Vol. XIII, No 12 MORRISBURG, ONT., THURSDAY, MARCH 20, 1913.

Local and General

Whitteker, the Optician, will be at Wales, March 19th ; Aultsville, March 20th ; Morrisburg, March 26th to April 5th.

School closed to-day for the Easter holidays.

Mr W. C. Coir has purchased the handsome residence of Mrs Watson on Division street.

Mr P. B. Fetterly, of London, Ont., spent Saturday in town with his brothers, W. H. and John R.

Get your lamps ready for April 1st, as the light and power will be shut off on that date for three weeks. See adv.

Mr. Lev Southworth, of the St. Lawrence Hall, went to Brockville to-day to attend the funeral of the late James H. Gilmour.

Messrs G. W. Bogart and Percy Allison, of Chesterville, and Enos Allison, of Dunbar, were visitors to town on Monday.

Mr C. F. Bailey, Assistant Deputy Minister of Agriculture, paid a brief visit to the Morrisburg Branch of his department, on Tuesday.

Dennis M. Looby, chief of the Ogdensburg fire brigade, has been asked to resign. He is charged with insubordination and ignoring the common council in refusing to attend meetings.

"Everybody Loves a Chicken," "When That Midnight Choo Choo Leaves for Alabam," and all the latest and best songs are to be heard at the "Emerald Minstrel" performance, Easter Monday night.

There will be special music for Easter Sunday in the Methodist church, both morning and evening. The cantata "Resurrection Hope." Splendidly descripture of the Easter event will be given in the evening.

Rev. Dr. Sparling, pastor of Wall Street Church, Brockville, has been invited to the Carleton Place Methodist Church, to succeed Rev. Mr Wilkinson, whose term expires this year. The change, of course, is subject to the approval of the stationing committee of the Conference.

Through our extreme rush of last week The Leader neglected to make mention of the most delightful solo rendered in the Methodist church on Sunday evening, March 9th, by Mrs Barker, of Montreal, a grand-daughter of Mrs Kellogg's, and niece of Mrs Adam Moore. Mrs Barker has a wonderfully sweet and well trained voice, and it was a great pleasure to the large audience present.

During the storm of Saturday, the bridge across the Racket river at Norfolk, N.Y., connecting the Remington-Martin Co. with the opposite bank, was blown into the water. The bridge was a wooden structure of three spans, built about five feet above the level of the river, and used by employees and those who had business at the mills. A number of trees were blown down and several chimneys blown off house tops.

We would advise all the heads of households to immediately "go broke," as the local headgear artists have just returned from the spring millinery openings at Toronto. If you're not broke now, you will surely be "badly bent" if you have a large family of daughters who are vain enough to insist upon a $25 Easter bonnet.—Prescott Journal. The Leader man is of opinion that "Uncle Dudley" of the Journal would willingly spend twice $25 if he had the daughters.

The Island Belle, one of the best known craft plying the St. Lawrence between Cape Vincent and Ogdensburg, sank at her dock at Alexandria Bay Monday morning at 6 o'clock. Planks being broken in by pressure of ice during the heavy storm of last Saturday is believed to have been the cause. The boat is lying on a rock in 35 feet of water, but should the ropes now holding her give way there is danger of her sliding into ninety feet. The boat has been one of the first out in the spring and last in the fall. Arrangements are now being made to raise her. The Island Belle ran daily between Alexandria Bay and Ogdensburg, and was owned by Holmes Brothers.

Music Hall, Easter Monday, the big show, "The Emerald Minstrels."

Messrs. Heiney and Bell announce a dance on Friday night, March 28th, in Union Hall.

Two roomers wanted—school girls preferred—near Collegiate Institute. Apply at this office.

There was a big wind storm, accompanied by heavy thunder and vivid lightning on Saturday afternoon last

Mrs Wm. J. Cheney and Miss Florence Campbell were sworn in last week as members of the Ottawa police force, by Chief Ross.

Friends in Cornwall have been advised of the death at Skerohegan, Maine, of Mr John Donegan, a former resident of Cornwall.

"Here's an article in this magazine entitled 'How to Meet Trouble,'" said Mrs Wedderly. "Shall I read it to you?" "No, thank you," replied his wife's husband. "How to dodge trouble is the brand of information I'm looking for."

If you are in need of a spring tonic you will find it at the Music Hall, Easter Monday, March 24th. The performance by the Emerald Minstrels' fifty people will set you up, give you a rosy outlook on the future and forget your imaginary woes.

James Vanoss, aged 19, of Kingston, was accidentally shot while out with a party of boys in the bush. The boys were sitting around a fire, when one of the number accidentally touched the trigger of a rifle and it went off, the charge going into Vanoss' body. He is in the Hotel Dieu. Doctors fear he will not live.

A meeting of the Morrisburg fire brigade took place on Tuesday, March 18th, in the Town Hall for the organization of a fire company, a large number being present. Mr. Martin Cassel was elected fire chief, to be assisted by Mr. Henry Clarke, Mr Chas. Holmes and Mr. Geo. Borrett as captains. The meeting was adjourned to meet on Tuesday night, March 25th, for further particulars.

Mr J. G. Kilt, president of the Morrisburg and Ottawa Electric Railway Co., accompanied by Mr Biggars and their solicitor, Mr Kelly, met a joint delegation of the Brockville town council and board of trade, in Brockville, Tuesday afternoon, and laid before them a proposition to extend the road to Brockville and make it a terminal if suitable running rights over their streets were given. They were most kindly received, and now Brockville is looking forward to an electric road.

Captain A. J. McDonald, and old resident of Cornwall township, died at his home Tuesday, at the advanced age of eighty-nine years. The deceased was born in the county of Glengarry, in 1824. At the age of eighteen years he joined the American army and was all through the Civil War. The late Captain McDonald is survived by three daughters and three sons—Mrs Archibald Fraser, Miss E. Moran McDonald, B.A., Miss Mollie McDonald, Messrs William, John and Edward J. McDonald.

Mr A. E. Fetterly, of Aultsville, License Inspector for Stormont, had charges laid against four residents of the township of Roxborough for being intoxicated in a local option district, and when the cases were called before Police Magistrate Danis, of Cornwall, only three of the parties put in an appearance. In one instance the charge dismissed, two of the parties were fined $20 and costs each, or $29 98 in all, while the fourth party did not present himself, and a warrant was issued for his arrest.

Mr. James Herbert Gilmour, one of Brockville's leading citizens, and a senior member of one of Eastern Ontario's oldest wholesale houses, died Tuesday morning after an illness of several weeks of arterial schlerosis. Deceased was born there fifty-eight years ago, the day of his death. He was associated with many public enterprises. Under the Laurier Government he was a member of the Conciliation Board of the Intercolonial Railway for the settlement of labor disputes. His wife, who was a daughter of the late James Rogers of Toronto, died in 1903. Three children, Dr. Clifford R. and James K., of Winnipeg, and Mrs. F. E. Clayes of Brockville, survive ; also three brothers, Thomas, Toronto ; W. A. and Albert, Brockville, and two sisters, Mrs. W. T. McCullough, Kelowna, B.C., and Mrs. R. F. Angus, Regina.

The W. C. T. U. will hold its regular meeting on Tuesday, March 25th, in the Bush Block.

Principal Jamieson is in Toronto this week attending the A.O.U.W. Grand Lodge meeting.

Fifty people in the "Emerald Minstrels." All the numbers are good. Secure your seats at Chalmer's.

Secure your seats for "The Emerald Minstrels" performance in the Music Hall, Easter Monday, March 24th.

A very pleasant evening was spent at the Methodist parsonage on Monday evening last, when the Sunday School classes of Rev. Mr. Strike, Mrs. Strike and Fred Broder, met for a social evening. Games of all kinds were indulged in and refreshments were served. The young people declare Mr. and Mrs. Strike are adepts at entertaining

Brockville Recorder:—Sunday morning at 6.45 a telephone message from Morrisburg to the police station here stated that six tramps had been caught red handed robbing a car of merchandise at that point. The conductor stated he had locked the "hoboes" in the car and requested that officers meet the train upon arrival here. Constables Storey and Ferguson did as requested, but when the door was unlocked here the six tramps are missing. It is thought that confederates released them before the train got under fair headway at Morrisburg. A quantity of canned goods and some liquor was missing.

Mr J. Alford, of Chesterville, last week disposed of his farm of 150 acres to Empey Bros., of Montreal, who are establishing a stock farm. He held an auction sale of his stock and implements which brought excellent prices. Some 44 head of cattle brought, only eight of which were mature, brought $3.492, or an average of $79.27 This is a remarkable price for two year olds and yearlings, which goes to show that it pays to keep good stock. One pure bred Holstein cow brought $360, and her three year-old brought $260, and a yearling from the same cow, $185. His horses also brought good prices, being of the Percheron breed.

The Late Mrs. A. C. Smith.

Citizens of Morrisburg were surprised to learn on Tuesday of the serious illness of Mrs. A. C. Smith, and were shocked to learn this morning that at an early hour she had crossed the great divide. It was not generally known that she was in failing health, but since last June she had been a sufferer more or less with diabetes, it becoming quite acute in September. However, she was not confined to bed until Monday evening last, when she was taken seriously ill and gradually grew worse, lapsing into unconsciousness, peacefully answering the call of her Master at 2 a.m. this morning.

The late Mrs. Smith was the eldest daughter of the late A. E. Weegar, and was in her 55th year, having been born in Williamsburg in 1658. When in her girlhood, the family moved to Morrisburg, where they continued to live. Some thirty years ago she was united in marriage to Mr Allan C. Smith, commercial master in the M. C. I. from 1883 to 1895. To this union there were born five children, three of whom survive. They are:—Misses Pearl, Minnie (who is a valued teacher on the Public School staff, as well as an accomplished musician—being organist in the Methodist church), and Miss Frances. Besides the three daughters, there remain to mourn her loss her aged mother, who has been residing with her, one brother, Lyle, of Watertown, N.Y., and Mrs. Fred VanAllen, of town.

Deceased was a most loveable Christian woman, and much devoted to her family. She was a member of the Methodist church.

The funeral, which will be private, will take place from the family residence at 2 p. m. to-morrow (Friday) to Fairview cemetery.

Among those from out of town who are here to attend the funeral, are Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Smith, of Montreal, and Mr. Lyle Weegar, of Watertown, N.Y.

SUCCESSFUL CONVENTION

St. Lawrence Counties Press Association Met Here on Monday Last—Tendered Banquet by Mr. J. Wesley Allison at the St. Lawrence Hall.

As previously announced the St. Lawrence River Counties Press Association met in convention in the Agricultural office on Monday afternoon last. This association embodies all the printing houses in the front counties from Kingston to the Quebec line, and there was a pretty good representation present, including :—

Kingston—J. G. Elliott, of the Whig; Mr. Martin, of the Standard, and F. L. Newman, of the Jackson Press.

Gananoque—B. O. Britton, of the Reporter, and J. A. Thompson, of the Journal.

Brockville—A. T. Wilgress, of the Times ; W. J. Moore and M. C. Franklin of the Recorder.

Prescott—Geo. Mason, of The Journal.

Iroquois—R. S. Pelton, of the St. Lawrence News.

