The Tack Factory is extremely busy, orders coming in for about 3,000 pounds per day, most of which are duplicate orders. A contract was closed last week with a British Columbia firm for twelve tons, to be delivered a ton a month. Through this British Columbia firm (B. C. Leather Company) the sales will be extended to Australia and New Zealand. In the short space of six months this company's output has been thoroughly established, enquiries coming in daily for some of the lines which they do not yet manufacture, owing to limited equipment. The natural increase of the business, without any travelers, is getting beyond the capacity of the factory, and the company hopes to be able to install machinery fast enough to meet the demand. The merit of the goods has been the cause of this great demand, and this has been made possible through the excellence and size of the steel plates manufactured here in Morrisburg by the Canadian Sheet Steel Corporation, which manufactures the widest sheet in Canada, thus permitting the manufacture of the tacks with the grain of the steel, which gives it a toughness not otherwise produced.

LOOK! LOOK!

The Leader has corrected its subscription list up to June 1st, 1911, and would ask all readers to compare the date on their label with their last receipt. It takes money to run this business, and as there are several hundred subscribers who owe anywhere from $1 to $5 for back subscriptions, it means much to us, and the payment of the same would put us on "easy street." Just now we are sadly in need of money, and we trust that this notice will so touch your purse strings that you will not only "ante up" but will "go us one better" by paying in advance.

EIGHT MODEL SCHOOLS.

Government Announces Choice of Institutions to Remedy Scarcity of Teachers.

(Toronto News.)

It has been decided by the Education Department that the eight new model schools of the Province are to be located at Athens, Bracebridge, Chatham, Clinton, Guelph, Morrisburg, Napanee and Perth.

The six model schools which survived the establishment of the Faculty of Education at the universities a few years ago, and the increase in Normal schools were those at Cornwall, Turham, Kingston, Orillia, Renfrew and North Bay. These with the eight new schools make up a Provincial model school system of 14 schools well distributed throughout the Province.

All the model schools will re-open on September 5th for the school session of 1911-12.

Change "Public" to a "Model." The News was informed at the Department of Education that the establishment of the new schools meant simply the conversion of one public school in each town or city into a model school. The principals and staffs of the various schools will remain unchanged for the present at least.

W. C. T. U.

The regular monthly meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held in the Bush Block on Tuesday afternoon. The president presided. There was a good attendance. The subject for the day was "Hygiene and Heredity." Short papers were read from eminent authorities advocating hygienic principles in the form of fresh air, pure milk and water, loose clothing and perfect cleanliness. The appalling death rate among children was spoken of. Statistics were given proving that 22 per cent. of our death rate was young children. One of the reasons given was the ignorance of the mothers in not knowing how to properly care for them. The following extract from the British Medical Journal, shows the effects of the fathers and mothers using alcohol:—"Of 1000 idiotic, imbecile, backward or epileptic children admitted to the Bicetrix Asylum between 1880 and 1890, 471 had drunken fathers, 84 had drunken mothers, while 65 were the product of alcoholism on both sides. Therefore 620 out of 1000 cases were directly traceable to drink."

A paper given on "Heredity," quoted the following extract from the report of Dr. Legrain, superintendent of the Government insane asylum near Paris, France:—"Ninety per cent of the insanity, as well as nine-tenths of the crime of the country came from strong drink. 'The fathers have eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth are set on edge,' (Ez. xviii, 2). The deeds of the father are the debts of the son."

Mrs. Hilliard sang in her usual inimitable manner a solo entitled "Somebody's Child," and the meeting closed with the repeating of the Lord's Prayer.

Homeseekers' Excursion

The Grand Trunk Railway has issued a circular authorizing all agents in Canada to sell Homeseekers' Excursion tickets to points in Western Canada. This is interesting information for those desiring to take advantage of these excursions on certain dates from April to September, 1911. The Grand Trunk route is the most interesting, taking a passenger through the populated centres of Canada, through Chicago, and thence via Duluth, or through Chicago and the twin cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul. Ask Grand Trunk agents for further particulars. W. H. McGannon, Morrisburg, agent.

FORTUNE FAVORS THE BRAVE; OR, A LOOK INTO THE PAST

All this flashed through his mind as he sat gazing at her from behind the open newspaper, while the train flew through the lovely country and approached the London smoke.

"She shall love me," he said to himself. "I'll knock all thought of that fellow from her mind before I'm many days older! I've bought her—she's mine, body and soul, and I don't mean to share her with no one."

And having arrived at this determination, Crawshaw summoned his valet from an inner compartment, and ordered him to open some champagne without further delay.

Like most ignorant, vulgar-minded people, Mr. Crawshaw had an extraordinary predilection for imbibing the most costly champagne at the strangest hours. In his former life he had been noted for his temperance; in fact, he had been almost a total abstainer from liquor; but with riches and idleness this good habit soon vanished, and he found it necessary for his strength and his dignity to have recourse to frequent stimulant, which unfortunate custom was followed, as it could not fail to be, with lamentable results. Nancy started as she heard him speaking, and, lifting her head from her hands, leaned back against the cushions with closed eyes and pale, wan face.

Her thoughts had wandered, as she sat motionless and silent, in a misty, unconscious way, to the rose garden; she could feel the soft, warm air as on that by-gone summer day; the scent of the perfumed flowers seemed to steal into her very heart. How gentle! how peaceful! how happy it was! and then a sense of deeper happiness still crept over her. She heard in fancy that quick, firm step; she felt the dreamy enthrallment of his presence; she heard again his soft, tender voice, his hands touched hers, and with a start the mist was scattered and the vision vanished.

She was in the saloon carriage speeding through the autumn-tinted country; speeding away from Ripstone Hall, from Dorothy, from dear, kind, genial Sir Humphrey, from the sweet, loved gardens, the affectionate, generous, indescribably dear atmosphere of home—she was going from all this to what?

Her eyes opened involuntarily and rested on the man opposite, that creature, with his common person, his cruel, swarthy face, his mean, cowardly nature—that man was her husband, her companion for life, through good or ill.

A wave of utter repugnance rushed into her throat and almost choked her—the sacrifice of that moment seemed greater than she could bear.

Crawshaw's eyes met hers, strained with pain and horror for the time out of all likeness to their former beauty.

The champagne he had just swallowed ran like fire in his veins.

He poured some wine in a glass and went over to her.

"You look like a ghost with that white face; take a drink of this, Nancy, and then wake up. I didn't marry you to let you sit in a corner all day you know."

She crouched back for an instant, then, scarcely knowing what she did, she snatched the glass from his hold and flung it out of the window.

"Leave me to myself!" she cried, passionately, madly, "or if you will not, I will throw myself out of the carriage as I have just flung away that glass!"

There was a dangerous earnestness in her intensity of manner that impressed Crawshaw; he waited a moment, then, with a short laugh, he turned and went back to his newspaper and his corner.

"She'd do it, too, I do believe!" he muttered to himself, and then the light came in his eyes again. "Never mind, whatever happens, I'm her master, and she shall know it soon enough!"

CHAPTER XVII.

It was a dreary, dismal November day when Derrick Darnley drove once more through the well-remembered London streets. He was bronzed almost beyond recognition, but the old bright look had died out of his handsome gray eyes, and there was a moody, disappointed expression ever present on his face. He had come back suddenly and unexpectedly, and, having deposited his luggage at his old chambers, he drove first to his mother's house, and then on to his several clubs. It was, perhaps, a relief to find that Mrs. Darnley was not in town, having started already for her usual winter sojourn at the Riviera. Derrick had half-shrunk a meeting with his mother. She would remind him too clearly of that summer time at Ripstone Hall, when the lines had reared their beautiful faces to the sunlight, and shed their perfume on the soft air. He had guessed by some vague way that his mother had gauged his secret, and he shrank from the comments her lips might utter on the girl who had so cruelly blighted his whole happiness.

Yes, whatever hard or bitter thoughts he might harbor against Thomas Crawshaw's wife in the depths of his heart, he had not arrived at a sufficient degree of strength or hatred to permit others to breathe them in his presence.

He dimly felt that his mother would have nothing pleasant to say on this subject, and might perhaps have rebuked him disagreeably as to the cause of his sudden disappearance and still stranger silence. So it was a genuine sigh of relief that he gave as he learned from the servant that her mistress was gone, and was not expected back for at least two months. He got into his cab again and drove to his favorite club.

Here he was greeted with a perfect storm of hearty words and questions, and given a pile of letters enough to occupy his attention for hours.

Having laughingly parried all attacks as to what he had done and where he had been too, etc., etc., Darnley esconced himself in a corner and began his task of reading through his correspondence, which had accumulated to an enormous degree during his absence.

But he had scarcely got through half a page of the first letter he opened before he sprang to his feet in mingled surprise and pain.

It was written by Dorothy a few days back, and ran very briefly:

"I do not know, dear cousin," she wrote, "whether this letter will ever reach you, as I have received no answer or acknowledgment of the others. I fear that it will not; but it is a slight relief to me to write to you, even though the chance of your reading my words is so very faint. My dearest father is growing worse. Oh, Derry, if I lose him, I think it will be the end of my life, for my heart will break. He has asked for you now and then."

Derrick Darnley sprang from his seat. Two or three of his old acquaintances were watching him with mingled amusement and curiosity, but he neither saw it nor cared.

"Has any one seen Merefield lately?" he asked, hurriedly. "Is he in town?"

"Merefield! Why, he went off to Jamaica or some place all in a flurry last week," observed a young fellow, quickly; then, with a hearty laugh, "They do say that the Hon. Ella Chester has fairly hunted him out of the country. But what's up, old fellow? You look deuced green!"

"I have had bad news—very bad news. My cousin has written to say her father, Sir Humphrey Leicester, is dangerously ill. It is a great shock to me! He is such a good old chap," he said, involuntarily, almost to himself, "it hurts me to hear anything has happened to him." He paused an instant with a momentary dread. "I suppose," he said, his voice grown a little husky—"I suppose you fellows haven't heard anything worse about him?"

There was a perfect chorus of negatives, and Darnley felt a trifle cheered.

"This is Friday," he mused, "and Dolly wrote on Tuesday or Monday night, evidently; that looks hopeful. Poor old uncle and poor Dolly! She must be terribly cut up. I wonder if any one is with her. She ought not to be alone. I will go down at once. I shall just catch the evening express."

He sat down and wrote out a telegram. His brow was drawn and his mouth set with grim determination. A sudden fear had come into his mind. What if he should meet Nancy there! What more likely than she should be with Dorothy at such a time?

