The exterior of the new Matilda Community hall is almost complete, with work on the interior scheduled to start within the next few days. Here workmen put the finishing touches to the metal trim on the soffit and fascia.

Progress report

Matilda Township Community Hall

A construction project in the dead of winter is one of the most demanding, frustrating and downright bone-chilling jobs around. If you doubt that fact, ask Cilfford Sabourin or any of the men on his crew. They're the ones responsbile for putting up the exterior shell of the new Matilda Township, Community Hall and since they began last fall, have faced almost every obstacle that winter weather can provide.

The outside of the building is virtually finished, with only the installation of the windows and doors left before the hall will take on its final look. In getting it there, Mr. Sabourin, a foreman with Entwistle Construction, the contractor for the hall, has faced ice storms, snowstorms, wind, and heavy snows.

Winter construction at the best of times is a challenge. Mr. Sabourin and his men have had to shovel snow and chop ice to find materials, dig pathways to get to buildings and run to and from the only warm spot on the site, a small shack.

"We were to have finished the building by late January," says Mr. Sabourin, "But there's no chance we will make that date now. "But the building should be ready for occupancy by the end of March or the first part of April".

There have been some delays in getting materials, but the biggest problem has been the weather. No job goes as quickly in the cold weather as it does in the summer and the Entwistle crew has been plagued with more than their share of winter. There have been a number of days that were lost entirely because of the weather, and many more when valuable time was spent digging materials out of the snow, shovelling and chopping ice and warming frozen fingers and cheeks.

But the worst is over now, says Mr. Sabourin. Next week, the crew will move indoors, having completed the exterior of the building. The metal siding is all in place and this week the men were installing the trim under the eaves. Only the installation of windows and doors is necessary now. Tarpaulins fill the holes where they will eventually go.

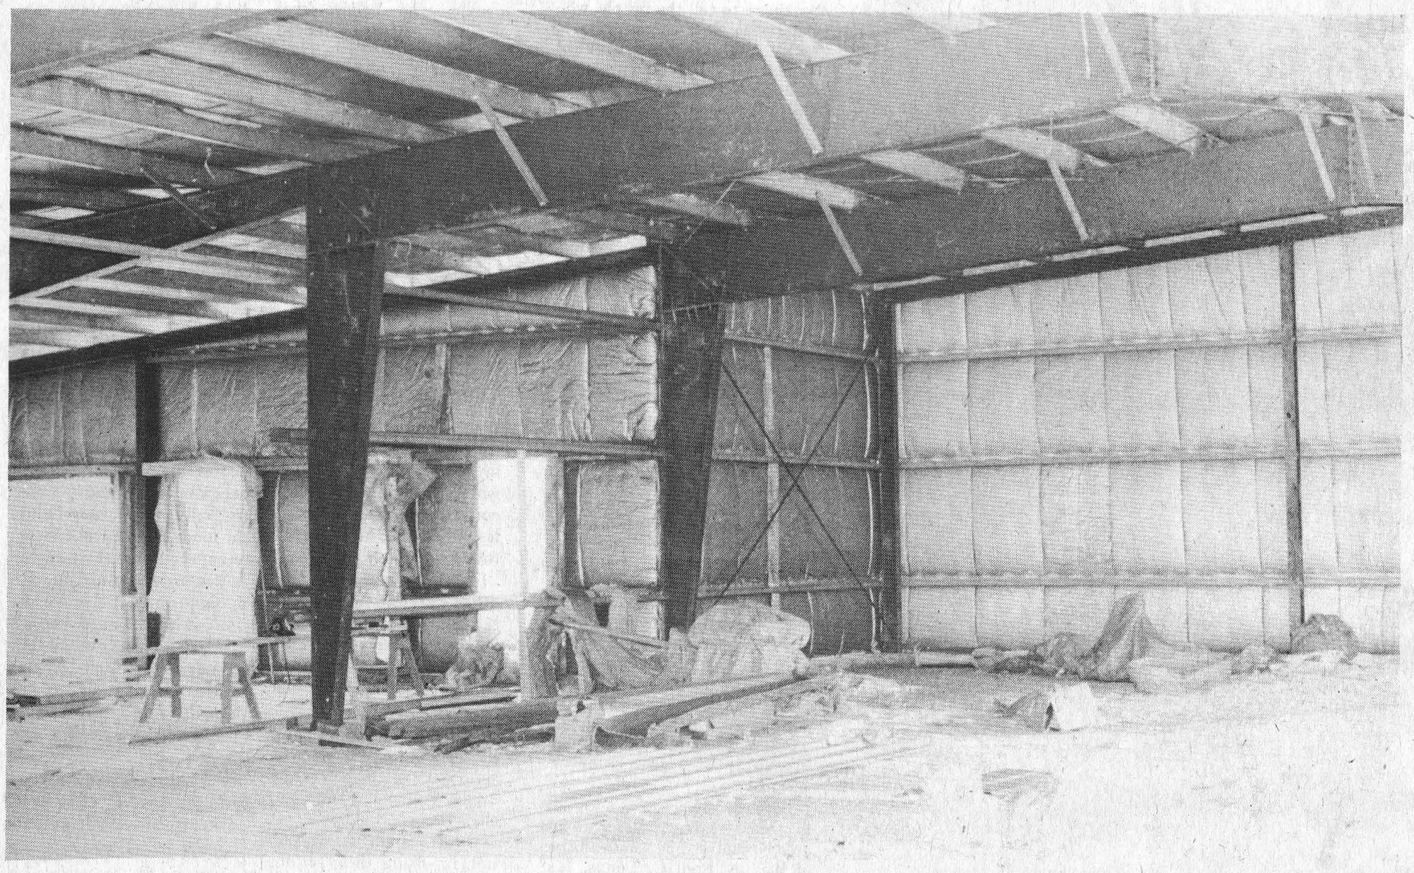
The next job, according to Mr. Sabourin is to make the inside tight and to get the heat on to take the frost out of the floor. Propane heaters will be used for a week or so to prepare the floor for pouring concrete. "The architect will take samples to make certain there's no frost left before we pour the floor," he says.

Once the floor is in place, the electricians, plumbers and drywall people can get to work. All those jubs have been subcontracted by Entwistles and should go quickly.

The insulation in the building was installed when the roof and exterior siding were put on. According to Mr. Sabourin, it is a special type of insulation designed for steel buildings. There are four inches in the walls and six inches in the ceilings, giving a factor of R28. A vinyl vapor barrier can be seen in the photos, on the inner surfaces of the insulation.

