Peace Period in Europe Seen by Drew

One of the largest audiences in the history of the Morrisburg and District Canadian Club, was on hand at the Wednesday night meeting to hear the guest speaker, Hon George Drew, predict a long period of peace in Europe.

Mr. Drew, who recently from an extended tour of European countries, based his belief on the almost incredible change that has come to European countries within the past few months. He stated we had never lived through a more challenging period in history. For us and for our children this could be the dawn of a great day of new hope, and perhaps we were closer than any of us could imagine a few years ago to "The Parliament of Men, the Federation of the World". It could be, he said that, unintentionally, Russia had performed a great service to all mankind. The terrible threat to Western Europe may have brought that dream closer to reality.

The speaker was introduced by the president of the club, J. Harvey Johnston, and was thanked by the vice president, Major F. M. Cass of Winchester.

Thanks of the club was also expressed to the ladies of the Morrisburg United Church, who prepared and served the dinner.

SAVER—GRIMES WEDDING AT ST. JOSEPH'S, OTTAWA

With Rev. Father Laurence Conlin officiating, the marriage took place Saturday in St. Joseph's Church, Ottawa of Joan Isobel Grimes, and Byron Johnston (Jack) Saver.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Katherine Grimes and the late Percy A. Grimes and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Byron J. Saver of Iroquois.

White and yellow gladioli and mums were used throughout the church for the ceremony.

The soloist was Allan J. Martin and the organ music was played by Charles Pare.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Michael Grimes was attended by her sister, Miss Mary Elizabeth Grimes as maid of honor and Miss Beverley Markwick as bridesmaid.

Wilfred Gibbons was the best man and the ushers were Glen Ault and Arliss Casselman.

For her marriage the bride chose a floor length gown of white nylon tulle over taffeta trimmed with Chantilly lace. The jacket, also of Chantilly lace, was fashioned with a Peter Pan collar, and had long sleeves coming to points over the hands. Her fingertip veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a coronet of lace trimmed with seed pearls.

Following a reception at 95 Echo Drive the bridal couple left for a wedding trip to the southern United States. On their return they will make their home in Iroquois.

To travel the bride chose a tailored wool suit in cinnamon shade. Her feather hat was in matching shade and her accessories were of patent leather. Her corsage bouquet was of bronze and yellow mums.

Out of town guests were Mrs. Allan Longstaff, Rosemere, Que.; L. H. Ryan, Alcove, Que.; Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Saver, Mr. and Mrs. B. Johnstone, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Bouck, Mrs. S. Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs Arliss Casselman, W. Gibbons, Mr. and Mrs. A. Fisher,, C. Carpenter, all of Iroquois; Mr. and Mrs. Glen Ault, Spencerville and Mr. and Mrs. T. Parker, Morrisburg.

MORRISBURG HIGH CONTINUES THEIR UNBEATEN STREAK

Morrisburg High School made it four in a row by defeating Winchester 31-11 in their E.O.S.S.A. Football League. The game featured clean, wide open football which exemplified sportsmanship. The ever-present teamwork on the part of Morrisburg enabled them to "bottle-up" their opponents, while their powerful ground attack scored consistently.

In previous games, Morrisburg defeated Metcalfe High by scores of 11-6 and 42-19 and Finch High by a score of 28-21,

Morrisburg presently leads their league with 4 wins for 8 pointt; Winchester and Metcalfe are second place ties with 4 points each, and Finch brings up the rear without a single point. All teams have played four games.

Marian Campaign Is Huge Succses

Returns in the fund raising campaign for the House of Providence and St. Mary's of the Lake Hospital, following the first report meetings held in parishes of the Archdiocese of Kingston, totalled $528,419, it has been announced by campaign general chairman Barry J. Stafford. Mr. Stafford commented that reports still outstanding from parishes and special contributions committees assure the campaign of an oversubscription to its $600,000 minimum goal.

The campaign, known as the Archdiocese of Kingston Marian Year Program, opened its general solicitations period last Sunday in an effort to raise funds to provide a 100-bed addition to the House of Providence for the needy aged, and a 138-bed addition to St. Mary's of the Lake Hospital for the incurably ill. The House of Providene also plans to fireproof existing buildings to protect the infirm residents.

In announcing that achievement of the goal was in sihgt, Mr. Stafford pointed out that the overall program for the two institutions will cost in the millions of dollars. Though part will be financed through grants by the federal and provincial governments, a maximum oversubscription of the goal will ensure added protection, comforts and facilities for the aged and infirm of all religious denominations. The General Chairman urged all who had not contributed, to do so immediately in order that the success of the program can be an overwhelming tribute to the efforts and generosity of the people of this area of Ontario.

LOCAL CAMPAIGN SUCCESS

Obviously delighted with the response to the campaign from his parishioners, Rev. W. L. Terrion, pastor of St. Mary's Church, Morrisburg and St. Cecilia's Church, Iroquois, has issued the following statement:

WELL DONE, ST. MARY'S

You have responded nobly to the Archbishop's Marian Year Appeal on behalf of St. Mary's of the Lake Hospital and House of Providence. You have pledged close to $9,000.00 within the space of the past week.

On behalf of the long list of patients who are waiting to be admitted to both these institutions, I convey to the officers, the canvassers and the givers of St. Mary's Parish, their deepest gratitude. No parish in the diocese has done better than the people of St. Mary's. We are proud of our results and we are glad to do our share in making the House of Providence a safer place in which to live, and to give the chronically ill every comfort that it is humanly possible to provide.

