Train Ran Into Handcar.

The densest fogs seen here for years have prevailed of late. A serious accident occurred in consequence of the fog on Monday morning of last week. The gravel train going north to Warina from Monkland and a handcar going in the opposite direction collided and two Italian laborers were badly injured. Dr. Robb, of Avonmore, took them to an hospital in Montreal.

GOOD HOME RECIPE.

Get from any prescription pharmacist the following:
Fluid-Extract Dandelion, one half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces.
Shake well in a bottle and take a teaspoonful dose after each meal and at bedtime.
The above is considered as the most certain prescriptlon ever written to relieve Backache, Kidney Trouble, Weak Bladder and all forms of Urinary difficulties, This mixture acts promptly on the eliminative tissues of the Kidneys, enabling them to filter and strain the uric acid and other waste matter from the blood which causes Rheumatism,
Some persons who suffer with the afflictions may not feel inclined to place much confidence in this simple mixture, yet those who have tried it say the results are simply surprising, the relief being effected without the slightest injury to the stomach or other organs.
Mix some and give it a trial. It certainly comes highly recommended. It is the prescription of an eminent authority, whose entire reputation, is said, was established by it.
A druggist here at home, when asked, stated that he could either supply the ingredients or mix the prescription for our readers, also recommends it as harmless.

Fire broke out in the Serjeant company coal sheds, in Barrie, Ont., and in a short time $3,500 went up in smoke. The sheds were a total loss.

A Social and Moral Reform Association has been formed in Smith's Falls. Their first move was to petition the Council to reduce the hotel licenses in town by two and to increase the license fee of the other hotels from $50 to $50. The Council at a special meeting complied with the request and will vote on the question on January 4th next.

Age Limit Raised.

Henceforth no pupils will be admitted to the Normal schools under age of 18. In the past it was considered satisfactory if they were 18 when they finished. The department now announces an increase of one year in the age limit. It also announces that the standard of education is to be raised. Several applications were refused this year because the applicants were under 18.

Moore—Donnelly.

A quiet wedding took place on September 23 in St. John's Church, Ottawa, when Miss Edith Elva, eldest daughter of Mrs. E. A. Donnelly, of Kemptville, was joined in wedlock to Mr. Wm J. Moore, by Rev. Mr. Capp. The bride looked charming in a white silk robe trimmed with lace and chiffon, and a picture hat. The bridesmaid, Miss Mildred Donnelly, also looked beautiful in a brown silk dress and hat. The groom was supported by his cousin, Mr. Herb. Moore, of Richmond. The travelling suit of the bride was brown broadcloth with net blouse and hat to match. Mr. and Mrs. Moore spent a short time in the city before returning to their home at Malakoff, where a hearty welcome awaited them.

Died While Under Influence of Ether.

The death of Jay Melvin, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Melvin, of Melvin's Settlement, occurred on Sunday morning under the saddest of circumstances. The young man who was sixteen years of age, had been troubled for some time with an enlargement of the glands of the neck, and an operation was decided on. This was undertaken Monday morning by Drs. Malloch and McLaughlin. The patient was placed under the influence of ether and the operation was proceeding satisfactorily, when it was suddenly noticed that the boy had ceased breathing. Everything was done to revive him but without avail. The boy was a bright, intelligent young fellow, and his untimely death has been a great shock to his parents, as it has been to the whole community. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at the house, the service being conducted by Rev. Geo. Yule in the absence of Rev. J. Webster. The remains were afterwards interred in Maple Ridge cemetery. The bereaved parents have the sympathy of the neighborhood in their severe affliction.—Press.

The Late Mrs. Barkley.

At the residence of her son James E. Barclay, Irena, there passed to rest on Sunday Oct. 4th one of the oldest residents of the county in the person of Mrs. Francis Everei Barclay in her 96th year. Very few people attain such a remarkable age and still fewer retain so fully the faculties of mind and body. Mrs. Barclay's recital of pioneer days was most vivid and interesting. Her husband who predeceased her many years ago, was the pioneer merchant at Dundela but spent the greater share of his life a farmer. Their family consisted of one son James E residing on the old homestead, three daughters Mrs. Asa Munro (deceased); Mrs. Thomas Munro of Vancouver, B. C. and Mrs. Dr. Collison of Brinston.
Rev. Mr. Crane, B. A conducted the funeral service, which was held at the Dundela Methodist church on Tuesday at 10 a. m., interment being made in the cemetery there

Catching the Robber

MR. BROWN looked into a great box, sunk deep in the ground, which stood near his hen. The longer he gazed the more wrathful he became. Here, you see, he had stored the apples plucked from the choicest trees in his orchard; and now the thief had made great inroads into the supply.

As he muttered what he would do if he caught the rascal, Mr. Brown heard a smothered laugh. Turning his head he observed a boy peering through the hedge and grinning mischievously.

"There is my robber!" cried Mr. Brown, starting to run after the boy.

But the boy ran much faster than did the stout man. After stumbling over an obstacle, and falling heavily to the ground, Mr. Brown gave up the chase. But he did not give up his plan for punishing the boy. He was even more angry than before.

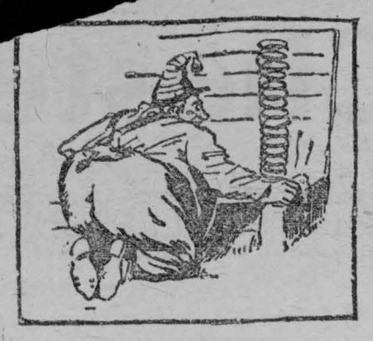
When he had thought deeply for some time, he decided what to do. Just beneath the lid of the box he concealed a powerful spring. As he retired to bed that night it was with a chuckle, for he felt sure of catching his prey the next day. And it happened exactly as he expected it would.

Early next morning Mr. Brown arose



PLANS REVENGE

Bowing the shutters of his window, he peered through a crack down to where his precious apples were stored. He had not long to wait before the boy appeared. After looking closely about him, to see that no one was near, the naughty fellow stole toward the apples.

Then, as he released the staple which fastened the lid of the box, a strange thing happened. The lid flew backward and he was shot upward through the air, right into the hands of the angry gentleman who was waiting to receive him.

The spring had done its work faithfully, and you may also be sure that Mr. Brown did what he believed to be his duty. He lay the boy firmly across his knee and—well, you can guess what happened without a great deal of trouble, can't you?

A Watch as a Compass

VERY few of you, perhaps, have observed the fourth hour on the dial of a clock is marked "IIII" instead of "IV." This was due to a mistake of Charles V of France, under whose direction the first watch was made.

A watch may also be used readily for a compass. Point the hour hand to the sun, and the south is exactly halfway between the hour and the figure XII on the watch. For instance, supposing that it is 4 o'clock. Point the hand indicating four to the sun, and II on the watch is exactly south.

GREAT LETTER WRITER

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE GERMAN EMPEROR.

Astonishing How He Finds so Much Time to Write His Many Private Letters.

William II. probably writes more letters than any other living monarch. From the early morning, when he goes over his mail and the State despatches, making copious marginal notes in pencil, until he retires for the night he is constantly jotting down his thoughts, writing or dictating letters, or annotating new books. He frequently is seen at receptions or military reviews making a note on his shirt cuff. He abhors fountain pens and swears by the old-fashioned quill of our grandfathers.

The Kaiser's handwriting is large, bold and flourishing, and, in accordance with his habit of dashing down his thoughts as they come into his head, often extremely illegible. A well-known Berlin artist, with whom the Emperor was for years in active correspondence, gives of him as a correspondent. He says:—

"It is really astonishing how the Emperor, despite the amount of work he has to get through, finds so much time to carry on his extensive private correspondence. It is very rare that he ever breaks off a letter he has once begun, nor is he content, like the Emperor Francis Joseph, for instance, to have his letters written by a private secretary according to his instructions, but writes personally every line that has not an official character.

"I have seen letters of the Emperor on topics of history or art, twelve to eighteen pages long. It is well known that the monarch, to save time, always makes his notes in shortened form, leaving out the vowels thus: 'fligdr Adlr' for 'fliegender Adler,' etc. In letters, however, he always tries to abandon this practice, chiefly because he wishes to be quite clear, but sometimes in his haste he abbreviates all the same. The Emperor even addresses his letters himself nearly always, and absolutely in full; the addressee never wants a title.

"One might say that, apart from family correspondence and short notes to the generals of his suite, the majority of the Kaiser's letters are addressed to professors and architects, artists, sculptors, or musicians. This is not surprising in view of all the predominant interest His Majesty takes in

ALL AESTHETIC QUESTIONS.

In these letters the Kaiser is wont to express in short, pregnant words his views on some topic of present-day interest. As often as not his views, especially in architectural questions, are illustrated with marginal sketches of a highly technical character, revealing at every point the writer's intimate knowledge of the subject.