Cornwall—C. W. Young, of the Freeholder.

Morrisburg—C. A. Styles, Will Styles and L. E. Murphy.

Letters of regret at being unable to be present were read from Mr Gibbens, of the Cornwall Standard, and Mr. Lacey, of the Winchester Press, both of whom expressed their approval of the association by becoming members.

The convention assembled immediately after the arrival of the train from the west, and was in continuous session until 7.30 p. m., with President A. T. Wilgress in the chair. W. J. Moore, of the Recorder, is secretary, and had his work well in hand. After the reading of the minutes of the meeting held in Brockville on November last, Mr. Geo. Mason of the Prescott Journal, gave a talk on the printing business in that town, in which he stated that matters were harmonious between the two offices there.

The chief business seemed to centre on discussion of a standard of cost list of job work which the association will shortly adopt. This occupied their attention until 7.30, when an adjournment was made to the St. Lawrence Hall to enjoy the hospitality of Mr. J. Wesley Allison at a banquet given at that popular hostelry in Mine Host Southworth's best style. The splendid reputation that Mrs. Southworth has gained for satisfying the inner man will lose nothing by this representative gathering Monday night. The general verdict was that there is a distinctiveness about the cooking at this home-like hotel that was not obtainable elsewhere, every item on the bill of fare which follows, being extremely relishable

MENU
Grape Fruit
Celery Olives Gherkins
Cream of Oyster Soup
Halibut with Hollandaise Sauce
Potato Croquettes
Fillet of Beef Larded with Mushrooms
Roast Turkey, Stuffed Cranberry Sauce
French Peas Mashed Potatoes
Tomato and Lettuce Salad
Deep Apple Pie with Cream
Ice Cream
Cheese Crackers Coffee

The table arrangement was artistic, at every plate there being a nice bouquet of shamrocks, while there were numerous bouquets of hyacinths which gave out a fragrance that added much to the pleasure of the members of the Fourth Estate and their guests, four members of the village council, Reeve Gibson, and Councillors Meikle, Flynn and Dain. Mr. Coir, the other member of the council, was unable to be present.

After the journalists had heartily partaken of the good things provided, Mr. Wilgress, president of the association, heartily thanked Mr Allison for his hospitality to which the latter most fittingly replied, incidentally remarking that it would be a pleasure for him to entertain them at any future time they saw fit to meet in Morrisburg.

Mr. C. W. Young, Cornwall Freeholder, ex-president of the Canadian Press Association, spoke briefly, as also did Mr. Elliott, of the Kingston Whig, and Mr. Murphy, of the Leader. It now becoming time for the western members to take their train, the banquet was brought to a close by the singing of "He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and three cheers and a tiger for Mr. Allison.

The next meeting of this body will be held in Gananoque in July, and the members of the association may look forward to a good and profitable time, as Messrs. Britton and Thompson have already had the assurance of their village council to banquet the visiting brethren.

Lord's Day Alliance

Rev. W. G. Hanna, of the Lord's Day Alliance, spent Sunday in town and addressed the congregations at the Presbyterian church in the morning, and in the Methodist church in the evening Mr. Hanna is a forceful speaker and has the question of the observance of the Lord's Day well in hand. He divided his discourse into three points—the aim of the Lord's Day Alliance; its work; the method of its work. He stated that

(1) The aim of the Lord's Day Alliance is to secure a weekly rest day for all the people of Canada—the Lord's Day if possible.

(2) Its work. It carries on an educational campaign to obtain recognition for the Lord's Day law, and its enforcement in all parts of Canada. It works to cultivate and establish a strong public sentiment in favor of the law. It strives to bring about a condition in which violators of the law will wish to obey it. To see the law is recognized and enforced in some fair degree in every Province of the Dominion.

Six years ago 150,000 men in Canada were seven-day-in-the-week toilers. Today 125,000 have a legal right to a weekly rest day, most of them on the Lord's Day. Then 150,000 American Sunday newspapers were sold and distributed on Sunday in Canada. Today this circulation is reduced by about ninety five per cent. In this period thousands of cases of law violation have been brought to cease through the activity of the Lord's Day Alliance Notwithstanding this measure of success there is urgent need for vigorous prosecution of the work because of the large number of immigrants coming to Canada from lands where lower ideas regarding the Sabbath obtain than in this country because of the growth of transportation, manufacture and trade, encroaching on the Sabbath, and development of love for pleasuring on that day.

(3) The method of the Lord's Day Alliance is to educate and dissuade by remonstrance and persuasion. Only when patient and conciliatory methods fully tried, fail, does it recommend that cases of law violation be dealt with by the crown authorities.

Italians Want Public School

(Canadian Press Ltd)

Sault Ste. Marie, March 18.—A large deputation representing several hundred Italian families appealed to the city council last night to build a public school in ward 90. They said they objected to separate schools because there was too much time spent there in teaching religion for they wanted their sons not to follow their fathers with pick and shovel but to take positions in banks and commercial houses which they can never do if educated at separate schools where more time is given to Catechism than English and arithmetic. The members of the deputation assured the council that they would pay taxes to public school support however otherwise influenced.

Senate Passes Long Sault Bill

Albany, March 18.—After a spirited debate the Wagner bill designed to repeal the charter of the Long Sault Development Company passed the Senate today by a vote of 32 to 11. With the exception of Senators Emerson and Heacock, who voted for the repeal, the bill was passed by a party vote. In opposing the measure Minority Leader Brown and Senator Sage declared the bill, if enacted into law, would violate the faith and credit of the state. "They also asked that if the Long Sault charter were repealed, the Democratic majority should, man like, go ahead and repeal every other grant given by the state in perpetuity to any corporation or municipality.

The recall of the charter was recommended by Governor Sulzer in a special message to the Legislature early in the session.

Morrisburg Sanitarium

Plain or electric facial massage for ladies, from 10 a. m. to 12 m. and from 2 p. m. to 4 p. m., at the Sanitarium. Super-heated air for rheumatism, sciatica etc., given daily. 8tf

ASSASSINATED

King George I. of Greece Shot Through the Heart by a Greek While Walking in the Streets of Salonika

(Canadian Press Despatches)

Salonika March 18th—King George of Greece was assassinated while walking in the streets of Salonika, this afternoon. The assassin was a Greek of low mental type, who gave his name as Aleko Schinas He shot the King through the heart.

The king was accompanied only by an aide-de-camp, Lieut.-Col. Francoudis. The assassin came suddenly at him and fired one shot from a seven chamber revolver The tragedy caused intense excitement. Schinas was seized immediately and overpowered.

The wounded King was lifted into a carriage and taken to Papafion Hospital He was still breathing, but died within half an hour.

King George I. was the favorite brother of Queen Alexander, and was in his 68th year. He had been residing in Salonika since Nov. 12th. His long stay in that city was in order to show Greece's title to permanent possession in that city. The dead king was immensely wealthy, most of his property, amounting to some twenty millions of dollars, was in Denmark.

Crown Prince Constantine will succeed to the throne.

OUR LETTER FROM TORONTO

INTERESTING BITS OF GOSSIP FROM THE QUEEN CITY.

Dr. C. C. James Speaks of the High Cost of Living—Dr. Freidman's Cure—Toronto Suffragettes—Exhibition Association

City people, not infrequently, are heard to declare that farmers are getting rich, that the present high cost of living must be resulting in a situation in which the farming community as a whole is simply rolling in wealth. This view was punctured by Dr. C. C. James, former Deputy Minister of Agriculture for the Province of Ontario and now Advisory Expert for the Dominion Department of Agriculture, in his address to the Canadian Club.

"I want to tell you," he said emphatically, "that the farmer is not getting too much." In illustration he quoted the fact that a bag of potatoes which costs 90c., $1.00 or $1.25 in Toronto, yields to the farmer who grows them, probably in Carleton County, New Brunswick, not more than 30c., and the milk which sells in Toronto for 10c. a quart yields the farmer probably only 4 1-2c. a quart.

"The farmer who gets 4 1-2c. a quart is not getting too much," he said, "but the city man who pays 10c. a quart is paying too much." Mr. James maintained that the system of distribution was all wrong, though, he said, there was no use calling the middle man hard names, because he was simply working under conditions as they exist and earning an honest living.

Mr. James was discussing the cost of living, and it was an attentive group of 250 city men he was addressing. They were vitally interested, because, as Mr. James pointed out, the present conditions have reached such a pass that for the classes of the community on fixed salaries, and this means the great body of teachers, clergymen, clerks and all other forms of unorganized workers, relief must come soon.

The West is Not Helping.

Mr. James made a comment that was surprising to many of his audience in connection with the opening up of Western Canada. He demonstrated that as far as the cost of living in this country is concerned, the new population in the West is doing nothing to ameliorate conditions. While they are producers in one sense of the word, the stuff they are producing—wheat, oats, flax—is practically all for export, so that as a matter of fact the increased population is simply adding to the consuming population of the country. On the other hand, the rural population of Eastern Canada during the last ten years had declined by about 47,000 people, while the city or urban population of the country had increased by no less than 1,250,000. In these figures, Mr. James thought, lay one of the chief causes for the great advance in the cost of living in Canada. The consumers had increased, the producers had declined in number. It was inevitable that the law of supply and demand should rule. Mr. James followed this up with the startling declaration that in his opinion it would be better for the Government, instead of spending thirty, forty or fifty million dollars for railways to open up new area in the Northwest, to take a similar amount and spend it on good roads in old Ontario and the other settled portions of Eastern Canada.

In this connection Mr. James pointed out that Canada, generally regarded as an agricultural country, is a large importer of food stuffs. British Columbia, for example, imports $16,000,000 worth of table products annually, and little New Brunswick, another agricultural province, imports $4,000,000 worth.

Mr. James outlined what it was proposed to do with the $10,000,000 now being granted by the Dominion Department of Agriculture for the increase of agricultural knowledge and training, the purpose being to teach the farmers how to increase the amount of their produce.

Friedmann's Cure.

Among local medical men and the public generally there is the keenest interest in the reported discovery by Dr. Friedmann, the German physician, of a successful treatment for consumption. Several local doctors have made arrangements to interview Dr. Friedmann, and it is hoped that possibly he may be induced to visit Toronto. Despite the great publicity which has been given the new "cure," the disposition among Toronto medical men is to look with some suspicion on the high claims that have been made. They will be delighted to find that Dr. Friedmann's cure is as dependable as has been stated but in view of the doubt they think it is unfortunate that so much publicity has been given the matter until all possibility of disappointment to sufferers had passed. That a distinct advance in the treatment of tuberculosis has been made they consider possible, but that anything like a "cure all" has been discovered seems to them incredible.

Eager Suffragettes.