It was because he loved her still; because, despite her mercenary, cruel conduct—despite all his efforts to crush her out of his memory—that she grew there stronger and stronger each day, that the man feared, yet longed, to see her again.

It would be joy, to gaze on her face once more, and pain indescribable to realize that for him such joy must never be—that she had by her own act separated herself from him and given herself to another man.

Through all his journeyings—and he had covered a pretty good distance during his American trip—this had been the burden of his thought.

Sometimes he grew angry with himself, and he would apostrophize himself as a dolt, and not worthy the name of man. He would laugh scornfully at himself.

Was this gloomy, miserable creature the proud, ambitious Derrick Darnley of a few months ago? Where were all his hopes? His eager prospects? Could it be possible that he was so weak as to let the vision of a blue-eyed, tempting face, sweep away all that hitherto made his life?

He cried shame on himself over and over again, but all to no good. Stronger men than Derrick Darnley have fallen beneath love's potent touch; and go where he would, do what he would, try as he would, he could not root Nancy out of his heart.

He possessed no common nature, and he had loved with no common love.

Time might, perchance, soften away the ragged edges of the wound; but heal it, and efface the traces of it altogether—never!

And so it was that, as Darnley wrote the telegram to Dolly, and planned out a hurried journey down to Ripstone Hall without further delay, his mind was haunted by those marvellous eyes, and he was wondering how his old love would look, how she would greet him, what he should say, almost more than he thought of the poor old man whom he really held in deep affection, and for whom he had unlimited sympathy.

"O sweet one, love! O my life's delight! Dear, though the days have divided us!"

So ran the troubled, sad melody in Derrick Darnley's heart as he sat in the railway carriage and was borne away from London to Ripstone Hall.

His life's delight! Surely that was true; for life had only dawned in those short, few, madly precious summer hours. It was ended now, for he did not live; he simply submitted to an existence, which, dreary as it was, he was not coward enough to dream of ending.

"Dear, though the days have divided us!" Ay, that she was—dearer by the sense of desolation, of despair, that surrounded her image. It was a curious fancy, but Darnley had grown to think sometimes of the Nancy of those summer hours as of a fair, dead creature—something to mourn and to worship; something that, though she was gone, lingered yet to remind him of the brief spell of happiness she had brought.

It was a sad but a peaceful reflection, and one that even in its sorrow was more pleasant to him than the cruel truth that she lived, and had wilfully deceived for another, and such another!

His ears had hungered, yet shrunk from hearing some mention of her name, as he sat in the club. He knew the sort of conversation the bare whisper of Thomas Crawshaw was likely to provoke. But whether it was that all gossip and excitement about the parvenu had died out, or whether the clubmongers had imagined, for some vague reason, that he would not care to hear any such gossip, Darnley could not tell; but the fact remained that not a single soul spoke of Crawshaw or his wife.

"I am glad of it," was the man's thought to himself, as he learned back in his corner with folded arms and moody face. "I could not bear to listen to any remarks on him, for they would seem to reflect on her."

His dark eyes were fixed on the gloom of night outside. There was a dissatisfied, uncomfortable expression in them.

"If I could only arrive at some good conclusion as to why she treated me as she did! It was so unlike her! She had a kind word for every living creature. Even the flowers won sympathy and love from her; and yet—yet she crushed the very light out of my life! She wantonly destroyed my happiness and broke my heart! Why? Surely, if she had wished to catch Crawshaw, she might have spared me. Can his wealth be such a salve to his odious self? Can she be happy with this brute? Will not her own innate refinement—for a refined, dainty gentlewoman Nancy is, and ever must be—will not this recoil and shrink from the daily contact with the coarse, low mind?"

CHEAP TELEPHONE SERVICE.

British Post Office Takes Over the Country's System.

By the end of the year the British Post Office will take over the management of the country's telephone system from the private company which has hitherto controlled it, and the British public does not regard this particular nationalization project entirely without misgivings, especially in view of the fact that the direct control by the State of the country's telegraphs has resulted in a loss of $50,000,000 in the last four years and that the present annual loss is well over $5,000,000. Business men are afraid that red tape will hamper the quick and cheap telephone service that everyone wants.

"Almost every European country has secured a cheaper and better telephone service in the last few years than England has done," said G. Dalzell Read, a telephone authority, who is in London, after having inspected the German, Danish and Swedish systems.

"A telephone at $10 a year is not an impossible dream, but it is a perfectly sound business proposal if the systems continue to expand at the present rate. In Denmark, already, outside Copenhagen, the annual subscription for small exchanges is $11 and additional calls may be obtained at the rate of $5.50 per 1,000 calls.

"Sweden, too, has a most efficient and moderate priced telephone service with more than 200,000 subscribers. The installation charge for a private house is only $4 with an annual subscription of $16.50.

LOYAL SERVICE.

While journeying through Central Africa once, after several days of severe marching, the men of Alfred J. Swann's caravan failed to reach camp. He returned to them with water and assistance, and finding the carts with only half their crew, he asked where the heavy load was, and they replied, "Miles behind." It was on this journey that he witnessed a remarkable instance of the endurance and loyalty

Hints for Busy Housekeepers.

Recipes and Other Valuable Information of Particular Interest to Women Folks.

TESTED RECIPES.

Chicken Coquettes.—Roll four cups of minced chicken, one cup bread crumbs, three well beaten eggs, one tablespoonful of sherry wine, two grates of nutmeg, one-half teaspoonful of salt, dash each of cayenne and paprika, one tablespoonful each of cream and melted butter, into pear-shaped balls; dip these into beaten egg and bread crumbs and fry to a golden brown. These are delicious.

Pineapple Dessert.—One pint of shredded pineapple. Boil with one-half ounce of gelatin which has been dissolved in just enough cold water to dissolve it. When cooled, but not fully formed, stir in the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs and fold in lightly one-half pint of whipped cream; pour into a mold and set on ice to harden. If canned pineapple is used no sugar will be required. Serve with plain cream.

Cuban Dish.—Peel and slice four fine Bermuda onions into cold water. Leave them there half an hour, take them out and dry by laying them upon one cloth, covering with another. Have ready in a saucepan a dozen fine tomatoes peeled and sliced thin. Heat slowly while you fry the onions in butter to a light brown. When the tomatoes are hot and soft season with salt, sugar, and an even teaspoonful of paprika. Add four okra pods sliced thin. Bring to a boil, add the fried onions, and cook fast for fifteen minutes. Line a platter with slices of toast, well buttered, and pour the "olla" over them. Set in the oven for three minutes to cook the toast and serve.

Genoa Dish.—Stew one dozen tomatoes until soft, add a little sugar, salt, and cayenne. Put through a colander, return to fire. In a frying pan heat three large tablespoonfuls of butter, break into it rapidly six eggs, stirring all the time. As soon as eggs are broken and mixed add the tomatoes, then add quickly three tablespoonfuls of grated Parmesan cheese. Eat with brown bread.

PINEAPPLE.

Drain the slices of pineapple from the syrup in the can. Dip the slices, one at a time, in fritter batter and fry in deep fat to a delicate amber tint. Drain on soft paper. Serve at once with a hot sauce made of the syrup from the can or with powdered sugar.

Sauce for Fritters.—Put the syrup from the can of pineapples and three-fourths of a cup of sugar over the fire to boil; mix a level teaspoonful of arrowroot to a smooth, thin consistency, with three or four tablespoonfuls of cold water; stir the arrowroot in boiling syrup and let simmer five or six minutes. When ready to serve add one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of lemon juice, and Kirsch, claret, or rum to taste. Serve as an entree with roast meat.

Pineapple Fritters.—Beat one egg, add one-half cup of milk, and gradually stir into one cup of sifted flour, sifted again with one level teaspoonful and a half each of baking powder and sugar and one-fourth teaspoonful of salt.

Golden Custard.—To each pint of milk allow two eggs, one-fourth cupful of sugar, or more if desired very sweet. Whip the sugar with the eggs until sugar is dissolved. Pour this into the milk and pour over a half cupful of stale cake crumbs that have been dried and rolled fine. Pour into fancy molds or cups and set in a pan of warm water which comes to one-third of the top of the cups. Bake in a moderate oven until the custards are firm. Remove from the cups, by slipping a thin bladed knife about the edges of custards. Pour some sweetened pineapple juice over each one and top with a spoonful of whipped cream.

Pineapple Trifle.—Boil two-thirds cupful of sugar and one pint can of grated pineapple until a good syrup. Dissolve one-half package of gelatin in one-half pint of boiling water. Add pineapple syrup, juice of an orange, and let set. When well set add one-half cupful whipped cream and beat until well mixed. This amount will serve eight persons, and in carrying out a color scheme of red or green a decoration of maraschino cherries could be used.

TIME FOR COOKING.

Beets, from one hour to four hours. Wash and cut off tops. Cabbage, wash and sear a few minutes in salt water to remove any insects; boil for twenty minutes. Carrots, scrape, boil from thirty to forty-five minutes. Turnips, pare, boil in water to which a tablespoonful of sugar has been added; if large, slice.

Winter squash, remove the seeds and skin and cut into pieces; boil from fifteen to twenty minutes in very little water.

Onions, peel under water; boil three-quarters of an hour to an hour.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Lemon juice rubbed on the hands will easily and effectually remove stains.

To cure earache, wrap a little black pepper in cotton, moisten it with sweet oil and insert it in the ear.

Stains may be removed from tinware by scouring with common soda then washing thoroughly and drying.

Lemons hardened from long standing may be made usable by covering a few moments with boiling water.

It is said that a piece of sal ammoniac will remove a wart if dampened and rubbed on the wart several nights in succession.

When preparing a leg of lamb for roasting, pin on thin slices of bacon with whole cloves and the flavor of the meat will be fine.

Always warm the baby's bed with a hot water bottle before putting him to rest for the night. If he is restless this will make him sleep.

Having several pairs of shoes and never wearing the same pair more than one or two days at a time will rest the leather and make it last better.

Boiled potatoes should be served as soon as they are cooked. To make them drier drain off the water quickly, shake them in a strong draught of air, and do not put back the lid of pot.

Any dish that has held dough, milk, cream or eggs should be rinsed in cold water before being placed in hot water, as hot water tends to cook such things and make them more difficult to remove.

To keep the feet dry and warm and increase the durability of boots and shoes, it is best to have the soles perfectly dry, and then apply linseed oil on the outside of them till they will absorb no more.