"Apart from letters, the Emperor frequently sends some artist friend of his a book which he has marked with marginal notes, and this is especially the case with works on naval topics. His versatility is simply marvellous. I have seen sketches done by the Emperor, the sheet simply covered in all directions with ships' parts, designs for the mechanism of automobiles, and plans for the interiors and exteriors (facades, etc.) of buildings.

"If ever the Emperor's letters are collected and published they will give a far better picture of him than any personal characterization could do, for his thirst for knowledge revealed therein is only equalled by the number of fruitful suggestions he himself makes.

in Germany owes its construction to him in reality, although honor and fame were accorded to the artist who carried out the idea."

When the Kaiser is travelling he uses the telegraph a great deal, often sending the Empress long accounts of his adventures in that way. Such private letters naturally never go through the post, but are given to the Foreign Office courier in Germany (a lieutenant of the Chasseurs of the Guard), to be conveyed to the capital with the diplomatic correspondence.

The Emperor is very fond of picture postcards, and when he was staying at Highcliffe last year there were numerous recipients of such marks of Imperial consideration among Berlin society. In his study Prince Bulow has a number of picture postcards which his Imperial master sent him from Italy upon which the Emperor has scribbled in pencil such characteristic remarks as: "Glorious view"; "Splendid weather," etc. The Kaiser's notepaper, which is white, is surmounted by a neat gold crown with the Imperial arms, and is strikingly large in shape, of a stout texture.

DO THE HARD WORK FIRST.

If you have hard or unpleasant work to do, do it at once. By putting it off, you do it twice. Anticipation is often worse than the actual thing. When the job is finished, contemplation becomes a pleasure. The undone task, weighing on your mind, oppresses you mentally, and holds you back. The well-finished one raises you up and helps you forward. Moreover, you will find that the unpleasant jobs are usually the important ones. Perhaps it is just because they are hard and sometimes [illegible] that their importance is realized. If success does not reward you as you think you merit, don't sit down and rail against fate. Just look round and see if you have been neglecting the unpleasant tasks. There, in most instances, you will find your point of weakness. You may not attach much importance at the moment to those things from which you shirk, but you never know how neglect will affect the current of your after-life.

RALLS MUST STAND TRIAL.

Postmaster Accused of Theft of Campaign Literature.

Cobourg, Ont., October 13.—The investigation of the charge against Postmaster Ralls, of Fenella, for stealing Conservative campaign literature from the mails, was opened before Police Magistrate Holland here this morning. Mr. Frank M. Field, K. C, and Mr. J. F. Keith for Ralls. Owing to the crowds desiring to hear the trial the investigation was held in the large court room instead of the police court office. The court room was packed with spectators.

In the afternoon several witnesses were called for the purpose of proving that the campaign literature which Ralls is accused of stealing was never offered them at the Fenella post office. Mr. Ralls himself took the stand and stated that he in no way made use of the letters referred to with any inteution of committing a crime. Ralls swore more that most of the letters had been offered for delivery every case they had been refused and consigned to the waste paper basket.

At the conclusion of the hearing Mr. C. S. Huyck, K. C., on behalf of Mr. Ralls, made a strong plea for dismissal of the case, but magistrate M. F. Holland considered the evidence strong enough to warrant him in committing the accused for trial at the December session. Bail was granted Mr. J. A. Platt, one of the chief witnesses, and C. F. Webster, a prominent cattle dealer, going as bondsmen.

Dying of Pernicious Anaemia.
Her Life was Saved by FERROZONE.

Probably very few cases are on record in which an absolute cure has been made of pernicious anaemia.

But Ferrozone did cure Miss Elaine Stanhope—cured her absolutely, and her mother Mrs. G. Stanhope of Rothesay, Ont., says the following:

"My daughter complained of feeling tired. She was very pale and listless, and kept losing strength till too weak to attend school. The doctors prescribe different bottles of medicine but Elaine kept getting worse instead of better. She had Anaemia and we were afraid for a while that she might never rally. We read of a similar case, that of Miss Descent of Stirling, Ont., being cure by Ferrozone and this induced us to get it for Elaine. It took three boxes of Ferrozone to make any decided improvement, but when six boxes were used my daughter was beginning to be her old self again. It did'nt take much longer to make a complete cure, and I am convinced that there is no better bloodmaker than Ferrozone. It has made a new girl of Elaine. She has gained ten pounds in weight and looks the picture of perfect health. She isstronger and enjoys the best of spirits. The credit of her recovery is entirely due to Ferrozone."

Every grown girl and young woman can make herself strong and healthy with Ferrozone.

It makes blood, nerve and tissue,—it to stay.

Complexion soon becomes perfect, get new strength, tiredness vanishes—perfect health is the reward for using Ferrozone, which is sold by all druggists—price 50c. per box; don't fail to try it.

Illegal Fish Nets.

Belleville, Ont., October 12.—One of the most important captures of illegal fishing nets ever made in Bay of Quinte waters was made at sunrise this morning, when George Boulter, the local fishery overseer, caught four prominent fishermen in the act of hauling in Seine nets a short distance below Point Ann in Big Bay. The seine is a new one, valued at $400 and is the largest ever seen in these waters, covering a length of nearly two miles, with eighteen-foot depth. A large number of nets have also recently been captured here of three inch mesh, while the law says 4½ inch must be used. The owners of all will be brought to trial in a few days.

CAUSE FOR ALARM

Epidemic Influenza, Grippe, Catarrhal Troubles, Pneumonia Increasing.

A marked increase in troubles of the breathing organs is noted in many localities. If you will only have Hyomei at hand to use with the first attack of cold in the head, pneumonia, Colds, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Croup, in fact any respiratory affection, the trouble will be quickly overcome.

If the attack is neglected and become severe, speedy relief will come in most case and a persistent use of Hyomei will cure.

The directions for using it vary, but the principal is always the same, that of destroying all the germs in the air your breathe and having it reach the air passages with dry medication from the Pine and Eucalyptus forests.

Remember that liquids or moisture is barred from the Bronchial Tubes and lungs. It's the dry air of Hyomei that reaches the spot. W. G. Bolster guarantees it. Complete outfit, $1.

THE BALKAN WAR CLOUD

Britain and France Are Agreed Over the Bulgarian Situation.

A despatch from London says: The dismemberment of Turkey runs on apace. On Monday Bulgaria declared herself independent; Tuesday night the Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria proclaimed the practical annexation of the provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina to the dual monarchy; and on Wednesday Crete broke away from the Ottoman Empire and claimed the protection of Greece. Meanwhile the Governments of Great Britain, France and Russia are working to bring order out of the chaos which the virtual destruction of the Berlin treaty has caused. Turkey has virtually agreed to refrain from taking hostile measures against Bulgaria and Austria pending action by the powers. She will, however, enter a formal protest against the annexation of her territory by Austria. The independence of the Bulgarians she has already declined to recognize. Turkey is anxious for peace in the interests of internal reform, and if the pride of the Young Turks can brook the loss of so much territory it is believed there will be no bloodshed.

Britain is not particularly desirous of calling a conference of the powers to deal with the situation in the near east. She would much prefer that the Berlin treaty should not be revised, and that the matter should be settled without reference to the signatories of that pact. Consequently, she is advising Turkey to try to come to terms with Austria and Bulgaria. Should a conference become necessary, however, Great Britain would become a party thereto, but only after having bent all her efforts to limiting the scope of the congress.

Britain's reply to the notification of Austria's intentions with regard to Bosnia and Herzegovina is practically the same as that made to Bulgaria. The British Ambassador at Vienna has been instructed to urge upon the Austro-Hungarian Government the necessity of reconsidering its action, and the British Government notifies the Austro-Hungarian Government that it is unable to sanction any infraction of the treaty of Berlin or consent to any alteration thereof without previous consultation with the other powers, and in this case especially with Turkey.

MAY CALL CONFERENCE.

A despatch from Paris says: It was announced on Wednesday afternoon that France and Great Britain are in complete accord on the principle of an immediate international conference to consider the Bulgarian situation. Russia and Italy also are in favor of such a conference, and even Germany is expected to adhere to the proposal. Furthermore, the latest advices from Constantinople indicate that the Porte will accept the advice of France and Great Britain and await the result of this congress.

SERVIAN RESTLESSNESS.

A despatch from Vienna says: The Servian restlessness is irritating the Government and inflaming the public here. The newspapers print serious reports of the war temper being displayed by the Servians, which it is feared will force King Peter's Government into an invasion of Bosnia. To this is ascribed the military precautions Austria is taking on the Servian frontier, such as guarding bridges and tunnels. Four Danube gunboats have gone southward from Budapest. as part of the precautionary measures. The newspapers warn Servia not to yield to illusions, which might end in her losing her independence.

GERMAN EMPEROR BLAMED.

