PRESENTATION AND ADDRESS TO MISS ALEDA McINTOSH

A nicely arranged farewell gathering given in the S.S. hall of Williamsburg United church on Tuesday evening of this week when a large number of members of the Y.P.L. of the church were present to pay Miss Aleda McIntosh a tribute of honor and to make a presentation prior to her departure for Ottawa, where she will enter the Civic Hospital as nurse-in-training. Miss McIntosh took an active part in the church's activities and her friends felt that they could not let her leave without some expression of their regard for her. During the evening Miss Hilda Merkley on behalf of the members of the Y.P.L. and Sunday school class presented Miss McIntosh with a bedroom clock and a set of pictures, whie at the same time, Miss Rose Hill, in an address, voiced the regret of all at her departure and wishing her abundant success in her endeavour. Athough taken very much by surprise, Miss McIntosh expressed her appreciation of the gifts and good wishes. Later a program of games and contests was enjoyed after which the ladies served a delicious lunch of sandwiches Cake and coffee.

MINIMUM AGE OF 14 YEARS FOR PASSING ENTRANCE

Ontario will produce no more precocius geniuses who pass their entrance examinations at 11 and 12 years of age; fly through secondary years of learning and emerge with college degrees while still in their teens if the announced policy of the Department of Education to compel all public and separate school scholars to remain in such institutions until they are 14 years of age, is adhered to.

Along with many curricula changes made last year, both in grade 8 classes of Public schools and lower classes of high schools, inspectors and principals to hold the leash on "immature" graduates for entrance certificates until the age limit of 14 years was approximated.

A storm of controversy will no doubt be engendered in many homes of affected students, although the system will smooth this out as the years pass, for the new requirement makes it compulsory for a child to be six years of age before entering public school and no skipping of classes is allowed, which with the eight grades to be covered, means that every scholar will be at least 14 years of age when they emerge from public school. Where a kindergarten class is carried, a child may start to school at five years of age with of course, the extra year being spent in kindergarten, and the ultimate result being the same whether it be town or country school.

In several of the smaller towns and villages of this district where the new ruling was made effective this year to prevent many 12 year old students from trying their entrance requirements, regardless of good marks obtained throughout the year, there is much disappointment among parents, and naturally so. The new system should be allowed to right itself by the starting limit rule, and no discrimination made against pupils who are at present qualified to pass their entrance regardless of whether they are ten years old or 15.

Whether such regimentation is good or not remains to be seen, but a good many teachers have expressed the opinion that the few extra bright pupils should not be handicapped by extra years in primary seats of education. There is no question that it will eventually work out well for the majority of children concerned.

Reasons for the change to the 14-year limit for entrance passing are given by Department officers and educational officials that in England which has one of the best school systems in the world, this practise is carried out and has attained wonderful results. Also a child may be able to pass the necessary examinations, but until the age of 14 years has been reached, the student has not sufficient ground work or the child's mind has not matured enough to advance into the higher studies of a High or Continuation school. Although the student may be a little older upon completion of the High School course it has been found after practical tests that he or she has grasped far more of the course taken and upon graduating is far better fitted to continue on to college or to enter the many vocations of which our young people of to-day follow.

PRESENTATION

On Tuesday evening August 23rd, about 75 friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Algire in honor of the marriage of their daughter, Mrs. Leonard Heafey (Nee Edna Algire), Dancing was enjoyed with music furnished by the Whitteker and Merkley orchestra. At the proper time Mr. and Mrs. Heafey were called to the floor, When Miss Leda Burton presented them with a centre table, a purse and several other gifts on behalf of the community while at the same time Miss Ellen Algire read the following address:

Dear Edna and Leonard:

We, your friends and neighbours who have gathered here, this evening take great pleasure in distributing congratulations and best wishes to two friends whom we have known and highly esteemed for so long.

Now that you have taken upon yourselves the responsibilities of life we trust that it will disclose a path strewn with roses, and that happiness and prosperity may be your future lot.

I am certain that the large circle of friends that you both have in this community feel that if you place as much zeal and devotion into your future undertakings as you have done in the past, your lives will be a success.

To assert our feelings in some tangible manner, we ask you to accept these gifts as a token of best wishes from your friends.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors.

Jessie McIntosh, Zola Tupper, Dorothy Beckstead, Mrs. Arthur Loucks, Leda Burton.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Heafey expressed suitable acknowledgement of the gifts and best wishes which accompanied them. After singing "For They are Jolly Good Fellows" the ladies served refreshments and dancing was resumed until the wee sma hours.

HOLLOW VICTORIES—The Japanese armies appear to have conquered approximately a third of China (the provinces of Shansi, Hopei, Shantung and Suiyuan) and are getting ready to take even larger bites of Chinese territory.

But what is actually happening in the bitten-off areas? Are the Japanese entirely the victors? Captain E. F. Carlson of the United States Marine Corps who has travelled with Chinese soldiers 2,000 miles through "conquered territory," supplies the answer. Estimating that at least 600,000 Chinese soldiers operate in the occupied areas, he declares the Japs control only garrisoned towns, railway lines and main highways. Captain Carlson tells how Chinese bands cross Japanese lines with ease, raid Japanese bases to get supplies. Chinese guerrillas have set up well-functioning administrations, he says, which do everything from harrying the Japanese to keeping schools open. Able-bodied men are being constantly trained for the guerilla armies, whose morale is high.

Under such circumstances it would seem that the Chinese are not capable of being defeated.

ANOTHER DEPRPESSION?—The recession which struck the United States in the fall of 1937 soon had its effect on Canadian business, produced here what amounted almost to a major depression. Slight upswings, however, were felt in the late spring of this year and during the summer. Hopes rose.

Now the sad prediction comes from England (made by Sir William Beveridge, prominent lawyer, economist and head of the London School of Economics) that another depression will soon be smothering business in the United Kingdom. Says Sir William: "The history of the first stages of the last depression (1929) is being repeated today. In figures for 94 industries a comparison between the onset of the last depression and the beginning of the present slump shows a striking measure of agreement, subject to minor differences arising from armament expenditure and other special causes."

Can our bumper wheat crop save Canada from following in the Old Country's wake?

But cheer up—predictions don't always come true!

TWO ASSURANCES— Canadians were thrilled, the rest of the world sat up and took notice last week when President Roosevelt, in his historic address at Queen's University, Kingston, gave to Canada the assurance that "the people of the United States will not stand idly by if domination of Canadian soil is threatened" by any foreign power. "We are good neighbors and good friends . . . "

By way of reciprocating the President's Good Neighbor policy, Prime Minister Mackenzie King proclaimed Canada's acceptance of responsibility for her own protection. Canada intends, he declared, to "keep on going forward" in preparations for her national defense, and will see to it that enemy forces never cross this country by land, sea or air to attack the United States.

Something concrete, there.

THE WEEK'S QUESTION — What part of Canada gets longer and shorter successively, as the years go on?

Answer—Point Pelee—Lake Erie is continually building up and tearing down this southernmost tip of Canada as the water level rises and falls.

Canada's Navy Grows Larger

Four Destroyers And As Many Mine Sweepers Being Added

Launching at Quebec in August of H.M.C.S. Gaspe saw the third of Canada's four mine-sweepers, built to replace the ancient trawlers which had served in that capacity since the war, take the water. The fourth, H.M.C.S. Nootka, will be launched at North Vancouver later this month.

The Fundy and the Comox have been sent down the ways and all four will likely be in commission before the end of the year.

Soon In Commission

About the last week in August the Royal Canadian Navy was strengthened further when the two destroyers, Restigouche and Ottawa, arrived from England. They will be stationed at Esquimalt.

The new destroyers are of the "C" class and were on the Royal Navy establishment as H.M.S. Crusader and H.M.S. Comet. The Comet which has been serving on the Mediterranean anti-piracy patrol, was returned to Chatham, England, three months ago, for refitting. At that base she joined the Crusader. Both were taken over by the Canadian Naval Department in June.

