ST. PAUL'S L. A. S.

With a large attendance of interested members the October meeting of the Ladies' Aid of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, was held Thursday afternoon last at the home of Miss Grace Irving, and was presided over by the president, Mrs. Albert Edgerton. Excellent reports were presented by the Secretary and Treasurer. Committees reported on their activities of the past month and plans for the future were discussed. Mrs. Lorne Kinkaid and Mrs. Geo. Wilson contributed a vocal duet "Hard Times," in a very pleasing manner with Miss Mary Empey as accompanist. Mrs. Bratton, of Regina, formerly Aggie Ross, an old Winchester girl, was welcomed as a guest. Mrs. Bratton also rendered two vocal solos, "Sixty Years Ago," and "Money Everywhere," which were much enjoyed. Meeting closed with the Lord's Prayer in unison. Lunch was served by Miss Irving, assisted by Miss Clara Irving.

GREAT ARE THE WINCHESTERS

R. A. J., writing in the Citizen of Saturday evening last, says:

"Winchester, England, and our own Winchester in Dundas County exchanged greetings this week and the ceremony was as unique as it was appropriate. Before the British educationist party of twelve left the other side of the Atlantic they were deputized by their Winchester to present to our Winchester a flag that would be as a badge of fraternity, concord and good wishes.

Probably they had heard of our Winchester's high attainments in the realm of education, doubtless they already know something of her fair women, of her civic ideals, of James H. Ross, of Aaron Sweet, of the Broders and Beachs, McCormicks and Keyes; of the fascination of her historical background, the expansiveness of her thoroughfares and the fame of the Winchester band. Great are the Winchesters?

Liberal Party Swept Into Power Monday

RT. HON. W. L. MACKENZIE KING WILL FORM GOVERNMENT WITH 168 MEMBERS—A RECORD MAJORITY.

Starting in the Maritime provinces, where only one Conservative was elected out of twenty-four possible seats, the Liberals, under Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, swept into power in the federal elections on Monday last. Liberal standard-bearers were elected to every seat in Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia, and to nine of the ten seats in New Brunswick.

Quebec province, a Liberal stronghold, followed the example of the Maritimes, returning 55 Liberals and five Conservatives, while Ontario nearly reversed the decision of 1930. Fifty-five Liberals were elected in this province and 26 Conservatives, while five years ago 59 Conservatives were returned and 22 Liberals.

Cabinet Ministers in the Bennett government fared badly as a whole. In Ontario where six ministers were seeking election, three were successful in retaining their seats and three failed. The losers were Hon. R. J. Manion, Minister of Railways, in Fort William; Hon. W. A. Gordon, Minister of Labour, in Timiskaming; and Hon. G. R. Geary, Minister of Justice, in Toronto-Trinity. Victorious ministers were Hon. Hugh Stewart, Minister of Public Works, in Leeds; Hon. Earl Rowe, Minister without portfolio, in Dufferin-Simcoe, and Hon. Earl Lawson, Minister of National Revenue, in York South.

RT. HON. MACKENZIE KING

Leader of the Liberal Party, who will be Canada's next Premier, as a result of Monday's Elections.

All four leaders of the chief parties in Canada's 18th general election held their seats in the voting on Monday.

Liberal Leader Mackenzie King had an easy time of it in Prince Albert, where his three opponents—Conservative, C. C. F.and Social Credit—lost their deposits.

Election of Premier Bennett in his home constituency of Calgary West was conceded early. He was one of five candidates, opposed by a Lberal, C. C. F. candidate, Reconstructionist, and Social Crediter.

Winnipeg North Center, returned J. S. Woodsworth, C. C. F. chieftan, over four others. He led from the start of the count and finished with a comfortable margin.

Hon. H. H. Stevens, Reconstruction Leader, had a hard fight in East Kootney, but managed to retain his seat with a few hundred votes to spare.

Social Credit made a bold stand in Alberta where the Liberals had previously felt themselves to be well entrenched. 15 of the seventeen seats in that province will be occupied by the followers of Premier Aberhart's new theories of Social Credit. Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett's was one of the two remaining seats.

Locally, the election of A. C. Casselman, K. C., Conservative, was conceded almost from the start. As returns continued to come in it was evident that he would again represent this riding in the House of Commons. Preston Elliott, the Liberal candidate, polled a heavy vote, while Dr. C. A. Patterson, Reconstructionist was left far in the rear.

A high-light of the election was the failure of every Reconstruction candidate to win a seat, with the exception of the leader, Hon. H. H. Stevens, who had a hard battle in his own riding. Most of the followers of Mr. Stevens lost their $200 deposits, as did a number of other candidates.

A. C. Casselman Is Given Big Majority

Conservative Candidate in Grenville-Dundas Scores Great Victory Over Liberal and Reconstruction Opponents In Monday's Election.

Grenville-Dundas Conservatives stood solidly behind their candidate, A. C. Casselman on Monday and for the fifth time elected him as their representative to the federal House by a substantial majority of 1008 over both his opponents. Mr. Casselman's vote of 9022 was a record vote in the county, considering the three-cornered fight.

The Liberal vote for Preston Elliott was increased by 333 votes over the vote of 1930, his total vote being 6,401 votes with Dr. C. A. Patterson of Jasper polling a light vote of 1,613.

Trails in Own Town

A. C. Casselman, a barrister at law in Prescott, though defeated in his own town by 26 votes where the Liberal candidate polled 718 votes, has represented the riding of Grenville since 1925. In 1921 he was first elected to Parliament as successor to the late Hon. Dr. J. D. Reid but relinquished his seat to Hon. Arthur Meighen who was defeated in that election in his own riding.

Mr. Casselman, as he received his returns in his office, was well pleased from the first, as early returns gave him a majority, which steadily increased.

Following the complete returns, Mr. Casselman told the little knot of faithful Conservatives who had assembled in his office that his only wish was that if Mr. King was returned, as was evident from the early results, he would have a straight majority.

Dundas County Teachers' Convention

MEETING HELD AT OTTAWA. MR. CLIFFORD PITT ELECTED PRESIDENT.

The meeting of the Dundas Teachers' Convention opened at 10.00 a.m., Oct. 10th, in Knox Presbyterian Church, Ottawa, with Miss Helen Taylor, the president, in the chair. After singing "O Canada," the Lord's Prayer was repeated in unison. Miss Taylor then delivered an interesting address on "Education and Play." She outlined in detail the great necessity of training the child to make the best use of leizure time. After the reading of the last minutes by the Secretary, H. H. Hamilton, and registration, a nominating committee was appointed to draw a slate of officers for the ensuing year. The meeting was then adjourned until Friday morning and all present, after lunch, assembled at the Ottawa Normal School for class reunions and meeting of old acquaintances. From four to six o'clock tea was served to over one thousand teachers On Friday morning the meeting opened with repeating the Lord's Prayer, A well-prepared report was then delivered by the O. E. A. delegate, Mr. Ronald Lynch, which held the attention of the convention for half an hour. Mr. W. J. Stewart, B.A., B.Paed., then introduced the subject of "Automatic Membership in Teachers' Organizations," and Mr. Gordon Faulds, principal of Morrisburg Public School, enlarged and explained the subject. Mr. W. J. Stewart, Inspector for Dundas county, then welcomed Mr. Gordon Young, Inspector, and the teachers of Grenville County, to join with the Dundas Convention in listening to an address by Dr. Putman, Senior Inspector of Public Schools in Ottawa. Mr. Young introduced Dr. Putman and paid tribute to him as being one of the most outstanding leaders of Education in Canada and the British Empire. Dr. Putman addressed the joint convention on the subject "Humour," and entertained all by the reading of humorous poems. Mr. W. J. Stewart then moved a vote of thanks to Dr. Putman for his inspiring address which was seconded by Mr. Schlicter, principal of Cardinal Public School. Mr. Lenoard Porteous then moved the motion that Mr. Gordon Faulds be the delegate to the Men's Federation which will be held in Ottawa in November. Mr. W. J. Stewart then delivered a short address to the teachers in Dundas County. The report of the Nominating committee was then read, the following being the offi-

FENNELL FEED COMPANY

WHOLESALE PRICES

Grain Prices have been irregular on the Winnipeg market. Wheat is pegged at 87 1-2 cents. It has been trading well over 90 cents with other grains holding fairly strong. However, the large percentage of lower grade wheat in the west should help to keep feed wheat within a reasonable price.

Ontario Grain is not moving as fast as last season. Buyers are offering 80 to 85 cents a 100 lbs. for good Oats and around 75 cents for Mixed Barley and Oats.

Malting Barley has been going out at about 48 cents a bushel. Buyers claim that they are having difficulty in getting quality.

African Corn is quoted slightly higher within the last week or two.

Millfeeds seem to be in good demand. Bran and Shorts advanced $1.00 a ton. It might not be a bad time to put in a few tons of Millfeeds.

Gluten Feed and Oilcake Meal are both keeping pretty much in line with Bran and Shorts in regard to any change in price. They are both fairly reasonable now. Usually Gluten and Oilcake move higher in the winter—any time after the heavy feeding begins.

Flour nearly always follows wheat. It advanced over 50 cents a barrel in sympathy with the higher wheat market. The mills have been working very close and they are inclined to widen the spread between the price of wheat and the price of flour.

TIMOTHY AND CLOVER SEED

The last government bulletin that was published reported an estimated production of 11,485,000 lbs. of Timothy Seed in Canada. Normal consumption is estimated at 7,000,000 lbs. This does not look too good with the current price in the U. S. A. about $3.00 a hundred. However, at lower prices a great deal more seeding will be done and this will help to absorb a surplus.

Red Clover and Alfalfa are just beginning to move. Prices have not really been established yet. According to the yields that are being reported Clover Seed prices should be fairly good.

The Family DOCTOR

SO WE COOK OUR FOOD

An ox or a horse can seize and masticate thoroughly a dry, hard ear of corn. Most any of the farm animals may attack a cured bale of hay and with powerful teeth and capable salivary glands reduce the tough, dried grass to fit the stomach and be readily digested.

