Chesterville Loses First In Softball Title Series

Hallville, in First Place, Takes Lead In First Game of Best Two-Out-of Three Series.

Last evening on the local diamond, in the first game of a best two-out-of-three series for the championship of the Dundas Softball League, Hallville defeated the home team by 8 to 5 in a game that was hardly up to championship form. Hallville went into the lead with a pair of counters in the first frame and were never headed although the locals drew up on even terms and had the winning runs on the bags but could not produce the hit to carry them over. The return game will be played in Hallville Friday night and the third game if necessary in Winchester, Monday evening.

Truck Driver Uninjured As Machihe Lands on Cab

Crowded Off Highway East of Town Late Saturday Night, Machine Suffers Slight Damage.

Turning his truck over with its four wheels in the air when crowded off the highway east of Chesterville about midnight, Saturday, the driver of a vehicle owned by Wm. Lalonde, Moose Creek, escaped without a scratch, and with but slght injuries to the truck.

The truck, a 1937 Ford dump, was proceeding to Moose Creek from Lyn when crowded off the highway opposite the farm of John McLean, two miles east of town and landed on its cab in the ditch. A call was made for Lannin's wrecker and after a difficult struggle with block and tackle and the wrecker the truck was righted and went on its way.

Beauty Spot in Nation Result of Nestle's Dam

Fine Body of Water Also Makes Ideal Swimming Pool These Hot Days. —Water Level Raised Six Feet.

The youngsters of Chesterville have this week been the first of our citizens to taste the benefit accruing from the erection of a dam in the Nation river a short distance below the Main street bridge by the Nestlé's Milk Products Co. It has provided an ideal swimming pool which has been taken much advantage of during the recent torrid days. The dam has been very substantially built of cement and timber by the contractor, Emerson Faulkner. A depth of from six to seven feet of water is provided at the dam, with the water backed up to a nice level for a considerable distance up-stream, turning an unsightly scene to a very pleasing view. It is reported the water has raised above the rapids at W. A. McElroy's, a mile and a half above town.

Long Shots & Wide Draws

News From the Lawn Bowling Greens as Picked up By The Kitty.

Friday the 13th proved unlucky for the local trundlers when they met Winchester on the Chesterville greens for the first round of the Governor-General's cup. The game had to be postponed from Thursday account of the wet and at one time during the day looked like rain checks would be in order when another thunderstorm passed over. Doc Hutt had a battle on his hands before he finally won from Tom VanBridger by one shot, but Bill Dixon was not so lucky and took a trimming from Bill Johnston who was running true to form with his wicks.

Saturday night Iroquois eliminated Ottawa L.B.C. by one shot on the local greens in two of the closest games seen in these parts in many a day. F. Sheppard and C. Fisher skipped the Iroquois entry while J. H. Carkner and E. D. Berry skipped the Ottawa L.B.C. Iroquois met New Edinburgh on Central Greens Wednesday.

School Nurse Addresses Berwick Women's Institute

The August meeting of the Berwick Women's Institute was held in the Community Hall on Thursday evening with a good attendance. Mrs. Rutley, the president, was in the chair. After the opening, and business was dispensed, a splendid programme was enjoyed.

Miss Lefler, of Finch, school nurse, was the guest speaker, taking for her topic the care of children, how we can decrease the death rate by proper diet and care. Miss Lefler has a pleasing personality and should be an asset to the community.

The following young ladies took part in the musical part of the programme: Guitar duet by the Misses Fetterly and Carr; vocal duet by Barbara Lyons and Lorna Ouderkirk; tap dancing by little Miss Cranth, Ottawa; duet by Jean and Dorothy Carr, playing their own guitar accompaniment.

The meeting was brought to a close by the playing of the National Anthem by Masters Neil McLean, Finch, and Carson Elliott, of Berwick, of the Finch Boys' Band. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Miss Lefler and all who took part to make the evening a success, by Mrs. Geo. Pollock and Mrs. Robt. Stark. Lunch was served and a social hour spent. The Finch branch was present as guest of the Berwick W. I.

Berwick and Riverside Friends Shower Miss M. McMillan

Pleasant Evening Spent at Home of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Pollock Monday.—Tea Wagon Presented.

A very pleasant evening was spent on the lawn at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Pollock when the friends of Berwick and Riverside communities gathered in honour of Miss Mildred McMillan, bride-elect, Monday.

To the strains of "Here Comes the Bride," played by Mrs. Lorne Hutt, Miss Eileen MacLean escorted the bride-to-be to the verandah which was prettily decorated with white bells and garden flowers. The bride's bouquet was presented by Miss Lois Casselman. Mrs. Aden Casselman read a very appropriate address and the presentation of a lovely tea wagon was made by Miss Barbara Hutt and Miss Helen Casselman, former pupils of Miss McMillan.

Miss McMillan replied with a few pleasant remarks, thanking them all and inviting them to her future home in Montreal.

After a shower of confetti and the singing of "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow," a dainty lunch was served. The remainder of the evening was spent in community singing and games led by Rev. Mr. Beach of Finch.