The best way to keep a bed from becoming damp if left for a week or two, is to leave a blanket on the top of the bed after it is made. Take the blanket off before using, and then you will find it quite safe. It is seldom necessary to eat half a chicken in the middle of the night, but there are times when a plain biscuit and a glass of water will give the relief to an exhausted body which will bring soothing rest to the disturbed mind.

Wash and starch your curtains in the usual way. Pin down on the lawn with toothpicks, stretching into position as you proceed. You will find they will look as good as new and the process much easier and quicker than with frames.

White ostrich feathers can be cleaned by using gasoline and flour. Stir in enough flour to make a thin white paste. Thoroughly shake the feather in this. Dry by waving in the sunshine and air. The flour will shake out, leaving your feather white, soft, and beautiful.

If there is a strong wind and the doctor has left orders that a window in the sick room must be kept open all night, nail a piece of muslin over the aperture. This will prevent draughts, and at the same time not obstruct the ventilation. The material should be coarse.

Instead of a hot-water bag, use a bag of hot salt. Put the salt in a pie plate and heat it in the oven, then put it into a small bag or, in case of emergency tie it loosely in a thin cloth and lay it over the afflicted part. Many prefer a hot salt bag to a hot water bag. The salt may be reheated.

Save old kid gloves for ironing day. Sew a pad made from the left glove on to the palm of the right one, and you will find your hand is saved from becoming blistered while the fingers and the back of the hand will be protected from the scorching heat, which is so damaging to the skin.

OVERLOOKED.

A schoolmaster had been severely correcting a boy, and finished by saying: "Now, sit down and write a letter to your parents, telling them how much you are taught here, and how little you profit therefrom. I should be ashamed to tell them." The boy cried at first, and then wrote: "Dear Father, I am very stupid, though there is more to be learnt here than anywhere. Twice two's four, four boys go to one bed, six beds make one attic, and four attics make one well-ventilated and well-appointed sleeping dormitory. One round of bread and butter makes one breakfast, and every tea makes its own supper." "This time," said the master, when he had examined the letter, "we will overlook your conduct, and you needn't send that note."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL STUDY

INTERNATIONAL LESSON,
JUNE 4.

Lesson X.—Israel's penitence and God's pardon, Hosea 14.
Golden Text, Heb. 9. 17.

Verse 1. Return unto Jehovah thy God—Hosea has followed Amos in declaring that inevitable disaster awaits his people because of their iniquity. But now, with faith and patriotism, he turns to them with an appeal to repent and a promise of God's forgiving mercy. His doctrine of repentance, therefore, is as gracious as it is true. He realizes how low his nation has fallen in the guilt and shame of its degeneracy. But he knows there is hope in a God who is waiting to hear the cry and satisfy the hunger of the returning prodigal.

2. Take with you words—True repentance is articulate. It will not keep silent and so give no token of its sincerity, but will speak forth in praise and pure worship. Hosea saw that the entire manner in which Israel turned to God was altogether artificial and lacking in earnestness. Her burnt-offerings were cheaply rendered. They could in no wise satisfy an offended God. He wanted none of them. What he desired was a clean worship that expressed itself in heart-wrung words—bullocks of the lips. Penitent confessions, vows, abhorrence of sin—these Jehovah will gladly accept as good.

3. Assyria shall not save us—There were two political parties in Israel in these latter days of the kingdom. One courted the help of Assyria, the other favored resistance of Assyria through alliance with Egypt. The prophets regarded both these schemes as disloyalty to the God of Israel, and accordingly frowned upon foreign entanglements of every sort, whether they meant protection from the powerful Assyrian, or the reinforcement of Egypt's swift horses (cavalry). The foreign idols, also, wrought by their own hands, were equally to be eschewed as an offense to God and as a worthless superfluity. They had Jehovah, and he was more than all their allies and made unnecessary their hideous idolatries.

The fatherless—This is a touch of that personal history which colors so much of Hosea's prophecy. Like his own children—one of whom he called Unloved (one who knew not the pity which a father has for his children)—so were the sons and daughters of this wicked generation. They had grown up in ignorance of the true God, and were not his. But he intends, nevertheless, to seek them out, to win them back, and prove to them—fatherless as they are—that in him is mercy.

4. I will love them freely—The love of Jehovah is nothing that can be purchased. It is as spontaneous as it is undeserved. It asks no sacrifices except those of a contrite heart, and where that is found there is a potency in the love of God which makes all things new. It is ready to forgive gratuitously, and powerful to heal absolutely, all our backsliding. So it removes the stain, as well as the guilt, of our sin. Compare Rom. 3. 24; 8. 32; Rev. 21. 6; 22. 17.

5. The dew—Scarcity of rain often made the land depend upon the dew. So the Psalmist speaks of the dews of Hermon. In the long droughts of summer there would be no living in Palestine without this gracious provision. Hermon itself is snow-capped in summer, and the moist warm wind from the Mediterranean, coming in contact with the chilled air about the snowy top, results in a drenching dew. What a picture of the gentle pity of God.

Lebanon—Here, as often in the Old Testament, not the entire range now known as Lebanon is meant, but Hermon, the loftiest and southernmost summit. From almost every quarter of Galilee it is visible. "You cannot lift your eyes from any spot of northern Israel without resting them upon the vast mountain. From the unhealthy jungles of the upper Jordan, the pilgrim lifts his heart to the cool hill air above, to the ever-green cedars and firs, to the streams and waterfalls that drop like silver chains off the great breastplate of snow." Compare Isaiah 60. 13.

6. His beauty—As the olive-tree—A promise of national prosperity and plenty.

7. They shall revive—Under the nurturing influences of the divine mercy, as expressed by the dew, and the protection of his shadow, Israel is to blossom forth in unwanted beauty, fragrance, and fertility.

8. Ephraim—Representing the people of Israel. The verse has many difficulties, owing to the confusion resulting from the use of so many undefined pronouns. This confusion is characteristic of Hosea's style. Here, it cannot certainly be determined which is speaking, Jehovah or Ephraim, or both. A good explanation makes the verse a dialogue between the two. Ephraim announces his intention to

CONCRETE ON THE FARM.

Its Uses Have Been Largely Extended by a Series of Experiments

It is only a few years since concrete was generally accepted as a reliable building material, yet the difference which this convenient and economical form of construction has made in the outlook of the farmer in these few years, has done much to revolutionize things on the farm.

The growing scarcity of lumber and its consequent rise in price, has gradually caused that commodity to assume the general aspect of a luxury. So much lumber is used on the farm for buildings and fences that its extremely high price has made it almost prohibitive to the average farmer unless he has an extra large sum of money to spend on outlay. Wire fencing partially solved the problem, but real relief did not come until concrete was proven by actual tests to be not only practicable, but to possess many advantages over wood as a building material.

The uses to which concrete can be put are practically without limit, more particularly on the farm. Although King George is to live in a tent during his stay in Delhi for the Durbar, it may not be supposed that the tent will bear any likeness to the white canvas mushrooms which are associated with the training of troops.

The London Mirror has obtained some details of how the Royal tents in India will be fitted up. In India, Durbar tents are structures of wonderful splendor, and the King's tent—or, rather, range of tents—will, as is only fitting, be on a scale calculated to impress even those accustomed to the magnificence of the tabernacles of the Indian rajahs and chiefs.

A kind of temporary place or pavilion will be built, consisting of a large number of the most sumptuous Durbar tents specially made for the occasion.

The principal of these will be about forty feet in length, is being lined with native woven draperies, and will have an enormous "baronial" type of fireplace built into one side of it. The general scheme of decoration is to follow Indian traditions, and will be carried out in a full, rich-toned orange and black as the dominant colors. Externally, the whole group of tents will be made as strikingly gorgeous as possible in order to impress the minds of a people who, in a—ages, have been associated with the most lavish display in pageantry.

In all, there will be a large number of different camps outside the walls of Delhi—the King's camp, surrounded by the camps of the higher officials of the Indian Government, those of the greater Indian chiefs, overflow camps for the suites of native princes, and, finally, camps for visitors.

KING'S DURBAR TENT.

Enormous Baronial Fireplace to be Built in Canvas Structure.

FINGERS AND FORKS.

A Traveller Says Forks Were First Used in Italy.

The customs of to-day are the laughing stock of to-morrow; and, quite as often, the innovation, scorned by steady-going and respectable folks, becomes, in the course of time, an every-day necessity. It is scarcely three centuries, for example, since forks came into use.

"I observed," says a traveller of 1811, "a custom in Italian towns that is not used in any other country. The Italians do always at their meals use a little fork when they cut their meat. For while with the knife, which they hold in one hand, they cut the meat out of the dish, they fasten the fork, which they hold in the other hand, upon the same dish. So that one should unadvisedly touch the dish of meat with his fingers, from which all the table do cut, will give occasion of offense unto the company. The reason of this their curiosity is because the Italian cannot by any means endure to have his dish touched with fingers, seeing that all men's fingers are not alike clean. Hereupon, I myself thought good to imitate the Italian fashion of cutting meat since I came home."

To Queen Elizabeth were presented gold and jeweled forks at various times. But the dainty queen preferred the old habit of fingering her meat, and forks were for a long time regarded as a worthless, foppish invention. One divine, in the reign of James I., preached a sermon against forks, declaring it to be an "insult on Providence not to touch one's meat with one's fingers." And another, in 1617, advised all travellers "returning home to lay aside the spoon and fork of Italy, the affected gestures of France, and all strange apparel."

THE FINGER NAIL.

Do Marks Indicate Approaching Dissolution.

The significance of certain markings on the finger nails frequently has been the subject of discussion in medical publications. The latest contribution is a paper by Norman Flower, which appears in the British Medical Journal. It deals with the condition of the nails during and after severe illness.

"Flower brings forward several cases," says the Medical Record, commenting on his paper, "which have come under his observation in support of the contention that finger nails undergo a change during and after serious illness. The most interesting part of his paper is, however, the testimony of Sir Samuel Wilke to the same effect. Wilke was the first to notice the white markings on the nails as being indicative of death or approaching death. Wilke mentioned several cases in proof of this argument.

"Whether these finger nail markings are of any value in prognosis is doubtful. In the first place, it may be presumed that they do not always occur, and then those who have them do not always die. They are apparently simple curiosities."

When poisoned with poison ivy bathe the affected parts with 20 per cent alcohol. Government experiments have proved this to be an absolute antidote for poison ivy.

HOGS EATING FROM A CONCRETE FEEDING FLOOR. ready the list includes forms of construction ranging from the large hip-roofed barn down to a nest-egg that deceives the wisest old lawyer in the brood. These uses have been extended largely, by a series of extensive experiments.