A despatch from Paris says: The Journal des Debats publishes a letter on Friday afternoon, from what it calls an unusually well-informed source, describing the Balkan situation as a veritable plot, of which Emeporor William is the real author, with Baron Von Aehrenthal the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, a willing tool. It was the Emperor's object to humiliate Great Britain as a friend of the new regime in Turkey, and at the same time to inflict a blow on the "Young Turks," whose ascendancy threatened the German influence in the empire. Ferdinand and Bulgaria were drawn in, the writer of the letter declares, in order to involve Russian sympathy and paralyze opposition from that quarter.

MUST OWN FIFTY DOLLARS.

Immigration Rule of Last Year to be Enforced Again.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Between Jan. 1st and Feb. 15th, 1909, immigrants coming into Canada will be required to possess $50. This plan was tried for the first time last year, the rule going into force on Jan. 8th, and continuing until Feb. 15th. The $25 requirement was then resumed. The $50 requirement prevented much indiscriminate immigration during the cold part of the Winter. This $50 rule, however, does not apply to Asiatic immigrants, who are all required to possess $200 before coming into the Dominion. This went into force on July 3rd, and as yet no change has been made in the requirement.

HAMMER FELL ON HIM.

Wiarton Man Stepped Under Pile-driver.

A despatch from Wiarton says: Alex. Day, of this town, was killed on Monday afternoon. He was working at a pile-driver when he stepped between the leaders, and the full weight of the hammer, 2,200 pounds, came down on his head, killing him instantly. He was married about two months ago.

BABY ON COW-CATCHER.

Carried Some Distance, But Not Badly Hurt.

A despatch from West Toronto says: While wheeling her eighteen months old baby in a carriage over the Weston road railway crossing on Thursday evening Mrs. J. Osborne of McRoberts avenue, in York township, was run down by Grand Trunk Railway train No. 9, which does not stop here. The woman was thrown violently into the ditch, and the baby was carried along some distance on the cow-catcher, but escaped serious injury. Mrs. Osborne had her lower jaw broken, and received other painful injuries. No serious results are anticipated. A double track has recently been placed at this crossing, and it is thought Mrs. Osborne became confused when the train approached.

CREW OF 25 MEN DROWNED

French Vessel, Caught by Furious Gales, Sinks Without Warning.

A despatch from North Sydney, N. S., says: The French three-masted schooner Juanita has foundered in the Grand Banks with her crew of 25, the captain only being saved. He spent 36 hours on floating debris and had lost his reason when picked up.

The Juanita was owned in Granville, France, by Yvon Freres, and fitted out for the Banks fishing at St. Pierre early last Spring, and several times during this season came into North Sydney and other Nova Scotia ports for bait. The vessel had had a successful season's fishing, and was on her last trip out from St. Pierre when the disaster occurred. The schooner was riding at anchor when a gale came on, which so strained her that she opened at the bow and before the crew could make an effort to save themselves the vessel had plunged bow first, carrying to death twenty-five of her crew.

Only one man, the captain, was saved. As by a miracle in the confusion and darkness he got aboard of a piece of floating debris and several hours after daylight he was found clinging to a piece of dory plank. In this position the only survivor remained for 36 hours, when he was rescued by the fishing schooner General Archimare in an exhausted and almost unconscious condition. The terrible ordeal through which he passed bereft him of his reason. Several days after his rescue, during his conscious moments, the captain incoherently told of his sufferings and fight for life while holding on to the frail plank. To add to the misery and danger, two dogs, which had been on the ship, swam around after the ship went down and when daylight broke they swam to where the sole survivor was clinging on his frail life preserver, and attempted to share it with him by climbing on the plank. Endeavoring to keep the dogs away, which meant his death if they succeeded, the captain grasped with one hand one of the dogs and choked it into insensibility; the other he succeeded in holding long enough under water to drown, and once more the survivor had the plank to himself. In this situation he was found, taken on board and cared for by his rescuers.

MURDERED HIS FATHER.

The Result of a Drinking Bout at Montreal.

A despatch from Montreal says: Two Italians were murdered on Sunday night at 31 St. Hypolite street. One of the dead men was shot by his son. All had been enjoying themselves, and intoxicating drink had been used freely. Once or twice Micheli Calouri, jun., a youth, had been restrained from quarrelling, but he finally broke loose. His first victim was his father, who tried to pacify him. The old man, whose name is Micheli Calouri, after being shot, walked out into the yard, where he died. The crazy youth then shot Francisco Martelli, his host, who had returned with money from the lumber camp. The murderer was arrested. He is thought to have had some kind of grudge that urged him, while drunk, to do the foul deed. A fourth man, who is supposed to have had something to do with the trouble, escaped.

THE BALLOON BURST.

Competitors in International Race Had Close Call.

A despatch from Berlin, Germany says: The international balloon race, which started on Sunday from the suburb of Schmargendorf, was the occasion of a thrilling accident, two American aeronauts having a miraculous escape from death. The American balloon Conqueror, the only American-built craft in the contest, having on board A. Holland Forbes and Augustus Post, less than two minutes after the start burst at an altitude of 4,000 feet. For 2,000 feet it shot down like a bullet, and then the silk assumed the shape of a parachute, and the rapidity of the descent was checked. Coming close to the earth, however, the basket smashed into the roof of a house, but the two men escaped with but slight injuries.

U. S. POACHERS FIRED ON

Boat Struck by a Rifle Bullet, but the Effect Unknown.

A despatch from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., says: According to reports brought down to the Soo from Lake Superior there is something doing that will interest the Fishery Department of Canada and the United States. For some days Gamewardens Calbeck and Hand of the Canadian side have been on a tour of investigation up the lake, with authority from their respective Governments to apprehend certain Americans who, it is alleged, have been fishing in Canadian waters.

Report has it that on Thursday the Canadians surprised the Americans opposite Whitefish, or a little west, and upon the Americans refusing to heave to when requested to do so the Canadians opened fire on them with rifles. The Americans apparently escaped, but it is not yet known whether the fusilade from the Canadian boats resulted in any casualties.

The report was brought to the Soo by the crew of a passing boat, who stated that when the Canadians fired splinters were seen to fall from the American boats.

The agitation to suppress American fishermen is due largely to action taken by the local branch of the Ontario Fish and Game Protective Association, which has put the question to the Government in such a light that some action had to be taken.

While the report lacks official confirmation, it is substantiated to a certain extent by a gentleman in the Soo in close touch with the operations of the game wardens who have gone up from the Canadian side.

A SHADOWED PATH;

Or, The Curse Of The Family

CHAPTER XXX.

After Mr. Gartmore had been "playing pauper" for about five weeks, he got tired of the character.

When money was needed for any charity, he did not like remaining silent. When Dr. Duvard came home, and told his wife about a whole family of fatherless children lying ill in fever, he longed to put his hand in his pocket, and give his son-in-law, as he called him, a five-pound note to spend for their relief. When Alice said, in answer to any remarks of his, that they had better be economical till Charles had made a fortune, his tongue curled itself round in his mouth by reason of the effort he made, not to deliver himself of a sentence commencing with "economy be——"

Further, he knew he was acting the part of a consummate hypocrite; and then he saw many nice little things that he imagined Judith might like, which he would have bought, only he thought of his feigned poverty; besides which, he wanted to settle a hundred a year on Captain Darwin, and bid that boy Even marry, like a sensible rational being, and furnish a house for the young couple.

"Hang it," he thought, "look what an amount of happiness I could bestow with four or five thousand pounds, which I have hitherto cut myself out from, because forsooth I must go and imagine every soul in creation was worse than myself. But I won't stand it any longer. I am determined I won't. Judith ought to go out of town, and I am wearied of London too, and I want to get away from the overgrown city, to purer air, and a quieter home, and I wish to do something besides. Yes, and I will do it if I can."

Was it to found an alms-house, or build a church, or endow an hospital, or rear an asylum? No, it was nothing so philanthropical,—he wanted to marry!

Do not laugh at the idea—do not even smile at it in your mind; for the man's heart was fresh then as at thirty—it was yearning as much or more for something to twine its loving tendrils around, as in the days when he was younger, happier, and poorer, and now when Millicent's brown hair was streaked with grey, and her husband's head silvered, they became man and wife, and entered into the holy state of matrimony, with greater faith, and trust in one another than they could have felt in the first days of their early courtship:

"We are not so young as we were once, Millicent," said Mr. Gartmore, as he took her work away [illegible] she came [illegible] Judi[illegible] a week in bed, first or last; and [illegible] from home—but still that need not prevent our marrying now, if you care for me, as I really believe you did in the days before either of us had known sorrow, or found out what a dreary world this is for unmarried folks to live in, when they get old and friendless. There is some hope of my saving enough for us to live on, out of the wreck of my fortune. Will you share the little I may have with [illegible] There, there, don't speak; I [illegible] all you would say—that you [illegible] thought of marriage for [illegible] years past; that it [illegible] ridiculous for us to [illegible] that we have each of [illegible] far tolerably alone, and [illegible] apart to the end of the [illegible]ter. I know it all; and I [illegible]ow what is passing through your mind—but if you could only imagine what a desolate old creature I was in my solitary lodgings, if you would only consider that we might lead a cozy Darby-and-Joan sort of life, in some pretty part of the country, all the rest of our days—just as we might had we been married a quarter of a century since, I think you would not say me nay. Answer me honestly one question, Millicent—Do you love me any the less because I am old? Do you care for me less now than you did years ago?"