FAREWELL PARTY TUESDAY.

On Tuesday evening a group of fifty or sixty friends gathered in the Odd Fellows' Hall in honour of Jack Elmsley who has been transferred by the Bank of Montreal to Perth.

The evening was spent in dancing and games. A delightful lunch was served about 11.30 when George Hosie made the presentation address and presented Jack with a fine pen and pencil as a token of the high regard in which he was held in Chesterville by his friends.

DIED AT THE BOYNE.

The funeral took place yesterday from the home of Mr. Samuel Hummel, The Boyne, of Miss Lizzie McArthur, who passed away Monday after a lingering illness of several months. Interment was made in the Williamsburg cemetery. She is survived by her sister, Mrs. S. Hummel, and two brothers, George and Duncan McArthur.

The very warm days of late have been hard on men and animals, and the storm on Sunday evening, August 1st, was severe. Three and a quarter inches of rain fell, accompanied by wind and hail. A number of farmers were completely hailed out and many gardens were totally destroyed. The greatest sufferers here were Messrs. Dobie Byers, Thos. McMahon, John Perras, H. Carruthers, Jake Smirle, A. Norton and Joe Hebert. Much hay has been lost and destroyed by being under water. We hear of some complaining of potatoes rotting owing to so much wet weather and excessive heat. However, grass is good and the dairy cattle are producing plenty of milk and cheese prices are fair: 3.02 milk paid $1.00 per hundred.

Mr. Thos. J. McMahon and family were calling on old friends here the past few days. Mr. McMahon was looking after the interests of his farm here with a view to re-renting.

Mr. A. E. Thompson is having a well drilled close to his dwelling.

Mr. Hugh Thompson has started out with his threshing machine but is held up with wet weather.

Mr. J. M. Reveler and family spent last week end with his parents here, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Reveler.

Dr. and Mrs. J. G. Countryman, of Saskatoon, called here for a couple of hours after an absence of 17 years. Only a few of his friends met him.

A lady and her daughter and family called here a few days ago after an absence of 50 years endeavouring to locate the whereabouts of her sister and mother whom she left here when her half-brother took her to New York State, near Potsdam. She was the daughter of the late Thomas McKee and his wife, Agnes Barkley.

Mr. and Mrs. Murray Francis and children, of Prescott, are spending the week with Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Flegg.

Mrs. John Scott, of Winchester, was visiting at the home of her son, Mr Richard Scott, last week.

Mr. Wallace Smith, of Winchester, was visiting at the home of Mr. Jerry Presley last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Graham and children, of Cornwall, took tea with Mr. and Mrs. Richard Scott on Sunday.

Visitors at the home of Mr. John Redmond last week were Mr. and Mrs. Donald Redmond and children, Mrs. Rugles Desjardine, of Winchester, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hendrick, of Canton, N.Y.

The neighbours and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Loucks (née Helen Shaver), of The Ninth, met at the home of Mrs. Joseph Shaver and tendered them a reception Friday evening. The evening was quietly spent and at about 11 the young couple was asked to take the seats of honour and presented with miscellaneous gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Loucks thanked their friends for their kindness and lunch was then served.

Judge: "I think you should be ashamed of yourself, being in this court so often!"

Prisoner: "Yes, but I'm not here any oftener than your honour is."

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture

FAMOUS COW IMMORTALIZED.

A unique ceremony of interest to many live stock breeders was the unveiling of the life-size statue of the famous Holstein cow, Springbank Snow Countess, on Civic Holiday, August 4th, at a point on Highway No. 2 near Woodstock. His Honour Dr. H. A. Bruce, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, performed the ceremony. This cow was such a great milk and butter producer that she brought fame to her owner, T. R. Dent, and to Oxford County. She produced in ten lactations 201,059 pounds of milk with a record of 9,062 pounds of fat, creating a new record among all dairy breeds anywhere in the world. She was owned by Mr. Dent throughout her lifetime of sixteen years. She died a year ago shortly after giving birth to a calf and the Holstein-Friesian Associaton of Canada decided to immortalize her at a cost of nearly $4,000. The life-size statue stands on a granite pedestal in a specially-prepared plot not far from the highway where passing motorists may stop and marvel at the Countess' past glory. Floodlights will illuminate the scene.

FOR HENS IN PENS.

For the young chicks or the breeding hen, milk should be used in some form especially for those flocks that are kept confined to pens or yards. Flocks that have free access to tender green grass pasture will not require as much milk as the confined groups. In fact, if a flock has access to an abundance of tender pasture then milk may be omitted as long as the vegetation is tender and abundant. Milk should be added to the ration whenever the pasture grasses become dry and tough.

In recent years a number of proprietary preparations have been offered poultrymen as milk substitutes. Several of these products claim to be equal to milk as a suppement to the ration for chicks. The dairymen will find that in some sections these products offer serious competition for his creamery and cheese factory by-products. The poultryman is anxious to know these substitites will give him more feed value for a dollar than he can get in milk by-products.