Gratefully,

REV. W. L. TERRION.

Women's Institute

The regular meeting of the Women's Institute was held in the Public School Auditorium on Thursday evening, October 14th. This was a family meeting and was largely attended by members and their husbands, as well as many visitors.

A Leaders' Training school for the district will be held in the Agricultural Rooms November 11 and 12. Mrs Chas. Hummell and Mrs. Burton will represent the Institute. It is hoped to have a class of junior girls from 12 to 26 years take the course to be given later. They will oe taught to make something in wool — a skirt, or a jumper, or a skirt and waistket.

Mrs. Grant Beckstead, with Mrs. Lee Casselman as alternate, was naced delegate to the Area Convention to be held in Ottawa November 10th, and 11th.

Members voted to cater to a dinner to be served to the Dundah Teahh ers' Convention meeting here October 28.

The Committee for Agriculture and Canadian Industries under the convenorship of Mrs. Harvey Johnston and Mrs. Albert Utman had charge of the proyram.

Thihs opened with a sing song with Mrs. Edith Murdock as accompanist.

Mrs. Donald Merkley favored with a vocal solo "My Air Folk" and responded to an encore with "Lucky Old Sun". She was accompanied by Mrs. George Smith. Mrs. Ray Coligan gave a reading "Moo Cow Moo" and as an encore gave two appropriate recitations "September" and "October".

The guest speaker, Kenneth Workman, Past President, Westboro Kiwanis Club, showed very interesting slides taken in different parts of Canada, giving a running commentary. This was greatly enjoyed.

Mrs. Kinkaid, on behalf of the Institute, thanked the guest speaker, as well as Mrs. Coligan and Mrs. Merkley for their contributions to the program.

Harvey Johnston, speaking for the men and other vistors, thanked the Institute and those on the program for a fine entertainment which was much enjoyed by all.

A social hour followed with refreshments served by the committee in charge.

MRS. E. S. CASSELMAN

Funeral services for Sarah Elizabeth Casselman were conducted on Monday, October 18th by Rev. J. L. Kirchhofer, pastor of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Williamsburg.

Mrs. Casselman was a resident of Irosuois since 1924, until the death of her husband, E. S. Casselman, in 1953, after which she lived with her daughter at Williamsburg, until her death.

Although she did not enjoy good health for a number of years, she was not confined to her bed.

Her body was brought to Iroquois and rested at the Fitzsimmons Funeral Home, where numerous friends and relatives called to pay respect to her memory.

Mrs. Casselman was born in Williamsburg in 1873, a daughter of the late Isaac Casselman and Martha Merkley. In 1897, she married Elery S. Casselman. To this union were born three children, Reta, Merton, (deceased) and Garnet. They resided in Williamsburg and Dundela for a number of years, then taking up residence in Iroquois.

Although Mrs. Casselman was not able to be active in community affairs, she mad many friends due to her kindly and amiable disposition.

Left to mourn, is a daughter, Mrs. Howard Saddlemire (Reta), of Williamsburg; a son, Garnet, of Iroquois; and a nummber of grandchildren, great grandchildren, nieces and nephews.

The numerous floral tributes reflected the high esteem in which the deceased was held.

Pall bearers were Messrs. Logie Serviss, Jack Fetterly, James Brouse, James Smith and Wm. D. Knox.

Interment was in the family plot at Dundela cemetery.

BARKLEY — CRITES

St. Peter's Lutheran Church parsonage, Williamsburg, was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding recently when Miss Audrey Crites, daughter of Mrs. Hersie Crites of Farran's Point, became the bride of Mr. Garnet Barkley, son of Mrs. Joseph Barkley and the late Mr. Barkley. In the absence of Rev. J. L. Kirchhofer, the ceremony was performed by the Rev. George Dunlop.

For her wedding, the bride wore a navy blue suit, white hat and accessories and a corsage of American Beauty roses. Miss Jean Crites, the bridesmaid, and a sister of the bride, wore a navy suit and similar accessor ies to the bride.

Mr. Orlin Barkley was best man for his brother.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's uncle at Aultsville, which was prettily decorated for the occasion with pink and white streamers and white bells, sweet peas and carnations.

Receiving the guests were Mrs. Crites, mother of the bride, who was dressed in a navy crepe dress and a corsage of pink roses, and Mrs. Barkley, mother of the groom, who wore a gabardine skirt and white silk blouse.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Barkley left on a motor trip to New York State and Niagara Falls. On their return they will reside at Williamsburg.

Among the out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Crites of Canton, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Baden Empey and son and daughters, Gerald, Margaret and Kathleen Empey, Farran's Point; Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Cooper, Miss Rosemary Empey, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Gothard. Miss Darlene Crites, Mr. Robert Crites, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Crites, Mrs. Hersie Crites and family, Leslie, Winnie and Brian Crites, all of Farran's Point; Mr. Keith Crites of Wales; Mr. Eugene Fobare and Miss Eleanor Fobare, of Waddington, N. Y.

NEW HEATING SYSTEM FOR PICADILLY THEATRE

As an added convenience to movie fans in the way of some solid comfort a new oil furnace heating system has been installed at the Picadilly Theatre in Williamsburg. Announcement to this effect was made this week by Mrs. A. J. Casselman, the theatre owner.

Installation of the new heavy duty Atlas unit was completed this week by a Morrisburg heating and plumbing firm. Steam heat through radiators will still be maintained, but at a more even temperature made available by the better system of control.