Dictators Play Waiting Game

Professor of Social Research Says They're Biding Their Time—Attitude Is That Britain Holds Losing Cards

The Fascist dictatorships—Italy and Germany—are playing a waiting game, believing the British Empire holds losing cards, according to Dr. Hans Simons, New York professor of social research, who spoke to the political and business leaders gathered for the Canadian Institute of Economics and politics at Geneva Park, Lake Couchiching.

Hitler and Mussolini have misinterpreted the transformation of the British Empire into the British Commonwealth of Nations, Dr. Simons asserted. Convinced as they are that a strong political organization cannot be based on a system of free co-operation and association, the dictators see signs of decay and weakness in the British attitude.

Want British Possessions

This view has led Hitler to withhold his demands for the return of Germany's war-lost colonies, Dr. Simons believed. Hitler is willing to wait while Mussolini builds up his Mediterranean fortifications near Britain's strongholds. When the time is ripe, he said, the Fascist powers believe they will be well prepared to annex former British possessions with a maximum of efficiency and a minimum of effort.

During his recent tour of Europe his only positive observations was an alignment of defensive forces against Germany, said Dr. Simons. "France is concerned primarily with maintaining the status quo while England wants peace at almost any price," he added.

He found a "prevalent fatalism, lack of productive thinking and implications on the part of European citizens and statesmen alike."

Western Polio Cases Increase

113 in Prairie Provinces — Situation Serious in Alberta

Infantile paralysis has a greater hold in Alberta this year than at the same time in 1937. Spread of poliomyelitis has been slightly more severe in British Columbia but the disease has not reached the same proportions in Saskatchewan and Manitoba as in mid-August last year.

Unofficial and approximate figures indicate a total of 113 cases with nine deaths in the four Western Provinces this year compared with approximately 135 cases and five deaths last year.

Use Iron Lungs

The Alberta situation, however, is more serious. Since July 28, 39 cases have been reported and there have been seven deaths. Last year there were 15 cases and two deaths in Alberta up to August 19, although a serious outbreak in September and October increased the number of cases to 169.

Three iron lungs are in use in Alberta and a telegraphic order for a fourth was sent to Toronto last week.

Many on Prairies Never Held Jobs

McGill Investigator Finds Serious Situation in Canadian West

Twenty thousand young men and women in the Prairie Provinces have never been employed at steady work, Albert S. Duncan, a member of the Social Research Department of McGill University, Montreal, found during a two-year survey of the West's unemployment situation.

The West's greatest problem, he found, was the need of permanent jobs for 100,000 employable but unemployed wage earners.

Most Are Young People

Forty thousand of them are unemployed but employable wage earners who are at present receiving relief, he said in an interview. Another 40,000 are unemployed but employable persons not receiving relief. They live by part time earnings, savings and other means. The remaining 20,000 unemployed are young men and women.

Mr. Duncan, en route east after spending a holiday in Banff, said that the total of 100,000 does not include 45,000 farmers who have been on relief in the Prairie Provinces.

Mr. Duncan urged a long-range planning program for the care of the jobless, the Dominion Government to assume responsibility for relief and introduce a system of unemployment insurance.

NAMES in the NEWS

SAM SNEAD

In a thrilling exhibition of subpar golf the battle for the Canadian Open Golf Championship came to a close at Mississauga course last week with Sam Snead, super-slugger of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., victor over Harry Cooper, of Chicago, defending titleholder.

Climaxing what was undoubtedly the greatest open tournament ever staged by the Royal Canadian Golf Association, Snead and Cooper went twenty-seven holes before a winner and new champion was declared. Originally scheduled as an eighteen-hole playoff, it had to be lengthened nine more because the two starry shotmakers finished the first eighteen holes tied with scores of 67, five under par. On the extra nine holes, Snead snared four birdies for a score of 34, two below par, defeating Cooper by a five-stroke margin.

Snead, a 26-year-old professional, said to be the longest-hitting golfer on this continent, received the $1,000 first-prize cheque and the Seagram gold cup.

The crowd, too, got their money's worth watching the brilliant playoff.

Italy will spend $1,300,000 to encourage cotton growing in Ethiopia.

FIND WORK FOR OUR OWN

Fitting our own people into the available employment of all kinds—helping them to fit in must be a part of the policy of preventing unemployment. It comes before the encouragement of immigration. But after it is done, it should be possible to welcome a considerable number of people of the right type from the preferred countries, including as many as will come from Great Britain. — Winnipeg Free Press.

MARRIED TOO NOISILY

It was an old-fashioned custom for wedding parties to rush up and down streets in cabs with tin cans and old shoes flying. But present-day traffic conditions have made that sort of thing ridiculous as well as highly dangerous. The spectacle of four or five cars racing through traffic at 40 to 50 miles an hour, as we have seen it a few times lately, is one that calls for police intervention. — St. Marys Journal-Argus.

OUR BEAUTIFUL GIRLS

An Englishman in town or business recently was impressed with the profusion of beautiful girls in Toronto . . . so many more and more beautiful than the girls in England. He did hint that the beauties in Toronto were a bit uniform, adapting the same hairdress and make-up, but nevertheless attractive. All this has been said before, but here is something new. The hectic lives of Canadian men, engrossed in business, made it necessary, he thought, for the women to concentrate on their appearance in order to "get" their man. This didn't hold in the leisurely lives of the English. — Toronto Star.

The EMPIRE

THEY HAVE THEM IN INDIA

It is painfully clear that no amount of advice and propaganda will influence traffic hogs in Bombay. The only way to bring them to their senses is to impress on them the knowledge that every time they err they are liable to be severely punished; at present they have no such fear. The matter, in view of the number of accidents in the city, is one which intimately affects the safety and lives of the citizens, and deserves the attention of the Bombay Government.—Times of India, Bombay.

Road To Pacific From Peace River

Residents of That Far Northern District Have Started Own Highway Expected to be the Shortest Route to Vancouver

It looked like the only way to get a road to the Pacific Coast, so residents of the Peace River district took up their picks and shovels—and started to build their own highway across the Rocky Mountains.

They call it the Monkman Pass Highway. Backing it are 150-odd branches of the Monkman Pass Highway Association in British Columbia and Alberta. Members hope they can drive the first truck across the summit by early autumn. Then there will be plenty of work smoothing off the rough spots and making a permanent roadbed before general traffic can travel the route with ease.

Through Monkman Pass

Alex. Monkman, Wembley, Alta., farmer and formerly a fur trader, discovered the pass in 1922. The ground rises on the east to an altitude of 3,500 feet—just about the same height above sea level as Calgary—and drops off easily on the Pacific side. On both sides of the pass mountains rise 8,000 and 9,000 feet.

The roadbuilders—mostly volunteers, but with a few men paid $1 a day and board—have the backing of railway surveyors in their selection of a route. In 1929 the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways made a joint survey when they considered building a railroad into the wheat-producing Peace River district to provide an outlet to the coast.

The highway follows almost exactly the lines of that survey. Last year a civil engineer retraced it and mapped out the highway trail.

Australia Called Fishing Paradise

The Industry Has Never Been Exploited in Home Waters There—Teeming Wealth of Finny Prey

Zane Grey, famous novelist and big game fisherman, once said: "Australia is not only an ideal fishing centre—it is the home of fish."

But the fishing industry has never been exploited in Australian waters, so the Fisheries Investigation Branch of the Scientific and Industrial Research Council is going to do something about it. It is commissioning a research ship to chart fishing grounds.

Huge Catches of Pilchards

It is known that from May to September there is one stretch of water 30 miles long off New South Wales which is literally teeming with pilchards. These fish are also common in other parts and in one bay they have been found up to 11 ins. long.

Samples of water taken near Sydney show that huge catches of pilchards can be expected. If this pilchard industry is developed Australia may become a serious rival to the great sardine fisheries of California.

Other surface swimming fish which are abundant in Australian waters include herring, sprats, anchovies and mackerel.

Monster Leaves Child's Tracks

Footprints in the Sands of Ecuador Strike Panic Into The Hearts of Indians

While the Nogapotsane, with its goat-like head and python's body, is terrifying the natives of Bechuanaland, another fearsome creature, the Tin-Tin, is striking panic into the hearts of the Indians of Ecuador.