It is true that milk substitutes can be made. Some samples of liver meal are excellent while other samples are unsatisfactory as substitutes for milk. An occasional sample of fish meal or meat scrap can be combined with grains by-products to produce a chick ration of the best quality. As a rule, results will be much better if some milk is combined with these feeds.

CURRENT CROP REPORT.

The yield of fall wheat in Ontario is estimated at 26.7 bushels to the acre, which is a good average, but considerably below that anticipated some weeks ago due to black rust in Essex and Kent counties and red rust in other sections, as well as considerable light and shrunken grain caused by lodging and too rapid maturity. Cutting of spring grains is about completed in Western Ontario and has been general in Eastern Ontario. Although seeding was extremely late this season, plentiful supplies of moisture brought the crops along very rapidly and in Old Ontario yields will range from average to above average for barley, mixed grains and the main crop of oats. Very warm, dry weather in late July and early in August caused late oats to ripen prematurely and rust which is prevalent in Central and Eastern Ontario will lower the yield considerably. In Northern Ontario growth of spring grains was retarded by drought from seeding time to July 10th. Since then however, frequent heavy rains have been received throughout Northern Ontario and a near average crop of spring grains may be harvested. Fodder corn is about an average crop in most of the province except parts of Southwestern Ontario where fields were damaged by too much moisture.

The early potato crop has been harvested and the second early crop is beginning to move. The yield is good in Southwestern Ontario, but disappointing in the Central portion of the province, in many cases not over 75 bags to the acre. Haying has been unusually prolonged. In Southern Ontario the quality of most of the crop is low as a result of frequent rains and the fact that many fields were well-matured before cutting. Pastures have been good to excellent during July in Old Ontario and live stock have made very satisfactory gains.

Nine Days Are Packed Full For 50th Ottawa Exhibition

Action, thrills, amusement, music, educational factors and everything to please are packed into the nine big days by which the Ottawa Exhibition will mark its fiftieth anniversary commencing on Thursday, August 19, and continuing to Saturday midnight, August 28th.

The big midway will be in place for the first arrivals on the opening day, and will continue through nine days and nights with the latest in rides and shows on a scale not before assembled in Ottawa. Displays in all the buildings, with the exception of live stock and poultry, will be complete in every detail for the entire time. There will, however, be a complete change in the grandstand programme. Featured for the first night will be Chaudiere, a historic pageant with a cast of 800, superbly staged and costumed and trained to the minute. Lucky Teter and his Hell Drivers who have been the sensation of the amusement world for two years, will give a performance each of the first three nights and what they do with automobiles and motorcycles makes the audience gasp. Another feature will be Cavalcade, depicting famous riders of the ages. A spectacular fireworks display will close each grandstand programme.

Music for the first three days will include the Governor-General's Foot Guards Band, the Ottawa Boys' Band, the Capital City Boys' Band, the Free Academy Girls' Band of Ogdensburg, and the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps Band.

Commencing on Monday, August 23, Edwin Franko Goldman and his internationally famed band will give two free concerts each day, without any extra charge for exhibition patrons. In the grandstand programme for the last six days will be vaudeville of a standard which will eclipse all previous programmes, a great music and dance presentation, The Revue of Tomorrow, with a cast of talented artists who have made good on Broadway and in Hollywood, mostly pretty girls; horse races, sports and other features. Commencing on Monday, August 23, for five nights, there will be a horse show in the Coliseum. The dog show will be from Wednesday to Friday.

This year an exceptionally fine display of live fish, game birds and wild animals will be made by the Ontario Fish and Game Department. Automobile show, baby show, live stock, poultry, pets, pure food show, displays by merchants and manufacturers, junior agriculture demonstrations, child welfare, government exhibits handicrafts and a hundred and one other free features will make nine days which to miss will be to store up regret.

Stop Reckless Driving!

If you drive recklessly and have not made up your mind to stop it, you are going to find yourself in serious trouble —soon! The Department of Highways is determined to put reckless drivers off the road and keep them off. If you need your car in business, stop and think for a minute what would happen if you had your driving license cancelled. You might lose your job. But what is your job compared to the death, crippling, or injuring of a good citizen!

Reckless drivers are criminals going along our highways breaking laws, maiming and killing defenseless people. Our laws are adequate and fair. Obey them and you will keep out of trouble; break them and take the consequences.

You cannot say you have not been warned. Stop speeding! Stop cutting in! Stop passing on hills. Stop taking chances of any kind. If you must drive slower than the average traffic, keep well to the right side of the highway or use the side roads. Do not block other traffic.

ONTARIO MOTORISTS WILL CO-OPERATE

to put reckless drivers where they belong. Here is what to do. When you see a motorist driving in a manner dangerous to the public, take his number, make a careful note of the actual time and place and when you reach your destination write to the Motor Vehicles Branch, Department of Highways, Toronto, giving full details. We do not invite reports of minor infringements of the traffic laws; you are requested to use sound judgment. We will deal adequately with offenders.

Notice.

AS a condition of the building of a dam below the village by Nestlé's Milk Products Ltd., the Municipal Council was required to collect the outoutflow of certain drains emptying into the river and deliver it below the dam.