The hen picks up ripened grains, hard as wood—swallows them whole and doubtless enjoys the flavor. She has a battery of small pebbles in her interior, to grind her cereal with pleasing deliberation. It is all very interesting when we have time to think of it.

But, man cannot do things as the cattle, horses and fowl do them. We may eat a few things raw, with benefit. Our pioneers ate raw turnips freely in the days before the young orchards had arrived at the fruit-bearing stage. We find raw fruits exceedingly palatable and beneficial and even necessary to our well-being. We may eat dried or wholly-air-cured meats such as "chipped beef" if it be shaved thin and yet masticated well. It is tonic for the digestive tract and a blood-builder as well.

There are faddists today who think man should abolish cooking! The common sense of it is that vegetables and meats of all kinds need treatment before being eaten. Tough fibers must be made tender. Hard growths must be softened. Hidden food-principles must be set free that we may appropriate them to our use without over-taxing the digestive machinery within us. The process of cooking becomes one of greatest importance to the human family.

Let me mention a possible error which is over-cooking. Too ardent frying, boiling, roasting is also wrong. The artist in cookery knows when to quit! Much of our diet is spoiled by "cooking it to death." Don't do it.

PARTRIDGE PLENTIFUL IN KEMPTVILLE DISTRICT

When a group of farmers gathered on Wednesday last at Sabourin school, near Kemptville, to discuss poultry, they had no idea that they would soon be discussing game birds instead. While F. H. Buker, of Brockville, field man of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, was addressing the gathering in connection with the forming of a poultry pool a dark brown object crashed through one of the school windows and fell at his feet. It was the soft, fluttering body of a large partridge which, winging its way through the night, had been attracted by the light from the window. Cut by the window glass, the bird was dead within a few moments. It was the second time during the week that a partridge had crashed through a window of the school.

TEA HELD AT VERNON BY ST. GEORGE'S GUILD

A successful autumn tea was held in the hall at Vernon on Friday afternoon last under the auspices of the Ladies' Guild of St. George's Anglican church, of that place. Visitors were present from the community, also from Metcalfe and Russell, including Rev. Turley of St. Mary's church, Russell. The guests were received by Mrs. Wm. H. Acres and Mrs. Chas. L. Acres.

Rev. C. H. Roach was chairman for a program which included recitations by Kathleen Acres and Orma Acres, piano and guitar selections by Miss Velma Morrison, and community singing led by Mrs Crerar. A contest was won by Mrs. Murray Porteous and Mrs. Duff Crerar. The program was arranged by Mrs. Geo. G. Acres, Mrs. Ernest Acres and Mrs. Chas. L. Acres.

RECEIVED L. L. D.

At the fall convocation of Queen's University held in Kingston on October 12, the honorary degrees of Doctor of Laws was conferred upon Senator A. C. Hardy, of Brockville, who has served for some years as a member of the council of the University. The honorary degree was conferred in recognition of Senator Hardy's public services and the interest which he has taken in the university over a period of years.

SERVICES RENDERED

The fourth annual report of the Minister of Public Welfare and Municipal Affairs for Ontario is worth study for the picture it offers of private services at the public expense.

The report covers the activities of the following institutions, organizations, and worthy enterprises:

Old Age Pensions:

Mothers' Allowances:

Children's Aid Society, this branch including adoptions and administrations of the Children of Unmarried Parents' Act;

Industrial Schools (five);

Training Schools (two);

Ontario Society for Crippled Children;

Unemployment Relief Branch;

Supervision of 46 orphanages and 77 Houses of Refuge;

Soldiers' Aid Commission.

All of these services are necessary, in the modern conception of the state's duty to the individual.

Not one could be dropped without bringing suffering to citizens of Ontario impairing their chances in life for boys and girls. But when we grumble about our taxes, about the high cost of citizenship, we should bear in mind these items of public expenditure which in the name of duty we have assumed.

HOW MUCH VARIETY IN MENUS?

We can't go very far into the subject of making menus without coming to the matter of variety. Women looking for help in meal planning, usually ask for suggestions for variety in their every-day menus. In fact, variety seems to be a word that covers a mutitude of conditions and many sins. Nearly all of us justify a poor menu now and then with the excuse that we do not have much variety from which to choose.

When we come right down to the matter of eating, just how much variety do we we want? People who regularly eat in restaurants where there is a wide selection of food, eat pretty much the same meals day after day. Every home has its traditions in cooking. Too many new ways and strange foods will be as upsetting in the home as they are unprofitable in the restaurant.

But, meals do become monotonous and there must be something different in menus to make them interesting. We can do no better than take a tip from the restauranteurs who make a business of planning interesting meals. Nearly all of them will tell you that the secret of success is good home-cooked food with little extra touches to give variety. Some of the "little things" are hot breads, particularly the dark, fruity ones; garnishes that can be eaten, such as carrot straws, radish roses, celery curls, pickles and Jelly.

The smart restaurant chef knows something about using left-overs, too. Food is never just "warmed over." It is made into a new dish and is garnished and served with all the fanfare of a chef's special. Here again it is the little thing that does the trick—perhaps something so simple as a topping of buttered corn flakes for a casserole of scalloped left-over vegetables and meat.

Those, dark, fruity breads that everyone likes, can be in the form of muffins, buns or loaves. Here are a few recipes to add to your collection.

Honey Currant Buns

1-2 cup prepared bran, 1-2 cup currants, 3-4 cup milk, 1-4 cup honey, 2 cups flour, 4 tsps. baking powder, 1 tsp. salt, 1-4 cup shortening.

Combine bran, currants, milk and honey. Sift together the dry ingredients and cut in the shortening. Add to the first mixture and combine. Turn onto floured board and shape in a long roll. Divide into twelve equal pieces. Roll each piece into a ball and flatten out to 1-2 inch thickness. Place on greased pan and bake in a hot oven (425 degrees F.) about 25 minutes. Yield: 12 buns 2 1-2 inches in diameter.

Note: If desired, buns may be glazed with a mixture of honey and melted butter before baking. This gives them a golden brown colour.

Steamed Prune Bread

1 cup prepared bran, 1 cup sour milk, 1-2 cup prunes (soaked several hours, stoned, drained and chopped), 1 tbsp. molasses, 1-2 cup sugar, 1 cup flour, 1-2 tsp. soda, 1 tsp. baking powder, 1-4 tsp. salt,

Mix together the bran, sour milk, prunes and molasses. Add the sugar, then the flour which has been sifted with the soda, baking powder and salt. Put the batter into a greased can. Cover tightly and steam for 3 hours.

Yield: 1 loaf, 8 servings.

Bran Date Bread

1 1-4 cups boiling water, 1 1-2 cups dates (cut fine), 1 1-2 cups prepared bran, 1 egg (slightly beaten), 2 tbsps. melted shortening, 1 tsp. vanilla extract, 1 1-2 cups flour, 1 tsp. soda, 1 tsp. salt, 1-3 cup sugar, 1 tsp. baking powder, 3-4 cup nutmeats (chopped)

Pour boiling water over dates and cool. Add bran, egg, shortening and vanilla. Sift dry ingredients and add nuts. Add dry ingredients to first mixture and stir only until smooth. Bake in greased loaf pan in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 50-55 minutes.

Yield: 1 loaf 3 1-2 x 8"

HINTS FOR THE FARMER

PROTECTING POTATOES FROM FROST

In order to prevent losses of potatoes from low temperatures the crop should be harvested before the advent of heavy frosts. The potatoes should be stored in rooms having a temperature between 35 and 40 degrees F., thus preventing them from turning sweet and the development of necrosis. When potatoes are being transported during the winter months they should be carefully protected from frost. When it is known that potatoes have been undercooled do not handle them until it is certain that the temperature is above freezing point.

RECOMMENDED VARIETIES OF OATS

Variety tests of oats made at the Central Experimental Farm over a long period have shown that Banner and Victory still hold the lead in the medium late variety class in this district. Legacy a medium early variety, has yielded exceptionally well in comparison with later standard varieties. Where very early varieties are required, Alaska has long been recommended as one of the best. The new early variety Cartier, which has been accepted by the Canadian Seed Growers' Association as a registered variety, is considered as being equally good and slightly higher yielding than Alaska in this district.

NATIONAL CHEESE WEEK OCTOBER 28 TO NOVEMBER 2

Although Canadian cheddar cheese is equalled by few and surpassed by none of the 250 different kinds of cheese manufactured throughout the world, the Canadian people eat less cheese than most of the other great nations. For this reason, the Canadian cheese industry in 1934 promoted "National Cheese Week" in an attempt to call attention to the advantages of cheese as a food product, and Canadian at that, worthy of more general use. As a result of these efforts, the consumption of Canadian cheese in Canada increased by almost half a pound per head of population during the year, and heartened by this advance, the Canadian cheese industry has called the 1935 National Cheese Week for October 28 to November 2.

One reason for the small quantity of cheese eaten in the Dominion is that it is generally served as plain cheese at the end of a substantial meal and not as the principal ingredient of an enticing dish followed by a light dessert. Cheese is a food in itself and can be used in cooking in many different ways. It is one of the best muscle builders for older boys and girls, as well as for adults, but when served in crude bulk cannot be said to be universally appetizing. Cheese does not lose its nutritive value in cooking, but it should be remembered that when cheese is subjected to high temperatures it is harder to digest. Eaten according to modern recipes, there can be no cause under ordinary circumstances for any digestive disturbance.

PROPER HOG FEEDING

In order to produce pork as economically as possible, farm products, which would otherwise have little or no value, must be utilized for hog feeding. A ration which is balanced, or nearly so, must be fed, however, if satisfactory gains are to be made and if a satisfactory carcass is to be produced.

Experiments have been conducted to determine the value of potatoes when fed in combination with ground grains and skim-milk. It has been found that satisfactory gains can be made when potatoes are fed at the rate of four pounds for each pound of grain. Skim-milk should be fed liberally with this ration for best results. Potatoes are fed, preferably cooked. The grain mixture may consist of almost any mixture of common ground grains but it is advisable to include some barley in the mixture especially during the latter part of the fattening period. Where grain and milk only are fed, a suitable mixture consists of equal parts of middlings, ground oats and ground barley until the pigs weigh about 120 pounds and then add one extra part of barley. Where potatoes are fed, one part of barley should be omitted. In this experiment, where the meal mixture was valued at $1.55 per hundred pounds, potatoes had a feed value of 25 cents per hundred pound.