Like the Nogapotsane, the Tin-Tin is no mythical mnster. It looks like a cross between a donkey and a giant lizard—and the most uncanny thing about this dragon-like monster is that it leaves footprints in the sand exactly like those of a child of about 15.

That it really does exist is vouched for by an Englishman in Ecuador who recently followed the creature's spoor through desolate sand-dunes until he lost them in the pampas. A week later he actually saw the Tin-Tin.

It was grey with black stripes, and had a long tail and a small head. Seeing it was being watched, it reared up on its hind legs, grunting weirdly, made off for the woods at a great speed. The "child's" footprints where it had been standing were identical with the footprints that natives in the district have come to regard with terror.

Our language is changing, says a London expert who declares he has found that in the last twenty years 170,000 words were added while 50,000 "passed out".

THE WONDERLAND OF OZ

When Aunt Em and Uncle Henry were all dressed, Dorothy took them through the beautiful rooms of the palace. She also showed them her own pretty rooms. Then they went into the back yard and after walking along a winding path for some distance through the beautiful garden, they came to an attractive little house where a Yellow Hen sat on the front porch sunning herself.

"Good morning, Dorothy," called Billina, from her perch on the railing around the front porch. I was expecting you to call on me for I heard you had come back and brought your uncle and aunt with you." "We are here for good and all this time, Billina," cried Dorothy, happy to see the hen once more. "And Uncle Henry and Aunt Em belong in Oz as much now as I do."

"Then they are very lucky people," declared Billina. "But come, dear, I must show you all my Dorothys. Nine are living and have grown up to be very respectable hens, but one took cold and died of the pip and the other two turned out to be horrid roosters instead of hens, so I had to change their names to Daniel. They all have gold lockets with your picture inside."

Dorothy wanted to stay and play with the little chickens for a while, but Uncle Henry and Aunt Em had not seen the palace grounds and were eager to get better acquainted with the marvelous land in which they were to live. So they left for a walk. Dorothy set her foot on the steps of the hen's cottage and immediately became small enough to enter the little door.

Hidden Waters In The Desert

British Engineers Have Bored Down Into Jordan Valley's Arid Land and Found Oases.

The arid desert of Palestine has yielded water in abundance. This amazing news was brought by British Government engineers who bored the parched Negeb Desert—and struck water in profuse streams.

If this water is found on analysis to be pure, it will be used for large-scale artificial irrigation in the dry Beersheba and Gaza regions.

Eleven boring plants are hard at work on desert land in the Jordan Valley neighbourhood, and altogether 30 deep wells have yielded water.

The results of analytical tests on such water are not yet known. If they prove favorable, the farming problems of Arabs and Jews in Palestine may be greatly reduced.

What Science * Is Doing *

SEARCH FOR "SNIFF-METER"

Invention of a "sniff-meter" still baffles the best inventive genius of the world, it was disclosed at McGill University, Montreal, last week.

Science has accomplished marvels in the accurate measurement of most things which register on the various human senses, but it still cannot produce anything which measures smells.

The detection and elimination of odors constitutes a practical problem. For instance, in schools, it is found necessary to circulate some 30 cubic feet of air per student through classrooms though all that is necessary to eliminate carbon dioxide and supply adequate oxygen is four cubic feet.

NINE-DAY CHICK CROWS

Transformation of a baby chick into a synthetic rooster with a robust crow in a period of nine days was accomplished in experiments announced at Leland Stanford University, Palo, Alto, Calif.

Dr. Calvin P. Stone, psychology professor, said the chick was injected daily with a synthetic male hormone substance that effected precocity and developed the crow, a mature comb and a strut.

SPASM PREVENTS RESUSCITATION

Toronto medical research men, one of them Sir Frederick Banting, are reported to have discovered a new physiological fact in their study of artificial respiration for drowning persons.

The Health League of Canada announces that an article in the September issue of the Journal of the Canadian Medical Association states that in a large proportion of drowning cases a laryngeal spasm develops which prevents air getting into the lungs even with artificial respiration.

It has already been observed in post-mortem examination of drowned persons that frequently no water was found in the lungs, the article states. The explanation of this fact was learned to be the action of the body's normay protective machinery which prevents access of water or food to the lungs during swallowing.

In cases of drowning the same mechanism was said to operate and may persist as a spasm after the victim has been taken from the water. Thus artificial respiration is rendered ineffective.

GERMAN SUPER-MICROSCOPE

Magnification up to 30,000 times is made possible by a new super microscope invented by two Germoan scientists, according to reports from Berlin. The inventors, Dr. Bodo von Borries and Dr. Ernst Rurka, utilize electron rays having a 100,000 voltage current in their instrument.

INSECTS COLOR-MINDED

Insects are attracted by lights, but have preferences in colors. If lights of a variety of colors are exposed at night, insects of particular kinds will be found in greatest numbers flitting around the light which has the greatest color appeal for them. General Electric engineers observing the new sodium lights installed on a bridge at Clinton, Iowa, noted that the shad flies of that neighborhood did not like the brilliant pure yellow of the sodium lamps nearly so well as the almost white and equally brilliant incandescent lamps used on the bridgehead. The insects were recently found piled six inches deep under the incandescent lamps, but only one inch deep under the sodium lamps. The red end of the spectrum is much less attractive to insects than the blue end. Insects apparently have a wider range of vision than human beings, as they appear to see the ultra-violet light, which is invisible to us but to which many insects are strongly attracted.

Gardening Notes

EVERGREEN PLANTING

Taking everything into consideration, late August or early September is the best time to transplant coniferous (cone-bearing) evergreens. While spring transplanting at the time new growth begins is feasible, the plants often suffer due to the fact that new slow-growing roots are not abundant enough to supply the moisture demand of the new top growth. Fall planting does not incur these consequences, for very little or no top growth is formed at this season, while the roots are particularly active. This gives the roots a good chance to become thoroughly established by the time heavy demands are made upon them to support new growing tips.

The exception to this rule is hemlocks, which do best if transplanted in the spring. Late fall planting always is followed by a high mortality rate, as under this condition the plants enter the freezing periods of the year without new roots having a chance to develop and become thoroughly settled in their new position.

Warm Soil Stimulates Roots

Early autumn planting, furthermore, has the advantage of falling into a period when the soil still is quite warm and this factor as well as an abundance of soil moisture stimulates vigorous root action. Under no circumstances should the plants be placed in dry, hot soil, and excavation of the planting hole should take place shortly after an abundant rain.

COLDFRAME HELPS BIENNIALS

The time has arrived to think of sowing seed of some of the quicker-growing biennials such as Sweet-Williams, English Daisy (Bellis) and Forget-me-nots (Myosotis). The coldframe is a most useful adjunct to give the plants special care, since regular watering and shading are essential to develop a satisfactory stand of sturdy seedlings.

DROUGHT RESISTANT

Truly drought-resistant plants always are welcome in regions where summer is sure to be hot and dry. While there are many good plants that have this quality, several species of Rudbeckia actually seem to flourish under such conditions. Perhaps the most showy of them is Rudbeckia bicolor superba, a hardy annual of easiest culture with flowers that measure up to three inches in diameter.

St. Elmo's Fire On Great Lakes

St. Elmo's fire, a rarity on Lake Ontario, struck the Rochester-bound yacht Vision some 12 hours out of Toronto, one day last week.

To the amazement of the crew of five aboard the ship, the bluish flames ran up and down the shrouds, the mast and yard arms. One member of the crew, thinking the ship afire, attempted to extinguish the apparent blaze with a fire extinguisher, the skipper reported.

Only the lee side, Skipper Woodborn Thompson said, was without the unusual electrical display named after St. Elmo, patron saint of sailors.

Of a flamelike appearance, St. Elmo's fire or light is seen usually only in stormy weather. More frequent in the tropics, it is of the nature of a brush discharge of electricity, reddish when positive, bluish when negative.

Real-Life Tarzan

Bearded and naked, a real-life Tarzan has been found in a thick forest near Sanski Most, Bosnia. The man appears incapable of human speech, and shrieks wildly at the sight of money. Apparently he has been living on herbs and animals which he caught with his hands.