The dam is completed and an interceptor drain is in operation

We now have a fine body of clean water where formerly we had a condition that was a disgrace to the village. This body of water will provide amply for the needs of Nestlé's and for fire protection. It also provides a swimming pool and boating facilities for those who care to use it.

For these purposes as well as for public health and as a matter of civic pride, the water in the pond must be kept clean.

We have provided a large refuse dump, convenient to the village for the use of all citizens. The council makes one general clean-up each spring. There are several persons who make a business of collecting refuse and garbage to be taken to the municipal refuse dump and therefore there is no longer any excuse for depositing waste materials of any kind either in the river, upon its banks or upon the streets.

The pollution of the water in the river, the use of the river banks or village streets as a dumping place for refuse can no longer be allowed.

Without further notice offenders will be promptly prosecuted.

Merkley—In loving memory of my dear mother, Mrs. Peter Merkley, who passed away August 17th, 1936.

Dear Mother, when I think of you
And think of how you died,
To think you couldn't say good-bye
Before you closed your eyes;
How our hearts still ache with sadness,
Our eyes shed many a tear.
God alone knows how we miss you
As it ends the first sad year.

The subject of the essay was "Tides," and little Wile did the subject full justice. This is what he wrote:

"There are all kinds of tides. First of all we have the spring tide and the nead tide, then there's the Yuletide, and tongue-tied, and woe-betide, and eventide and noontide. And I expect there's a tidy lot more I do't know about."

Up to a century ago in Europe numerous peasant slept with their feet — instead of their head — on the pillow, in the belief the feet did the harder work and, therefore, were more entitled to comfort.

The world's oddest produce exchange building is in The Hague, in the Netherlands. A canal, 20 feet wide, flows right through the middle of its big board room. Its members, sitting in tiered seats on both sides of the waterway, make their bids and buy the fruits and vegetables as the loaded barges sail past.

In Tokyo, Japan, a large and expensive restaurant not only employs the most beautiful hostesses and waitresses in the city but also maintains a special beauty shop where they are made up by experts—like movie stars—before they serve patrons.

An English humane society is now purchasing the hundreds of surviving British war horses which, although pitifully enfeebled, are still being worked on the farms of Belgium and France. These animals, left behind in 1918, are being returned to England to live the rest of their days in idleness.

Each summer in Japan numerous villages compete in flying giant kites, some of which are 3,000 square feet in area, weigh half a ton, cost nearly $1,000 and require 200 men to hold steady while in the air. In a stiff wind even this number cannot hold some of the kites and those who hang on too long are carried up and fall to their deaths.

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

ROVER SCOUT MAKES RECORD FOR 100-MILE RUN

A new record for running 100 miles was established recently by Rover Scout Hardy Ballington, of Durban, South Africa, when he covered that distance, from Box, near Bath, to Hyde Park Corner, London, in 13 hours, 21 minutes and 19 seconds. The previous record was held by an Englishman, Arthur Newton, who at the age of 51 covered the same route in 14 hours, 11 minutes and 30 seconds. Rover Scout Ballington did his training over the "Comrades Marathon" course, a 54 miles' gruelling run through mountainous country between Durban and Pietermaritzburg, South Africa.

HOW TO RESCUE A DOG FROM A WELL

Boy Scout ingenuity and the Scout rule of kindness to animals were exemplified by two Parksville, B.C., Scouts in responding to the yelping of a dog which indicated that the animal was in trouble. Tracing the sound the boys located the unfortunate animal in an old, partly caved-in 45-foot well. Obviously it would be extremely dangerous to attempt a descent to the dog. The boys found another solution. They secured a box large enough to accommodate the animal, "baited" it with a sandwich and lowered it by a wire. The hungry dog jumped into the box for the sandwich, and the boys hauled him up.

ONTARIO'S NEW TRAINING CENTRE FOR SCOUT LEADERS

"Blue Springs Scout Reserve," the former Blue Springs Park, near Acton, Ont., the 100-acre property which is to be developed as a training centre for Ontario Scout leaders, was formally dedicated July 21st. The acquiring of the Reserve was made possible by a memorial contribution received from the family of the late Fred. J. Mann, of Toronto, and a donation to the Provincial Council of the Boy Scouts Association by the late Col. R. W. Leonard of St. Catharines. The keen interest of Mr. Mann and Col. Leonard in the Scout Movement was commemorated in connection with the opening of the Reserve by the unveiling of a rustic stone monument. The main entrance to the Reserve is marked by a stockade gateway, a reproduction of a pioneer day blockhouse.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

MISS HELEN LACEY, B.H.Sc.

TOMATOES FOR BREAKFAST, DINNER AND SUPPER.

I DO NOT MEAN to suggest that you should serve tomatoes for breakfast, dinner and supper all on the same day. That would be too much repetition. But what is nicer than starting the day with a glass of ice cold tomato juice. You can make your own tomato juice too—and if tomatoes are plentiful it will be cheaper to serve than buying it already made.

TOMATO JUICE.

