The Late Duncan F. Maclennan.

The Cornwall Standard has the following:—"We regret to announce the death of Duncan F. McLennan, a prominent and highly esteemed citizen of Williamstown, which occurred at his residence there yesterday. Although in his sixty-eighth year, Mr. McLennan enjoyed good health until quite recently, and was about as usual the day before he passed away. For many years he was a merchant in Williamstown, having succeeded to the business of his father, the late Farquhar McLennan, who died in 1846. He was also for many years postmaster. He was a man of sterling character and was greatly respected in the community enjoying the warm regard of those who were intimately acquainted with him. Within recent years his brothers, Donald and Murdock, and his sister Catharine, have joined the majority, and there is now left out of a well known family, one member, Mrs. Hugh Robertson of Martintown. Mr. McLennan is survived by his widow, four sons and two daughters, Farquhar, James, Murdoch, and Randolph, Mrs. J. P. McLennan and Miss Marion McLennan.

Though a busy merchant and postmaster of Williamstown for over twenty-five years, Mr. McLennan took a great interest in athletics, doing much to encourage the manly sport. The funeral took place Saturday and was largely attended.'

Passed Suddenly Away.

The news of the sudden death on Friday morning, May 4th, 1906, of Silas Hilliard, son of Mr. Benjamin Thompson, tinsmith, of this place, was received as a shock, the public not being aware that anything of a serious nature was due to his sickness. But such news was true, and a great deal of sympathy was extended by the people of the village. The Sunday previous Silas attended church as usual, and also was present at the Sabbath School in the afternoon, but on his way home was taken ill, and althongh, as stated before nothing serious was thought of his condition, he passed quietly away on Friday morning. Dr. Brown was called and treated the patient and diagnosed the ailment as rheumatism. He suffered considerable pain and could not rest, and on Thursday night gave him a powder to make him sleep, and while in that sleep the rheumatism is supposed to have came in contact with the heart, and caused his life to ebb away.

Silas was fifteen years, and was looked upon as a model boy, having a nice disposition and many friends. He was very attentive to his studies and had obtained his second-class certificate.

The funeral took place on Monday morning at ten o'clock, and the boy pupils of his room marched to the residence and thence to the Methodist Church, where service was conducted by the Rev. A. E. Sanderson, S. T. L., assisted by the Rev. W. F. Crawford, Presbyterian minister of this place, after which interment was made in the Maple Ridge Cemetery.

The pall-bearers were six of his associates, being: Murray Casselman, Earl Merkley, Claude Merkley, Bert Shaw, James McRae and D'Alton Bolster.

A large number of relatives from different parts were present, as also a large concourse of friends from this section, which was in evidence of the esteem in which the parents and deceased were held.

William Jamieson Dead.

Only sick a few days and then passed away. Such was the case with William Jamieson of Nation Valley. He was taken ill with pneumonia on Thursday and died on Sunday. Although not personally acquainted with deceased he had a host of friends, which was evident by the large concourse of people who attended the funeral, which event took place on Tuesday, May 8th, 1906 services being conducted at the family residence by the Rev. Mr. Lundy of North Williamsburg, after which interment was made in the Maple Ridge Cemetery. The deceased was in his 45th year and leaves to mourn his demise a wife and four children.

A large number of relatives were present and among them being, Rev. J. A. and Mrs. Shaver of Deseronto, and Messrs. Chas. Jamieson of Cardinal; Jas and David of Montreal and John of Winchester Springs, nephews of deceased. Mr. Blanchard of Canton, N.Y. sister of the deceased, was present at the funeral. The funeral is supposed to be the largest that has taken place in this district for a number of years.

Purchased Shorthorns.

Mr. J. J. Black, of Maple Lawn Stock Farm, Winchester, recently purchased a car load of Scotch topped Shorthorn cattle from O. Sorby, of Guelph, Ont., the well known breeder and importer. We understand that Mr. Black paid a very good price for the cattle and they are excellent individuals. The Shorthorns are becoming a very popular breed and Mr. Black is to be congratulated in the interest he has taken to improve the live stock of Dundas county.

Appointed to the Diocose of Alexandria.

The appointment of Rev. William McDonell as Bishop of Alexandria is officially announced.

Rev. William McDonell was born on the south branch of Charlottenburg township Glengarry county, a little over fifty years ago. He is a son of Donald Archibald McDonell, deceased. He was educated in the common schools of the county, and at St. Joseph's college, and took his theological course at the Grand Seminary, Montreal. He was ordained at St. Raphael's, Glengarry, in September, 1881, by the late Bishop Cleary of Kingston. He was stationed at Gananoque for about five years, and in 1886 succeeded the present archbishop at Kingston in the pastorate of Glen Nevis, where he remained until 1890, when he was removed to St. Andrew's as successor to Rev. Vicar-General Corbet, now of Cornwallr

An Invitation.

At a meeting of the official board of the Methodist Church in Chesterville, the following resolutions were passed:

Whereas we have learned with regret that our pastor, the Rev. A. E. Sanderson, S. T. L., contemplates severing his connection with Chesterville at the approaching conference,

And whereas this board, and as we believe the congregation at large, recognize in our pastor a man of sterling good qualities and appreciate the valuable services he has rendered to this congregation and to our community in his work,

Be it therefore resolved that the board prevail upon Bro. Sanderson, to reconsider his decision and remain with us. Be it further resolved that a certified copy of this resolution be forwarded to the conference to be used as occasion may require for the futhurance of our object.

Mr. Sanderson thanked the board for the resolution and the kind words of those who had spoken in support of it and expressed his willingness to remain if the conference saw fit to return him for a fourth year.

The Bateman—Parlovitz Concert.

Those who failed to attend the ...cert given in Foster's Hall on Thurs... evening last, by the Bateman-Parlovitz party, missed a great treat. The evening was favorable, but the concert was not patronized by any means the way it should have been Miss Alys Bateman has a highly-cultured and remarkably sweet soprano voice, and a nice manner which seemed to please the whole audience. It is asserted by good judges that she excels any sopranosinger ever heard in our town for some time. Miss Bateman was warmly encored after each selection to which she kindly responded. Should she ever visit our town again it is evident she will be greeted by a full house.

Miss Grace Merry, who has appeared here before, seemed to be received more eagerly than ever, and obtained a warm reception on her appearance onthe stage. She is a remarkably clever elocutionist, and seems to please the audience with her selections.

Mr. Eduard Parlovitz, pianist, executed himself in excellent style and was well received.

EFFECTS OF GREAT COLD

HOW IT ACTS AWAY OUT IN DAWSON, YUKON TERRITORY.

Some Strange Manifestations When Temperature Is 60 Degrees Below Zero.

"'Look out, or you will drop that chisel!'

"Before the sentence was finished the tool had slipped from the hand of my assistant and, striking upon some bar iron, flew into pieces as if it had been glass instead of steel." This reads like a bit out of "Alice in Wonderland," but it is sober fact, we are told by Chester W. Tennant of Dawson, Yukon Territory.

"I am writing this on January 25; for two weeks we have had a 'cold spell.' Temperature has ranged from 44 degrees below zero (the warmest) down to 68 degrees below. Some of the outlying Yukon police stations report 80 degrees below. These cold waves alternate with warmer periods of 10 degrees below.

"Strange manifestations appear as a result of the extreme cold; one is the way a fire burns in the stove. It roars and crackles like a great forge, and wood in the stove seems to dissolve in the flames like a chunk of ice; the wood is gone and we wonder where the heat went.

"At 60 degrees below every stovepipe throws out a great white cloud of smoke and vapor, resembling a steamboat in its whiteness, and this cloud streams away for fifty to 100 feet, mingling with the other white-grey mist or haze that remains permanent in the atmosphere of the town like a great fog, when it is 40 degrees or more below zero.

THIS WHITE-GREY FOG

is not fog as you know it, but is frozen fog, and every man, woman, child, animal and even the fire that burns is throwing out moisture into the air which is immediately turned into a cloud of frozen vapor, which floats away and remains visibly suspended in the air. Very slowly this settles to earth, and in the morning about the steps and any protected place one can see a very fine film of flourlike dust deposited, which is composed of frozen vapor."

Exposed ears, hands and nose, Mr. Tennant tells us, freeze at this temperature in going the distance of about one block unless well protected. The breath roars like a mild jet of steam, while a dipper of boiling water thrown out into the air emits a peculiar whistling hiss as its drops circle through the frosty atmosphere. To quote again:

"Prospectors, in attempting to boil a dish of rice or beans upon a camp fire unprotected from the weather, find that the side of the dish which is in the fire will boil while the part of the dish exposed to the weather has frozen. To remedy this, the dish is set completely into the fire. Edged tools subjected to this temperature become as hard and brittle as glass and will break as readily under strain. I have seen a pop safety valve blowing off steam when the weather was below 60 degrees, with icicles which had formed by the condensation while it was blowing off hanging from

THE OUTER RIM OF THE VALVE.

The icicles were not melted by the outrushing steam, but remained there for many days, through blow-offs, as I passed this station every day and watched the operation. All vegetables, potatoes, apples, fruit, eggs, etc., can be allowed to freeze until they become like bullets. To make ready for use, place them in cold water half a day before using, and the frost will slowly withdraw without injury to the article. To attempt to thaw them out by more rapid process by fire or hot water spoils them for use."

Mr. Tennant tells some remarkable tales of thawing out a frozen foot, ear or hand by immersing the member in coal oil for some time—often several hours. He says:

"This is absolutely a safe remedy, and one thus escapes the surgeon's knife, as no bad results follow. This is not hearsay, as a man was saved a few years ago at our office by the night watchman, who found him in the snow (45 degrees below zero) and both hands frozen to the wrists. He was taken into the office and treated as above for about five hours, when all the frost was drawn out without so much as losing a finger tip. The physicians were amazed, as they thought amputation would have to be resorted to. His hands were as white and hard as marble, and when placed in the oil they snapped and crackled as the oil began to act upon the ice crystals. This remedy should be remembered by all residents of cold climates, as

IT WOULD SAVE MANY A LIMB.

The temperature of the oil should be about the same of that of the living room (about 60 degrees above zero). Great caution must be exercised during extreme cold weather so as not to frost the lungs, which one will quickly do if he hustles about at ordinary pace. Quick and fatal pneumonia can be contracted in a few minutes. Many a fine team of horses has been lost in this way.

"One has to be careful about touching things with unprotected hands. It is dangerous to take hold of a door knob when it is 60 degrees below zero or thereabouts with the uncovered hand, unless you are careful to release your hold instantly, for if you do it will freeze your inner palm in five seconds, be very painful thereafter, and the result is the same as from touching a red hot stove.

"Canned goods undergo frightful contraction during extreme cold, and suck in air; in summer with a temperature of 90 degrees, the reverse condition occurs, causing leakage and loss."

TheBride: "I discharged the cook this afternoon." The Hubby: "Have any difficulty about it?" The Bride: "Not a bit, except that she wouldn't go."

Teacher: "James, can you tell me what is meant by a cubic yard?" James: "I don't know exactly, but I suppose it's a yard that the children of Cuba play in."

VAST DIAMOND FACTORY

GEMS FALL ON OUR EARTH FROM THE SKIES.

The Only Place Where Perfect Stones Are Produced — Startling Statement.

The only perfect diamonds which are to be found on this globe are those which fall from the sky in meteorites; all diamonds which are mined in the diamond fields of the world are only fragments of gems.

That is a startling statement, but a still more startling one is that all the diamonds to be found on our planet have fallen on our earth from the skies and have not, as most of us thought, been produced here like coal and other mineral products.

Yet this is the latest scientific assertion with regard to the world's stock of this precious stone. The whole stock of the Kimberley mines, with their unknown resources, and all the gems of this character to be found in any part of our planet—all have fallen from space at some time or other.

Somewhere in the illimitable distance that surrounds us, there is a vast diamond factory—the only place where perfect gems are produced, and from this factory we have received a large supply, and are still occasionally receiving an odd consignment! What reasons are there for believing this?

The first piece of evidence is that the whole of the rock in which the Kimberley gems are found is similar to nothing else on earth. It has been given a distinguishing name (Kimberlite), and it corresponds exactly with the matter of which meteorites are composed.

In plain language, the whole of that vast mass of rock fell on the earth from the skies at some late period of the world's formation. This is rather staggering, but it must be remembered that there is a mountain in Arizona which is acknowledged by all scientists to be a meteorite mountain. And diamonds are being found at that spot.

Diamonds are found particularly in superficial layers of the earth's crust; that is another proof of their celestial origin. Further, the diamond crystals are formed like no others that are of earthly origin; this is regarded as a strong proof that they fell from above.

It is curious that our diamonds are not perfect, and that some of them, when first brought from Kimberley mines and exposed to the air, explode and crack into several pieces. Now, the stones which come down in meteorites also explode when they are taken from the protecting mass which covers them completely. This is due to the peculiar conditions which prevail where the stones are produced, and these conditions cannot prevail on the earth, as the oxygen prevents them.

AT THE SOUTH POLE.

In order to make a diamond it is necessary that the constituents should be very hot and then cooled quite suddenly; nothing else will account for the peculiar shape of the crystals and the general formation of the gem. The earth did not cool suddenly, and so the gems could not have been produced on this planet.

In every spot where diamonds are found, the ground is of a nature which exactly resembles the matter of meteorites, and is different from other layers of the earth's surface. The best places to find them should be in the lands towards the South Pole.

The nearer the South Pole, the more chance of discovering diamonds, and the probability is that, if man ever reaches that end of the earth and discovers that it is not a sea of ice, but a plain of solid land covered with snow, then he will also find that is is the richest diamond mine in the world.

This curious fact of diamonds coming to us from the sky opens up an equally strange field of speculation. Suppose there were to be a small shower of meteorites containing these gems. If it has happened before, as scientists contend, why shouldn't it happen again?