VAGABOND VOYAGING
By Larry Nixon

This book, as its subtitle states, tells "The Story of Freighter Travel." But "story" is an inadequate word. Larry Nixon gives his readers much more than the story of the freighter ship's acquisition of passenger accommodations and growth in passenger popularity; he gives them precisely the information they need if they want to go vagabond voyaging themselves; and he makes them want to. The list of freighter routes and lines covers eighty-one pages at the back of his book, and in addition there are "real" freight ships which definitely do not take passengers.

The book deals, however, not with these freight ships which are freight ships only, but with those which do carry passengers, for a moderate price and in acceptable comfort. It's a matey way of traveling. It's leisurely. It's simple, of course. But most freighters are well kept, many of them are new; they go to interesting places, they have no inside rooms—Oh, there's a lot to be said for freighter travel. Larry Nixon says it clearly, attractively and sensibly, in an inviting and practical book.

"Vagabond Voyaging," by Larry Nixon. Illustrated. 314 pp. Toronto: McClelland & Stewart. $2.50.

An Interview

"And were you pleased?" they asked of Helen in Hell.
"Pleased?" answered she, "when all Troy's towers fell;
And dead were Priam's sons, and lost his throne?
And such a war was fought as none had known;
And even the gods took part; and all because Of me alone! Pleased? I should say I was!"

The Exhibition is a dream of marvels. Here are gathered some of the continent's finest livestock. See them judged, discussed, paraded. Wander through the stalls and inspect them closely. Thrill to the music of England's Royal Artillery Band. Watch the excitement of the harness races. Examine the huge farm-implement displays. See the mirror that talks, the Art brought from Europe. Take the youngsters to stare at "Hooty" the strangely intelligent owl, play in Frolexland, eat in a restaurant on the grounds. There are a million things to see and something of interest for everyone.

SPEED BOAT RACES AT ALEXANDRIA BAY, N.Y.

The Thousand Islands at Alexandria Bay will again be the scene of the annual speed classic of the St. Lawrence River on Labor Day when the Fourth Annual St. Lawrence River displacement Boat Championships will be held.

This race annually attracts the speediest displacement motor boats of the St. Lawrence River and already three of the speediest craft on the St. Lawrence River have been entered by their owners for the Labor Day race.

W.G. Robinson, of St. Lawrence Park, Alexandria Bay, has entered the Miss Syracuse, holder at one time of the United States record for displacement boats and Mr. Edward J. Noble, recently appointed chief of the Civic Authority for the United States has entered the Snail, which he will personally drive himself, and the Seventy Six, which will be driven by his chauffer Zay Powers.

For the last two years the race has been a battle between the Snail and the Miss Syracuse. Two years ago, the Snail came in ahead by less than a foot and last year the Miss Syracuse won by the same distance.

Mr. Noble donated the trophy, a huge two foot silver cup, which is awarded on a yearly basis to the winner of the race each year. Races will also be held on Labor Ray for the twenty five mile, the thirty mile displacement and forty mile displacement boat classes.

BRIDE-ELECT HONORED

On Monday August, 29th at the home of Misses Simone and Yvonne Pigeon a miscellaneous shower was held for Miss Velma Riddell, in honor of her approaching marriage. On arriving she was greeted by about 50 friends and the following address was read by Miss Margaret Burleigh.

Dear Velma:

Upon learning of a small craft about to set sail upon the "Sea of Matrimony" we decided to honor its two occupants.

You, Velma, any who have known and chummed with you, have always found a willing pal and helper. Quite a few of us are acquainted with your future mate and are sure as we get to know him better, will find him the same as the one he has chosen to go through life with.

Velma, we ask you to accept these gifts, not for their value but the way they are given, each bearing well wishes and good luck for you both and wishing all your troubles to be little ones.

Signed on behalf of all present.

Although competely taken by surprise, Velma thanked all those present. The evening was spent in games after which lunch was served by Mrs Pigeon, Misses Yvonne and Simone Pigeon, Mrs. G. Riddell, Jean Riddell, Mrs. Sauve, Marguerite and Margaret Burleigh.

News And Information For The Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Sugar Beet Crop

The beet crop never looked more promising than it does this year.. The commercial crop of approximately 26,000 measured acres is uniformly good in all districts, and losses since seeding have been slight. An abundant growth and healthy appearance of leaves gives promise of good root development, and unless high temperatures with excessive humidity cause Leaf spots within the next few weeks, the yield should be excellent. With a guaranteed price of one dollar per ton above that of last year the price compares favourably with prices of other farm crops, most of which are below the level of a year ago.

Corn for Husking

Two-thirds of corn for husking crop in Ontario is grown in the Counties of Essex and Kent. In Essex the condition at the present time is particularly promising with fields showing a good coloor. Even fields planted the latter part of June, which may not mature, are making satisfactory progress. In Kent the major part of the acreage was planted six to eight days later than usual and for a time growing conditions were not favourable. During recent weeks, however excellent growing conditions have prevailed anl crop prospects are reported good at the present time. There are some indications that the corn borer infestation may show an upward trend this year, but it is too early yet to forecast to what extent the crop may be injured, altho the vigorous growth will doubtless tend to offset the damage. Tre acreage of corn for husking this year is estimated at 180,130 acres as compared with 165,593 acres in 1937.

The Tobacco Crop

Heavy precipitation throughout the flue-cured tobacco districts, together with high temperature during the first three weeks of August, promoted very rapid growth of the tobacco crop. Harvesting was retarded to some extent by the excessive moisture, but it is now about half completed and barring an early frost, a record crop will be taken off. There is every indication that a good quality yield will be obtained. In the burley and dark tobacco types it is now estimated that the losses caused by tobacco root-rots will exceed those experienced in the 1937 crop. The measurements of the burley acreage shows that only 9,239 acres of the total 10,323 acres allotted this season were planted Together with considerable water damage on low fields this will result in a smaller crop of burley tobacco than anticipated.

Western Ontario Fruits

Weather and moisture conditions during the past month have been favourable for good sizing of apples, but owing to excessive heat, particularly hot nights, colouring has been slightly retarded on early varieties. While scab and side-worn injury are severe in some orchards, fungus and insect pests, generally, are under fair control in well-cared for commercial orchards.

Due to good sizing the total production of cherries was somewhat larger than at first anticipated, and with the exception of slight irregularity in maturity and some bruising of sours by wind, a good quality crop was harvested.

Weather and moisture conditions have been exceptionally favourable for pear development and the August estimate of production is slightly higher than the July estimate. Fungus and insect pests re well controlled. Harvesting of peaches is unusually early this year, and the main crop is now being placed on the market. The total yield is now estimated at 536,214 bushels, an increase of 10,500 bushels over last year's crop of 525,700 bushels. All varieties of plums are sizing well. There is a slight amount of insect injury in some varieties, and brown rot is also inevidence due to excessive precipitation and high humidity. Intensive spraying and dusting of both plums and peaches have been carried out by growers to ensure satisfactory carrying quality.

Graperies generally have a healthy appearance and berries are making good growth. The acreage of cantaloupes is a little higher than last year owing to increased plantings in the Leamington area. Quality has been excellent.

Cutting Alfalfa for Seed

In parts of eastern Canada suitable for alfalfa seed production it was formerly the practice to cut the first crop for hay and the second crop for seed. In the best seed producing areas the first crop is now taken for seed which is cut in August. In Western Canada the cutting of the first crop for seed has always been the practice followed.

A decision which is sometimes difficult for the grower to make is in regard to the proper time to harvest the crop for seed. Since alfalfa seed does not mature evenly due to the prolonged blossoming period a plant may bear pods varying from ripe, which are dark brown in colour, to green and immature. Because the ripe pods shatter easily, there comes a time when more seed is being lost by shattering than is being replaced by the ripening of the green pods. Just before such a time is reached is the proper time for cutting. This will be when about half to two-thirds of the pods are brown. Much of the immature seed will mature in the swath.