Already much has been accomplished on the farm by the use of concrete. Perhaps the greatest argument in its favor, and one which has developed only since concrete has actually been put into general use, is its health-promoting properties.

If sickness occurs in a city to any great extent, a searching investigation usually follows, conducted have done with idols. Jehovah replies that he has taken note of the penitent's prayer and will answer. That being the case Ephraim feels himself robust as a green fir-tree. But Jehovah warns him not to forget again that all the fruit of prosperity comes solely from him.

9. Who is wise, that he may understand?—To understand, in the thought of the prophet, was to lay to heart, with a good conscience, such truth as God had made known. None but the wise and prudent can so appreciate the message of this prophecy as to profit thereby. To do that requires not merely an intellectual apprehension of the ways of Jehovah, but a practical effectiveness manifest in walking in them.

CAPTAIN KIDD'S TREASURES.

Papers in Record Office Tell What He Did With the Booty.

Doomed to an infamy undeserved, his name reddened with crimes he never committed and made wildly romantic by tales of treasure which he did not bury, Captain William Kidd is fairly entitled to the sympathy of posterity and the apologies of all the ballad-makers and alleged historians who have obscured the facts in a cloud of fable. Fate has played the strangest tricks with the memory of this seventeenth century seafarer, who never cut a throat, nor made a victim walk the plank; who was no more than an amateur pirate in an era when this interesting profession was in its heyday; and who was hanged at Execution Dock for the excessively unromantic crime of cracking the skull of his gunner with a wooden bucket; because, forsooth, his majesty's officers were unable to prove their charges of piracy.

As for the riches of Captain Kidd, the original documents in his case, preserved among the State papers of the Public Record Office in London, relate with much detail what booty he had and what he did with it. Alas! they reveal the futility of the searches after the stout sea-chest buried above high water mark. The only authentic Kidd treasure was dug up and inventoried more than two hundred years ago, nor has the slightest clue to any other been found since then.

Cured His Rheumatism In Three Weeks.

James LeB. Johnstone, a prominent member of the Citizen's Band, of Chatham, writes:

"I contracted Rheumatism by exposure, five years ago, and was ailing for two months and in great pain all the time. I got Father Morrissey's No. 7 Tablets and took them for about three weeks, when the Rheumatism all left me and I have had no return of the pains since."

Father Morrissey's "No. 7" Tablets

Rev. Father Morrissey

Rheumatism is generally brought on by exposure, but is really caused by Uric Acid in the blood. This Uric Acid is an irritating poison, formed from the waste matter of the body. The kidneys should remove it, but when they fail it poisons the blood, and, settling in the joints, causes Rheumatism.

"No. 7" Tablets clear out the clogged-up Kidneys and stimulate them to perform their task of filtering the Uric Acid out of the blood. When this is done the Rheumatism simply and naturally vanishes.

"No. 7" Tablets cost 50c. At your dealer's. 28

ELECTION THIS FALL.

The Toronto Saturday Night of last week under the heading "Told in the Lobby," hands out the following for its readers:—

"From Ottawa sources Saturday Night has conclusive information that a general election will be held for the House of Commons this autumn. Surmises to this effect have been of late, but this is more than a surmise. It is authoritative. Returns of the census which is to be taken next week are to be rushed, and the Liberal Government is already engaged in the task of making provision for the holding of the poll on short notice. The first order of business when the House meets will probably be a redistribution bill, after which the Government will take a test vote on reciprocity and seek a dissolution. According to present plans the election will take place somewhere between the 15th and the 30th of September, but it is too early to set a date, since the Government may not find it easy to get their redistribution bill through without considerable debate. The Government has absolute confidence that by the policy of lining up the farmers against the manufacturers and other urban interests it can carry the country. It is the intention of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, if he comes back to power, to introduce the closure and prevent any further holding up of reciprocity. It is doubtful whether Liberal confidence is quite so justified as the leaders believe. In the important matter of organization the Conservatives will be able to put up a better fight than in the past. It will be the first time since 1896 that they will face the country with adequate funds for the legitimate expenses of a campaign. The conflict will unquestionably be the hottest general election since that of the date mentioned."

JNO. ROBINSON'S BIG SHOWS

Will Exhibit at Ogdensburg, Monday, June 12th.

Indications are that a large number of people will attend from here. Everybody will want to see this famous show. Under the management of John Robinson the III, it is enjoying its 87th year of prosperity, and is one of the foremost amusement attractions of America.

It numbers among its arenic favorites some of the best acts and most expensive that can be secured. The eight Lowndas, Brazilian riders are known everywhere as the world's greatest horsemen. No less than 30 other male and female riders are the pick of the profession. 50 real clowns make a world of fun, and more than a hundred other foreign and American features in four rings, two elevated stages and a half mile hippodrome track, introducing three great herds of performing elephants, big realistic wild west, school of menage horses, musical ballet and 300 daring gymnasts, nimble acrobats and fearless aerialists.

The Robinson show has always been famed for its menagerie, and this year finds the free zoological annex the most complete ever carried by any show comprising rare and costly animals from every section of the globe. A splendid array of animal exhibits will be seen daily free in the $500,000 street pageant which takes place promptly at ten o'clock. This is the only big independent show, not in the circus trust, consequently there will be no advance in prices for seats, etc. The performance will be given afternoon and evening.

"Whatsoever a Man Thinketh in His Heart, So Is He"

(MORLEY K. NASH)

"Whatever a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

How many of us fully realize the full import of this scriptural passage? If the truth could be sunk into the hearts of the people, there would be less individual and general dissatisfaction with our present lot because of the knowledge that it lies within us to control, in a great measure, our own destiny. "Ah, but," you impulsively assert, "God looks after man's future"—and so He does, but am I not correct in affirming that it is only with man's consent that the Holy Spirit operates upon us individually and steers us into the haven of eternity. We are the captains; He is the pilot.

Professor Fowler (America's distinguished phrenologist) and others tell us that the human brain is made up of forty-three separate elements, each being the organism of some certain phase of mind, or character. A good musician will generally be found to possess a vital mental temperament for bringing out vivacity and expression; the organ of tune for interpreting sound, comparison for analyzing and keeping time; constructiveness for the convenient fingering of the instrument; sublimity for expressing the great and wonderful, such as the rushing of a mountain torrent, or the foaming and heaving of ocean billows. There must be benevolence for sympathy and feeling in the vibrations; destructiveness for force; spirituality for inspiration; ideality to give delicacy and harmony in sounds produced, and all that goes to make up the successful musician.

Now, when a merchant wishes to make a rapid business calculation, blood rushes to the organ of calculation, which is situated at the extreme outer angle of the eyebrow. You will find orators or persons possessing considerable literary ability to have swellings directly underneath the eyes; or if you will take pains to particularly note anyone whom you know to be of a combative nature, a protuberance will be quite plainly discerned back behind the ear where the organ is located—lawyers generally have it large. Of course every element is dependent, in a way, on the other faculties for its expression, just as a pot of potatoes must be seasoned with salt and boiled in water to make them palatable. But the mess is distinctly "potato." We do not call it "boiled salt" or "heated water." Now I do not wish, in this article, to set forth any scientific dogma, which would not appeal to all, but merely to trumpet the fact that man is the prognosticator of his own destiny, or, as the saying goes, "every man is the architect of his own fortune." We will lift our arm. As a result of this "willing" the act is performed. If the manoeuvre is repeated several times daily the limb gradually gains in strength and in time the action is greatly facilitated. I recently heard a man say that he had never made up his mind to obtain any particular public office but that he was successful in his quest. Many a man of almost equal ability might have enjoyed the same experience, but, because of a lack in force and determination, life to him was a failure in many respects. Now before a determined effort can be put forth, there must be confidence; and before we swell out with assurance, there must be self-knowledge. Science tells us that all human brains are alike, in that every faculty existent in one brain finds its double in another dome of thought. Seeing now that we are all similar in this respect, we can safely conclude that though a person be born a poor mathematician it does not necessarily follow that he or she should remain so all their days, for by focusing the mind to a certain extent in that direction, the blood will be drawn to those brain organs which render the science of mathematics clear to the intelligence of man. Of course, some people are born with some faculties so deficient that it would be doubtful as to whether they could be developed beyond a reasonable stage or not. But certainly they could be developed to such an extent that whereas they were formerly below mediocrity, after having been nurtured by exercise their efficiency will have been so increased that one is enabled to wield the newly acquired intellectual potency with considerable dexterity.

With this great truth staring us in our faces, let no man feel discouraged until he has given the principle a fair trial. Simply "take it cool." Do not allow unworthy thoughts to be entertained by the mind for any length of time, lest they leave their impressions on the brain, for, as the impressions are ground out from a gramophone record, just so surely will these "brain-recorded thoughts" crop up at times when they are least wanted or expected and destroy the harmony of the mind. Pictures and recollections of an undesirable nature will often loom before our vision, but, if the mental attitude be tuned with the all powerful Father of Man and Creator of the Universe, they will in time fail to irritate us, as impure suggestions cannot possibly link themselves with a pure and undefiled spiritual nature. When you arrive at this advanced stage your blood will throb with strong and manly pulsations. You will be a king among men. All things worth while in the world will be yours to command. Just remember: "Whatsoever a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

Most wonderful and mighty art thou, Man! Supremely high, thou standest above all. That is of earth, and to the dust returns! E'en as the caged hyena turns about and rends the hand that feeds him through the bars, The serpent lying dormant in the breast Seeketh indulgence from his master's store, Then darts his fangs into the heart he won. Thou raging lion, hark to the soul's command! Be thou controlled and subject to my will. Mine eye shall never from thee turn aside Until my goodly wishes be obeyed. Thou needs must be a servant dutiful; For being ignorant of thy destiny, And by the law by which thou art alive, Thou must be guided by the mental sun That brighteneth the way lest thou shouldst fall. And, in confusion, know not where to turn, And die when all thy strength is spent for naught. So now be peaceful, and when time is spent, Thou shalt find sweet release, and be at rest.

STEAMER FILGATE BURNED.

Had Run Thirty-two Years in Service Without Meeting a Mishap.

Valleyfield, Que., May 31.—The steamer Filgate, which plies between Montreal and Cornwall, was burned to the water's edge off the dock here last night. The Filgate was 32 years old, with iron hull. Her boilers were practically new, and the superstructure was also of recent construction. She was completely overhauled inside and out during the past winter.