Due to an unforseen delay in the arrival of partts the actual completion of the job was delayed for several days, and any inconvenience caused theatre patrons because of cool conditions while the furnace was not operating, in regretted by the management.

The new system, it is thtought, will offer more comfort to moviegoers who, it might be added, are in for some real fine entertainment at the Picadilly during November and December.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM

by Gwendoline P. Clarke

Standard time . . . wonderful! We were able to use that extra hour very nicely yesterday morning after a somewhat strenuous week — two days in Toronto, our county fair on Saturday, and upon our return from the Fair a newly arrived calf which we had not expected for several days. In looking back over the week that two days in the city were the most tiring. By careful planning I hoped to get all my business done in one day. But the rain put an end to that idea. After splashing around in Toronto without rubbers, raincoat or umbrella, by four-o'clock I was fed up! phoned home to make sure everything was all right, spent the night with Daughter and resumed business the next morning — or tried to. That day it not only rained, it hailed as well, and the wind was terrific. As I came out of Eaton's College street store, a miniature whirlwind lifted my hat from my head, twirled it along the pavement for awhile and then playfully hid it under a parked car, well out of reach. A gallant gentleman came to the rescue and by means of a rolled-up newspaper, managed to retrieve my headgear. Later I was on Yonge below Wellington, where trucks, graders, compressors and other road machinery was at work. The sidewalk was blocked off leaving one narrow roadway for pedestrians and traffic so I had to pick my way among the aforesaid machinery. Later I was at Arthur's office and his sister said — "Wherever have you been? One side of your face and neck is all black streaks." That really made me happy.

But of course there were some bright spots in by two dull days. The first day I was at a luncheon meeting and had the privilege of meeting and hearing a gentleman I have always greatly admired — via the radio — Leonard Brockington. He spoke only briefly but in five minutes he said more than most people could say in an hour. If only more radio personalities had his speaking ability.

The second day I had lunch with a friend of long standing, followed by two fact-finding hours in the Reference Library. And of course at Dee's place there was our grandson — eleven months old today. He is not yet walking, except in his playpen, which is just as well as he is a very big-built baby with plenty of weight to carry around. But the fact that he isn't walking doesn't keep him from getting to wherever he wants to go. He navigates flat on his tummy, arms and legs going like a frog in water. Maybe he'll be another champion swimmer! Every time I see him he has added a few more items to his bag of tricks. What babies will do to attract attention. A visitor, 14-months-old Robin, was put in the playpen with David the other day. They had a great time together until David picked up his stuffed bunny and used it to whack Robin over the head!

That evening I left David and his parents; Toronto and its noise, rain and traffic; and came home by train. The comfort of home life was never more appreciated than it was that night.

Then came Saturday — a beautiful day. Partner and I headed for our local fair which as usual had plenty of attractions for town and country alike. What always amazes me is the colossal amount of work that is so obviously necessary to make such a fair a success. Just think of the man-hours it requires. The directors, busy for weeks ahead, planning for the exhibits. The exhibitors, training and conditioning their horses, livestock and poultry. The carefully selected grain and garden produce. The flowers, baking, sewing, fancy-work and novelties. The children's work, done with such painstaking pride and skill, directed by an understanding teacher. The Woman's Institute exhibit, a collection of work, done by many skilful fingers. In fact, every animal, every exhibit, is the culmination of concentrated effort.

This year at our fair, there were two new displays which attracted a good deal of attention. One was an exhibit of character dolls with costumes entirely hand-crocheted — and all the work of one woman. There was Red Wing, the Gibson Girl, a bride and groom, little Red Riding Hood and dozens of others. The collections showed great originality and excellent workmanship. Then there was a section given over entirely to needlecraft by New Canadians and which included beautiful samples of embroidery, darned net and delicate cross-stitch on a sheer background. Another section featured outstanding pictures painted by a Dutch farmer.

Any board of directors who encourage an exhibit of this type deserves great credit for helping to bring before the public the splendid work which so often comes from the skilful fingers of our New Canadians.

ANNE HIRST

Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: What letters you receive! From a man who didn't appreciate his wife until she was gone. From a wife who is treated like a servant. Another with in-law trouble. One married to a miserly husband, another faces the other-woman problem.

"How would these women feel if their husbands did ALL these things? That's where I sit.

"Since we married 17 years ago, I've borne two fine children. One of them gets pneumonia every winter; I suffer from it, too. I have helped my husband in his business. I've taken care of his mother who always lived with us though her daughter promised her a home. (Incidentally, our house is in his and his mother's name.)

"My husband is a penny-pincher: I've never been given a dollar to spend. He is not affectionate; in the past several years I could count the times he has kissed me. He nags incessantly. I have always felt there were other women through the years, but try to prove it!

"I guess I shall have to die, too, before he appreciates me. I feel about as important as a a chair in the house, and I'm a slave to boot.

"Meantime, what is my answer? I can't run home to Mamma. I can't leave and get a job, I never know when illness will strike my boy. I am stuck here, aren't I?

"God bless your readers whose husbands have only one fault! I wonder if you, or they, have anything to say to me?

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

● If your faithful agent happened, by some dire mischance, to be a referee under the jurisdiction of the Canadian Rugby Union, his sleep at nights during the season would be beset by horrid spectres and hideous dreams. For, in any game, a nightmarish situation could suddenly face the interpid souls, through no fault of their own, but via rules which uncertainly govern the actual play.