The 100 by 50 foot hall will be electrically heated and will have complete kitchen, bar and washroom facilities. By the time it is completed, the hall will cost in the area of $230,000. and a fund raising campaing that has been underway since September has already raised a substantial amount. Combined with Wintario grants, a recreation grant and Canada Works grant, the building will put little or no drain on local tax resources.

The latest in a series of half and half draws to raise funds for the hall will be held this Saturday and there is still time to pick up a ticket. Winners in the past few draws have been averaging from $500. to $600.



This photo was taken looking diagonally across the new hall. At left is the area which will house the kitchen, washrooms and service areas. All insulation in both the roof and ceiling was applied at the time the exterior was applied.

OPP charge 3 in liquor store B&E

Three local young men have been charged following a break-in on Tuesday night at the Iroquois Liquor Store. Store manager Tom Warren told the Post that he was called at home by OPP officials around 1:30 on Wednesday morning and notified that there had been a break-in at the store. When he arrived, OPP were on the scene and had several people detained.

The thieves apparently attempted to break in unnoticed by breaking a half inch thickness of plastic laminate in the top of the entry alcove at the store. Once inside, they were in the process of checking out the store when it is believed they received a signal from outside. In their haste to escape, they broke the front door glass but were apprehended by police who were on the scene.

According to Mr. Warren, first indications were that nothing had been stolen, but he and Ambert Brown were in the process of doing a complete inventory as the Post was being put together.

The three will appear in court next Tuesday morning in Morrisburg.

New Year's weekend almost as quiet as Christmas

On December 31st a car and truck collided on County Road 1, just north of Iroquois, but there were no injuries. On January 1st, a 2 car collision on County Road 2, north of Irena caused minor injuries to two people, but with that exception, there were no accidents with any bodily injury over the New Year's holiday.

New Years was another quiet holiday weekend in the Seaway valley. Ontario Provincial Police in Morrisburg report only one impaired driver was charged over the long weekend and two charges were laid under the Liquor License Act.

Over the holiday week, officers investigated 6 accidents, but none of them were of a serious nature and there were no injuries of any consequence.

On December 30th an accident on Highway 2 at Morrisburg caused damage to a car and tractor trailer, and also on that date, a car on Highway 401 suffered $900. worth of damage, but neither accident involved any personal injury.

Shopping spree winners

A $100 shopping spree at S & F was an unplanned Christmas present for the Mayhew family of Dundas Street in Iroquois. Rosalie and Willard and their children Janice and Jason went shopping last Thursday morning at S & F, following their win in the series of draws sponsored by members of the Iroquois business community for a Christmas promotion.

New dental office to open January 16

The dental office of Dr. Steven Zajacz in the Iroquois Medical Centre will be open for business the week of January 16th. In a telephone interview with the Post on Tuesday, Dr. Zajacz stated that his equipment is installed and a telephone has been connected and that beginning on January 9th there would be someone in the office to take calls.

Dr. Zajacz stated that he will be working by himself for the first little while, treating patients in Iroquois on Wednesdays and Fridays. He is working on negotiations with a second dentist to be there on other days in the week, but nothing definite yet. As well, he stated that he is attempting to hire a graduate dentist from college in May and set up a schedule that will have an assistant and will be open three days a week in Iroquois.

Anyone wishing to make an appointment is invited to call 652-2066 after the 9th of January or to call the Prescott office at 925-2887.

Counties asks motorists help

The duties of winter maintenance crews are demanding and often conflicting. Early plowing of all the County's 444 miles of road, wide clear roads for safety and no ice, are the primary demands. Roadside considerations, environmental concerns, the size of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry County Road System, and budget, are the conflicting demands.

The County roads are your secondary highways, and in assessing maintenance goals, emphasis is rightly placed on service to through traffic. The average plow route is 60 lane miles long, and takes between 3 and 5 hours to cover, depending on snow conditions. Your co-operation can help us in achieving our goal for you -- safe winter driving.

Parked cars along both rural and urban County roads create problems for the owner and the road user. When a plowman pulls out to miss a parked vehicle, as well as that car being blocked in, the useable

Highway blocked by electrical generator

Highway 401 near Ingleside was blocked for two hours last Thursday to allow a crane to remove a flatbed trailer from the roadway. The trailer had been involved in an accident on Wednesday evening that had resulted in a 50 ton electrical generator being left on the highway.

The highway was closed for two hours shortly after noon on Thursday by OPP from Long Sault to allow the crane to remove the flatbed and reload the generator.

According to reports, the trailer was eastbound on the highway when the unit goosenecked and forced apart the truck and trailer. The generator came off the flatbed and came to rest at the side of the road. It was towed to the shoulder of the road for the night and was removed without incident on Thursday afternoon.

There were no injuries in the accident.