"I have never altered," she said.

"Then what on earth should prevent our marrying?" he demanded; but Miss Ridsdale did not think fit to reply to this question.

"Dear aunt!" said a voice beside her, at the moment he was waiting for an answer, "say, you will be his wife, during all the remaining days here below; do, to please your own Judith. It will be my last request to you, aunt. May I grant my own petition, and answer him for you—may I?"—And the wife, who had suffered in her own marriage so grievously, knelt down beside her aunt, and brought the altered face closer to her bosom, and kissed the forehead, so lined and crossed by sorrow, and wept. It was such a rare sight to see the dying woman shed tears, that Miss Ridsdale flung her arms round her niece's neck, and sobbed aloud.

"Pray, madam, who sent for you?" demanded Mr. Gartmore, gulping down something he felt rising in his throat—"I suppose you thought I could not get a wife for myself without your interference. I imagine you think you have managed in a minute what I could not have effected in a month."

"And have I not, uncle!" demanded Judith, looking up through her tears, and smiling, archly, in his face.

"Don't call me uncle, until your aunt gives you leave, you poor, broken-hearted, little soul. There now, don't cry, don't; we will go away to Maderia, and set you up again, and I will have a separation for you from that blackguard of a husband of yours, the moment I can claim a relative's right to meddle in your affairs. Millicent, just tell her when she may call me uncle, will you?"

Taking Judith to his heart with one hand, he held out the other to the true-souled woman, who had sat alone in Great Crowland Street, looking up at the evening sky, "a long time ago." She placed hers in it, without a word, and in three weeks more they were married at the nearest church.

"And now, Judith," said Mr. Gartmore, "where shall we take you—Maderia or Italy, which?"

"Neither, thank you," she said, with a mournful smile, "I should like best of all things to go back to Wales. Take me to some seaport, where I can look upon the great ocean, emblem of that mightier one, on which I shall soon set sail. Let my eyes rest once again on the hills and the valleys, and the waterfalls of my native land, before I go home; and then, when I am dead, bury me beside Marcus Lansing, in Llandyl Churchyard. My heart has been lying with him for years—let my body rest there likewise."

"Judith," said Mr. Gartmore, severely, "I cannot tolerate such rubbish as this. You are not going to die—whenever you are free of that accursed matrimonial tie—"

"Only hear him!" interrupted the person so addressed, "and he not married four-and-twenty hours! Well, uncle?"

"I say, when you are clear of that scoundrel Mazingford, and when I have paid him out—as with Heaven's help, I hope to do — you will get quite strong. You have been much better latterly. Your eyes are twice as bright as when I first saw you; and I declare, within the last three days you have got a color like a rose; and bless my soul, child, you have never passed such nonsense. You will not die—you must not—it is impossible."

"Doctor," she said, turning towards her staunch friend, who was looking with troubled, anxious eyes out of the window—"Doctor;" and he came close up beside the sofa where she was lying.

"Tell them," she continued, "fairly and truly what you know and what I know—that there is no hope; that Maderia, or Italy, or Wales, or London—it is all the same—that I am dying."

There was an ominous silence for a moment. Then Mr. Gartmore, rising from his chair, cried nervously:—

"Speak out, man! Say you can cure her."

"It is beyond my skill," said Charles, in a low hushed voice.

"Then let us have further advice at once," exclaimed her uncle, making a rush to the door.

"My dear sir——" remonstrated Dr. Duvard.

"Don't my dear sir me," exclaimed he, vehemently. "We ought to have called in some one else long ago. If you had done your duty, she might have been well ere now; but I will bring Dr. Threffman here in ten minutes. He is the first in his profession in London."

"For Heaven's saks, uncle—no!" entreated Judith, springing from the sofa, and seizing his arm, as he was about to descend the stairs. "Dr. Treffman knows me; and if Mr. Mazingford——"

"Curse Mr. Mazingford!" vociferated Mr. Gartmore. "Am I going to have your life sacrificed for a ruffian like that? Let me go, child!" and he broke away from her, and shot towards the hall door.

"Oh! do wait!—please do!" cried Judith, running down the first flight after him; but as she reached the landing, she suddenly stopped with a faint cry.

"What is the matter?" asked Dr. Duvard, who was just in time to catch her, as she fell heavily into his arms, with the blood spurting from her mouth.

She had burst a blood-vessel!

He carried her back into the drawing-room, and adopted such measures as speedily stopped the hemmorrhage. By the time Mr. Gartmore came back with Dr. Threffman—whom he had to hunt for half over London—she was sufficiently conscious to recognize, and even speak in a low, weak voice to her old adviser.

"Well, Doctor, it has come to this at last," she murmured, stretching out a wasted hand.

"Mrs. Mazingford!" he exclaimed: and really for a physician he seemed wonderfully affected.

"You have done what is necessary, I suppose?" he added, turning to Dr. Duvard.

"Yes, you perceive she has burst a blood-vessel within the last few hours."

"One of the larger ones?"

"No."

"H—m!—that's well," said Dr. Threffman. "I will look in again to-night, if possible."

"But can't you do anything now?" demanded Mr. Gartmore, impatiently—"what is the use of looking in, if you don't try to cure her?"

"Is the man a lunatic?" thought Dr. Threffman, while Judith moved her hand for her uncle to take, and said, faintly,—

"It is just a question of time."

"Do you think so?" asked Dr. Threffman.

"Certain of it," she said.

"Then, sir, you may be so too," he remarked to Mr. Gartmore, bluntly, but not unkindly—and taking the old man by the arm he led him out of the room.

She lingered for more than a fortnight after that, and finally, to the astonishment of both her physicians, rallied so much as to be able to sit up supported by pillows in an easy-chair.

"I never saw so hard a struggle," said Dr. Threffman to his medical brother. "I had no idea she could have lasted all this time. What a strength of will she must have."

"Do you think it is that?"

"To be sure it is; one half, at all events. Why, she has carried the seeds of that disease about with her, to my certain knowledge, for years; but she would not give in then, and she won't now—she is fighting every inch of the way to her grave. She is a noble creature. I would give anything to have been able to save her."

"I have never heard a word of complaint from her," said Dr. Duvard. "No matter what pain she was in, she could hide it from every eye but mine. Yes; I have seen even her, when the sound of her cough grieved my wife, smother and keep it back till she was almost suffocating."

With a hurried gesture and shake of his head, Dr. Theffman departed. "I should not like," he said, "to have all my patients interest me so much. It would soon cut up my practice."

Judith, herself, appeared happier and more tranquil than she had ever been. Exhaustion of body frequently produces a quiescent state of mind, and standing on the very verge of the grave, she enjoyed a peace and repose which she had never previously dreamt of.

EUROPEANS "GO FANTI"

WHITE MEN WHO LIVE WITH COLORED RACES.

Many Instances Where Rich Men Cut Themselves Off From Civilization.

When a European abandons the life to which he has been brought up, and throws in his lot with a colored race, he is said to "Go Fanti." Such lapses from civilization are by no means uncommon in Africa, India, China, Japan, and indeed, in almost every country into which the white man has forced his way with whisky and Bible.

A curious case of cutting oneself off from civilization occurred in Persia some years ago. A rich English traveller was captured by hill-robbers at the edge of the desert, about midway between Ispahan and Yedz. They held him to ransom for which was to be arranged by friend of the Englishman, who was staying at Teheran. Before the release could be effected, the captured man fell deeply in love with the youngest daughter of the chief of the marauders. Despite the entreaties of his friend, he put the old life behind him, married the girl, and became a full-fledged Persian robber. On his father-in-law's death the renegade Englishman succeeded the former as head of

THE ROBBER GANG.

A well-known British war correspondent relates how he was once entertained by a friendly Arab, whose tent was pitched a few miles south of Gurara. During dinner—which was a typical Arab meal—the conversation was carried on by means of the few words of Arabic known to the newspaper man, and, when words failed, signs were used.

The inevitable hookah was produced, and the two men puffed away in contemplative silence. At the end of half an hour or so the guest was utterly astounded at hearing his entertainer say in perfect English:

"Hang it all, let's have a decent smoke!"

"What the —— Why, you're no Arab!" exclaimed the war correspondent.

The brown-faced, bernouse-clad man smiled grimly as he rummaged out an old well-colored briar pipe and a packet of choice mixture.