We mean that rule concerning invasion of the playing field by an "unauthorized player" who dashes from his bench, on sudden impulse and brings down an opposing player who happens to be scampering by, at the moment, running free and clear. It still isn't as clear-cut and definite as a rule of such importance should be.

Being an optimistic soul, we somehow gained the impression that at last the CRU had got away from the timorous rule that left the situation in uncertainty, and had come up with sharply etched legislation so that a touch-down to the team offended against became completely automatic, instead of leaving the referee in the middle.

But the new rule isn't quite that sharply designed. It's full of deceptive verbiage. Clause B sets forth that when an invasion of the field by an unauthorized person occurs, when it is obvious to the referee that a touch-down might have been scored, he shall award a touch-down. Any unauthorized player or players shall be immediately disqualified from further participation in the game.

That doesn't make the touch-down automatic. Not the way we read these things. It still leaves the offence a matter for official judgment.

But, in slightly contradictory fashion, Clause C sets forth that should the unauthorized person who invaded the field be a player, coach, trainer, equipment man or any other person permitted a place on the team bench, an automatic touch-down shall be awarded. This is the right ruling, the straight-forward ruling, whereas Clause B. merely confuses and leaves room for argument.

So if any player should dart from the bench this season and overthrow a running rival, he had better shout: "I'm working under Clause B," which will put the onus right on the officials, the poor guys who are always in the middle.

Tulip Planting In October

Tulips are the last of the spring-flowering bulbs to be planted in autumn. They can go in any time before the ground freezes—even after a thin crust of frozen ground must be broken through — but October is the best planting time.

By choosing among the many colors, shades, and varieties, one can be sure of a display of spring flowers from the end of daffodil-blooming on into early summer when the garden borders begin. Their lovely satin cups can be planted in mixed colors or can be carefully arranged in more formal fashion, the colors massed to tone into ne another like the bands of a rainbow.

Earliest is Red Emperor, giant among tulips, handsome deep red cups on tall stems, flowering with the late daffodils. Then come the Early single and double types, their stems shorter than the later varieties, their cups in clear reds, yellows — primary colors, chiefly. Climax of the tulip pageant comes with the Darwins, Breeders, and Cottage tulips.

The Breeders, oldest of all, provide the rich, dark colors. The Cottages are lighter, brighter,on shorter stems, with pointed petals, and often more informal in looks. Among the Darwins are most of the silken beauties in reds, pinks, mauves, lavenders, although all three have been developed in exciting shades and tone combinations.

A good autumn bulb catalogue should introduce you to some of newest varieties of tulips as well. The Parrot tulips with ragged petals and interesting orchidlike shapes are favorites among these. It is best not to have too many, for they are highly dramatic in the border. Fantasy, a gorgeous pink Parrot, is a beauty worth beginning with.

Lily-Flowered and Peony-Flowered are special varieties or forms of Cottage tulips, but usually listed separately. Lily-Flowered have spreading pointed petals; Peony-Flowered are very double, the blooms rounded and actually very like a peony blossom. Multi-Flowered or Bunch-Flowered produce several on one stem, the flowers smaller, often with contrasting centers.

For the rock garden the "tulip Species" add a delightful note to the spring garden. Kaufmanniana, sometimes called Waterlily tulips, have wide-open cups in lovely tones and colors, some bi-colored. Clusiana is another Species tulip, also called Lady tulip. There are many more.

It is worth while to invest in top-quality bulbs, for your tulips last for many years. Prepare the soil deeply — eight to 10 inches — adding sand if needed, to insure good drainage, and plant food. Dig holes larger than the bulbs, to be sure the bulbs lie on well worked, well drained soil with no danger of air pockets below. The top of the bulb should be about six inches from the surface.

Santa Claus Travels Faster Than You Think

BY DOROTHY MADDOX

Of all the traditional goodies served during the Christmas season, the cookies seen only at Yuletide seem to bring a special flavor of Holiday to almost everyone.

Inasmuch as many varieties are "keepers" that improve with age, it's not too early to start baking your supply in the near future.

Here's a cookie that you can make up about three weeks ahead of time. Lyle's Favorite Raisin-Nut Drops

One cup brown sugar, ½ cup butter, 1 egg, ½ cup sour milk or cream. 1⅓ cups bread flour, ¾ teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon ground cloves, ¼ teaspoon soda, ½ cup chopped raisins, ¼ cup chopped nut meats.

Cream butter and sugar, Beat egg and add to the mixture. Add flour slowly, while stirring. Then add remaining ingredients and mix thoroughly.

Drop batter from teaspoon on well-greased cookie sheet, and bake in moderate oven (375 degrees) about 15 minutes.

Start baking early, if you'd enjoy the cookies that are traditional with the Christmas season. Many varieties are long-keeping.

Gift of Speech From Convicts

Never had sweet-faced, two year-old Lucia Bechelli been able to utter the words, "Mamma" and "Papa." For this only child of very poor parents living in Carrara, Italy, was born dumb.

They knew that an operation by a famous surgeon could cure her. But how could they afford the 100,000 lire it would cost?

Lucia's father offered to sell one of his eyes to an eye bank to raise the money. News of his offer was published in the local newspaper, a copy of which fell by chance into the hands of a man serving a life sentence for robbery.

The prisoner showed it to his fellow prisoners. If they all went for months without the only pleasure permitted them in prison—their cigarettes—they could raise the 100,000 lire, he said.