The Toronto Suffragettes who went to Washington have returned well pleased with their expedition. The Suffragettes, as a rule, are very sensitive of criticism of their actions, but this has not prevented certain persons of both sexes from asking what was to be gained by such a jaunt. The point of view of these critics is that the Canadian participation in the Washington parade was as much out of place as would be the participation in an Ottawa parade of Canadian Suffragettes seeking to influence the Dominion Parliament, by a contingent of United States women. The Toronto contingent could not help but impress the eye. They wore red hats, long white trailing gowns with a big red sash bearing the word "Canada," and carried Union Jacks. The delegation included about a dozen of the most active agitators in Toronto, including Mrs. Flora Macdonald Denison, President of the Canadian Suffrage Association; Dr. Augusta Stowe-Gullen, past president; Dr. Margaret Johnston, Mrs. Campbell MacIvor, who alone of Toronto's suffragettes believes in militant methods; Mrs. Hector Prenter, the very active Secretary of the Association; Mrs. L. A. Hamilton, President of the Equal Franchise League and a very active social worker, and Mrs. E. L. Campbell, President of the Beaches' Progress Club. All of these are ladies of ripe experience in women's movements, and none belongs to the type one would expect to be carried away by any visionary project. The enthusiastic Mrs. Hamilton proposes to organize a parade in Toronto next.

Cabinet Ministers Lend a Hand.

The Toronto Exhibition Association has only one meeting a year, but it manages to throw around that gathering some of the glamor of national importance which it secures for the Big Show itself. For example, at the annual meeting this year no less than three Cabinet Ministers were in attendance. There was the Honorable James Duff, who from his position as Minister of Agriculture takes a keen interest in all exhibitions, and who is an enthusiastic member of the Toronto Exhibition Association; then there was the Honorable W. H. Hearst, whose special interest is New Ontario, which always has a prominent exhibit at the fair, and the third Minister was the Honorable Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, whose interest is elicited on account of the educational features which the Fair seeks to introduce. Each was called upon to make a speech, and responded with a few brief sentences of a congratulatory nature, delivered in characteristic style, Mr. Duff inclined to be flowery, Mr. Hearst forcible and downright, and Dr. Pyne the dignified and suave gentleman.

The Exhibition Association is made up of delegates from various bodies of a more or less representative character throughout the Province. Membership in the Association carries with it as privileges the right to attend the annual meeting, to take part in the discussion there and to vote in the election for Board of Directors, and to a pass or two for the Exhibition. The Board of Directors, consisting of 16 members, is the inner circle. While the membership of the Association includes a number from outside the city, the Directorships are pretty well confined to men with Toronto interests. Formerly there was in addition to the Directorate a system of committees through which it was sought to interest the various members of the Association, but this plan has been largely abandoned.

The Inmost Circle.

As a matter of fact, there is an inner circle within the inner circle, the inmost circle being the Executive Committee of about five members. This is the real governing body of the Exhibition.

The annual meeting this year was one of the largest in the history of the Association, filling one of the large rooms at the City Hall. President Kent, a man of few words, presided, and General Manager Orr was at his left hand to see that the wheels revolved smoothly. The election of Directors is always accompanied by a great deal of buttonholing, and, it is said, wire-pulling, and there is generally a surprise in store for someone. This year it was for Mr. H. R. Frankland, a former director who had some disagreement with the other members of the Board during the year just closed, and who this year went down to defeat. After the voting adjournment was made to a restaurant, where an elaborate luncheon was served.

WONDERS OF WELBECK.

Royalty Pays Visit to Duke of Portland's Famous Estate.

Welbeck, the country estate of the Duke of Portland, which has just been honored with a royal visit, is remarkable among the country seats of the British aristocracy for three things—a long tunnel which opens right into Welbeck Park, a riding school which is unsurpassed in Europe, and a famous picture gallery. This is the most notable of the many subterranean rooms at the Abbey. Excavated from a quarter of an acre of solid clay and lighted entirely from the roof, it is 160 feet long, 64 feet wide and 22 feet high. By night eighteen lustre chandeliers illumine the Van Dycks, Rubens, Rembrandts, Reynolds, Teniers, and other masterpieces that cover the walls. Not without justice has this gallery been styled "the largest and in every way the most magnificent private room in England."

The riding school has a glass arcade with a straight run of a quarter of a mile. Then the glass houses, with which a former Duke of Portland experimented with the effect of various colored glass on plants and flowers, are measured by the mile. The apricot house has a run of nearly a quarter of a mile, and its neighbors, devoted to the culture of various other fruits, are little shorter. Each of the numerous flower houses is a vista of loveliness, and 100 yards of glass are devoted to Malmaison carnations alone—a favored flower at Welbeck. The Abbey itself is not architecturally impressive, but it stands on the shore of a broad lake and overlooks a fine deep park studded with rare gardens until its limits reach the old oaks of Sherwood Forest.

World's Biggest Organ.

The new organ which is to be placed in the great cathedral now in course of erection in Liverpool will probably be classed among the wonders of the world, as it will be the largest organ in existence. The organ in the Sydney (Australia) town hall now has the distinction of standing first in point of size. The Liverpool organ will take four years to construct. It will contain 215 draw-stops, speaking and mechanical, and the total number of pipes will reach the remarkable number of 10,567. It will occupy two special chambers, one on each side of the chancel. It is the gift of Mrs. James Barrow of Waterloo, near Liverpool.

"YOUR NAME, PLEASE!"

Here Are Some Little-Known Wonders of Nomenclature.

"No," said hubby; "I bar these foreign names. Let's have something the child won't be ashamed of. What's the matter with William? Bit of British stuff, that!"

Alas!—but such is life!—William is a purely German name, and means "defending many." You've heard of Wilhelm? Well, that's it!

Very few of our Christian names are English. Sad, but true. Here is a list: Thomas is Hebrew, and means "a twin." John is also a Jewish name—"the grace of the Lord."

The following "English names," common and popular, are German: Robert (famous in counsel); Walter (a conqueror); Henry (rich lord); Herbert (bright lord); Frederic (rich peace); Charles (noble-spirited); Francis (free); Archibald (bold observer). Ferdinand is German, too, and means "pure peace."

French names are fewer. Guy, Lewis, Percival, Norman are examples.

Bible names are, of course, nearly all Jewish.

To get nearer home, the following are Saxon names: Alfred (all peace); Albert (all bright); Edward (happy keeper); Edwin (happy conqueror); Richard (powerful); Ralph (help). Less popular ones are Adolphus, Cuthbert, Dunstan, Edgar, Edmund, Harold, Gilbert, Gerard, etc.

So far, you see, no English names, and there are still to come the lists of Latin and Greek names. These are Latin: Clement (mild-tempered); Cecil (dim-sighted); Augustus (venerable, grand); Anthony (flourishing); Vincent, Paul Oliver, Maurice, Mark, Lionel, etc.

Greek names are: Philip (lover of horses); Peter (a rock); Eustace (standing firm); Alexander (helper of men); Andrew, George, Christopher, Ernest, and many others.

Hugh is Dutch.

If you are really bent on having a good old British name for your son and heir, you must take one of the following: Arthur (strong man); Cadwallader (!), which means valliant; Evan (same as John); Griffith (great faith); Llewellin (like a lion); Owen (well-descended); Morgan (a mariner); or Meredith. A small list!

If you are smitten with Horatio or Orlando—well, these are Italian.

Old Folks' Coughs Permanently Cured

The Public is Loud in Its Praise of the Modern Direct Breathing Cure.

Elderly people take cold easily. Unlike young folks, they recover slowly, if ever. That is why so many people past middle life die of pneumonia. Even though pneumonia does not develop and kill, coughs certainly weaken all elderly people.

Cough Syrups seldom do much good because they upset digestion. Any druggist or doctor knows that a much more effective treatment is "CATARRHOZONE." which heals and soothes the irritated surfaces of the throat.

In using Catarrhozone you do not take medicine into the stomach—you simply breathe into the throat, nose and lungs rich piney balsamic vapor, so full of healing power that colds, catarrh and bronchitic disappear almost instantly.

"At sixty-eight years of age I can testify that I am never troubled with coughs or colds," writes J. E. Pilgrim, of Kingston. "They used to be the bain of my life, and that was before I used Catarrhozone, which was recommended to me by C. L. Prouse, druggist. To use Catarrhozone is just like being in an immense pine woods. The balsamic vapor of Catarrhozone is like a tonic, it is so stimulating to the breathing organs, so soothing to sore spots, so full of power to drive out colds and congestion. I will always use and recommend Catarrhozone as a preventive and cure for coughs, colds, bronchitis, throat irritation and catarrh.

(Signed) "J. E. PILGRIM."

A Catarrhozone Inhaler in your pocket or purse enables you to stop a cold with the first sneeze. Large size costs $1.00 and supplies treatment for two months; small size, 50c.; trial size 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

DECORATED COFFINS.

Cremation in Gay Coffins Latest Amusement of Bavarians.

To be cremated in highly-decorated coffins, we are told, is the latest amusement of South Germans. The brilliant colors of Egyptian tombs are thrown into the shade by the pictures painted upon the coffins of dead Bavarian citizens. The cause of this is the new law legalizing cremation. The crematoriums have a regulation that no metal may be used in coffin construction. Pegs must be employed instead of nails; and the elaborate brass or nickel work formerly in fashion in Germany is against the rules. The national craze for over-decoration has, therefore, found refuge in decorative painting. The coffins are painted pale blue or green, and on this background appear vivid oil-paintings of Swiss landscapes, pastoral scenes, and even portraits of the corpse and of his family.

7% SAFE INVESTMENT

The National Securities Corporation, Limited, now offer to the public their 7% Profit Sharing Bonds, which mature in five years, with interest payable half-yearly on the 1st of June and the 1st of December.

The National Securities Corporation, Limited, acts as a holding company for several large and profitable manufacturing plants that have been built up by members of the Corporation in the past quarter of a century. The proceeds of these bonds are to be used in still further developing these plants—in acquiring another long established manufacturing plant which has shown large profits for years—and in purchasing well located timber lands. The Corporation now has a large limit under option containing 1,000,000,000 feet of virgin timber. This latter should largely increase in value in the next few years.

All profits beyond bond interest and stock dividends are to be divided equally between the Bondholders and the Shareholders, and whatever profits are thus divided will be in excess of the 7% annual interest on the Bond.

These Bonds are amply secured by investments of the Corporation in these manufacturing plants and in the value of lands, timber and mills which it controls, and will be further secured by the acquisition of other plants and timber limits.

The Bonds are offered to the public in denominations of $100, $500 and $1,000, and may be purchased either outright or by means of the periodic payment plan. In the latter case, an initial payment of 10% of the face value of the Bond will be required. Bondholders may withdraw all or part of their investments, with interest, at any time after one year on sixty days notice.

Payments should be made to the National Securities Corporation, Limited, either by cheque or money-order.

PRINCE KROPOTKIN.

The fame of Prince Kropotkin has spread throughout the civilized world, and when he celebrated his seventieth birthday recently he was the recipient of congratulations from all quarters.

Prince Kropotkin's career reads like a romance by Dumas. A member of one of the most ancient and noble houses in Russia, when a boy he belonged to the Tsar's corps of pages, but as he grew up his soul revolted against serfdom, and the autocratic tyranny which the Russian people groaned. He joined the movement aimed at establishing freedom and good government and the police became aware that a mysterious "Borodin" was exercising a remarkable influence on the revolutionary party. Who this "Borodin" was they were unable to ascertain, and peasants and artisans who were imprisoned or sent to the scaffold refused to divulge the secret.

