Miss Eleanor Wickware, of Moose Jaw, Sask., in writing to The Leader under date of Nov. 18th, among other things, says :—"We have had no winter weather nor snow here as yet, the thermometer never going below 25 degrees, and the sun shines continually. In fact we have had almost two months of that mysterious weather named Indian summer. I also trust that Morrisburg is favored in like manner."

Miss Lottie L. Tillotson, of Hawaii, will give one of her elocutionary and lecture entertainments in the lecture-room of Knox church on Thursday, Dec. 5th, at 8 o'clock p. m. She comes with recommendations from Hawaii, Central America, Old Mexico, Alaska and Japan, as well as the large cities throughout the United States and Canada. This will be a rare treat for the citizens of this locality. Admission 25 cents.

The heavy fall of snow on Sunday and Monday night proved too much for the old skating rink, as about 5.30 Monday evening the whole east half of the building which has been the scene of many a hotly-contested hockey match collapsed with suddenness, not a vestige of that half remaining. Fortunately no one was in or near the building at the time. Mr Harry Lamble, who was to have run it this season, had been in about an hour previous, however. This historic old rink was one of the first of its kind erected in these parts, having been put up in 1894. In 1896 and 1897, when Morrisburg had one of the swiftest hockey teams in the country, it housed many big crowds.

As the barge Brighton was passing through the locks here on Saturday, a deckhand named Hynes, from the Province of Quebec, collapsed at the snubbing post. He was conveyed to Dr. Chamberlain's Sanitarium, where he fully recovered and was able to leave for home on Tuesday.

Several changes have taken place in the staff of the Molsons Bank here, during the past few days. Mr. R. L. Ellerton, for the past year or more teller, has resigned, and J. H. French, junior clerk, has been shifted to Knowlton, Que. Mr. G. S. Smith, of Simcoe, and W. A. Fennell, of Knowlton, are new members of the staff.

Rev. Father Keeley, who has been curate of St. Mary's church here, for the past two years, has been transferred to Belleville, and will be succeeded here by Rev Father Meehan, of Belleville. After high mass on Sunday morning last, which was celebrated by Father Keeley, a number of his friends presented him with an address, which was read by Mr. J. P. Gormely, and at the proper time Mr. J. D. McDonald tendered him a purse. Father Keeley left on Monday for his new field of labor.

Moose Jaw, Sask., held a musical festival recently, and among those who took prizes in junior piano playing, we notice the name of little Esma Rose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs James Rose, former well-known residents of this town. Concerning the work of Esma, the Moose Jaw evening Times of Nov. 14, says :—"A special word of praise must be given to the little girl, in the junior class, for the pianoforte, who played Godard's Valse in B flat with an intelligence that was most pleasing. She was not note perfect, but she was far above her fellow competitors in her reading of the composition."

The following taken from Friday's Montreal Star, refers to a grandson of the late Thomas McDonald :—"The marriage of Miss Grace M. Giblin, daughter of the late Michael Giblin and of Mrs. Giblin, to Mr. Henry McD. G. Bellew, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Bellew, of 2295 Hutchison St., Montreal, was celebrated Friday at St. Michael's church, Rev. Dr. Luke Callaghan officiating. Prof. J. J. Shea presided at the organ, and the singing included the solos "O Salutaris," "Ava Maria," and a selection by Miss Fanny Stafford. The bride wore a smart traveling suite of old gold and brown, and black picture hat with ostrich feathers, and carried a bouquet of lillies of the valley. She was given away by her brother, and attended by her sister, Miss Winnie Giblin. The best man was Mr. Benedict C. Bellew. After the ceremony breakfast was served at the residence of the bride's mother, 1827 Mance street, and later Mr. and Mrs. Bellew left for a western trip. On their return they will reside at 1828 Mance street." The happy couple arrived here yesterday afternoon to spend a few days with the groom's aunts and uncle.

25 doz. Hem-stitched Handkerchiefs, regular 5c. each, at 30c. per doz. D. C. Bush.

Elison Dennison of Archer, and George Casselman, of Nudell Bush, returned on Friday last from Regina, Sask.

You can save at least $10 by coming to us for a Ladies' Fur-lined Coat or a Man's Coon Coat. D. C. Bush.

A deckhand named Samuel Govendo, of the steamer Fred Mercur, was crushed to death in the Cornwall canal on Saturday morning. His remains were conveyed to Ogdensburg and the funeral took place on Sunday, interment being in the Jewish cemetery.

Nearly all the big steel boats have made their last trips east, and on their return west navigation will practically end for this season.

Sunday morning witnessed the first real shipment of the "beautiful" from Old King Boreas, and it continued all day and well into Monday, the earth being cloaked in fully one foot of it before it ceased. This has proven the biggest fall of snow in November for many years. The trees and wires presented a beautiful appearance with their heavy mantle of the sparkling white stuff, but it played havoc with many owing to its weight. It will doubtless prove harmful to young orchards.

Ray Cutley, a Massena High School student, died at the Ogdensburg City Hospital on Monday, following several operations he underwent for an accident to him in a football match this fall between Malone and Massena, at the latter place. He was 24 years of age, the son of Mr and Mrs John Cutley, residing near Massena During his lifetime he had suffered several accidents, at one time suffering a severe scalp wound when thrown from a horse, and at another time losing the sight of an eye while coasting.

Ogdensburg News — While visiting his brother, Albert S. Carter, who is critically ill at Brier Hill, Henry Carter dropped dead Sunday evening. Mr Carter was in excellent health when he left this city and the news of his sudden and unexpected death came as a great shock to his relatives and friends here. He was a well known and highly esteemed resident of this town and sailed between this city and Waddington as a marine engineer on the steamer Orizaba for many years. Surviving are his wife and son Myron, of this city. The funeral and interment took place Tuesday at Brier Hill, where Mr Carter formerly lived.

The Grand Trunk Railway System have just issued a very neat, attractive and convincing booklet on the "Chateau Laurier," Ottawa. It is printed on India tinted coated paper in colors, and profusely illustrated with pictures made from direct photographs of the several charming rooms in this beautiful hotel. Each page is decorated with allegorical designs symbolizing the Chateau styles of the early French monarchs. The cover is printed on a hand-made paper and the descriptive matter is confined to a brief synopsis of the attractive features of this hotel. Copies of the booklet may be had from Grand Trunk representatives for the asking.

In the recent elections in South Dakota, Mr. Donald McLean, a former resident of these counties, was elected a Senator for the 34th district by a majority of 684 over his Democratic opponent. A paper published in S. D. describes Mr. McLean as follows :—"As a gentleman of education, and as a student of public affairs, will be a valuable man in the State Senate. Being a trained public speaker he will be in position to take part in the discussion of matters as they come up in the legislature and being a man of sound principles and good judgment he will do credit to the strongest Republican county in South Dakota. By occupation Mr. McLean is a farmer and will be a true representative of the most important industry in this state."

C. S. COLQUHOUN

REV. THOMAS McAMMOND.

The subject of this notice was born near the city of Ottawa, the 31st day of March, 1837. As a boy, he worked on his father's farm, and while thus engaged, came under the influence of a Christian neighbor, Mr. James Caldwell, of sainted memory. In his nineteenth year, while attending school in Ottawa, he was brought under conviction at a meeting held by the Rev. Ambrose Hunt, which resulted in his conversion and his call to the ministry. During the following four or five years he prepared himself by education, for his life-work. In the year 1861 he entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal church, and was sent to Elgin as his first charge. The following year he attended Albert College, Belleville. In the year 1863 he was united in marriage to Ann Jane, eldest daughter of Mr. Robert Hare, of Nepeau Township, near Ottawa. His next appointment was Hinchinbrook, one of the outlying missions north of the city of Kingston, where his talent for evangelism clearly manifested itself. At one appointment where he began special services, he had only one member who would pray in public, and yet for six weeks the meetings continued without flagging, till finally the break came by sinners falling off their seats under the power of God and the burden of the conviction of sin. His splendid physique, his powerful voice and his rare gift of song were all effective agencies in the glorious work. On being sent to Eganville, his practical ability as a workman showed itself in the erection of his own log parsonage, which still stands, and is known as McAmmond's Corner, near the village of Eganville. Here again he witnessed another gracious revival, and among his helpers were such men as Lett and Peevar, fathers of some of our ministers. His next move was to The Garden of Eden, of which, in those days, the Rev. John Andrews said that "if the Garden of Eden which we read of in the Bible, was anything like the Garden of Eden in which we live, he did not blame Adam for eating anything he could lay his hands on." Nevertheless Mr. McAmmond found plenty to eat, and had another big revival. After this he travelled the following circuits:—Canington, Iroquois, Brockville, Chesterville, Tweed, Prescott, Easton's Corners, Elgin, North Augusta, Winchester Springs, Cardinal, South Mountain, Brinston's Corners, Avonmore. This was his last charge, where, owing to ill health, he was obliged to seek a superannuation relation to the conference, after which he settled in Morrisburg, where he has lived for about nine years, during which time he has rendered effective service to the church, by preaching for his brethren,,supplying vacancies, and assisting in evangelistic work, which continued to be the supreme delight of his life. That God highly honored his work in this direction is evidenced by the fact that, on almost every circuit he labored, he could report a large increase in membership, and also in the benevolence of the church. Of him it may be truly said: "He was a good man," and his experience of perfect love, which he so faithfully urged upon others, he enjoyed himself with increasing delight to the very end. His last years were spent happily in the midst of his friends.

During the Summer School at Point Iroquois, this last summer, he was suddenly attacked with heart trouble, which it was feared would prove fatal, but recovering from this, he was in his usual state of health till about three weeks ago, when the trouble returned, and soon pneumonia developed. Despite the best of efforts, and surrounded by all of his children, he passed triumphantly away on Saturday, Nov. 23rd, leaving to mourn his loss a family of five children and a beloved and faithful wife.

The funeral services were held in the Methodist church on Tuesday, at 2 o'clock, conducted by the Rev. W. R. Young, D.D., President of the Montreal Conference, assisted by his own pastor, Rev. A. J. H. Strike, also Rev. Wm. Philp, chairman of the district, and two ex-pastors, Rev. Dr. Mavety, and Rev. Wm. Taimberlake, both of Ottawa. Dr. Davy sang one of his favorite hymns, "Heaven is My Home." The bearers were Revs. A. E. Runnells, George Stafford, and W. A. Hanna, and his nephews, Fred Bell, Wm. Hare, both of Ottawa, and his son-in-law, I. Hilliard, K.C.

Dr. J. J. Hare, President of the Ontario Ladies' College, Whitby, brother of Mrs. McAmmond, and S. W. Hare, wife and daughter, of Ottawa, were also present at the service. A large congregation was present, which showed the deep respect in which the deceased was held by the community. Letters of sympathy from all over the country are pouring in to comfort the bereaved wife and family.