Wash tomatoes and cut in small pieces. For each quart of tomatoes add one teaspoon salt, one tablespoon sugar and a small slice of onion. Cook until the tomatoes are very tender, stirring frequently. Press through a sieve. Pour into jars, filling them to wthin an inch of the top. Adjust the rubber and the top and seal. Place on a rack in a boiler of water, having the water well over the top of the jars. Bring to boiling point and boil for 20 minutes. Remove from the water, cool and store on shelves until ready for use.

It is well to taste the juice before bottling as tastes vary as to seasoning.

CANNED TOMATO SOUP.

1 peck ripe tomatoes
5 onions
1 bunch celery
¼ cup granulated sugar
¼ cup salt
½ cup flour
¼ teaspoon red pepper

Boil tomatoes, onions and celery together until very tender, and strain. Add sugar, salt, flour and red pepper. Bring to the boil again and seal in sterilized jars. When ready to use, add an equal quantity of milk and if soda is added remember the vitamin content of tomatoes will be destroyed. If the milk used is fresh there should be no difficulty from curdling.

FRIED RIPE TOMATOES.

6 tomatoes
Crumbs
Salt and Pepper

Select firm, ripe tomatoes, wash them and cut in half-inch slices without removing the skins. Season fine bread crumbs with salt and pepper and dip each slice in the crumbs, and fry in butter. Serve hot.

STUFFED TOMATO SALAD.

6 tomatoes
¾ cup diced cucumbers
½ cup diced cooked chicken
¼ cup chopped nuts
¼ cup mayonnaise

Select medium-sized, smooth tomatoes. Scald, peel and chill. Carefully scoop the inside out of the tomatoes. Chill all ingredients and when ready to serve mix the diced chicken, cucumber, tomato pulp and nuts with the mayonnaise. Fill the tomatoes with this mixture. Arrange on lettuce leaves. Garnish with mayonnaise and a sprig of mint or watercress.

BAKED TOMATOES.

This makes an excellent supper dish.

6 medium-sized tomatoes
Few drops onion juice
Salt and pepper
1 cup dry bread crumbs

Remove a thin slice from the stem-end of each tomato. Scoop out the centres and add this pulp to the dry bread crumbs seasoned with salt, pepper and onion juice. Fill the centres Place a small piece of bacon on the top of each tomato and bake in a hot oven 20 minutes.

CASSEROLE OF TOMATOES AND EGGS

6 hard-cooked eggs
3 ripe tomatoes
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
2 teaspoons salt
1½ cups milk
½ cup grated cheese
Buttered bread crumbs

Cut the hard-cooked eggs in half and arrange around the edge of a greased casserole or baking dish. Slice peeled, ripe tomatoes in the centre of the dish. Make a white sauce of the butter, flour, salt and milk and add cheese to it. Stir over low heat until the cheese is well mixed and smooth. Pour over the tomatoes and eggs. Cover with crumbs and bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven. Pieces of bacon may be placed on top of the crumbs if desired.

Sauces add variety to the diet, make foods more attractive to the eye and to the palate, and thus stimulate appetite, and digestion and improve nutrition.

In cooking, learn to measure accurately. It will not do to use a heaping teaspoon, tablespoon or cup when a level one is meant. To change proportions by wrong measuring causes poor results.

THE WISDOM OF WHITE-AROUND-THE-HEAD

THE FURIOUS STORM beat against the lonely little schoolhouse on the Panhandle prairie. If the building had not been secured by long iron rods fastened to the corners of the house and to heavy iron planks buried deep in the ground the wind would have swept it from the foundation. The loose windows rattled as the blizzard beat against them. The driving snow piled high outside and sifted through every crack and cranny in the old weather-beaten building. Miniature mountain ranges of snow formed on the window sills inside and along the floor next the walls.

Don Weston, the teacher, turned from the window where he had been hopefully watching for some ranch team to take the children home. Now at last he knew that no help could reach them. The pupils saw the troubled look in his blue eyes and noticed the absence of his habitual smile. Don had been graduated from an Eastern college in June, and the quest of adventure had brought him to the Panhandle. At the urgent request of ranchmen, he had agreed to teach at the Ranger School.

"Heap bad blizzard, teacher!" exclaimed White - around - the - head, a young Indian of fifteen years, whom Don, after helping him with his studies during the summer, had induced to attend school that winter.

"Do you have many storms like this out here?" he inquired.

"Don't remember any since my father came here to live like the white men," answered White-around-the-head. "I remember my grandfather, the great warrior chief, Eagle Feather; he tell me about a storm that buried the trails and covered the grass so that nearly all of the ponies and cattle perished. He was only a boy, but he found the way home to the cave in the cliff where they were living that winter."

A murmur of disapproval from the white boys greeted this talk of White-around-the-head about the success of his warrior ancestor. They did not like the young Indian or the consideration that the teacher showed him.

Don walked around the little room thoughtfully. It had begun to snow about ten o'clock, and at three o'clock the storm had broken into an ominous roar. He turned and looked again at White-around-the-head, who was clad in full Indian attire—leather leggings, deerskin coat, a wolfskin headgear and heavy moccasins. In the morning Don had asked White-around-the-head why he dressed in that heavy garb on a warm day.