WEDDING

MORROW—STANLEY

A pretty autumn wedding took place at one o'clock on Saturday afternoon last at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Craig, Metcalfe, when Myrtle Ida Stanley, R.N., daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stanley, was united in mariage with Dr. C. E. L. Morrow, only son of Dr. and Mrs. C. Morrow. Rev. C. H. Roach, rector of Holy Trinity Church, Metcalfe, officiated and assisting him was Rev. Dr. G. C. Gaukrodger, of the United Church. The nuptial music was played by Mrs. W. Latimer, of Ottawa.

Given in marriage by her brother, Calvin Stanley, the young bride was very winsome in her lovely gown of grape juice chiffon velvet with touches of sequins and wearing a silver bandeau in her hair. She carried a bouquet of Premier Supreme roses and lily-of-the-valley with bronze streamers.

Mrs. H. E. Craig, sister of the bride, wore a handsome gown of crepe romain in shades of sand and brown with a corsage bouquet of Talisman roses.

Mrs. C. Morrow, mother of the groom, wore a pretty model of brown floral chiffon with shoulder knot of Talisman roses and a large brown hat.

Mrs. A. Tomlison, sister of the groom, was gowned in black chiffon velvet with hat to match.

During the signing of the register, Rev. Dr. Gaukrodger sang "O Perfect Love," accompanied by Mrs. W. Latimer at the piano.

The living room was profusely adorned for the occasion with baskets of autumn blooms and white streamers. Following the ceremony a buffet lunch was served to fifty guests, among whom were included several from Montreal, Toronto and Ottawa. The toast to the bride was proposed by R. G. Stanley, of Toronto, and was responded to by the groom

Later Dr. and Mrs. Morrow left on an extended motor trip to New York, Boston and other points. For travelling, the bride wore a smart costume of grey bunny cloth with accessories to match. On their return they will take up residence in Metcalfe.

SWAIN—BEAMISH

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the presbytery of the Church of the Holy Cross, Kemptville, on Oct. 9th, when Shirley Frances Beamish, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Beamish, of Jasper, was united in marriage to Earl T. Swain, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Swain, of Kemptville. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father J. H. McDonald, parish priest.

DUPLICATE BUTTONS

Any returned soldier who has lost his overseas button can now have it replaced by merely writing to the Record Office, Department of National Defence, Ottawa. It is also possible for a veteran to obtain from the department a new copy of his discharge papers. In the first instance, the veteran must fill out a form—supplied from Ottawa—giving particulars as to how and where his button was lost. In the second case, he must send in his old discharge papers, or if they are lost, make an affidavit to that effect.

ARM AND FINGERS BADLY CRUSHED BY CORN CUTTER

While working on a corn cutter on his farm near Kemptville on Wednesday afternoon last, Thomas Taylor had his left hand and arm badly crushed. He was taken to the surgery of Dr. O. F. Beamish, where it was found that all the fingers and the thumb were cut off and the arm badly gashed. Dr. Beamish had him removed to his home in Kidd and Dickinson's ambulance.

DIED AT WILLIAMSBURG

The body of John Musell Frank, aged 71, of Oakland, Calif., was taken to Montreal on Wednesday last for cremation in the Mount Royal Crematorium in that city. Mr. Frank dropped dead on Sunday in Williamsburg where he had been for the past two months with his sister, Mrs. Flora F. Hanley, also of Oakland. The ashes will be taken to California.

INJURED IN RUNAWAY

Miss Fern Arcand, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Arcand, of Sabourin, east of Kemptville, was badly bruised and shaken up on Tuesday afternoon of last week when she was thrown off a wagon in which she was riding when the team became frightened and ran away. She received a bad cut over the eye which necessitated several stitches, the right knee was badly cut and her body and shoulders were severely bruised. Dr. G. D. Gordon, Kemptville, attended her.

TROTTING HORSE ACHIEVES REMARKABLE RECORD

The trotting horse, "Victor Patch," owned by Mr. James Kelly, of Westport, and which won second money in the 2.25 class at the recent Perth Fair, has achieved a remarkable record in this the first year the animal has appeared on the race track, having won to date seven firsts, four seconds and two thirds. The first heat it ever trotted the mile was done in two minutes, eleven and a half seconds which is wonderful time for a new horse, which was raised in Milton, Ont., and appeared in its first race on July 1st. Its sire was "Pacing Patch" and its dam was "Evangeline," a runner. Mr. Barney David is its driver, and he made the statement that it is the best horse he ever drove. For some time the horse was under a slight handicap due to a broken shoe which cut the leg. Mr. Jas. McCann, the expert Westport blacksmith, made a pair of shoes for the horse prior to the Perth Fair, the shoes weighing three and a half ounces each.

CATCH TWO 'LUNGE

The Rideau waters near Kemptville are giving up some fine maskinonge these days. A number of the fighters have been landed but the best luck went to two men from Williamsburg, Mr. Casselman and Mr. Marcellus, who, tired of waiting for ducks, decided to go fishing and Monday morning landed a fine 20-pounder. Going out again after dinner, they were again fortunate in catching another which gave them a great fight and when weighed was 20 pounds.

The Story of the Constitution

·by CALEB JOHNSON·

PUB. AUTOCASTER SERV.

XIII. EXPANDING NATIONAL POWERS

While the war between the states was in progress, almost dictatorial powers had been exercised by the Executive. The President, under the Constitution, was Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, and the whole nation was involved in the war. Many things were done under the stress of the war emergencies for which there was no specific warrant in the Constitution. Among these, for example, was the imposition of a national income tax. This, like the other war emergency measures, was abandoned at the close of hostilities. After the turmoil of the Reconstruction period had subsided, there was general satisfaction with the demonstration that had been given of the flexibility of the Constitution. It had been stretched to cover the emergencies of war and reconstruction; now it had shrunk back to its peace-time functions.

But those functions had become far greater than they were, and were to keep on expanding. A new spirit of nationalism had taken possession of the Government, and in the 20 years from 1878 to 1898 Congress and the Executive, sometimes together and sometimes in opposition to each other, undertook to enlarge Federal powers while the powers of the states were constantly being diminished.

The whole social and economic picture of the nation began, in the 1870's, to change from a system based almost exclusively on agriculture, forestry and mining, to one based primarily on industry. Revolutionary new inventions began to appear. Lines of communications multiplied, the great industrial centers began to develop and their products to be distributed throughout the nation. For the first time the United States began to be an exporter of manufactured goods as well as of agricultural raw products.

Just as new ideas of Government had been developed by the pioneer settlers on the Atlantic Coast in colonial days, so new ideas of the relation of the government to the people began to develop in the pioneer West. As the population of the newly created states grew, their influence in national affairs naturally increased. Before long, pressure from the agricultural West induced the Federal Government to assume authority to regulate railroad communications between the states. There was serious doubt of the Constitutionality of the interstate commerce act, in the minds of many, but the Supreme Court upheld it as coming within the purview of the commerce clause of the Constitution.

But when, in 1893, Congress undertook to enact a new income tax law, the Court held it to be unconstitutional. The West, however, was insistent upon an income tax, and after 20 years of agitation the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution, authorizing Congress to impose a tax, was submitted and ratified in 1913.

Out of the agrarian West also came demands which gradually became irresistable, for other changes in the Constitution.

The Spanish war of 1898 put the finishing touch to the antagonisms between North and South and launched the United States upon a broader nationalistic career. So completely dominant was Federal supremacy that President Theodore Roosevelt, in 1906, did not hesitate to advance the idea that state lines should be wiped out.

The power and authority of the Federal Government spread in directions and to distances which the framers of the Constitution could never have forseen. We annexed Hawaii under President Cleveland. We took possession of the Philippine Islands, 7,000 miles away across the Pacific, and of Porto Rico; almost at the end of the Civil War we had purchased Alaska from Russia and under the leadership of Theodore Roosevelt we embarked upon the gigantic enterprise of the Panama Canal. Probably not one of the men who sat in the convention of 1787 would have called this imperialistic expansion constitutional, but under the clauses authorizing Congress to regulate commerce with foreign nations and between the states and to provide for the common defense and the general welfare, the Supreme Court held that the documentary basic law of the land was sufficiently flexible to warrant these acts.

NOMINATED AS EDITOR

The Presbytery of Renfrew of the United Church of Canada, in session last week at Carleton Place, nominated Rev. A. J. Wilson, of Napanee, as editor of The New Outlook, publication of the church appearing in Toronto. Mr. Wilson is editor of the Napanee Beaver and pastor of St. Andrew's Church.

PLAN VETERANS' BANQUET

A meeting of the executive committee of the 156th Battalion Association was held on Friday evening last at which tentative plans were discussed for a banquet, open to all veterans of the World War, proposed for Saturday evening, November 9th, in the Hotel Manitonna, Brockville. The proposal will be further discussed at another meeting to be held shortly.

FEARED SLOT MACHINE RAID

The business and amusement places in Morrisburg where slot-and-candy machines are in operation received a bad scare on Wednesday night last when the rumor reached them that police were about to descend on their places of business and seize and destroy the slot machines. Anxiously awaiting the rumored raid, the men were relieved as the night went on and no police appeared to seize the machines. The rumor, it is believed, originated from the decision of the municipal council in Iroquois to do away with all slot machines in that village.

EXPLAIN SANCTIONS BEING CONSIDERED BY LEAGUE COUNCIL

What are sanctions? A good many people are seeking that question these days as the League of Nations Council considers their use in an effort to halt the Italo-Ethiopian conflict.

Here is the way the British Royal Institute of International Affairs defines the word:

A "sanction" is the name which legal writers give to measures for securing obedience to law. Sanctions can take the form of the infliction of penalties for a breach of law that has been committed or they may consist in measures taken for the actual prevention of a threatened breach.