In 1874 the savants of Russia assembled at the Geographical Society in St. Petersburg to hear the famous Prince Kropotkin recount the results of his explorations in Finland. As the lecturer was driving from the meeting in a cab, he passed another conveyance from which an artisan called out "Mr. Borodin." The Prince stopped his cab, and thus fell into the trap. The police had got him at last.

For two years he was confined in the terrible fortress of Peter and Paul, where he underwent frightful hardships. Then came his dramatic escape, followed by a flight across Finland to Sweden, and then England. Since that time he has never returned to Russia, but the vengeance of Russian autocrats has pursued him. When he went to France after the Lyons' riots in 1882 he was sentenced to five years' imprisonment at the instigation of the Russian Government. But so strong was the resentment in France at this move that Prince Kropotkin was released at the end of three years.

Other attempts have been made to lay hands on him, but he resides safely in England. This famous scientist, who surrendered great estates in Russia as the result of his devotion to liberty, lives in a simple manner, supporting himself by his writings. His best-known work is "Fields, Factories, and Workshops," but he has made many notable contributions to social science.

HOW TO ATTAIN EIGHTY.

Frederic Harrison's Golden Rules of Health.

Five golden rules of health were given recently by Mr. Frederic Harrison, author, critic, bibliophile, ex-professor, barrister, historian, traveller, and amateur gardener, on his eighty-first birthday the other day, celebrated at his home at Hawkhurst, Kent, England.

(1) Abstain from tobacco, spirits, made dishes, and all such dreadful things. I am satisfied with a little bit of mutton and rice pudding.

(2) Rise from a meal with an appetite. I believe people eat too much.

(3) Walk every day for two hours. This I am going to do as soon as I get through a pile of letters and telegrams from Florence and Rome. I am too old to play at tennis, and golf is too slow.

(4) Sleep eight hours. People cannot sleep who smoke themselves black in the face, eat too much, and have not walked enough.

(5) More important than all—be content with what you have got. Take things quietly.

CZAREVITCH'S TROUBLES.

The Russian Crown Prince Has Strange Life.

The Czarevitch can not look back upon the joys of early life in the way that most children born to a throne are in a position to do. Nor will any of his European colleagues envy the Crown Prince of Russia.

From the day of his birth the little Prince was put under the care of a Cossack guard, who is held answerable with his life for the safety of his charge. The soldier never leaves the child; he sleeps in the ante-room of his bedchamber. The room is locked, but a series of bells would at a touch communicate with the outside world. Two sentries parade in front of the bedroom door, and a few paces further on is another double guard.

Little Alexis was four years old before his eyes fell on any sight beyond his own small garden bounded by the wall of a courtyard. He did not even play as other children do, for while he was digging in the sand or running about with his only companion, the son of a lady-in-waiting, other children were acting as his ghosts and running about in another part of the garden to distract attention and make security doubly sure. His own Cossack guarded the Imperial child of Russia, while a second Cossack guard simulated duty over the other little ones.

An English tutor entered upon the service of the Czarevitch when he was seven years old, but all lessons are done in the presence of the Cossack and of a lady-in-waiting. Friedburg was the first place the little boy saw outside his own secluded playground. Later, he beheld the grounds of the Imperial residence, and from the decks of the Standart his eyes greeted the Baltic.

On one occasion only was the son of the Czar at a military reception, and precautionary measures adopted were of the strictest kind. The Czar and Czarina have tried to prevent any possible risk of their child being poisoned, attacked or kidnapped. He eats nothing until it has been examined by his own special "taster," who makes trial of every dish before it appears on the table.

NEW CHEMICAL GUN TESTED.

Ernest Welsh's Invention Throws Projectiles Five Miles.

Ernest Welsh, of Hull, England, has invented a new chemical gun for which remarkable claims are made and which has undergone a Government test. The gun weighs three hundredweight, and is said to throw its projectiles, which ignite upon impact, to a distance of five miles.

The mechanism, as briefly explained by Mr. Welsh, consists in part of three generators which manufacture three distinct gases. In the stopper there is a small sponge saturated with a certain fluid which also gives off a supply of oxygen and hydrogen inside the cylinder.

The cylinder rests on a plate, and by the setting into motion of a small electric motor situate on the right hand side of the gun, the gases are exploded and the projectile is propelled through the muzzle.

Mr. Welsh says that there is no recoil and there is no pressure on the outside of the cylinder. All pressure is felt forward. The nature of the gases is a secret, but Mr. Welsh says that the gun has been tested with satisfactory results to all who witnessed the demonstration.

That Stab-like Pain in the Back is Sure Indication of Kidney Trouble.

Mrs. Anna Rodriguez writes as follows from her home in Valencia: "For a long time I suffered with failing strength and nagging headaches. My condition grew steadily worse, my limbs became bloated and shaky, I was sallow and thin, felt rheumatic pains, dizziness and chills. I unfortunately didn't suspect my kidneys and was nearly dead when I discovered the true cause of my sufferings. I read so much about the wonderful health and strength that comes to all who use Dr. Hamilton's Pills that I felt sure they would help me. Such blessings of health and comfort I got from Dr. Hamilton's Pills I can't describe. ## PUDDLES OF SILVER.

System Used in Mexico to Separate the Metal.

It was at Pachuca, Mexico, that the patio system of separating silver had its origin. This system is still followed extensively at the silver mines throughout Mexico. The ore is crushed and worked down to a state of puddle. It is then spread out to a depth of two or three feet over the paved floor of the courtyard, or patio. To this mass sulphate of copper is added in powder, about fifteen pounds of sulphate to 3,000 pounds of puddle. This is trodden into the puddle by horses. Several gangs of old, worn-out horses or mules, about twelve in a gang, are seen in various parts of the patio, being driven round in circles to tread in the sulphate.

On the next day 6 per cent. of common salt is added and in two more days 100 per cent. of pure quicksilver, or as much as the assay of the ore shows, is required. This mass is then trodden up by horses for fifteen days. It is then wheeled to a large tank through which passes a rapid stream of water. This washes away the clay, leaving the silver and quicksilver. This residuum is poured into cone-shaped canvas bags through which most of the quicksilver runs out, and what remains with the silver is passed off with the vapor by means of heated retorts. None of the quicksilver is lost, and even the vapor is brought by cold water to its original state and used again and again. The quicksilver soon rots the hoofs of the horses and the mules, but the Mexicans themselves do not seem to be much the worse for it, even though they wade around in the puddle for days at a time.

WHY FASHIONS CHANGE.

How Some Recurrent Modes Were Originated.

If the most noteworthy trait in the fashions of the present day is an eclecticism which permits no one dominant tendency to hold sway, the reason may perhaps be found in the fact that while Paris undoubtedly sets the fashion for the whole feminine world, Paris is the capital of a republic.

Formerly, under the Empire, or when there was a king on the throne of France, the sovereign's wishes had a distinct influence on the tendency of fashion. The court liked to copy the smallest detail or whim of his majesty or of the princesses who surrounded him. For example, trains owe their origin to the fact that the daughters of Louis IX. had abnormally large feet.

The wife of Philippe III. was afflicted with a tremendously long neck, so she invented the high guimpe.

It was because La Belle Ferronniere had a burn exactly in the middle of her forehead that she wore over the cicatrix the charming jewel held by a fine thread that is called a Ferronniere to this day.

In the reign of Henry II. some princesses who suffered from goitre hid the blemish beneath their high-fluted ruffs and disguised the crookedness of their shoulders under the puffed sleeve.

Anne of Austria wore short sleeves because of her beautiful arms; Louis XIV. brought the wig into fashion because he was afflicted with a wen on his head. Mme. de Pompadour created the vogue of high heeled slippers to hide her lack of inches.

The Empress Eugene had very beautiful shoulders, so she set the fashion of decolletage which left the shoulders bare and set them off to the best advantage.

STRENGTH.

Without Overloading the Stomach.

The business man, especially, needs food in the morning that will not overload the stomach, but give mental vigor for the day.

Much depends on the start a man gets each day, as to how he may expect to accomplish the work on hand.

He can't be alert, with a heavy, fried-meat-and-potatoes breakfast requiring a lot of vital energy in digesting it.

A Western business man tried to find some food combination that would not overload the stomach in the morning, but that would produce energy.

He writes:

"For years I was unable to find a breakfast food that had nutrition enough to sustain a business man without overloading his stomach, causing indigestion and kindred ailments.

"Being a very busy and also a very nervous man, I decided to give up breakfast altogether. But luckily I was induced to try Grape-Nuts.

"Since that morning I have been a new man; can work without tiring, my head is clear and my nerves strong and quiet.

"I find four teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts with one of sugar and a small quantity of cold milk, is delicious as the cereal part of the morning meal, and invigorates me for the day's business." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

ANOTHER PROOF FROM THE WEST

THAT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS ARE A NATURAL REMEDY.

For Cases of Exhaustion and Nerve Weakness—How S. Jeremy Found Relief when he Cured his Kidneys.

Sniatyn, Alta., March 10.—(Special).—That the natural remedy for exhaustion and nerve weakness is one that will give good circulation and pure blood carrying nutrition to all parts of the body, is again proved in the case of S. Jeremy, a well-known resident of this place.

"For over two years I suffered from attacks of exhaustion and nerve weakness," Mr. Jeremy states. "I tried many nerve foods and tonics but must admit that Dodd's Kidney Pills have benefitted me more than anything else I ever used.

"I am more than grateful for what Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for me."

Nerve weakness and exhaustion are caused by impure blood. Impure blood is caused by diseased kidneys failing to strain the waste matter of the body out of the blood. The natural remedy is to cure the kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills have yet to find a case of kidney disease they cannot cure.

RASH ON ARMS ALMOST UNBEARABLE

Looked Like Raw Meat. Itched and Burned So Badly Could Not Rest Night or Day. Arms Sore from Wrist to Elbow. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Completely Cured.

Lower Blandford, Nova Scotia.—"Three years ago I became troubled with sore arms. It came as a rash. My arms looked like raw meat and itched and burned so badly I could not rest night or day. When I scratched they became awfully sore. As long as the weather was warm it didn't bother me so much, but in winter it was almost unbearable. My arms were sore from the wrist to the elbow.

"I used several cures which were recommended to me but without any avail. I saw how I could get a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment which I did. I used the samples and found an improvement. Whenever I applied the Cuticura Ointment the itching and burning ceased. I got a full-sized box of Cuticura Ointment and a cake of Cuticura Soap and only used about half when it disappeared and since then I have not been troubled. That was six months ago. ## NERVOUS SHOULD WALK.

Prescribed for the Person Bordering on Hysteria.

Many women, because they are tired at night, think that they do not need physical training, that they have already taken too much; but this is a mistaken idea. Housework, says a writer in the Woman's World, tends to make women nervous and irritable unless they obtain diversion in the form of exercise or healthful recreation. When women are nervous or bordering on hysteria and feel like crying or screaming, a little well chosen exercise followed by a cool bath will improve these conditions, and, if persisted in, will eventually cure them.

Any woman who has a moderate degree of health can walk. If she will rise an hour earlier in the morning and walk, with the body erect, chest strongly expanded, swinging the arms at the side of the body as a man does, and take great deep breaths, she will have no occasion to complain of nerves, even if her daily duties are confining. If it is out of the question to take this hour's walk in the morning, take it in the evening after dinner. You may not have as much sleep, but it is refreshing and will more than compensate for the time expended.