THE LATE HARRY BRODER.

When the announcement was made from the pulpits of some of the churches of the town on Sunday morning last that Harry Broder had succumbed that morning to the serious injuries he received at Cobourg, on the Monday previous, while in the discharge of his duties as electrician at the Provincial Steel Works, never having regained consciousness, it cast a gloom over all.

Harry Broder was the eldest son of Andrew Broder, the stalwart member of Parliament from Dundas, and was born in Winchester on June 1st, 1885, being therefore in his 28th year. He came here with his parents in 1892, where he made friends of all with whom he came in contact. He received his education at the public school and Collegiate Institute here, and early developed a tendency for the study of electricity, and was a great reader on this subject, his library containing books from the best authors on electricity. The result of this study was that he became an expert electrician, and had held some good positions, the latest being with the Provincial Steel Works at Cobourg. He was slated, had not the sad accident occurred, to have been placed in charge of the Seymour Co.'s large plant on the Trent Rivec, this week. During the short time he was a resident of Cobourg, he made many lasting friends, as was testified by the innumerable enquiries over the phone as to his condition during the strenuous hours at the hospital, and the large number of floral offerings from that place.

Harry, while at home here, was ever in demand by the music-loving people of town, as he was a sweet violin player, and the Epworth League of the Methodist church will especially miss him.

The bereaved father, two brothers, Fred, at home, and Will, of Montreal, and sister, Carrie, of St. Catharines, have the sympathy of the entire community in their hour of sorrow.

Mr. Broder received sympathetic telegrams from Premier and Mrs. Borden, Hon. T. W. White, Hon. Frank Cochrane, Hon. J. D. Reid, Hon. A. E. Kemp, Col. Sam Hughes, and several letters from other members of Parliament. At the funerall which was held Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, in the Methodist church, the Dominion Government was represented by the following colleagues of Mr. Broder:—E. A. Lancaster, M. P. for Lincoln; C. J. Thornton, M.P. for Durham; Mr. Wright, M.P. for Muskoka, and Mr. Munson, M.P. for West Northumberland.

The funeral service at the house was simple, consisting of prayer by Rev. Mr. Philp, B.A., chairman of the district. At the church, which was crowded with friends anxious to pay tribute to the departed, the service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. A. J. H. Strike, assisted by Rev. Hugh Cameron, who led in prayer, and Rev. Mr. Philp, who read the scripture. Dr. Will C. Davy rendered the solo "Crossing the Bar," very appropriately.

Rev. Mr. Strike took his text from St. John xiv., 1-4: "In my Father's house are many mansions," etc. His address was along the line of preparation for that certain event in life—death. His remarks regarding the beloved departed young man were comforting to those who most keenly felt his loss. The young people were especially entreated to present themselves as living sacrifices to the service of God.

The remains were placed in the vault. The pallbearers were the deceased's two brothers, Fred and William Broder, his cousin, Fred H. Broder, and Messrs. Broder Robertson, A. Sweet and O. F. Allison.

Mr. Broder states that words cannot express his heartfelt thanks for the many acts of kindness of the citizens of Cobourg, and especially to Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Allison and the heads of the firm where Harry was employed, a representative of that institution being in attendance at the funeral.

Among those from out of town at the funeral, in addition to the members, The Leader noticed G. H. Broder, of St. Catharines, and son, William, of Champlain, N.Y.; Mrs. James Cowan, Winchester; Dr. Reddick, Mr. A. Sweet, Mr. John Ault, Winchester; Mr. Ezra Countryman and wife, of Morewood, and daughter, of Cornwall.

KILLED IN THE WEST

Jesse Pruner, Son of Matthew Pruner, Formerly of This Town, Run Over by a Car at Hancock, Mich., and Dies From the Accident.

The Daily Mining Gazette of Nov. 14th, published at Houghton, Mich., contains an account of an accident to Jesse Pruner, son of Nathan Pruner, of Hancock, Mich., a former well-known resident of the East Front. He fell between two freight cars and had both legs severed, from the effects of which he died two hours later. The accident occurred shortly after midnight, after he had gone home to his midnight lunch and had said good-bye to his family, little realizing that it was his last farewell to his wife and four small children. The paper states that he was one of the most popular employees of the Portage Lake district, he being a switchman. He was a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and was 26 years of age last January, and is survived by his wife and four young sons, aged five, three, two, and a baby less than a year old. He is also survived by his aged parents. The young man was an only son, and the blow to the aged parents is as hard as it is to the widow and children.

The funeral took place on Sunday, Nov. 17th, and was attended by the Railway Trainmen, there being over 100 men in line. A special train was run from Calumet to Hancock for the accommodation of the members of that order.

Eastern Ontario District Dairy Meetings

The annual District Dairy Meeting for the County of Dundas will be held in the village of Williamsburg on Tuesday, December 3rd, 1912, at two o'clock p. m., under the auspices of the Provincial Department of Agriculture and the Dairymen's Association of Eastern Ontario.

Mr Henry Glendenning, Manilla, and Mr G. G. Publow, Kingston, Chief Dairy Instructor for Eastern Ontario, will be present and address the meeting.

Messrs C. W. Norval, of Williamsburg, and T. J. Ellis, of Chesterville, District Dairy Instructors, will be present and report upon their work during the season.

Mr J. A. Campbell, Director for the District, will occupy the chair.

At the close of the meeting a Director will be nominated to represent the District for the ensuing year.

The great value of this meeting to the Dairy Farmer cannot be over-estimated, and every farmer and farmer's son, who has the interest of his calling at heart, as well as its monetary success, should not fail to be present.

ONLY A MONTH;

OR, A CURIOUS MYSTERY EXPLAINED.

Poor Frithiof was far too much stunned to be able to feel any gratitude for this. Mr. Horner, however, left him no time to reply.

"I think you have taken leave of your senses, Boniface," he said vehemently. "Save yourself the annoyance of prosecuting, if you like; but it is grossly unfair to the rest of your employees to keep a thief in your house. If there is one thing noticeable in all successful concerns it is that uncompromising severity is shown to even trifling errors, even to carelessness."

"My business has hitherto been successful," said Mr. Boniface, quietly, "and I have never gone on that principle, and never will. Why are we to have a law of mercy and rigidly to exclude it from every-day life? But that is the way of the world. It manages, while calling itself Christian, to shirk most of Christ's commands."

"I tell you," said Mr. Horner, who was now in a towering passion, "that it is utterly against the very rules of religion. The fellow is not repentant; he persists in sticking to a lie, and yet you weakly forgive him."

"If," said Mr. Bonifare, quietly, "you knew a little more of Frithiof Falck you would know that it is quite impossible that he could consciously have taken the money. When he took it he was not himself. If he had wanted to hide it—to steal it—why did he actually return to the shop with it in his possession? He might easily have disposed of it while he was out."

"If that is your ground, then I object to having a man on my premises who is afflicted with kleptomania. But it is not so. The fellow is as long-headed and quick-witted as any one I know; he has managed to hoodwink you, but from the first I saw through him, and knew him to be a designing—"

"Sir," broke in Frithiof, turning to Mr. Boniface, "this is more than I can endure. For God's sake call back the detective, examine further into this mystery; there must be some explanation!"

"How can any man examine further?" said Mr. Boniface, sadly. "The note is missed, and is actually found upon you. The only possible explanation is that you were not yourself when you took it."

"Then the least you can do is to dismiss him," resumed Mr. Horner. But Mr. Boniface interrupted him very sharply.

"You will please remember, James, that you are in no way concerned with the engagement or dismissal of those employed in this house. That is entirely my affair, as is set forth in our deed of partnership."

"Which partnership will need renewing in another six months," said Mr. Horner, growing red with anger. "And I give you fair warning that if this dishonest fellow is kept on I shall then withdraw my capital and retire from the business."

With this Parthian shot he went out, banging the door behind him.

Frithiof had borne in silence all the taunts and insults showered on him. "Sir," he said, trying in vain to govern his voice, "you have been very good to me; but it will be best that I should go."

"I would not have you leave for the world," said Mr. Boniface. "Remember that your sisters are dependent on you. You must think first of them."

"No," said Frithiof, firmly; "I must first think of what I owe to you. It would be intolerable to me to feel that I had really brought any loss on you through Mr. Horner's anger. I must go."

"Nonsense," said Mr. Boniface; "I can not hear of such a thing. Why, how do you think you would get another situation with this mystery still hanging over you? I, who know you so well, am convinced of your perfect freedom from blame; but strangers could not possibly be convinced of it."

Frithiof was silent; he thought of Sigrid and Swanhild suffering through his trouble, he remembered his terrible search for work when he had first come to London, and he realized that it was chiefly his own pride that prompted him never to return to the shop.

"If you are indeed willing that I should stay," he said at length, "then I will stay. But your theory—the theory that makes you willing still to trust me—is mistaken. I know that there is not a minute in this day when my head has not been perfectly clear."

"My dear fellow, you must allow me to keep what theory I please. There is no other explanation than this, and you would be wisest if you accepted it yourself."

"That is impossible," said Frithiof, sadly.

"It is equally impossible that I can doubt the evidence of my own senses. The note was there, and you can't possibly explain its presence. How is it possible that Darnell could have crossed over to your till, taken out the note and pinned it in your pocket? Besides, what motive could he have for doing such a thing?"

"I don't know," said Frithiof; "yet I shall swear to my dying day that I never did it myself."

"Well, there is no use in arguing the point," said Robert Boniface, wearily. "It is enough for me that I can account to myself for what must otherwise be an extraordinary mystery. You had better go back to your work now, and do not worry over the affair. Remember that I do not hold you responsible for what has happened."

After this, of course nothing more could be said.

CHAPTER XXV.

As he walked down the sort of avenue of pianos and harmoniums in the inner shop, there came to his mind, why, he could not have told, words spoken to him long before by that customer who had left on his mind so lasting an impression, "Courage! the worst will pass." Though he could not exactly believe the words, yet he clung to them with a sort of desperation. Also he happened to notice the clock, and practically adopted Sydney Smith's wise maxim, "Take short views."

None of them said good-night to him when he left for home; they were not intentionally unkind, but they were awkward, and they felt that the strange affair of the afternoon had made a great gulf between them and the culprit. Very slowly he walked through the noisy streets, very reluctantly crossed the great court-yard, and mounted flight after flight of stairs. At the threshold he hesitated, wondering whether it would be possible to shield them from the knowledge. He could hear Sigrid singing in the kitchen as she prepared the supper, and something told him that it would be impossible to conceal his trouble from her. With a sigh he opened the door into the sitting room; it looked very bright and cheerful; Swanhild stood at the open window watering the flowers in the window-box, red and white geraniums and southern wood, grown from cuttings given by Cecil. She gave him her usual merry greeting.

"Come and look at my garden, Frithiof," she said. "Doesn't it look lovely?"