"Sanctions operate in two ways: Negatively, in that knowledge of the will and power to apply them may deter a wrong-doer from transgressing the law; positively, in that their application checks a wrongdoer in the act of transgression or compels him, after a transgression has been committed, to submit to law and deprive him of the fruits of his transgression."

ALCOHOL AND THE ATHLETE

Study III. Octobber 20th

Except for one important detail, the regular National Hockey League game between the Toronto Maple Leafs and the Canadiens of Montreal held nothing of extraordinary interest for the fourteen thousand fans who had gathered in the Maple Leafe Gardens. It was not surprising to see the world's foremost devotees of the goddess of speed, agility and precision, darting up and down the ice like swallows, nor to hear the cheers of the crowd breaking out in crescendoes of encouragement or in murmurs of disappointment. But it was extraordinary that the thrills of the evening should be produced by two of the oldest players on the ice, King Clancy, of the Maple Leafs, and Howie Morenz, of the Canadiens. It was extraordinary that two men who had held the limelight in perhaps the world's fastest and "toughest" sport for over fifteen years could still outskate and outplay the newcomers to the league.

The life of a professional hockey player is not easy. It is, of course, thrilling to be among the best in the game, count one's salary in thousands of dollars, to score before great crowds, to be acclaimed by newspapers, and to visit many interesting cities and places. It is, nevertheless, a strenuous life, and only those who have learned the secret of clean living can stand the terriffic pace that is set from the fall of the first puck to the sounding of the last bell. King Clancy and Howie Morenz have learned that secret—good food, fresh air, plenty of sleep, healthy elimination, and one other thing: to have nothing to do with intoxicating beverages.

"The first downfall of the athlete is liquor," said King Clancy to a gathering of boys at Barrie, Ontario.

"If a boy wants to be at the top in hockey, let him leave alcohol alone," said Howie Morenz, and has had The Byng Trophy, and over fifteen years to prove that he was right.

Becoming An Athlete

The successful athlete, whether in hockey, baseball, tennis, basketball, or rugby, whether man or woman, has four great possessions. They are: strength, endurance, speed, accuracy.

To become proficient in any branch of sport a boy or girl must have these qualities in varying degrees. In some sports, accuracy will count more than speed; in others, endurance more than strength. All, however, are required, and a study of them may help the aspiring athlete in his desire to be strong, swift, accurate and able to endure.

1. Strength. The main strength of the body lies in the large muscles of thighs, back and shoulders. These are the muscles used in mountain climbing or in heavy manual labor.

During the building of the Great Northern Railway there was a celebrated group of navvies who did more work in a day than any other gang on the line, and always left off work an hour or an hour and a half earlier than any other men. Every workman in this powerful group was a total abstainer.

A group of expert mountaineers were given "quite small doses" of alcohol. The length of time it now took to climb the mountain was so much greater that a beginner could quite easily equal their record. Alcohol had transformed these expert mountaineers into novices.

The boxer, wrestler, hockey and rugby player require great strength in the large body muscles. Milk, butter, eggs, bread are the muscle-building foods, and not alcohol.

2. Endurance. The ability of the body to endure great physical fatigue over a long period depends on more than the strength of the large muscles of the body. It depends also upon the functioning of the bodily organs, particularly those which eliminate the body wastes. As every one knows, the exercise of the muscles necessarily produces waste which has to be eliminated through the skin, bowels, kidneys and lungs. When the body is cluttered with waste, we are fatigued. The larger the amount of waste, the greater fatigue until the waste can become so great that complete exhaustion results. The greater the ability of the body to eliminate waste, the greater will be its endurance.

Many years ago there was a war in South Africa. A little town called Ladysmith was besieged. Food was getting less and less every day, men were growing weaker, the enemy was pressing closer and closer in, and a relief column was marching up in the heat in an endeavour to save the little town and the distressed garrison. The column was doing forced marches every day, and the strain was tremendous Many of the men could not keep up and dropped out, and had to be left behind. A great doctor who accompanied them, Sir Frederick Treves, said, "In that enormous column of thirty thousand men the first who dropped out were not the tall men, or the short men, or the big men, or the little men—they were the drinkers, and they dropped out as clearly as if they had been labelled with a big letter "D" on their backs. They had put their trust in alcohol, and in a real test of endurance they lost. Why? Because the alcohol had numbed the kidneys, hardened the wall of the capillaries of the lungs and the skin so that the body wastes could not escape but cluttered the human system, lessening its ability to withstand fatigue. Alcohol and endurance are enemies.

Games are won and lost in the final peroid. Champions are made on the last stretch. It is the ability to wear out his opponent that may give a boxer his crown. Endurance is the ability to fight on to the last sound of the gong, and it is the indispensable possession of successful athlete. That was why D. Scarow, New Zealand's champion wrestler said:

"Strong drink can overcome the best wrestlers. I never touch alcohol. Life is a long struggle, a sort of perpetual wrestling match. If ou want to be fit for that struggle and to come out champions, leave alcohol alone.'

3. Speed. Mere muscular strength is not enough to give the athlete speed. He must hae poise, balance, and perfect co-ordination of every muscle in the body. In this the nerves are important, for along them are carried the signals ordering the contraction or relaxation of the muscles in perfect time. The signals must be accurate and swift, and since alcohol numbs the nerves and slows up the signals it invariably means that the co-ordination is imperfect, and the speed that wins world championship is impossible. This is one reason why coaches and trainers require the athletes under their care to abstain absolutely from all intoxicating beverages.

Ritola, the great Finnish runner and Olympic champion, speaking about alcohol, once said: "In my opinion its use prevents one from becoming a first-class athlete."

4. Accuracy. This is the quality that scores. The degree of accuracy depends on the degree in which eye, nerve and muscle can be co-ordinated. Any poison which disturbs this co-ordination will impair the accuracy and the precision of the muscles. Such a poison is alcohol, and tests in rifle shooting showed a falling off in accuracy of almost thirty per cent. when small doses of alcohol were introduced into the body.

It appears that the more delicate and complicated the adjustment required the greater will be the effect of alcohol. This conclusion was born out in experiments with trained typists. Within the first two hours after taking small doses, there was found to be a decrease in the amount of work done by them owing to the narcotic effect of alcohol. Muscular movements were found to be slower, and the mind less alert. In otherwords, these typists had become less efficient. Poor as their work was, they themselves believed they had done very well, for their senses had been blunted. Lord D'Abernon, of the British Medical Research Council, says that "Alcohol gives the drinker the false impression of having done his work with unusual speed and success, whereas impartial examination shows that both accuracy and regularity are not up to the standard."*

It is because alcohol dulls the senses, making the athlete less conscious of fatigue and the passage of time, that many delude themselves into believing that alcohol has increased their efficiency. Yet those who use alcohol to increase their effectiveness soon discover their error or are quickly eliminated by other and better men from the field of active sport. The sport history of Canada contains no more tragic pages than those recording the story of a team or player of great promise passing out of the sport picture because of a fatal lapse in training regulations. These athletes had failed to guard their bodies as temples of the living God, something too sacred and too holy to be poisoned by alcohol, and had so lost the four indispensables of an athlete, strength, endurance, speed and accuracy.

Questions

1. Name the four qualities an athlete must possess, and show the effect of alcohol on physical endurance. Value 10.
2. What is the effect of alcohol on: (a) the expert mountaineer; (b) the crack rifleman; (c) the trained typist; (d) the marching soldier? (Value 8.)

FIT FOR THE RACE

Study III. October 20th

"How about letting me go along with you?" Shorty Graham looked up at his big brother, Jack, as he spoke. "I could carry your bag, or do something like that."

"If Dr. Sennet finds I'm fit, I won't need any one to carry my bag, and if he finds I'm not, then I'll—I'll throw the bag away and come home for good. My sweater and shorts and running shoes are in the bag, and if he finds I'm no good, I won't need them, see?"

"Yes, I see, but just because he might find you weren't fit to enter the relay race needn't means that you can't run a little bit sometimes, and you'll need need the things anyway."

"If I can't run my hardest and fastest, I'm not going to run at all, so that's that. But you can come along if you like. Though why any one should want to hang around and see a doctor pummel a fellow about to find if he has any kinks or weak spots, is more than I can tell. I thought this was the day you and Ken. Andrews were going to start on that kennel for Rusty."

"It was, but it can wait. When are you going?"

"Right away, the sooner the better, so get your cap and come on. Dr. Sennet said three o'clock, and there may be a line up, so we'd better get along."

Getting along meant walking so fast that Shorty had some trouble to keep up with his brother's long strides, but not for worlds would he have said so. Why, as they hurried along the shady streets he felt almost as if he were in a race—a relay race, perhaps, with Jack. That's what he would be doing when he was older. He couldn't see why they hadn't put on a race for eleven-year-olds even if it was a High School field day. He could run as fast as most of them| Not as fast as Jack, of course, but then Jack was one of the best athletes in the school, he and Phil Morris. He wondered—

But they had reached the doctor's door, and he had no time to wonder about anything else.

"Coming in with me?" asked Jack, "or are you going to stay out here with Ted Sennet? I see him on the tennis court."

"Why, I'm going in with you, if the doctor'll let me. Do you think he will?"

"No law against it, I guess. Nothing very secret about going through a physical examination. But I think you'd rather have a snappy game of tennis on a day like this."

"No siree," said Shorty, dodging in through the office door behind the tall young athlete. "I'll maybe want to be examined myself some day, so I'd like to know how he does it."

In a few minutes he was discovering just how the doctor did it. A thorough examination it was, and a smile and a nod of pleasure was the doctor's way of saying how satisfied he was with the fitness of the young runner.

"Never went over a better specimen," he laughed when he had finished. "Sound in wind and limb and fit as a fiddle. Wish they were all like you, though I suppose if would be rather a bad job for the doctors if they were. Some of the chaps I have examined today will be coming to me to be patched up for all sorts of ailments before they are many years older and most of them aren't going to be long in the running game."

"Why?" asked Shorty, not able to keep back the question any longer. "Aren't they strong enough."

