, one pound of chopped raisins ad a half a pound of shredded citron and sprinkle over them the juice of one lemon, the grated rind of two lemons, a good pinch of mace and a grated nutmeg; cover and set aside to blend. Cream half a pound of butter with one and one-half pounds of sugar, gradually adding the beaten yolks of six eggs. Then alternately beat in one and three-quarters pounds of flour and one pint of sour cream in which a level teaspoonful of soda has been dissolved. When beaten until smooth, add the stiffly whipped whites of the eggs, then the prepared fruit. Bake in a paper-lined pan two and one-half hours, keeping the top covered with buttered paper while baking.

Washington Angel Cake

Beat one cupful of egg whites until foamy, then add one teaspoonful of cream of tartar; when stiff add gradually one cupful of granulated sugar. Sift one cupful of flour with one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt four times. Cut and fold into the egg mixture, add a teaspoonful of vanilla and bake in two layers in ungreased pans in a moderate oven thirty-five to forty minutes. Make an icing by cooking two and one-half cupfuls of sugar, eight tablespoonfuls of water and the same amount of light corn syrup together until the sugar is dissolved, stirring, then cook until the firm ball stage; have two egg whites whipped to a froth, add the above to them gradually, beating constantly. Take about a third of it and color a delicate pink and add a quarter of a cupful each of chopped candied pineapple and cherries, and half a cupful of chopped pecans.

The Joint Stock Cheese Factory at Toy's Hill was completely destroyed by fire on Monday night. How the fire started is not known, but the cheese maker, Mr. Chas. Hutt, when he left the factory at 6 o'clock, says that he left everything safe and fires banked. The fire started about 8 o'clock, so that there must have been a spark smoldering somewhere. Those living near the factory were soon on the scene, and most of the made cheese in the factory was removed to safety, but some were destroyed with the building as was all the equipment. The loss is estimated at over $4000, with insurance of $3000.