The fire was discovered after the steamer arrived here last evening, and the vessel was burned to the waters' edge before any cargo could be moved. Everything was lost, including two valuable horses. Several of the crew had a narrow escape. The spectacle furnished was a brilliant one, as the burning steamer moved round the bay. She was valued at $25,000, with insurance of $5,000. She was in charge of Capt. Laurier, of Cornwall.

The steamer was built in Montreal in 1879, by Captain Filgate.

Central Saskatchewan Wheat Lands

In the "Heart of the World's Hard Wheat Belt" The Last Mountain Valley.

The Wm. Pearson Co. Limited, Winnipeg, Canada, offer for sale 175,000 acres of selected open prairie and park wheat lands in the famous Last Mountain Valley. Abundant rainfall for all crops—the best of water at from 12 to 30 feet—splendid railway service, with 7 railways in the district and 3 more being built—nearly 30 towns and shipping points. The top soil is a mellow chocolate loam, from 8 inches to 2 feet thick, extraordinarily rich in nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash—the foods of cereals. Beneath this is a rich loamy marl 2 to 3 feet thick, then a strong yellow clay subsoil. The combination is ideal, as crops grown there have abundantly proved. In fact a single crop often pays for the farm on which it was grown.

Think Before You Speak

If you are tempted to reveal
A tale some one has told
About another, make it pass,
Before you speak, three gates of gold.
Three narrow gates—first, "Is it true?"
Then "Is it useful?" In your mind
Give truthful answer; and the next
Is last and narrowest, "Is it kind?"
And if, to reach your lips at last,
It passes through these gateways three,
Then you may tell the tale, nor fear,
What the result of speech may be.

LEGAL MATTERS IN SPAIN

IT IS WELL TO AVOID LAWSUITS IN THAT COUNTRY.

The Troubles of a House Builder—Dilatoriness in Legal Proceedings.

Spanish law is founded on the old Roman law and leaves but little to be desired, if only it were always put into effect. But the practice and theory of it are two very different things, as many know to their cost. The satire of the gypsy's curse: "Que tengas pleito y que ganes" ("May you have a lawsuit and win it") is still applicable to present day methods of conducting legal matters in Spain, as the following story will show:

A friend of ours decided to build a house in Spain, writes Mrs. Shiers-Mason in the London Evening Standard, and everything went well at first. The contract was an excellent one and the contractor and builder was a most plausible and pleasant man. An old gentleman, however, with much experience of the country remarked to a friend as one day they passed the house in process of building: "That house will never be finished, for the builders always abscond in Spain."

THE BUILDER DID ABSCOND, but the house was finished by the owner. The builder had practically paid for nothing and our friend was threatened with several lawsuits. "Pay anything," said his Spanish friends, "rather than go to law, for if you don't you will be ruined. As a matter of fact, the joiner, to whom the builder owed $225, had already been to law about some other matters and had been so bitten that he did not press his claim at all.

Our friend paid some and left the rest to threaten him with proceedings, which went as far as "the act of reconciliation," in which plaintiff and defendant are brought together before the judge, who tries to act as peacemaker, as though the law realized what a serious thing a lawsuit in Spain may be and tried to save you from itself. As has been said, our friend had to complete the house himself. To make a flat roof he engaged five bricklayers and appointed one to be foreman at an extra rate of pay with the promise of a gift if the work were well done within a certain time.

Some months after the work had been finished he was astonished to find himself sued for $40 by the foreman for tools that had been used by him to do the work. At the first trial our friend won. Some weeks later, however, he was rather surprised to be told that the bricklayer had appealed to the next court and that he had better go and if he wished to obtain justice. Our friend, of course, did nothing of the kind, and so lost the case.

It is extremely easy to find false witnesses in Spain in these days, but less than a hundred years ago, when false witnesses in civil cases were punished with ten years' condemnation to the galleys and their property confiscated, it could have been no easy matter to find anyone ready to commit perjury. A perjurer was also looked upon as non compos mentis.

In olden days if the accused considered that he had not sufficient proof after the witness had given evidence he prayed that the accused might be tortured. A witness also if perceived varying in his answers could be tortured in the same manner as the accused. In still earlier days the accused and the accused were tortured that the cause might be proceeded with in greater certainty. By which it will be seen that Spain has in some respects progressed!

If a person in Spain contests a will when the decision is at last pronounced there is rarely ever anything left for the victorious party. "Necios y porfiados hacen ricos los lerados" (fools and obstinate people make lawyers rich). This proverb is true of every country, but especially of Spain.

Lawyers' charges in Spain offer another reason for avoiding lawsuits, as they have no scale of fees. The friend above mentioned was amazed when he received his bill from his Spanish lawyer. Expecting a bill of $50 he received instead one of $200. So he went to remonstrate with him. After a dramatic interview in which the man of law exclaimed in tragic tones

"GIVE ME WHAT YOU LIKE!" our friend got his bill reduced to a more reasonable figure.

The dilatoriness of Spanish law is almost incredible. A watch was stolen; the owner immediately informed the police of the robbery. Seven years afterward he was called upon to give evidence as to the robbery.

A few years ago there was an accident; three years afterward the people who were responsible for the accident were called upon to give their account of it. They had to travel about 170 miles to give evidence. The case was adjourned and they had to travel home, having accomplished absolutely nothing, and they may be called upon to take the long journey again in a short time, or not for years.

The following story will illustrate the haphazard nature of Spanish justice. Some years ago a young English sailor, accompanied by an American and an Irish sailor, went on shore at Havana. While returning to their ships they were attacked by Chinamen. In the fight that ensued the American hit one of the Chinamen on the head so hard with a stick that the man subsequently died. The Spanish authorities did not trouble to discriminate, but sentenced the three men to two years' imprisonment. The British Consul, being unaccustomed to Spanish ways, took up the case of the Englishman very strongly; the authorities thereupon possibly to teach him a lesson—tried the men over again and gave them all

TWENTY YEARS EACH.

The Englishman after three years in a Cuban prison, during which time his companions died of yellow fever, was transferred to Ceuta to do the remainder of his time. After some years he and a fellow prisoner, a Spaniard, escaped into Morocco, where they were captured by the Moors, who after making them work in the fields for six months took them back to Cuba and claimed the reward. The fact that our English authorities had their eye upon our countryman and had often tried to get some remission of his sentence prevented him from sharing the fate of recaptured convicts, which was to be cruelly and repeatedly flogged by some of the biggest blackguards in the prison, who are appointed guardians of the rest.

The food provided in the convict prison of Ceuta consists of two meals a day of garbanzos (chick peas), occasionally flavored with a tiny bit of salt pork, a remarkably healthy, if not appetizing diet, as the Englishman came out of prison in particularly good health. After his twenty years of unjust imprisonment he married a Spanish woman.

A FATAL SHOT.

Duel Between An Englishman and a Frenchman.

Among the less known writers of the nineteenth century was Samuel Rogers. He kept open house, and frequently entertained Dickens, Macaulay, Carlyle, and other celebrities of the time. Rogers was a notable wit, but unfortunately his thrusts were not always tempered with kindness. Irving, in a letter says, "I dined tete-a-tete with him some time since, and he served up his friends as he served up his fish, with a squeeze of lemon over each. It was very piquant, but it set my teeth on edge."

This same caustic flavor of his wit is shown in a story he was fond of telling to the discredit of French valor.

An Englishman and a Frenchman had got into a wordy squabble, which led to mutual insults and a challenge. Nothing could save the honor of either of them but a duel.

But duels were not fought to kill. Even serious wounds were unpleasant, and a mere scratch would answer the purpose much better. So that the antagonists might have a better chance of missing one another, they repaired to a dark room.

All was in readiness. The signal was given. The Englishman, no less eager to preserve his foe than himself, groped to the open fireplace. He pointed his pistol up the chimney and fired.

"And by Jove," Rogers was wont to exclaim, "he brought down the Frenchman!"

WHITE RACE FOUND WANTING

WILL VANISH, DECLARES ENGLISH PROFESSOR.

Our Civilization is Declining, Says Dr. Flinders Petrie, the Egyptologist.

It has been satisfactorily proved—on paper—that the original man was black and that the white races can never permanently acclimatize in the black man's country. German scholars have written learnedly on these subjects. Now comes an Englishman, Lionel W. Lyde, professor of economic geography at London University, with the theory that the white man is doomed to vanish off the face of the earth, yielding to the colored races.

Prof. Lyde believes that the original color of the human skin was dark brown. The variations of that color are the results of the weakening or strengthening of the pigment, or skin coloring, under different climatic conditions, the object of the pigment being the protection of the protoplasm beneath the skin from disorganization by abnormal and therefore dangerous rays of sunlight.

The effects of such rays on a man unprotected by a dark skin are, he says, nervous shock, productive sometimes of nervous prostration, and frequently leading to excesses, alcoholic and other kinds. Thus the original brown skin color has been developed, to black in those races living in the tropics and constantly subjected to dangerous rays, while on the other hand those races whose home is far from the equator have lost most of the pigment, as the absence of any great heat renders it unnecessary, while white is more advantageous for the #### CONSERVATION OF HEAT.

Prof. Lyde holds that in this way the race homes of mankind can be divided into different zones, that of the black peoples being on and around the equator and those of the other peoples further from the equator in proportion to the weakness of their skin coloring. The zone in which the white man can live under normal conditions has, he says, for its southern boundary latitude 55 degrees, that of Copenhagen, and he can only settle and thrive in other zones by taking steps to make himself artificially fit by such a laborious process as suits it out of the question.

Taking ordinary precautions and aided by all the great modern knowledge of the microscopic diseases of the tropics, it is possible for the white man after two years' of acclimatization to live in the tropics even more immune from tropical diseases than the black. But the period of this immunity is not much longer than seven years, after which the deteriorating effects of the abnormal heat on a skin not naturally protected begin to show themselves and to render the system open to the attack of any of the great tropical diseases, malaria, yellow fever, cholera, &c. Thus permanent settlement of the tropics by the white is out of the question.

But on the other hand, Prof. Lyde says, the pigment, while being absolutely necessary in the tropics, has no damaging effects, in colder latitudes. The professor concludes:

IS NOT DANGEROUS,

"Pigment is no danger, though unnecessary in high latitudes, while the absence of it is fatal in low latitudes without precautions which no ordinary white man will adopt, and therefore the dark can intrude permanently into the domain of the fair with more success than the fair can intrude into the domain of the dark."

Add to this the rapid increase of the darker races, compared with the slow increase of whites, and the doom of the white man is inevitably suggested.