"Strong, in some ways, perhaps. The Lord intended them to be strong and well, most of them, but they don't know enough to stay that way. Most of them think they know all about athletics, but they don't yet realize that without a sound heart, the best pair of legs in the world and the keenest pair of eyes, aren't going to be much use to them. The legs and eyes and arms and the other working parts are just parts of the machine. The engine that keeps the parts all running is out of sight, but it is there all the same, and it makes a mighty lot of difference how it is fed, I can tell you. Tobacco and alcohol, even small quantities of either of them, are not the sort of food—of fuel, if you like to call it that—that such a delicate and such a hard-working machine needs, but you can't tell some of these young chaps so. Do you smoke?" he asked suddenly, looking into Jack's face.

"'Course not," answered Shorty, before Jack could make a reply, "He's catcher for the Harley Seniors, as well as being a runner, and he just couldn't."

"Many of them just couldn't, if they knew it, but they just do," was the doctor's first remark, then, turning more to the smaller boy than Jack, he asked, "Like to see what this engine really looks like?"

"Oh, could I? A real heart, do you mean?"

"Well, not a real one in real working order, but I've a chart here that will give you a pretty good idea of it. Step in here and we'll have a look at it."

"And in we stepped," explained Shorty, when telling it all to Jimmy Mitchell next morning. "In we stepped, and there was the chart, showing just what a fellow's heart looked like. I just wish you could have seen it.

"First the doctor showed us a drawing of the whole body, so that we could see just where the heart is, then he showed us the heart itself—a picture of it, I mean—and told us that it was just a big muscle, really, and works much the same as other muscles, expanding and con—con—con—tracting. That means growing bigger or smaller as it pumps the blood in and out. He said it was just like a rubber ball, full of water; you know how you can squeeze the water all out, then, if you put it under water you can let go a bit and fill it up again. Something like filling a fountain pen syringe, I thought, though Dr. Sennet did not explain it that way. He said, too, that this big muscle, that worked like a rubber ball full of water, was divided into four parts. Into two of these spaces the blood is being pumped from your veins, and then from the other two it is pumped back into the arteries again."

"What for?" asked Jimmy, feeling the spot where he thought his own heart should be, to see if he could discover any such pumping machine.

"Why, Mr. Andrews told us all about that in class not long ago. He said, and so did the doctor, that it was pumped out into your arteries so that it would run all through even the very tiniest of them to carry food—nourishment, I think he called it, to all parts of the body. That's what keeps it working, and if it isn't in good working order, why then you're not fit. Just like a machine is worked by the engine, see? If the engine is out of order, isn't fed with the right sort of gas, or—or whatever it should be, it won't run the machine right."

"But you don't feed a heart, or oil it either," argued Jimmy.

"You don't! Well, I just wish you had heard Dr. Sennet talking about that. We just do feed it. The blood that is pumped in feeds it, and if the wrong sort of fuel gets in the blood stream, well, the engine's going to know it and isn't going to do its work, that's all."

"But blood's blood, isn't it? What's the difference?"

"All the difference in the world. It has to be good blood, and if a fellow smokes or drinks—yes, even if he eats the wrong things—the blood is going to be filled with the wrong things, and then the harm is done. Alcohol and tobacco poison the blood stream—yes, really poison it—like any other poison would. It makes the cells grow first cloudy and then put off little bits—particles, he called it—of fat and big muscle that should be working its very best with nice clean pure blood, gets clogged, or gets so busy trying to throw off the poison that it doesn't do its best work. It gets weaker and weaker in its pumping out and taking in the blood, and doesn't work the machine as it should. It gets like an elastic that is stretched too often and too far, and isn't elastic any more. So, if it isn't pumping itself dry each time, it gets too full of blood, and it is stretched too far, the doctor says."

"I know," said Jimmy, beginning to understand at last. "That's what put Jerry Robinson out of business just at the time every one thought he was going to be the champion runner of the country."

"It begins even farther back than I told you. It first paralyzes the brain, makes it go slower, you know, and makes the nerves weak, so that they can't help work the heart and muscles as they should, and, besides making a fellow talk and act foolish, as alchohol does, it does all this harm that you can't see and don't know about till you're going to do something big and fine, then your heart goes back on you, and there you are. But nothing is going to happen to our Jack. Nothing wrong with his heart muscles, nor his leg muscles, either."

And nothing did, that is nothing that his young brother couldn't be proud of. And he was proud, the proudest boy in all Harley when, at the end of the Field Day events, his brother. Jack, was carried home on the shoulders of four strong boys and he—Shorty Graham himself, walked behind them, carrying the bag that held the champion's "other clothes."

Questions

1. What is the effect of alcohol on the heart? (Value 8.)
2. Why does alcohol affect the heart in this way? Give two reasons. (Value 10.)

"You can have them, sight unseen, for $10,000," said he. And Mr. Hill wrote the check. . . . That's the way a columnist told the story. Too bad, though, to disillusion you—Hill's publicity man says, "Hocum. We didn't originate it, either."

One of the most remarkable books in the history of American publishing will be on booksellers' shelves the middle of October—The Columbia Encyclopedia. A one volume work that has been more than eight years in the making, it is designed to present an adequate summary of the knowledge of the world in one convenient volume. Every article written by an authority in his own special field, it is a completely new work of more than five million words—the equivalent of a hundred books of short novel length. Yet it sells at the price of only five or six of them! It's published by the Columbia University Press.

THE ELECTION AND ITS RESULTS

The Liberal Party, under their leader, Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, was swept into power with the largest majority ever accorded in the Canadian House of Commons at the federal election on Monday last, and for the next five years will control the destinies of the Dominion.

Starting in the Maritimes where their forces made practically a clean sweep, the Liberals saw their victories extend from coast to coast in convincing fashion, stemmed only in the province of Alberta where the new Social Credit party made a bold stand.

With the working majority over all parties, the Liberal chieftain will undoubtedly turn his full attention, upon taking over the reins of government, to pressing economic and social problems which have harrassed the Conservative administration during the past five years. While most observers will readily admit that conditions are somewhat improved, the depression is by no means over, and grave responsibilities will continue to rest upon the shoulders of those who accept cabinet positions in the new administration.

The defeat of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett and his government merely follows the trend of all governments during the past five years throughout the world. Economic distress over which no government has control, ultimately leads to unrest and dissatisfaction with prevailing methods, and a change in control is the inevitable result.

In Prime Minister R. B. Bennett the Dominion had one of the most able statesmen ever to guide its destinies, which fact is admitted by members of all political groups. His efforts on behalf of the Canadian people were tireless throughout the past five years and even a breakdown in health failed to stop the Conservative leader in his effort to relieve prevailing conditions.

Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, who will lead the new government, has had long experience in Canadian affairs and his efforts in behalf of the people will be watched with keen interest, not only in this country, but throughout the world. Canada is passing through a critical period in her history, when decisive action is required from those leaders in charge of affairs, and it is to be hoped that the citizens generally will co-operate heartily in an effort to restore to this Dominion a semblance of prosperity so long sought by all parties alike.

LINKS IN THE CHAIN OF EMPIRE

The presentation of a British flag to this municipality by Mr. John A. Peart, B.A., F.R.S.T., on behalf of the civic authorities of Winchester, England, on Tuesday evening, October 8th, has been accepted generally by the citizens as a most gracious and cordial act of friendship and good-will on the part of the English city.

Not only was the Village of Winchester honoured to have as its distinguished guest, Mr. Peart, who is the Director of Education for the ancient city of Winchester, but his delightful and informative remarks will continue to linger in the minds of all those who were privileged to hear them.

The glorous pages of British history and tradition were unfolded, as Mr. Peart vividly related the story of the founding and subsequent development of the ancient English capital. It was with pride that the citizens of this place listened to the words of the eminent English educationist as he related the part played in the building of the British Commonwealth of Nations by the Mother City of Winchester.

The ancient Greeks, when setting out across the seas to found a colony, made it a practice to carry a fire from the homeland on board one of their galleys, believing it to be a common link which would bind the adventurers to the Mother Country. Such kindly gestures of friendship as that witnessed recently on the part of the city officials of Winchester, England, towards this municipality serve the same purpose. We, as Canadians, are bound in heart and spirit, ever more closely to England, the Mother Land, by the close-woven links of good-will and patriotic esteem, brought into being by such occasions as the visit of Mr. Peart.

WHAT PRICE GLORY?

The overwhelming defeat of the Reconstruction Party in the federal elections on Monday, when the Hon. H. H. Stevens, party leader, was the only representative to win a seat, is indicative of the fact that the Canadian people as a whole have little use for a third party.

The basis of sound government lies in unanimity of opinion on the part of electors. In order to introduce sound legislation, a government must have a real working majority in the House of Commons, which is unlikely when a wide variety of parties enter the field. Thus it was that the Hon. H. H. Stevens witnessed the defeat of his candidates in every riding in the Dominion where represented, with many of them losing their deposits.

While many citizens sympathized with the efforts of Mr. Stevens in connection with the Price Spreads Commission, they were equally unfavourable to his new party which became obvious following the vote on Monday. The two-party system has once more shown its strength and while other factions enter the political arena from time to time, they seldom gain sufficient strength to become even a factor worthy of consideration.

Mr. Stevens will return to the House of Commons as the member for East Kootenay, but his influence as a leader has been decidedly shattered. The question now remaining in the minds of all is, "To whom will Mr. Stevens lend support in the House?" Will it be the Liberal chieftain or will he quietly fall back into his place in the Conservative ranks?" Time alone will tell!

CORRESPONDENCE

Jasper, Ont., Oct. 15th, 1935

Editor of Winchester Press,

Dear Sir,—May I through this medium of your paper express publicly my appreciation of the fairness with which I was accorded space and reports of meetings during the campaign just closed.

The people of Grenville-Dundas have recorded their wish and have done so I think, after having had the issues put fairly before them, from the platforms and through the medium of the press.

I sincerely trust that the next five years may be prosperous ones for the people of this Dominion and I trust that with a decisive majority the newly elected government may be enabled to enact such legislation as will correct many of the serious problems confronting us today.