They did so. The little girl's despairing father, whose offer to sacrifice an eye had been turned down, was amazed to receive the full sum from the prisoners, most of them were hardened criminals.

So impressed was the surgeon that he undertook to perform the operation without the fee. "Use the money for providing Lucia with special hospital comforts afterwards," he told her grateful father.

One wonderful day recently Lucia spoke for the first time. She said prayers for the surgeon whose skill had given her speech and for the score of convicts who had made the sacrifice for her.

And when she came home from hospital her mother guided her little hand as she wrote a note of thanks to the prisoners

When the prison governor heard of it, he invited Lucia to come to the prison so that they could hear her voice lisping her shy thanks.

Puzzler For The Insurance People

French insurance companies are having to think up a new clause in their policies to cover the danger of jealous husbands since a recent court case has shown a loop-hole in the classic formulae.

Monsieur X, driving carefully as was his custom, saw in front of him a car bearing his wife and a man he strongly suspected of stealing her affections, on what could only be described as a joy-ride. Stepping angrily on the accelerator, he tried to overtake them, tooting wildly in the approved French manner, only to see them speed ahead.

A chase followed in which Monsieur X threw caution to the winds, savagely bumped their left rear mudguard, and furiously made a dash to hit the leading car on its right side. The quarry pressed forward and, seeing the possible haven of a one-way street, and hoping that Monsieur X's well-known habit of careful driving would prevent him following, dashed into it, preferring to risk a summons for breaking traffic rules rather than face the irate husband of his now almost hysterical companion.

Undaunted, Monsieur X followed. And it was his misfortune to knock down a pedestrian who stepped casually off the curb at that moment.

The insurance company now seek to prove that the clause which covers wilful damage can exonerate them from making payment. But the court ruling suggests that wilful damage was not intended to the pedestrian. It would have been a different matter if Monsieur X had been successful in causing damage to his original intended victims.

MANY HAPPY RETURNS

Forthy years ago James L. Wilson was granted a $200 scholarship at Columbia University to enable him to carry on with his pre-medical studies.

.. PLAIN HORSE SENSE ..

By F. (BOB) VON PILIS

One of the most newsworthy aspects of the recent Convention of the Canadian Congress of Labour, but completely ignored by the daily press, was the fact that the keynote speech on the first day was given by a farmer.

The speaker was Albert Cormack, President of the Ontario Farmers Union; his subject was the inter-dependence of farmer and labour and the necessity of closer cooperation between the two groups.

Mr. Cormack spoke of the many misunderstandings between rural and urban people and the lack of knowledge of each other's problems. Urban people should know that farmers are receiving only 44 cents of the consumer's dollar while 56 cents are going to distribution.

He reminded the audience that the farmer was getting only half of last year's price for his beef, but that the retail price has not come down correspondingly.

"Farm income is down, farm purchasing power is down," said the farm leader, "and you men in the factories are beginning to feel the result of growing unemployment in industry."

He urged the Congress to do more educational work among its members and to work towards more co-ordination of their activities with farm organizations.

Mr Cormack's address was well received by the delegates who listened attentively. There was none of the usual reading or talking going on in the big hall while the farm union president spoke.

In the afternoon of the same day the main speaker was Honourable T. C. Douglas, Premier of Saskatchewan.

Again the main theme was farmer - labour relations. Mr. Douglas spoke of the same problems which had been discussed in the morning and pointed out how some of them had been solved in his province.

He emphasized the importance of the labour legislation put on the books of Saskatchewan by a farmer government.

He elaborated on the Health program of the province, other social services and how they were financed partly by direct contributions of the people and partly by revenues derived from the companies exploiting natural resources.

Both speakers, although approaching it from different angles, came to the same conclusion, namely that through cooperation Canada's people could have a fuller and more abundant life.

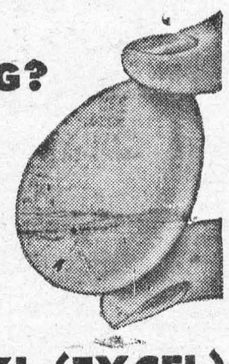
WHAT PRICE ONE EGG?



Ever divide your production costs by the number of eggs produced? It's the price you pay to get one egg. Cut those costs with balanced feeding. Follow the XL (EXCEL) feeding programme — for economical egg production. Better feed means higher egg production — lower costs per dozen eggs. And the lower the costs, the greater your profits!

Cut Your Costs with XL (EXCEL)

Make your layers pay. Your birds need the added essential nutrients in XL (EXCEL) feeds — the proteins, minerals, vitamins. Cut your costs this way:—

Have us mix — 3 bags your grain —
1 Bag XL (EXCEL) 32% Egg Producer Concentrate.
or 4 bags your grain —
1 Bag XL (EXCEL) 35% Laying Concentrate.
Then — watch egg production go up and costs go down!
If you haven't your own grain — feed XL (EXCEL) Laying Mash.

Runs Away From Girls Who Saved His Life

Others might hesitate to plunge into a raging sea and face razor-edged reefs and crashing waves, but for Eastbourne's girl life-guards there is no such word as fear, nor do the seas hold any terrors for them.

Three people were drowned at Eastbourne in 1948 primarily because there were no life-savers. So a few strapping Sussex lasses got together and decided that they would do something about it.

Since then the voluntary life-savers there have gained nine medals and distinctions from the Royal Life Saving Society, as well as having won eight inter-county and five national life-saving competitions.