"Why, you are late," said Sigrid, coming in with the cocoa, her face a little flushed with the fire, which was trying on that summer day. Then, glancing at him, "How tired you look! Come, sit down and eat. I have got a German sausage that even Herr Siverstsen would not grumble at. The heat has tired you, and you will feel better after you have had something."

He eat obediently, though the food almost choked him; Swanhild, fancying that he had one of his bad headaches, grew quiet, and afterward was not surprised to find that he did not as usual get out his writing materials, but asked Sigrid to go out with him for a turn.

"You are too tired to try the translating?" she asked.

"Yes, I'll try it later," he said; "but let us have half an hours' walk together now."

She consented at once, and went to put on her hat, well knowing that Frithiof never shirked his work without good reason; then leaving strict orders with Swanhild not to sit up after nine, they left her absorbed in English history, and went down into the cool clear twilight. Some children were playing quietly in the court-yard; Sigrid stopped for a minute to speak to one of them.

"Is your father better this evening?" she asked.

"Yes, miss, and he's a-goin' back to work to-morrow," replied the child, lifting a beaming face to the friendly Norwegian lady.

"I should have thought you had troubles enough of your own," he said, moodily, "without bothering yourself with other people's."

"But since our own troubles I have somehow cared more about them; I don't feel afraid as I used to do of sick people, and people who have lost those belonging to them. I want always to get nearer to them."

"Sigrid," he said, desperately, "can you bear a fresh trouble for yourself? I have bad news for you to-night."

"Roy?" she asked, breathlessly, her mind instinctively turning first to fears for his safety.

"Oh, no! Roy is still at Paris. They heard to-day that he could not be back in time for the concert. It is I who have brought this trouble on you. Though how it came about God only knows. Listen, and I'll tell you exactly how everything happened."

By this time they had reached one of the parks, and they sat down on a bench under the shade of a great elm-tree. Then very quietly and minutely he told exactly what had passed that afternoon.

"I am glad," she exclaimed when he paused, "that Mr. Boniface was so kind. And yet, how can he think that of you?"

"You do not think it, then?" he asked, looking her full in the face.

"What! think that you took it in absence of mind? Think that it would be possible for you deliberately to take it out of the till and pin it in your own pocket! Why, of course not! In actual delirium, I suppose, a man might do anything, but you are as strong and well as any one else. Of course, you had nothing whatever to do with it, either consciously or unconsciously."

"Yet the thing was somehow there, and the logical inference is, that I must have put it there," he said.

"I don't care a fig for logical inference!" she cried. "All I know is that you had nothing whatever to do with it. If I had to die for maintaining that, I would say it with my last breath."

He caught her hand in his, and held it fast.

"If you still believe in me the worst is over," he said. "With the rest of the world, of course, my character is gone, but there is no help for that."

"But there must be help," said Sigrid. "Some one else must be guilty. The other man in the shop must certainly have put it there."

"For what purpose?" said Frithiof, sadly. "Besides, how could he have done it without my knowledge?"

"I don't know," said Sigrid, beginning to perceive the difficulties of the case. "What sort of a man is he?"

"I used to dislike him at first, and he naturally disliked me because I was a foreigner. But latterly we have got on well enough. He is a very decent sort of fellow, and I don't for a moment believe that he would steal."

"One of you must have done it," said Sigrid. "And as I certainly never could believe that you did it, I am forced to think the other man guilty. Look, Frithiof, why should we wast time and strength in worrying over this? After all, what difference does it make to us in ourselves? Business hours must, of course, be disagreeable enough to you, but at home you must forget the disagreeables; at home you are my hero, unjustly accused, and bearing the penalty of another's crime."

PLANTS AND TOBACCO SMOKE

Many Varieties of Growth Killed by Influence of Tobacco.

Prof. Molisch, the plant physiologist of the University of Prague, has shown in some of his earlier work that large numbers of microorganisms, plants as well as animals, and the seedlings of higher plants are extremely sensitive to the influence of tobacco smoke, some being even killed thereby. Many of the deleterious effects experienced were formerly attributed to the small quantities of illuminating gas which frequently vitiates the atmosphere of such rooms; but Molisch's experiments left no room for doubt that it is really tobacco smoke that does the harm. His pictures showing the growth of pea and vetch seedlings in the presence and in the absence of tobacco smoke are very striking.

In his more recent experiments he used older plants of various species, including species of spiderwort, echeveria, eupatorium, selaginella and others. None of these plants showed any ill effects from the treatment, although exposed for a long time to an atmosphere filled with tobacco smoke. Other plants, however, responded in various striking ways.

Brehmeria utilis and Splitgerbera bilaba changed their manner of growth. When placed in a large bell jar and a few puffs of smoke from a cigar or cigarette were blown in, the leaves of these plants, ordinarily growing at right angles to the stem—that is, in a horizontal position—began to turn on their stalks, in the course of from twenty-four to forty-eight hours, until they were in a vertical plane. In the case of the brehmeria they continued their rotations beyond this point, describing a spiral. Similar disturbances were produced upon these two plants by illuminating gas. But other plants used in the experiments showed similar effects of tobacco smoke, but did not respond to the illuminating gas.

Earlier experiments showed that various narcotics provoke abnormal developments of the breathing holes on the shoot of the potato. Experiments with tobacco smoke on the potato and on other plants led to the same results, often with the accumulation of masses of liquid under the swollen areas.

In some plants of the bean family the tobacco smoke caused the leaves to drop off in a very short time. The sensitive plant (Mimosa pudica) and the black locust (Robina pseudocacia) and others lost all or nearly all of their leaves in from twenty-four to forty-eight hours after being placed in an atmosphere containing tobacco smoke. To a smaller degree smoke from wood and paper and illuminating gas produced similar results. The fumes of nicotine had very little influence.—Scientific American.

1912 FARMERS' PRIZE CONTEST

WE held a contest last year in which 36 prizes were offered. This year there will be three times as many prizes (108) and therefore three times as many chances for you to win one of them. You do not have to use a large quantity of cement to win a prize. Many of last year's prize-winners used comparatively little cement.

THE contest is divided into three classes and in only one of these (Class "A") does the amount of cement used count in deciding prize winners. Class "B" is for doing the best concrete work (the size makes no difference). Class "C" is for sending in the best and clearest description of how any piece of concrete work was done.

THERE will be four prizes (First, $50; Second, $25; Third, $15; Fourth, $10) in each class in each Province. Thus you have only to compete with other farmers in your own Province, and not with those in all parts of Canada. This gives you the best possible chance to win a $50 prize.

IT COSTS NOTHING TO ENTER—There are absolutely no "strings" to this offer. There is no entry fee or red tape to bother with. You cannot lose, because the improvements you make of concrete in competing for the prizes will be more than worth their cost. We have a book, "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete," that will give you all the information about the use of concrete you can need. It will be sent to you free when you ask us for complete particulars of the Prize Contest. Ask for particulars to-day. Just say "Send me, free, your book and full particulars of the 1912 Prize Contest," on a post card and mail it to-day. Address Publicity Manager,

HOUSEHOLD

Dainty Dishes.

Nut Bread.—One egg, one cupful of white sugar, a pinch of salt, a cupful of sweet milk, three cupfuls of flour sifted with four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one cupful of nut meats worked in at the last. Put into loaf tins, let stand for twenty minutes, and bake for three-quarters of an hour.

Brown Betty.—Put into a greased pudding dish a layer of peeled and chopped apples, sprinkle lightly with granulated sugar, bits of butter, a few drops of lemon juice, and a little ground cinnamon and grated nutmeg. Then dust the whole lightly with a powdering of cracker crumbs. Put in more apples, and proceed as before. When the dish is full, have the top layer of fine crumbs, dot thickly with bits of butter, and bake for from half to three-quarters of an hour. Serve in the dish which it was baked, with a hard sauce.

Tomato and Tapioca Soup. — A can of tomatoes, run through a sieve; a ten cent can of beef tea; half a cup of pearl tapioca, soaked two hours in a little cold water; two teaspoonfuls of onion juice; a teaspoonful of white sugar; a saltspoonful of salt; a teaspoonful of chopped sweet herbs, and paprika to taste. Put ingredients over the fire (leaving out the tapioca) to heat and bring slowly to the boil. Keep this up for five minutes and stir in the soaked tapioca. Simmer five minutes more and serve. Any good stock you happen to have may be substituted for the canned soup to flavor the above.

Fruit Cake.—Cream together a cupful of sugar and half a cupful of butter. Add two eggs, a cupful of molasses, and half a cupful of strong cold coffee, in which dissolve a scant teaspoonful of baking soda. Three cupfuls of sifted flour, one cupful of raisins, figs, and dates, cut fine and mixed; one cupful of washed and dried currants, a quarter pound of citron minced fine, a quarter pound of blanched and shredded almonds, and a teaspoonful of mixed pulverized cinnamon, cloves, mave, nutmeg, and ginger. Favor with the strained juice of a lemon. Bake in a moderate oven one hour in a mold or pan lined with buttered paper. This cake will keep sweet and soft for several months if put into a tin box with a cover. Line the box with waxed paper.

Stuffed Pork Tenderloins.—Split pork tenderloins almost through; make a stuffing as for fowls, using bread crumbs, a seasoning of salt, pepper, a little thyme and grated onion, and two tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Spread a thick layer of this over one of the loins and place the second on top of this; tie firmly together in several places. Put a little butter or dripping into a frying pan and when it is hot, brown the meat nicely in it on all sides. Then add two cupfuls of boiling water and cook over a slow fire for thirty minutes. The meat should be covered after adding the water. A little browned flour may be stirred in after the meat is taken out, and this will make a delicious gravy. Cooking it in the frying pan saves the trouble of heating the oven when the meat is the only thing to be roasted for dinner. One has in this a good and economical dish. It is equally good sliced cold for luncheon.

White Bread.—Chop into quart of wheat flour a tablespoonful of butter or other shortening, add a quart of lukewarm water, a tablespoonful of sugar, and a half yeast cake dissolved in a gill of lukewarm water. Beat hard for fifteen minutes, cover the sponge and set aside to rise for six hours (or until light) in a warm room where it will not get chilled. Sift into another receptacle two quarts of flour sifted with a tablespoonful of salt. Make a hollow in the center of this flour and work into it gradually the risen sponge or batter. When the dough is just stiff enough to handle easily, transfer it to a floured board and knead for at least ten minutes. Cover and set to rise as before until twice its present size. When light, knead again for ten minutes, make into loaves, put these in pans, and set to rise for an hour, or until they are a third larger than at first. Be sure that the oven is at a good steady heat, put the loaves in, cover with brown paper for the first three-quarters of an hour of baking. Then uncover and brown for fifteen minutes more.

Hints to the Cook.