In closing, may I congratulate my Conservative opponent, Mr. Casselman, on his decisive victory, and to both Mr. Casselman and Mr. Elliott may I extend my appreciation for a clean campaign, void of personalities.

Sincerely yours,

C. A. Patterson, M. D.

PREVENT FIRES

Put lighted matches and smokes out before you throw them away. Keep matches where small children cannot reach them. Never smoke in the garage, barn, or attic, nor in bed.

Remove rubbish, waste papers and all necessary combustible materials. Provide metal ash and trash cans. Burns rubbish only in a safely covered brick or metal incinerator. Watch the fire.

Examine all stoves furnaces, and smoke pipes, to make sure they are safe and well away from woodwork or other burnable materials. Have needed repairs made at once.

Value the advice of your fire chief who says that many fires are caused by dirty or defective chimneys. Have the chimney cleaned regularly, and have all defects repaired.

Escape the danger of flammable liquid fires and explosions by keeping no gasoline in the house. Do dry cleaning with safe liquids or send the work to the cleaner. Never start fires with kerosene.

Notify the electric company of electrical trouble and the gas company of gas leaks. Replace "blown" fuses with new ones—not pennies. Avoid home-made wiring jobs.

Teach everyone in the family to be careful of fire, to watch stoves, fireplaces, electric irons and all other possible fire causes, and every day to remove old rags, papers and other rubbish.

Fireproof your home as far as possible by fire-safe roofing, fire stopping in hollow walls and partitions to stop the spread of flame, and a non-combustible basement ceiling.

Inquire of your fire chief, when buying a fire extinguisher, to be sure of getting the right kind. Don't hesitate to ask your firemen whenever you have questions on fire prevention.

Remember always where the nearest fire alarm box is and how to send an alarm. If telephoning, be sure the address is clearly understood. Use a neighbor's phone rather than one in the burning building.

Explain to everyone in the house what to do in case of fire, how to put out fire in clothing by wrapping in a rug or blanket, what to do when grease catches fire in the kitchen.

Save life and property from needless destruction by fire by keeping the principles of fire prevention always in mind and never taking a change with fire.

IN EVERY TOWN

In every town there seems to be people who think they know it all, who can tell you with a knowing wink just what should be done for the betterment of the home town and how the other fellows should spend their time and money. The only thing they are free with is advice.

DUTY

Of all the watchwords of life, duty is the highest and best. He who sincerely adopts it lives a true life; he is really the successful one. It pertains to all parts and relations of life. There is no moment, place or condition where its claims are not imperative. The poet states it well:

I slept and dreamed that life was beauty;
I woke and found that life was duty.

ROWENA RIDES THE RUMBLE

COPYRIGHT 1931 BY THE AUTHOR

by ETHEL HUESTON

NINTH INSTALMENT

Rackruff Motors hire Rowena to accompany Peter on a nation-wide tour in their roadster as an advertising stunt. At the last minute Little Bobby is engaged to act as chaperon.

A few miles out Bobby becomes tearful at being parted from her sweetheart and Rowena insists on taking her place in the rumble so that she can ride with Peter and have him to talk to about Carter. Rowena gets Peter to consent to divide the expense money each week as soon as it arrives, and astonishes Peter by eating too economically.

The three tourists reach Denver, after passing through Buffalo, Chicago and St. Louis. Peter and Rowena have many tiffs on the way while Carter keeps wiring Bobby to return to New York. The morning after they reach Denver, Peter and Rowena discover Bobby has deserted them and returned to New York by train. They are faced with the impossible condition of continuing their trip without a chaperon.

Rowena suggests to Peter that they make a "companionate" marriage. They are married and go to Cheyenne, where their actions, when they ask for rooms on separate floors, arouses the suspicions of the hotel clerk. They finally succeed in getting rooms, but not without exciting the laughter of the hotel loungers. They wire the company they have been married.

They resume the trip the next day and are overwhelmed by a cloudburst in an arroyo and are thrown out of the car. A party of tourist campers gives them dry clothes and food. Spokane is finally reached and the hotel clerk smiles when they register. They find Rackruff Motors have arranged a public reception and dance for them. They are deluged with presents.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

When Peter went out for a look around town she hurried away with her share of the wedding presents in search of a pawn-shop, where she left them securely locked away from danger of theft or loss, and stopped for an express money order on her way home.

There wasn't enough money for the suit but she bought a new, frilly collar and cuff set to brighten up the old one which she extravagantly sent down to the hotel cleaners for pressing. She had a small electric iron and a folding board in her big suitcase, but she felt some hesitancy about resorting to such an economy with Peter in the sitting-room.

The reception was a huge success. The best people in their best clothes were properly impressed. Peter and Rowena in a mound of flowers in the Rackruff roadster were photographed for the local papers, interviewed by representatives of the press, and congratulated on every hand. Peter was given a pearl-studded cigarette lighter, which worked successfully, and Rowena a wrist-watch with the same design in chip diamonds. She accepted it with a glowing smile and inner regret that she had not had it earlier in the day to provide the coveted suit.

Mr. Meeker told her confidentially that the only reason he had not told her about the wristwatch was because they had evidently planned it as an afterthought and he hadn't heard of it.

When the reception was over they were driven triumphantly back to the hotel in a procession of Rackruff roadsters, so that a considerable crowd gathered in the streets to cheer them on.

"Peter, don't you love it?" demanded Rowena when they were again alone in the bridal suite—alone, but with the door noticeably ajar. "Don't you adore being a husband? Aren't you glad we got married? Why, if I had known it was such fun I'd have been married dozens of times before this."

Peter waited in the lobby downstairs while she dressed for the big affair of the day, and when she was ready he took possession of the bedroom and bath while she sat in the flower-filled sitting-room — the door into the corridor wide open, you may be sure—and wrote a long gay letter to Buddy, enclosing the money order. At seven o'clock Mr. Meeker called to escort them down in person. He brought a huge corsage of orchids and orange blossoms for Rowena and a gardenia for Peter's buttonhole.

"Guess we better let her stick it in for you," said Mr. Meeker. "Seems like it gives more of a bridal touch to things."

Rowena rose to the occasion. She kissed the gardenia prettily and then flicked it coquettishly on Peter's chin before she tucked it carefully into the lapel of his coat—all this to the beaming delight of Mr. Meeker and the confusion of Peter.

Flushing with rosy pride, Mr. Meeker led them down to the reception-room and introduced them once more to all the Rackruff dealers and their wives, and then to the gentlemen of the press—and editors and publishers among them, too, as well as mere reporters. The orchestra struck up the wedding march and Peter and Rowena, flanked by Mr. Meeker on one side and the head waiter on the other, led the procession into the ballroom for dinner. The seats designed for them were raised above the others in a royal mound of white roses. This, Mr. Meeker explained in a loud whisper, represented the solitaire diamond of an engagement ring, which was typified by the rest of the tables ranging the full extent of the hall in a great circle.

Never had Rowena been so beautiful. Her eyes—the blue of a summer sky—sparkled with pleased excitement. Her lovely lips quivered sensitively. Under the table she felt about with the toe of a silver slipper until she found Peter's foot to press when she wished to call his attention to anything particularly priceless that caught her eye or ear.

Peter stared and stared at her. Everyone else did, too, if it comes to that, but no one of all those present was so amazed and so bewildered by her beauty as Peter himself. Over and over again he had to remind himself that this radiant, exquisite creature, the cynosure of all eyes, whose sheer beauty fairly took away one's breath, was the very same crisp and curt Rowena who kept such a stubborn finger on the steering wheel of their trip.

When dinner was over and he danced with her for the first time he was startled and stirred to discover that she was a feather in his arms; that her gleaming hair was fragrant as flowers; her skin velvet to his touch—and that she seemed to melt into the music like music itself.

"Rowena," he whispered, "it's great isn't it?—Really, it's just corking!"

"It's gorgeous, Peter, it's glorious! And, oh, darling, think how they're going to feel in a couple of months when they read in the paper about the annulment and know it was all a farce! Won't they go down—plop!—like a flat tire?"

"I suppose so," he assented soberly. "Looking at it that way, it seems rather a low trick to play on them. They mean so well."

"But it was Rackruff got us into it—it isn't our fault," she protested.

They danced through the ball with a display of domestic devotion that was thoroughly convincing. At two o'clock when it was over they went, laughing, up-stairs to the bridal suite and while he changed quickly from formal to street dress, she lounged in full display in the sitting-room before the chaperonage of an open door.

When he went in to say good night he sat down on the arm of her big chair and cuddled her bright head, roughly, in his arm.

"Why put me out, Rowena?" he began in a wheedlesome voice. "After all, we are married. And I fancy we're going to have the devil's own time convincing any sane judge that there was nothing to it but the ceremony."

"My judge will believe it."

"If he does," said Peter moodily, "he's going to think what a damfool I am.—Anyhow, it's been a nice night and there's more of it. We've had a lot of fun and a little more wouldn't do us any harm," he argued persuasively.

She laughed good-naturedly. "I've had all the fun I can stand for one night. Run along, darling, and be sure to get a receipt that will confound the skeptics."

When Peter had gone she sat on the edge of the bed and thought it all over. In a way, she decided, it was rather an awful thing they had done. But it had been so tremendously important for both of them—the trip had—the pictures and the stories. And the money—the money most of all! But it was too bad this sort of thing had to happen—and to a sweet thing like Peter who really rather deserved a better break—he was so old-fashioned at heart.

Rowena stood up and yawned and got into bed. She would do her level best to insure that annulment, in common fairness to Peter. Certainly it was for her to make sure of it. He was too careless, too sensitive to public opinion. He might get that receipt for his night's residence and he might not. She would make sure. She lifted the receiver of her telephone and asked them to send up the housekeeper.

When she came in, an efficient, large, Scotch woman, Rowena looked a little limp and wan.

"I don't feel so very well," she said childishly. "I wonder if you could get me something hot to drink? I don't want to be sick."

The housekeeper was surprised. It was three o'clock in the morning and the bridal suite, well lighted, showed itself guiltless of groom. His pillow had not been touched. But hotel housekeepers are schooled to surprises. She brought Rowena some hot strong tea with a little rum in it and gave her an aspirin tablet.