TROUBLE IN THE HOME

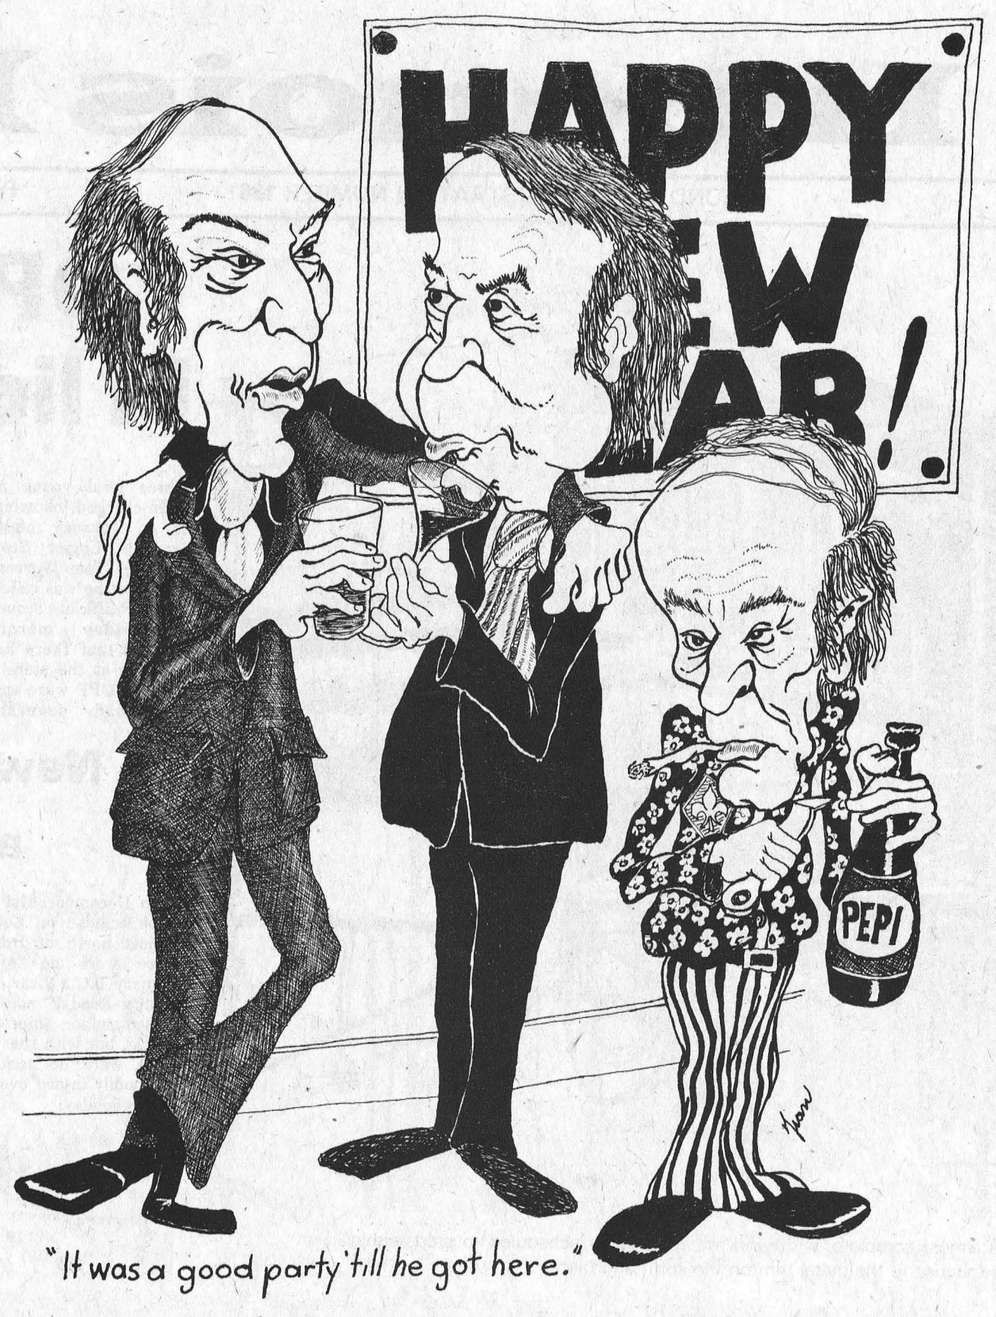
Professor M.V.C. Jeffreys, an English educationist uttered this lament a few years ago: "Housing, however imperfect, has never been better; but for many people home has never meant less."

It does seem that many homes today are primarily dormitories and private restaurants and places to stay while the car is being repaired. Part of the trouble is the pace at which so many of us try to live. Frantic busyness is a widespread affliction these days: we are frantic in our work, in our play, even in our relaxation. And all this frenzy does menace home and family: many parents find it difficult to take sufficient time for sustaining good relations with their children.

Some parents today seem to be more the proprietors of their children than parents. It is not really a home if there is not much time for easy and spontaneous relations, if there are not expressions of real interest in the concerns and problems and idiosyncrasies of all, if there are deficiencies in expressions of the love which is a concern, sometimes a sacrificial concern, for the good of others.

No occasional and slickly synthesized togetherness, even when helped by modern conveniences and ornamented by the latest gimmicks, can compensate for the personal qualities which make a home really a home. As Dr. Karl Menninger, one of the most influential psychiatrists of our time, has warned, "Swamping a child with advantages is often a substitute for giving him time, interest, companionship, and love."

There is much evidence that the influence of the home in the development of personality and character is far more significant than the combined influence of the school and the church and all the community agencies with which children have contact. And children do not develop values mainly from their being told about them: it is the values which parents embody and express in the ordinary course of their lives that influence their children.



"It was a good party 'till he got here."

by J.M.

With the new year upon us, there's no need for anyone to spend it alone; at least not if you're a farmer. We have a fair number of different papers coming to our office here at the Post, but none with a classified section as entertaining as the one in a farm oriented paper from the west. Right beside the classified ads for parts for an Allis Chalmers or a John Deere or for proven coyote traps are the farm personals. Of course there are the ads for the illustrated adults only catalogues but there are also offers of ladies for marriage. No farmer should be without a good strong wife, and on that premise he can choose from a number of Orientals or Mexican ladies. The ads state that they make wonderful wives and that for only a dollar you can have a full colour catalogue of these potential milkhouse helpers. And ladies, if you're on the lookout for a new environment, there are plenty of gentlemen seeking female companionship with the ultimate goal being matrimony. And even if you're happily married, the paper lists some dandy remedies for baldness, bed-wetting, dandruff and arthritis.

The whole thing takes on a different perspective when you read a little further and come to the heading of seed grains for sale. A small notice states that any advertisement listing a seed for sale in Canada must conform to the provisions of the Seeds Act under the provisions of the Canada Department of Agriculture. The one ad for seed grain was straight-forward and simple. Wonder if we'll ever reach a point in this country when advertising for human beings and arthritis "cures" will be controlled as strictly as ads for seed grain.

Early morning listeners to Ottawa's country misic station CKBY will notice the absence of Bill Inglis on the 6 to 9 shift. He has taken a new job as a public relations man for McGuiness Distillers. He was quoted in the Ottawa Citizen as saying that he had not found his career in radio to be financially rewarding. Having begun my career in radio and having worked at one of the same stations Bill worked at, I can fully understand what he means. It's unfortunate that there isn't a more even distribution of the wealth in radio, but in any case, we'll miss the "Willie" portion of the "Willie and Hal" show.

Fashions and styles come and go and somehow, it's never the right thing at the right time. Take this Christmas for example; for the first time in my life, I received a shirt in the newest fashion colour -- dirty white, or if you please, gray. In the old bachelor days, it was known as tattletale gray and was far from being a fashion colour when white shirts were the only acceptable thing. Now that I'm married white shirts are out and grey is in; I was a few years ahead of my time. There's no justice.

Modern society

Don't you get a little tired of the touchiness of modern society in which, no matter where you step, it's on somebody's toes, no matter what you say or write, it's a slur on someone's background, color, creed or convictions?

About the only areas left in which one may chance a remark without fear of inflicting a wound are politics and sex.

It's extremely difficult to inflict even a bruise on a politician. He must have a fat ego in the first place, and he quickly acquires a brass hide to go with it. Add an ability to talk out of both sides of the mouth at once and a certain skill in straddling fences, and you have cabinet material.