LEARN TO DO.

If there's anything you'd like,
Be it wealth or be it fame,
If you want to make a strike
And to gather in the same,
Go to work!

Don't get down and lose your nerve,
Grumbling that you have no luck.
You have all that you deserve.
Better have a little pluck!
Go to work!

If you fail, don't rail at fate.
Charge it to yourself alone.
You'll discover soon or late,
That you reap as you have sown,
Go to work!

Hard, old world? Well, grant it so,
Got to face it, though, or quit.
The more reason that you show
You can brave and conquer it.
Go to work!

With success you would be crowned?
Now's the time, then, to begin.
Does no good to sit around,
Envious of those who win.
Go to work!

Failure's for the false and weak;
Fortune's for the strong and true.
Have a message—dare to speak!
Have a purpose—learn to do!
Go to work!

LORD NELSON'S TOMB.

Lord Nelson's sarcophagus in St. Paul's Cathedral has been aptly described as a second-hand national tomb, for it was originally constructed for another great Englishman—Cardinal Wolsey. Wolsey had cherished an ambition to be buried within the precincts of Windsor Castle, and caused his sarcophagus to be carved by one of the most famous sculptors of his time. But Wolsey died in disgrace, and the sarcophagus remained empty at Windsor until Nelson's death, when it was thriftily employed to hold the remains of the hero of Trafalgar.

ROBBING A CARD PARTY

THE WILEY OLD BUTLER MADE ALL PREPARATIONS.

Helped Himself to Elderly Maiden Ladies' Change and Then Disappeared.

A party of elderly maiden ladies, residing in West Hamstead, London, England, became the victims of a cool act on the part of their butler the other evening, and the police are now looking for the gentleman who did a very ungallant act in a very smart way.

The affair took place at a villa in Priory road occupied by two elderly maiden ladies, the Misses Isaacson. Some little time ago the ladies engaged as butler a German waiter, who came with good references, and his service gave every satisfaction up to the time of the robbery.

It was the custom of the Misses Isaacson periodically to invite a number of lady friends to a card party, and on Thursday night of last week four of the latter were present.

Late in the evening they engaged in a game of poker, playing with counters. Their chatelaines or bags containing their purses and money were hung on the back of their chairs, or were placed in their laps.

ENTER THE BUTLER.

Upon this quiet scene entered the butler, who proceeded to hand round sweets. Suddenly he dashed his tray into a corner of the room and made a snatch at the bag of the lady nearest to him. It was lying upon her knee.

The chain of the bag snapped and it fell to the floor. The butler, without waiting to pick it up, rushed round the table, gathering in the other bags from the backs of the chairs as he went, while the ladies looked on in amazement too great for speech or movement.

Then, as a young lady of the party gave vent to a piercing shriek, he bolted through the door, which he slammed and locked on the outside.

One of the hostesses ran to the electric bell near the fireplace, and gave the alarm, but there was no response. It transpired afterwards that the butler had sent the cook out on a bogus errand and there was no other servant in the house.

The man meanwhile made his way out at the back, clambered over a wall and made his escape. The ladies were released from the front room after a time and the police were summoned; but, of course, there was no trace of the missing butler.

BUTLER'S WASHING.

The Misses Isaacson said that their servant had made all preparations for the robbery beforehand. Besides sending the cook out, he had barricaded the house, and apparently he had an accomplice who helped him in his adventure. A strange man had called at the house the same evening stating that he had come for the butler's washing.

The butler also took some valuable jewellry from a room upstairs. The total amount of the money in the bags was somewhere about £14 or £15, but the robber made a bad "miss" from his point of view in leaving the chatelaine which fell on the floor, as that contained the largest sum of all—over £9.

Scotland yard detectives have the matter in hand.

PAINTNG WITH EARTH.

Where the Different Colors Are Derived From.

The cochineal insects furnish a great many fine colors. Among them are the gorgeous carmine, the crimson, scarlet, and purple lakes. The cuttlefish gives the sepia. It is the inky fluid which the fish discharges in order to render the water opaque when attacked.

Indian yellow comes from the camel. Ivory chips produce ivory black and bone black. The exquisite Prussian blue is made by fusing horses' hoofs and other refuse animal matter with impure potassium carbonate. This color was discovered accidentally.

Various lakes are derived from roots, barks, and gums. Blue-black comes from the charcoal of the vine stalk. Lampblack is soot from certain resinous substances. Turkey red is made from the madder plant, which grows in Hindostan.

The yellow sap of a tree in Siam produces gamboge; the natives catch the sap in cocoanut shells. Raw sienna is the natural earth from the neighborhood of Sienna, Italy. Raw umber is also an earth found near Umbria, and burnt.

India-ink is made from burnt camphor. The Chinese are the only manufacturers of the ink. Mastic is made from the gum of the mastc tree, which grows in the Grecian Archipelago.

Bister is the soot of wood ashes. Chinese white is zinc. scarlet is iodine of mercury, and native vermilion is from quicksilver ore.

NOT GRACE.

His name was Da... was a large and florid ... nent was it that it had ... sobriquet "Trunky" from the lad... school under his control.

Just recently he had occasion to severely punish Tommy Brawler. On reaching home, the angelic Tommy poured into the maternal ear the tale of Mr. Trunky's cruelty. And forthwith Mrs. Brawler, eager for the fray, visited the school and asked for Mr. Trunky, which was the only name she had ever heard applied to the master by her son. The teacher who had opened the door to her, although surprised at the use of the nickname, did not correct her, but sent for Mr. Darling.

The latter received the irate mother's "dressing down" meekly, but on being repeatedly called Trunky at length remonstrated.

"Trunky is not my name, madame," he said. "Please call me Darling!"

"How dare you, sir! I'll send my husband round to you!" shrieked Mrs. Brawler, as she went into hysterics.

THE EXPLOSION AT LENS

TALES OF HORRIBLE SUFFERING BEFORE HELP CAME.

An English Correspondent Tells of the Many Sad Scenes he Witnessed.

There has been a far more exquisite pathos in this revisiting than there was in the first scenes of the disaster which I beheld three weeks ago, writes a correspondent of the London Telegraph at Lens, France. It was morning, and death brought us everywhere thrilling spectacles. Death, which grew grimmer and more sinister as the days drew on, and the actual material horror of it all increased. Now the wonderful pathos of those thirteen lives recovered almost from the dead touches much more than the ghastly sights seen before. Wives and mothers, faint and vacant-minded from crying for the departed, wrung one's heart. But now to see them fondling the loved ones come back from that hell below is a spectacle which cuts one's feelings to the quick as with a knife. I defy anybody to leave that infirmary dry-eyed. I held out for some minutes till a stout, homely woman's eyes caught mine. She was standing by the bedside of her boy, whose eyes were nearly starting out of their bony sockets in his gaunt face. She looked back at him, then to me again. The mother's love in her eyes was the most exquisite sight I have ever seen. She said nothing, she merely looked; but her eyes were telling me: "My boy has come back to me." Her eyes wanted to tell it to every one. She could not keep her love to herself. I went up to her with tears in my eyes and grasped her hand. Then she said merely: "His brother died in his arms, monsieur." Yes, he died in his arms, and so her look was fixed on the boy again with unutterable fondness. She was devouring him with her eyes. He, poor fellow, could hardly speak, but he murmured, "He died in my arms," and tried weakly to open his arms, remembering how as he had carried his brother, stumbling with him blindly along the galleries, he had felt the boy grow stiff and cold. He had only felt, he could not see him die. Think what the tragedy of that moment must have been. The boy's name is Castel and he lies in the infirmary in the bed next to that of the leader of the party, Neny.

On entering the humble, whitewashed room, with its ten iron camp bedsteads, where the men and boys, nearly all looking like ghosts, lie. I first shook hands with the wonderful Neny in the cot next the door. He did not move one to tears, but he moved one to meek and wondering admiration. Not one man in a thousand is his equal. He lay, his brawny, hairy chest bare, his bearded face the picture of manly strength, and he told us eagerly, but quite collectedly, about those twenty nights and days, which were nights, too, down there. In those ceaseless blind wanderings did he never despair?

"Oh, yes! I did at the last. I took my knife and sharpened it." Here the man passed an imaginary knife backward and forward over the bedclothes. "I meant to cut my throat. That must have been the last day before we were found. If we had not been found I should have done it. There would have been nothing else to do."

Neny certainly would have done it. He is the man who does everything he says. Some of the party which he led state that he bullied them and cuffed them. I believe it and understand it. He had to do it, and there were terrible scenes in that inferno. "I had sometimes to drag them along. I had to bully those who were giving up." Neny has brains, of course, as well as courage, and is undoubtedly a leader of men in his own world. Few crosses of the Legion of Honor have been as well deserved as that which the Minister of Public Works has pinned to his shirt this afternoon as he lay in bed. How did he live with the twelve others in the hell down there? How could they keep alive? I asked.

"We ate oats," said Neny. "I ate about so much," and he put his hands out, shaping a round about the size of a melon. That, with a few carrots and some pieces of rotten horseflesh, kept those thirteen men alive.

"Not thirteen; we were twenty," put in Neny. "Seven of the party have gone I don't know where. They disappeared somewhere. Oats, carrots and rotten horse were what we ate."

BRITAIN'S ROYAL YACHT

THE VICTORIA AND ALBERT COST $60,000,000.

Mahogany and Silver and Silken Hangings for the King and Queen.

The royal yacht of England, the Victoria and Albert, cost the pretty sum of $6,000,000. She was launched in May, 1899, with the present Princess of Wales as sponsor. She is 439 feet long. Her engines are of 11,000 horse-power and she has a speed of about twenty miles an hour. Her coal supply will carry her from England to the Riviera.

The fittings and decorations are quietly rich and sumptuous. Even on the upper deck, solid silver is used for the deck fittings. All the apartments are panelled in enamelled white, while the necessary warmth of color is obtained in the furniture, carpets and draperies. In the King's private stateroom the carpet is a rich blue, which well matches the blue morocco of the chairs All the furniture here is of grained mahogany, slightly inlaid with other woods. As to the King's bedroom, it is severely simple, with its swinging bedstead of silver plate, without draperies; its satinwood furniture, silver plated metal work and specially woven carpet.

THE QUEEN'S BEDROOM

is much larger than the King's. It is a model of grace and beauty and its white panelling and stately canopied bed suspended from the ceiling. The furniture is of dainty grained satinwood with silver fittings. The color scheme is a soft green. The coverlet of the bed has an elaborate monogram surmounted by a crown. Queen Alexandra's dressing room is a large apartment with a bath of jasper and dressing tables of inlaid satinwood to an enormous cheval glass forming a movable panel in the wall.

Opposite the royal sleeping apartments is the drawing room. The walls are, of course, panelled in white; the furniture is hand painted satinwood, and the hangings of blue silk. In one corner is a pedestal writing table, flanked by two small semi-circular tables; and opposite the big yet homelike fireplace is a grand piano. Bookcases and lounge seats make the drawing room a delightful retreat in rough weather.

THE STATE DINING ROOM

is an apartment of noble dimensions, occupying one-third of the vessel's length, and lighted by no fewer than twenty-six windows and two large skylights. From floor to ceiling it is panelled in white, accented with a pilaster treatment of great beauty and delicacy. Covers can be laid here for thirty guests. The smoking room is close by.

The grand staircase leads from the reception room up to the state deck, most of which is occupied by royal apartments, including a private dining room. An electric elevator assuages the trials of seasick royalists.

There is also a well-appointed hospital and dispensary down below, where a titled physician presides over the health of the King and Queen.

The yacht is commanded by a Rear Admiral and he has a crew of 280 men. The officers are selected from the best of the navy.

Although the Victoria and Albert is a commissioned ship, she never fires a salute, not even in reply to the guns of foreign warships. If she is at anchor, the guardship of the port answers for her. If at sea her cruiser escort replies.

The present royal yacht is not the first Victoria and Albert that has flown the royal standard. Her earliest predecessor was on insignificant paddle wheel auxiliary yacht, with a big spread of canvas to help her engines to

A POOR TWELVE KNOTS.

She was broken up in 1868, but in 1855 was superseded by the late Queen's Victoria and Albert, to which Queen Victoria was almost fanatically attached.

Here again was a huge baddle wheel yacht, quaintly honeycombed with cabins staterooms, boudoirs, and the like to accommodate the extensive family and aged retainers of the old Queen. For when Queen Victoria went to sea she usually took her entire family with her, so that the big craft became a kind of floating nursery.

The decorations were extremely old fashioned, the walls of chintz being covered with long lines of pink flowers on a white background—exactly the pattern one comes across to-day in remote English farm-houses off the beaten track of the railroad, far from modern innovations.

Yet on no account would the late Queen permit alterations, either structural or decorative, and to the last the old V. and A., as it was called, remained exactly as it was in the days of the Prince Consort.

CARE OF THE DAIRY COW.

Can it be truthfully said that the dairy cow receives at the hands of her owner or attendant that care which she deserves, and which will allow her to give the best returns? Though it is rather late to speak of it now, still we will take the fall season—when farmers are busy preparing for winter—is a time when dairy cows are apt to be neglected. Frequently they are left to pick up a scanty living from bare pastures and the fence corners of grain fields, exposed to all the inclemencies of the autumn weather. The highly organized dairy cow is very sensitive to sudden and extreme changes in the weather, and nothing could be more detrimental to economical milk production. The flow of milk is often so materially lessened that it cannot be brought back to the normal standard during the winter. Exposure to storm and lying on the cold, damp ground at night not only lead to a decreased flow of milk, but they are very apt to cause udder troubles, rheumatism, and other diseases, and in some cases even death.

It must be remembered that one night or even a few hours of cold rain causes an enormous shrinkage of milk. Food, comfort and contentment are the prime factors in successful dairying, and it is not too much to say that comfort is the primest factor. To feed well but to disregard the bodily comfort of the cow is to court and insure disappointment. A cow will fail to elaborate a full quantity of milk if she is wet or shivering from cold.