In seasons when a hay shortage is imminent the grower may be compelled to take the first crop for hay and if the second crop is podding up well it may profitably be cut for seed. The decision as to when to cut this crop should be decided by the average date of the first fall frosts for the locality. If the crop is cut after a severe frost, not only is the germanability of the seed lowered but the sample will contain much discoloured seed resulting in a lower commercial grade.

Alfalfa Increases Production

Te alfalfa plant is remarkable for its ability to increase production along more lines than one. As a soil building crop it has few rivals. Its deep rooting characteristic enables it to make use of plant food reserves in the sub-soil, and being a legume, it enriches the soil with nitrogen thro the action of nitrifying bacteria of which it is a host. The alfalfa in the rotation improves the fertility of the soil, with resulting increases in the production of other crops. The deep-rooting habit also enables this crop to grow vigorously and produce freely in spite of prolonged periods of dry weather.

The nutritious quality of alfalfa hay is recognized and highly prized as a means of increasing production with all kinds of live stock. In addition, it is one of the most productive of hay crops. In those parts of the country which enjoy a long enough growing period, the crop can be cut two ad three times a season, producing large tonnages per acre, and thus increased production is obtaied over plants that can be cut but once.

Even the more northerly parts, where the season is short and only one cutting can be made, large yields are obtained. For instance in Northern Ontario, where it is ot yet considered advisable to sow this crop alone, the addition of a few pounds per acre of alfalfa to the usual hay mixture, has been found very worthwhile.

THAT "SQUEEZE PLAY" LETTER

(Simcoe Reformer)

It was scarcely necessary for Premier Hepburn to make President Roosevelt's address a reason for venting his spleen upon the Premier of Canada in the form of a letter which contained this unseemly assertion: "Irrespective of any propaganda or squeeze play that may be concocted by you, you may rest assured that the Ontario government will resist any effort to force us to expend public funds in such an unwarranted manner." Inasmuch as Premier King has not made the slightest comment on the Roosevelt address, the Hepburn letter was assuredly not in order. Or, perhaps that was just "Mitch's" unusual way of extending a cordial welcome to the President of the United States on the occasion of his first official visit to Ontario.

ENGLISH AUDIENCE ROUSED BY PLAYING OF MARJORIE DILLABOUGH

The "superb performance by Marjorie Dillabough young Winnipeg pianist studying in London, as displayed at a concert of the Matthey school is commented on by a visiting Canadian musician. Miss Dillabough played Dohanyi's Variations on a Nursery Rhyme (Baa Baa Black Sheep) at the end of a lengthy program:

"Matthay's teachers work at the Academy and College as well as at the Matthay School proper and their most brilliant pupils are chosen to play at these concerts given at the end of the school term. To play the Dohnanyi requires real virtuosity and this (Miss Dillabough) displayed to a brilliant degree. When I tell you that the audience, which up to this point had maintained a typical English reserve, applauded and stamped, you will appreciate how very outstanding the performance was. Th furore continued and she again and again came back and bowed. Gwenda Owen Davies and I were together, and we could hardly restrain from shouting at the top of our voices, "Bravo, Winnipeg."

Miss Dillabough is the daughter of an old M.C.I. graduate, Jas. R. Dillabough and Mrs. Dillabough of Winnipeg.

YOUR RE-ACTION

Can be slow even with perfect vision. Eyes move quickly and receive impressions insantly but with faulty nerve stimulation resulting from those impressions, re-action is delayed and therein lies the danger.

Re-action is closely tied in with the visual system and it remains for you to be sure that the latter is functioning efficiently.

HEPBURN COULD NOT BLOCK PLAN FOR WATERWAY

Contrary to common supposition, the St. Lawrence waterway and power development cannot be held up by Premier Hepburn's refusal to consent to the scheme according to Arth-W. Roebuck, former Attorney-General for Ontario and former member of the Ontario Hydro Commission, who was on business in Ottawa recently. The St. Lawrence development he said, is "in its entirety in the hands of the Dominion government."

"Consent by the province of Ontario, or by Quebec, to a treaty with respect to the use of international boundary water is not required by constitutional law, and the Dominion government is free to proceed with both the agreement and the actual development at its own good pleasure," said Mr. Roebuck.

The Common Impression

"Is it not commonly understood, that the water power and its development belong to the province?" Mr. Roebuck was asked.

"Yes," Replied Mr. Roebuck, "that it the common impression and Premier Hepburn is reported as stating that the work cannot proceed without the consent of the provinces, but this widely-accepted impression is entirely erroneous As a matter of policy—and in part of law—the Dominion government has relinquished any claim to the maintenance of power distribution systems in the province and has allowed the province of Ontario to control developments on the Sault, the Niagra and the Ottawa rivers. The Dominion is not interested in the retailing of power in the provinces, but that does not affect the legal rights of the parties so far as the ownership of the St. Lawrence is concerned.

In Obscure Schedule

"These rights," said the former attorney-general, are governed by the British North America Act and this particular point is frequently overlooked, as it is to be found in one of the obscure schedules attached to the act. In fact, the schedules are not always printed with the act, except, of course, in official publications.

"Section 108 of the B.N.A. is as follows:

"The Public Works and Property of each Province enumerated in the Third Schedule to this act shall be the Property of Canada."

"The schedule referred to is as follows:

The Third Schedule"

.."Provincial Public Works and property to be the Property of Canada.

. Canals, with Lands and Water Power connected therewith...

5. Rivers and Lake improvements.

In Right of Dominion Govt

"From the above," continued Mr. Roebuck, "you will observe that the water power connected with canals, and the canals, are to be the 'property of Canada,' which means the Crown in right of the Dominion of Canada.

"It has been argued on behalf of the provinces that this refers to canals in existence at the time of the passing of the act in 1.67. There wore canals and water powers connected with them on the Trent river at that time, and these and perhaps some others, it has been argued, were what was in mind. The point has not been decided, and in my judgement is not well taken. But it is to be observed that there were canals on the St. Lawrence also at that time and powers, or potential powers, connected therewith."

Mr. Roebuck went on, "The consent of the province is, of course required, if the province is to contribute capital to the scheme, or if the Hydro organization is be used for the distribution of the electrical energy to be developed. But there are matters which can be safely left to subsequent agreement.

"Much Can Happen"

"Engineers have estimated five to seven years for the completion of the project and much can happen in that time. If, when the dams are ready for the installation of the turbines and generators, Ontario and Quebec government - sponsored authorities need power, the Dominion would then, no doubt, supply it, or the facilities for its generation, on such terms as are just. It matters little which jurisdicion carries the initial risks, for they represent the same taxpayers. That the power will be ultimately required is beyond question; no one can say just when."

"Mr. King Holds all Cards."

"It is greatly in the public interests," said Mr. Roebuck in conclusion, "that the legal difficulties be cleared away in advance, so that the power will be available when it is required. And until then the navigation benefits justify the building of the canal.

"Mr. King holds all the essential cards. The private power ring is helpless if he sees fit to play them,"

MUCH DAMAGE DONE BY STORM ON MONDAY NIGHT

Lightning stunned a cow, causing it to fall on a woman and set fire to the barn on a farm in the Russell district, during a severe electrical storm on Monday night.

Mrs. Wallace Acres, whose farm is four miles north of Russell, was milking in the barn when the bolt struck. The cow toppled on her, but she managed to extricate herself uninjured. The family dog, which was standing outside the door of the barn was killed. The cow was rescued but the contents of the barn, hay and farm machinery, were destroyed causing a loss estimated at $3000. Only $300 insurance was carried.

At Kenmore the home of Miles Hall was destroyed with a loss of 3,500 when it was struck by lightning and at Metcalfe, Joseph Evans lost his barn and the contents, loss being close to 2,500. No one was injured in either fire and Mr. Evans was able to save the livestock.

CHAPTER II

"Hello, honey!" Donald Fisk smeared the sweat and the dust from his face and kissed his wife. He was a robust young giant, but the desert had fried the fat out of his frame and left it spare. His skin was burned almost black, and when he grinned his teeth gleamed forth as white as dominoes. Like the other men of El Centro, he smelled always of perspiration.