"Heap bad storm here before night," the boy had answered.

"The call of the wild," thought Don as he looked at the young Indian.

From a hook, formed by fastening the prong of an antelope's horn into the wall, hung the neatly coiled rawhide lariat that White-arund-the-head always carried with him. When walking, he wore it around his neck like a huge doughnut; when at home or at school, he slipped it over his head and hung it within easy reach.

"Why do you bring this lariat to school?" Don had once asked him.

"Maybe need him sometime," the Indian lad had answered.

The chill in the little schoohouse increased, and it was too dark to study. Don told the children to close their books and gather around the stove.

"Jim," he said, turning to the son of the ranchman with whom he roomed, "did you bring in all of the coal?"

"Every speck, teacher."

"For a few moments Don stood with folded arms looking at the children as if trying to gauge their powers of endurance. "No, they never can do it," he declared to himself. "It is better for them all to die here than for them to scatter and perish one by one."

"Teacher, can't we go home?" asked several of the children. "It is getting dark and we've a long way to go."

"No one can go out in this storm alone. I have been hoping that some of your fathers would come in a big wagon—I don't dare let you start out alone. You would lose your way in this storm and perish."

"I don't see why Joe doesn't come with the mules," said Jim Ranger in a troubled voice. "He's almost always here before three o'clock on stormy days."

"Something has delayed him," answered his sister Martha, hoping to quiet the younger children, some of whom were beginning to cry.

"Joe's sure to come," continued Jim, "and we must wait for him, because—because—" The lad's lip quivered, and he could not complete the sentence.

"Teacher," said a voice in a strange whisper. Don turned to face White-around-the-head, who had not joined the others near the stove. "Teacher, if you'll trust Indian, I can take you all to the ranger ranch; and, teacher, I'm the only one here who can take you."

Don thought he caught the gleam of a thousand ancestral camp fires in the boy's eyes. Something had to be done quickly, for the winter night—a night never to be forgotten in the history of the Panhandle — was settling down rapidly over the plains. The fire had burned out, and the room was very cold· the children shivered in their wraps.

"What makes you think that you can lead us to the Ranger ranch, White-around-the-head?" asked Don.

"Teacher," answered the Indian lad, "my ancestors found their way over these plains long before the white man found his way across the wide ocean to our land. My people have always been at home in the storms as well as in sunshine. My grandfather was a great warrior chief; he found—"

"Teacher, don't listen to that Indian!" broke in Tom Jones. "He doesn't know these prairies a bit better than I do. I've ridden the range here for five years, and I can come as near as anybody to finding the way; but I doubt whether anybody can find the way in this storm. So don't you listen to him."

"Something must be done at once, Tom," answered Don. "I'm going to hear what White - around - the - head proposes to do. How do you expect to reach the Ranger ranch?"

"We must first make sure that we can keep together," answered the Indian lad. He caught up his lariat and whirled it around his head; there was a sudden swishing sound, followed by exclamations of "Oh—oh—oh!" as the members of the group found themselves inside the circle of rawhide.

"Take hold of the lariat with one hand—so," he explained. "Keep the other hand free for the one next to you. All keep inside the lariat and in touch with one another. I'll lead the way."

"Your plan looks like our only hope," declared Don as he buttoned his overcoat and tied a muffler around his ears. "Are you all securely wrapped—coats buttoned, ears covered?"

"I think we're ready," answered Martha Ranger as she gripped the hand of her younger sister so tightly that Rachel protested.

"Wait a minute," directed Don. He tore a blank leaf from a book, wrote a hasty explanation of what they were trying to do and placed the note on his desk. He put his bell on it so that the wind would not blow it away.

"We'll form two lines," explained White - around - the - head when they were ready to start. "Teacher, if you will be the last one and see that none of the smaller ones fall out, I'll lead."

He deftly fastened the ends of the lariat to his belt, and out into the storm-swept night marched the little procession of teacher and twelve pupils, depending on the intuition and courage of the Indian lad to lead them three-quarters of a mile through a whirling, blinding storm. The children shuddered, and the girls gave startled screams as the sleet cut their faces. The icy blast chilled them all to the bone. Don's heart sank within him as he thought of the terrible odds against their ever reaching the Ranger ranch, the nearest possible shelter. He would do his best and die with them if necessary—that was all any man could do.

"Close up the two lines," he directed; "grip the lariat with one hand; with the other grasp the hand of the companion by your side."

Finding that he could not make his voice heard above the roar of the storm, he placed the hands of the two children next to him as he wanted them, and they in turn communicated his instructions to the other children in front. They now formed a solid rank, two abreast, each child holding the hand of another and at the same time gripping the lariat.

"White-around-the-head is down in the snow," came the word passed along the line back to the teacher. Before Don could go forward to see why he had fallen the Indian lad was up again, and the procession moved forward, changing its course slightly.

"The Indian is lost," protested Jim Ranger, who was just ahead of Don. "He's not going toward our ranch. It lies north from here, and we're going south."

"We're all confused by the storm, Jim," answered Don. "I can't tell what direction we are going."