Their work is not only patrolling the beaches and watching out for the unwary swimmer who ventures beyond his depth, it also takes in some people who like to lie and sleep near the waterline.

A few weeks ago, for instance, a visitor from London brought along a comfortable rubberfoam bed, six feet long and two feet wide. He placed it close to the water's edge and lay down on it to read and sunbathe.

Presently he dozed off. The tide came in and gently lifted him — and when he woke up he was 150 yards off-shore! To make matters worse, he couldn't swim.

He started shouting for help and two of Eastbourne's girls, Miss Joan Brown and Miss Shirley Page, heard him.

Out they went and towed the terror-stricken visitor back to the beach. The moment he put his foot on shore, he dashed off towards the town, leaving his "bed" behind and quite forgetting to thank his rescuers.

Such incidents enliven the day for the thirty girls who work with fifty men and boys to keep the beaches safe.

Recently an elderly couple hired a rowing boat and went cruising in the Channel. The man, however, was no oarsman. He turned the boat against large wave: over they went and neither could swim.

They were a hundred yards out, but the man managed to grasp the upturned keel of the boat, shouting for help while his wife was going under the water.

Frank Deadman, doyen of Sussex life-savers, dashed into the sea and struck out in a fast crawl for the boat, knowing that the woman had little chance of survival.

He got to her as she went under for the third time. But Frank Deadman dived and clutched at her dress and dragged her up. In her panic she fought furiously and scratched him repeatedly, but he was able to manoeuvre her around and strike out for the beach with her, where willing hands dragged them to safety.

The old man had drifted some 250 yards out by then, and no other life-guard was in sight on that Monday afternoon.

Once again Mr. Deadman went into the sea. He reached the boat, and calmed the panic-stricken man.

"Now," he said quietly, "turn over on your back when I take your shoulder and just relax."

Thirty minutes later, in the hardest battle he has had in his life against all possible odds, Frank Deadman felt hands grip him as he reached the beach, dragging him and the semi-conscious man to safety.

Police on the top of Beachy Head spotted a small rowing boat with a solitary occupant who seemed in trouble, a few weeks ago. He was nearly half a mile offshore. They telephoned Eastbourne pier; but the lifeboat was out.

Joan Brown was the girl nearest the point, and in spite of the distance, and a stiff breeze with high waves, she dived into the sea and struck out for the boat. It took her twenty minutes' swimming to reach it; and she found that the man in it had lost an oar and was unable to scull with one. The boat was drifting towards the rocks.

Theere was only one thing to do as she was unable to tow the boat in — bring the man in!

He could swim a little but she made him go on his back and float and then started the long swim back with him, resting now and then, and finally bringing him to safety. When she was asked for a statement for the press, she smiled. "It's all part of the job," she said simply.

"This is for hiding the cheese!"

Roof Doubled Value in Forty-Six Years

When the dome of Colorado's fine State building at Denver was covered with gold leaf forty-six years ago, the officials who spent 4,000 dollars on it were sharply criticized for their extravagance.

They have just been acquitted of the charge. For an expert who went aloft to inspect the gold leaf not only announced that its condition was a good as new, but estimated that in 1954 the gold leaf is worth about 9,000 dollars.

The finest gold leaf is rarely affected by the atmosphere. Every shower washes it clean.

Wielding 20-lb. hammers, gold-beaters took many hours to reduce it to the almost incredible thinness of one 280,000th of an inch on marble slabs. After the hammering, the leaf looks almost transparent.

Pure gold leaf is worth at least $12,000 adorns the railings of Buckingham Palace. Gold leaf glistens on the Albert Memorial, on the great cross on the dome of St. Paul's Cathedral, on the Houses of Parliament and the figure of Justice above the Old Bailey, London. The 30,000 gold leaves supplied for gilding the cross of St. Paul's were so thin that 1,250 only weighed an ounce.

Marilyn and Joe Thumb Cupid Out of the Game

It was sheer storybook stuff. He was the No. 1 glamor king of the athletic world. She was the No. 1 glamor pin-up of the whole wide world. So when Jumpin' Joe DiMaggio and busty Marilyn Monroe said their "I do's" before San Francisco Municipal Judge Charles Perry, it was hailed as the greatest Hollywood marriage of a decade. That was on Jan. 14 of this year. Less than nine months later, on Oct. 4, Marilyn said it was all over and that she would seek a divorce. "Incompatability"—which can mean almost anything and often does—was the reason. In this case it was translated as "career conflict." Quiet Man Joe hated the fast-paced Hollywood social whirl. He preferred his old pals of baseball and the sports crowd. Marilyn loved the Hollywood premieres, parties and publicity. Marilyn and Joe met two years before their marriage on a blind date. It led to love, marriage—and blind alley.

Marilyn and Joe have to force their way past eager newsmen when they leave San Francisco City Hall after their civil marriage there on Jan. 14 of this year.

A calm Joe and a gaily smiling Marilyn wave goodby as they leave San Francisco for an Oriental honeymoon. First stop was Tokyo, where they opened the 1954 Japanese baseball season.

Whistles and a real riot greeted her when she went to Korea with "something for the boys."

Last splurge of Marilyn headlines and photos ca me when she went to New York last month to shoot scenes for "The Seven-Year Itch." She gre eted the Big Town with a bee-stung kiss (left) and stopped traffic when her skirt was blown up for a movie scene. Joe was reported deeply irked.