Then there is Dr. Flinders Petrie, the Egyptologist, who views present day civilization with a lofty detachment born of dealing with eighty centuries. In his book "The Revolution of Civilization," he attempts to reduce to diagram the movement of human progress in the arts, sciences and acquisitions of wealth covering the period from 600 B.C. to the present age.

It may come as something of a shock to the modern mind to find nineteenth century art placed on a lower pedestal than the Egyptian art of 4000 B.C., and also to observe that present day art is beginning to move downward in

A CYCLE OF DECAY.

Dr. Petrie says that the advance of civilization is due to strife, strife between man and man, or strife of man with nature. The enormous accumulation of capital and wealth, which is one of the features of this age, is in itself, according to him, a cause of decay, because it diminishes the need for incessant and daily exertion.

To forms of government he assigns little influence and importance. Democracy, however, is the cause and symptom of decline. "The majority without capital necessarily eat up the capital of the minority, and the civilization steadily decays until the inferior population is swept away to make room for a fitter people," he says.

The rise of new civilizations Dr. Petrie regards as due to immigration of new stock and its admixture with the old. He says: "The complete crossing of two races produces the maximum of ability and from this point repeated generations diminish the ability." And to develop and foster progress he suggests that "eugenics will in some future civilization carefully segregate fine races and prohibit continual admixture until they have a distinct type, which will start a new civilization when transplanted."

Dr. Flinders Petrie's opinion is that in place of looking on the fall of the Roman Empire as a monstrous and inexplicable fact we now see, by the greater extension of our knowledge of the past, that civilization is not only intermittent but is regularly recurring phenomenon.

AN EAGLE AT HOME.

Watching the King of Birds During Early Morning Hours.

Writing of his experience in the London Daily Mail, a student of birds says: "We had crossed the bog and had taken a short nap. The aerie was now faintly visible, and an indistinct white object seemed to suggest the possibility of an eagle, but the light was as yet too indistinct to make out any object with certainty. Shortly before three the chaffinches burst into song, and we now perceived, to our intense satisfaction, the golden eagle standing on the edge of the nest and guarding a solitary chick."

"It is a noteworthy and curious fact that some eighty per cent. of eagles lose one of their young during the first three weeks of its existence. Numerous explanations have been advanced to account for this, but they are all most unsatisfactory."

"The eagle was standing over her young with wings slightly raised, and the chick seemed quite contented with his head alone sheltered by his mother. Before the light had become clear confused movements were noted in the aerie, and the youngster was in all probability having his morning meal. Occasionally the chick would raise his head and appear to beg his mother for an extra tit-bit, but this was refused him with gentle firmness."

"Hour after hour the eagle stood motionless over her young with a look of tender mother-love in her eyes, quite unlike the usual fierce expression associated with the king of birds. The sky shortly after two o'clock had become quite free of clouds, and the air became extremely cold, the touch of frost in the air being by no means conducive to our comfort."

"Almost exactly at three o'clock the sun rose in the northeast. He came over the brow of a hill looking red and angry, and for the space of fifteen minutes lit up the glen with a rich red light. The brooding eagle looked particularly beautiful in this light, being transformed for the while to a ruby-colored bird of prey, and the young bird also being faintly tinged with pink. The sun reddened the snowfields on the crater-shaped Cairntoul with charming effect; but his reign was all too short, for ominous clouds, hurrying up from the west, soon hid him from our sight. The weather had now completely changed, and soon the Cairngorm was shut in by the gathering mist."

"I had intended to secure a photograph of the eagle leaving her aerie, but the feeble light effectually put a stop to all efforts in the photographic line, and shortly before six o'clock the eagle slipped noiselessly off the nest and disappeared from sight, having in all probability set out on a foraging expedition."

NAPOLEON'S TRIBUTE.

When, after the battle of Jena, Napoleon invaded Prussia, he visited Potsdam, which contains the mortal remains of the Prussian kings. The sepulchre of Frederick the Great occupied a prominent site in the mausoleum. When entering the latter, Napoleon uncovered his head, and went directly up to the sarcophagus of the noted warrior.

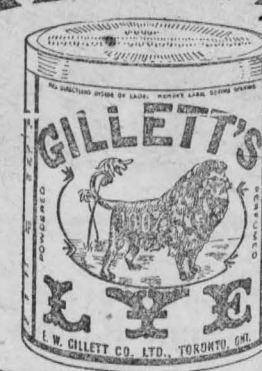

For a moment the conqueror stood still, seemingly absorbed in deep thought. Then with the forefinger of his right hand he wrote the word "Napoleon" in the dust of the huge stone casket, and turning to his marshals, said:

"Gentlemen, if he were living I would not be here."

TONGUES HARD TO MASTER.

One of the difficulties of learning the Samoan language is that each noble has a private dialect of his own, but the difficulty is matched by a linguistic complication to certain other parts of Polynesia. In the Gilbert Islands the men and women speak literally a different language. The difficulty of mutual intercourse is overcome by making the women use the masculine tongue when talking to the men. Among themselves it is taboo. And the men do not trouble their heads about the other.

PRISONERS ON SHIPBOARD

SOME VERY CURIOUS POINTS ABOUT EXTRADITION.

Prisoners May Not Be Handcuffed—One Hour's Exercise on Deck Each Day.

The manner in which a prisoner, extradited to this country from a foreign one, is treated while on the voyage home depends very much on the detective who has him in charge; and also on whether or no there is any suspicion that he may be contemplating violence, either to himself or to others, says Pearson's Weekly.

For instance, in the case of Jabez Balfour, who was brought here all the way from Buenos Ayres, there was a strong suspicion—probably ill-founded—that he contemplated committing suicide. Consequently, Inspector Froest, who had him in charge, decided to take no risks that he could possibly avoid.

The regulations do not permit of an unconvicted prisoner being handcuffed on board ship, once the vessel has left port, and he must be allowed one hour's exercise on deck each day. These indulgences—if indulgences they can be called—were therefore not withheld from Balfour.

BALFOUR'S AMUSEMENT.

But he got few others. For twenty-three hours out of every twenty-four he was immured in a locked cabin. He was not permitted even to enter the public dining room, his meals being brought to him by Mr. Froest himself, after the rest of the passengers had fed. He was, besides, constantly watched, and was subjected to a most rigorous search immediately on coming aboard.

His only relaxation was an occasional game of chess with some of the passengers who kindly came to his cabin to play with him, by permission, and in the presence of his keeper. This sea imprisonment lasted exactly one month and a day, and Balfour has since declared that it was the most trying experience of a captivity that was destined to continue for nearly twelve years.

One of the longest, and in its later stages one of the pleasant voyages ever undertaken by an unconvicted criminal, was that which Charles Hylton Davidson, the notorious forger, made some years back in the custody of Chief-Inspector Murray, of the Canadian Department of Justice.

RESOURCE TO THE RESCUE.

Murray tracked the man wanted to Mexico, and secured his extradition to Canada. But then his difficulties began. He could not bring his prisoner to Canada by the direct route through the United States, for, immediately Davidson set foot in that country, he could have demanded to have been released. There was, therefore, no thing for it but to convey him by way of Jamaica and England, and thence back across the Atlantic to Quebec.

On the voyage Murray kept Davidson under close observation, although allowing him considerably more freedom than Froest allowed Balfour. When, however, he had got safely as far as London, he was both mortified and astonished to learn that there was the extreme likelihood of his having had all his trouble for nothing.

The law, he was told, that a prisoner extradited from a foreign country to a British Colony could not be kept in custody in England for longer than twenty-four hours, nor could he be taken, as a prisoner, on board a British ship sailing from a British port.

Here was dilemma. Davidson was as free as air—had he only known it. But Murray was equal to the occasion. "Look here, Davidson," he said, "I've got you safe. There is only the last stage of the journey to complete. If I allow you to travel saloon with me as an ordinary first-class passenger, will you give me your word to play me no tricks?"

To this proposition Davidson, knowing nothing of the real state of affairs, was naturally quite ready to agree. And so it came to pass that one of the most notorious criminals Canada has ever known came home in state; free, yet not free, a voluntary prisoner, and yet an involuntary one.

ARMED WITH A BOWIE KNIFE.

Some people may be inclined to think that the close watch which is usually kept over a prisoner while he is on shipboard, is somewhat in the nature of a superfluity. That it is not always so, however, is shown by an incident in the career of Inspector Froest, mentioned above.

Froest was bringing a notorious forger named Sloane from Havre on an extradition warrant. There was trouble to begin with over the matter, the French authorities wishing to hand him over to the English detective unsearched and unhandcuffed. To this Froest, knowing the man he had to deal with, strongly objected.

Words nearly led to blows. The French police drew their swords, Froest produced a loaded revolver. Eventually the latter "downed" his man, and searched him, when a murderous looking bowie knife was found in a secret pocket in the seam of his left trouser-leg.

"Useful sort of a toy for a man like this to have in his possession," growled the captain of the steamer, and promptly ordered him to be kept in irons during the passage over.

GENTLE HIGHWAY ROBBERY.

Strange Incident Told in a Spanish Newspaper.

About three years ago Havelock Ellis published his book, "The Soul of Spain," in which he analyzes the character of the Spanish people, and presents some strange elements. We expect to find a veneer of humanity overlying hardness and violence. In Spain it is the other way. There the criminal pulse is felt sooner than the claims of humanity are recognized. To prove this theory the author quotes an incident told in a Spanish newspaper.

As regards the Spanish peasant's attitude toward his fellow men, I found an instructive story, as recorded by a Spanish magistrate, in an Aragonese newspaper a few years ago, at a time when there was much distress in Aragon.

A laborer out of work came on to the highroad determined to rob the first person whom he should meet. That person was a man with a wagon. The laborer made him halt, and demanded his money.

"Here are thirty dollars, all that I have," the detained man replied. "There is nothing left for me but robbery; my family are dying of hunger," the aggressor said, apologetically, and proceeded to put the money in his pocket. But as he did so his mind changed.

"Take this chico," he said, handing him back twenty-nine dollars; "one is enough for me."

"Would you like anything that I have in my cart?" asked the wagoner, impressed by this generosity.

"Yes," said the man. "Take this dollar back, too. I had better have some rice and some beans."

The wagoner handed over a bag of eatables, and then held out five dollars, which, however, the laborer refused.

"Take them for luck money," said the wagoner. "I owe you that," and only so was the would-be robber persuaded to accept.

NO ROOM.

"Bertie," said the hospitable hostess at a Sunday-school treat, "won't you eat some more cookies?"

"I can't. I'm full!" sighed Bertie.

"Well, then, put some in your pockets."