In the field of sex, there don't seem to be any limits any more to what can be said, presented or stimulated. Movie, magazines and theatre club us over the head with raw, unembellished sex, or seek to titillate the spook in each of us with highly-embellished, freaky sex until the whole once-exciting subject has become a crashing bore.

Aside from sex and politics then, there is scarcely an aspect of the human scene where even angels fear to tread, lest they step on someone's sensibilities.

Ethnic jokes are out, black is beautiful, gefillte fish is glorious, Rhodesia is rotten, poor people are more noble than rich people, gay is gorgeous, and the only real sin is to be old.

Lord forbid that we should ever go back to the days when a Catholic was a "mick" or a "dogan", a black person was a "nigger," an Italian was a "wop" a Chinese was a "chink", and so on.

But I do get heartily sick of a society in which you have to tippy-toe all the time for fear of offending some touchy minority, or trespassing inadvertently on someone's weird religious affiliations.

We are developing into a society with a snobbish sort of reverse prejudice in which everybody is leaning over backwards in order to appear not even to be breathing on anyone else.

As a result, we are losing much of that good old Canadian crustiness and turning into a nation of nice nellies in whose mouths margarine wouldn't melt.

Even our media reflect this trend in our society. With few exceptions, our newspapers are as bland as blanc mange. The letters to the editor have more bite, and are often better written, than the editorials.

Our magazines are either tiresomely "liberal" or narrowly nationalistic, or both. Tied in tight bundles, they make better firewood than they do reading matter.

Television and radio news reporting, most of it culled from the late editions of newspapers, is incredibly unimaginative and repetitious. TV programs, on the whole, are purepap, offensive by being so innoffensive.

Public figures are so frightened of offending somebody or losing a few votes, that their public utterances came out as mush wrapped in marshmallow.

What this country, and this society, need is a good dash of cold water from somewhere, to wake us from our mind-numbing, paralyzing "niceness."

We need a Bob Edwards or a Grattan O'Leary to jolt us with some honest vituperation, some colorful name calling, some hard facts, and some common sense.

We need some politicians with guts, who don't give a diddle for the popularity polls, and who would give us the facts of life without any sugar coating.

We need some educators with backbone to tell the people who claim that Huckleberry Finn is racist and The Merchant of Venice is anti-semitic and Catch-22 is dirty and The Diviners is disgusting, to go fly a kite.

We need about 10,000 fewer smart-ass commentators on what is wrong with this country and a few hundred honest men and women to tell us what is right with it.

We need far fewer "reasonable" people, who would refuse to accept something just because it's always been done that way, or someone might be upset if things were changed.

We need some thundering editorials, some pulpits pounded, some stiff jail sentences for racism, some honesty in high places.

We certainly don't need a "good war" or a "good depression" to make Canadians stop whining and bitching and mealy mouthing, but we certainly need a "good" something to turn us back into the sturdy, individualistic people we used to be.

I haven't the answers. I'm no prophet. But I'm sick to the ears of a society that thinks: old people are a nuisance; young people are never a nuisance; supermarkets are sexy; social workers can make miracles; and everybody is as good as everybody else.

Perhaps if you agree with me to some extent, you would enjoy reading The Golden Age of B.S. by Fred C. Dobbs. It's rambling and it's coarse in spots, but it's right on.

Think small
by Jim Smith

Who's In Charge Here?

Democracy, as the saying goes, is a form of government where elected officials take over the ship of state and attempt to steer it in all directions at once. Democracy is a form of government where one is free to say what one thinks – even if one doesn't think.

Democracy, so the theory goes, is the ultimate expression of majority rule. The majority elects representatives who proceed to enact laws which reflect the opinions of that majority which elected them. There are even people who believe that democracy is being practiced in Canada.

Unfortunately, some of the things which seem too good to be true, aren't. That's certainly true of our "democracy". It's not entirely clear just what we do have – but it certainly isn't democracy.

Kenneth McDonald, a Canadian political writer of some standing, recently published a new book titled "Green Maple: How Canada Could Attain Peace, Order and Good Government". Among McDonald's points is reference to a joint Commons-Senate Committee investigating methods by which a governing party could evade the Parliamentary process. The study found that there are at least "14,000 regulations and other statutory instruments that allow Cabinet and individual ministers, usually on the advice of civil servants, to make decisions without Parliamentary approval."

Note the two key elements in the Committee's conclusion: (a) that ministers can evade Parliament and (b) that the civil servants can control the ministers who are not reporting their actions back to Parliament. (b) leads to (a) which makes a mockery of the concept of elected "representatives".

Even within their own party, MPs rarely have a voice in decisions. Backbenchers have virtually no say in party policy. Non-elected senators, party directors and fund-raisers often influence the final outcome. The dwindling reserves of talented manpower in the ranks of Ottawa's backbenchers can be traced directly back to their lowly status.

Democracy depends on power resting with the elected representatives as individuals. Even party unity can defeat the democratic process. Backbenchers can be yanked off Commons committees if they fail to side with the party philosophy. Government backbenchers have no opportunity to criticize waste or bungling in the government – unless they are prepared to leave the party. In the United States, where members of standing committees cannot be removed until they have completed their legal terms, democracy is much better served.

The decline of democracy is of particular concern to the small business community. When a small group of people dictate the political decisions for the entire country, only those groups with the loudest voice will be represented. Political strength is tied to economic power. Consequently the preservation of a well-oiled Parliamentary system is vital if the ordinary firms and people of this country are to be properly represented.

It's time we were all allowed to share in the political mistakes rather than letting a handful of men in backrooms have all the fun.

Delegates to UCO's annual meeting

Almost 1,000 people attended UCO's 30th Annual Meeting, December 13 at Toronto's Royal York Hotel. Included among those were 362 delegates representing 73 branches and 53 member co-operatives of United Co-operatives of Ontario. Delegates reviewed progress made during the fiscal year ending September 24, 1977 and participated in the afternoon question period.

The Annual Meeting represents a culmination of the co-operative's democratic process which includes spring and fall meetings in each of UCO's nine zones.

United Co-operatives of Ontario is the largest farm supply and marketing co-operative in Ontario. It supplies members with complete lines of farm inputs including feed, seed, fertilizer, petroleum and hardware through CO-OP outlets across the province. In addition, UCO markets grain, livestock and poultry.

Hydro voltage test scheduled

As part of a scheduled series of tests, Ontario Hydro will reduce system voltage by 5 percent on January 11, 1978.

The test will cover two one-hour periods -- 12.30 p.m. to 1:30 p.m. and 6:15 p.m. to 7:15 p.m. -- and is not expected to affect residential, commercial or industrial customers.

"Very few customers will even be aware that anything is happening," says Roger Whitehead, system operation manager.