THE FIRST TEETOTALER.

The Word Was Coined in the Town of Preston, England.

The quaint sayings of "Dicky" Turner, one of the earliest advocates of temperance in rural England, are still remembered in the little town of Preston, where the reformer began his attacks on the drinking habits of his fellow townsmen. In "The Manchester and Glasgow Road," Mr. Charles G. Harper describes the work of this interesting man:

Outside of Preston, probably not one person in a thousand knows how the word "teetotal" came into popular use. It was, to all intents and purposes, deliberately invented by "Dicky" Turner, who, at a meeting held in the Old Cockpit, declaimed vehemently against the arguments of the moderate drinkers, and insisted upon total abstinence. "I'll have nowt to dee wi' this moderation botheration pledge," he said. "I'll be reet down out-an'-out tee-tee-total for ever and ever."

"Well done!" shouted the meeting, and the word was adopted with enthusiasm.

There was no reference to tea, as is often supposed, nor was the word the result of a stuttering attempt at the word "total"; for Turner was not a stammerer. He was a ready coiner of words upon any emergency, and often perpetrated what in an Irishman would be called "bulls." In one of his impassioned addresses on temperance, he said: "We will go with our axes on our shoulders and plow up the great deep; and then the ship of temperance shall sail gallantly over the land."

A Racking Cough And Sore Throat Cured In Five Hours

Use the Proper Remedy and Colds and Sore Throat Disappear.

"When I came home last evening," writes Mr. Thomas E. Jarvis, "I was all used up with cold and a racking cough. I felt sick all over. My wife rubbed my throat and chest every hour, and made me gargle with Nerviline and water. I was soon warmed up and made comfortable with the Nerviline, and the chilly sensation passed away. At 11 o'clock, after five hours' treatment, I was practically well. I therefore write you at once in order that it may be publicly known that Nerviline will knock out a bad cold over night."

It is a fact that Nerviline will ease up a tight chest, will relieve that sore, wheezy feeling, will knock out a cold in just a few hours. It penetrates deeply, draws out the congestion, cures promptly. Get a large family size bottle, 50c.; small size, 25c., at all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

SUN-BEACONS OF THE COAST.

Swedish Engineer's Remarkable Invention.

The remarkable application of the "sun-valve" in acetylene gas-lighting was the first step toward relieving the lonely keepers of the little coast-beacons in remote places. In the last three years many hundreds of the old lights afloat and ashore have been replaced by the new contrivance, which is the invention of Gustaf Dalen, the Swedish engineer who recently received the Nobel prize for physics. Harper's Weekly thus describes it:

The source of light for these lone beacons is dissolved acetylene, which is stored under pressure in steel cylinders. One of these cylinders can be charged with enough gas to last a small beacon three years. Usually, however, in the case of floating buoys, a six months' supply is all that is necessary, as such buoys are overhauled and painted twice a year. That is all the care the light needs. The sun-valve does the rest.

The scientific principle upon which the sun-valve depends is that sunlight upon dark surfaces is converted into heat, and heat produces expansion. This expansion is very considerable in certain metals, of which copper is one.

Through the centre of a carefully sealed glass jar nearly a foot high and about three inches in diameter a thick black rod is run. Three slenderer rods of highly polished copper support it. The black rod is of copper also, and it is coated with lampblack in order that it may absorb the greatest possible amount of light.

As the sun appears and the atmosphere grows warmer, this rod expands and lengthens. It pushes down into the metal chamber in which the glass jar rests and touches the end of a lever. It presses down on the lever, and cuts off the flow of gas to the lamp.

When the sun disappears from view in the evening and the temperature of the air falls, the process is reversed. The rod contracts and releases the pressure on the lever. The gas flows upward to the lamp, and is ignited by a little pilot flame that is never extinguished.

The precision of this contrivance is almost incredible. It can be used even in the cold of the polar regions, for it responds with the utmost accuracy to small variations in temperature. There are nearly a hundred of these sun-valve beacons in Alaska. In summer they are aids to navigation, and in winter they guide the travellers on dog-sledges over the frozen wastes.

He is a wise man who is able to conceal his importance.

Mr. J. E. Arsenault, a Justice of the Peace, and station master at Wellington, on the Prince Edward Island Railway, says:

"Four years ago I slipped in the station and fell on a freight truck, sustaining a bad cut on the front of my leg. I thought this would heal, but instead of doing so it developed into a bad ulcer, and later into a form of eczema which spread very rapidly, and also started on the other leg. Both legs became so swollen and sore that I could only go about my work by having them bandaged. My doctor said I must stop work and lay up.

"After six months of this trouble I consulted another doctor, but with no better result. I tried all the salves, liniments and lotions I heard of, but instead of getting better I got worse.

"This was my condition when I got my first box of Zam-Buk. Greatly to my delight that first box gave me relief. I continued to apply it to the sores, and day by day they got better. I could see that at last I had got hold of something which would cure me, and in the end it did.

"It is now over a year since Zam-Buk worked a cure in my case, and there has been no return of the eczema."

Such is the nature of the great cures which Zam-Buk is daily effecting. Purely herbal in composition, this great balm is a sure cure for all skin diseases, cold sores, chapped hands, frost bite, ulcers, blood-poisoning, varicose sores, piles, scalp sores, ringworm, inflated patches, cuts, burns and bruises. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., upon receipt of price.

NAVAL STRATEGY OR LAURIER STRATEGY.

Canada's first large contribution to naval defence is a big Imperial issue and so regarded not only throughout Great Britain but in all foreign countries. We are making a direct and quick contribution to the naval defence of the Empire. We are following the advice of the admiralty. In so do we are following the best principles of naval strategy. First, we strengthen the home fleet; second, we put our ships (for they will be ours) under one central control; third, we augment materially the quick striking force of our country. All this is following the best modern naval strategy as you will find in any recognized work such as that by the noted American writer Mahan. But to Laurier "strategy" means party advantage—not the success of the Empire but that of the Liberal party—of the Liberal leaders and ex-ministers. For this he pretends that he would give two fleet units which would cost seventy millions, whilst he votes against the three ships costing only half that amount. He pretends that there can be no Empire need or emergency unless the war clouds are just ready to burst and the lightning has already flashed. He pretends that we could build a fleet in Canada without any equipment for the purpose He pretends we could man a fleet when we cannot find men in the whole of Canada willing to man the "Niobe" and the "Rainbow." He boasts about all he would do if he were in power. Does the country want naval strategy or will it stand Laurier strategy?

New Regulations Governing the Free Entry of Pure Bred Animals

On the first of April this year there will come into force new regulations governing the free entry to Canada of animals for the improvement of stock. To this end the following amended regulations have been adopted by Order in Council for the guidance of Importers and Custom House officers:

1. "No animal imported for the improvement of stock shall be admitted free of duty unless the owner is a British subject, resident in the British Empire, or if more than one owner, each is a British subject, resident in the British Empire and there is furnished an Import Certificate stating that the animal is recorded in a Canadian National Record or in a Foreign Record recognized as reliable by the National Record Committee.

"A statutory declaration by the owner or one of the owners, that he is a British subject, or that each is a British subject resident in the British Empire and that such animal is the identical animal described in such certificate must be provided, and that such animal is being imported into Canada for the improvement of stock.

2. "In case such certificate is not at hand at the time of the arrival of the animals, entry for duty may be accepted subject to refund of the duty upon the production of the requisite certificates and proofs in due form satisfactory to the collector within one year from the time of entry.

3. 'The form of certificate to be accepted for the free importation of animals for the improvement of stock, and the Customs procedure in connection therewith shall be subject to the direction of the Minister of Customs.

4. "The above declarations shall be attached to the Free Import Entry and may be made before the collector, sub-collector, surveyor or chief clerk at the port where the goods are entered or before any functionary authorized by law to administer oaths."

Under the old regulations a British subject residing in a foreign country or the citizen of another country living in Canada could secure the free entry of properly registered animals, whereas under the new order foreign persons or firms are excluded from this privilege.

Customs officers are required to examine carefully the animals presented for entry to see that they correspond with the description contained in the Import Certificate and if they do not duty is collected.

The statutory declarations required regarding citizenship and identity will it is hoped effectively prevent abuses that led up to the passing of the new regulations.

As in the past animals are subjected to veterinary inspection at the port of entry. Officials of the Health of Animals Branch who do this work are required to make a report as to color and markings. If it is found by the Canadian National Records that foreign certificates of registration do not correspond with these reports Canadian registration and Import Certificates for the animals in question are refused.

Prominent People Proud To Testify For "Fruit-a-tives"

MR. TIMOTHY McGRATH

130 ATLANTIC AVE., MONTREAL, MARCH 1st. 1912.

"For years, I suffered from Rheumatism, being unable to work for weeks at a time and spent hundreds of dollars on doctor's medicines, besides receiving treatment at Notre Dame Hospital where I was informed that I was incurable. I was discouraged when a friend advised me to try "Fruit-a-tives". After using three packages, I felt relieved and continued until I had used five packages when a complete cure was the result after years of doctoring failed. I consider "Fruit-a-tives" a wonderful remedy. You are at liberty to use this testimonial to prove to others the good that "Fruit-a-tives" has done me"

Co-operative Experiments in Weed Eradication, 1913

During the season of 1912, the Ontario Agricultural Experimental Union carried on co-operative experiments in the eradication of perennial sow thistle, twitch grass bladder campion and wild mustard. A number of practical men took part in these experiments and some very interesting and valuable results were obtained. A properly cultivated crop of rape was found to be an excellent means of destroying perennial sow thistle and twitch grass. Rape proved more effective in destroying twitch grass than did buckwheat Thorough and deep cultivation followed by potatoes or corn gave good results in the control of bladder campion. Spraying with iron or copper sulphate proved to be a cheap and effective means of destroying mustard in growing grain without injury to the crop. Those who took part in these experiments profited by the experience. They cleaned the field experimented upon, demonstrated to their own satisfaction the effectiveness of the method tried and at the same time their results furnished practical information to others.

These co-operative experiments in weed eradication will be continued this year (1913) and it is hoped that a large number of men will take part in them in order that sufficient data may be gathered to warrant definite statements being made regarding the best methods of controlling these pernicious weeds. The experiments are as follows: (1) The use of rape in the destruction of perennial sow thistle. (2) A system of intensive cropping and cultivation, using winter rye followed by turnips, rape or buckwheat, for eradicating perennial sow thistle. (3) The use of rape in the destruction of twitch grass. (4) A method of cultivation and cropping for the destruction of twitch grass. (5) A method for the eradication of bladder campion or cow bell. (6) Spraying with iron sulphate to destroy mustard in cereal crops.

Those who are troubled with any of these bad weeds are invited to write to the Director of Co-operative Experiments in Weed Eradication, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, Ontario, who will be glad to furnish full information concerning these experiments and to supply application blanks for the same. All experimenters will be supplied with full and detailed instructions for carrying on the experiment selected and with blank forms on which to report the results of the same. All interested in clean farming are asked to co-operate in this work. Address all communications to J. E. Howitt, Botanical Department, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, Ontario.

Montreal Motor Boat Show

From Montreal Witness, March 1st, 1913.