"If you don't feel better pretty soon have your husband call me—wh-when he comes in," she said.

Rowena's smile was a little forced. "I will," she promised.

At five o'clock she asked for her again.

"I feel worse," she said. But she did not want a doctor. "I'm just nervous," she explained. "Would—would it be asking too much—for you just to sit with me a few minutes? I'm sure it's only excitement after the ball."

The housekeeper sat down beside the bed. Rowena looked very young, very flushed, altogether adorable in her soft night things. In the dim light the housekeeper could not see how old they were, and worn. The housekeeper had her own opinion about men anyhow, and her face grew grimmer and grimmer. The night housekeeper in a big hotel sees much.

When Rowena seemed to have dropped off to sleep, she leaned over her commiseratingly. "Poor child," she muttered, "a pretty young thing like that.—Him out all night and them just married!—Thank God I found men out in time!"

Rowena smiled comfortably to herself when the housekeeper had turned out the light and tip-toed softly from the room. She had a witness to the virginal privacy of her night in the bridal suite.

Rowena was about half through breakfast the next morning when Peter came in. He sat down opposite her and the waitress almost ran up to get the order. But Peter said he already breakfasted, would take only coffee, very hot, please.

"She's entirely too good for him, the brute," said the waitress to the pastry cook. "She never said a word but 'Good morning.' Didn't even ask him where he'd been all night."

Peter was a little self-conscious about it all and to the critical maids his constraint seemed that of a guilty conscience. Rowena was sweetly gentle, even friendly.

"I only wish the hotel had given them a pearl necklace instead of that cocktail shaker," said Mr. Meeker regretfully. "She'd get to wear the pearl necklace if he didn't pawn it, and it's plain to see who'll use the cocktail shaker."

Peter had the receipt for his night's lodging and Rowena folded it away triumphantly in the pocket of her portfolio, along with the other proofs of their complete segregation en route.

She was full of enthusiasm, entirely satisfied with their future prospects, as she was packing her bag before the witness of an open door.

"It's a great little burg," she said warmly. "When I am a thorough old maid I shall buy me a dog or something and come and live here. It's just the sort of town I like. And if I am rich and famous I will rent the bridal suite by the year and you can give me an autographed picture of the Rackruff to adorn my walls. And I'll invite Mr. Meeker to tea every Sunday and we'll discuss our past glories and remember-when."

"It's pretty plain what they think of me in these parts," said Peter regretfully. "It seems a dirty trick to play them—they were so kind about everything.

"One good thing about it," encouraged Rowena, "if for any reason my judge should hit a snag in getting us annulled, we won't need any other grounds after last night. We'll call on the hotel force for affidavits."

"What a cad they must think me!"

"Don't you care, darling. Next time we come here, you shall have the bridal suite and their sympathy and I'll step out for the night."

PERPETUAL SALAD DAYS

"My salad days! when I was green in judgment, cold in blood." When Shakespeare wrote these words in his play "Anthony and Cleopatra," he not only drew a rich metaphor from the cool and enticing hot-weather item on the menu, but made a sly dig at the probability of youth receiving his "salad" at the salle, or birching block, established in all the reputable schools of the day. "Avoir de la salade," as the French had it. However that may be, the salad of the twentieth century is an indispensable factor in dietary science. With the advance of knowledge, it has outgrown its utility as a hot-weather makeshift and has been, and is, the subject of rivalry between eminent exponents of the culinary art. It has been named for famous chefs, hotels, and even countries. To-day, the salad is supreme, and the most flattering compliment that can be made to a hostess, be she in log-hut or palace, lies in the simple words: "She makes an excellent salad." So, along comes the Dominion Department of Agriculture with its all embracing aid to the welfare of the nation. There has just been issued from its Publicity and Extension Branch a booklet with the self-explanatory title of "Salads that are different.' And they are. There are over 40 recipes for different salads, and all that is wanted is the ingredients which are within the reach of all.

Premeditation of thought and brevity of expression are the great ingredients of that reverence that is required to a pious and acceptable prayer.—South.

The gold that man has sought throughout the ages lies right under his feet. It is present in the rock he casts aside as worthless—it can be found in the waters of the sea—and there is gold even in ordinary dirt. The ores that are mined for other metals also contain minute amounts of gold—iron, silver, copper, zinc, lead, bismuth, tellurium, and antimony ores nearly all contain some gold. Some of them contain enough to be extracted at a profit.

Sea water contains about 3 1-2 grains of gold to the ton—enough if all the gold were taken from the waters of the sea, to give every living person in the world $14,000,000 worth. Solid granite has one part of gold in 7,000,000 parts and even ordinary clay is gold-bearing.

Gold, however, is like any other commodity—it is valueless when it costs more to produce it than it is worth. You can obtain gold from ordinary dirt, from sea water, from granite or almost any ore, but unless you strike pay dirt, it is not worth the cost.

Strange as it seems, a strong wind at sea caused the death of an estimated billion tilefish, nearly exterminating the species in 1882. The fish normally live in the warm Gulf Stream, but in that year winds blew a cold arctic current into the warm water, chilling and killing so many of them that their floating dead bodies dotted the ocean for miles. For many years it was thought that all had been destroyed. By 1900, however, tilefish were found in considerable numbers.

The Family DOCTOR

by JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

HUMAN EMOTIONS

It seems to me that the family doctor encounters almost all the phases of emotions of which the human mind is capable.

The doctor attends the victim of a blind and unreasoning wrath. He witnesses the human mind in tempests of delirium. In short, the humble family doctor is put up against most terrific tasks in his dealings with perverted, upset human mentalities. It would take a volume or more to record the experiences of each family doctor with "brain-storms" alone.

The nobler emotions? First of all, sublime love, dignified by scriptural approval. This with human love fulfills all requirements of earth or heaven.

The family doctor sees the mother perish for her offspring. He sees her surrender her very life for those nearest to her. What can be more sacred or approved of God than this?

The brute is incapable of love. The experienced family doctor can single out for you every human beast within his great circle of patrons. He also encounters the numbskull without love of country, kinsmen, home, or self. It is not difficult, it seems to me, to assess human souls as we come in contact with them.

My field widens in perspective. Love, this master-emotion sets apart for the highest among men and women. It may seem tedious repetition to repeat here, but, dear reader, love and nothing less can cure a sick and invalid world.

Do we wish to end war? I believe every sane person does. Love alone can do it. Remember that guns, bombing planes and deep-sea explosives will never end war. They cost billions of treasure, and shed oceans of blood.

Human love costs nothing and will end all wars, as asserted by the Man of Gallilee.

Scrap Book Items That You Should Keep

Cut Them Out Each Week

BOOKS

Suppose there were no books!
No books to read in cosy nooks!
No books to fill the hungry mind
And teach the art of being kind.

No books to while an hour away,
To link to-day with yesterday;
No books to charm us for a while,
To bring a tear or lure a smile.

But there are books, praise God above
If we have books and we have love
We can dispense with other things—
'Tis books, not crowns, that makes men kings. —I. B. Roberts.

EVENSONG

For songs divine, half heard and half withholden,
That dropped on silver pinions down the sky;
For visions fair, half hid and half beholden,
Compelling hopes that knew not how to die.
For all the wine, untasted and immortal,
Before mine eyes upon the white dust spilled;
For all dear dreams that shone above life's portal,
And fell beside its pathway unfulfilled.

For all ungathered roses, red as fire,
That lit my way with lavish, fragrant flame,
For all the old sweet pain of great desire
That led me hither captive as I came.
For all, on bended knees, I make thanksgiving;
The unachieved that spurred my steps along;
The unattained that made life worth the living;
The unfulfilled that kept my spirit strong.

One day when Mark Twain was very busy writing in his study, his little daughter asked where daddy was, and told she must be quiet and not disturb daddy, because he was upstairs writing an anecdote.

Not long after the door-bell rang and the little girl ran to answer it. The caller asked if Mr. Clemens was in, to which the little Miss proudly replied: "Yes sir, he's in, but you can't see him, 'cause he's upstairs riding a nanny goat."

AN AUTUMN STROLL

There's something in these autumn days
With all their calm, sweet loveliness,
That merits with our warmest praise
And fills our heart with greatfulness.
'Tis not because yon woodland range
Is richly clad in green and gold,
But 'tis because there reigns within
A peace that's better known than told.

And as I tread these wonderful paths
O'er low incline or gilded mound,
And breathe the sweetly scented air,
It seems I tread on holy ground,
But from the breezes and the hills
My secret thought I would not hide—
The one who shared life's joys and ills
To-day seems walking by my side.

And friendship's sacred ties are dear
More dear, than tinted bows above,
I hear her footsteps and it stirs
The deepest passions of my love.
Nor does my heart grow dark and sad
Though checking oft the falling tear,
For though alone I still am glad
For autumn scenes and memories dear.

SLEEP

Why dost thou, from my weary brain,
Turn with thy chariots and train,
Seek a more careless head than mine,
To give thy soothing touch divine?

Why dost thou chide me, phantom knave,
While in thy courts I am a slave,
Give to less worthy head than mine,
Thy fingers, dewy and sublime?

O fleeing nymph, while I pursue,
Why hide thy garlands from my view?
Come: Wrap me in thy mystic cloak,
Let not my cares thy wrath invoke!

I've wooed in vain; Get thee aside!
To higher realms I will abide:
O God, to Thee, in humble prayer,
I cast my cares, and leave them there.

Help me, O God, this clay to mould,—
Thrust from my heart the lust for gold—
Loose Thou the tenacles of greed,
Of love and trust plant there the seed!

I feel Thy presence near me, now—
Thy balmy sweetness on my brow,
Sleep! Thou art a heavenly thing,
Sent down from God, to slave and king.

Housewives in search of a delicious pie filling will find it in Concord Grape Pie. Thicken this pie filling with a small quantity of quick-cooking tapioca and you will achieve a pie which is easily handled at the table. Tapioca serves its purpose without spoiling the delicate fresh tang of the grapes.

Nutty Salads and Sandwiches

HINTS ON STAINS

For grass stains use cold water; soap and cold water, or alcohol.