It is estimated that a 5 percent voltage reduction will reduce system demand by 2½ per cent which would be about 380 megawatts, enough to supply the needs of a city the size of London, Ontario.

The test is standard procedure, carried out twice a year to determine the advantages of voltage reduction; locate operating and any customer problems and ensure that Hydro operations staff is familiar with procedures.

The last voltage reduction took place August 23 this year.

If bad weather or system problems occur January 11, the testing will be delayed two days, to January 13.

Windows stolen

Allen Fraser of Ottawa reported to OPP at Morrisburg the theft of $500. worth of combination windows from a construction site in Matilda Township. Mr. Fraser reported the theft on December 27th, but told police that the windows could have been taken anytime during the past three weeks.

road surface is severly reduced. Under Section 116 (10) of The Highway Traffic Act, it is an offence to park so as to interfere with the clearing of snow. The County will be requesting police assistance if on-street winter parking persists as a problem.

The ever increasing practice of pushing snow from driveways onto and across roads also creates driving hazards throughout the road system. Trails of snow inevitably left on the road, leave unevenness in the driving surface and create slippery sections during freeze-thaw cycles. The extra snow piled on the bank, because of its mass, causes plowmen to narrow in, further reducing the driving surface. Remember, the area of a driveway is not more than 2% of most lots, but we plow between 40% and 80% for road allowance. And reduction of available snow storage area is a reduction in the service possible.

When our plow goes by on the fly (actually only between 30 and 40 km h (20 and 25 mph) remember your friend 10 miles down the road, and your uncle on the Eighth; they require and deserve our prompt attention too.

Bird Notes

Something special usually comes at Christmas time, and this year was no exception; we looked out one morning to see three Goldfinches having breakfast at our feeder. They were in their greenish-yellow winter plumage, and looked so small, after seeing Grosbeaks there everyday; they stayed for about half an hour, and then were gone.

We have suggested several times before, that the local bird population can read, and apparently are faithful patrons of the Post. How else would that Hairy Woodpecker have got word that his presence was requested at a certain feeder on Broadway Cr? The very day after our complaint that no woodpeckers have been around, we had one eating seeds from the tray, shuffling along on his short legs. He decided to visit the feeder next door too, but this one is mounted on a metal pole. "No problem", he thought" I'll climb it". However, metal leaves no leeway for digging in the toes, so Mr. Woodpecker succeeded only in sliding down, fireman-fashion. After two tries, he used the airborne approach and found his way to the top, and his reward for perserverance.

The four Cowbirds are here nearly everyday, and the Grackle is back again after a week's absence. We thought he had not been able to survive the severe weather, but he was here this morning looking fine.

Chickadees and Grosbeaks are not as numerous as we would like to see, but perhaps there will be more later on.

Two very interesting phone calls came in over the weekend. The first was to report a Robin, of all things; it flew into a wooded area near the Dentz farm. Can you imagine driving along a snowy road with the temperature somewhere in the vicinity of -10c, and suddenly a Robin flies by?

The second call was also of the incredible variety and was from the lady who "owns" the Cardinal. This time she had just seen a flock of about 15 Robins. There will be speculation as to whether they were hold-overs from Fall, or an adventuresome lot who began their trip North in December with the protection of the evergreen bush and a nearby orchard for food, they will probably survive, but it will be along winter.

Among our Christmas cards were several with bird pictures: two delightful Owls, a lovely White Dove against a green background, and a pair of tiny red birds sitting on a Holly branch, with these words: I heard a bird sing in the dark of December,
A magical thing, and sweet to remember.

Jr. B's looking for better new year

The Morrisburg Lions are looking for a January that was better than their December. Of the seven league games that they played during the month, they won only one, their first, lost 3 and tied 3. They lost their only tournament game as well but still retain their hold on first place in the St. Lawrence Division, three points ahead of the number two team, the Winchester Hawks.

Still at number three is the Prescott team with 9 points and the Cardinal Broncos still hold reign over the cellar with 3 points.

Christmas week games saw Cardinal lose twelve to three to Spencerville last Wednesday. On Thursday, Winchester lost to Smiths Falls by a score of 8 to 5, and on the weekend Kemptville and Morrisburg lost games to Prescott and Athens respectively.

On Friday night, the Morrisburg Lions led the visiting Athens Aeros 5 to 3 after two periods of play, but fell asleep in the 3rd.

Kevin Mackler opened the scoring 12 seconds into the game, but 76 seconds later Rick Churchill tied the game, and Athens took a 2-1 lead at 15.39.

Leo Lafortune tied the game at 16.42, and in the 2nd period at 13.02 Lafortune scored his 2nd goal of the game and 6th of the season, followed by goals by Mackler at 15.07 and Dean Boyd at 16.58 to give the Lions a 5-2 lead. Dick Michel scored at 18.32 to narrow the Lions lead. Michel scored his 2nd goal at 4.14 of the third, followed by Churchill's 2nd goal at 6.08 to tie the game at 5-5.

Captain Bob McNairn gave the Lions the lead again, at 8:10, but Michel completed his hat trick at 9.41 to tie the game at 6-6. Chris Bresee at 13.21 scored what proved to be the winner for the Aeros. At 14.06 Churchill completed his hat trick adding an insurance goal for an 8-6 win for the Aeros.

Referee G.W. Foss assessed the Aeros 3 of the 4 minors handed out. The Lions played without the services of Bob Casselman, Bryan Rutley, Mike Moran, Doug Dowson, but added Jim Whelan who has been out since he was injured Nov. 18th.

Morrisburg team defeats Swedes

The Morrisburg Midgets had an easy time of it on Monday night when they met the Swedish Midget team. The Morrisburg boys took their guests 10 to 1 in the game that has been sponsored for the last two years by the Morrisburg Lions Club.

Scott Corden of the Morrisburg Midgets was named the Most Valuable Player in the game after scoring three of the 10 Morrisburg goals.

Morrisburg led the Swedes 4 to 1 at the end of the first period and the score remained heavily in favour of the host team through the remainder of the game.

Members of the team enjoyed a dinner at the civic centre prior to the game, with the Morrisburg midgets as their hosts. After the game they were each billeted with a member of the Morrisburg team before their trip on Tuesday to play in the Toronto area.

Iroquois Atoms win own tournament

The annual Atom A Hockey tournament sponsored by the Iroquois Branch 370 of the Royal Canadian Legion was held Thursday December 29th at Cardinal. The Iroquois Atom A's didn't prove to be particularly good hosts, when they captured the "A" Championship and the Legion trophy with three consecutive shutout victories. This is the first time since the inception of the tournament that an Iroquois team has won the "A" title. The B championship is that tournament was won by Morrisburg who defeated last year's champions, the Cardinal Skippy-dippers.