"I was once an Englishman," said he, as he passed the tobacco over, "but, now——" He finished the sentence by a shrug of his shoulders.

They talked of Hyde Park and of Piccadilly; of Hurlingham and of Lord's; of hunting, of shooting, of fishing. The guest felt the delicacy of putting questions; the host volunteered no explanations. He declared that he would never return to the irritating, tightening bonds of civilization.

"THE DESERT HOLDS ME," he said simply, as the other swung himself on to his camel and departed, marvelling at the vagaries of mankind.

A few years ago a captain in a well-known regiment stationed in one of the North-West Provinces of India became infatuated with a handsome hill-girl. The mess soon lost its attraction for him, and the society of the uncivilized maiden became preferable to that of the station ladies, with their latest London and Paris fashions. He eventually married his dusky divinity, and "went under." He is still perfectly happy and contented, and, living a free-and-easy life, has no desire to return to the trammels of society.

In Japan there are many Europeans, who, fascinated by the charms of the East, have put the West for ever behind them. Within a few miles of Tokio there lives a man who was once a familiar figure in St. James' Street and Pall Mall. In the autumn of 1902 he went out to Japan on a yachting cruise with some friends. He became enamoured with a peach-and-cream complexioned native, wooed, and married her, and disappeared from the world that had known him.

A wealthy Frenchman, when on a visit to the Far East, met a charming daughter of Japan. He fell madly in love with her, and asked her to become his wife. This she consented to do on condition that he agreed to live in the land of the Mikado. It was a terrible wrench for him to abandon his beloved Paris, but he felt that it would have been a still greater sacrifice to give up the girl who had won his heart. He now lives in a secluded and beautiful house near Kioto, and Paris is almost

A FORGOTTEN MEMORY.

There are several well-known instances of Europeans turning Zulu, one of the most notable being that of John Dunn, who was known as Cetewayo's White Man. Through his bravery, Dunn soon won the heart of the Zulu King, and he eventually became a chief.

A famous London journalist, who has acted as war correspondent in almost every part of the globe, related the following story: Cetewayo, in the days before the Zulu war, once asked Dunn suddenly what he would do if the Zulus fought against the white men. Dunn at once replied that he would go to the side of his own people, and Cetewayo grimly told him that, had he given any other answer he would have stabbed him, for he would have known him to be a liar. When the war did break out, Dunn kept his word. Always a white man at heart, he took up arms on the side of his own people.

You will find Europeans wedded to Samoan women, with their deep languorous eyes; to women of the Celestial Empire, with almonds eyes and crippled feet; to dusky full-lipped Africans; to North American Indians, with long broad noses and hair as strong as horses'. All these men have "Gone Fanti."—Pearson's Weekly.

DEED OF A BRITISHER

WHAT HE DID IN THE SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR.

Capt. Robbins, of Yarmouth, N. S., Risked His Life for American Cause.

When Admiral Dewey had destroyed the Spanish fleet in Manila Bay, on May 1, 1908, and approached the delicate problem of bringing about the surrender of the city of Manila on his terms, he used as an agent for that purpose a British shipmaster, whose name has not been mentioned in any published report, official or unofficial, of those events, according to The New York Herald.

INCIDENT WAS FORGOTTEN.

It may have been due to an oversight on the part of those with whom he dealt directly, or it may be that the incident became lost or minimized amid the miles of red tape with which War Department matters are bound. But the fact remains that Captain Robbins, of the British ship Buccleugh, risked his life and his employers' property to carry through lines of Spanish soldiery the despatches containing the first summons of surrender, without special recognition. Captain Robbins, who lives now in retirement at Yarmouth, N. S., left his ship with Admiral Dewey's despatches in the sole of his shoe, knowing full well that he was risking his life and property for which he was responsible in an enterprise which did not concern him.

STREETS FULL OF SOLDIERS.

Captain Robbins is very modest, but finally consented to the printing of a report of the affair, from which it appears that he manned a boat, flew the British ensign, and in passing one of the ships in Manila harbor, saw a friend who undertook to go with him, and after a walk of two miles secured a conveyance, drove to the residence of the British Consul, and there obtained a guide, finally reaching the American Consul's place. The latter asked him if he knew the contents of the despatches, to which he replied that he understood the consul was desired to go to the Governor-General and offer terms of surrender. Given a reply, some hours later, Captain Robbins got safely back to the quay, through streets filled with soldiers, who stopped him once or twice, but finally allowed him to proceed.

The value which the United States Government placed upon that service is measured by a two hundred dollar chronometer, which Captain Robbins received through the War Department four years after.

TALISMANS IN MALTA.

Odd Shaped Stones to Ward Off Effects of Snake Poison.

There are still to be found in Malta a number of small stones shaped and colored like the eyes, tongues and other parts of serpents.

The superstition among the Maltese connect these with the tradition that St. Paul when shipwrecked was cast on their island, and that it was there that while lighting a bundle of sticks for a fire a viper fastened on the Apostle's hand. St. Paul calmly shook the reptile off into the flames and no harm followed. The natives wear these stones as talismans, in which character they suppose them serviceable in warding off dangers from snake bites and poisons.

They are found in St. Paul's Cave, imbedded in clay, and are set in rings and bracelets, and when found to be in the shape of a tongue or liver or heart are hung around the neck. They are also taken internally, dissolved in wine, which method is attended, according to some people, by more immediate results.

SEASONABLE MATRIMONY.

"Mother, I want to get married this winter."

"Very well, my daughter. But don't throw yourself away."

"Oh, no; I am going to marry a nice man."

"I must say, dear, I think a coal man would be more seasonable."

Many a man imagines he's done something for the church when he buys a cushion for his pew.

About the Farm

HOME BUTTER-MAKING.

In making butter on the farm, one of the most difficult things to determine is that state when the cream is the proper ripeness to be churned. It is difficult to get uniform results, having one churning like another. Acid tests have been invented for this work, but a skillful and experienced butter-maker is able to judge closely as to the ripeness of cream for churning by its appearance, writes a correspondent in the Canadian Dairyman.

Churns with no fixtures inside are the best. A revolving barrel churn is superior to other kinds. Such brings the butter by the concussion of the cream falling from one side to the other. Fill the churn to one-third or one-half full. Before putting in the cream, scald the churn with hot water and then rinse with cold water.

Bring the cream to the right temperature for churning before putting it in the churn. This may be done by surrounding the vessel containing the cream with cold or hot water as the cream requires. Always churn at as low a temperature as possible and have the butter come in a reasonable time. The colder it is churned, the less butterfat will be left in the buttermilk and the more perfect will be the granules of butter. Each buttermaker must determine by trial the right temperature [illegible] results. The churning [illegible] depends, in some degree, [illegible] breed of cows, the individuality [illegible] cows, the period of lactation, the feed, and, most important of all, the richness of the cream.

Use good, fine dairy salt for salting the butter. Never use the common coarse barrel salt which is so frequently used. After salting, working of the butter is necessary to get the salt evenly distributed and to expel a portion of the brine. It should never be worked in such a way as to injure the grain and give the butter a greasy appearance. After working, pack the butter immediately in neat, clean packages or put it in such form as is required by the market.

If making butter to put on the general market, put up an article that the market demands—the article it will pay the best price for. The best way to learn this point is to have your butter criticized by a dealer who knows what takes best on the market. Then profit by what he tells you.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

The molting season is here. Hens that are molting now will be through about December, and can be relied upon to furnish a good supply of eggs during the following three months, when prices are at the top.

The Illinois experiment station in a recent experiment conducted on a rather large scale found that, in comparison with whole clover hay, chaffed hay mixed with the grain did not add materially to its efficiency for beef production, although by this system of feeding there is less likelihood of getting the steers off feed or of scouring."

The barn is no place for a hen. She has no more right there than the horse in the henhouse. She will, of course, pick up some extra grains and save a portion of her food, but she will foul the troughs, hay and racks, as well as cause lice to get on the stock. Hen lice will remain on stock but a short time, but they are a great annoyance, and should never be allowed. Provide proper nests for the hens and compel them to keep in their own quarters.

While grain must ever form a staple article of diet of our domestic fowls, yet the fact must never be lost sight of that poultry is omnivorous in its tastes, as truly as is man, and requires an abundance and variety of all three classes of food, viz., animal, vegetable and mineral, in order that it may maintain a healthful and profitable existence. Animal substance of some sort must always be supplied to poultry, as often as twice a week. Without doubt the best form in which to furnish this is in the shape of fresh raw meat and butchers' bones.

During the Abyssinian War a company of the Naval Brigade assisted the troops in transport work. The sailors had great difficulty in managing the mules, and Mr. Geo. A. Henty, who acted as a correspondent during the war, tells that he saw a sailor leading a mule, with another walking behind trying to steer the animal by its tail. "Halloa, Jack," cried a soldier. "Where are you going?" "Don't know," replied Jack; "I'm only towing this 'ere craft. Ask my mate behind; he's doing the steering."