"The Indian's down on his knees in the snow again!" shouted Tom Jones a few minutes later. "He's either praying to his ancestors or he's played out. I'm going to strike out independent and find help. We'll all perish this way."

"We need you here to help the weaker members of our party keep their places," answered Don with his teeth chattering from the stinging cold.

"Well, I should have led the party from the first!" growled Tom. "I'll go a little longer, but if we don't come out somewhere I'm going to strike out by myself. I told you I rode this range five years, and I ought to know it better than that young Indian."

There was a sudden jerk on the lariat as little Fannie Palmer fell into the snow, unable to go any farther.

"Here, Tom," called Don, "we'll place Fannie on our clasped hands, and she can cling to our arms and keep her place!"

Tom obeyed with alacrity, glad of an opportunity to do something extra. They found the weight of Fannie no small burden; and in addition they had to keep the others in their places, for the strength of all the members of the little party was failing rapidly.

Again to their dismay White - around-the-head went down into the snow. He remained there, feeling in the snow, for some time; Don was about to go forward to see if the lad had given out when he was again on his feet, moving forward as fast as it was possible for the weary procession to go.

Don saw that the younger members of the party were lagging against the lariat. "This can't continue much longer," he said to himself. "I wonder if it would be possible for us to dig our way into a big drift and construct a snow shelter for the night."

A few minutes later, when the procession was brought to a sudden stop because White-around-the-head had gone down on his knees once more, Don hurried forward to see if the Indian lad were exhausted. He took him by the arm and tried to lift him to his feet. At first he met with stout resistance, while the boy continued to claw into the snow.

"Let me alone," he protested. "I can do it if you'll let me alone."

"What's the matter, White-around-head?" inquired Don in a firm but kindly tone. "Are you tired out?"

"Me, tire out, teacher? Why, I can go on and on." With that he started up and sprang forward with renewed energy, making it very difficult for the rest to keep pace with him.

They had only gone a few rods when Johnny Swenson sank down into the deep snow, and Don knew that the deadly stupor that precedes freezing had begun to take possession of the boy.

"Tom, can you help carry another?" he called.

"I'll do my best, teacher."

"Thank you, Tom; I knew you would. I'll take Johnny on my back. He'll have to keep awake in order to hold on. We can carry Fannie as before."

"No, teacher, that won't do; you'll give out. We're helpless if we lose you, for no one'll mind anyone else. I'll take Fannie on my back and hold the lariat with one hand and a boy with the other."

So they set forward, knowing that if they did not find help soon they would have to sink into a heap and perish together. Presently White-around-the-head stopped and held up his hand.

"Listen!" he commanded.

"The storm's getting worse, I should say, from that distant roar," answered Tom Jones.

"That's the ranch dogs," declared the Indian.

The knowledge that they were not lost but almost at the end of the perilous journey put new life into every member of the party. Even Johnny insisted on walking with the others. The boom of Big Ben sounded nearer and nearer as the big ranch dog floundered through the snow to meet them. With the dog came Mr. Ranger, the ranchman.

"Teacher," he shouted the moment he saw them, "have you got all the children with you? Martha and Jimmy and Rachel?"

"Yes, Mr. Ranger, they're all here; but they are nearly frozen."

"We'll soon be where it's warm," answered Ranger. "Here, give me the end of that lariat. My men have a string of lariats reaching back to the kitchen door. We've been trying all evening to get to you."

The big ranchman took Fannie Palmer on his shoulder, and Don and Tom took up Johnny between them, and the procession hurried forward to the warm fire awaiting them in the ranch kitchen.

"O my babies, thank God, you're saved!" exclaimed Mrs. Ranger as the snow-covered company stumbled into the kitchen. She began removing wraps and pushing the children near the big hot stove; some of them lay upon the floor, too tired to remove their coats. "I feared when Joe didn't come back that we'd lost our last child." Her tears were falling on the wraps she was holding. "Not only my children, but all of the children of the district are safe."

"Weston, how did you ever find your way through this storm?" asked Ranger. "Old, experienced men who have lived in the Panhandle for years will perish in this storm. I sent Joe with the big mule team and the hayrack soon after two o'clock; he hasn't come back. He was an experienced ranch hand, too."

"The credit does not belong to me, Mr. Ranger," answered Don. "White-around-the-head was our leader. I do not know myself just how he succeeded in finding his way through this storm."

Ranger frowned, for like many other white men in the Panhandle, he was prejudiced against the Indians. Yet with true Western recognition of courage and heroism he turned to the Indian lad and asked, "How did you do it, White-around-the-head?"

The Indian boy sat cross-legged on the floor at a little distance from the fire in order to give the others the first chance at its warmth. "My lariat I always carry with me—I knew we must all keep together. The only way to do it was to put lariat round all."

"But the direction, boy—how did you keep that?" demanded Ranger with impatience.