Care of the Stove.—Before polishing the stove, wash it with vinegar. This removes all grease, leaving the surface smooth, and keeps the blacking from burning off so quickly, saving much time and labor. A little sugar added to the blacking is a good thing to try.

To Clean the Nickel on Stoves and Ranges.—Take a woolen cloth, wipe the soot from the bottom of the teakettle and with this rub the nickel. If there is grease or other dirt, first remove this with a damp cloth rubbed well with soap.

When food burns, quickly seize the kettle or pan from the range and set into a larger pan containing cold water. This will cause the steam to escape from the outside, instead of passing upward through the food. Remove to another vessel and continue cooking; if careful not to disturb the burnt part there will be no taint or odor to be detected by the most critical person.

Salt sprinkled on any substance burning on the stove will stop the smell.

Boiling Meat.—When boiling meat of any kind, add a tablespoonful of vinegar to the water when first put over the fire. This makes the meat tender, without leaving any flavor of the vinegar.

To Soften Tough Meat. — Brush over with oil (or butter) and vinegar, using one part of vinegar to two parts of oil or butter, and let stand for a few hours. This is often done in tropical countries. A little vinegar served in the platter with the steak adds to the flavor of the meat.

To Improve Griddle Cakes. — A teaspoonful of brown sugar or molasses added to the griddle cake batter makes it brown better and more easily.

Substitute for Cream (good on fruit)—Beat together the whites of two eggs, a level tablespoonful of sugar, one tablespoonful of cornstarch, and butter the size of a nut. Stir in one half cup of cold meat and beat very hard. Put a cup of cold milk over the fire; when it boils draw the dish to a cooler part of the range and pour in the egg mixture. Simmer till the milk thickens and when cold strain.

Care in Serving Food.

Scrupulous neatness should always be observed in keeping, handling and serving food. If ever cleanliness is desirable, it must be in the things we eat, and every care should be taken to insure it for the sake of health as well as of society.

Cleanliness in this connection means not only absence of visible dirt, but freedom from undesirable bacteria and other minute organisms, and from worms and other parasites. If food, raw or cooked, is kept in dirty places, peddled from dirty carts, prepared in dirty rooms and in dirty dishes, or exposed to foul air, disease germs and other offensive and dangerous substances can easily get in.

Food and drink may, in fact, be very dangerous purveyors of disease. The bacteria of typhoid fever sometimes find their way into drinking water, and those of typhoid and scarlet fevers and diphtheria into milk, and bring sickness and death to large numbers of people.

Oysters which are taken from the salt water where they grow and "floated" for a short time in brackish water near the mouth of a stream have been known to be infected by typhoid fever germs brought into the stream by the sewage from houses.

Celery or lettuce grown in soil containing typhoid germs has been thought to convey this disease.

TURKEY BETRAYED, IS STORY.

King Ferdinand Bought Military Secrets of Enemy.

Has Turkey been sold? The following story from Bucharest, if true, would go far to prove that the mighty dollar has played a leading part in the disaster that has overtaken the Ottoman arms:

"Turkey was sold to King Ferdinand before he took the field. He had used part of his enormous private fortune through his agents in Contsantinople to such effect that not only was he in possession of the most treasured secrets of the Turkish War Office, but he was assured of the masterly inactivity of some of the leaders of the Turkish forces.

"If you will look at the direction and daring of Gen. Savoff's policy it becomes at once apparent that he had other forces to help him than those which were under his direct command. He could not have dared to face half the risks before him if money had not spoken.

"Dissensions between Generals, unwise night attacks, unsupported movements, a policy of waiting and of fighting at the wrong moment, the evacuation of strategic positions and the checkmate always awaiting the movements of Generals who thought that they were about to surprise the enemy—these facts tell their own story.

"There is reason to believe the authorities in Constantinople know by now that King Ferdinand's purse has been at least as long as his arm."

Everything comes to him who waits—including the woman who said she'd be ready in a minute.

Many intemperate people say that misfortune drove them to drink. It is more likely that drink drove them to misfortune.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, DECEMBER 1.

Lesson IX.—The lunatic boy, Mark 9. 14-29. Golden text, Mark 9. 23.

Verse 14. They came — Jesus, Peter, James, and John, returning from the Mount of Transfiguration.

Scribes—The professional teachers of the common people and therefore influential with the multitude.

Questioning with them—The subject of discussion was the failure of the disciples to cure the epileptic boy. The scribes seem to have made this an opportunity for undermining the authority and influence of Jesus and his disciples with the multitude.

15. Straightway . . . saluted him—As with a common impulse the multitude turned from the scribes and the disciples alike to Jesus.

Amazed.—Perhaps at the suddenness and opportuneness of his appearance.

16. What question ye with them?—The words are addressed to the multitude, the second pronoun referring to the disciples. Jesus entirely ignores the presence of the scribes.

17. Dumb—Speechless.

A . . . spirit—Compare introductory paragraph above.

18. Wheresoever it taketh him—The epileptic fits to which the boy was subject were often of great violence and came upon him at unexpected times and without warning.

They were not able—The inability of the disciples to effect a cure was evidently a sore disappointment to the distressed father. This disappointment is reflected in his words addressed to Jesus.

19. Answereth them—The father of the afflicted boy had responded to the question of Jesus addressed to the multitude, "What question ye with them?" (the disciples). The man's complaint against the disciples brings forth the exclamation of Jesus, O faithless generation, how long shall I be with you?—Words referring apparently to the disciples, whose lack of faith seems to have been the obstacle in the way of their performing a cure.

20. Tare—Or, convulsed.

21. He asked his father — Only Mark gives the details recorded in this and the next succeeding three verses (21-24).

22. To destroy him—The violent seizures sometimes took the form of suicidal frenzy.

But if thou canst do anything—The man's faith in the ultimate recovery of his son had been severely tested. It, however, rises anew to meet the challenge of Jesus.

23. If thou canst!—The emphasis is on the pronoun. Jesus takes up the father's own words and places the burden of responsibility upon him. The possibility of a cure hinges upon his ability to believe.

All things are possible—The question of ability turns on the question of faith. In other words, Jesus would have the father realize the universal truth that faith recognizes no insurmountable obstacles, no surrender to disappointing experiences.

24. Cried out, and said—Some ancient manuscripts add "with tears." The father realizes that the words of Jesus throw him back in the first instance upon himself and upon his own spiritual and mental attitude toward the power of Jesus, the exercise of which he implores.

Help thou my unbelief—True faith is not inconsistent with a consciousness of its own infirmity.

25. A multitude came running together—Out of idle curiosity, such as was always distasteful to Jesus. He therefore hastens to heal the unfortunate lad, the last obstacle to whose cure had been removed with the strengthening of the father's faith.

Come out of him, and enter no more into him—The second word of command may well have been added for the father's sake, who, in view of the periodical nature of the ailment, might easily have been tempted to doubt the permanency of the cure.

26. As one dead—In utter exhaustion from the severity of the final attack of convulsions.

27. And he arose—Matthew adds, "The boy was cured from that hour." Luke further explains that Jesus "gave him back to his father."

28. His disciples asked him privately—Luke records the impression made by the miracle upon the multitude in the words, "They were all astonished at the majesty of God."

29. By nothing, save by prayer—Some ancient manuscripts add "and fasting." The cause of the disciples' inability to cure the child, Jesus explains as due to their "little faith" (Matt. 17. 20) and their lack of spiritual readiness. Trusting in their commission, they seem to have neglected the means of grace and spiritual equipment, prayer and faith, on which the efficiency of their gift depended.

THE REAL TEST.

Brave and Happy in Spite of Great Misfortune.

"Of course they are happy," said a neighbor of the Lacys. "They have never known any real trouble; they are always well, and they have plenty of means. It is easy to be happy under such conditions."

"I think that they are happy," said a second neighbor, "because of their sincere and deep religious faith."

"They have never had to depend on that," returned the first. "Any one could be happy with their good luck. Let them lose that, and we should soon see what their religion would do for them."

Two hours later Mrs. Lacy was called to the telephone. The message made her heart stand still.

"My husband! A serious accident! They are taking him to the hospital? O God, be merciful! Oh, I need Thy help!"

The next day the stricken wife learned that her husband would never walk again.

Blow after blow fell upon this hitherto fortunate family. A serious illness impaired the sight of the youngest child. Then Mr. Lacy's income was suddenly cut in two by the dishonesty of a business partner. The family faced actual poverty.

One day the two neighbors met and talked again. "It is astonishing!" cried the skeptical one. "I cannot believe it!"

"What?"

"The Lacy's. I have just been to see Mrs. Lacy. She is the same brave, happy woman, and he, too, seems as cheerful as ever. How do you account for that?"

"It is their religion," said the other. "It is real; it supports and comforts them."

"I cannot understand it. She said to me, 'We are happy. I cannot tell you how near the Heavenly Father has seemed to us through all these days. God is very good to us.' There must be something in a religion like that."

"Yes; did not Job say, 'Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him?' Isn't that what we all need—a religion that is sufficient for any experience in life? Unless we have it, can we call ourselves happy? I was sure the Lacys had it, and the test has proved it. In spite of their misfortunes, they are the happiest of us all."—Youth's Companion.

FAVORS A GRANT

When Liberal papers begin to fall in line with the proposed grant of the Borden Government to the Imperial navy, it shows that Mr. Borden has struck the proper chord. The Montreal Herald, which has never been anything but Liberal for the past fifty years, in a recent issue said :—

"It may well be that in regard to this request the opposition may not deem it wise to divide the house or the country. Canada is clearly desirous that prompt and effective action be taken to place her in a position to render aid in the defence of her own coasts and of the empire. She may, therefore, not scrutinize too closely, not expect her representative in the house to scrutinize too closely, proposals made with that end in view and with the clear understanding that there is no intention of construing these proposals as part of the country's permanent policy. Objection is being taken in some quarters to making a contribution on the ground that it is a retrograde step, and betokens a concession to the forces of reaction. This would be a valid indictment were there any danger of this method of participation being adopted except in an exceptional case. Of this we see not the slightest danger. Canadians may tolerate this method for once, not because there may be evidence of a crisis, but because they feel that time has been lost in doing effective work, that action at this time may have a valuable moral effect. Under such circumstances a cash contribution to the imperial navy may be considered as payment for services rendered, as a premium for insurance, as a token of appreciation of the benefits we derive from the existence of that navy Objectionable as the method is, it is not so bad as doing nothing, and if the government will not declare its permanent policy at this time, its temporary expedient may have to be adopted."

A CURIOUS MISTAKE

So many people ask "Why should Canada help Great Britain to maintain its navy ?" But the question betrays a point of view such as the Tailors of Tooley street possessed when they mistook themselves for the people of England.

We loom too large in our own conceit. We forget that the task of Great Britain's navy is world-wide, and that we have really added enormously to its responsibilities. What obsesses us in our importance, wealth and possibilities. We do not realize that those very things have caused Great Britain to feel the strain of Empire and its protection far more than when we were of little account.