"I can't. They're full, too," was the regretful answer.

A Highlander on his death-bed called in a lawyer in order to make out his will. The lawyer, after getting pen, paper, and ink, asked him to proceed. "Well," said the Highlander, "I would like to leave £2,000 to my wife, and £200 to each of my seven children, and £500 to the Church." "But," interrupted the lawyer, in surprise, "I had no idea that you were so rich, Donald." "Neither am I; in fact, I've practically nothing, only after I see they'll a' ken the good will I hae for them."

INDIGESTION RIGHTLY CURED STAYS CURED

Not by Treating the Symptoms but by Tying up the Stomach to do Nature's Work

Indigestion should not be neglected, for by depriving the body of its proper nourishment it grows steadily worse. Neither stimulating medicines, which ruin the already weak stomach by making it work beyond its strength, should be used, nor predigested foods, which do not excite a flow of the digestive fluids, and by disuse cause the stomach to grow weaker. Nowhere is the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills more clearly useful. Its principle is to enable the stomach to do its own work by building up the blood and giving tone to the nerves. When these are once more restored to their normal health indigestion disappears and the cure is permanent. In proof of these statements we give the experience of Mrs. Paul Gannon, Star City, Sask., who says: "For more than a year I suffered with all the terrible pains of indigestion, and my life was one of the greatest misery. It did not seem to make any difference whether I ate or not, the pains were always there, often accompanied by a severe bloating and a belching of wind. I did not even get relief at night, and sometimes hardly got a bit of sleep in my misery. I tried many remedies said to cure indigestion, but they did me not one particle of good and I fully expected that I would always be afflicted in this way. At this time my brother came home on a visit and he urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and got six boxes for me. By the time I had taken four boxes I began to improve and could eat with some relish. I was greatly cheered, and continued taking the Pills until all traces of the trouble had disappeared and I could once more eat all kinds of food without the smallest inconvenience. We have since used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in our family for various troubles. I am so firmly convinced of their virtue as a family medicine that I have no hesitation in recommending them to all weak, ailing people."

THE FRENCHMAN'S "CASTLE"

Another World Is the Boulevardier's Household.

Little by little the old superficial judgments are passing away, in this age of better acquaintance and of larger sympathy among nations. Laurence Jerrold, himself an Englishman, an inhabitant of "the land of homes," in "The Real France," pays tribute to the home life of Paris.

Only in Paris life sparkles like this, free from extinguishing cares, responsibilities, conventions, prejudices and commonplaces; it dazzles for months, then the amazing discovery begins—the finding of the old earth, with roots in deep custom, a Paris of rock-like consistency and iron faithfulness, a simple, straight, ordered, long-headed, and earnest Paris.

Cross some boulevardier's real threshold, but it often takes years to pass them, and the boulevard world disappears. This is another world.

Let us make the wild supposition that the foreigner, after six months, has crossed the boulevardier's threshold, it would really take him ten years to do it, and imagine his amazement.

He is now immeasurably miles from the boulevards. He is in a tiny castle, battlemented and guarded against boulevardism. The daily scandals of journalism, the hourly intrigues of politicians, the machinations of actors and critics, the frantic jealousies and elbowings of the men of letters who are getting on—that is what he called Parisian life.

In the tiny castle, papa, who is a famous journalist outdoors, lifts gently the curtain of the cot where the little crumpled-faced, black-haired baby sleeps, and looks with a great tenderness and without a shadow of the Englishman's mauve honte.

Parisianism sweeps round that tiny castle in furious gusts, but only a few filtered breaths of it are ever let in. Moralizing playwrights are perpetually discovering that the father and mother and the child are a sacred trinity. The foreigner who was trying to be "Parisian" in boulevard cafes finds across the boulevardier's threshold no more subtlety and complication than that.

It is the Frenchman's flat that is his tiny castle, and will remain the last refuge of simplicity in a complicated world.

HOGBACK TOMBSTONES.

Only a Few in England and Doctors Disagree About Meaning.

What is a hogback tombstone? Ninety-nine out of every hundred people, on being asked this question would jump to the conclusion that the answer is a very simple one and reply, "Why, a tombstone shaped like a hog's back, of course."

So far so good, says the Wide World. If one demands more ample particulars, however, even the learned are placed in a dilemma, for the hog back tombstones, which number but half a dozen or so in the whole of England, constitute one of the mysteries which archaeologists are ever attempting to solve.

More thought perhaps has been expended on the hog back at Heysham, for instance, than on any other one tombstone in Christendom; and the problem involved is by no means elucidated. J. Holme Nicholson, president of the historical section of the Archaeological Institute, thinks that the basso-relievo sculpture on this singular tombstone, which was unearthed in the Heysham churchyard near Morcambe some eighty or ninety years ago, refers to Scandinavian legends.

Basing his judgment on the researches of Mr. Calverley and Dr. Colley-March, the rude carving represents the Crack of Doom—the Powers of Evil have been let loose; war is raging between these and the gods, and Whorl, the great sea serpent who lives at the bottom of the sea and is the cause of all the tempests which the world experiences, has broken loose.

Another scientist holds that the figures represent an animal hunt, probably owing to the fact that one of the sculptured beasts is a stag. One learned gentleman imagined that he had found a clue to the meaning of the carvings in the legends of the saints in the apocryphal Gospels. The stone represented the despatch of Seth to get oil of grace for Adam when he was lying on his deathbed.

"But on hearing this a fourth savant stated that in his opinion religion had nothing whatever to do with it—the tomb was merely that on an ancient huntsman, as the hounds' heads at the ends clearly showed."

THE ONLY MEDICINE FOR THE BABY

The only medicine a mother should give her little ones is one she can give and feel absolutely safe that not the slightest harm will result—a medicine that is guaranteed strictly free from injurious drugs. Such a medicine is Baby's Own Tablets—every box is sold under such a guarantee and the mother may feel perfectly safe in giving them to even the new-born babe. Concerning them Mrs. Albert E. Wood, London, Ont., says: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets all that is claimed for them. My baby has had them from birth and will take them eagerly. I am sure there is no better medicine for little ones." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A MERITED REBUKE.

An Incident of the Late King Edward's Kindness.

The irreproachable politeness of the late King Edward VII. of England was not only individual and relative to persons; it was human and general as well. Once at Maribad his Majesty and a few friends were having tea in a restaurant in the pine woods near the town. At a table close by, states the author of "The People's King," sat another party, the host of which was a well-known German prince.

The work of attending to the guests at both tables devolved upon a young English waitress, and the king did not fail to notice the rude, blustering manner of the royal German, who threatened to report the terrified girl every time she had occasion to answer his summons. Annoyed by this most unjustifiable behavior, the King said to Sir Stanley Clarke:

"You are to convey my thanks to the proprietor for the prompt and admirable manner in which my party has been served at this restaurant."

The command was instantly obeyed, much to the disgust of the adjoining table, a disgust which was intensified when the King gave the timid young waitress a gold

ONE MORE OF THE PIONEER WOMEN

TELLS HER SUFFERING SISTERS TO FIND RELIEF IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Mrs. Forrester had Rheumatism and other Kidney Diseases for two years, but Dodd's Kidney Pills made her well.

Dinsmore, Sask., May 22 (Special).—One more of the pioneer women of Saskatchewan, relieved of pain and suffering by Dodd's Kidney Pills, has given her statement for publication in order that other suffering women may profit by her experience. This time it is Mrs. John Forrester, well known and highly respected in this neighborhood.

"My trouble started from a severe cold," Mrs. Forrester states. "My sleep was broken and unfreshing. I perspired freely at the slightest exertion. I had pains in my back and Rheumatism developed, from which I suffered for two years."

"I do not need to tell you that I was far from being a well woman when I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. But now I am thankful to say my troubles are gone. I recommend all suffering women to use Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Suffering women can learn from the experience of others that the one sure way to health is to cure their kidneys, and Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure the kidneys.

VALUABLE DISCOVERIES.

Happy Thoughts That Made Some Men Rich.

Many a fortune has been made by some sudden "happy thought" or discovery.

A fallen leaf was the first cause of a fortunate investment. The father of the Hon. James Duns-muir was a miner on Vancouver Island. One day he was wandering through the woods, when his eye was attracted by a pretty leaf shining in the sunlight. He stooped to pick it up, when his hand uncovered a part of the ground and revealed a seam of coal. Mr. Duns-muir said nothing, but set to work to obtain capital to buy the land and exploit it. Fortune came to him swiftly, for the ground was a rich mine of coal. He built the only railway on Vancouver Island and died a millionaire. All through a leaf, in the first place!

Thirty years ago a young Post Office clerk named Thomas gave all his evening leisure to experiments. At last he found out how to make steel by a process in which phosphorus could be got rid of in the course of manufacture. It was an epoch making discovery, which made phosphoric ores available for the manufacture of steel all over the world.

The guests at a ball given at the Tuileries, Paris, were once distressed by something in the air which irritated everybody. The most famous chemist of the day was consulted as to the mysterious cause. His son-in-law, Dumas, had the happy thought that perhaps the irritating particles in the air came from the wax candles. He found on analysis that these candles had been bleached by chlorine. Immediately they were lighted a compound was added to the air that irritated throat and noses. This chance discovery led Dumas to study the whole effect of chlorine, with far-reaching results in chemistry.

The Oil for the Athlete.—In rubbing down, the athlete can find nothing finer than Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. It renders the muscles and sinews pliable, takes the soreness out of them and strengthens them for strains that may be put upon them. It stands pre-eminent for this purpose, and athletes who for years have been using it can testify to its value as a lubricant.

Maud—"How pretty and careless Mabel's hair always looks." Gertrude—"Yes, and it takes her two hours to make it look that way."

"Six feet in his boots!" exclaimed old Mr. Flatiron, who was reading about a man's height. "Nonsense! Why, they might as well tell me that the man has six heads in his hat."

Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator will drive worms from the system without injury to the child, because its action, while fully effective, is mild.

TRUTH BEFORE ALL.

There are occasional doubts in the minds of the elders of the Morse family as to the quickness of Bobby's wits, but there has never been any doubt that a lesson once learned by him, however slowly, is for ever afterwards remembered.

"Won't you shake hands with me, Bobby?" asked one of his sister's admirers, but Bobby hung back.

"I don't care to," he said, with terrible distinctness.

"Don't you like me?" asked the unwisest visitor.

"No, I don't," replied Bobby, and then there was a shocked chorus from the family.

"Bobby," said his aunt, reproachfully, as she withdrew him from the public gaze, "why did you say such a rude thing to Mr. Brown?"