For black coffee and tea stains use boiling water, bleaching if necessary.

For creamy kinds of stains use cold water and then boiling water.

For grease and oil stains use French chalk and blotting paper.

For iodine stains use warm water and soap, alcohol or ammonia.

For ink stains try cold water, and then use an acid or a bleaching substance.

HORSES COMING BACK

Canada's horse population has declined greatly during the past fifteen years, due, principally, to the invasion of the motor vehicle into the field of endeavour so long ruled by the equines. Unable to compete with the speed and convenience of automobiles as a mode of transportation, the horse naturally suffered prestige, and with the adoption of power machinery on farms his sphere of usefulness became even more limited, with the result that the number of horses in Canada declined from 3,610,494 in 1921 to 2,933,492 in 1934, notwithstanding the growth of the country during that period.

Despite the continued decline in recent years, indications point to better days ahead for "Old Dobbin," with both horse population and demand on the increase. An estimate of the number of horses in Manitoba as at June, 1935, places the horse population at 297,000, an increase of 1,000 over the preceding year. Another favorable indication is the distinct increase in horse-breeding activities. Horse breeders' clubs in the Prairie Provinces numbered 166 inn 1934, an increase of more than 30 per cent. over the number in operation in 1933, and a number of districts reported inability to secure satisfactory stallions. Imports of pure-bred stallions and mares of the draft breeds numbered 50 in 1933, and this number was more than doubled in 1934.

THE IMPORTANCE OF PERSONAL HABITS

The subject of personal habits is a very ticklish one, one which needs careful handling. It is an old saying that "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread," and in this case we will take the fool's chance. In fact, that is what many people are doing in their careless personal habits with fire every day of their lives. Perhaps the most effective way to approach the matter is to relate the results of some personal habits in other people as people generally like to hear about the other fellow.

A man dropped a cigarette in a rubbish pile in a rooming house and burned to death eleven people.

A man dropped his cigarette in a couch in the lobby of a hotel. Fire resulted at 3 a.m. and resulted in the death of four people.

A mother in one of our leading college cities, for the five hundredth time started a fire with coal oil. The fire she started burned to death three children besides herself.

A man dropped a match on a garage floor, walked on and left it. A six-year-old child found it and ignited her clothing, which resulted in burns that caused her death a few hours later.

Man attempted to sleep and smoke at the same time—result, he set bed afire, was overcome with smoke, and removed in an unconscious state. Only the timely arrival of the fire department saved him from being cremated alive.

Some grown-ups placed Strike-Any-Where matches on kitchen table. Two small children acted upon the implied suggestion and carried some to their play-house, innocently started a fire. Result, a little boy badly burned.

Do you always think about the safety and welfare of those about you when you discard your match and cigarette stub. Are you mindful of the safety of the children in your home to the extent of providing safety matches, and keeping them out of their reach? Do you have proper respect for the dangerous properties of gasoline and always handle it with care?

RIFLES FOR ETHIOPIA

Canada has 200,000 Ross rifles which might be sold to Ethiopia with the arms embargo lifted. At the beginning of the Great War Canadian troops were armed with Ross rifles but they were found unsuitable for trench warfare and they shifted to Lee-Enfields, leaving large supplies of Ross rifles in storage where they have remained ever since.

On several occasions offers have been made to Canada to sell the Ross rifles and the governments always have declined chiefly because they did not wish to traffic in arms, officials here state. However, the situation regarding Ethiopia is somewhat different to the other countries where the arms might have been disposed.

A militia official stated the Ross rifle was an excellent target rifle and a good rifle for open warfare. Canada's non-permanent and permanent active militia are both armed with the Lee-Enfield.

Old fashioned little pickles are simply put up by soaking small cucumbers in salt water overnight, draining, rinsing and put into jars with spiced vinegar and covering the jars.

When a child learns to talk, he begins to ask questions. Keep his confidence, by all means, by answering his questions truthfully and frankly. If you don't know the right answer, it's often fun to find out together. And never, never laugh at his questions; don't let him know you are shocked. He asks in good faith, and deserves an answer in the same spirit.

When you have a new hairdresser who suggests a wave like hers—better be careful the way you decline—if you want good service. A fitting answer might be that your hair isn't so thick as hers—or that you don't think the shape of your face would accommodate her type. And the same sort of tact will get you much in service in many another place and time, too.

Headlines of Fall Fashions run variously: High necklines and simple collars; fur coats higher waisted and fitted; Renaissance art and Oriental influence in styles generally; Dolman sleeves in crocheted blouses; Schiaperelli shows ankle-length pantaloons for formal wear, causing Paris a gasp; brighter shades in Lelong's evening gowns.

Authorities on corsetry maintain that even though you know your type and size of figure, a corset must be correctly fitted to wear properly and to do the most for your figure. Never, never, they say, go into a store, buy a corset and walk out without a fitting. It may prove disastrous.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

by Rev Charles E. Dunn

Jeremiah's Message.

Lesson for October 20th. Jeremiah 7:1-11.

Golden Text: Jeremiah 7:23.

Religion, according to Jeremiah, is inward and spiritual. Religious faith, he tells us, is an experience of the individual soul in its relation with God. The prophets who preceded Jeremiah were interested primarily in the nation. The individual for them had importance only as a member of the fatherland. But Jeremiah stresses personal religion. To be sure, he never lost faith in Israel and its final restoration. But his primary stress was upon the individual heart and its inescapable union with its Maker.

Rev. Chas. E. Dunn

But if religion is fundamentally personal, then the heart must be clean. And when it is pure then what Jeremiah calls the New Covenant operates with full freedom and power. "This shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people." (Jer. 31:33.) This sublime conception is the culminating idea in Jeremiah's gospel. Note how harmonious it is with the teaching of Jesus. It is not quite on a level with the emphasis of the Master, because Jeremiah does not describe the method whereby this inward renewal is to be realized. But it is a striking anticipation nevertheless of the New Testament viewpoint.

Another cardinal idea in Jeremiah's message is the pain of God. He himself suffered terribly as he witnessed the sin, stupidity, and tragic fate of his people. Out of this bitter experience there dawned upon him a conviction that God, too, must agonize over a world gone grievously wrong. God, teaches Jeremiah, carries the woe and sin of men in His very heart. And this divine suffering is the guarantee of ultimate salvation. Here we have a wonderfully impressive foreshadowing of the message of the Cross.

D&H Anthracite has a reputation for high quality that extends back for more than a century. The major reason for this continued success has been the farsighted policy of steady improvement in the product.

Today, as a result of this policy, D&H Cone-Cleaned Anthracite is recognized as the standard by which other fuels are judged.

There are definite reasons why D&H Anthracite is a better fuel. First, it is inherently a medium-burning fuel.....the type most customers prefer. Second, it is mined from selected veins by the most approved mining methods. Third, it is freed of all impurities by the exacting Cone-Cleaning Process, the only method that guarantees a continuous supply of uniformly high quality Anthracite. Fourth, it is prepared for market in modern plants, an assurance that sizing will be correct, that each car will be loaded by the most efficient methods to prevent breakage.

One of the happy features of the meeting was the presentation of a Past Master's jewel to V W. Sir Kt. E. M. Shaver, who is the immediate P.C.M.

After the meeting was closed, the local Preceptory entertained at a "bean feed," followed by addresses by several of the prominent visitors. Arrangements are being made for the local Preceptory to visit Kemptville in the near future to confer degrees.

Arrangements for the social time were under the direction of Wor. Sir Kt. W. J. L. Boyd and Sir Kt. Bertram Smith.

FETTERLY—CHRISTIE

A quiet wedding took place Wednesday evening, October 2, in the United Church manse at Murillo, Ont., when Louise Mansel, second youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Christie, of Kakabeka Falls, was united in marriage to Hugh Carson Fetterly, of Montreal, son of Mrs. Fetterly and the late James Fetterly, of Morewood. Rev. J. C. Anderson officiated in the presence of immediate relatives.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a Hattie Carnegie gown of rust crepe in peasant style, with a full bodice shirred to a high neckline which was trimmed in front with brown Siberian squirrel tails, touches of brown squirrel also garnishing the patch pockets.

Over this was worn a coat of brown duvetyn with a stand-up collar and lapels of fitch. Her hat was a shovel brim model of brown corded silk, and she wore brown kid gloves and shoes. A corsage of Talisman roses, lilies-of-the-valley and fern completed her ensemble.

Immediately after the ceremony, a wedding dinner was served to immediate relatives and friends at the home of the bride's parents at Kakabeka Falls Mr. and Mrs. Fetterly left later in the evening for Port Arthur, enroute to Ottawa where they spent a few days prior to leaving for Montreal where they will reside.

MORRISBURG MAN INJURED

Marvin Campbell, Morrisburg, was admitted to St. Vincent de Paul hospital, Brockville, Monday afternoon last for X-ray examination following an accident sustained in a planing mill at Morrisburg. He was struck in the chest by a piece of timber that snapped while he was plaining it and was painfully bruised. He was attended by Dr. E. F. McIntosh, Morrisburg, who had him brought to the hospital for examination.

THE UNITED CHURCH

In the message of Rev. W. S. Atchison to the Juniors on Sunday morning, he read a letter written by a father to his son in reard to his ambitions for him, impressing the fact that children should live up to the expectations of their fathers.

The sermon was based upon Jer. 18: 1-6. He told of the dream of Jeremiah with directions from God to go down to the potter's home. He obeyed and while watching the potter work with the clay he caught a vision of God, who is trying to make something out of us. He works with various degrees of success and failure. God's plans in our lives sometimes fails. It is because we resist God, and then the vessel becomes marred in the hands of the potter. "Do not resist God," said the pastor, "because His Spirit will not always strive with man. Yield in consecration to Him."

Have thine own way, Lord, Thou art the Potter, I am the clay. Mould me and make me according to Thy will.

Miss Agnes Parker took the solo part in the choir's anthem. There was no evening service because of the Baptist Anniversary. Next Sunday the Anniversary Services of this church will be held, with Rev. Harvey Servage, of North Gower, as the special speaker.