To use a commercial phrase, her line of insurance is far too small to cover her war risk, which includes Canada in its new and wealthy condition.

But Canada today reaps herself the benefit of the insurance provided by the British navy. We pay no tribute to the Motherland out of which she can pay the increased premium. We keep all our increase ; and if Great Britain fell, how else would we be compelled to spend that increase but in building a huge navy ?

Let us be sensible—we are but making the very best and cheapest investment in paying an insurance premium to Great Britain until we can afford to insure ourselves.

LIMITED LIABILITY

Events are shaping for a Canadian navy. Not today nor tomorrow, but still at no distant time. The waters of two oceans wash our shores—on the Pacific, we, and not Great Britain, must face the nations as a power. Our national life has, until recently, centred in the East and the Atlantic, where Britannia still rules the waves. But Canada is changing its aspect and at no distant time the hub of our new nationality will be in the West and its outlook is naturally the Pacific.

Canada therefore must join hands in the Pacific with Australia, New Zealand and with those British settlements which even now are stirring with Imperial sentiments. In the Atlantic we can still unite with the Motherland. But in each ocean it is inevitable that we will have a fleet.

Is there anything in that aspiration that requires us to attempt to question our responsibility as part of the British Empire ? Even if our fleets fly a red ensign are they to ignore the call of the Union Jack If war comes, as it may, will Canada be willing to wait to see how the British navy fares before clearing the decks for action ?

We cannot be a part of the British Empire with limited liability. Is it to be "Britain and Canada" or merely "Canada, Limited ?"

The Live Stock Industry of Canada

Last February there were brought together at Ottawa from the various provinces upwards of one hundred men officially delegated to represent forty-four Live Stock and Record Associations, besides a large number of interested persons to consider and discuss the various features of the live stock industry. This gathering which constituted the third general convention of the National Live Stock Association spent two days each of three busy sessions upon its programe which included reviews of the conditions of the live stock industry prevailing in the respective provinces, interprovincial trade in pure bred live stock, the beef cattle industry in the east and the west, the dairy cattle industry, the development of the sheep and swine industries, the market for Canadian horses, transportation of live stock, stallion legislation, chilled meat trade, bovine tuberculosis, and other business.

A full report of the addresses and discussions that took place has been printed for the information of persons interested in the live stock or in fact the general agricultural welfare of the Dominion. Among many other striking things it was brought out that our export cattle trade is rapidly approaching the vanishing point, that South American tinned beef is being used all the way across the Dominion, that we are exporting very little mutton and importing a great deal, while millions of pounds of pork are each year imported into Canada.

This report which constitutes a book of 130 pages embodies a fairly complete review of the live stock situation in Canada and offers many wise suggestions for its much needed improvement. The distribution of this work is in the hands of the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa to whom applications for copies should be sent.

Forest Ranger's Houses to be Built on Many Dominion Reserves

In order to protect and administer the Dominion Forest Reserves to the best advantage, they are being subdivided into ranger districts and houses are being built at strategic points for the use of the rangers in charge. The first of such houses to be occupied on the Duck Mountain Forest Reserve is located at Madge Lake, a few miles from Kamsack, Sask.

Madge Lake is a beautiful, island-studded sheet of water, covering seven square miles, and this ranger-dwelling is picturesquely placed on its south shore. It is a comfortable house, well planned and well lighted, containing living rooms, as well as office. It will be painted a dark green with white trimmings.

The trail from this ranger station to Kamsack will next year be widened and otherwise improved. This will benefit the ranger, convenience the public who have forest business to transact, and induce an increasing number of people to enjoy the many delights of a summer outing at Madge Lake.

The ranger at this station has direct charge of some two hundred and thirty square miles of highly valuable young second-growth spruce and poplar forest, and his central object and work will be to safeguard it from fire by every possible means, so that in two or three decades it may yield welcome and abundant supplies of fuel and lumber to the dwellers on the prairies.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

TORTURED FROM BABYHOOD

"Fruit-a-tives" Cures Constipation

Miss E. A. GOODALL

EDMONTON, ALTA., Nov. 20th. 1911

"I have been a sufferer since babyhood from that terrible complaint, Constipation. I have been treated by physicans, and have taken every medicine I heard of, but without the slightest benefit. I finally concluded that there was no remedy in the world that could cure Constipation.

About this time, I heard about "Fruit-a-tives" and decided to try them. The effect was marvellous.

The first box gave me great relief, and after I had used a few boxes, I found that I was entirely well.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine that ever did me any good and I want to say to all who suffer as I did—"Try this fruit medicine and you will find—as I did—a perfect cure"

(MISS) E. A. GOODALL

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit and the only one that will positively and completely cure you of Constipation.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Liquid Cures Eczema Where Salves Fail

In regard to skin diseases, medical authorities are now agreed on this:

Don't imprison the disease germs in your skin by the use of greasy salves, and thus encourage them to multiply. A true cure of all eczematous disease can be brought about only by using the healing agents in the form of a liquid.

WASH THE GERMS OUT.

A simple wash: A compound of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, and other ingredients as combined in the D.D.D. Prescription. This penetrates to the disease germs and destroys them, then soothes and heals the skin as nothing else has ever done.

In addition to the regular dollar bottle, which has cured so many cases, we have arranged with the D.D.D. Laboratories for a special large trial bottle at 25c. on a special offer now

This trial bottle will start the cure, and give you instant relief.

THE GOOD CHEER

Hard Service Heater

Can't help being a powerful heater Just look at the immense radiating surface, air blast ring, roller grates, high aspit and its sectional construction—no bolts; simply pyramids in sections.

This is the stove which does not require the services of a stove mounter to repair. Should any part, through long service or over-severe usage, require replacing, anyone is capable of making the necessary change of parts in a few minutes.

The air-blast ring between top of firepot and combustion chamber has a slide damper in which, when opened, causes a thin stream of hot air, mingling with the smoke and gases, serves to create complete combustion, with the consequent additional heat and therefore greater efficiency of the stove. Made in two sizes—17 in. and 20 in. firepot. Will burn coal or wood.

We have a sample stove on view. Call and see it in action. If you purpose buying a heating stove this fall, this one will please you. Price reasonable.

CAUSE OF WAR IN BALKANS

AS SEEN BY THE IDEALIST, NORMAN ANGELL.

Wrote of War as "The Great Illusion," Points Out Economic Factors in Conflict.

With the outbreak of war in the Balkans many of the thousands of readers of Mr. Norman Angell's remarkable book, "The Great Illusion," must have wondered how Mr. Angell would reconcile his theory of the economic futility of war with the actual event. In an article in The London Mail, Mr. Angell explains the bearing of his theory on the present crisis. He says in part:

"We are all agreed as to the fundamental causes of the Balkan trouble: the hate born of religious, racial, national, and language differences; the attempt of an alien conqueror to live parasitically upon the conquered, and the desire of conqueror and conquered alike to satisfy in massacre and bloodshed the rancour of fanaticism and hatred.

"Well, in these islands, not so very long ago, those things were causes of bloodshed; indeed, they were a common feature of European life. But if they are inevitable in human relationship, how comes it that Adana is no longer duplicated by St. Bartholomew; the Bulgarian bands by the vendetta of the Highlander and the Lowlander; the struggle of the Slav and the Turk, Serb and Bulgar, by that of Scots and English, and English and Welsh?

Old and New Fanaticism.

"The fanaticism of the Moslem to-day is no intenser than that of Catholic and heretic in Rome, Madrid, Paris, and Geneva at a time which is only separated from us by the lives of three or four elderly men. The heretic or infidel was then in Europe also a thing unclean and horrifying, exciting in the mind of the orthodox a sincere and honest hatred and a (very largely satisfied) desire to kill. If you would measure the distance Europe has travelled, think what this means: all the nations of Christendom united in a war lasting 200 years for the capture of the Holy Sepulchre; and yet, when in our day their representatives, seated round a table, could have had it for the asking, they did not deem it worth the asking, so little of the ancient passion was there left. The very nature of man seemed to be transformed. For, wonderful though it be that orthodox should cease killing heretic, infinitely more wonderful still is it that he should cease wanting to kill him.

The Economic Factor.

"And just as most of us are certain that the underlying causes of this conflict are 'inevitable,' and 'inherent in unchanging human nature,' so are we certain that so inhuman a thing as economics can have no bearing on it.

"Well, I will suggest that the transformation of the heretic-hating and heretic-killing European is due mainly to economic forces; that it is because the drift of those forces has in such large part left the Balkans to one side that war is now raging; that economic factors of a more immediate kind for a large part of the provoking cause of that war; and that a better understanding mainly of certain economic facts of their international relationship on the part of the great nations of Europe is essential before much progress towards solution can be made.

Outside the Pale.

"But then, by 'economics,' of course, I mean not a merchant's profit or a money-lender's interest, but the method by which men earn their bread, which must also mean the kind of life they lead."

Mr. Angell proceeds to say that "the Balkans have been geographically outside the influence of European industrial and commercial life. The Turk has hardly felt it at all. He has learnt none of the social and moral lessons which interdependence and improved communications have taught the western European, and it is because he has not learnt these lessons, because he is a soldier and a conqueror, to an extent and completeness that other nations of Europe lost a generation or two since, that the Balkanese are fighting and that war is raging.

Cause of the War.

"But not merely in this larger sense, but in the more immediate, narrower sense, are the fundamental causes of this war economic.

"This war arises, as the past wars against the Turkish conqueror have arisen, by the desire of the Christian peoples on whom he lives to shake off the burden. Sir Charles Elliott tells us that 'the history of the Turk is a catalogue of battles. Their contributions to art, literature, science and religion are practically nil. Their desire has not been to instruct, to improve, hardly ever to govern, but simply to conquer.' And another author, confirming Sir Charles Elliott, says: 'To live upon their subjects is the Turks' only means of livelihood.'

IT SATISFIES MILLIONS OF PEOPLE

Worth your while to test it

LIPTON'S TEA

Sustains and Cheers.

The Failure of Europe.

"War did not break out yesterday in the Balkans. It has been waged daily by the Turks for generations. And not the bloodless use of force either. Between the two kinds of war I know no reason why the Pacifist should not give his preference to the relatively more honest and overt.

"But this present war of the Balkan States would never have been necessary—the worst abominations of Macedonia and Albania would have disappeared a generation since—if the Christian powers had not in their international relationship preserved that general political doctrine of the Turk which they have abandoned within their respective frontiers.

LET CHILDREN HELP.

Why Parents Should Utilize the Services of the Chicks.

"Let me help!" That is one of the most general pleadings of boys and girls. But parents and grown-ups altogether are a great deal too apt to put the children aside curtly—to tell them to stop worrying.