Old Smithers—"You're a disgrace to your family, sir. I'm almost ashamed to call you my son." Young Smithers — "Say nothing, dad; I'm as much ashamed of it as you are!"

The Contest in Dundas.

For some time it was supposed that two Conservatives would contest the riding of Dundas County—one a straight Conservative, in the person of Andrew Broder, M.P., and the other, Mr. S. S. Reveler, barrister, of Winchester. At the Liberal convention held at Winchester Springs on the 29th ult., it was decided to not put a candidate in the field and let the two Conservatives fight it out. Only a few days elapsed when Mr. Reveler was taken ill, and by the advice of his physician he withdrew from the contest On the part of the Liberals this seemed to be too easy a mark for their opponents, and they at once called the executive together and convention at Winchester Monday of this week, with Mr. W. B. Lawson. [illegible] was unanimation, and [illegible]. Now the [illegible] swing. The time [illegible] a good deal of hard work will no doubt be done before election day. The current report, or at least has been, is that Dundas county is solid Conservative, has been and always will be. This is an old whim, and certainly should not be the case in this enlightened age, the people should elect suitable persons for positions of this kind, and not only for members of parliament but for any responsible positions. Mr. Broder, who has been representative of this county for a long term of years, is well and widely known and has a host of friends, but while he appears as such, what has he done for Dundas during his term of office? At once you will hear a number reply to this question in this way, "What could you expect from a member on the Opposition side?" This certainly sounds well, but is not the case with all members of the Opposition. We could quote you many instances where the Opposition members do great things for their constituencies, and we might say what about our adjoining constituency of Leeds and Grenville? It is a well known fact to the electorate of Dundas County that she never received many bouquets from the Governments of either the Dominion or Ontario House, and surely it is about time the people of this county should wake up to that fact. Mr. Lawson, the Liberal candidate is known in this county and eastern Ontario as a very shrewd lawyer, and would make an able man in any Government. Surely no one man should have a life-long membership in any Government, especially if there are more capable men in the riding. Of course we are aware that there are Conservatives and Reformers that earthquakes would have no effect in their political opinions and votes, but thank goodness a large number are more liberal in their views and support the best men for the positions which are entrusted to their care. Electors of Dundas, think this matter over seriously before you cast your vote on the 26th of October next.

EAT WHAT YOU WANT

But Find the Way to Digest What You Do Eat.

The first thing to do in the case of indigestion or stomach weakness is to strengthen the muscular walls of the stomach and intestines, so that they will care for the food that is eaten. In no other way can this be done as well as by taking a Mi-o-na tablet before each meal. This restores strength to the stomach muscles and stimulates the pouring out of gastric juices then the food digests readily and you begin to get the full benefit from what you eat.

Use Mi-o-na whenever you have sick headache, heartburn, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, spots before the eyes, sleeplessness and the many other symptoms that are the direct result of indigestion.

W. G Bolster gives with every 50 cent box of Mi-o-na a guarantee to refund the money unless the remedy cures.

James and Martha Noble, grandfather and mother of James Noble, who was killed by a London street car, were awarded $500 damages and costs.

Alex. Day, of Wiarton, was crushed to death in a pile driver.

To the Electors
—OF THE—
COUNTY OF DUNDAS

Gentlemen:—

Having acceded to the request of a delegated convention of Electors to become a candidate at the approaching election, and the time for placing my views before you being too short to permit of the holding of meetings throughout the county and personally discussing with you the issues you will be called upon to decide, I take the opportunity which the press affords of soliciting your suffrages.

It is well known to you all that the progess of Canada during the last twelve years has been greater than at any other period in its history. Our prosperity has been on so large a scale that a depression which is widespread and serious in other countries occasions very little hardship here.

I firmly believe that the policy of the Government, which has contribbted so much to the country's advancement, should be continued.

The increased trade and wealth of Canada has resulted in an increased revenue, availabe for public improvements. The public needs of the County of Dundas should, in my opinion be vigorously pressed upon the attention of the Government, in order that the county may not be overlooked or passed by in favor of other parts of the Dominion, less entitled.

If honored by being elected your representative I shall consider it my first duty to urge upon the Government the just claims of Dundas County. I can see no reason, for example, why this compact and thickly settled electoral district should not be one of the first to enjoy the Rural Free Mail Delivery, now being established in connection with the post office department.

It is impossible in the short compass of an election address, to point out many benefits that this county might and should receive were its claims forcibly presented. I believe a careful examination of our position will convince you that our progress has not been commensurate with the rest of the country.

In the matter of such public improvements as are under the control of the Dominion, we are, and have been for a long time, at a standstill.

I am convinced that your representative should place the interests of the county he represents before that of his particular party, and I promise, if elected, to be guided by this principle.

I am confident that the electors generally prefer progress to stagnation—patriotism to partyism—and I therefore appeal to you, with confidence, for your support.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
W. B. LAWSON.

Death of John McVey.

John McVey, sr., at one time an old pioneer farmer of Ormond but who had spent the past eighteen years in the West, died at Grand View, Man. on the 29th ult. The remains were brought east and arrived at Winchester on the local express Saturday morning accompanied by Robert and Margaret McVey, son and daughter of deceased. The body was conveyed the same morning to the home of the former at Ormond which is the old homestead. The deceased was a little over 73 years of age He was born at Reid's Mills and when 21 went to Osgoode township residing at Marvelville. About a year later he married Hannah McDonald and some time afterward removed to Winchester township, settling on a farm near Ormond where he did all the work incidental to the pioneer life of that period. He prospered for a time but later met with reverses and eighteen years ago went to Manitoba where he was very successful and at farming and lumbering. His wife predeceased him over eight years ago while down east on a visit, her death occurring on the same date as the late Queen Victoria, Jan. 21, 1900. Mr. McVey was highly esteemed by all who knew him. He was a Methodist, a staunch Conservative and loyal Orangeman. The funeral held at home of his son Robert Sunday afternoon and one of the largest ever seen at Ormond. The religious service was conducted by Rev. J. Webster, the rites of the Orange order following, interment being made in Ormond cemetery. Four sons and four daughters are left as survivors, James John and William of Grand View, Man.. Robert of Ormond, Mrs. Thos. McDonald of Osgoode, Mrs. James Cinnamonand, Mrs. Jas. Hughes of Harmony, Miss Margaret of Grand View, Man.

Any Weakness in Your Back.

Sometimes you experience pain and weakness without much suffering. Later on the pain will surely come. The trouble can be stopped now by rubbing on Nerviline—rub it in deeply over the spine, and then put on a Nerviline porous plaster. In these remedies you will find wonderful and quick relief They will spare you from an attack of Lumbago which is the outcome of neglected pain in the back or side. For all muscular pains, strains and weakness, Polson's Nerviline and Nerviline Plasters have no equal. Refuse substitutes.

There passed away on Monday, Oct. 5th, an old and respected resident of Iroquois, in the person of Mrs. Chas. Serviss, aged 66 years. The funeral sermon was conducted by Rev. D. G. McArthur on Wednesday, Oct. 7th, at 2 p.m. Interment was made in the Presbyterian cemetery, Point Iroquois.

D., rector of St. James church, Kemptville, preached his farewell sermon here Sunday evening to a very large congregation He took for his text the last words of St. Matthews gospel, "Lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world, Amen." Mrs. Reeve was also the recipient of a purse from the Ladies' Aid society of the parish. They leave on Thursday for Brandon, Man,, the scene of his future labors. In parting with Mr. Reeve St. James' parish loses one of the cleverest orators in the Anglican church and a man who always commanded the respect of everyone.

Feught Flames In Small Launch.

Smith's Falls, Oct. 13.—A gasolene pipe on a launch owned by Mr. B. McCaw sprang a leak, and the fluid became ignited from a lighted lantern which had been placed near by. In an instant that part of the boat was in flames, but Mr. McCaw heroically beat them back with buckets of water and in this way prevented them from spreading to the other part of the launch, where there was a big tank of gasolene and a quantity of coal oil used for lighting purposes.

In his fight with the flames he was badly burned about the face and hands, his eyebrows and moustache being completely singed off.

The boat was very badly damaged.

THE TORTURES OF NERVOUSNESS

The Sufferer Feels That Unles Relief Comes Insanity Will Follow.