In paving the way to victory, Iroquois first defeated Edwardsburg 5 to 0 and then took out Prescott 3-0 count. This set the stage for the "A" final with Alexandria who are the perennial holders of the Legion trophy and last year's champs.

Alexandria gained entry to the "A" final with a default win over Nepean and an exciting 2 to 1 victory over Cornwall Township.

The plucky Alexandria club just didn't have it this year and the strong Iroquois team pulled off a 3 to 0 win giving goalie Jeff Whitteker his third shutout of the day.

On the "B" side, Cardinal, after losing their first game to Prescott, defeated Edwardsburg 4 to 3 in the only overtime contest of the day and gained entry to the "B" final.

Morrisburg, who suffered a 7 to 5 loss at the hands of Cornwall Township received a bye to the "B" final through the default of Nepean. Cardinal took an early 2 to 0 lead in the exciting "B" final, but Morrisburg fought back gamely to score 4 unanswered goals and take the 4 to 2 win.

The Iroquois Oldtimers trophy, emblematic of the Atom "B" championship was presented to the Morrisburg club by Kent McDermid.

Ed. Hitchinson, President of the Iroquois branch of the Legion, presented the Legion trophy to the Iroquois team and to present finalist and champion crests.

The Iroquois and District Minor Hockey Association expressed thanks to Mr. Hitchinson and the Iroquois Legion for their continued sponsorship of the tournament, the the Iroquois Post for their co-operation, to Kathy Froats and Karen Seeley who looked after the door, and the referee-in-chief Doug Reynolds, who along with Stewart Moffatt, did an excellent job of organizing referees, scorekeepers, and timekeepers.

Two days earlier, the Iroquois Atom A's made it into the A finals of a tournament hosted by their counterparts in Chesterville. They beat out the host Chesterville team 5 to 4 in the first game of the tournament. Chris McDermid scored a tie-breaking goal at 2:49 of overtime.

In their second game, the Iroquois boys defeated Cornwall Township 4 to 2 with Andy Lee receiving the medal for the Most Valuable Player.

They missed out on the A Championship by losing to the Ottawa (Canterbury) entry 6 to 4. The team outplayed the opposition in every way until the final minutes of the third period when Canterbury tied the game on a penalty shot and scored the last goal into an empty net. Mike Veltkamp received the Most Valuable Player medal for the game.

Construction to begin this spring

The expected announcement of expansion was officially released on Wednesday, January 4, and the contents were verification of rumors that had been circulating the village of Cardinal for the past few months.

Approximately 12 million dollars will be involved in the expansion that is expected to begin construction this coming spring.

The race to gain a foothold in the new industry that HFCS [high fructose corn syrup] will create has the Canada Starch Company in full swing to ensure the success of it's investment.

Moving in two phases, the first will involve the construction that is to begin this spring. March 1979 has been scheduled as the completion of this first phase.

The facility that is to become a part of this phase will probably be erected on land now occupied by the swimming pool. Negotiations are currently under way with the village of Cardinal concerning the take over of this site located west of the plant.

The second phase, which is not expected to be completed until the summer of 1980, will involve the needed increase of corn to produce the HFCS. Consumption of corn is expected to increase by almost 20%, depending on the market conditions at the time.

Although this will be a large investment for the company, increases in employment are not expected. Employment will be more stabilized in the sense that the expansion will ensure the plant's production output.

The prospective outlook thought by many was that the expansion would bring down the unemployment level in the area, and although the company does not plan any substantial hiring, the effects of the company investment will be felt by those who are in the construction facet.

Local people will be hired, and this will be an indirect shot in the arm for the area's economy, which like the rest of the country, is suffering a hard winter employment wise.

Police Report

Cardinals air of dignity almost violated

A quiet week finished off the 1977 year for the Cardinal police. New Year's eve saw only one incident in which an 18 year old youth from Massachusetts was charged with willful damage.

Approximatley $300 damage was sustained to a home on Lower Street. The damage was confined to a door and windows of the building.

On Tuesday, January 3, a minor accident occurred on Middle Street. No injuries were sustained in the two vehicle collison. One vehicle was only slightly scratched, while the other had approximately $300.

On the lighter side of the week's report, Chief Kolodziechuk reported that skunks (those of the four-legged species) were visiting the village and one had to be shot. Otherwise, no one's nostril's were infringed upon.

No injuries were sustained in a two car collison that occurred on County Road 22 at the intersection with concession road four.

The December 29 accident, investigated by Prescott OPP, involved a car driven by Rudy Zahn of R.R. 2 Iroquois, and a pick-up truck operated by Raymond S. Heuvel of R.R. 3, Prescott.

The truck had $1,500 damage to it, while the car's damage was estimated at $500.

Legion Branch rings in the new Branch 105 Royal Canadian Legion held their Annual New Years Eve Party to a capacity crowd.

The merry-makers enjoyed dancing to music supplied by Cardinals own Mud Creek.

Gaily decorated hats and noise makers and coloured streamers were much in evidence as the count-down to midnight approached, at which time a shower of balloons were released as the revellers welcomed in 1978.

A very tasty buffet lunch was served with lots of coffee for the road.

The Energy Savers

Your end of the pipeline

Most of us in Canada heat our homes with oil or natural gas – and waste at least 10% of that fuel in the process. This means not only that valuable resources are disappearing faster than need be, but a lot of people are robbing themselves through paying for fuel that did them no good. You can go a long way toward plugging the leak if you take a few moments to find out how your heating system works, and take a little trouble to see that it has proper care and maintenance. Here's a brief introduction to the subject.

Most oil furnaces work by shooting oil droplets from a nozzle and burning them in air. When things are going properly, the oil burns completely and uses a minimum of air, so that it makes hardly any smoke and leaves very little soot. If you open the inspection flap in the front of the furnace, you can see if there's smoke on the tip of the flame, and if soot is collecting.

Also take a look at the damper, which you will find in the pipe between the furnace and the chimney. This damper should open and shut freely in a draft caused by the wind. It lets in cool air from the basement which helps to stop too much warm air from the furnace escaping up the chimney.

With gas furnaces, the heat comes from a burner in the form of a single jet or in a cluster similar to the jets on a gas stove. The gas is ignited in air by a pilot light. If this is to work properly, you should watch for three things in particular. First, see that the air intakes in the sides of the furnace are not blocked. Second, make sure that the pilot light is always burning, except in summer of course. Third, check often to see if the flame from the burner is blue. If there is any yellow in the flame, it's getting too much air and the air nozzle needs regulating.