Children for the most part have a natural wish to "help"—to think that they can give very real assistance. Of course, from a strict point of view, there is no getting away from the fact that primarily children's "help" is a hindrance; but there is no earthly need for making that fact obvious to the boys and girls. In this matter it is the will and intention which most greatly matter, not the actual results. If a child has by instinct a willing spirit, a desire to be of service and lighten other folk's labors, for pity's sake encourage that spirit to grow; do not flatten it all down into sullen bitterness.

Besides, so far as all this goes, the results of letting the children help are good. If the results are bad, it is more the fault of the grown-up in question than of the child. There is a real educational value in allowing boys and girls to assist in cooking or gardening, or any useful work of all sorts.

It means extra trouble in the first case, without doubt; but children are very quick to learn, and it is well worth while to teach them to do things properly. Bear with their failures, encourage them to aim at the top of the tree, and eventually their "help" will become a very real thing.

To tell a boy or girl that they shall learn how to do a thing in "the proper way" when they are older is a most disastrous thing to do. If you let them help at all in any work, do let them do it rightly—not in a makeshift, perfunctory sort of way.

There are many mothers, for instance, who regularly let their little girls help them to cook, and ignore the fact that there is any importance attached to the matter. They shake their heads when Mary begs them to taste "her" cakes, and, without the slightest intention of being unkind, refer jocularly to "what Mary calls helping me, you know!" But a quite new feeling of bitterness, of repulsed service, enters into Mary's heart as she listens to her mother's words.

Wise mothers will always encourage their girls to want to help with various housewifely affairs. They may be able to do things quicker without their help; but, at the same time, it is well to remember that there is a certain duty to the girls—that it is a disastrous thing for a girl to grow up and have a home of her own, and know nothing of management.

With regard to the boys, similar methods should prevail, for the old adage, "The boy is father to the man," is as true as it is trite. A boy, for example, who displays a talent for gardening should not be put off with a tiny plot in the shade, where practically nothing will grow. On the other hand, his own particular garden should be situated where light, sunshine, and air may reach and stimulate his plants, and where there may be some reasonable hope that his efforts will be crowned with success.

A Household Remedy

TORONTO CORRESPONDENCE

INTERESTING BITS OF GOSSIP FROM THE QUEEN CITY.

A Fakir Gets His Just Dues—A Loquacious Alderman—Graft in the City—New Railway Board Chairman.

"Doctor" James Gevalia Evans, who has just been sentenced to fifteen months in Kingston penitentiary on a charge of forgery, never made much of a splash in Toronto, though he has been travelling around the Province for several years.

Until the last year or two "Dr." Evans made his headquarters in Kingston, where he now returns in a different capacity. He arrived there about eight years ago from whence no one knows. He forthwith became active in missionary work. And, among many activities, evolved one pet scheme of establishing a missionary boat on the river Jordan. The boat would travel up and down the river carrying Christianity to the Jews and the Mahommedans of the Holy Land. In advocating this and other schemes "Dr." Evans often assumed Oriental costume, which added to his picturesqueness and impressiveness, and the sensation his appearance caused will be recalled at many points. Subscriptions for his missionary house-boat flowed in until one day a traveller just returned from Palestine asserted that the river at that point would hardly float a chip, let alone a house-boat. "Dr." Evans was not perturbed. He simply switched to some other scheme.

The truth about Evans is that he was a morphine fiend. His arms are a mass of punctures where the needle has been injected. That accounts for his visionary schemes and his absolute irresponsibility.

Duke Saw Medals.

Recently, when the Duke of Connaught was visiting Toronto, there was to be a review of the Veterans' Association. Evans hurried up and got in line as a veteran. Lo and behold his immaculate frock coat was decorated with a string of medals and badges for valor, long service and other military accomplishments, that turned the heart of the proudest veteran green with envy. When the Duke of Connaught passed along the line his sharp eye caught the array. He stopped, examined the medals keenly, and, it is said, detected the fraud. Shortly afterwards came "Dr." Evans' arrest and subsequent exposure.

Some years ago, when the Russian Japanese war broke out, there was practically no one on this continent who knew much about conditions at the scene of fighting. Clubs and associations searched everywhere for lecturers who could deal with the subject, but none was forthcoming. "Dr." Evans jumped into the breach. He knew. Needless to say, his lectures were a frost, although the first ones were largely attended. He advertised pictures, and fulfilled his promise by showing pictures of a boat sailing into various ports all around the world, but when she got to Japan he calmly announced that from this point on the censor would allow no pictures out.

In the 1911 election "Dr." Evans jumped to the front as an Imperialistic orator, and in one capacity or another he is widely known throughout the Province.

His "schemes" rarely did anybody any harm. Even the forgery on which he was connected, arising in connection with a private College here, was not serious in its consequences.

Loquacious "Sam" McBride.

One of the spectacular figures of the Toronto City Council is Alderman Sam McBride. Sam is decidedly loquacious. That is one of his chiefest claims to fame. A favorite pastime of the reporters at Council meetings is to keep track of the number of times Sam speaks. Sometimes the record runs to surprising figures—once it ran to 75 different speeches, which for a session of five hours' duration means that he averaged one speech every four minutes throughout the performance. Naturally Sam does not talk very long at a time, and sometimes what he says is not much to the point. Again it is too pointed for some of his fellow aldermen, for he has the faculty of getting under the skin of his companions with personal remarks. Generally he is good natured, but the other day he threatened across the Council board to shove his fist down the long throat of Controller Church. The good people of the town were greatly shocked and the newspapers read the Council lectures on the indecency of bear garden exhibitions. But Sam afterwards apologized and said he did not mean what he said.

Picks Unpopular Side.

Another claim to fame Alderman McBride has is that he generally votes with the minority. He seems to have a faculty of picking out the unpopular side of an argument. As an "opposer" he is an expert. He was instrumental in blocking the Humber Boulevard scheme for a year, his ground ostensibly being that it is a scheme to make a millionaire of Mr. Home Smith at the expense of the city. If the project had been unpopular Ald. McBride would have probably supported it.

Newspapers and others threaten Ald. McBride with defeat at the polls for his obstructive tactics. But he doesn't worry. Every First of January since 1905, with one exception, he has bobbed up serenely near the top of the poll in ward three. He seems to go on the theory that by opposing everything he gathers in all the votes of the knockers and soreheads. They are the ones who don't forget.

In private life Sam is known to fame for his support of harness racing. He is an ardent follower of trotting races in Toronto and throughout the Province and illumines the meetings of Council with horsey talk and the picturesque atmosphere of the race track.

Graft in Toronto.

A Toronto journalist has been making an investigation into various forms of "graft" that are practised here, and has found some surprising illustrations.

One charge he makes is against undertakers whose charges, he says, are often extortionate. A simple, though thoroughly decent funeral, can be made up on the following charges and still allow the undertaker a good profit of $13:

Coffin	$15 00
Outside box	5 00
Hearse	8 00
Embalming	10 00
Shroud	5 00
Total	$43 00

Yet the charges often run up over $100. Not long ago a Toronto undertaker sent in a bill for $534, but in this case the executors contested the bill in court and had it cut to $129. The casket, which was a fine one, had been charged at $250, though the undertaker admitted in the box that it had cost him only $41. Probably ninety-nine out of a hundred people pay the charge, even if extortionate, rather than appear to be mean about such a matter. And this feeling is played upon.

It is charged, too, that nurses in the institutions stand in with undertakers and receive from them gifts of candies, flowers, theatre tickets, etc., in return for which they give prompt notice of death, so that the undertaker can get on the job before a rival.

Some doctors are also charged with getting concessions from undertakers.

Then there is the janitor's "graft." This flourishes in an apartment house, where from ten families up may reside. Naturally, each family would expect to patronize the grocer, or the butcher, or the dairy they preferred. But the janitor recommends certain people. If his advice is not accepted the deliveries never come right. There is always something wrong, until he gets his way. The presumption is that he gets his "rake off."

The Barber's Graft.

Then there is the barber's "graft." A few years ago it used to cost a modest 15 cents to get a hair-cut. Now the same service costs 40 cents, made up this way:

Hair-cut	25c.
Barber's tip	10c.
Tip to boy with whisk	5c.
Total	40c.

And the boy may be sore because he only gets five cents.

Another form of graft goes on among foremen on construction work where casual labor is employed. They make a practise of collecting a commission from the men they take on. Some foremen are said to collect from $15 to $20 a week in this way.

New Railway Board Chairman.

The appointment of Donald M. McIntyre, K.C., of Kingston, to the chairmanship of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board is regarded as a promising one. His knowledge of municipal law is admitted. He has now the opportunity to show the other qualities which will enable him to stand up to the job. He can easily make it one of the biggest in the Province.

Mr. McIntyre is unmarried. Once, when asked why, he replied that he had never had time. He lives with two maiden sisters.

It is again remarked that Sir James Whitney in his appointments shows a strong predilection to go outside Toronto.

LAWYER McINTYRE.

J. F. McIntyre, who unsuccessfully defended Lieut. Becker in his recent rial for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, in New York, is one of the old school of criminal lawyers. Nothing delights him more than to whang a witness over the head. He delights in coaxing along the poor devil on the stand, talking to him in a friendly and companionable way about the innocent pastimes of his youth. Sometimes the lawyer grows poetic, and talks of blue skies and green trees and babbling brooks until one can almost scent the newmown hay. And just as the witness gets all dewy about the eyes, and is kind of leaning forward and gulping, and nodding at the lawyer, McIntyre's manner abruptly changes. His voice rises into a roar; his face turns fiery red, and his eyes glare.

"Why did you kick your little brother in the face thirteen years ago to-day?" he bellows.

Well, that's a question no fellow can answer offhand. The witness is upset by this thrust from his dear old pal, the lawyer for the defence. McIntyre impales him upon an accusatory forefinger before an indignant jury. And before he can swallow enough of his tonsils to explain that he never had any little brother, McIntyre has heaped a dozen other equally difficult queries upon him. If the witness has any nerves at all, he is apt to challenge the altitude record. Justice Goff watched this performance in silence for the first days of the trial. Then he rapped for order, and leaned across the desk, and fixed McIntyre with an eye as truculent and threatening as the lawyer's own.

"Counsel will at once moderate his manner," said Justice Goff. He kind of dripped each word on McIntyre, so that it foamed up a little before the next one fell. Counsel moderated.

GARDEN SPOILED BY CRABS.

Prevent the Growth of Vegetables In British Honduras.

The trials of a housekeeper in British Honduras are many and varied, writes Lady Swanye, wife of the Governor, in the Wide World Magazine, service being indifferent and food not of the best quality. Milk and butter are tinned, and vegetables have to be imported. Thinking to remedy this, we attempted to grow our own vegetables, but soon found this to be impossible, owing to the fact that the garden was infested with crabs—a novel pest for a garden, surely!