Autumn is really a more critical period for a cow fresh in milk than winter. Cold rains and raw winds are fruitful causes of decreasing milk. The first makes inactive the muscular system, while the latter so disturbs the nervous system that it fails to perform its work. Cows should therefore not be exposed to fall rains, left out during cold nights, or confined in muddy and wet yards at any time.

The proof of this was clearly demonstrated in an unintentional experiment carried out some time since. Some changes were being made in the cow barn, which made it inconvenient to stable the cows for a few days, and just then a cold rainy spell set in, to which the cows were exposed. There was not only a very marked shrinkage in milk and butter fat at once, but they failed to recover during the winter, though the feed was liberal and the care the best that could be given.

It was known when the shrinkage took place and why, but the attempt to recover it failed. The next year such an experience was guarded against, and the herd gave a daily average of 28.4 pounds of milk and 1.2 pounds of butter fat, as against 16.11 pounds of milk and .8 pounds of butter fat given the year before.

It may be asked what the cows did with their food, since they were fed liberally during the winter. They made beef or fat with it, for each gained an average of nearly half a pound a day, a gain that did neither the cows or the owner any good. During the two winters the herd was composed of the same cows, fed the same rations and received the same careful attention, and yet because of that mishap the herd failed by just fifty per cent. of doing its normal or possible work.

A FEW DON'TS.

Don't fail to spray every season. It is impossible to determine in advance whether or not the plant or tree will be attacked. Proper spraying is never injurious.

Don't wait till the fungi have attacked plant or tree; the fungicide are merely preventatives and should be used early in the spring. After the disease has developed it may be too late to save the plant.

Don't spray during or just after a shower or when there has been a heavy dew. Much of the solution will be washed off or it will collect in spots. Wait till all the leaves are dry. Poison is more effective when applied to the leaves when dry.

Don't spray the tops of the leaves only; spray the under sides where the pests hide, and be careful to keep your liquid thoroughly agitated.

Don't give up spraying because you do not see any benefit from your work. Perhaps you did not spray early enough to prevent the bugs, perhaps you did not use the right formula, or were not careful in its preparation, perhaps you did not spray thoroughly and often enough. Try again.

Don't buy a sprayer from an unknown manufacturer. If your sprayer gets out of order, or if you break some part, it may be difficult to get repaired. Good sprayers with proper care last for years and all parts are easily and quickly duplicated.

Don't buy a bucket sprayer and expect to spray an orchard with it. Buy a sprayer large enough to do your work quickly and easily and if you do not know the size you want, write us the acreage you want to spray and we will tell you.

Don't put your sprayer away after using it until you have thoroughly cleaned out all the spraying mixture. If left in the spray mixture the pump will be injured and the glands and valves clogged.

Don't start out to spray until you have carefully examined your sprayer to see that it is in good working order.

Don't leave your sprayer where it will freeze unless all the sprayer has been drained from it. If liquor is frozen in the pump it is liable to break iron cylinders or stretch brass cylinders, so the pump will not work.

Don't spray only the trees from which you expect to get marketable fruit. Spray all the trees, otherwise the trees you go to the trouble to spray early in the season may become infected later by the unsprayed trees. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

THE LARGE BLACK PIG.

The Large Blacks are the latest addition to the list of registered pure breeds in England. Little appears to be known regarding their origin, but they have been bred for many years in the south and east of England. They are practically unknown on this continent, though a few of them were brought to the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa a few years ago, and we are not aware that they have earned any special claim to favor in this country, though they appear to be gaining some ground in the Old Land.

They are a large breed, all black in color. The ears are large and drooping, and the general type of the animal inclines to coarseness. They are a prolific breed, and it is claimed that they excel as bacon producers, though those brought to Ottawa proved in that respect much inferior to some of the other breeds kept there.

The scale of points adopted by the Large Black Pig Society of Great Britain calls for a head of medium length, and wide between the ears; ears long, thin, and inclined well over the face; jowl medium size; neck fairly long and muscular shoulders, smooth, oblique, and with narrow plate; back long and level (rising a little to centre of back not objected to); sides very deep; ribs well sprung; loin broad; quarters long, wide, and not dropping; hams large, and well filled to hocks; tail set high, and not coarse; legs short and straight; belly and flank thick and well filled; skin fine and soft; coat moderate quantity of straight, silky hair.

ARE RIVERS OF GOLD.

Terra del Fuego, Patagonia, May be the Next Klondike.

A quest for gold in the wild and little known region of Terra del Fuego, in Patagonia, is the object of an expedition which will shortly start from Great Britain.

Prospectors discovered alluvial gold as far back as 1880, and the purpose of the present expedition is to dredge for gold, the sands of certain rivers being said to be full of particles of the precious metal washed down from the higher country.

A queer-looking stern-wheel boat has been constructed in Thornycroft's yard at Chiswick for the use of the expedition. It takes the form of a shallow steam barge of metal, capable of carrying five tons of the "golden sand," and will act as tender to the dredger, carrying the sand to the headquarters of the prospectors to have the gold extracted.

THE CRIMINAL'S CONFESSION

OR, SYBIL BERNER'S VINDICATION

CHAPTER I.

When Sybil recovered from her deathlike swoon she felt herself being borne slowly on through what seemed a narrow, tortuous underground passage; but the utter darkness, relieved only by a little gleaming red taper that moved like a star before her, prevented her from seeing more.

A presentiment of impending destruction possessed her, and overwhelming horror filled her soul and held her faculties. Though her life had depended upon her speech, she could not have uttered a syllable. And no word was breathed by the mysterious beings who bore her on. Dumb as mutes at a funeral, they marched. Silent, breathless, as one on the brink of death, Sybil held her senses fast and prayed. And the little red spark moved through the darkness before her, like a malignant star leading her to doom. And how long drawn out the dreadful way! Minutes seemed months, and hours ages. The awful forms that held her in their hands; their monotonous tread as they bore her on; their utter silence; the deep darkness; the damp, earthy, stifling atmosphere; the agony of suspense; the horror of anticipation—all these must have sent her into another swoon, but that her vigilant mind still held her senses alert, and she prayed.

Who were these beings? Why had they abducted her? What would they do with her? She had asked herself these questions, but shrank appalled from any possible answer. Death? Dishonor worse than death? Oh that some miracle might save her in this tremendous peril! She prayed. And what a tedious anguish of anxiety! When would the end come?

At length a breath of fresh air as from the upper world was wafted past her face. Welcome as a drop of cold water to a parched palate was this breath of fresh air to her fevered lungs. But it passed, and all was close and suffocating again.

Next a faint gleam of pale light glanced through the darkness far ahead, but it vanished, and all was blackness again, but for the little red spark moving before her. All silent, suffocating, dark.

But presently there came another breath of air, together with a faint, fair,, blue light, as of day, in the far distance. And soon the breath of air became a breeze, and Sybil drew in refreshing draughts that, in renewing her vitality, almost restored her courage.

And now they moved on faster, for the path was freer. And now also the dawning light enabled Sybil to see her captors; and if any circumstances could have increased her horror, the looks of these men must have done so. They were of almost gigantic height, and shrouded from head to foot in long, black gowns, with hoods that were drawn over their heads, while their faces were entirely concealed by black masks. A shudder ran through her frame as she looked upon them.

But soon the changing aspect of the subterranean passage forced itself upon her attention. It now seemed not so much a narrow passage as a succession of small caverns, one opening into another and every advanced one rather larger, lighter and more beautiful than the preceding; the walls, floor and ceiling being of bright red sandstone, and lighted here and there with sparkling stalactites. At last, through a narrower and more tortuous winding than any they had yet passed, they suddenly entered a spacious cavern of such exceeding beauty and splendor that for an instant Sybil lost sight of her terrors in her astonishment and admiration.

The walls and roofs of this dazzling place were completely covered with the purest pearl-like spar, and lighted with pendant crystals and stalactites that, as they caught the stray sunbeams, glowed, burned, blazed and sparkled like a million of pendant diamonds, rubies, emeralds and sapphires. The floor was thickly carpeted with living moss of the most brilliant hues of vivid green, soft grey, delicate rose, and cerulean blue. Into this enchanting palace of nature the light entered from many almost imperceptible crevices.

All this Sybil saw at a glance, and then her eyes settled upon a figure who seemed the sole occupant of the place.

This was a young girl, who, with her red cloak thrown matlike on the moss, was seated upon it cross-legged in Turkish fashion. Her elfin face, her malign eyes, her wild, black hair and picturesque costume, were all so in keeping with the aspect of the place, that one might have deemed her the spirit of the cavern.

Sybil had scarcely time to observe all this before her bearers stood her immediately in front of the seated girl, and, saying

"There she is, princess! So work your will upon her," they withdrew.

Now the worst of Sybil's terrors were over. Those dreadful men were gone. Before her was only a woman, a girl, whom she certainly had no reason to fear.

They looked at each other in silence for perhaps half a minute; then Sybil spoke:

"What place is this? Who are you? Why am I brought hither?"

"One question at a time," answered the girl. "'What place this is' concerns you little; 'who I am' concerns you less; 'why you are brought here,' ah! that concerns you very much! It concerns your liberty, and perhaps your life."

"I do not believe it! You have had me torn away from my husband! Where is he now?" haughtily demanded Mrs. Berners.

"He is likely in the hands of the constables, who are by this time in possession of the Haunted Chapel. But fear nothing! Him they will release again, for they have no right to detain him; but you they would have kept if they had caught you. Come, lady, do not resent the rough manner in which you were saved."

"I do not understand all this."

"It is scarcely necessary that you should."

"And my husband! When shall I see him?"

"When you can do so with safety to yourself, and to us."

"When will that be?"

"How can I tell?"

"Oh, Heaven! he will be half crazed with anxiety!"

"Better that he should be half crazed with anxiety, than wholly crazed by despair. Lady, had we not removed you when we did, you would certainly be in the hands of the constables before this day is over, probably before this hour."

"How do you know this?"

"From the information brought in by our spies."

"We came upon the Haunted Chapel by chance, in the dead of night. No one could have known so soon that we were there."

"No one did know it. The constables were coming there for us, but they would have found you, had we not brought you away with us. That was my doing. I made your removal the condition of my silence."

"Girl, who are you? I ask again; and why do you take this interest in me?"

"Lady, I am an outlaw like yourself, hunted like yourself, guiltless like yourself; the daughter, sister, companion of thieves. Yet, never will I become a thief, or the wife or the mother of one!"

"This is terrible!" said Sybil, with a shudder. "But why should this be so?"

"It is my fate."

"And why do you care for me?"

"I thought I had answered that question in telling you all that I have told about myself, for 'a fellow feeling makes us wondrous kind;' but if you want another reason I can give it to you. I care for you because I know that you are guiltless of the crime for which you are hunted through the world. And I am resolved, come what may, that you shall not suffer for it."

"In the name of Heaven, what do you say?" exclaimed Sybil, in strong excitement. "If you know me to be guiltless, you must know who is guilty! Nay, you do know it! You cannot only save my life, but clear my fame."

Marian Mayfield

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Who shall follow them or intrude on the sacredness of their reconciliation, or relate with what broken tones and frequent stops and tears and smiles and clinging embraces their mutual explanations were made?

At last Marian, raising her head from his shoulder, said:

"But I am come to you a bankrupt, dear Thurston! I have inherited and expended a large fortune since we parted—and now I am more than penniless, for I stand responsible for large sums of money owed by my 'Orphans' Home' and 'Emigrants' Help'—money that I had intended to raise by subscription."

"Now, I thank God abundantly for the wealth that He has given me. Your fortune, dearest Marian, has been nobly appropriated—and for the rest, it is my blessed privilege to assume all your responsibilities—and I rejoice that they are great! for, sweetest wife, and fairest lady, I feel that I never can sufficiently prove how much I love and reverence you—how much I would and ought to sacrifice for you!"

"And even now, dear Thurston, I came hither, bound on a mission to the Western prairies, to find a suitable piece of land for a colony of emigrants."

"I know it, fairest and dearest lady, I know it all. I will lift that burden from your shoulders, too, and all liabilities of yours do I assume—oh! my dear Marian! with how much joy! and I will labor with and for you, until all your responsibilities of every sort are discharged, and my liege lady is free to live her own life!"

This scene took place in the private parlor of the hotel, while Paul Douglass was gone to Colonel Thornton's lodgings, to carry the glad tidings to Miriam, and also to procure a carriage for the conveyance of the whole party to Dell-Delight.

He returned at last, accompanied by Miriam, whom he tenderly conducted into the room, and who, passing by all others, tottered forward, and sank, weeping, at the feet of Mr. Willcoxen, and clasping his knees, still wept, as if her heart would break.

Thurston stooped and raised her, pressed the kiss of forgiveness on her young brow, and then whispered:

"Miriam, have you forgotten that there is another here who claims your attention?" took her by the hand and led her to Marian.

The young girl was shy and silent, but Marian drew her to her bosom, saying:

"Has my baby' forgotten me? And so, you would have been an avenger, Miriam. Remember, all your life, dear child, that such an office is never to be assumed by an erring human creature. 'Vengeance is mine, and I will repay, saith the Lord.'" And kissing Miriam fondly, she resigned her to Paul's care, and turned, and gave her own hand to Thurston, who conducted her to the carriage, and then returned for little Angel, who all this time had sat demurely in a little parlor chair.

They were followed by Paul and Miriam, and so set forth to Dell-Delight.

But little more remains to be told.