"Because, aunty," said her wriggling charge, "I got spanked last week for not telling the truth, and I shan't never take any risks again."

NOT A CONTORTIONIST.

A certain merchant died, leaving to his only son the conduct of his extensive business, and great doubt was expressed in some quarters whether the young man possessed the ability to carry out the father's policies.

"Well," said one kindly-disposed friend, "for my part I think Henry is very bright and capable. I'm sure he will succeed."

"Perhaps you're right," said another friend. "Henry is undoubtedly a clever fellow, but, take it from me, old man, he hasn't got the head to fill his father's shoes."

ZAM-BUK HEALED BABY'S SORES.

Mrs. C. Parry, of 479 Seigneurs St., Montreal, writes: "I cannot tell you how thankful I am for the cure Zam-Buk has worked in the case of my baby son. He was troubled with scalp disease and I tried everything I could think of, but in vain. Finally I tried Zam-Buk. I could see an improvement after two applications! After persevering with the Zam-Buk treatment he is now completely cured. Zam-Buk is certainly a wonderful balm, and I shall always keep it on hand."

Mothers should use Zam-Buk for all children's skin sores, ringworm, scalp sores, cuts, chafings, bruises, etc., because of its great purity. Also cures piles, eczema, bad leg, varicose sores, etc. 50c. box, all druggists and stores.

Zam-Buk Soap, 25c. tablet, is best for baby's bath and for delicate skins.

"You don't make very good music with that instrument," said the innocent bystander to the man behind the bass drum, as the band ceased to play. "No," admitted the drum pounder, "but I drown a heap of bad."

A Pleasant Purgative.—Pamel-lee's Vegetable Pills are so compounded as to operate on both the stomach and the bowels, so that they act along the whole alimentary and excretory passage. They are not drastic in their work, but mildly purgative, and the pleasure of taking them is only equalled by the gratifying effect they produce. Compounded only of vegetable substances the curative qualities of which were fully tested, they afford relief without chance of injury.

EXCEPTIONS.

Seymour—"Does your wife always do the carving at dinner?" Ashley—"No; not when we have hash."

"I think it's wrong for a married man to gamble." "It's worse than wrong—it's idiotic. His wife gives him fits if he loses, and confiscates the proceeds if he wins."

"Are you a friend of the groom's family?" asked the usher at the church wedding.

"I think not," replied the lady addressed, "I'm the mother of the bride."

A Thorough Pill.—To clear the stomach and bowels of impurities and irritants is necessary when their action is irregular. The pills that will do this work thoroughly are Pamel-lee's Vegetable Pills, which are mild in action but mighty in results. They purge painlessly and effectively, and work a permanent cure. They can be used without fear by the most delicately constituted, as there are no painful effects preceding their gentle operation.

"I have a great joke on my wife," said William. "I think she must be getting a bit near-sighted. She was out for ten minutes this morning, calling to the scarecrow to come to breakfast. What do you think of that?" "Well, if I were you," said Henry, "I'd either get a new suit of clothes or a younger wife."

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Gentlemen,—In January last, Francis Leclaire, one of the men employed by me, working in the lumber woods, had a tree fall on him, crushing him fearfully. He was, when found, placed on a sled and taken home, where grave fears were entertained for his recovery, his hips being badly bruised and his body turned black from his ribs to his feet. We used MINARD'S LINIMENT on him, freely to deaden the pain and with the use of three bottles he was completely cured and able to return to his work.

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints, who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, the medicine that never fails to effect a cure. Those who have used it say it acts promptly, and thoroughly subdues the pain and disease.

JONES' NIGHT OUT.

Jones "dined out" with an old acquaintance the other evening. "Don't wait up for me, dear," he said to his wife. "I may be rather late, but it can't be helped." At breakfast next morning he was stonily silent, so was the breakfast-room clock.

"Maria, dear, there must be something wrong with the clock. I am sure I wound it up last night," he ventured at last.

"No," answered his wife. "You wound up Freddy's musical-box instead, and it played 'Home, Sweet Home' till three in the morning, and the hall clock has stopped."

"So you want to marry my daughter; what are your prospects?" "That is for you to say, sir; I am not a mind reader."

Men and Horses Routed

Swarm of Bees Got Busy at Ogdensburg

A battle royal was fought on lower Greene street this morning between a colony of bees on the one side and several men and a team of horses on the other, says Thursday's Ogdensburg Journal. The men and horses were put to rout and the bees were left in full possession of the field. The bees are the property of Herbert Harder and were being taken from his residence to a place on Linden street in the outskirts of the city by William Houston and another named Charlton, employees of C. C. Wright, the liveryman. There were 40 swarms and the jolting of the wagon loosened the hives so that the bees were liberated and they charged on the two men and the horses. The horses became maddened with pain as the bees sank their stingers into them and Houston, who was driving, quickly lost control of the animals. He guided the team into a tree, bringing them to a stop, and with the aid of men who came to the rescue managed to unharness the horses and take them away from the scene in a hurry, leaving the bees behind in full possession of the wagon. Both Houston and Charlton were stung in many places on the face and arms. Charlton suffered more than did his companion. One of his eyes was partially closed by a bee and things became so hot that he took to his heels and got away from there. Houston had contracted poisoning in his face a day or two before and had bathed his face with a preparation. This stood him in good stead in his battle with the bees.

Rules of Woman of 97 to Live to be 100

Brocton, Mass., May 30.—Here are the rules by which Mrs. Mary M. Scriggens, who celebrated her ninety-seventh birthday to-day, says she expects to live to be one hundred:

Lots of regular hard work—fifteen hours a day is not too much.

Abstain from idle gossiping about your neighbors.

Never flirt, for it is a useless waste of energy.

Most emphatically do not read novels, for it destroys the disposition. Women get wrinkles worrying over the troubles of the heroes.

If you have vanity of dress destroy it. The young women of to day who are binding up their limbs with hobble skirts, are shortening their lives.

Keep away from dances and moving pictures.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address:

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo Ohio.

Sold by druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

New Regulations Approved by the Lieutenant-Governor on May 4th, 1911, Regarding Sanitary Precautions and Pure Water.

The following new regulations concerning sanitary precautions at health resorts and pure drinking water in public places have been enacted:

Sanitary Precautions.

Regulation 1. No garbage, excreta, manure, vegetable or animal matter or filth shall be deposited on or in any of the lakes, rivers, or streams, or other inland waters of the Province of Ontario.

2. Residents of health resorts and summer resorts are hereby required to so dispose of their garbage, manure, vegetable or animal matter or filth that such shall not create a nuisance or gain entrance to or pollute any lake, river, stream or other inland water of the Province.

3. The owners and officers of boats and other vessels plying upon any lake, river, stream or other inland water of the Province are hereby required to so dispose of the garbage, excreta, manure, vegetable or animal matter or filth upon such boats or vessels that such shall not create a nuisance or gain entrance to or pollute such inland waters.

4. Any contravention of the

RAGING HEADACHE STOPPED AT ONCE

When He Took "Fruit-a-tives"

SHANLY, ONT., Sept. 23rd, 1910. "You certainly have the Greatest discovered Headache Cure in the world. Before 'Fruit-a-tives' came before the public, I suffered tortures from Headaches caused by Stomach Disorders. "One of your travellers called on me when I had one of my raging headaches and had my head almost raw from external applications. "I hated to see any person coming into the store (much less a commercial traveller) and I told him very curtly that I had a headache but he insisted on my trying 'Fruit-a-tives'."

"I did so, with what I would call amazing results. They completely cured me and since then (nearly six years ago) it is only necessary for me to take one occasionally to preserve me in my present good health. I was 65 years old yesterday and have been a general store keeper at the above address for twenty-five years."

WM. PITT

As Mr. Pitt says "Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest headache cure in the world. Dealers everywhere have "Fruit-a-tives" at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50 or trial size, 25c. or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

foregoing regulations shall be subject to the penalties provided by the Public Health Act in respect thereto.

Pure Drinking Water.

Regulation 1. Hotels, restaurants, railway trains and depots, boats, and all other public places which provide a supply of drinking water for the use of the public shall at all times be required to provide that such drinking water shall be pure and wholesome.

2. Any contravention of the foregoing regulation shall be subject to the penalties provided by the Public Health Act in respect thereto.

National Drug to Sell 3,700 Shares More

The annual meeting of the shareholders of the National Drug & Chemical Co. was held recently. The financial statement for the last business year was the best so far presented to the shareholders. The most interesting reports were from the National Drug and Chemical departments of the business. The former was established only eighteen months ago, and the manner in which the drug trade and the general public have supported the products of this department has decided the directors to spend large sums of money in still further advertising this important line of medicinal and toilet preparations.

In order to continue the development of this department, and to keep pace with the progress of the country by the opening of new branches, especially in the West, the directors have decided to dispose of 3,700 shares of the 7 per cent. cumulative preference stock of the company at par. A large proportion of these shares have been taken up by the directors.

CHANGES IN C.N.R. STAFF.

Mr. Guy Tombs Has Jurisdiction Extended to Cover All Lines Throughout Canada.

Concurrent with the removal last week of the Canadian Northern offices from the Imperial Bank building, Montreal, to the building recently purchased by the company, at the corner of St. James and Dollard streets, the following consolidations and changes in the local staff are announced:

The jurisdiction of Mr. Guy Tombs, the general freight and passenger agent, has been extended to cover all the Canadian Northern lines, instead of only the eastern lines; Mr. F. A. Shaw, formerly commercial agent of the western lines, becomes district freight agent at Montreal; Mr. William Dixon, formerly soliciting freight agent, becomes city freight agent, with Messrs. J. J. McKeown and R. W. Johnston, as soliciting freight agents; Mr. C. A. Langevin, formerly excursion clerk of the Canadian Northern Quebec Railway, becomes travelling passenger agent; Mr. S. E. Leger, formerly soliciting agent of the C.N.Q., becomes travelling freight agent.

The company's building on St. James street has been completely renovated, and the interior rebuilt. The ground floor has been laid out into what is claimed to be the finest ticket office in the city. The fittings are in quartered oak. The freight office, with an entrance on Dollard street, will also be on the ground floor, as well as the Canadian Northern Express office, which was formerly on Victoria Square.

A portion of the first floor has been divided into well-furnished offices for the executive and general manager, and the balance of the floor will be used by the traffic department.

The second floor has been rented, while the top floor will be occupied by the Canadian Northern Land Department.

Mr. Guy Tombs, who is well known here, is recognized by the railway world as one of the ablest men in the business.