The crustaceans may apparently have all been killed off one year, but the next autumn they swarm down to the sea again from their unknown breeding places inland in veritable armies. Sitting in the veranda one can hear their shells clacking and crashing against each other, as they hustle past the house.

We tried to circumvent the pests by wiring in the vegetable plot, but this proved unavailing, as there is water about a foot below the surface, and the crabs had only to dive down one one side of the fence and come up smiling on the other.

Rafferty—Sure, Kelly, but I'm glad to see yez. I thought ye were dead. I heard siv'ral payple shpakin' well ev yez.

THE FIRST AERIAL FLEET.

A Remarkable Exhibition Took Place in France.

Just after sunrise on a morning in late September, the French minister of war, Monsieur Millerand, held the first review of a war fleet of aeroplanes that the world has ever seen, at Villacoublay, near Versailles. There was no pomp or display, but to observers of imagination, the occasion was as dramatically effective as it was historically important. The London Times thus describes it:

Neither the early hour at which it was necessary to leave Paris, nor the bitter cold of the autumn morning, nor the fact that only those with special permits were allowed on the ground, sufficed to dampen the general enthusiasm over the remarkable exploits the corps of military airmen had accomplished during the army manoeuvres in the west. Every one of the pilots who were on parade had flown at least six hundred miles during those manoeuvres, and the total distance covered by all the machines is over forty-three thousand miles.

A surprising number of men, women and children went to Villacoublay by train, motor-car, or bicycle and on foot, and lined the fence dividing the aerodrome from the road. Three special services of motor-omnibuses left Paris for the ground about five o'clock, and every omnibus was crowded with passengers who had taken tickets the previous day.

Monsieur Millerand's inspection was of necessity informal. To right and left of the entrance to the flying-ground, which was kept by eight hundred troops, were drawn up the heavy wagons that carried field-repairing outfits, spare parts, and everything necessary for the efficiency of the aerial service on campaign. No fewer than seventy-two machines were drawn up in a semicircle—biplanes and monoplanes, gleaming white Nieuports, plum-colored Reps, Bleriots, Breguets, Farmans, and many other well-known makes.

In some cases the pilot had attached to his machine his own particular mascot, a white gull, a Teddy bear, or, in one case, a notice, taken from a railway-carriage, "Il est dangereux de se pencher en dehors" (It is dangerous to lean out of the window). Some aeroplanes were still packed on their drays, with their long snouts, shrouded in canvas, peering out of the tilt like a gun.

Monsieur Millerand merely walked along the imposing line of machines. Before each squadron he stopped and addressed a few words to the crews. The inspection over, no time was lost in getting the machines away. The roar of the engines was to be heard all over the field.

The pilots got into their heavy coats and adjusted their helmets, climbed into their places, and machine after machine rose into the air, circled once or twice round the aerodrome, and disappeared in the direction of Etampes. By nine o'clock twenty aeroplanes had left. The whole affair passed off with precision. It was hard to believe that only seven years ago the Wright brothers were still testing gliders, and that no heavier-than-air machine had ever flown in Europe.

ORIGIN OF THE CRESCENT.

Once Emblem of Byzantine Empire and Eastern Church.

Though now regarded as essentially Mohammedan, the crescent was Christian in its origin. A crescent moon was the emblem of the Byzantine Empire and the Eastern Church, and the Turks adopted it as a badge of triumph after the capture of Constantinople in 1453.

With reference to the crescent the story of the origin of the crescent-shaped Vienna roll is worth recalling. It arose in the sixteenth century when the Turks were besieging Vienna, and failing to carry it by assault began to drive mines under the walls. In that period the city's bake-houses were in the walls under the fortifications, and when the mines were almost through the sound of the work was heard in the underground bake-houses and the alarm given. It was to celebrate this event that the bakers adopted the Turkish emblem as the shape in which to make their bread.

ANAEMIC GIRLS SEEM EVERYWHERE

Nine Out of Every Ten Show Symptoms of This Serious Trouble.

So steadily does anaemia undermine the health of young, growing girls and young women that it is rightly regarded as one of the greatest enemies of her sex. Nine women out of ten are bloodless, more or less, and in many cases neglect has allowed anaemia to develop into hopeless decline. There is a security and new strength for weak tired girls and women in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They actually make the new, good blood of health that banishes the "always tired" weakness, and the continual backaches of anaemia. They drive away headaches, the low spirits, the palpitation of the overworked heart and the fits of nervousness that mark the women whose weak blood is unable to nourish their wasting frames. Dr. Willams' Pink Pills have given health to unhappy anaemics in cases too numerous to record. Here is one example. Miss Hattie B. White, Whitehall, Ont., says:—"Some two years ago I became very much run down. I consulted a doctor who told me that it was a bad case of anaemia and nervousness. I had most of the symptoms that accompany this trouble, such as headaches, a tired feeling, poor appetite, and pallor. The doctor's medicine did not seem to help me and then I began changing from one medicine to another, but with no better results. Finally at the suggestion of my mother I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I got two boxes and by the time I had taken them I began to feel better. This cheered me very much, and I continued using the Pills until I had taken nine or ten boxes. When I was again enjoying the very best of health, and had gained in weight as well. I have proved in my case that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a cure for anaemia, and can recommend them to similar sufferers."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

'MARVELOUS' CURES OF SKIN ERUPTION

Four Children Constantly Scratching. Nearly Tore Limbs Off. Cured in a Month by Cuticura Soap and Ointment

"Two of my daughters and two of my sons were suffering from very bad heads, the doctor ordering my daughters to have all their hair cut off so as to prevent it from spreading all over their heads, and to get to the seat of the trouble in order to be able to rub some ointment, which he gave them, well into the sores. These sores started in small blotches which got larger and larger and then burst and spread all over their heads, and in some cases down their backs and bodies. The doctor said it was eczema, but they seemed to be daily getting worse. The sores formed like little boils, then filled with matter, and looked like abscesses. They became all inflamed and irritated, causing them to be constantly scratching themselves. This made the sores burst, and the matter flowed all over their heads. We had to cut their finger nails and at times to put gloves on their hands, the irritation was so bad, to keep them from digging into the flesh, and at night they would nearly tear their limbs off. The bolsters would be literally covered with blood.

"The teachers would not let them attend school for fear of infection spreading among the other children, so I resolved to try the Cuticura Remedies, which I found to benefit my children greatly. I continued with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment for one month, and the result is a marvelous cure." (Signed) George Arthur Robinson, 87, Fitzwilliam St., Hoyland Common, nr. Barnsley, Yorks., Eng., Jan. 3, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, a liberal sample of each, with 32-p. book on the skin will be sent free, on application to Potter D. & C. Corp., 46 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A.

TIGERS SKILFUL STALKERS.

English Resident of India Tells of Animals' Methods.

Most wild animals may, in a sense, be termed "specialists" with reference to the manner in which they approach their prey. The tiger is great as a stalker. His feet may be said to be "shod with silence." As illustrating the proficiency of the tiger in this respect there may be cited the experience of an English resident of India.

He had been much annoyed by tigers and at last tied a bullock in a clearing and took up his own position in a tree to wait until the big cat should come after the bait. The ground was covered with dried leaves, which, in hot weather, are so brittle that even the walking of a bird over them can be distinctly heard for some distance.

In a short time a large tiger slipped out of the forest and slowly edged his way toward the bullock. His method was so elaborate and painstaking that the man watching was fascinated to a degree.

So carefully did the big beast put down each paw, and so gradually did he crush the dry leaves under it, that not a sound was to be heard. Between him and the bullock was a stump about four feet high, with long, projecting surface roots. This plainly the tiger regarded as a fortunate aid in his operations.

He got upon one of the roots, balanced himself with infinite care, and so was able to walk quickly and silently as far as the stump. He approached so gradually and noiselessly, and his color against the brown leaves was so imperceptible, that he was close upon the bullock before the latter perceived him.

School Boy Drunkards.

Remarkable statements concerning drunkenness amongst Russian school children are made by Mr. Consul H. M. Grove in his report on the trade of the Moscow district for 1911. It is admitted, he writes, that inebriety is very rapidly increasing among the school children in Russia in general, and in Moscow and the Moscow provinces in particular. Out of 18,134 school boys in the Moscow province, from the ages of 8 to 13 years, 12,162, or 66 per cent., have taken to drink, and out of 10,404 girls of the same ages 4,733, or 45 per cent., also drink.

SCOFFERS

Often Make the Staunchest Converts.

The man who scoffs at an idea or doctrine which he does not fully understand has at least the courage to show where he stands.

The gospel of Health has many converts who formerly laughed at the idea that tea and coffee, for example, ever hurt anyone. Upon looking into the matter seriously, often at the suggestion of a friend, such persons have found that Postum and a friend's advice have been their salvation.

"My sister was employed in an eastern city where she had to do calculating," writes a Western girl. "She suffered with headache until she was almost unfitted for duty.

"Her landlady persuaded her to quit coffee and use Postum, and in a few days she was entirely free from headache." (Tea is just as injurious as coffee because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.) "She told her employer about it, and on trying it, he had the same experience.

"My father and I have both suffered much from nervous headache since I can remember, but we scoffed at the idea advanced by my sister, that coffee was the cause of our trouble.

"However, we finally quit coffee and began using Postum. Father has had but one headache now in four years, due to a severe cold, and I have lost my headaches and sour stomach which I am now convinced came from coffee.

"A cup of good, hot Postum is satisfying to me when I do not care to eat a meal. Circumstances caused me to locate in a new country and I feared I would not be able to get my favorite drink, Postum, but I was relieved to find that a full supply is kept here with a heavy demand for it." ARE YOUR HANDS CHAPPED?

Zam-Buk Will Cure Them.

The particular danger of chapped hands and cold cracks (apart altogether from the pain) is that the cold is likely to penetrate and set up inflammation, festering, or blood-poison. Directly the skin is broken by a cut, graze or scratch, or chaffed and cracked by the action of the cold winds and water, the one necessary precaution is to apply Zam-Buk freely.

The pure herbal juices from which Zam-Buk is prepared are so perfectly combined and refined that the immediate effect of these Zam-Buk dressings is soothing, antiseptic, and healing.

Mrs. O. M. Phoen, Neuchatel, Alta., writes:—"I must tell you how pleased I am with Zam-Buk. My husband had an old frostbite on his foot for many years, and had tried almost every known remedy, without any effect, but the first application of Zam-Buk seemed to help him so much that he persevered and the sore is now cured. We would not be without Zam-Buk in the house."

Zam-Buk is also a sure cure for piles, eczema, ulcers, abscesses, scalp sores, blood-poison, bad leg, eruptions, etc. Its purely herbal composition makes it the ideal balm for babies and young children. All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk 50c. box or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Try also Zam-Buk Soap, 25c. tablet.