Thurston resigned his pastoral charge of the village church; settled up his business in the neighborhood; procured a discreet woman to keep house at Dell-Delight; left Paul and Miriam and poor Fanny in her care, and set out with Marian on their western journey, to select the site for the settlement of her emigrant proteges. After successfully accomplishing this mission, they returned East, and embarked for Liverpool, and thence to London, where Marian dissolved her connection with the "Emigrants' Help," and bade adieu to her "Orphans' Home." Thurston made large donations to both these institutions. And Marian saw that her place was well supplied to the "Orphans' Home" by another competent woman. Then they returned to America. Their travels had occupied more than twelve months. And their expenses of all sorts had absorbed more than a third of Mr. Willcoxen's princely fortune—yet with what joy was it lavished by his hand, who felt he could not do too much for his priceless Marian.

On their return home a heartfelt gratification met them—it was that the parish had shown their undiminished confidence in Mr. Willcixen, and their high appreciation of his services, by keeping his pulpit open for him. And a few days after his settlement at home a delegation of the vestry waited upon him to solicit his acceptance of the ministry. And after talking with his "liege lady," as he fondly and proudly termed Marian, Mr. Willcoxen was well pleased to return a favorable answer.

And in a day or two Thurston and Marian were called upon to give decision in another case, to wit:

Jacquelina had not returned to Bethlehem, nor renewed her vows; but had doffed her nun's habit for a young lady's dress, and remained at Luckenough. Cloudy had not failed to push his suit with all his might. But Jacquelina still hesitated—she did not know, she said, but she thought she had no right to be happy, as other people had, she had caused so much trouble in the world, she reckoned she had better go back to her convent.

"And because you unintentionally occasioned some sorrow, now happily over, to some people, you would atone for the fault by adding one more to the list of victims, and making me miserable. Bad logic, Lina, and worse religion."

Jacquelina did not know—she could not decide—after so many grave errors, she was afraid to trust herself. The matter was then referred—of all men in the world—to the commodore, who graciously replied, that they might go to the demon for him. But as Cloudy and Lina had no especial business with his Satanic Majesty they declined to avail themselves of the permission, and consulted Mrs. Waugh, whose deep, mellow laugh preceded her answer, when she said:

"Take heart, Lapwing! take heart, and all the happiness you can possibly get! I have lived a long time, and seen a great many people, good and bad, and though I have sometimes met people who were not so happy as they merited—yet I never have seen anyone happier than they deserved to be! and that they cannot be so, seems to be a law of nature that ought to reconcile us very much to the apparent flourishing of the wicked."

But Mrs. L'Oiseau warned her daughter not to trust to "Aunty," who was so good-natured, and although such a misguided woman, that if she had her will she would do away with all punishment—yes, even with Satan and purgatory! But Jacquelina had much less confidence in Mrs. L'Oiseau than in Mrs. Waugh; and so she told Cloudy, who thought that he had waited already quite long enough, to wait until Marian and Thurston came home, and if they thought it would be right for her to be happy—why—then—maybe— she might be! But the matter must be referred to them.

And now it was referred to them, by the sorely tried Cloudy. And they gave Jacquelina leave to be "happy." And she was happy! And as for Cloudy, poor, constant fellow! he was so overjoyed that he declared he would petition the Legislature to change his name as no longer appropriate, for though his morning had been Cloudy enough, his day was going to be a very bright one!

When Mrs. L'Oiseau heard of this engagement, she crossed herself, and told her beads, and vowed that the world was growing so wicked that she could no longer live in it. And she commenced preparations to retire to a convent, to which, in fact, she soon after went, and where, in strict truth, she was likely to be much happier than her nature would permit her to be elsewhere.

Cloudy and Lina were very quietly married, and took up their abode at the pleasant farmhouse of Locust Hill, which was repaired and refurnished for their reception. But if the leopard cannot change his spots, nor the Ethiope his skin—neither can the fairy permanently change her nature; for no sooner was Jacko's happiness secured, than the elfish spirit, the lightest part of her nature, effervesced to the top—for the torment of Cloudy. Jacko and Cloudy, even, had one quarrel—it was upon the first occasion after their marriage, of his leaving her to join his ship—and when the whilom Sister of Charity drove Cloudy nearly frantic by insisting—whether in jest or carnest no one on earth could tell—upon donning the little middy's uniform and going with him! However, the quarrel happily was never renewed, for before the next time of sailing there appeared a certain tiny Cloudy at home, that made the land quite as dear as the sea to its mother. And this little imp became Mrs. Waugh's especial pet. And if Jacquelina did not train the little scion very straight, at least she did not twist him awry. And she even tried, in her fitful, capricious way, to reform her own manners, that she might form those of her little children. And Mrs. Waugh and dear Marian aided her and encouraged her in her uncertain efforts.

About this time Paul and Miriam were united, and went to housekeeping in the pretty villa built for them upon the site of Old Field Cottage by Thurston, and furnished for them by Mrs. Waugh.

And a very pleasant country neighborhood they formed—these three young families—of Dell-Delight, Locust Hill and the villa.

Two other important events occurred in their social circle—first, poor harmless Fanny passed smilingly to her heavenly home, and all thought it very well.

And one night Commodore Waugh, after eating a good, hearty supper, was comfortably tucked up in bed, and went into a sound, deep sleep from which he never more awoke. May he rest in peace. But do you think Mrs. Waugh did not cry about it for two weeks, and ever after speak of him as the poor, dear commodore?

But Henrietta was of too healthful a nature to break her heart for the loss of a very good man, and it was not likely she was going to do so for the missing of a very uncomfortable one; and so in a week or two more her happy spirits returned, and she began to realize to what freedom, ease and cheerfulness she had fallen heir! Now she could live and breathe; and go and come without molestation. Now when she wished to open her generous heart to the claims of affection in the way of helping Lapwing or Miriam, who were neither of them very rich—or to the greater claims of humanity in the relief of the suffering poor, or the pardon of delinquent servants, she could do so to her utmost content, and without having to accompany her kind act with a deep sigh at the anticipation of the parlor storm it would raise at home. And though Mrs. Henrietta still "waxed fat," her good flesh was no longer an incumbrance to her—the leaven of cheerfulness lightened the whole mass.

Mrs. Waugh had brought her old maid Jenny back. Jenny had begged to come home to "old mistress," for she said it was "'stonishin' how age-able," she felt, though nobody might believe it, she was "gettin' oler and oler, ebery single day" of her life, and she wanted to end her days "'long o' ole mistress."

Old mistress was rich and good, and Luckenough was a quiet, comfortable home, where the old maid was very sure of being lodged, boarded, and clothed almost as well as old mistress herself—not that these selfish considerations entered largely into Jenny's mind, for she really loved Mrs. Henrietta.

And old mistress and old maid were never happier than on some fine, clear day, when seated on their two old mules, they ambled along through forest and over field, to spend a day with Lapwing or with Hebe—or perhaps with the "Pigeon Pair," as they called the new married couple at the villa.

Yes; there was a time when Mrs. Henrietta was happier still! It was, when upon some birthday or other festival, she would gather all the young families—Thurston and Hebe, Cloudy and Lapwing, the Pigeons, and all the babies, in the big parlor of Luckenough, and sit surrounded by a flock of tiny lapwings, hebes and pigeons forming a group that our fairy saucily called, "The old hen and chickens."

And what shall we say in taking leave of Thurston and Marian? He had had some faults, as you have seen—but the conquering of faults is the noblest conquest, and he had achieved such a victory. He called Marian the angel of his salvation. Year by year their affection deepened and strengthened, and drew them closer in heart and soul and purpose. From their home as from a centre emanated a healthful, beneficent and elevating influence, happily felt through all their social circle. A lovely family grew arcund them—and among the beautiful children none were more tenderly nursed or carefully trained than the little waif, Angel. And in all the pleasant country neighborhood, the sweetest and happiest home is that of Dell-Delight.

The End.

BISSELL'S

"Cyco" Bearing

is the modern, sanitary labor saving appliance for every day use in sweeping carpets or rugs. The corn broom simply scatters the fine dust and grit, never cleaning a carpet or rug, whereas the rapidly revolving brush of a Bissell lifts the fine dust and pet, depositing grit out of the carpet in the pans, and confining all the dust. If a woman could realize the true value of the Bissell sweeper, she would not let a day pass until she had purchased one. It reduces the labor of sweeping 95%, confines all the dust, does the work in one-quarter of the time a corn broom requires, protects your curtains and fine furniture from dust, in fact, makes sweeping a pleasure instead of a drudgery. For sale by all first-class dealers. Prices, $2.50, $3.00, $3.25, $3.50, $3.75, $4.00, $5.00.

Death of Martha E. Loughridge.

We copy the following from the Strathcona Chronicle":

"It is our sad duty this week to have to chronicle the sudden and unexpected death of Miss Martha E. Loughridge of Clearwater who departed this life at the age of 49 years.

Deceased has been a constant resident of Clearwater for the past thirteen years, coming from Rolla, North Dakota, and living with her brother Dan.

She leaves to mourn her untimely end, three brothers and two sisters, viz.—Dan and John of Clearwater, William of Leduc, Mrs. Dickson of Strathcona, and Mrs. Wood of Clearwater.

Deceased was highly respected by the community she was living in, her nature being kind and amiable. For the past year she had been troubled with a blood tumor and two weeks ago visited the Edmonton General Hospital for treatment, where an operation was performed Saturday, death resulting Sunday, May 14th, 1906. She was conscious to the last, bidding a last farewell to those who were with her, namely Mrs. Dickson and her companion brother Dan.

The funeral was largely attended, and took place from Mr. Wood's residence. Services were conducted both at the house and grave by Rev. Fleming of Strathcona and Rev. Reikie of Leduc. The remains were consigned to their last resting place in the Presbyterian Cemetery at Clearwater.

The bereaved have the heartfelt sympathy of the community in this their sad hour."

The deceased was a daughter of the late John Loughridge and was born and brought up at Cannamore, Finch township. Leaving Canada in 1888 she with the rest of her family, emigrated to Willow city, Botaneau Co., North Dakota, where they resided for four years, when, owing to the extreme drouth and depression that struck that state about that time, they with many more of the settlers became disgusted with the country and re-crossed the lines to British domains, seeking in the Edmonton district, "a goodly land, flowing with milk and honey," where all has prospered, and where many a foreigner have found a comfortable home. Deceased was a cousin of James H. Loughridge, Esq., of Morewood.

The Central Hotel and Keys' Laundry, Morrisburg, were visited by burglars one night last week. When the bread or cake or pastry comes from the oven light, crisp and appetising, you are wont to say you have had good luck with your baking.

The "good luck" idea is a relic of the time when housekeepers pitted their competency against poor flour.

To-day good baking isn't a matter of good luck in any home where

In the hands of competent housewives it never fails because it is the whitest, lightest, purest and best baking flour to be had.

The great curative powers of this remarkable remedy is attracting much attention and wherever it has been introduced it is winning its way among the people. It is a powerful, penetrating oil, which we believe has a larger percentage of cures of rheumatism to its credit than any other remedy ever offered for this dread disease. It acts directly on the bone—the lodging place of rheumatism,—dispels the poisonous acid from the system in the natural way and by its splendid work has proved that the surest and quickest method of getting relief from the torturing pains of rheumatism, as well as the common sense way, is by a direct attack on the affected part. For the small ills of life it is invaluable.

Tuck's Bone Oil.

Mrs. W. H. Thomas of Lombardy, writes as follows:—"I was subject to stiff neck. Suffered for two years and have been as long as two weeks at a time not able to turn my head without turning my whole body. I doctored and got relief only to have the trouble return again. In August last I had a severe attack and I tried Tuck's Rheumatic Bone Oil, having been reading in the papers about how good it was for rheumatism, &c. Three applications completely cured me and I have had no return of the trouble since. I recommend Tuck's Bone Oil to everyone."

Summers—Rae.

A very pretty house wedding took place on the 25th of April, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Rae of Cass Bridge, when their second daughter, Estella, was united in holy wedlock to Mr Alexander Summers, Rev. Mr. Lundy of North Williamsburg, officiating. At the hour of 7.30 p. m., the bridal party entered the room to the strains of Mendelsshon's wedding march, played by Mrs. Lundy. They were married under an arch of evergreens decorated with Union Jacks. The groom was assisted by his cousin, Mr. Edgar Summers, while Miss Ella Rae, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid. The bride wore a cream gown of crepe de chene, trimmed with chiffon, and carried a boquet of white roses. The bridesmaid was dressed in cream crepe de chene, and carried a boquet of white carnations. When the ceremony was over and Mr. and Mrs. Summers had received the congratulations and good wishes of the assembly present, over fifty guests repaired to the dining room where a well prepared feast awaited them. Toasts were given to the King, the bride and groom, the ladies, the parents, and in all a very pleasant evening was spent. The presents to the bride were numerous and pretty, among them being a beautiful cabinet of silver from her brother in the Northwest. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold bracelet, with an amethyst setting, to the bridesmaid a gold brooch set with pearls, and a stick pin to the groomsman.

You have No Reason for Not Using

Zutoo

Some people think that all headache cures are alike—that they all undermine the health, even if not perceived at the time of taking them.

Well, we'll admit that the drug cures do this, but that is no reason why you should not take Zutoo.

Zutoo is a harmless vegetable remedy. One ingredient is soda—just old-fashioned soda that our grandmothers used to take to settle the stomach, when they had sick headache. And there is nothing better.

The principal ingredient—the one that stops the headache, is a vegetable ingredient, imported for us from Japan. It wont hurt you any more than will the soda.

There is absolutely no reason why you should not use Zutoo.

If you suffer from headache there is every reason why you should.

Taken in time, two tablets will ward off a headache. Taken later, they will stop it in twenty minutes, and leave you feeling good every time.

If you are using a drug remedy, why not discard it?

Zutoo will cure just as quickly and will save you the penalty, that all must sometime pay, who take the drugs which these cures contain.

If you will give Zutoo one trial, you will never take any other headache remedy again.

THE SCOURGE OF CONSUMPTION.

Thousands are Dying—If Tired, Languid, or Run Down, Get Protection Before Too Late.