"Lost" Manuscript A Thrilling Tale

One sunny morning at the beginning of the last century, a fresh-faced sailor, John Wetherell by name, was strolling the streets of Harwich, feeling on top of the world. He was young, he had just become engaged, and to crown everything he had secured a berth as a mate in a West Indiaman.

Having said good-bye to his fiancee—whom he would marry on his next leave—he was en route to join his new ship at London. Should he travel there by road or by sea? He chose the sea . . . and thereby condemned himself to adventures, ordeals and triumphs that were to last many years.

It was the heyday of the press gang, the brutal yet essential arrangement whereby men were kidnapped and compelled to serve in the Royal Navy, then fighting against Napoleon. As ill luck had it, the press gang was out when John Wetherell sailed to London.

A warship was sighted . . . boats alongside . . . cutlasses winking in the sun . . . within five minutes Wetherell and the crew had been overpowered and impressed as seamen in the Fleet.

Years afterwards he wrote his life story, which was lost. Book collectors the world over searched for the manuscript—searched for nearly a century—then, quite by chance, a few years ago, an American woman discovered it in New York, among second-hand books belonging to a sea-lover.

Today this amazing and enthralling log of a Jack Tar has been published as "The Adventures of John Wetherell" with a preface by C. S. Forester of "Hornblower" fame.

John Wetherell had a grim introduction to life in the fleet 150 years ago. Almost on his first day he saw a defaulter lashed to the mast while bucket after bucket of sea-water was forced down his throat through a funnel. Afterwards, the poor wretch was left naked in an exposed part of the ship's rigging.

Not long after, as one of a boat's crew, Wetherell rowed with muffled oars to an unsuspecting French ship at anchor. He was prepared for a grim and bloody battle. But the enemy were so taken by surprise that the whole crew surrendered without firing a shot.

His next adventure was less fortunate. While Wetherell was below decks a fellow seaman disobeyed an order for which, by an incredible miscarriage of justice, Wetherell was held responsible. When he protested his innocence, they gagged him with a pump bolt while he received 48 lashes with the dreaded "cat."

He was then told to go below. His injuries were so terrible that he could not move . . . so he was flogged again for disobedience. It is only fair to say that rank injustice was very rare, and although discipline was stern (it had to be, for the impressed sailors included jailbirds), Wetherell pays remarkable tribute to the gallantry and fairness of the vast majority of his officers.

Not long after that he survived yet another ordeal while attacking an enemy warship. In hand to hand fighting the slaughter was so terrible that the dead were piled knee-deep among the survivors, and Wetherell's own shoes were filled with blood. Incredible though it sounds, he fought on despite the fact that his left leg, right thigh and shoulder breast bone had been shattered by bullets. They were certainly tough in those days!

A semi-comedy was his next adventure, for his ship struck a reef off the French coast, and the survivors—hungry and half-drowned—found themselves on a small enemy island. Undaunted, they recovered some small cannon from the wreckage, waded gallantly ashore again, and—having captured the governor—seized the island for King George.

Unfortunately the capturers were very soon captured, and poor John Wetherell found himself a prisoner of war for the next ten years. But not even then did his adventures end. He was force-marched hundreds of miles across France . . . witnessed a public torture . . . was nearly burned alive when the jail caught fire . . . fell in love with a French girl who gave him money to ease his captivity . . . saw Napoleon face to face . . . and in the end reached freedom.

His story has a happy ending. Back in the Merchant Navy once more he rose to the rank of skipper, married an American girl from Connecticut, and lived to a good old age in New York City, little guessing that his sailor's log would make him the talk of literary London in the year 1954.

PANESTAKING BURGLAR

A thief with a great sense of tidiness recently paid a visit to the home of Jesse Blanchard in Waterbury, Conn.

He neatly removed a pane of glass from the street door through which he gained entry. Just as carefully he replaced the pane of glass after making his exit. With him went 5 sheets, 2 pillows, 24 lbs. of flour and two 1-lb. packets of baking powder.

At 13 Months, She's Newspaper's 'Constant Reader'

Like many an older person, 13-month-old Linda Kay Thornburg, is "lost" without her daily newspaper. While no one claims she can pass an examination on what she "reads," she has devised a charming little game of her own. It consists of spending a great deal of time with the paper, playing that she is reading it in a most realistic manner. Her eloquent facial expressions suggest something like the comments under the pictures. Linda also has a favorite book that she likes to carry around and "read".

"Now there's a character for you!"

"Just get a load of that politician's guff."

"Beats heck what's in the news, though!"

"Ah. Nothing like your newspaper and an easy chair!"

THE FARM FRONT

by John Russell

Whenever a buyers' market replaces a sellers' market we become aware of the need for more research in the field of marketing. Through mechanization, fertilization, plant and animal breeding, and better farm management, Canadian agriculture increased its volume of production by more than 50 per cent in the last dozen years. Now supply has caught up to demand and emphasis is turning again to marketing and the related business management aspects of agriculture, writes Professor D. R. Campbell of the O.A.C.

Results of a recent survey in California indicate the possibilities and practical advantages of planned economic enquiry in this direction. Examining ways to reduce the cost of handling and processing pears in just one district, the California study revealed that more efficient methods could produce an annual saving of $600,000.

Comparable research here in Canada would undoubtedly uncover similar opportunities for improvement. Within the limits imposed by the amount of the Canadian consumer dollar spent on food — at the present time about 11 cents of it goes to the farmer and about 12 cents to agencies between farmer and consumer — there are several ways of increasing the profitability of all phases of the agricultural industry.