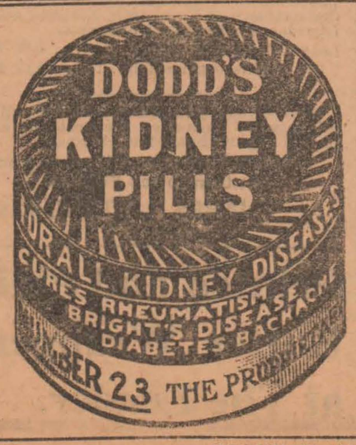
ATE $35,000 OF FOOD.

Voracious Eaters Cause of Others' Starvation.

The advice which Sydney Smith gave to Lord Murray on the subject of diet was probably sound. "If you wish for anything like happiness in the fifth act of life," he wrote, "eat and drink one-half of what you could eat and drink. Did I ever tell you my calculations about eating and drinking? Having ascertained the weight of what I could live upon so as to preserve health and strength, and what I did live upon, I found that between ten and seventy years of age I had eaten and drunk forty-four horse-wagon loads of meat and drink more than would have preserved me in life and health! The value of this mass of nourishment I consider to be worth $35,000. It occurred to me that I must, by my voracity, have starved to death fully 100 persons. This is a frightful calculation, but irresistibly true."



THE ELECTRIC COBBLER.

Sounding Death Knell of Old Shoemaker and His Bench.

When the great shoe factories demonstrated that they could make boots and shoes better and cheaper than the best hand cobblers, these knights of the awl and last were relegated to the past—or they managed to eke out a meagre living by repairing worn boots and shoes.

And now comes the electric cobbler, and the days of the hand cobbler and his bench are numbered, says the Electric News. The electric cobbler, such as can be found in most large cities, consists of one long machine, which is in reality a number of machines connected on the same shaft. This shaft is turned by an electric motor. The electric cobbler fixes shoes while you wait. It will sew on a sole, put on a patch, fix the heels or reline a shoe in a very few minutes, as all the work is done by machinery at a high rate of speed. And it is not to be denied that the finished product is fully as good as though the best cobbler had spent a half day on the job. If the shoe needs resoling, the attendant picks up and places a piece of leather of the right size and the machine stitches it fast to the upper. At the next machine an emery wheel cuts down the edge of the sole and trims it to the right shape. The next machine finishes and polishes the edges. From the stitching machine to the polisher is but a step, and the work is done long before the old fashioned shoemaker could have the shoe fitted to the last.

THE BEST MEDICINE FOR YOUNG CHILDREN.

Mrs. Ulderic Roberge, Lac Long, Que., writes:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my baby who suffered from stomach trouble and vomiting, also from constipation and they completely cured him. Minard's Liniment Co., Ltd.

Gentlemen.—In July, 1905, I was thrown from a road machine, injuring my hip and back badly and was obliged to use a crutch for 14 months. In Sept., 1906, Mr Wm. Ouridge, of Lachute, urged me to try MINARD'S LINIMENT, which I did, with the most satisfactory results, and to-day I am as well as ever in my life.

Yours sincerely,

A Warm Tribute.

It was in a little country town in the west of England, says the Bristol Mirror, and Mr. Goodman, excellent citizen and kind-hearted man, allowed himself, much against his own will, to be chosen mayor for the fourth time. After the event, he met Mr. Jones, one of his warmest admirers, who shook him heartily by the hand.

"I'm right sorry, Mr. Mayor," said the worthy man, "they've put-ten on you the trouble of officiating for another term with all your many calls and worries of business; a far worse man would have suited us—but that was just the trouble. We couldn't find him—and it's my opinion as he ain't to be found."

"He is a self-made man, I am told." "Quite true; but his mother-in-law insists on making some alterations."

INTERNATIONAL STOCK FOOD

Makes Cows Give More Rich Milk.

International Stock Food conquered England, just as it conquered Canada and the United States, by proving to the Dairy Experts that it is the greatest milk producer and health restorer in the world.

The test was made on three cows from the dairy herd of S. W. Hackney, Esq., Leeds, England, Chairman of the Yorkshire Federation of Dairy Farmers.

Quantity and quality of milk was tested for a certain time—then "International Stock Food" was added to the regular feed.

INTERNATIONAL STOCK FOOD showed an Increase in Milk of 14.2 pints daily, and 1.21 pounds of butter daily.

This proves that International Stock Food, added to the regular feed will increase the quantity and improve the quality of milk from every cow.

It shows that International Stock Food aids digestion and keep cows in better condition. It proves that International Stock Food is a money-maker for the farmer—that every farmer who owns one, or a hundred, cows should feed International Stock Food every day.

Make the test yourself—weigh the milk you are getting now—then feed International for a few weeks, and weigh again. Then you'll see how International Stock Food will make money for you.

International Stock Food is sold by dealers everywhere.

DR. GORDON URGES BIBLE IN SCHOOLS

"By Denominational Divisions We Have Crippled Religion" He Declares—Education and Religion Must Go Together.

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—"We have suffered much as a people from denominational divisions, and we have allowed these to prevent the teaching of religion in our schools. In the very name of religion we have crippled religion."

In these words, Rev. Principal D. M. Gordon, of Queen's University, before a large audience in the Normal School summarized a strong plea for religion in the common schools. Important in view of the present agitation in regard to the public and separate schools, and the teachings of religion in the latter. Dr. Gordon's address caused much interested comment.

Religion and education must go together," he said. "The moral and spiritual of our intellect must be cultivated and unless the teacher can do his or her part in this, he or she has no place in our schools."

It was most important that some place for Bible instruction should be found in school life. The day in the public schools should start with the recital of the Lord's prayer, and there should be Bible reading and memorization of passages from the Scriptures. Of the educational value of Scripture reading, there was no better example than Sir Wilfrid Laurier, with his apt use of Biblical quotations.

"The parents of the children are more anxious that their offspring should receive a moral training than we are ourselves."

G.T.R. Railway Notes

A report originating from Ottawa to the effect that the Delaware & Hudson Railway has refused to ship any more coal into Canada as they are unable to obtain return of their cars from the Canadian railroads is officially denied by the Grand Trunk Railway. Mr. D. C. Crombie assistant to the Vice-President in charge of Transportation, states that far from this being the case the Grand Trunk has supplied the D. & H. with empty cars which is needed for its own purposes in order to assist the latter company in getting anthracite coal into the Dominion. During the period between November 1 and 17, 547 D. & H. cars were delivered to them by the G.T.R. as well as 452 cars the property of the Grand Trunk and other roads, making a total of 999 cars. During the same period only 379 cars were received by the G.T.R. from the Delaware and Hudson so that there is now a deficit of 620 cars to be returned by the D. & H. to the Grand Trunk loaded with coal.

Tuesday morning at the 11 o'clock service there was dedicated in Christ Church Cathedral, Montreal, a handsome memorial tablet to the late Vivian Payne, secretary to Mr. Chas. M. Hays, who went down with his chief on the ill-fated "Titanic". This memorial is erected entirely by Grand Trunk employees, a large number of whom were present at the dedication.

The Grand Trunk Railway has just placed 10 new engines on the Middle Division in Ontario to take care of the manifest freight traffic and within a short time a total of 40 locomotives will be added to the power equipment for the same purpose. This first consignment has been assigned to the Sarnia terminal. The locomotives were built by the Kingston works and are modern in every detail. The latest improvements include the Walchaert valve motion, Smith's superheater, and steam grate shakers. Immense power is provided by 23 inch cylinders that make the engines capable of hauling heavy manifest freight at great speed. For the first time, it is understood, the company is equipping its engines with electric head-lights and a complete electric lighting system.

After three months absence there has just returned south on the Grand Trunk Pacific S S. "Prince Rupert" the Alaska Railroad Commission sent by the Washington Government to inspect and report upon the railroad conditions in that part of the far north, and it is upon their report that federal action with regard to the railroad situation in Alaska will largely depend. While the Commission naturally had no jurisdiction over the Grand Trunk System so much had been heard of this wonderful new transcontinental line that the party left their steamer at Prince Rupert to inspect the road as far as Hazelton as well as the new terminal and dry dock now being built on the Pacific coast by the G.T.P.

To new subscribers paid in advance, The Leader will be sent from now until Jan'y 1st, 1914, for $1.00.

Itching Palm Oil.

"Palm oil," a synonym for "graft," is not at all a novelty in this sense. In 1627 Middleton wrote that "palm oil will make a pursuivant relent." The sixteenth and seventeenth centuries reveled in varieties of the metaphor. Greene speaks of rubbing palms with the "oile of angels," a humorous allusion to the coin named after the angelic figure stamped upon it, and "oil of angels" seems to have been quite a common joke in England. Another writer has a reference to "anointing" an ecclesiastic in the fist "with Indian oyle." Both "anointing" and "greasing" were frequently used to mean bribing, even without special mention of the hand as the part greased.

To Cure Snoring.

"At a banquet," said an editor, "I once heard Jerome K. Jerome make a speech on snoring. I remember that it ended with these words: 'To cure snoring it is advised that a piece of soap be dropped into the mouth of the snorer. The oil in the soap will lubricate the pharynx and other Latin parts of the throat. This remedy must be applied with caution; otherwise the snorer will arise and lubricate the floor with the person who dropped in the soap'."

Goes Either Way.

A machine operable from either end, like a street car, has been evolved in England, and it is probable that the first car will make its appearance on London streets in a short time. The 'bus is steerable from either end, and when it is desired to proceed in the reverse direction, it is only necessary for the driver and conductor to change places.

Coaxing the Motormen.

Offering prizes to its motormen for the most effective operation of cars by an English company has resulted in a saving of 25 per cent. of the current.

Could They Hit That?

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT

A Young Massena Woman the Victim of a Gun Accident in the Hands of a Six-year-old Boy.

Massena, Nov. 25.—Miss Jennie Upell, aged about 19, whose home is in the lower part of this town on the St. Lawrence river road met with a serious accident on Saturday forenoon about 11 o'clock which will cost her her life.

The young woman had gone to the home of her brother, Herbert Upell, about three miles from here up the State road in the town of Louisville. At this place was a boy of about 14 years, not a member of the family. The boy was preparing to go hunting and had a 22-calibre gun which he had loaded for the hunt. Mr. Upell warned him not to leave the gun about as there were children there, but the boy forgot the warning and went out, leaving the gun. Shortly after, little Arthur Upell, aged six, picked up the gun and in playing with it in some way pulled the trigger and the charge entered the neck of Miss Jennie Upell who was in the room. The vertebra was broken and the unfortunate girl was immediately paralyzed and rendered perfectly helpless.

Dr. J. C. O'Brien, of Louisville, was at once called, and he called Dr. C. E. Elkins of this village, and later Dr. G. C. Madill of Ogdensburg was consulted, but the physicians all agreed that there was nothing that could be done except to make the girl comfortable as possible for the short time she could live. At last reports she was still alive.