No child, man or woman is safe from consumption unless their blood is pure, rich and nourishing.

Allow the blood to become thin, and immediately the whole system grows weak. The lungs are deprived of resisting power and the ever-present tubercular baccilli develops.

The most positive protection against consumption is Ferrozone, which restores the blood to full strength. Weak organs are instantly strengthened. Worn-out tissues are rebuilt, New life is given to the lungs and all danger of consumption is destroyed.

Mrs. E J. Richardson, Manotick, Ont., tells as follows of her enormous gain in health from Ferrozone. "For two years I was not well. I was thin and anaemic. Towards spring I fell into a condition of nervous exhaustion. A dead tiredness hung over me like a load of lead. Housework of any kind I simply couldn't do. A bad cough developed that worried me greatly for I thought it might be tubercular. When I first read of Ferrozone I was convinced it was good. I took it regularly for eight weeks and the change in my condition was wonderful. My cheeks filled out and became clear and rosy. I gained eight pounds and now am strong and vigorous as possible."

Ferrozone feeds, nourishes and tones up the body—it sends the vim and thrill of robust health from head to foot—makes you feel better at once. Won't you use Ferrozone? Price 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U. S. A. and Kingston, Ont.

CAHORE.

Again the grim messenger of death has visited our midst and taken away one of our highly respected residents, Murdoch McGillivary.

The deceased was born in Scotland, in 1833 and came with his parents to Canada in 1851. He settled on a farm in Finch township, where he resided until his death.

He had been ill only a few months, and all that could be was done for his recovery, but of no avail. He passed away at his home on Monday, April 16th.

Mr. McGillivary possessed a beautiful character—quiet, generous and unassuming, and firm as a rock toward right. He was a staunch member of the Presbyterian Church and was presenter for a number of years in both Finch and Roxborough churches, till owing to ill health he resigned.

He leaves to mourn his loss a widow, three sons, John, Dougal and Duncan, at home, and two daughters, Mrs. Neil McLeod, Dunvegan, and Annabel, who resides at home.

The funeral, which was largely attended, took place on the following Wednesday, at his home, interment being made in the family plot on his farm. Rev. Mr. Beaton, Moose Creek, officiated.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. John Benton, John McGinnis, John Ferguson, Alex. McGillivary, Donald McGillivary, Mr. Simmons.

Oh, call it not death; 'tis an holy sleep,
And the precious dust the Lord doth keep,
He shall wake again and how satisfied,
With the likeness of Him for him who died.
As Christ rose again he shall also rise
From the quiet bed, where now safe he lies;
Then cheer ye dear mourners, who sadly weep
For happy are they who in Jesus sleep.

MURDERER ESCAPES.

Sawed Through Bars and By Means of Rope Escaped.

Kingston, May 8.—Probably the most daring escape in the history of the Kingston penitentiary occurred during last night, when a life convict named Chartrand escaped from the insane department of the big penal institution. Chartrand was brought here about two years ago from the Soo, where his sentence of death was commuted to life imprisonment. Recently he was transferred to the insane ward, as he showed every symptom of insanity. During last night in some manner, he sawed through two 1½ inch steel bars in his cell door, gaining entrance to the ward. Then he sawed through similar bars in a ward window, three stories above the ground and lowered himself to the ground by means of a rope, attached to the weights of the window. He then attached an iron hook to the end of the rope and threw it over the immense walls. He then, by climbing the rope, got clear away without leaving a trace. So as to gain time in getting away, Chartrand made a dummy out of flower pots and old clothes, leaving it in his cell, so as to deceive the guard on his rounds. The work of cutting the heavy bars must have taken weeks of work at night and the manner in which it was accomplished is a mystery. He is a dangerous man and fears are entertained in this vicinity. The warden has offered a reward of $100 for his capture, with the following description: "Age, 28; weight, 140 lbs.; height, 5 feet, nine inches; complexion, fair; eyes, gray; hair, brown; birthmark left leg, two scars back of head, occupation, sailor." He was part French and came originally from Montreal.

KEEPS UP WITH TIMES.

New Remedy for Stomach Trouble That Will Cure.

In keeping with their custom of always ordering a supply of new remedies as soon as their value has been established, our leading druggists, have obtained a supply of Mi-o-na, a remedy for stomach troubles that absolutely cures and restores lost functions of the digestive organs.

Until recently it was thought that pepsin was valuable in the treatment of stomach troubles, but it is now known that while pepsin aids in digesting meats, it has no effect upon starchy foods, such as potatoes, rice, bread, cornmeal etc. As the majority of stomach troubles come from indigestion of starchy foods, this makes pepsin absolutely useless in most cases.

On the other hand, Mi-o-na contains no pepsin, acts directly upon the gastric glands, restores the lost functions of the digestive organs, revives flagging nutrition, aids in assimilation of food and, in fact, so strengthens the whole digestive system that you can eat anything at any time without fear of indigestion.

Weakness, nervousness, sleeplessness, headache, pain and distress after eating, and debility are the result of a weak and faulty digestion. Use Mi-o-na, and all these symptons will be overcome, and you will have perfect health.

Get a 50 cent box of Mi-o-na tablets today.

If you cannot obtain Mi-o-na from your druggist, it will be sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price. Write us for advice on your case from a leading stomach specialist which will be sent free The R. T. Booth Company, Ithaca, N.Y.

Haldimand County Councillor tells how Psychine cured his Lung Troubles

"I contracted a series of colds from the changing weather," says Mr. Bryce Allen, a well-known resident of Jarvis, Ont., and a member of Haldimand County Council for his district, "and gradually my lungs became affected. I tried medicine and doctors prescribed for me, but got I no relief. With lungs and stomach diseased, nervous, weak and wasted, I began to use Psychine. With two months' treatment I regained my health. To-day I am as sound as a bell, and give all the credit to Psychine."

There is a proof of what Psychine does. It not only cures Colds and kills the germs of LaGrippe, Pneumonia and Consumption, but it helps the stomach, makes pure, rich blood and spreads general health all over the body. You will never have Consumption if you use

THE EMPIRE
Cream Separator
A WINNER.

Now that I have taken the agency of the Empire Cream Separator I wish to advise my numerous friends that I sell one of the best Cream Separators ever put on the market, not only by its appearance but by its close skimming.

The following is a proof that what I say is right:—

D'Israel, Que., Nov. 3, 1905.

The following is the result of a test made in my presence while acting as judge for all concerned:

Butter Fat left in Skim Milk.
EMPIRE - - - .06 per cent.
Delaval - - - .15 per cent.

(Signed) P. R. PLENTE. Judge,
Cheese-maker at D'Israeli.

It will readily be seen by the above letter that signed by Mr Plante, that the Delaval machine left 2½ times as much butter fat in the skim milk as did the EMPIRE and that therefore the Delaval wastes 2½ times as much butter fat as the EMPIRE.

The result of the test is plain to any reasonable observer. Mr. Plante is a well and favorably known resident of D'Israeli and farmers in that territory place every confidence in the result of the test made by him. Other points of difference between the two machines such as simplicity, ease of operation, durability and ease in cleaning were all in favor of the EMPIRE. It might also be stated that the bowl of each machine was washed in the skim milk and a composite test made so that there was no possible chance for any further loss than that indicated in the above letter.

FACTORIES STARTING UP

Work Resumed in San Francisco's Big Ship Yards.

A despatch from San Francisco says: Conditions of life are gradually becoming more normal in this city, and the work of clearing up the wreck in preparation for rebuilding in the down town section of the city is going on more rapidly. Business is being resumed by certain tradesmen of every description throughout the destroyed section of the city. The commission firms located along the water front are doing a thriving business.

MUST USE CANDLES.

Mayor Schmidtz has announced that all the time restrictions as to the lighting of dwellings has been removed with the suggestion that candles be used until electricity can be resumed. Petroleum for lighting purposes is especially prohibited until the water supply is full restored.

The united railroads have already in operation seven lines of street cars, and now cover nearly all sections of the unburned district. The work of inspecting chimneys is proceeding rapidly. The inspectors are all architects or builders and are donating their services for the benefit of householders. Every chimney in the city will be thoroughly inspected before any permits are issued to make fires indoors.

FACTORIES STARTING UP.

Many of the largest factories left unharmed are starting up work with all the rapidity possible under the circumstances. At the Union Iron works, 2,300 men are now employed and the management expects within a fortnight to have the full complement of 4,000 at work. No damage was done to the three new warships being built at these works for the Government, the cruisers California and Milwaukee, and the battleship South Dakota. The steamer City of Puebla, which was sunk in the bay, has been raised and is being repaired. Workmen are also engaged fixing the steamer Columbia, which was turned on her side.

PLANS FOR REBUILDING.

At a conference held on Tuesday night at Gen. Greely's headquarters, plans for rebuilding the City of San Francisco with Government aid was discussed. There were present besides Gen. Greely, James D. Phelan, Dr. Edwaird Devine, Mayor Schmitz, and Secretary Victor Metcalf, of the Department of Commerce and Labor. It was thought Secretary Metcalf might be able to carry back to Washington a comprehensive idea of the needs of this city, and the ideas of some of her leading men that the discussion was held. No definite request was made, nor was any plain of action fully outlined.

PRAYERS OF HARDENED MEN.

Locked in separate cells in the city prison, 100 prisoners, whose crimes range from plain drunkenness to brutal murder, knelt in prayer when the earthquake of April 18 shook the Hall of Justice from basement to tower top. Sin-hardened men and women appealed to God to spare them. Their prayers for deliverance came only after it became apparent that the attendants could do nothing for them. The earthquake had so twisted and warped the cell locks that not a door could be opened for nearly an hour.

"I never want to witness such sights again," said Prison Matron Ryan of the Central Station Prison, who was on duty when the tremble came. "There were something like 80 men and 22 women in the cells on the morning of the earthquake. In our departmnet there were abandoned creatures charged with all manner of crimes, many of whom I deemed hopelessly lost. They cried and shrieked for mercy when the shock came, and pleaded pitifully for release. Not one cell could be opened, and when I advised my charges of this fact they knelt on the hard cement floor and offered up a fervent prayer in unison.

"In the department of the male prisoners the conditions were the same, and many of the men attempted to destroy their lives by battering their heads against the steel bars when they realized there was no chance for immediate release. They, too, prayed when the attendants in charge managed to get them calm enough, and when it was all over it was a meek and humble hundred that we removed to the branch county jail."

CLEANING AWAY DEBRIS.

Curtailment of the relief list, together with the decision of the police to arrest as vagrants all able men without visible means of support who refuse to work, to-day added to the number of men engaged in cleaning away debris from the recent earthquake and fire.

There is not yet an adequate flow of water for us in case of fire. Cooking is still carried on in the streets. All of the banks resumed business to-day in temporary quarters and reported that at each place the deposits exceeded the withdrawals. Five hundred retailers are now operating in new quarters.

City Engineer Woodward on Thursday submitted a comprehensive plan for the rebuilding of the city. It includes the broadening and the extension of many streets, the purpose being to insure better protection against the spread of fire.

ASYLUM IS RUINED.

A despatch from Sain Jose, Cal., says: Architect Hudson, of Los Angeles, who has inspected the Asylum buildings, at Agnews, declares that all the buildings had been irreparably ruined. In his report to the Governor, Mr. Hudson will recommended the speedy erection of cottages to accommodate the patients until modern structures, not as highly as formerly, and which will be effected by neither fire nor earthquake, can be erected by the State.

ODD EFFECTS OF EARTHQUAKE.

A despatch from Stockton, Cal., says: It has been discovered that in the vicinity of Woodbridge, the Mokeluma River has fallen twelve feet, the bed of the river having dropped from the effects of the recent earthquake shock. As the waterway has overflowed frequently, farmers along the stream are highly pleased with the change, since it can carry far more water than hitherto and not endanger their lands.

Another incident of the earthquake is the drying up of the Tracy Lake in the north-western part of San Joacquin County.

GREAT DESTITUTION.

A despatch from Washington says: The question of caring for the destitute in San Francisco is causing the officilas there great anxiely, as shown by the following telegram from General Greely, dated Friday, and received at the War Department:—

"The number of destitute being fed is enormous, aggregating by to-day as just reported 191,637 in San Francisco. Apparently conservative estimates placed destitute refugees at 40,000 in Oakland and Berkley. How these terrible conditions are to be met is a subject of most earnest consideration between Devine, finance committee and myself. While exertions of army to reduce aid to smallest possible limit had effected important changes, yet solution of situation without enormous suffering appears impossible. While daily hoping for great decreases in number of destitute, am not confident. Far-reaching extent of this disaster cannot be appreciated without personal observation."

CAPTAIN AND TWO MEN DROWNED.

The Tug Clipper Sprang a Leak in Georgian Bay.

A despatch from Owen Sound Says: The steamer Manitou brought in the body of one of three victims of the first disaster on the lakes this season. The body is that of Edward Fletcher, engineer on the tug Clipper, which sank off the Bustard Islands early Monday morning with the loss of the lives of three out of the crew of four: Capt. McIntosh, French River. Edward Fletcher, Cutler, engineer; Robert Johnston, Midland, fireman.

On Sunday morning she cleared from Midland in command of Capt. Peter McIntosh, of French River. to go into commission for her new owners. Edward Fletcher, of Cutler, was acting as engineer, and Robert Johnson, of Midland, as fireman, with Albert Beatty, Midland, as cook. Between Byng Inlet and French River early Monday morning the boat began to leak so badly that an attempt was made to beach her, which was unsuccessful, and the crew attempted to save themselves in a small yawl, which, however, was not in a condition to hold them, and capsized. They managed to reach the sunken tug, the deck-house of which was not far below the water, and by climbing on it saved themselves for a time. A fishing boat was sighted, but could not be attracted by their signals of distress.