"My, but you're dirty!" Gloria told him. "You look too funny—" She laughed outright at the expression lent by the muddy streaks of sweat.

"You're feeling better, aren't you?" he demanded, quickly. "Jove, Gloria! That's the first time you've laughed in ages."

"I'm feeling wonderful! I'm well!"

"Seems like a month at least since you laughed. What is it?"

"Come! I'll show you." Playfully Gloria took the thumb of his right hand in her fingers and led him across the floor. She fairly danced ahead of him to the door of the bedroom, where she bade him look. "There! I've been bubbling ever since I heard about our reservation."

Ready To Go

Donald peered into the chamber; what he saw was an open steamer trunk and a half-filled suitcase upon the bed. The room itself was strewn with articles of clothing. "Why, kid!" You've begun to pack!" Gloria nodded. "Good Lord! And it's ten days yet before we go!"

"I know—but I couldn't wait. Oh, Don, you don't know how I hate this place! You just haven't the faintest conception how I absolutely hate it." Mrs. Fisk was still laughing, but there was an hysterical catch in her voice. "That's all that ails me — this desert! Now I'm going home. I'm going home—I'm going home!" She sang the words and her eyes sparkled.

"Well, you're not going to take all that trash when you go. Not if I can help it," her husband declared; but she interrupted her vigorous protest by saying:

"Maybe not, but it's such fun to get ready—and I haven't anything else to pack. I can't sit still and merely wait! I've packed and unpacked a half dozen times. When I get it all in, I pretend I've forgotten something important and there's barely time to throw it out and re-pack. Oh, Don, little shivers and tickles run over me every time I think of it! Home! I'm going to pack every day. That telegram about the stateroom has done more to cure me than—than anything. I am well! Don't you think I am?" Gloria's voice quavered, broke; her face was briefly contorted and tears appeared upon her lashes.

"Sure, you're well. Just played out with the heat and the confounded monotony, that's all. Wait till you begin to breathe the good salt air."

"And our stateroom is on the shady side of the ship!"

"I made sure of that. What's more, those fruiters pump cool air into the cabins. Oh, it won't take you long to pick up! I want you to have your old pep and your old color back when we land. You've got to have it or—well, the family will make it deuced unpleasant for me." A furrow appeared between Fisk's dusty brows. He stared about the sparsely furnished room, then he said, earnestly: "You've been a game kid to put up with this. It was worse than I expected; yes, worse than your people said it would be. If I'd realized just what it was like here, I'd never have brought you. But say" —his face lighted again—"won't it be great to put it over them?"

Brief Enthusiasm

Gloria nodded. Her brief enthusiasm had left her limp, so she sat down on the edge of the bed. She managed to summon enough animation to agree. "Yes. They were so smart—they knew it all, didn't they? It will be nice to crow."

"Mighty nice for me, anyhow. You just go ahead playing at packing and unpacking your clothes, but when we leave we'll throw 'em all away. I'll buy you new ones—the most expensive ones on Fifth Avenue. I'll buy you more than you ever had—twice as many as your dad gave you! Yes, and we'll drive out to the Island in our own limousine. I'll get you a couple of 'em."

"It will be too late for the peonies when we get there," Gloria said, musingly, "but the roses will be coming in. The ramblers on our place are wonderful. Think of it, Don, roses, green grass, running water! That brook and the trout pond! Won't it seem heavenly to be cool and clean again? I'm going to roll in the grass and bury my face in it."

"Same here! And the first time it rains I'm going to stand out and take every drop of it. It seems to me that every last pore in my body is thirsty."

Heartbreak

"How is the new driller getting along?" Mrs. Fisk inquired.

"McKay? Oh, fine! All I'm afraid of is that he may work too fast. These hustlers are apt to be careless, you know. He's at twenty-six hundred and fifty — right on top of the structure. We'll be ready to shoot day after tomorrow. I've ordered the nitro and it will be out tomorrow. Believe me, I'm not going to lose a minute."

"If it comes in big—" Gloria began.

"It will. That well is going to live up to its name, 'Homestake Number One'." Fisk made the assertion positively. "It's bound to be a five-thousand-barrel well — or better. Can't help it, in that location."

"I wish I had your confidence," his wife said doubtfully. "I guess I'm too tired to be enthusiastic any more. I meant to ask if it will mean delay. Will you have to stay and see to it?"

"No, no! Everything's arranged. Once I bring it in, Nolan can take charge."

"I'd die if we missed that boat. The well should have been in a month ago, but"—Gloria sighed—"something always seems to go wrong in this business. Just at the last moment. Disappointment, heart-break—oh, I hate it! Hate it! I'm so nervous I could scream—"

"She's just a tired, sick little kid." Fisk spoke comfortingly and stroked his wife's hair with a mother's touch. "This horried old desert has worn her out, but it's going to make her well and happy and—rich. We've made a hard fight, honey, but it's nearly over. A little more courage, a little more patience!"

Think First-Born Twins Must Die

A Transvaal native custom has led to a native named Maliti being sentenced to 15 years' hard labour for murder in Pretoria.

The custom demands that when twins are born the first one is killed. Evidence was brought that Maliti was present when his wife gave birth to twins, and when the second one was born he dislocated the neck of the first.

The existence of the custom was held by the jury to be an extenuating circumstance, and only this saved Maliti from the death penalty.

Are You Allergic To Face Powder?

Ragweed May Not Bother You But Other Things May Make You Sneeze and Weep

Maybe it's old newspapers, maybe it's house dust, or wool, or carbon paper that gives you that sneeze and that rhinitis or that rash. Or maybe it's your girl's face powder.

People are becoming "allergy conscious," said Dr. P. A. Ticktin, commenting on scientific revelations before the American College of Physicians and Surgeons. He agreed that face-powder, some sorts containing orris root, might affect persons allergic to that substance.

"Allergy-Conscious"

Dr. H. B. Anderson said susceptibility to orris root and hence to powders containing it, was "not an who have hay-fever, says Dr. M. H. uncommon allergy." Many persons Brown of the Connaught Laboratories, also suffer from other allergies.

Not many hospitals and certainly few private persons, take all the precautions suggested by Dr. Richard A. Hern to the college, Dr. Brown said. Dr. Hern of the University of Pennsylvania held that the use of old washed blankets instead of new fuzzy ones, no fuzzy toys, no household pets, no stuffed furniture and long staple cotton instead of hair mattresses, would be effective in preventing the acquisition of allergies by young children.

"When there is an allergic child we can find it out by a skin test and take the proper course," he added.

Color of Blue

You are the escaped new ecstasy of May
When bluebells brim and curve; the aster-cloud
Drifting on autumn hills, soon silently
To lay on the still earth its delicate shroud.

You are the veil the nuns of Malta wear,
Hovering over dim, pain-darkened eyes;
Gray-blue of steel, dynamic, coldly bare,
Purring its tireless gliding litanies.

Icicles in stripped glitter of suspense—
Pale Damoclean swords hung perilously;
Capri's Blue Grotto, lapis-walled, intense
With crowded color of the sky and sea.

The blue of tender vesper skies that shed
Their crystal peace upon the happy dead.

The Art of Coffee-Making

Prevalent as is the use of coffee in this country, it is surprising how seldom one is served a really delicious cup of coffee either in homes or restaurants. If you get poor coffee in a restaurant you feel that your money has been wasted and though one never criticizes hospitality, it is disappointing to find a hostess who serves pale, wishy-washy tasteless liquid and calls it coffee.

The question of coffee-making is important because it is made as often if not oftener than any other drink. And it's just as easy to make good coffee as poor coffee. Behind properly made coffee, whether it's boiled, drip or percolated, there are certain fundamental rules. You must have a good blend of coffee; it must be fresh, the grind must be right and then it should be carefully measured and properly brewed.

Coffee made any old way may pass but to get a fragrant, steaming cup of rich and satisfying coffee, it must be made according to a recipe. For those who feel there is room for improvement in the coffee they serve, we are giving the rules for making boiled, drip and percolated coffee.