"I will explain," answered White-around-the-head. "Summer very hot here. Grass stems get very dry and hard on south side, stay soft on north side. When wind blow, break on weak side and fall to the south. We had to go north to reach your ranch. I had to dig down through the snow and find which way the grass fell to keep direction. Your ranch house is a little higher than the schoolhouse. The water from the rains cut little creases in the soil. By brushing away the snow and feeling the ground, I could know the direction we should go."

"So that's the reason you were down on your knees in the snow so often!" exclaimed Tom Jones.

"Yes; I had to be very careful for I was responsible. Teacher trusted me when the rest didn't believe I could find the way."

"We certainly appreciate your leadership, White-around-the-head," answered Don, smiling gratefully at the boy.

"Thank you, teacher; you've been good to Indian," said White-around-the-head. "Some day I'll be good man like you tell me to be."

CANADA'S TRADE WITH NORWAY.

Interesting Facts About Our Dominion of Canada.

THE independent kingdom of Norway was founded in 872 A.D. From 1814 to 1905 it was united with Sweden under the same king, but the union was then dissolved. With an area of 125,000 square miles, it is about half the size of Manitoba. The population of 2,900,000 is practically the same as that of Ontario.

Norwegian immigrants are highly regarded. The characteristics of the race, in the popular mind, are fine physique, flaxen hair and blue eyes, but statistics from Norway tell us the flaxen-haired and blue-eyed people are only about 20 per cent of the population. Norwegians are remarkable for their adventurous courage, hardihood, God-fearing and law-abiding deportment. They are seldom in the courts. Education in Norway is compulsory and free. As lumbermen and sailors they are unsurpassed.

Although so small a country, Norway has a merchant fleet which ranks fourth amongst the countries of the world, coming only slightly behind Japan, which is third, with Great Britain and the United States easily first and second.

The leading exports are fish, pulp and paper. Our chief imports from Norway, which last year amounted to about three-quarters of a million dollars, were fertilizers, cod liver oil, sardines, paper, fish hooks and iron ore, while the main exports, which totalled close to five millions, were nickel, copper, wheat, flour, rubber and platinum.

CONTROL OF VIRUS DISEASES OF POTATOES

Mosaic, leaf roll and spindle tuber are three important diseases of virus origin, commonly found affecting the potato. These diseases do not herald their presence by the production of rots or wiltings, and thus may easily be overlooked by the casual observer. Nevertheless, such diseases may reduce yields as much as 25 per cent and they are now recognized as the disorders responsble for the "running out" or degeneration of potato varieties or strains.

Mosaic diseases are characterized by the mottling effects which they produce in the foliage. Leaf roll causes a slight general yellowing of the foliage and an upward rolling of the leaves. Spindle tuber intensifies the normal green colour of leaves, imparts an upright, staring appearance to the plant, and causes the production of spindly tubers with bulging eyes. The infective agents of these three diseases occur in all parts, including the tubers of diseased plants. These dieases are all infectious, and each can be transmitted to healthy plants by several methods, especially by insects and grafting.

Investigations confirm the necessity of planting certified seed stock, the roguing out of diseased plants, the control of insects, especially aphids or plant lice, and the destruction of cultivated or weed hosts in which potato virus diseases are being harboured. Potato growers are urged to adopt the system of tuber-unit planting in isolated seed pots. Such plots should be rogued thoroughly, shortly after the plant emerge and the practice continued at weekly intervals throughout the growing season. If mosaic is eliminated from the seed source, aphid transmission of disease is greatly lessened. In roguing seed plots or large lelds, remove aphid infested, virus infected plants as gently as possible. Rogued plants should be deposited in some type of closed container, carried from the field and then destroyed, preferably by burning. Do not pile rogued plants at the end of the potato field.

The only hailstone business in existence, so far as is known, operates high in the mountains of the state of Colimo in Mexico. Pellets of ice fall so continuously in this area that it is quite profitable to gather and sell them for cooling purposes in the towns on the plains.

"Six days' notice, cook? I suppose you mean a week's notice?"

"No, m'm. I forgot to tell you yesterday."

MEASLES

MEASLES is a child-killer. This disease which so many regard as of no seriousness and which is thought of as a necessary evil, accompanied by certain inconveniences, is, a matter of fact, a serious menace to child life, and because of the number of children it kills, it ranks high amongst those diseases that take life in early childhood.

In one year there occurred in Canada 893 deaths from measles, of which 264 were children under one year of age. Most deaths from measles occur under five years of age. The disease attacks especially those under three years. The older the child, the better chance he has of recovery.

Measles is a communical disease; it is passed from the sick to the well. It is very easily spread and practically all who are exposed contract the disease unless they have been protected by a previous attack.

It is a mistaken idea that every child must have measles. It is criminal to expose children to measles, because to do so is to risk their lives.

Measles is serious not only because it kills, but because it seems to prepare the ground for other diseases. It is the pneumonia following measles which makes it so dangerous. Tuberculosis may become active after measles.

Concerning the control of measles, it must be remembered that measles is most contagious during the days before the rash appears. For this reason, it is advised that every child with a cold in the head be kept away from other children, not only to prevent the spread of colds, but because the cold may be the first stage, the most contagious stage of measles.

Part of the protection of child life is the protection of the child from measles.