About 7 o'clock Monday evening Beatty started out on a raft made of a pall rack and a broken door, and made his way to a small island, one of the Bustards, where he remained till he was rescued about thirty hours later in a semi-delirious condition, from hunger and exposure, by a fisherman named William Hazzard. A search for the others proved fruitless, and Beatty was taken to the Bustard station of the Dominion Fish Company, where he was given every possible care.

RUSHING TROOPS TO EGYPT.

Turkey's Claims Cause Great Britain to Take Action.

A despatch from London says: The British Government has chartered the Leyland Line steamer Cestrian to convey troops to Egypt. She will be handed over to the authorities as soon as she arrives at Liverpool from Boston, which port she left on April 25.

Members of the House of Commons are anxious for information regarding the probable course of events in the Anglo-Turkish dispute on the subject of the Tabah boundary, but they obtained little satisfaction from the Foreign Secretary at question time on Tuesday. In reply to an interpellation he said that the Turkish claims on the Sinai Peninsula extended far beyond Tabah, so that a joint delimitation of the whole frontier was necessary. The British Government, therefore, had demanded a delimitation and the withdrawal of Turkish troops from Tabah pending a general settlement. The Porte hitherto had declined to agree to this, but was again being urged to agree to the British view.

He added that the report of the commander of the British cruiser Minerva, sent to investigate the alleged removal of the frontier pillars, had not yet been received, but the Grand Vizer had informed the British Ambassador at Constantinople. Sir Nicholas O'Connor, that a Turkish commission would be despatched to enquire into the matter, and that if the pillars had been displaced they would replace and repair them.

NO GARRISON NOW.

Britain May Return Wei-Hai-Wei to China.

A Shanghai despatch says: The Chinese regiment at Wei-Hai-Wei, which was organized by the British Government and was officered by British, has been disbanded, and its commanding officer, Major H. Bower, left for England on April 28. Great Britain has no garrison there now. It is reported that it will return the port to China.

TEN KILLED IN WRECK.

Two Passenger Trains Collide Head-on on Pennsylvania Railroad.

A despatch from Harrisburg, Pa., says: Two passenger trains collided head-on in Cutoff, near Williamsburg, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, at 10.45 o'clock this evening. It is reported ten people are killed and many injured. Many physicians from Huntington have been sent to the scene of the wreck.

NO SUPPORT FROM GERMANY.

Turkey Need Not Expect It in Quarrel With Britain.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT

NOTES AND PROCEEDINGS OF THE OTTAWA HOUSE.

YUKON TERRITORY.

Mr. Oliver introduced a bill providing a mining code for the Yukon Territory which, he explained, was brought down in response to the request of the Yukon Council, and at the express wish of the people of the Yukon, who desired to have existing regulations in regard to placer mining crystallized into statutory law, with, of course, some amendments to meet the changed conditions. The bill, he added, was practically drafted by the Yukon Council.

THE CRIMINAL CODE.

Mr. Fitzpatrick introduced a bill to amend the criminal code, which extends provisions for taking evidence in foreign countries by commission in cases where persons are under indictment to cases disposed of by summary procedure.

PRIVATE BILLS PASS.

The Railway Committee reported a number of private bills, among which were the following:

To enable the Canada Atlantic Railway Company to acquire the capital stock and bonds stock of the Pembroke Southern Railway and guarantee the bonds of the line to the amount of $150,000.

To extend for five years the time within which the Mather Bridge & Power Company may obtain the consent of the United States to bridge the Niagara River between Fort Erie and Buffalo.

To sanction the construction of several additions to the Kettle River Valley Railway Company's system in Southern British Columbia.

To extend the time for the completion of the Schomberg and Aurora Railway which is owned by Mackenzie and Mann; also to authorize the construction of the extension to Nottawasaga Bay and Bowmanville.

To incorporate the Vancouver, Fraser Valley, and Southern Railway Company.

To enable the Pueblo Light and Power Company to engage in railway building, etc.

RAILWAYS AND TELEPHONES.

Several amendments were made to Mr. Emmerson's bill to amend the railway act, the chief of which gives power to the Railway Commission to compel railways in cities, towns or villages to connect their lines for the purpose of transferring engines and cars from one railway to another. A special committee will deal with the clauses bringing telephone tolls under the supervision and control of the Railway Commission. Tributes to the late Hon. Peter White were paid by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. R. L. Borden.

CATTLE IMPORTS.

At the sitting of the Agricultural Committee Dr. Rutherford said that unless greater precautions were taken to enforce the existing regulations it might be necessary to shut out American cattle.

Mr. A. L. MacLaren asked Dr. Rutherford what was being done regarding the extermination of glanders, which had spread in certain parts of western Ontario. He also asked the Minister of Agriculture what was being done along the line of warning the farmers and others with regard to purchasing horses which frequently came into Eastern Canada and the States. Mr. MacLaren contended that it was a very serious matter when farmers bought bronchos and other horses coming from sections where glanders were and put them in with their own horses on the farms; they certainly would be more cautious if they knew of the great danger they ran by buying such horses. He recommended that the practice of allowing them to come in be either stopped altogether or that the Government should take steps to advise the public to be careful as to purchasing horses coming from a foreign country.

SANITATION A PASSION.

The Ladies in Prussian Saxony Given Fair Warning.

A despatch from Nordhausen, Prussian, Saxony, says: The Town Council of Nordhausen has issued an ordinance prohibiting women from allowing the trains of their dresses to drag in the streets, as a "measure for the protection of health and for the prevention of tainting the air with dust." The penalty for infraction of this ordinance is a fine of $7.50. The police department of Nordhausen had previously forbidden women to allow their dress trains to sweep the sidewalks of the Friedrich Wilhelm platz and the adjacent streets. The Council now extends the regulation to the entire city. The passion for sanitation sweeping over Germany is likely to result in similar ordinances being enforced by other countries.

GET READY FOR 'QUAKE.

Says Man Who Made Forecast of Blizzard in 1888.

A special to the New York Tribune from Middletown, N. Y., says:— An earthquake that will shake the foundation of all New Zealand is predicted between the 22nd and 24th of this month by Uncle Horace Johnson, the Middle Haddam weather prophet. The shocks are to be accompanied by severe lightning and high winds, according to the seer, and the electrical discharges will be so great that Mr. Johnson urges the farmers not to tether cows in the open fields on those dates. He warns everybody to make for the cellar door when the first noise comes, for the earthquake shocks are likely to be severe enough to topple over some of the church steeples and high chimneys. Uncle Horace gained considerable note by forecasting the blizzard of 1888.

HON. PETER WHITE DEAD.

Close of an Active Business and Political Life.

A Pembroke despatch says: Hon. Peter White, M.P., of Pembroke, Speaker of the House of Commons from 1891 to 1896, died at Clifton Springs, N. Y., on Thursday morning.

M. WITTE HAS RESIGNED

Goremykin Is Now the Premier of Russia.

The London Times' correspondent at St. Petersburg cables as follows :—Count Witte's resignation has been official since 10 o'clock on Wednesday morning. Delay in the announcement was due to the hope of a compromise. I am now in position to explain the motive of the Premier's departure. Count Witte insisted on immediate promulgation of the new immutable organic laws, the object of which was to leave him a free hand under the shelter of the autocracy and deprive the Duma of any initiative in matters concerning the future government of the country. The outburst of indignation consequent upon the revelation of this scheme showed the utter absurdity and danger of such an attempt to reconcile the old and new regimes, but the Emperor had no need of arguments to convince him and he declared the project unseemly, unwise and dangerous. "My wish," said he, "is that the Government be conducted in orderly fashion and that the country may have peace. These new laws would only stir up a conflict and compromise me before my people. We must wait till the Duma has begun its work and then see what changes are necessary." There is little doubt regarding the Emperor's sincere desire to abandon bureaucratic methods and invite the cordial, healthy co-operation of his subjects in the noble task of governing this great country. The logical course in such circumstances would seem to lie in the formation of a Cabinet recruited from the popular elements. There is considerable talk of such a Ministry.

THE NEW PRIME MINISTER.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says: The official announcement that Premier Witte's resignation had been accepted, coupled with the statement that former Minister of the Interior Goremykin would succeed him, was made on Wednesday. M. Goremykin's elevation to the Premiership created amazement. He is not only regarded as a reactionist, but the general opinion is that he is not equal to the task of facing the coming crisis.

AN UNRELENTING ENEMY.

M. Goremykin, the new Premier, was exposed by Witte in 1899, and since then has been the retiring Premier's unrelenting enemy. At that time the former Minister of the Interior made a report to the Emperor to the effect that the stories of famine and suffering which were said to exist in certain Provinces were untrue. Witte—then Minister of Finance—thereupon produced documents to prove that the conditions in the interior were as they had been represented. When the Emperor confronted M. Goremykin with this he is said to have fallen on his knees, to have wept and begged forgiveness. The Minister was so overcome that the Emperor himself brought him a glass of water. Later M. Goremykin took part in the Von Plehve cabal which drove Witte from the Ministry of Finance in 1903.

MAN OF INSIGNIFICANT PARTS.

M. Goremykin is reported to be a mediocre man of insignificant appearance, as well as capacity. He wears side whiskers, and looks like an English butler. While for some time past he has been called a Liberal, it was only in contrast with such men as Von Plehve and M. Sipiaguine, the late Interior Minister.

The new Premier comes from a noble but not prominent family of Novgorod Province, where his estates are situated. They are noted especially for the excellence of their cows and their dairy products, which are sent to St. Petersburg. In fact M. Goremykin practically supplies the capital with milk.

AFTER WITTE COMES DELUGE.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph again predicts that serious trouble will follow the retirement of Premier Witte. He says the autocracy is resolved to make another determined stand for existence, cost what it may, and in preparation for possible consequence eight more quick-firing guns have been sent to Moscow, bringing the total there to 32. The conviction is universal that the Douma has been invited to a Barmecide feast. Instead of a dessert there will be ructions. No conciliation is conceivable, no compromise is possible between the Crown and the nation. A conflict is certain, unavoidable, imminent. Even Count Witte could not now avert it.

The correspondent asserts that Count Witte only retained nominal power to secure the new loan. Neither France, England, Austria, nor England would have subscribed to enable Russia to wage civil war. They loaned their money for a reorganization of the empire, but the court camaralla resolved to employ it for their own interests, breaking the promise Count Witte was authorized to make. The Government of Russia, the correspondent declares, is now being carried on by secret influences, the centre of which is Gen. Trepoff, whose authority has continually gained since he quitted St. Petersburg for Tsarkoe-Selo.

Diplomatic circles are profoundly impressed by the disclosure of the Government's policy. The appointment of Goremykin as Count Witte's successor is regarded as the most fatal event since the war.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

WHAT THE LEGISLATURE AT TORONTO IS DOING.

THE "SOO" GUARANTEE.

Hon. Col. Matheson submitted a statement respecting the "Soo" guarantee. The statement was as follows :—

"In regard to the loan commonly known as the Sault Guarantee Loan for $2,000,000, falling due on the first of May, the Canadian Improvement Company, whose certificates were guaranteed by the province, found that they were unable to have the province relieved of the whole guarantee. After negotiations, it was agreed that the province should release one-half of the collateral securities, being a portion of the bonds, income bonds and stock of the Lake Superior Corporation, and the Canadian Improvement Company procured a loan for $1,050,000 without the guarantee of the province.

"As it was found that the further sum of $1,000,000 required could not be obtained without the guarantee of the province, the Government, under the authority of the Act passed during the present session, guaranteed certificates for $1,000,000, payable with interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum in six months from the 1st of May, in renewal of one-half of the former certificates, and on these the Canadian Improvement Company obtained a loan of $1,000,000, the whole of this $2,000,000 principal money, and $50,000 interest, was paid into the Morton Trust Company on the 1st of May instant.

"The Government's present liability is on renewal certificates of the Canadian Improvement Company for $1,000,000 payable with interest at 5 per cent. per annum on 1st November next at the office of the Morton Trust Company, and for this guarantee the Morton Trust Company hold as security for the province 'the pledged securities,' being all the stock and bonds of the Algoma Central and Manitoulin Railways, and the mortgage on the vessels of the company, and also one-half of the 'collateral securities' formerly held, being $1,209,000 bonds of the Lake Superior Corporation out of $10,000,000, $153,000 income bonds out of a total of $3,000,000, and $2,682,000 of the stock of the said corporations out of a total of $40,000,000.

"The Government had arranged that in case of necessity they should be able to pay in the whole $2,000,000 on 1st of May so that there should be no dishonor of the provincial guarantee. "

RECOVERING SUBSIDY LANDS.

The Legislature's ratification will be asked for the bargain between the Government and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company whereby the latter will hand over to the province 525,000 acres of its subsidy land in the Rainy River District, and be relieved of its obligation to bring in settlers. A bill with that intent, entitled. "An Act respecting the Aid Heretofore Granted to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway," was introduced by Hon. Dr. Reaume, seconded by Hon. Mr. Monteith.

TO INVITE THE KING.

Mr. McDougall moved—That this Legislature notices with pleasure that the House of Commons and the Senate of Canada have by resolution prayed that his Majesty King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra graciously extend to this portion of his Majesty's Empire the honor of a personal visit.

That we most enthusiastically endorse the action of the Canadian Parliament in this behalf, and most earnestly hope that his gracious Majesty may afford to the people of Canada the opportunity they have so long desired of offering to him personally the cordial assurances of their unswerving loyalty and deep devotion.

That we therefore express the [illegible] that his Majesty may be pleased to accept the invitation extended by the Parliament, and conveying the wish of the people of Canada.

VOTERS MUST BE CANADIANS.

The Legal Committee reported Mr. McGarry's amendments to the municipal Act, the Ontario Election Act, and the Manhood Suffrage Registration Act, by adding to the form of oath prescribed to be taken before registration the words, "That you are not a citizen or subject of any foreign country." The committee was unanimously in favor of the amendment, which is to prevent persons who have become citizens of the United States returning to this country simply for the purpose of voting.