BOILED COFFEE

Use 1 heaping tablespoon ground coffee and ¼ tablespoon beaten egg for each cup (½ pint) cold water. Combine coffee and egg in pot and mix thoroughly. Pour in water and bring slowly to a boil, stirring coffee down occasionally. Remove from fire immediately and let stand in warm place 3 to 5 minutes. Pour ¼ cup cold water into pot to settle. Strain from grounds through a fine wire strainer, muslin, or cheesecloth. (Boiled coffee may also be prepared without egg but it is less clear.) To get the best boiled coffee, it shouldn't be boiled. By keeping it under boiling point all the good flavors and none of the unpleasant ones are brought out.

DRIP COFFEE

Drip coffee is practically fool proof but a few pointers should be noted in preparing it. Use an all-purpose or drip grind. Use 1 heaping tablespoon coffee for each cup of boiling water. Preheat drip coffee pot. Put coffee in upper compartment of pot. Pour fresh briskly boiling water over it. Cover and let stand in warm place until all water has dripped through once. Remove upper compartment and cover pot. Keep hot until served by placing in pan of boiling water or on an asbestos mat over a low flame.

PERCOLATED COFFEE

Percolated coffee is probably the most generally made because it's so easy, but the right method is apt to be neglected. The starting point is to have all parts of the coffee pot spotless and shining. Use 1 heaping tablespoon ground coffee for each cup (½ pint) of cold water. Pour cold water into pot. Set percolator basket in pot and put coffee in it. Cover. Let percolate slowly and gently 10 to 15 minutes.

Whenever we have tasted a cup of perfect coffee, no matter what the method of making it was, we know that behind it is a history of a good blend; freshness; proper preparation and an immaculately clean coffee pot. That's why it's impossible to say which of the three methods is best—they're all best when properly made.

System Needed In Dishwashing

Few Simple Gadgets, Plenty of Hot Water and Soap

The first step in easy dishwashing has nothing to do with the washing. It is merely a matter of scraping the food from the dishes, rinsing them under the hot water faucet, and stacking them in neat piles near the sink. These preliminary steps are time savers, but the important part of good dishwashing technique is to start with a dish pan full of hot soapy water and to keep changing the water as soon as it becomes soiled and the suds die down.

Abundant soapsuds and hot water are the best kind of insurance against disease germs whether the dishes are washed in a dishpan or with some other modern device. Cold, flat suds are ineffective germ removers. They slow up the washing and leave glassware streaky and dull.

Immaculate dishmops and towels are necessary for every batch of dishes. Soiled cloths are not only unpleasant to handle; they undo all the good work of the soap and water.

Glamour Girls Vanishing Fast

Movie Men Recognize the Public Soon Grows Tired of One-type Actresses

The glamour girls are going fast from the screen and Henry King, a noted Hollywood director, is happy about the whole idea.

Intriguing actresses always will be in the foreground, but they must offer more than just feminine charm, declared Mr. King.

"Mere man is beset with so many problems these days," King pointed out, "that he goes to the theatre for music, comedy, or a stirring artistic story. He wants to forget his troubles—lose himself in the picture.

"The old-type glamour girl was noticeably in the foreground of each film, but not always an integral part of the picture. She made an appeal to the audience that was direct.

Prolong Careers

"Actresses became known to the public as glamour girls, became typed in the public mind, and audiences wouldn't accept them in any other kind of a story or role afterward.

"Producers now are much smarter than they were. They change the type of roles of their players from picture to picture — with an eye not only to present box-office demands but with the firm intention of avoiding typing star players —thus prolonging their screen careers.

"As a case in point, Alice Faye started in pictures as a singer. She has been placed in first one type of role and then another by Darryl F. Zanuck ever since.

"Alice Faye decidedly is the new type of screen favorite, versatile, beautiful and extremely talented."

More Boys Than Girls A Problem

Outnumber Them Two To One Child Guidance Bureau Shows

Boys outnumbered girls two to one in the total of "problem children" treated by the Child Guidance Bureau of New York City schools, according to the report of the department of education.

The cause of this wide differential was attributed, in part, to the sympathetic treatment girls receive from teachers and, in part, to the inclination of girls to hide personality disturbances.

The report shows that nearly 75 per cent. of "problem children", taken under the bureau's wing, had been helped to satisfactory or partial adjustment of psychiatric, psychological and physical troubles.

Five years ago the department of education inaugurated the Child Guidance Bureau, which in addition to treating children for various disaffections, undertakes to train teachers and parents to detect many causes of youthful disturbances.

Case studies were cited to show the important bearing home conditions have on a child's school progress. A boy of nine, normally brilliant who failed constantly, was found to be the butt of a bitter feud between his mother and grandmother who lived with them.

Teach Adults, Expert Urges

Education Is Weapon in Hands Of Democracies Against Totalitarianism

HALIFAX.—Adult education as a means to strengthen democracies against influence of totalitariarism was stressed by Dr. Morse Cartwright, New York, director of the American Association of Adult Education, addressing the 18th annual session of the Canadian Education Association here.

Dr. Cartwright's speech was delivered at a dinner which marked the conclusion of the society's Halifax sittings. The convention will meet again in Saint John, N.B., and later in Charlottetown.

Dr. Cartwright said all significant political changes had occurred in the name of democracy. He declared the principle of majority rule under the system gave rights to minorities economic and social.

Household Hints

Instead of sewing shields into your summer frocks and blouses, it is quicker to sew snap fasteners to the armpits and the corresponding half to the shield. In this way, the shield can easily be clipped in to the dress and taken out again for washing. Also, one pair of shields does for several dresses.

To save a lot of hard scrubbing when a man's shirt cuffs get very soiled, try dipping them in made starch before soaking the shirt. The dirt comes out quite easily after this treatment and the cuffs aren't weakened by constant scrubbing.

Store pickles in small jars instead of in a few large ones. If you use big ones, you may find that the solid pickles rise above the vinegar and go musty. Try fastening down your jam pot covers with a strip of wide adhesive tape instead of string — it makes the jars absolutely air-tight. The bottled fruit will have corks instead of covers. Boil those corks and press them into the bottle while they are still hot. When they cool, they will swell a little and become really tight.

Apply cold water at once to blood stains and they will come out.

Coffee stains require boiling water poured through them, also at once—so do fruit stains.

Cocoa stains like to be washed in cold water first and then boiling water poured through them.

Many people have furniture made of the new woods —limed, or pickled—and quite a number ruin it by not knowing how to clean it. Both limed and pickled woods do not require more than dusting and rubbing with dry, clean cloths. If there is a mark or a stain, it can be removed with a cloth well wrung out of soapy water.

If you have a door in a dark side passage and find difficulty in finding the keyhole when the moon is not shining, buy a tiny pot of phosphorescent paint and dab a little round the keyhole.

LESSON X
SAMUEL: SPIRITUAL REVIVAL
I Samuel 7:1-17

Printed Text—1 Samuel 7:3-13

Golden Text.—Direct your hearts unto Jehovah, and serve him only. 1 Samuel 7:3.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

Time.—1121-1101 B.C.

Place.—Kiriath-jearim was located about seven and one-half miles from Jerusalem; Mizpah was in the tribe of Benjamin, and may be what is now known as Mount Scopus, immediately north of Jerusalem; Ebenezer was also a few miles north of Jerusalem, between the cities of Mizpah and Shen, though we do not know its exact location.

3. And Samuel. Where had Samuel been all of these years, and what had he been doing? How we should like to know definitely! Already his fame as a prophet had spread throughout the land, and the Israelites, though depressed, were inclined to listen to his words more than to the words of any other leader of their day.

Levite, Nazirite, prophet, he possessed every qualification for attracting respect and acting as teacher. A life of holiness and self-denial, consistent in every particular, well known to all Israel, carried with it an authority that could not be acknowledged by every real Israelite. Spake unto all the house of Israel, saying, If ye do return unto Jehovah with all your heart, then put away the foreign gods and the Ashtaroth from among you, and direct your hearts unto Jehovah and serve him only; and he will deliver you out of the hand of the Philistines. At Ramah, where his influence was greatest, he raised an altar and performed the worship of Jehovah with such faithful Israelites as he could find to join him. Steadily and warily he won his way into the hearts of his countrymen. With unwearied zeal he went up and down among them from one end of the land to the other reproving, rebuking, exhorting. He recalled to mind their ancient glory, infused into their hearts the long-forgotten ideas so familiar to their fore[illegible] fathers—the special providence that watched over them, the guidance once exercised, the prosperity consequent upon obedience, the punishment that followed the infringement of divine commands.