For efficient burning, the gas flow valve and pressure regulator need to be correctly adjusted too. All of the adjustments that have to be made to a gas furnace need an expert. So call your gas company.

You can save about 10% on the fuel bill if you have the oil furnace and burner cleaned and tuned at least once a year by a qualified serviceman. The items needing attention include the combustion chamber, burner adjustments, oil nozzle, oil filter and gaskets, oil pump, flue, smoke pipe, chimney system, internal surfaces of the furnace, fan and electrical equipment. Make sure your serviceman tests the efficiency and reports it to you.

For gas heating, a serviceman should also carry out a complete check once a year. The components of a gas furnace requiring maintenance include the combustion chamber, heat exchanger, pilot light, filters, fan, chimney system and exterior.

Other ways to keep yourself snug while still saving energy are by having a furnace of the right size and type for your home – but that's another story – and by making sure that the heat circulates properly throughout your home – which is yet another story. These will be discussed in future "Energy Savers" columns.

You can learn more about furnaces and their maintenance by writing to Box 3500, Station C, Ottawa, Ontario, K1Y 4G1, for a copy of The billpayer's guide to furnace servicing. This gives up-to-date information compiled by the Office of Energy Conservation, Department of Energy Mines and Resources.

As you will discover, there's much you can do yourself to keep your furnace on the top line, but don't try to take the place of a professional serviceman. Unless you really know your stuff, your efforts could prove costly, and even dangerous.

Centre explains 'constructive arguing'

The Family Counselling Centre is pleased with the response from the readers to the articles appearing on the services of the Agency.

There have been several requests for marriage counselling, in which both parties are willing to become involved in counselling. There have been several enquiries, however, whether counselling can be useful when only one partner is willing to come the Agency. Naturally, the ideal situation is involvement of both partners, but one must remember two people make a marriage - it is a partnership.

One partner can benefit from marriage counselling and indirectly may become counsellor to the other partner. How - by learning more about his or her own attitudes. How are they affecting the relationship? Many couples indulge in the "silent treatment" rather than communicating their feelings. Resentment builds up and at a time of anger may refer to the past rather than exploring causes for the present difference.

Here are some constructive ways of arguing:

1. Program fights at special times to avoid wear and tear on innocent bystanders.
2. Each partner gives full expression to his own positive feelings.
3. Each partner gives full expression to his own negative feelings.
4. Each one replays partner's argument in his own words, to be sure he understands it.
5. Entertain the "feedback" of the other person's evaluation of your behaviour. This means "chewing over" evaluations of yourself accepting or rejecting them.
6. Define clearly what the fight is about.
7. Discover where the two positions coincide as well as differ.
8. Each partner defines his own "Out-of-bounds" areas of vulnerability.
9. Determine how deeply each partner feels about his stake in the fight. This enable each to decide how much he can yield.
10. Offer correctional critiques of conduct - this means for both to develop positive suggestions for improvement in each other.
11. Decide how each can help the other, relative to the problem.
12. Recognize the Yablonsky (spontaneous explosion without reason) and wait for it to subside; don't "hook-in".
13. Try to score the fight against the injury. Winners are those who learn more than they get hurt.
14. Fight after-thinking. Compare your opinions with each other after the leftovers, evasions, and settled issues, if any.
15. Declare a fight holiday, a truce, a period of time during which no fight engagements are to be made. This provides the conditions for exercising the fine art of making up and enjoying its benefits, such as warm body contact, good sex, etc.
16. Be prepared for the next fight. Intimate fighting is more or less continuous and, paradoxically, if it is accepted and expected, the quality of fighting is less visious, the fight less long, the injury less, and the learning of new aspects more.

It is not wrong to argue constructively - it is much healthier than the silent treatment.

Counselling can be done with one partner and by open communication, the other partner eventually shows a willingness to be part of the marriage counselling.

program offered for farm income tax

Don't wait 'til spring - do it now. That's the advice of University of Guelph professor, Gary Hutchison.

Professor Hutchinson is referring to a home study program on farm Income Tax, sponsored by the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food.

"Daily and year-end decisions are more critical than filing the return in April," says Professor Hutchison. "And while the busy farmer hires an accountant to file his return, he can't afford to hire a tax specialist to stand at his elbow during the day-to-day operation when tax dollars are won and lost."

The farm tax course does cover the filing of returns and the minimum record systems required. But the main emphasis is on the tax regulations and how they affect daily decision-making on the farm.

Costs and the prices received for milk, eggs, or beef have been a part of making decisions on the farm. However, the tax regulations can modify or even overrule the normal logical decision on a farm. You should not ignore the tax regulations, says Professor Hutchison. Knowing something about farm taxation can be rewarding, whether or not you file your own tax return.

The farm income tax course, developed by Professor Hutchison, is written in an easily-understood fashion and indludes examples. There are assignments using tax forms, and these are marked and returned with corrections and comments by a chartered accountant who is a part-time farmer.

And cannot find you there,
We look back upon our homestead,
Where you adjusted all trouble and care;

Over all the good you've done,
Our thoughts of you are in heaven now,
And the crown that you have won.

Seaway tolls

Transport Minister Otto Lang, after discussions with U.S. Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams, has announced that the Canadian St. Lawrence Seaway Authority and the U.S.-St. Lawrence Seaway development Corporation have reached agreement on a revised joint seaway tariff of tolls.

To attain the new rates, 50 percent of the increased amounts will be applied at the start of the 1978 navigation season, 75 percent at the start of the 1979 season and 100 per cent at the start of 1980 season.

Mr. Lang repeated his earlier statement that: "The new tariff appears to address realistically the concerns of both nations. The negotiators on both sides have gone to great lengths to minimize the impact on key commodities, while at the same time permitting the U.S. and Canada to recover their costs for the Seaway in a manner consistent with the policies of both nations."

Toll increases are necessary to meet increased costs in both countries. Operating expenses have increased to the point where revenues are no longer adequate to meet the costs of the Seaway entities. The new tariff is expected to generate in 1978 approximately $40 million in revenue for Canada from the tolls charged for transit of the Welland Canal and from its share of the tolls charged for transit of the Montreal-Lake Ontario section.

The U.S. in turn expects to collect $9 million as its share of revenues on the Montreal-Lake Ontario section.

Choirs entertain Iroma seniors

Last week we were invaded in two separate occasion by the younger generation. The first sortie came partly mechanized led by a tractor hauling an overloaded wagon load of Brownies and Girl Guides who gladdened us with their presence, tangible presents in the form of mounted pictures decorated with their own handiwork for each one of us and carol singing in happy voice.