The committee also regarded favorably Mr. MacKay's amendment to libel law to make fair newspaper reports of public meetings, and the publication of authorized Government documents privileged.

BILLS ADVANCED A STAGE.

Hon. Mr. Monteith's bill to amend the Act to prevent fraud in the manufacture of cheese and butter, and Hon. Dr. Reaume's bill respecting the recent agreement with the Grand Trunk Pacific were read a second time. Hon. Mr. Foy's measure to amend the Devolution of Estates Act, Hon. Mr. Cockrane's bill to amend the Ontario and Minnesota respecting [illegible]peny, and Mr. McKay's bill respecting the City of Peterborough, and Mr. Power Com[illegible] Act respecting actions for libel and slander, passed the committee stage. Mr. Bradburn's measure respecting the City of Peterborough, and Mr. Fraser's amendment to the Act to prevent the waste of natural gas and to provide for the plugging of abandoned wells, were read a third time.

MILITARY RAILWAY.

Permission was given the Pembroke Southern Railway Company to extend its line to Petawa, in order to connect with the new camping ground established by the Dominion Government.

TREE CULTURE.

Mr. Downey's bill to provide for the exemption of woodland lots passed the committee, though the Premier objected to some of its features.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

Mr. Monteith's Act to prevent fraud in the manufacture of butter and cheese was not opposed in any quarter, but a number of the members thought that one inspector was hardly sufficient for the duties he was required to undertake.

Stewart Anderson was fatally scalded in the factory of Stewart, Harishorn & Company, Toronto, on Saturday.

CRIPPLING SCIATICA.

A Sure and Certain Way to Cure This Terrible Torture.

There is just one sure, scientific cure for sciatica, rheumatism, lumbago, neuralgia, headaches — you must drive the pain from your blood and nerves with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Liniments never cure nerve and blood diseases. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills strike right straight at the cause because they actually make new blood. Through the blood they conquer the painful poison, soothe the nerves, loosen the muscles and banish every ache and pain. Mr. Thos. J. Etsell, Walkerton, Ont., says: "When I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I had been off work for three months. The cords of my right leg were all drawn up and I could only limp along with the aid of a stick. The pain I suffered was terrible. Only those who have been afflicted with sciatica can understand the misery I was in both day and night. I took six boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills before they helped me, but after that every day saw an improvement, and by the time I had used fifteen boxes, every vestige of the pain had disappeared. I have no hesitation in pronouncing Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the best medicine in the world for sciatica."

Every dose of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills makes rich, pure, health-giving blood. That is why they cure headaches and backaches, indigestion, kidney and liver troubles, anamia, heart palpitation, and the ills that afflict women only. But be sure you get the genuine pills with the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," on the wrapper around each box. Imitations are worthless—often dangerous. All medicine dealers sell these pills or you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TREPHINING RELIEVES BRAIN.

Man Who Was Insane for Two Years Is Finally Cured.

To use his own words the last two years have been "as a night" to Conrad Koenig, a young business man of Tamaqua, Penn.,. His experience has, it is said, been without precedent, and is awakening great interest in medical circles all over the country.

Two years ago, while Koenig was walking along the street on a blustery winter morning, he slipped and fell on the ice, striking violently on his bead. He was partially stunned, but soon recovered and thought little of the accident. A few weeks later he became morose and manifested lapses of memory. His condition rapidly became more serious, and in a short time he became a raving maniac. His family is one of the wealthiest in Tamaqua, and he was taken to various sanitariums and placeed under treatment, but all to no avail. Finally it became necessary to place him in an insane asylum.

As a last resort Dr. A. B. Fleming, a graduate of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia, was called in on the case. He carefully went over his history, learned of Koenig's fall two years ago and decided that the disorder of his brain was due to a depression of the skull.

A superficial examination tended to confirm this theory, and he decided to trephine the skull. With the assistance of other surgeons, Dr. Fleming performed the operation. With a conical trephine auger he bored a hole in the back of the head at the spot where the centre of visual and mucular memories is located. The auger is so constructed that it penetrates the skull bone and removes a circular piece of the bone, which the physicians call a button. Four of these buttons were removed, each about an inch from the other. Then Dr. Fleming chisled out the square piece of bone. He found that the inner table of the skull had been depressed about an eighth of an inch. This depression irritated the brain and finally brought about insanity.

When Koenig recovered from the effect of the ether he had inhaled he sank into a deep, peaceful sleep, and finally awoke somewhat dazed. This gradually wore off, and he took up the threads of memory where he had dropped them, almost two years ago. He asked about certain details connected with his business, and about certain matters in which he had been interested. Slowly, but surely, his mind clarified, and he asked if he had been ill. When told that he had, he inquired how long. He evinced great surprise, and said that he had no recollection whatever of what had transpired since about six weeks following the time that he fell on the pavement. He inquired as to what had occurred during the last two years, like a man would who had been on a long journey. His family is now engaged in telling from time to time what transpired in that period when he was a man without a memory.

Koenig is still confined to his room, but it is thought that it will be possible for him to be about again in a few weeks. His mental disorder is entirely cured.

It is the best because it never fails to effect a cure. A few doses relieves and cures constipation, indigestion, colic, diarrhoea and simple fevers. It breaks up colds—thus preventing croup—expels worms and brings teething without tears. Not one particle of opiate or poisonous soothing stuff is in this medicine. Mrs. Hugh B. Denton, Scotchtown, N B., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets and have always found them a satisfactory medicine." You can get the Tablets from any medicine dealer or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

46-YEAR-OLD BABY.

The death has just occurred at Westbury Workhouse, Wiltshire, England, of a forty-six-year old baby. The child was born in Westbury, and at the age of twelve months its further development both physically and mentally, arrested. Throughout its life it was baby's frock clothes, and con- and play, and had to be en care of, precisely as an

A GHOST'S JOKE.

Weird Occurrence Is Reported From Natal, South Africa.

A weird occurrence which happened recently at Pietermaritzburg, Natal, is related by F. W. FitzSimmons, of the Natal Government Museum.

"One evening a few months ago," he says, "the door of one of the rooms in my house was closed and locked in a most mysterious manner. This door had never before been locked, as there never was any occasion to do so, and the key was always in the outside of the door lock.

"On examining it I found the key had been removed and inserted into the other side of the lock, the door was locked and the key still remained in the lock. Suspecting a practical joke, I went round to the window, but found it shut and barred.

"I called witnesses to examine and see for themselves, but they could offer no explanation other than that if it was done by human agency the person who did it must of necessity be inside the room.

"We agreed to break the window, which I did, and inserting my arm, unfastened the catch and entered, fully expecting to find someone inside, but no one was there, and no one could possibly have slipped out unawares, for there were guards at the window.

"The following evening at a seance held in the same house, we were informed that a spirit was present, who desired to write a message. I signified my willingness, and the medium's hand automatically wrote with lightning rapidity the following.

"'I see you are sorely puzzled to account for what occurred last evening. I hope you will forgive me, for it was I who did it.

"'Don't you remember how I used to declare before I passed over that I would return, and if at all possible, I would give you some convincing test? You know how keen I was on psychical phenomena and tests when I was with you, etc. (Signed) Frederick Brown.'

"Mr. Brown," adds Mr. FitzSimmons, "was an intimate friend of mine, who for a couple of years had been one of my colleagues in the practical investigation of the proofs of spirit return and spirit identity. He died about six months before the above occurrence."

WOMEN WHO SUFFER SHOULD READ THIS

SHE WAS CURED OF FEMALE TROUBLES BY DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

They Made a New Woman of Her and She Blesses the Day She First Heard of Them.

Newmarket, Ont., May 7.—(Special).—The case reported below is another of the many thousands of instances of Dodd's Kidney Pills coming to the rescue of weak, suffering women. Mrs. M. Doner, of this place, says:—

"For more than three years I suffered from weakness and female trouble brought on through my kidneys failing to act properly. I was bothered with a pain in the small of my back, headaches, dizzy spells, heart flutterings, depression, loss of sleep, poor appetite and a terrible dragging sensation as if a weight was fastened round my loins. I tried doctors and took all kinds of medicines, but nothing seemed to do me any good. Then a neighbor told me of Dodd's Kidney Pills and advised me to try them. I did so and after taking six boxes I am entirely cured."

BLINDED BY WAVING TREES.

Hundreds Employed in English Factory Have Odd Grievance.

Two hundred and thirty people, employed at a lace factory at Long Eaton, near Nottingham, England, have a remarkable grievance.

Opposite to the factory is a cemetery, in which there are several ornamental trees, and the workpeople complain that they are losing their eyesight owing to the "blinking" light caused when the branches of the trees wave in the wind. One old man declares that he is nearly blind, and it is impossible for him to see to do his work on a windy day.

The grievance is not a new one. In 1898 it was raised, and a poll of the ratepayers was taken on the question whether the trees should be cut down. The vote was in favor of the trees being allowed to remain.

Two years ago the subject was revived, but nothing was done to remedy the grievance, and now the Urban District Council has again been approached with the view of having the trees felled. [illegible] councillors say that if blinds [illegible] to the factory the waving of the trees would be harmless to the workpeople.

TRAINING FOR DUELS.

Frenchmen Practice on Each Other With Hollow Bullets.

Parisians have been enabled by the invention of a hollow bullet to "train" for duels under the realistic condition of shooting at and being shot by, a living instead of practicing at an inanimate target, which does not fire back.

Dr. Deirliers is the inventor, and he has opened a club called, "La Societe l'Assaut an Pistolet." Forty of the best "shots" in Paris fired in pairs at one another one morning last week in the Jardin de Paris.

Of 272 shots fired, 202 hits were recorded. Commandant Ferrus and Mr. Winans each made full scores, and in the final round shot each other over the heart. While all wore goggles and some padded blouses and gloves, Mr. Winans shot in his buttoned frock coat. The bullet is harmless, and can be used several times, but the blow on the ball of the thumb of one of the contestants required surgical treatment.

The training is of unique value for a real duel. Men who never missed a "dead" target were quite disconcerted by the raising of their opponent's arm to fire.

.... AN AMUSING STORY.

How a Bishop Took Advantage of King's Promise.

Winchester Cathedral, which, according to an official statement, is in peril of becoming a ruin, was the scene of a serious collapse quite early in its history. On October 7, 1107, the centre tower fell, and the monkish chroniclers attributed the collapse to the fact that the ungodly William Rufus was interred in the cathedral. William of Malmesbury, however, reluctantly confessed that it would probably have fallen in any case, "through imperfect construction." An amusing story is told about the building of the structure, twenty years previously, on the site of the Saxon Cathedral. The King granted the Bishop as much wood from the Forest of Hempage as he could cut in four days and nights. The Bishop gathered together a small army of men and cut down the whole forest!

The Kinks and Twists in Rheumatics Rugged Road. — For 4 years the wife of a well-known Toronto physician was on crutches from Rheumatism Scourge, and not until she began using South American Rheumatic Cure could she get a minute's permanent relief from pain. Four bottles cured her. Write for confirmation if you're sceptical.—154

Not one of you is too deep down in the mire of disease but the story of such a potent remedy as South American Nervine can reach you and lift you back to good health, It's nature's trusted lieutenant, gentle, but firm and unflinching. It never fails. —156

Do Not Delay. — When, through debilitated digestive organs, poison finds its way into the blood, the prime consideration is to get the poison out as rapidly and as thoroughly as posible. Delay may mean disaster. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will be found a most valuable and effective medicine to assail the intruder with. They never fail. They go at once to the seat of the trouble and work a permanent cure.

HOW PRIESTS LIVE IN SIBERIA.

The best paid clergy in Siberia get about $600 a year, while the poorer clergy have often to beg for their bread. They have much to do. There is always a service between four and five in the morning. There are two other services in the day. There must be a service on the birth of a child and at the death of anyone in the parish. All new buildings, schoolhouses, bridges, and boats must be blessed; children beginning at a school term are blessed, and in time of pestilence or peril there must be continuous prayer. All priests must fast 226 days in the year, and monastic priests are never to eat meat. A priest cannot indulge in theatre-going, drinking, card-playing, or dancing.

A Wide Sphere of Usefulness. — The consumption of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has grown to great proportions. Notwithstanding the fact that it has now been on the market for over thirty-one years, its prosperity is as great as ever, and the demand for it in that period has very greatly increased. It is beneficial in all countries, and wherever introduced fresh supplies are constantly asked for.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadiain cholera, dysentery or diarrhœa, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. MRS. HUNTER'S STORY

Says she and her Husband Agree Perfectly. Both Quite Well Again.

MRS. I. HUNTER.

Mrs. I. Hunter, of 111 Raglan Road, Kingston, Ont., has written for publication a statement of her case as follows:

"I have suffered with kidney and liver trouble and chronic constipation for some time. I was subject to dizziness, bilious headache, nervousness, drowsiness, pains in the back and side, and a tired, weary feeling nearly all the time.

"I tried almost every remedy, was treated by doctors and druggists with little or no benefit.

"Finally, a friend advised me to try Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill, and the results have been truly wonderful.

"My husband has used Anti-Pill for rheumatism and was benefited greatly. We agree that Anti-Pill is a most wonderful medicine and heartily recommend it."

This is a very strong recommendation. Anti-Pill is undoubtedly the greatest of family remedies. All druggists, or the Wilson-Fyle Co., Limited, Niagara Falls, Ont. 504

Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets

Are just

for women

and Contain just what every Sick and Run-down Woman Needs.

Do you know that distinguished physicians say that ninety per cent. of the ills of women result from your peculiar organism.

This should make clear to you the need and advantage of taking a remedy that contains uterine and female tonics.

You know, of course, that remedies made to sell to men as well as women do not contain these. They cannot.

Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women (not for men) contain them all, and you don't have to take our word for this. Chemists and physicians, whose standing makes their statements reliable, say that not one single medical ingredient of any value to women has been omitted from them.

What is the result? Simply this.

When you buy a box of these tablets you get a remedy compounded just for your special needs, and one contaning all that medical science can supply in this twentieth century to make you a healthywoman. What more could you ask?

And unless your experience should be diifferent than that of other women, you need nothing more. If you don't feel as well as you would like to, try these tablets.

They Make Healthy Women.

Train Kills Immigrant.

Kingston, Ont., May 7—The air brakes on the G. T. R. express going eastward went wrong after the train started, and a sudden halt was called. The cars crowded together and a man had his head crushed between the bumpers of the express and blind baggage. Blood on the track led to an investigation, and the horrid find was made. The man was dressed like a laborer, and a slip of paper found had the word Liverpool. It is thought he was an immigrant one who had gotten off a train which passed Saturday night and missing it took the bumpers to reach Toronto.

To the Hotel-Keepers of the License District of Dundas.

Morrisburg, Ont., April 21st. 1906.

GENTLEMEN—The present License board having now entered upon the second year of their administration of the License Law, wish to briefly review the work done during the year and to point out some places where improvement must be made during the coming year.

First, we desire to express our appreciation to the hotel-keepers for the way they have met the request of the board for a strict adherence to the License Law. We realized that this would mean a radical change from the way hotels had been previously conducted but we have reason to believe that generally, an honest effort has been made on your part to comply with our requirements, and to strictly keep the law, especially as to selling during prohibited hours. We regret that there have been a few exceptions to the rule, and that the Board's plain statement, "that those who break the License Law would not be continued in the hotel business," did not seem to influence the cases referred to, and it is now our unpleasant duty to put this declared policy into pratice and to withold licenses in these cases, and we want to impress on every license holder in this district that "if you want to continue in the hotel business, you must strictly observe and keep the License Law."

Now we heartily commend you for the marked improvement which has been made during the year in the observance of the law, and the geneal improvement of your hotels. We wish to point out to you a few places where improvement must be made during the coming year. First, regarding the selling to minors. We are aware that occasionally it is difficult to decide, but as you are all permanent residents and well acquainted in the localities where you are situated, we believe with a little care and an honest effort to keep this part of the law, you will be successful Second, allowing persons to become drunk on your premises and giving them more liquor while in that condition, and also selling to habitual drunkards, is contrary to the License Lawand must be carefully avoided. We would also ask the co-operation and help of hotel-keepers in detecting the parties who buy liquor by the bottle, or in other ways, for those to whom sale has been forbidden as provided in the act. A heavy penalty is provided in the law for persons who so furnish liquor, and the infliction of the full penalty will be asked in every case.

In conclusion, we wish to point out that everything we have asked or suggested is very much in your own interest, as breeches of the law such as we have directed your attention to, will bring the trade into disrepute, and create a strong public sentiment against it.

Hoping for a strict compliance with the law and regulations on your part, and another year of progress and improvement, we remain,

Yours respectiully,
CHARLES PATTON,
THOMAS COLQUHOUN,
M. BAILEY,
Commissioners.

Deceased, who was a native of Belfast, Ireland, ranked high as a musician. HON. PETER WHITE DEAD.

Close of an Active Business and Political Life.

Pembroke, May 3—Hon Peter White, M. P., of Pembroke, died at Clifton Springs, N. Y., this morning.

Hon. Peter White was born on Augugst 30, 1838, in Pembroke, Ont., the town which his father founded in 1828. He was educated in the public schools and received his business education in Ottawa. He entered the lumber business in partnership with his brother, and with head offices in Pembroke he soon began to take an active part in municipal affairs, occupying the position of reeve for some years, during which time he actively supported the construction of the Kingston & Pembroke railway. He was first elected M. P. for North Renfrew in 1874, was unseated on petition and defeated at the bye-election which followed. He, however, captured the seat in 1876, and was for years one of Sir John McDonald's "old guard." He separated from the Conservatives on the Manitoba school question, being opposed to coercion, and at the elections of 1896 was defeated by Mr. Mackie, Liberal. A similar fate befell him in 1900, but in 1904 he was again successful, holding the seat until his death. He was speaker of the House of Commons from 1891 to 1896. He was connected with several important industrial and financial undertakings. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church and was married in 1877 to Miss Thompson of Nepean.

No Satisfaction in Eating.

Food does you no good. You cant digest, consequently you're afraid to eat; tongue is coated, mouth tastes bad, stomach is bloated. Pretty soon you'll be overcome by weakness and nervous prostration.

Best prescription for your condition is Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut, For dyspepsia and indigestion it is doubtful if a better remedy will ever be devised. These pills bring new strength and vitality to the stomach and digestive organs; they build up the general health and instil such vim and resisting power into the system that sickness is impossible; try Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Improper Postcards.

Ottawa, May 8—The Post office Department announces that not only indecent but grossly vulgar and suggestive pictorial post cards are to be regarded as non-transmissable through the mails. Vulgar and suggestive post cards are to be forwarded to the nearest branch dead letter office, but indecent post cards posted in Canada are to be forwarded to the post office inspector for the district, with information as to the name of the sender, if such is known to the post office. It may be added that the criminal authorities in the several provinces have given the post-office department assurances that steps will be taken to prevent the manufacture and sale of such cards, and this department will co operate by preventing as far as possible their transmission through the mails.

Pioneer Will Drop Out.

Sandwich, Ont., May 7—Henry Chappell, the veteran horseman, now 83 years of age, contemplates selling his horses and retiring. He has taken an active interest in racing for nearly seventy years. For fifteen years, or until too heavy to ride, he was a jockey, since then, horse owner and racer. Mr. Chappell brought the first thoroughbred into Canada in 1838. Last year was the first year for many years that he did not enter in the King's Plate.

Mr. Gravelle's Clever Work at Eganville.

Mr. A. Gravelle, proprietor of the Renfrew Journal, whose fame as a safe opener has spread throughout the Dominion, went to Eganville to open a safe, the door of which had remained closed for ten years. The executors of the Henry George estate summoned Mr. Gravelle to open the safe, which had been in Mr. Casey's possession for the period named. The Renfrew expert did not experience much difficulty in the work, although the fact that the locks had not moved for a long time rendered the task slower than otherwise it would have been.

A Narrow Escape.

Dr. Malloch had a narrow escape from instant death on Thursday night last. He was driving home from Inkerman and had reached the C. P. R. crossing at Suffell's when the midnight express came along. He stopped his horse some feet from the track but the powerful headlight of the oncoming train frightened the animal and it jumped into the ditch, throwing the doctor out of the buggy. Being free now the horse started to cross the track when it was struck by the engine, literally stripped of the harness and hurled into a field near by, where it was found dead. The buggy was also damaged but the doctor escaped injury—Press.

Horse Show Finances.

The total receipts from the horse show which concluded on Saturday in Toronto were $16,400, a falling of $1,400 from last year. The general gate receipts were the cause of the decrease. The total expenses were $14,500. Gate receipts and the proceeds of the sale of boxes amounted to $9,000; entry fees total amounted to $2,500, subscriptions reached $1,750; the Canada Horse Breeder's Association grant was $1,750, the city grant was $750 and other subscriptions $200. The receipts last year constituted a record and with that exception those of the present year are larger than ever before. Whilst the financial end of the show is not quite as satisfactory as in 1905 it is generally conceded that the quality of the exhibits was better than ever before.

Died in Cleveland.

The following is taken from The East Cleveland Signal of the 26th April 1906:—

"Again has death entered our midst and taken away one of our long time residents. Hugh Graham, who died at Lakeside Hospital, Saturday morning, April 21 was a well known resident of East Cleveland for nearly forty years. During this time he lived in the same house, No. 4044 Euclid Avenue, and conducted a blacksmithing business.

Mr. Graham was born at Oxford, Ont., May 16, 1843. the son of Archie Janet Graham. Losing his father when he was nine years old, he left home at the age of 16 to learn the trade he followed the remainder of his life. In 1867 he married Miss Jane M. Jayred. There children are a son, F. A. Graham and four daughters, Mrs. E. L. Abbey, Miss Jessie E. Graham, Mrs. Clement Homes, of East Cleveland, and Mrs, C. W. Eddy Cleveland. Mr. Graham has been suffering for months from a very painful disease which it was hoped would be relieved by an operation.

His warm hearted, affectionate nature makes his loss very deeply felt by his family, while his old friends and business acquaintances will Miss "Hugh" now that his work is done and his familiar shop it closed.

The funeral services were held at the family home Monday, April 23rd. The burial was in the East Cleveland cemetery"

The deceased was a brother of the late James Graham of this place, and Mrs. T. Stephenson, who now resides at Morewood.

What Will Chesterville Do?

The Alexandria Lacrosse club has reorganized for the season of 1906 with the following officers:—President, T. J. Gormley; vice-president, Will J. Simpson; secretary, Dr. J. T. Hope; treasurer E. B. Ostrom; committee, D. A. MacDonald, W. J. Dawson Donald McPhee, Paul Daprato, J. O. Simpson, T. W. Munro and Frank Murray.

There is a strong feeling in this section that a junior league could be formed in Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry. Alexandria, Maxville, Lancaster, Williamstown, Mille Roches; Aultsville, Morrisburg, Iroquois, Winchester, Chesterville, Finch and the Cornwall Juniors could be formed in two series one along the G. T. R. and one along the C.P.R. There are several players in each of the above mentioned towns and Cornwall of course, has scores of young players. If some public spirited citizen offered a trophy a league on the above lines might be brought into existence.

Card of Thanks.

FOR the friendship and sympathy shown by the members of Chesterville Branch C. M. B. A. No. 309, to my bereaved wife, I take this means of returning my thanks.

PATRICK KIRBY.

FARMER'S DEA... WAS SUSPICIOUS.

Was Henry Allen of Escott Poisioned—Wife is Suspected.

The village of Lansdowne, a few stations west of Brockville, on the Grand Trunk railway, is in a ferment state of excitement over what appears on the surface to be a murder sensation. There has been a current rumor for some time that the late Henry Allen, a comparatively young farmer, residing about a quarter of a mile from Lansdowne, who died about five months ago, came to death by foul play and on Sunday it reached a climax. Information was sworn to against Mrs. Allen, wife of the deceased to the effect that the complainant had just cause and reason to suspect that within the period of five months Mr. Allen had come to his death by poision unlawfully administered by his wife. There was also information sworn against William O'Connor, implicating him in a similar manner.

Constable Plunkett, of Rockport, arrested O'Connor, and brought him to Lansdowne, Later on Mrs, Allen was taken into custody and there being no lockup in the village, both prisoners were kept at the Stewart house under the eye of the constables.

Iroquois Man Hurt.

Frank R. Bullis, marble dealer, Iroquois, was badly hurt in a runaway accident at Kemptville a week ago. The horse he was driving frightened by a passing train and when it bolted fell on its side. The shock threw Mr. Bullis over the dashboard and his legs caught in the wheels, so that when the horse regained its feet and dashed away he was dragged until the buggy was demolished against a tree. When found he was unconscious, but is recovering.

Oddfellows Attend Service.

The Oddfellows Lodge of Morewood, No. 282, celebrated the eighty-seventh anniversary of the foundation of their order by attending service of praise in the Presbyterian church, Morewood, on Sunday afternoon last. Quite a number of visiting brethren were present, and together with the members of the lodge, there was a good representation of Oddfellowship. They assembled at the school-house and marched to the church, and after service returned to the starting point. The church was crowded, seats being placed in the aisles. The sermon delivered by Rev. Bro. Stewart was an eloquent and appropriate one, and to which the utmost attention was given by his bearers.

Annual Meeting of Sunday School.

Hoy—Baker.

A very quiet home wedding took place at the home of Mrs. E. Baker on Wednesday morning, May 2nd, at 10 a.m., when Mrs. E. Baker and Dr. A. Hoy were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by the Rev. T. E. Burke. The bride and groom were unattended and the ceremony was performed in the presence of the immediate friends, after which all sat down to a sumptous repast and then the happy couple took the noon train for Toronto, Niagara and other western points. On their return they will take up their sojourn in Mountain. Both bride and groom have been life-long residents of this vicinity and are well and favorably known throughout the community and a large host of friends join in wishing them a long and prosperous journey through life.

Fire at Vars.

John Dashney, who lives two miles north of Vars, had his buildings and entire stock of cattle, horses. machinery etc., destroyed by fire on Saturday night.

The loss is about $4000. Next day the remains of what was supposed to be a man, were found. It is thought a tramp set fire to the building and was destroyed in the fire—Russell Leader.

I am prepared to make Custom Suits for $4.00. Fit and Workmanship guaranteed.

W. J. NASH, MERCHANT TAILOR, Chesterville.

By-Law Defeated.

The by-law submitted to the ratepayers of Brockville by the town council, to raise $14.000 for the purpose of rebuilding the Brockville opera house was defeated by a majority of 460, the vote standing 172 for and 633 against. The question has been an absorbing one for many days, and bitter opposition was manifested against it on the part of the small property owners, who claim that Brockville is already overtaxed. In the event of the adoption of the by-law the counil had an offer of rental at $1,000 per year from A. J. Small, Toronto for a period of 20 years.

Dr. Lane vs. Strader Estate.

Judge O'Reilly, who was appointed arbitrator by consent of all parties in the case of Dr. I. J. Lane against the estate of the late Eli strader, has made his award.

The Dr. sued the estate for the sum of $1,300, for medical services, and was paid $200 on account by Geo. F. Bradfield the administrator of the estate.

The doctor has to pay his lawyer and the cost of all witnesses called by him. All other costs in the matter are to be paid by the estate.

G. I. Gogo was solicitor for Dr. Lane I Hilliard for the heirs, and Geo. F. Bradfield administrator for the estate.—Herald.