The Second National Motor Boat Show, as it is officially designated, which will be held at the Arena, commencing March 29th and continuing until April 5th, will be the greatest exhibition of small motor driven craft that has ever been collected under one roof in Canada. All sorts and kinds of motor boats will be on view, from the commodious family lunch to the fast racing hydroplane, with high powered engines to drive her over the water at express speed. Every inch of space has been sold at the Arena, and a most comprehensive exhibition is thus assured for those who attend the show. Perhaps the most unique style of decoration which has ever been undertaken in Canada will be put in the Arena. Mr. R. M. Jaffray, who is well-known to the public of Montreal as a successful manager of motor car and motor boat shows, has recently returned from New York, where he signed a contract with a decorating firm for the interior decorations. These will consist of a representation on either side of the Arena, of the side of one of the new Grand Trunk ships which will be commissioned on the Pacific service this year. These reproductions will show the portholes, the promenade and other decks and the three great funnels and masts with which these leviations are fitted.

Each of the portholes will be brilliantly illuminated, and the two sides of the Arena decorated in this way will give the spectator the impression that one is standing on a quay with two of these ships on either side.

Mr Jaffray is most enthusiastic about this feature of the show, and said to a representative of 'The Witness,' "As can readily be seen this form of decoration is extremely expensive, and we are relying on the public's appreciation of our efforts to give them something really good, to make it a profitable investment for us."

Mr Jaffray attended the recent Motor Boat Show in New York, at Madison Square Garden, and was successful while there in signing up a large number of the exhibitors who had their products on view there, to bring their exhibits up to Montreal. Owing to the wonderful increase in the number of exhibitors this year, it has been found necessary to erect galleries over the seats at the Arena, which is usually lost space at shows of this nature, in order to accommodate the increased number of reservations. In addition to the increased number of complete motor boats which will be shown, there will be specially strong showing of engines and motors Many of the large English and American motor manufacturers who were more or less skeptical last year, are coming in this year and the most representative factories of both sides of the Atlantic will have exhibits in place.

The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Subagency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-emp a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside upon the homestead or pre-emption six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may enter for a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

IN SERVIA AND BULGARIA

WOMEN OF THE BALKANS THREATEN FRESH WAR.

Have Suddenly Become Important Through Absence of Men at Front.

A new war is threatened in the untranquil Balkans. Not because King Ferdinand has not got enough; nor because Servia is not to keep Albania; nor because some people are sore about Salonica. The cause of the trouble is the resurgent suffragette. The resurgent suffragette has not yet got to the stage of seizing the coat-tails of King Ferdinand or stoning King Peter's konak, as have her sisters in other lands. But she is active and irritated; and the Terrible Turk himself has roused no worse political passion than her ultimatum, "We women must have votes."

This passion has overtaken Bulgaria; and also progressive Servia, where women are already farther ahead in the professions than they are in Germany or France. The war has given women their chance; and they are not neglecting it. For the past few weeks Madame Vasilisa Petroff, wife of a Phillippopolis lawyer, has been running a very strong suffragist agitation. The agitation feeds mainly on the great services rendered during the war by women nurses, uniform-makers and even soldiers. "But the greatest thing we are doing," she says, "is becoming widows. Every Bulgarian woman who has sent her husband to die on the battlefield is a fresh argument why women should have votes."

An Old Cause.

Woman's suffrage is an old cause in Bulgaria. Before the war the Woman's Emancipation Union had 1,700 members; and it lately became affiliated to the international suffrage movement. The war brought it 400 fresh members. The Bulgarian man regards the movement with suspicion. Of the political parties the only syspathizers are the Radicals and the Democrats, neither of which counts for much. During fifteen years' fighting the women have gained only one victory. That is the right to vote for the elections of the schools management committees. The right to sit as members of the committees has been refused.

Madame Petroff is preparing a petition to Queen Eleonora. The petition begins by reciting words used by King Ferdinand to members of the English Red Cross mission. "My wife," said the incautious Ferdinand, "is worth ten thousand soldiers." If one woman is worth ten thousand soldiers, argues the logical petition, then one woman might have at least the same political power as one soldier has. The petition asks Queen Eleonora to use her influence in pushing the women's anticipation movement; thereby "showing the world that both halves of the Bulgarian nation are worthy of freedom."

By the occupation of the whole male population in the war the women found themselves promoted into necessary beings. Some cleaned the streets; others drove cabs, and a few even applied to be enrolled as policemen. Three were enrolled, and their drill began. But the three soon discovered that they were not wanted. With all the men fighting their country's battles there was no one to get drunk, to give black eyes, or to steal pocket-handkerchiefs; and the policeman's occupation was gone. So the three were discharged. M. Gueshoff, son of the prime minister, who had been serving in the foreign ministry and was drawn as a reserve officer, perfected a plan for employing women in the ministry to replace men gone to the front. Twenty were so taken. They proved good diplomatists. That is, they were entrusted with the copying of confidential despatches, and they kept the secret.

In Servia, Too.

Servia's women's emancipation movement is becoming even better than Bulgaria's. It is older; and Servia has hundreds of women doctors, teachers and even some women engineers. Servia led almost all Europe in giving women a show of political power. In 1878 the year in which Servia finally threw off Turkish suzerainty, women were given the right to vote in municipal elections. Only twelve per cent. of adult women could then read and write. The right of municipal voting has never been exercised. The courts, when asked to decide on the matter, said wisely: "Women have a legal right to vote, but it can not be recognized as it is against the custom of Servia." The Servian Woman's Suffrage League is seven years old. It is always hovering on the verge of success. When woman doctors and teachers demanded a right to vote for the Skuptschina, they were backed by many eminent men, including Price Minister Pashitch. They lost by only six votes. Servian Social Democrats support, in theory, woman's suffrage, but they do not support it in practice, on the ground that the suffrage organization is unfriendly to them. For practical work, the suffragists have to rely on M. Vulowitsch, chief of the Young Radical party, and now minister of education. Vulowitsch works hard for the cause, and he has promised to open several new fields for women's activity in teaching. The present minister of the interior also backs Women's Rights. Other ministers are unfriendly. The famous war minister, Pavlowitsch proposed to employ women copyist clerks in the war office. His project caused an open revolt among the men.

A Fortune for Votes.

A real backer of the Servian suffragists is Prince Arsene Karageorfievitsch, brother of King Peter. Frivolous, brave, hardup Arsene, when he has any money—which is seldom—he gives small sums to the suffragist organization. He is a close friend of one of the most prominent suffragist leaders, Madame Marie Gruyitsch, the half-French widow of an agriculturist of Nisch. Madame Gruyitsch is a remarkably handsome woman. When her husband died in 1906, she gave half his property to the Woman's Suffrage League. She is now busy organizing a "National demand for votes," which is to be based on what women have done and suffered during the war. Forty-two Servian women, she says, have taken part as soldiers; and two were killed.

Thus do Bulgaria and Servia progress. From Montenegro and Albania come no echo of this emancipatory movement. But it is expected that the brave Montenegrin will show his thankfulness for his wife's services during the war by not whacking her so hard as is now the custom; and that the Albanian will yoke his wife less roughly to the plough.

NEW TYPE OF ENGINE.

Grahame-White Plans Hydro-Aeroplane to Cross Atlantic.

Great interest in Claude Grahame-White's project of crossing the Atlantic by hydro-aeroplane is being taken in aeronautical and scientific circles, where the general opinion is that the feat will be accomplished before long.

William Dartnell, a well-known engineer and member of the Aeronautical Society, expresses confidence in Mr. Grahame-White's ability to execute the task.

"I notice," said Mr. Dartnell, "that Grahame-White is designing a huge hydro-aeroplane in which he purposes to install a power plant of 1,000 horsepower in four units of 250 horsepower each. He states that the question of the carriage of fuel is a very important one, and he is quite right.

"The distance to New York by steamer is 3,100 nautical miles, and to fly this distance at the rate of 100 miles an hour at average speed would take thirty-one hours, while to produce 31,000 horsepower hours of work in propulsion with the existing types of engines would consume no less than 700 pounds of petrol an hour.

"This means that at the start the weight of fuel alone would amount to 9.687 plus tons, but it should be remembered that the machine would get 700 pounds lighter every hour on its voyage, so the speed for the same engine power would rise.

"As Mr. Grahame-White points out, the main difficulty will be to get the engines. So far as seen, there are at present no types of engine in this country of which it can be truthfully stated that they would be capable of successfully accomplishing a feat of this nature.

"A new type of engine is, however, now to be had for aeronautical work in which are embodied the characteristics of the marine engine, and will stand the load right through the voyage. Only 500 lbs. of fuel an hour would be required, and instead of starting with a fuel weight of 9.687 plus tons it would be only 6.91 tons.

"Drawings are out for this engine up to 260 horsepower at 900 revolutions a minute, and the weight per horsepower developed is very low."

If, as is generally supposed, the question of the engine is the pivotal point for a successful transatlantic flight. Mr. Dartnell's statements, should they be proved exact, point to the feat being accomplished at an earlier date than had been expected.

STREET NAMES OF LONDON

ONCE UPON A TIME THEY HAD A SPECIAL MEANING.

At This Day, However, It Is Impossible to Guess What Purport Was.

The street names of old London. What a wealth of conjecture and romance lies in them! Those who are most familiar with the London streets probably think least about their history. But the stranger who at rare intervals, or possibly for the first time in his life, visits the metropolis, must often speculate as to the origin of this or that thoroughfare, or wonder how some of the curiously named streets he passes through came by their names.

Since it has always been the custom in England to name the ways of towns and cities after somebody or something, one may be sure that every one of th names of London streets once had a special meaning, though that meaning has so much lost its point in the course of time, or the original spelling has been so corrupted that it is now in many cases practically impossible even to conjecture the original purport of many of the place-names of the metropolis.

Named After Taverns.

Many London thoroughfares, like many a country village, probably owe their names to the existence of some hostelry in the immediate neighborhood, and around which, in course of time, other houses were built so that at last a street was formed.

Hanging Sword Alley, near Liverpool Street Station, no doubt obtained its name in this manner. Gracechurch Street, city, is said to have had nothing to do with that particular virtue in the beginning, and perhaps there is more of it there nowadays than there used to be.

It was originally spelt "Grass Church," because of the grass that once grew along its edges, or on account of the fact that vendors of herbs dwelt there.

Holborn is another corruption of a perfectly different word. Originally it was "Old Bourne" or "Hill Bourne," so-called from the stream which broke out near where Holborn Bars afterward stood, and ran down the side of the street to the Fleet River.

From the latter, as everyone may suppose, Fleet Street took its name. And as a final example of the corruption of names, brought about by that loose regard for spelling and pronunciation that our forefathers entertained, one may instance the Barbican, which, as we are assured, is an easy rendering of the old word "burk kenning" — watch tower.

Aldgate was Oldgate.

The first name of Aldgate has been lost, but as it was supposed to have been the oldest of the four original gates of the city of London, it is easy to understand how it came to be known as "Old-gate," and from that to Aldgate was a simple transition. Aldersgate and Aldermanbury both doubtless take their names from the fact that that part of the city was the scene of the important functions held by the mayor and aldermen.