There is no torture more intollerable than nervousness. A nervous person is in a state of constant irritation by day and sleeplessness by night. The sufferer starts at every noise, is shaky and depressed. Often although in a completely exhausted state is unable to sit or lie still. or trouble of this kind absolutely the best thing in the world is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The nerves are jaded and jangled because they are being starved by poor watery blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new rich blood which feeds and soothes the irritated nerves. There is absolutely no doubt about this; thousands can testify of the blood-making, nerve-restoring qualities of these Pills, among them is Mrs. Thos. Harpell, Wallace Bridge, N. S., who says:—"Some years ago I took sick and the doctor pronounced the trouble nervous prostration. To describe the tortures of it is impossible. God and myself only know what I endured. The doctor gave me medicine but it did not seem to help me. Then he ordered me away for a change, but I was afraid to go, as I always seemed to fear some impending calamity, and was afraid to spend the night alone, as I used to think each night that I would die before morning. I tried different kinds of medicines but with no better results, and finally decided I would go to my parents to see if the change would benefit me. I went to their doctor but with no better results. My mother urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and got me a box, of course I did not expect a box would help me, but I continued taking them and in about a month began to feel better. from that on there was an improvement in my condition every day, and in the course of about three months I was again enjoying the great blessing of perfect health. I gained about twenty pounds in weight and my friends could hardly believe I was the same person. I believe I would have been in my grave long ago if it had not been for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are good for any disease due to bad blood or weak nerves. That is why they cure such troubles as anaemia, indigestion, rheumatism, neuralgia, St. Vitus' dance, paralysis, and the ailments of girlhood and womanhood. Sold by medicine dealers at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 or may be had by mail from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Attacks of cholera and dysentery come quickly, there seldom being any warning of the visit. Remedial action must be taken just as quickly if the patient is to be spared great suffering and permanent injury to the lining membranes of the bowels. The readiest preparation for the purpose is Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. It can be got at small cost at any drug store or general dealer's, and it will afford relief before a doctor can be called.

EXPLORER WAS WAIF.

Henry M. Stanley Was Once in a Poor House.

It is not generally known that Stanley, the famous explorer, was a waif, and that his original name was not Stanley at all. The little boy's "real name" was John Rowlands. He was born near Denbigh, Wales, in 1840. When he was three years old he was put in a poorhouse at St. Asaph. It was ten years later that he sailed away to America as a cabin-boy. In New Orleans a merchant by the name of Henry Morton Stanley adopted him and the little boy was given his name.

The "John Rowlands" was discarded from that day, and it was Henry M. Stanley, Jr., who served in the United States navy, won fame as a war correspondent in Turkey and with the British army in Abyssinia, and as the crowning achievement of his life, after he had penetrated the darkest wilds of Africa and found Dr. David Livingstone, opened up the Congo region for intercourse and commerce with the world.

BEST IVORY FROM AFRICA.

Ivory comes from hippopotamus teeth, walrus tusks, narwhal horns, whales' teeth and boars' tusks. At present ivory costs about $7,200 a ton; the price of billiard ball ivory has reached the record figure of $860 a hundredweight. The best ivory comes from Africa. Mammoth tusks are found in extraordinary abundance in Siberia principally, but they are not very highly esteemed, though they run to an enormous size and indeed hold the record, being sometimes twelve feet long and weighing 200 pounds. The natives of Africa regard ivory as the standard of wealth and store it up in their villages for hundreds of years, constantly adding to their stock, and thus the supply continues and will continue for many years.

Guaranteed to contain no opiate or poisonous soothing stuff. Good for the new born baby or the well grown child. Mrs. Ronald L. Seafield, Palmer Rapids, Ont., says:—"Baby's Own Tablets are the most satisfactory medicine I have ever used, and I would not like to be without the Tablets in the house." THE WAY OF IT.

"The caddish fellow you dislike so much insists that he is descended from noble stock. From the ancient kings of Ireland, I believe."

"How is he descended from them?"

"I don't know, unless it was with a dull, sickening thud."

WAS SO RUN DOWN LIFE NOT WORTH LIVING

A Few Bottles of Peruna Restored Me to Health

Mrs. John Henderson, 2 Overdale Ave., Montreal, Can., writes:

"I was much distressed with neuralgia and was so run down that life was not worth living. I tried a great many remedies, but all to no effect.

"I met a friend of mine, and told her of my ailment. She advised me to try her remedy, Peruna.

"Although I had no faith in Peruna, I took her advice, and am pleased to state that the neuralgia has entirely left me, and have gained so in health that I feel just like my old self again.

"I am enjoying the best of health."

We have on file many thousand testimonials like the above. We can give our readers only a slight glimpse of the vast array of unsolicited endorsements Dr. Hartman is receiving.

GOLD GUNS MELTED.

Costly Weapons of an Indian Prince Converted Into Bullion.

I learn with profound regret (writes a Westminster Gazette correspondent) that H. H., the Maharajah Gaekwar of Baroda has melted down and converted into bullion the celebated gold and silver cannon of Baroda. I say "with profound regret" for sentimental reasons.

Of these costly but useless toys, the silver guns were the inspiration of the former Gaekwar. In order to "go one better" than his predecessor, the late Gaekwar (he who was charged in 1875 with the attempted murder of Col. Phayre), had the gold guns cast and mounted at a cost, it is said, of £100,000. They reposed in the state armory and were the wonder and admiration of all visitors to the capital.

On State occasions, however — such as coronations, marriages, etc.—the gold and silver guns were always brought out to take part in the procession. They were "horsed" by teams of magnificent white oxen, which were fittingly caparisoned, i.e., in cloth of gold for the gold guns and cloth of silver for the silger guns.

The native gunners and drivers regarded their charges as sacred and the writer has seen offerings of rice, fruit, fowls, etc., deposited upon the muzzles of these weapons (?) in the Baroda barracks. Such offerings have now "had their day and ceased to be." For the present Maharajah-Baekwar happens to be a man of both practical politics and practised economy, and he would not maintain the "guns" for merely sentimental reason.

THE GREY NUNS & ZAM-BUK

Leading Institutions Use This Balm

Most of the leading institutions throughout Canada have adopted Zam-Buk as a standard preparation without equal for skin diseases and injuries, burns, blood poison, etc.,

From the St. Patrick's Asylum, Ottawa, comes the following appreciation of its merits:

"Gentlemen,—In the orphanage department of the Asylum, we have found Zam-Buk very good for healing cuts, sores, and skin injuries generally, and shall continue to use it for such. Yours sincerely,

(Signed) GREY NUNS."

When a mother rubs on to the delicate skin of children a salve to heal some cut, bruise, burn, eruption or skin disease, she needs to be as careful as if she were giving the child an internal remedy. Zam-Buk is pure—free from all animal fat and all mineral matter, and may be applied even to the skin of young babies.

Zam-Buk heals sores, cures eczema, skin eruptions, ulcers, ringworm, itch, barber's rash, blood poisoning, bad leg, salt rheum, abrasions, abscesses, cuts, burns, scalds, and all skin injuries and diseases. Of all stores and druggists at 50 cents, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. 3 boxes for $1.25

They Drive Pimples Away. — A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be another witness to their excellence.

"My friends," said the political speaker, with a burst of ingenuous eloquence, "I will be honest——" There were a large number of his neighbors present, and the terrific outburst of applause which followed this remark entirely upset the point which the orator was about to introduce.

Singer Talks

7. Singer First Cost is the Whole Cost

¶ Of course you can buy a sewing machine for less money than you would pay for a Singer—all the world knows that. But consider this: When a Singer is bought and paid for, it is paid for—it lasts a lifetime.

¶ A cheap machine is never paid for. Every cent expended for repairs must be added to the original cost—it's an endless system of instalments. These instalments, added to the first cost of the machine, soon exceed the cost of a Singer, and after each successive repair (if you can get another part) the cheap machine grows more and more second-hand—one step nearer the junk heap.

¶ The time lost, the trouble and the worry outweigh many times over the difference in the cost between the "cheap" machine and the Singer.

¶ There are two kinds of machines—good and bad—and the good kind is the Singer.

Death Comes to All.—But it need not come prematurely if proper precautions are taken. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and to have preventive at hand and allow a disease to work its will is wickedness. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil not only allays pains when applied externally, but will prevent lung troubles resulting from colds and coughs. Try it and be convinced.

"You say she married for love; but I happen to know that the man she married is worth a million." "Of course; the million is what she loves!"

It will be noticed in the Singer Sewing Machine Company's advertisement that there are three addresses at the bottom of the announcement. Any one writing will please address them at the nearest one of the three places to his post office.

"Are you going to settle anything on your daughter?" asked the young man with the cigarette and languid air. "Well, it rather looks, if she marries you, that she is going to settle something on me," replied the parent.

For Inflammation of the Eyes. — Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the blood in a surprisingly active way, and the result is almost immediately seen.

"Can you conceive," asked the professor, "an eternal vacuum, a portion of space unoccupied, an empty void, into which nothing ever enters, from which nothing can ever come, which maintains inviolate and for ever its own eternal emptiness?" Legal Notes.

Macdonald vs. Wilson—This was the only action at the non jury sittings of the Counties Court held at Cornwall before Judge O'Reilly on Tuesday, for the sale of a property owned by J. Lockie Wilson. After hearing considerable evidence His Lordship dismissed the case without costs. Macdonnell & Costello, Alexandria, for the plaintiff; Smith & Langlois for the defendant.