Our second invasion was from St. Cecilia's and, like their Catholic forebears of the Crusades, arrived as Pilgrims on foot. This was the school choir with their own accompanying instruments, all beautifully trained to lead us in an hour of carols.

We of the older generation were heartened by these visits, especially the warm handshake each of us received from the younger generation - no gap here. Merci Beaucoup.

Tourism newsletter distributed

Members of the project group "Who's Who In Tourism" started distribution this Christmas week of their publication of the Seaway Valley Tourism Promoter. Hampered by bad weather and the usual holiday fever, they managed to have some delivered before Christmas, but the balance will be circulated between Christmas and New Years.

Any business in the Cornwall area will be receiving one as well as interested parties and some individuals chosen at random. Before the distribution is completed, it is hoped that they will span from the Quebec border, all the way to Prescott.

The aim of the Tourism Promoter is to elevate the level of knowledge most people have about the everyday dollars and cents business of tourism. Through public awareness programs like this, "Who's Who In Tourism" hopes to foster an understanding and an appreciation of the value of tourism to this area. If you have not seen a copy of Seaway Valley Tourism Promoter and would like to - please write to: Who's Who in Tourism, 825 Second St. East, Cornwall, Ont.

Reports last week that Santa Claus visited Iroquois without incident on Christmas eve appear to be incorrect. The Post was alerted on Friday to the presence of a set of longjohns hanging from the TV antenna at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Roberts on Island Park Drive in Iroquois. It would appear that Santa, while making his approach to the Roberts home, misjudged and came in a little low.

Another story is circulating around town that the longjohns were placed there by an unknown person as a prank, but in spite of the fact that Dale is missing an identical pair, the Post prefers to believe they belong to Santa.

New books at Iroquois Library

Some thoughts for winter reading

by Joy Parks

Now is the time to ring in the New Year, and what better way to start afresh than to read a book, especially on those days when it's cold outside, and the snow is piling high. Start off your year informed with some recent human concern studies, or curl up with a good juicy novel. Either way, it's all here for you at the Iroquois Public Library.

Loose Change, Three Women of the Sixties - Sara Davidson

Loose Change is the story of three women living through the most unique and turbulent decade to be seen by America - the 60's. And best of all, the book was written by someone who was there - all the way.

The book begins when these three women enter University of California, in Berkeley. They were mainly interested in having fun, pledging a 'good' sorority and eventually getting married. None of them knew that they were entering college at a time when a wave of social change was building in America, and cresting on the Berkeley campus.

At first, these three women seemed very much alike. Yet soon their lives would begin to take different courses as each women is gradually formed by the ideals, men and events of each of their lives.

This thought-provoking book is not only about these women and their friends, it is also about the sixties - John and Bobby Kennedy, sit-ins, New York's East Village, mini-skirts, draft-card burning, Woodstock, the sexual revolution and the Women's movement. In short Loose Change is the story of what it was like to be young in the sixties.

How To Save Your Own Life by Erica Jong

How To Save Your Own Life is the sequel to Jong's imfamous novel, Fear of Flying. Now protagonist Isadora Wing is three years older, and so much wiser. This book deals with the gradual stages in which a marriage falls apart. How To Save Your Own Life is also about Fame, Hollywood, sexual experimentation, and Isadora's Odyssey, which takes her to sunny California, where she continues her endless search for a real lover. And when she does find him, she learns that she mistrusts love. It is at this point that Isadora realizes that it is both possible and necessary to save her own life. Delightfully, she learns how. Her romantic love story is recorded in a cycle of poems which have to be some of the most tender and erotic poems ever composed by Jong. To the millions of readers who loved and laughed with Isadora in Fear of Flying, this is the novel that you've been waiting for.

Women and the Crisis in Sex Hormones - Barbara Seaman and Gideon Seaman, M.D.

This book, which has saved the lives and the sanity of a multitude of women, is a milestone in medical reporting. Women and the Crisis in Sex Hormones is the complete story of how sex hormones affect our health.

The authors have studied every known synthetic sex hormone in use, collected case histories and listened to patients. Their study is an authoritative and enlightening book, which offers the reader the best and most complete reference material available on birth control, menopause and other conditions involving hormone irregularities.

Cutting Loose - Howard M. Halpern, Ph.D.

This book is sub-titled 'An Adult Guide to Coming to Terms With Your Parents'. Today, even after they grow to adulthood, many people have problems in the relationship with their parents. They feel trapped in a role that makes them feel angry and hopeless. In this book, an experienced psychotherapist explains common patterns for this problem and solutions that can be found. Dr. Halpern shows the reader how it is necessary to take ownership of his own life, and create a new and better relationship with parents. Cutting Loose is the answer to a problem that most of us face at some point in our lives.

Local secondary teachers participate in conference

Five years ago the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation held a province-wide conference for high school department heads and other interested educators on the basis that as an interest group they probably had something to say to each other.

Organized by the Federation's Professional Development Committee that conference enjoyed mild success, has grown steadily and by 1977 it may well have become the largest annual gathering of secondary school teachers in Canada.

This year, delegate attendance at the conference (held in Toronto, November 25-26) passed the 400 mark with more than 200 mail registrations turned back because of inadequate conference facilities.

Conference planners believe a unique format for the event is largely responsible for its success. The two day session provides a variety of large and small group gatherings with periods of free time for department heads to compare programs, courses and methods.

The conference key-note speaker, this year, was the Honourable Thomas Wells, Ontario Minister of Education. In his address Mr. Wells said the fundamental purpose of education in Ontario is prepare people to live successfully. "Education", he said, "has five priorities in achieving its goal including individualization, evaluation, emphasis on multi-culturalism, basics and morals and values education." Quality education Mr. Wells said requires money for hardware but most of all it needs good teachers and good leadership. "That", said the Minister, "Is the key to the successful school.

In addition to speakers the conference provided a number of sessions covering a wide range of topics from Team Building to Curriculum Innovation with more than 21 resource educators from across Canada leading those sessions.

Among those registered for the conference were a number from the Tri-County area. In this group was John McAllister of Seaway District High School, Mary Jane Smythe and Allan McPhail of General Vanier Secondary School, Paul Lusignah and Gordon Winter from Cornwall Collegiate and V.S., Gerritt Mollinga and Mel Radley from St. Lawrence High School and Frank Hunter from Charlottenburgh, Lancaster District High School.

Names corrected

A report in last week's Post concerning the recent draw in the Lions 100 club contained a mix-up in the name of the first place $300. winner. The name should have been Millie Johnson of Iroquois.