On the east side of Aldermanbury there formerly stood a hall in which the city dignitaries were wont to hold their court or levees. The origin of Bishopsgate is not clearly known, but it is supposed to have been built by some famous prelate in or about the year 1200, and named after him.

Piccadilly.

It is a little difficult in these days to believe that the area about Charing Cross was no more than a little village in the time of Edward I. Opinions differ as to the first meaning of the word "Cross" attached to the name of the hamlet, but it is probable that it had the same signification that is to be discovered in other cases of the kind in London and the country.

There have probably been cross-roads here from time immemorial, but it is said that in the case of Charing Cross there was a more specific reason. Edward I. is stated to have erected a cross in memory of his Queen on the spot where the statue of Charles I. was afterwards set up.

Piccadilly, if we may believe the usual explanation given for its curious name, was so called because the first person to build a house in that neighborhood was interested in "piccadilloes," by which name the stiff collars or ruffs formerly worn were originally known.

After the Fens.

Abundant evidence as to the marshy nature of the ground upon which a large part of the city of London was originally built is still to be discovered in such names as Fenchurch Street, Finsbury and Moorfields. The district traversed by the first of these was at one time nothing better than fenland, the Langbourn, a tributary of the Thames running across it.

Finsbury, for the same reason, was at first "Fensbury," but the alteration of a single letter has entirely destroyed all indications as to its insalubrious beginnings.

That area of the city now known as Moorfields must have taxed the ingenuity of the builder to no small extent when he first attempted to set houses upon it, for we are told that the ground was of such a squelchy nature that causeways of wood and stone had to be built across it before it could be traversed.

The religious associations of Paternoster Row are still upheld by the present residence in that quarter of those who deal in publications of that order.

"Are you hungry, little girl?" said Dr. Wendell Holmes to one whom he saw looking with longing eyes at the good things before her. "Yes, sir," was the reply. "Then why don't you take a sandwich?" "Because I haven't any fork." "Fingers were made before forks," said the doctor, smiling. The little girl looked, then said: "Not my fingers."

REAL ROOF GARDENS.

Norwegian Sod Roofs Are as Tight as Others.

The log cabins of rural Norway are built of heavy pine logs, hewed square, and of equal size from end to end. They are usually stained or oiled, and their rich yellowish or brownish color is in harmony with almost any surroundings. Their roofs are sodded—a circumstance that adds picturesqueness to the general effect.

"I have come across roofs that were a riot of wild pansies," says a writer in the Craftsman, "and I have seen wonderful roofs where wild roses hung over the eaves, or a daisy roof, the effect of whose white, star-like flowers, topping the dark brown structure, was exquisitely picturesque.

"Some roofs produce only pasture grass, and the story runs in Norwegian folk-lore that a lazy man led his cow on the roof—the cabin was built against a hill—instead of taking her to the pasture. I have no doubt that the story is true, for I have often seen a couple of white kidlets gamboling on the soft green housetops while the mother goat, grave and ruminative, was tethered to the chimney.

"Sod roofs are just as water-tight as others, if they are laid correctly. A board roof is first laid upon a house, and this is covered with a layer of birch bark. On top of this comes a layer of sod with the grass turned down to the roof. Then a rather thick layer of earth, and finally another layer of sod, this time with the grass up. The result is a most exquisite and poetical covering for the house."

Following the Receipt.

Mrs. Marsh took a bite of the cake, and laid it down hastily.

"Norah," she said, "did you follow the receipt, or do as you usually do and guess?"

"Sure, mum, I followed the receipt, only I put in six eggs instead of four, because two was bad, and I wanted to even 'em up."

The children's faces fell. It seemed almost as if they instinctively knew of the cloud that hung over their father. They had always known that he would some day come to them; but his name had been little mentioned. It was difficult to mention it without running the risk of the terrible questions which as children they were so likely to ask. All the gladness and spirit seemed to have left them. They were both shy, and the meeting with this unknown parent was a terror to them. They clung to Frithiof as he took them downstairs, and, catching sight of Cecil leaning back in one of the hall-chairs, they made a rush for her, and poured out all their childish fears as she clung to them and kissed them with all the tenderness of a real mother.

"We don't want to go and see father," said Lance, stoutly. "We had much rather not."

"But you must think that he wants to see you very much," said Cecil. "He remembers you quite well, though you have forgotten him; and now that he has come to you, you must both make him very happy, and love him."

"I don't like him at all," said Gwen, perversely.

"It is silly and wrong to say that," said Cecil. "You will love him when you see him."

"I love you," said Gwen, with a vehement hug.

"Have you only room for one person in your heart?"

"I rather love Herr Frithiof," said Gwen, glancing up at him through her eyelashes.

They both smiled, and Cecil, seeing that little would be gained by discussing the matter, got up and led them toward the drawing-room, her pale, brave face contrasting curiously with Gwen's rosy cheeks and rebellious little air.

Mr. Boniface sat talking to the new-comer kindly enough. They both rose as Cecil and the children entered.

"This is my daughter," said Mr. Boniface.

And Cecil shook hands with the ex-prisoner, and looked a little anxiously into his face.

He was rather a pleasant-looking man of five-and-thirty, and so much like Lance that she could not help feeling kindly toward him. She hoped that the children would behave well, and glanced at Gwen nervously.

But Gwen, who was a born flirt, speedily forgot her dislike, and was quite willing to meet the stranger's advances half-way. In two minutes' time she was contentedly sitting on his knee, while Lance stood shyly by, studying his father with a gravity which was, however, inclined to be friendly and not critical. When he had quite satisfied himself he went softly away, returning before long with a toy pistol and a boat, which he put into his father's hands.

"What is this?" said Mr. Grantley.

"It's my favorite toys," said Lance. "I wanted to show them you. Quick, Gwen, run and find your doll for father."

He seemed touched and pleased; and indeed they were such well-trained children that any parent must have been proud of them. To this ex-convict, who for years had been cut off from all child-life, the mere sight of them was refreshing. He seemed quite inclined to sit there and play with them for the rest of the evening. And Cecil sat by in a sort of dream, hearing of the new home that was to be made for the children in British Columbia—where land was to be had for a penny an acre, and where one could live on grapes and peaches, and all the most delicious fruits. Then, presently, with many expressions of gratitude for all that had been done for the children, Mr. Grantley took leave, and she led the little ones up to bed, leaving Mr. and Mrs. Boniface to go into the garden and tell Roy and Sigrid what had passed.

"How does Cecil take it?" asked Sigrid, anxiously.

"Very quietly," was the reply; "but I am afraid she feels losing them so soon."

Frithiof, with an uncomfortable recollection of what had passed in the garden, doubted if Mrs. Boniface fully understood the depth of Cecil's feelings. He left them talking-over the drawbacks and advantages of colonial life, and went in to his translating; but though he forgot the actual cause, he was conscious all the time of a disturbing influence, and even while absorbed in his work, had an irritating sense that something had gone wrong, and that trouble was in the air.

He went to bed and dreamed all night of Cecil. She haunted him persistently; sometimes he saw her leaning back on the garden-seat, with the narcissus just falling from her hand, sometimes he saw her with the children clinging to her as they had done in the hall.

From that time forward a great change came over his attitude toward her. Hitherto his friendship with her had, it must be owned, been chiefly selfish. He had always heartily liked her, had enjoyed being at Rowan Tree House, had fallen into the habit of discussing many things with her and valuing her opinion, but it was always of himself that he had thought—of what she could do for him, of what he could learn from her, or how much enjoyment he could get from her music and her frank friendliness, and her easy way of talking. It was not that he was more selfish than most men, but that they had learned really to know each other at a time when his heart was so paralyzed by Blanche's faithlessness, so crushed by the long series of misfortunes, that giving had been out of the question for him; he could merely take and make the most of whatever she could give him.

But now all this was altered. The old wounds, though to the end of his life they must leave a scar, were really healed. He had lived through a great deal, and had lived in a wey that had developed the best points in his character. He had now a growingly keen appreciation for all that was really beautiful—for purity, and strength, and tenderness, and for that quality which it is the fashion to call Altruism, but which he with his hatred of affectation in words, called goodness.

As he thought of Cecil during those days he began to see more and more clearly the full force of her character. Hitherto he had quietly taken her for granted; there was nothing very striking about her, nothing in the least obstrusive. Perhaps if it had not been for that strange little scene in the garden he would never have taken the trouble to think of her actual character.

Through the week that followed he watched her with keen interest and sympathy. That she should be in trouble—at any rate, in trouble that was patent to all the world—was something entirely new. Their positions seemed to be reversed; and he found himself spontaneously doing everything he could think of to please and help her. Her trouble seemed to draw them together; and to his mind there was something very beautiful in her passionate devotion to the children—for it was devotion that never in the least bordered on sentimentality. She went through everything very naturally, having a good cry now and then, but taking care not to make the children unhappy at the prospect of the parting, and arranging everything that they could possibly want, not only on the voyage, but for some time to come in their new home.

"She is so plucky!" thought Frithiof to himself with a thrill of admiration. For he was not all the sort of man to admire helplessness, or languor, or cowardice; they seemed to him as unlovely in a woman as in a man.

At last the actual parting came. Cecil would have liked to go down to the steamer and see the children start, but on thinking it over she decided that it would be better not.

"They will feel saying good-bye," she said, "and it had better be here. Then they will have the long drive with you to the docks, and by that time they will be all right again, and will be able to enjoy the steamer and all the novelty."

Mr. Boniface was obliged to own that there was sound common sense in this plan; so in their own nursery, where for nearly five years she had taken such care of them, Cecil dressed the two little ones for the last time, brushed out Gwen's bright curls, coaxed Lance into his reefer, and then, no longer able to keep back her tears, clung to them in the last terrible parting.

"Oh, Cecil, dear, darling Cecil," sobbed Lance, "I don't want to go away; I don't care for the steamer one bit."

She was on the hearth-rug, with both children nestled close to her, the thought of the unknown world that they were going out into, and the difficult future awaiting them, came sweeping over her; just as they were then, innocent, and unconscious, and happy, she could never see them again.

"Be good, Lance," she said, through her tears. "Promise me always to try to be good."

"I promise," said the little fellow, hugging her with all his might. "And we shall come back as soon as ever we're grown up—we shall both come back."

"Yes, yes," said Cecil, "you must come back."

But in her heart she knew that however pleasant the meeting in future years might be, it could not be like the present; as children, and as her own special charge, she was parting with them forever.

The carriage drove up to the door, there came sounds of hurrying feet and fetching and carrying of luggage; Cecil took them downstairs, and then, with a last long embrace from Lance, and kisses interspersed with sobs from Gwen, she gave them up to their father and turned to take leave of their nurse.

"I will take great care of them, miss," said the maid, herself crying, "and you shall hear from me regularly."

In another minute the carriage had driven way, and Cecil was left to make the best she might of what she could not but feel, at first, a desolate life.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

Hardly had the bustle of departure quieted down at Rowan Tree House when a fresh anxiety arose. Herr Sivertsen, who had for some time been out of health, was seized with a fatal illness, and for three days and nights Frithiof was unable to leave him; on the third night the old Norseman passed quietly away, conscious to the last minute, and with his latest breath inveighing against the degeneracy of the age.