The following cases of local interest were recently argued in the Court of Appeal:—

Re Cornwall Furniture Company, being an appeal from the decision of Mr. Justice Latchford and His Honor Judge O'Reilly, holding that the latter had no jurisdiction to go into the question of the contributories held stock certificates which appeared on the face to be paid up. The case was argued and judgment was reserved.

C. H. Cline tor Liquidator; George A. Stiles for J. E. Wilder. The other contributories did not oppose the appeal.

Barret vs. the Township of Cornwall.—This is an appeal from the decision of Referee Henderson, holding that the Township of Cornwall was liable to the contractors upon a progressive estimate, the township contending that the Engineer exceeded his authority in giving the estimate and had varied specifications, etc. Judgment upon the appeal reserved.

C. H. Cline for appellants. J. C. Milligan for respondents.

Bank of Ottawa vs. Roxborough—An appeal from the judgments of Chief Justice Falconbridge and the Divisional Court in favor of the defendants, dismissing the plaintiff's action upon the ground that the Court had no jurisdiction, but that the jurisdiction was in the Drainage Referee. The Bank appealed contending amongst other things that the appointment of the Drainage Referee as a Judge by the Ontario Government was altra vires, as the Dominion Covernment alone has this power. Judgement reserved.

W. E. Middleton, K. C., and W. Greene, for appellants; C. H. Cline for respondents.

Fox vs. Cornwall Street Railway.—An appeal from the judgement of Justice Anglin and Jury, dismissing plaintiff's action with costs. Judgement reserved.

G. I. Gogo for appellant; W. E. Middleton, K. C., and C. H. Cline, for respondents.

Don't Neglect Your Cough.

You may dislike taking medicine—but coughs are best cured without medicine The modern treatment is "Catarrhozone"—it isn't a drug—it's a healing vapor, full of pine essences and healing balsams, spreads over the surfaces that are weak and sore from coughing. Every spot that's congested is healed, irritation is soothed away, phlegm and secretions are cleaned out, and all symptoms of cold and catarrh are cured, Nothing so quick, so sure, so pleasant as Catarrhozone. In 25 ct. and $1.00 sizes at all dealers.

Electric Ry. Company Thinks Verdict Excessive.

An appeal will likely be taken by the Ottawa Electric Railway Company against the verdict of $5,500 given by the jury to Miss Lena Morin, of Mechanicsville, who lost a limb as the result of the accident on the Britannia line on May 24th. It is claimed that the verdict is an excessive one. It is pointed out that Miss Morin has not been injured from resuming an office position, and that the amount of the verdict, if invested at 6 per cent., would yield her each year practically as much as she was receiving from her former position.

Some time ago the court gave a verdict of $1,500 in favor of Mrs. O'Leary, whose husband was killed by walking in front of a Somerset street car. The verdict was appealed, and has now been carried to the supreme court. In the meantime Mrs. O'Leary has died, but the fighting of the appeal will probably be continued.

Capt. Scott Found Drowned.

Kingston, Oct. 12.—Early this morning the body of Capt. J. H. Scott was found floating near Swift's wharf Capt. Scott intended leaving for Ottawa last night on the steamer Rideau King. He had his baggage on board, and before the time scheduled for the boat to leave, he made a trip up town. On his return it is believed that he was taken with a fainting spell, which he was subject to, and fell in the water.

Capt. Scott was about 70 years of age, and one of the oldest captains on the lakes, although retired for several years. He was captain and owner of the old steamer Persia, running between Toledo and Montreal. He was one of the best captains in his day. One son, a Queen's student, alone survives.

Boy Shot Dead.

Ottawa, October 12—William Burke, a sixteen-year-old boy, residing in Hollow Glen, near Kingsmere, Quebec, was accidently shot when a rifle was permaturely discharged. It appears that early in the afternoon Burke with two companions, Hugh Crilly and John Kelly set out for the woods, taking with them a snider rifle. Burke was sitting on the ground when his companions, in handling the rifle, unexpectedly discharged it. The bullet struck Burke in the thigh and was buried in his body, and he died. An investigation will be held.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL

Health Saving Explained by a Chesterville Citizen, Who Knows From Experience.

Many Chesterville people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help.

Sick kidneys are responsible for a great amount of suffering and ill health.

The reason so many use Booth's Kidney Pills is their quick relief for all kidney weakness. Here is what a Chesterville citizen says:

Mrs. Freen Hummell, of Queen St., Chesterville, Ont., says: "I have found more actual relief from Booth's Kidney Pills than all the other remedies I had used. The severe pain has left my back and I feel stronger and more able to attend to my housework than I had in a year previous. I have not suffered with headaches or spells of dizziness and I had previously suffered in this manner for over a year. Neuralgia had also caused me to suffer with a dull aching in my shoulders and neck and Booth's Kidney Pills have entirely relieved them. My appetite is better, and I am stronger and better generally. I cannot speak too highly of Booth's Kidney Pills, which were obtained at Mr. Bolster's pharmacy and can conscientiously recommend them." Sold by dealers. Price 50 cents. The R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., ort Erie, Ont., sole Canadian agents.

SPOKE AT CORNWALL.

Mr. Borden Given a Rousing Welcome on His Second Visit.

Cornwall, Ont., Oct. 13.—Mr. R. L. Borden, leader of the opposition in the Dominion Parliament, received a rousing welcome on the occasion of his second visit to Cornwall today. He came in from Ottawa on the O. & N. Y. express in a private car, and was met at the depot by a large crowd of enthusiastic supporters from Stormont, Dundas, and Glengarry, who were assembled at the depot to give him a royal welcome The citizen's band and Piper Munro, of Lancaster, furnished the music, and a deputation from the town Council presented an address of welcome. Mr. Borden was escorted to the old Victoria rink where over 3,000 people were assembled. On his entry he was met with a hurricane of cheers. The national Band was decorated with appropriate mottoes and plenty of flags and bunting. Tonight's gathering was one old-fashioned Conservative kind that spells "victory" At the rink Dr. D. O. Alguire, a man of provincial reputation for his purity of motive, was elected chairman. R. A. Pringle, M. P. for Stormont, was the first speaker. He expressed himself as a believer in the policy of the late Prince Bismarck that if you do now export goods you must export men, and he preferred exporting the goods. Over one hundred thousand Canadians had been forced in recent years to seek a home and a livelihood in the United States. The people of Canada permitted the United States to send a large amount of goods into Canada without being properly protected. He found falut with the Canadian Government for injuring the woolen and paper industries. Regarding his position on the proposed damming of the Long Saulte Rapids for the St. Lawrence power canal scheme, he held that every move he had made was in the interests of the people of Canada.

Mr. MacGregor's appearance was appropriately heralded by a shirl of the pipes by Piper Munro, of Lancaster, and the "man from Glengarry" was received with hearty rounds of applause. The Brawny Scot was not an orator, but he spoke in no uncertain terms against corrupt election methods. A Glengarry man had said that the day was at hand when every elector would have to be paid. He did not want to live to see that day of sneak politicians and grafters.

Mr. R. L. Borden said that this was the 52nd meeting of the campaign After a few words in favor of each of of the Conservative candidates in the field, Mr. Borden challenged the members of the Laurier Government to point to any degree of prosperity in Canada due to the policy of the said Government. He claimed that there should be radical reforms in the Canadian civil service and that several of the planks of the Halifax platform should be adherd to. He criticised the administration of the Government railways, which should have a better system than in New Zealand or Australia. Mr. Borden wound up with a prediction of victory for R. A. Pringle.

Was Fined $50 and Costs.

Kingston, Oct. 12.—Because he served liquor to Michael Hogan, who was on the "Indian" list, Robert Baird was fined $50 and costs by Magistrate Farrell, on Saturday. The court described Baird's act as a most despicable one, and said that others would be just as severely dealt with if found guilty. Baird purchased the liquor and then asked Hogan to have a drink. License Inspector Wright caught Hogan taking the "eye-opener."

Daughters Saw Father Arrested.

Windsor, Ont., Oct. 12.—William Demauchelle, proprietor of a hotel in Walkerville, is confined in the Wayne County Jail, in Detrolt, charged with the Morneau-Parent gang of counterfeiters in more or less prominent capacities.

The two Lears, alleged to be counterfeiters, are also in jail awaiting trial and it is presumed Demauchelle was taken into custody on their information.

The arrest was made in a sensational manner. Demauchelle, accompanied by his two young daughters, aged ten and twelve, had just stepped from a Windsor ferry boat, when he suddenly found the bracelets being snapped on his wrists in front of the girls' eyes, and was dragged away to prison, leaving his daughter in tears.

Hamilton street railway directors have decided not to accept the by-law voted by the citizens a short time ago.