One is to reduce the costs of the farmer by research in technology and farm management; a second is to induce consumers to spend more on food and services; a third is to reduce the cost of services between producers and consumers.

Research institutions, both public and private have undertaken the first problem; sales promotion is handling the second. But the third—the streamlining of all parts of the agricultural marketing machine—is a field almost untouched by Canadians. If our farming industry is to continue along the path of progress, it is a subject that must receive more and more serious attention at all levels, both now and in the future.

Broiler producers, faced with the problem of raising early-feathering birds and thereby reducing picking time, loss through cannibalism and the possibility of chilling if a brooder fails, can take heart from results of the latest studies conducted on their behalf by scientists.

The studies show that early-feathering chicks can be selected at broiler ages; that feathering is affected chiefly by a sex-linked factor; and that a simple breeding program can remove all late-feathering chicks from a flock in from one to four generations. The length of time depends upon how many early-feathering birds are in the flock and whether a breeder will use cockerels from an outside source in this breeding program.

If a substantial number of a flock already are early-feathering birds, then true-breeding, early-feathering stock is a one-generation program. If none of the parent stock is early-feathering, the trait can be established in three generations by introducing early-feathering males.

A pullet gets all her sex-linked inheritance from her father, and passes it on only to her sons. A cockerel gets half of his from each parent and passes it on to both sons and daughters. That is all one needs to know to select early-feathering birds and breed them for early-feathering characteristics.

How to select true early-feathering birds at broiler age had not been known, however, until recent studies by Dr. Clyde Mueller and associates at Kansas State College. Their findings, reveal that early-feathering birds begin molting tail feathers when six weeks old. The molt spreads from the centre of their tails outward of both edges.

Each juvenile feather gets a clear shaft and hardens before it is forced out by the post-juvenile feather that replaces it. Some early-feathering birds begin showing short centre tail feathers when six to 12 weeks old. The short feathers are the postjuvenile (second set) of feathers. Upon examination the two sets are easily distinguished because the post-juvenile feathers on birds six to 12 weeks old have softer shafts, larger in diameter, and not so clear at the base as juvenile (first set) feathers.

A new seed disinfectant now available to Canadians virtually has eliminated the dust that used to be a necessary accompaniment to the treating of seed grain and forced farmers to wear masks for protection.

The new disinfectant is applied in liquid form and dries on the seed without "dusting off" during the treating operation or later when the seed is bagged and handled.

Seed disinfectants are designed to control seed-borne and soil-borne disease affecting small grains such as wheat, rye, barley, oats and flax. When used according to recommendations, they prevent seed decay and reduce seedling blights caused by destructive organisms at a cost of only a few cents an acre.

The protective chemicals now are available in a variety of forms and strengths: liquid, for use in ready-mix treaters; a standard dry formulation; and the new dustless powder which is dissolved in water and mixed with a special sticking agent to ensure complete coverage of the seed.

Indicative of the widening interest in better seed is the construction of a new seed research laboratory at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. Work has begun on the $285,000 building which will contain plant breeding laboratories for the major field crops as well as a modern seed-cleaning plant where foundation seed and the various selections used in plant breeding will be cleaned and treated. A special course in seed cleaning is also planned.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Rev. R. B. Warren, B.A., B.D.

The Dignity of Work
Proverbs 6:6-11; 18:9; 24:30-34
Memory Verse: Seest thou a man diligent in his business? He shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before mean men. Proverbs 22:29

Employers are doing considerable complaining. One said, "You can put a D.P. in the back there and he will work away from 8 to 5. But the others — they see that I have come and sat down so they think they should sit down too." Some people complain that the new immigrants are getting jobs while those who were born in this country are out of work. One employer said, "They (the immigrants) are the only ones who want to work."

Now, of course, general statements such as these are not true in all cases. It must be remembered that the workers in their twenties have only known the boom years of our country's economy. Many of them started to work in the war years when employers were desperate for help. They never knew the seriousness of the hungry thirties. Should the present recession deepen there will be a drastic revision of the general attitude toward work.

It is dignified to work. Man can only have what man produces. The distribution of the produce is not always what it should be. Sometimes the man who does the least work makes the most money out of it. Communism is not the answer to this problem. A more unselfish attitude on the part of employer and employee will help. When a dispute arises and a strike follows it is often because of selfishness and pride. The leaders on either side have made such strong statements that they feel that they cannot afford to lose face.

We need more of the spirit of Jesus Christ that will enable us to love one another and earnestly desire the welfare of each other. When the spirit of greed, selfishness and pride disappear, it will be a better day for us all.

We have so much to protect

This Canada of ours — is ours to enjoy at a price — the price of constant alertness.

We cannot take for granted our freedom to worship, to vote, to educate our children, or to order our home life as we please. All these freedoms are ours only as long as we are willing to do everything necessary to maintain and defend them.

All honour then to the Canadian Soldier — the steadfast guardian of all our free institutions. Without men like him, the Canada we love might cease to be.

We have so much to protect. Let us all do our part, without let-up, whatever way our duty lies.

SERVE CANADA AND YOURSELF IN THE ARMY

To be eligible you must be 17 to 40 years of age, skilled tradesmen to 45. When applying bring birth certificate or other proof of age.

Apply right away — For full information write or visit the Army Recruiting Centre nearest your home.