"Frithiof is a rare exception," he said, turning his dim eyes toward Sigrid, who stood by the bedside. "And to him I leave all that I have. As for the general run of young men now-a-days—I wash my hands of them—a worthless set—a degenerate—"

His voice died away, he sighed deeply, caught Frithiof's hand in his, and fell back on the pillow lifeless.

(To be continued.)

BRITAIN'S NAVY AND ARMY.

Both are Strong, Says First Lord of the Admiralty.

In a recent speech at Dundee Winston Churchill, the First Lord of the Admiralty, spoke with great confidence of the British naval and military forces. He said:—"When I have an opportunity of addressing the House of Commons in March, I shall be called upon to do so on the naval estimates for the year. I am confident I shall be able to show that the navy is not only strong, but is getting stronger actually and relatively, and that there is no danger whatever to the great position we have acquired, and which we have set ourselves to maintain from being diminished or undermined by the progress of time or by the changes in naval science. We have also to co-operate with our sister service by land, and during the passage of the last few years the Admiralty have been working in ever closer accord with the War Office to secure the defence of these islands from all possible danger or menace. The furtherance of British policy, necessarily world-wide in its responsibilities, the guardianship of our empire, spread over the surface of the globe, require the joint action both of the land and sea forces of the Crown. The Army does not play so large a part in our forces, offensive or defensive, as the navy; does not compare with the standard of other Powers in anything like the same immense proportion of power; but I believe it to be perfectly true to say that the British army, although a small army—very small, indeed, compared to the forces of Continental nations—yet nourishes a military science, a knowledge and an originality of professional experience which place its ablest officers on a level with those even of the greatest armies on the Continent of Europe."

Vice may prosper but it doesn't pay.

A man seldom laughs at misfortune after he gets a personal introduction to it.

SPARKLING WATER, cool and sweet, refreshes the farmer who builds a
Concrete Well or Tank
THE FARMER, above all others, appreciates good water. He drinks more water than the city man. The city-dweller is dependent upon the public water-supply for the purity of his water, while the farmer can have his own private source of water, and thus be sure that it is pure and healthful.
MAN hasn't found a better drink than cool water, properly collected and stored. But in order to keep water fresh and pure, a tank or well casing that will keep out every possible impurity must be used.
CONCRETE IS THE IDEAL MATERIAL FOR TANKS AND WELL-CASINGS.
IT is absolutely water-tight, protecting your water from seepage of all kinds. It cannot rot or crumble. It is easily cleaned inside. Time and water, instead of causing it to decay, actually make it stronger.
THERE are scores of other uses for concrete on your farm—on every farm. If you would like to know of them, write for our book, "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete." The book is absolutely free.
OUR Farmers' Information Department will help you to decide how to build anything, from a porch-step to a silo. The service is free—you don't even have to promise to build. When in doubt ask the Information Department.

WILD TIMES AT OTTAWA

Deadlock in the Commons Continues—Much Bitterness on the Debate—Keeping Speakers to the Point.

The deadlock on the Government's Naval Bill in the House of Commons, which began on Monday, March 3rd, continued throughout last week, and will be resumed once Government orders are again reached. This may not be until Tuesday of next week after the Easter recess.

Liberals last week continued their speeches, paying major attention to the Churchill letter. Sir Wilfrid Laurier who was indisposed remained at his residence all week—those in charge of the Liberal discussion being Hon. G. P. Graham and Hon Wm. Pugsley, though of course they did not do all the speaking. The only variety early in the week was a suggestion of W. F. McLean, M.P., that the two parties get together and arrange a compromise. The principle was accepted on Friday evening by Hon. Charles Marcil, Liberal, who suggested that a committee of the House be appointed to work out a compromise.

COMPROMISE REFUSED

Then followed the following announcement by Hon. Robert Rogers: "In case there might be some misunderstanding with respect to the position of the Government in view of the statement made by the member for Bonaventure, I desire to say a word or two, not with any desire of prolonging the discussion. As members are well aware, this committee has been in continuous session night and day for two weeks The Government have extended to hon. gentlemen opposite the very widest latitude possible for the discussion of the important measure which is before us for consideration. We desire now to give hon. gentlemen opposite every possible opportunity of fair and reasonable discussion. If we propose to make any progress with this bill I think hon. gentlemen opposite cannot complain if the rules of debate are thereafter strictly adhered to. I can say more, and it is this, that the rules of debate which now apply to discussion shall not be found to be sufficient to enable progress to be made, then it will be the duty of the Government to at once introduce such rules as will enable progress to be made. We recognize our responsibility and our duty to our fellow-countrymen in this Dominion. We also recognize our duty to the Empire. Recognizing these duties, we say in all sincerity tonight that we, as a Government expressing as we do the views of such a large majority of the people of this Dominion, can best fulfil this duty to the Dominion and the Empire by passing this bill, and we intend to do it."

INCREASING BITTERNESS

This announcement was immediately followed by the application of the relevancy rule requiring a speaker to speak to the clause under consideration. J. A. M. Aikens was chairman. Between Friday midnight and 9.30 a. m. Saturday there were five divisions on points of order as follows:

12.25 a. m.—By a vote of 68 to 23, the House rules that Mr. Oliver is out of order because he discussed principle of the Navy Bill already approved.

6 a. m.—By 59 to 22, the house defeated Dr. Pugsley's motion that the Chairman vacate the Chair.

At 7.30—By 56 to 23, the House refused to rise for a few hours to prepare for Hon John Haggart's funeral.

At 8 00 a.m.—By 58 to 22, the House declared Hon. Mr Emmerson's remarks on altered British condition irrelevant

At 9.30 a. m.—The House sustains ruling that there can be no appeal to the House upon a question already appealed to the House.

RIOTOUS SCENES

But it was not until the late hours of Saturday night that proceedings became riotous. The House had been more or less disorderly all evening on both sides of the chamber, but the climax drew near about 9.30, when Mr. Robidoux, Kent, N. B., who was acting as chairman of the committee, rose to his feet apparently to rule upon a question of order which had been taken upon his assuming the chair at 5 o'clock. This point was to the effect that Mr. Robidoux had no authority to preside, having been called to the chair, not by the Speaker, but by Richard Blain of Peel who preceded him as temporary chairman of the committee. When Mr. Robidoux, as chairman, rose to end the protracted discussion, there were loud cries of protest from the opposition benches, and Dr. Pugsley stepping into the aisle in front of his desk insisted upon Dr. Neely, member for Humboldt, who had risen at the same time as the chairman, being heard first. In the uproar that followed many members on both sides of the chamber rose to their feet and there was a medley of cries and counter cries. Mr. Speaker Sproule, who a few moments before had entered the chamber in his robes of office, ascended the dias, and commanded order. His voice for the time was lost in the whirlwind of noise. He maintained his position, however, calling loudly upon the members to take their seats and directing the chairman of the committee to rule at once upon the question of order. In time nearly all the members resumed their seats, but the volume of noise but slightly abated.

In his place stood Dr. Michael Clark of Red Deer From his place of authority Mr. Speaker Sproule commanded silence.

"I will name you, Dr. Clark," he shouted to the Red Deer statesman, "for open defiance of the rules of the House."

It looked for the moment as though an appeal might be made to physical violence but the Prime Minister induced Mr. Clark to make an explanation and the Speaker to withdraw his censure. Dr. Clark stated that he had merely endeavored to ask by what rule or authority the Speaker had taken possession of the House, and that he had intended no disrespect to his honor or to the house.

A SECOND TUMULT

An hour later another contentious scene, but one much less turbulent, occurred. Mr. Blain of Peel was in the chair and Mr. Martin of Regina was speaking. The latter incidentally observed that a mild form of closure had been twice put in use that day. Chairman Blain, sharply called the member for Regina to order. "You must withdraw that remark," he said

"I will not," Mr. Martin retorted

In the colloquy which followed, amid uproar on both sides of the chamber, Mr. Martin said that members had been "gagged." This expression he later withdrew, but remained defiant by refusing to withdraw the reference to "closure" unless authority for the ruling could be shown him.

Another scene of confusion followed, and again the Speaker took the chair. He sustained Mr. Blain's ruling, and commanded Mr. Martin to withdraw his statement about closure. Again the Prime Minister intervened, and after statements by Mr. Graham and Mr Martin, it was agreed that the use of the term "closure" was not unparliamentary unless used offensively. Mr. Martin at once protested that he did not use it in an offensive sense, and this closed the incident.

Almost immediately afterwards the Prime Minister moved that the committee rise and report progress In doing so, he said that while the minority had rights, the majority must rule "I want to inform hon. gentlemen," he said, "that we propose to carry out that policy for which we have the mandate of the people."

DR. FRIEDMAN TREATS CANADIAN PATIENTS

Large Number of Consumptives in Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa and London Given Serum

Dr. Friedman, the German specialist who claims to have a serum which will cure tuberculosis, spent last week in Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, and London, treating more than one hundred patients, though a much larger number sought his aid. In the course of a statement Dr. Friedman said:

"So far I have vaccinated 350 children varying in age from one hour to three years. Most of these children were living in tubercular environments and much exposed to infection from this source. The earliest immunizations were made seventeen months ago and all the children are well to-do and free from all symptoms of scrofula or tuberculosis."

As might be expected the specialist's visit was attended with mingled joy and sorrow. The afflicted came in automobiles, carriages or on crutches In all cases a history of the patient's illness had to be written on a card for the specialist's careful inspection. He worked quietly and without fuss or feather, the actual injection of the serum in the knee joint or arm, occupying less than two minutes time. As patients were treated they passed out with new hope on their faces, and according to latest reports are on the way to recovery, though definite statement cannot be made as to this until four months have elapsed. But what of the scores who could not be treated? Some cases were too far advanced and had to be turned away on that account, while others were disappointed through lack of time to treat all. Turning homewards their's was a look of dispair, which words must fail to adequately depict One of the most pathetic incidents of his visit to Toronto was his treatment of several tiny patients in the Sick Children's Hospital These included five members of one family. No kindlier hand than that of Dr Friedman ever caressed a child, and onlookers describe his manner as kindly and sympathetic with all sufferers. He returned to New York on Saturday night where he continued his clinic this week By arrangements the progress of every Canadian patient will be reported to him in New York and it is expected that he will return to this country in about four months

Grand Trunk System News Items

Noted railway engineers and prominent officials from all parts of Canada and the United States will attend the annual convention of the American Railway Engineering Association to be held in Chicago at the Congress hotel, March 18 21 next. In addition to the election of officers and other routine business, reports will be read and discussed on such topics as railway rules and organization, signals and interlocking, iron and steel structures, rails, the economics of railway location, wooden bridges and trestles, wood preservation, ties, masonry, the conservation of natural resources, ballast, water service, yards and terminals, electricity, records and accounts. On Tuesday evening next a reception will be given to members of the Association and their guests in the gold room of the Congress hotel when Past President Mr. Wm. McNab, principal assistant engineer of the Grand Trunk Railway System will deliver an illustrated lecture on the Panama Canal. Among the Grand Trunk representatives who will be in attendance at the convention are:—Messrs. H. R. Safford, chief engineer; Wm. McNab, principal assistant engineer; A. S.