Paganism Put Away

4. Then the children of Israel did put away Baalim and the Ashtaroth and served Jehovah only. It is a great day for any family, for any man, for any nation, when strange gods, false deities, idols of every kind, are definitely put away.

5. And Samuel said, Gather all Israel to Mizpah, and I will pray for you unto Jehovah. "Mizpah" means watch-tower, and was the meeting-place of the national assembly. It was located in the tribe of Benjamin.

6. And they gathered together to Mizpah. And drew water, and poured it out before Jeohvah, and fasted on that day, and said there, We have sinner against Jehovah. And Samuel judged the children of Israel in Mizpah.

The pouring forth of water may have implied that they poured from their full hearts fruits of penitence and tears; that they desired by the heaviness of their grief to wash their land free from the accumulated evil of the past years. Here is probably the first time in twenty years that Israel made a public confession of her sin.

Defeat of the Philistines

7. And when the Philistines heard that the children of Israel were gathered together to Mizpah, the lords of the Philistines went up against Israel. And when the children of Israel heard it, they were afraid of the Philistines. 8. And the children of Israel said to Samuel, Cease not to cry unto Jehovah our God for us, that he will save us out of the hand of the Philistines. 9. And Samuel took a sucking lamb, and offered it for a whole burnt-offering unto Jehovah: and Samuel cried unto Jehovah for Israel; and Jehovah answered him. How altogether different is the [illegible] tines drew near to battle against Israel; but Jehovah thundered with a great thunder on that day upon the Philistines and discomfited them; and they were smitten down before Israel. The word here translated "discomfited" expresses the idea of a confusion resulting from sudden panic.

11. And the men of Israel went out of Mizpah, and pursued the Philistines, and smote them, until they came under Beth-car.

"Stone of Help"

12. Then Samuel took a stone, and set it between Mizpah and Shen, and called the name of it Eben-ezer, saying, Hitherto hath Jehovah helped us. The exact location of Ebenezer, the word meaning "the stone of help," is not known, but it must have been situated a few miles north of Jerusalem between the cities of Mizpah and Shen. Ebenezer was the exact place, where, twenty years before, Israel had suffered defeat at the loss of the ark.

13. So the Philistines were subdued, and they came no more within the border of Israel: and the hand of Jehovah was against the Philistines all the days of Samuel. From this time Samuel was certainly without any question the supreme leader of Israel, and so he continued to be down to the time of his death. There is a lesson here for every child of God; when we really turn to God in confession, willing to yield to him, and he wins a victory for us in our life, as he absolutely can on every occasion, we not only recover all the territory in our life which had been lost to the enemy, but we gain even more.

A Wonderful Leader

Samuel is worthy to stand at the side of Moses. It is not without reason that he has been regarded as in dignity and importance occupying the position of a second Moses in relation to the people. In his exhortations and warnings the Deuteronomic discourses of Moses are reflected and repeated. He delivers the nation from the hand of the Philistines, as Moses from Pharaoh and the Egyptians, and opens up for them a new national era of progress and order under the rule of the kings whom they have desired.

Claims Crime Is "Necessary"

Psychologist Says It Keeps The World Away From Savagery —Moral Acts Those in Accord With Public Welfare

A prominent psychologist asserted last week if there were no law breakers and all laws were obeyed the world would revert to savagery.

In the law-breaking class he put the Christian marytrs.

The psychologist — Dr. Knight Dunlap, professor of psychology at the University of California at Los Angeles — championed the "necessity" of crime in an article for the forthcoming (September) issue of the California Monthly, publication of the University of California's alumni.

Some Laws Are Wrong

Dr. Dunlap argued that there was nothing really wrong about violating a "bad" law and that the "crime" involved might even benefit society in the end by contributing to the elimination of the improper statute.

"If we assume that it is one's duty to promote public welfare and to avoid acts against public welfare," he said, "we can hardly avoid the conclusion that under certain circumstances it is one's duty to commit crime. This situation arises because there are laws which really are detrimental to public welfare."

Says the King Coming in 1939

To Canada and U. S.—Liverpool Paper Declares Trip 'Almost Certainty'

The Liverpool Post in its London letter last week said the King and Queen will "almost certainly" visit Canada and the United States during 1939, although no plans have yet been discussed and no invitations issued.

It was understood, the column said, that Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of Canada, mentioned unofficially the possibility of a visit though an invitation from Canada would come through the prime minister.

Will Make Arrangements

The column added that Lord Stanley, dominions secretary might discuss arrangements with Prime Miniser Mackenzie King.

At Ottawa, Mr. King recently said the King needed no invitation to visit the Dominion. Canada always stood ready to welcome its sovereign.

Negroes Propose African Homeland

Would Ask Gifts of Territory From France and England—Liberia as Nucleus

A demand that the British Government act to improve the social and economic lot of the negroes of the West Indies was contained in a resolution passed at the final session of the convention of the Universal Negro Improvement Association in Toronto last week.

The resolution pointed out that 1938 was the 100th anniversary of the West Indian negroes, and called on British authorities to rescue them from what it termed wretched economic conditions.

Would Improve Race

The 180 men and women delegates, who represent a 4,000,000 membership scattered all over the world, were in session for eleven days, and considered mainly the position of the race and the means at hand to improve it. They re-elected Marcus Garvey of London, Eng., President-General, and Miss Ethel Collins of New York City, Secretary. Thomas Harvey of Philadelphia, was elected Chancellor.

Ultimate objectives of the association is the setting up of a homeland for the negroes of the world in Africa, with the present negro State of Liberia forming the nucleus to which would be added territorial gifts from France and England.

How Daylight Saving Began

Was Adopted Generally in Europe During the Great War —Called "Summer Time"

Daylight saving was adopted in nearly every country in Europe in the second year of the War, the idea being that, by getting people up an hour earlier, there would be a great saving in fuel for lighting and heating. In many countries, however, it was dropped when war ended.

"Summer time" is observed today in France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Spain and Portugal. Summer time bills were also approved in Canada in 1934, and in New Zealand in 1927. The United States seems unable to make up its mind. Some states use it, while others do not.

He Originated It

The idea was advocated long before the war by a Chelsea (England) builder, William Willett. Willett was himself an early riser, and used to ride in Petts Wood, Chislehurst, on summer mornings before coming to town for business. In the evenings he

It was while enjoying these recreations in 1907 that he conceived the idea of extending the hours of daylight available for leisure. He devoted himself to a campaign, and in 1908 Mr. (afterwards Sir Sibert) Pearce introduced a Bill in the British House of Commons to put the clock on by law. At first it was laughed at, but the Bill continued to come up year after year with increasing support. Willett never lived to see the Act in force, for he died in March, 1915. A memorial to him now stands in Petts Wood.

Summer time was introduced for the first time on May 21, 1916, but it was not until 1925 that the final and permanent Act was passed.

VILLAGE MUST VOTE ON $150,000 ISSUE

(Toronto Star)

The Ontario Municipal board, in a decision handed down recently, requires the electors of Forest Hill village to vote on a proposed $150,000 debenture issue to finance the erection of a new high school. An application for permission to float the issue is refused until ratepayers vote.

The board notes the proposed village debenture debt "while substantial is not unsound." The commissioners declare "the board has established a policy of requiring all proposed projects of municipal funds, which involve a substantial capital expenditure, to be submitted first to the ratepayers. "

In all similar applications this rule has been enforced, the decision states, and there is no justification for making an exception for Forest Hill. "The Board feels," the statement continues, "since rate-payers will pay for the expenditure, it is fit the ratepayers be given opportunity of expressing their opinions."

"Accordingly," the decision concludes, "the board must refuse the application, but will again take it under consideration upon receipt of result of the vote."
