House And Barns Burned at Melvin

About two o'clock last Friday morning the barns of Mr. Abraham St. Pierre were discovered to be on fire from an unknown origin and so far advanced that nothing could be done to save them. In a short time the house, which was occupied by Mr. Wm. Brisbois and family, caught fire and the large family of small children managed to escape to a neighbour's, while part ot their clothes bedding and furniture was saved. A strong south east wind was blowing which carried cinders directly over the buildings of Mr. Leon O'Neil, whose carriage shed caught fire but was extinguished. The loss of the buildings is partly covered by insurance. The house which was one of the old landmarks of Melvin Settlement was built by Duncan Earle, about 45 years ago and one of the barns about the same time, the other two being added later. For a number of years the farm was owned by the late Andrew Broder M. P. Since then it has changed ownership several times.

The grain and hay were completly destroyed and all other contents of the barns. Mrs. Brisbois has been in Smiths Falls Hospital for some weeks therefore the symphathy of the community goes out to the family in this added trouble.

Jury's Verdict "Accidental Death"

Tuesday evening in the Town Hall, the jury inquiring into the cause of the accident which resulted in the death of George Murray, of Bombay N. Y., who was killed when the auto he was driving was struck by the C. P. R. Montreal—Chicago fast train on the morning of Tuesday, Sept. 6th, returned a verdict of accidental death, without placing the burden of responsibility on anyone, adding that the crossing in question was a menace to the travelling public and warning the public that great care should be exercised when approaching it.

Engineer Thomas Martin swore that every precaution had been taken by him to avoid the accident. The whistle had been sounded for the crossing at the usual place, about eighty rods distant. The auto was seen by him when it was 200 or 300 yards from the crossing. It appeared to be going fast. When it did not appear to be slowing up the whistle was again sounded and the emergency brakes applied and the train was brought to a stop in about 1800 feet, being about three car lengths after passing over the crossing, where the auto had been struck. Martin considered that a good stop had been made as his train was travelling at fifty miles an hour, when it was evident the auto was not going to stop. He did not think that the auto had come to a standstill where it was struck.

Fireman Jeffrey being on the opposite side of the engine did not see the striking of the car. He had heard the warning whistle and said the bell was still sounding when the train was stopped, after continuous ringing up to that time.

Mrs. Murray, wife of George Murray, said none of the party had heard any warning whistle or the ringing of the bell. The auto was a sedan with all windows closed. She was sitting on the side away from the track and had not noticed they were approaching a railway crossing. The car was a new one and was running at a moderate speed. Her husband was an experienced driver, having handled a car for two years.

Geo. H. Baker said he lived opposite the point on the railway where engines gave warning of their approach to the crossing. He heard the regular blasts of the whistle, but had not heard a second warning, which might be accounted for in the wind blowing from the east away from him. There was a crossing sign at the south side of the tracks but he did not remember seeing it from his place a thousand feet away, but he believed it could be seen at that distance.

Kenneth Baker and Willis Casselman had not heard any second blasts of the whistle.

Thos. Hamilton had not heard the second whistling. He had heard strangers refer to the crossing as a dangerous one.

Mrs. S. Smith and Mrs. Boxell gave unimportant evidence.

J. H. Forbes, Division Engineer of the C. P. R. was on the train. Had noticed the application of the emergency brakes. He believed that the crossing could be made safer by the placing of a warning sign on the North side of the track, although the Railway Commission called for but one sign at such a crossing.

Officials Receive Promotion

C.E.E.Ussher
GENERAL PASSENGER TRAFFIC MANAGER
CAN. PAC. RLY.

C.B. Foster
PASSENGER TRAFFIC MANAGER
RAIL LINES, CAN. PAC. RLY.

OFFICIAL announcement was made at the C.P.R. head office of the promotion of two of the Company's higher-up passenger officials. Mr C. E. E. Ussher is created general passenger traffic manager and Mr. C. B. Foster who has been assistant passenger traffic manager, eastern lines, becomes passenger traffic manager rail lines.

The new office of general passenger traffic manager created for Mr. Ussher is indicative of the world-wide activities of the Canadian Pacific organization which stretches from Europe to the Orient and Australasia, covering steamship services on both Atlantic and Pacific oceans as well as the rail lines. The Canadian Pacific fleet is now one of the largest mercantile organizations in the world, and involves traffic considerations almost as great as those of the railway itself. In addition, Mr. Ussher has charge of the extensive chain of hotels operated by the Canadian Pacific, the capacity of which is constantly being increased and which contribute no little to the passenger traffic of the railway.

A native of Niagara Falls, Ontario, Mr. Ussher commenced his business career as clerk in the auditor's office of the Great Western Railway in 1874. In 1880 he joined the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railway as chief ticket clerk and the Chicago & Atlantic Railroad as rate clerk in 1883.

In November, 1886, when the Canadian Pacific inaugurated the transcontinental services he was called in to become Chief Ticket clerk and was promoted three years later to be Assistant General Passenger Agent. In 1898 he was appointed General Passenger Agent Eastern Lines, and 1907 assistant passenger traffic manager. Since 1910 he has been Passenger Traffic Manager.

C. B. Foster who has been promoted to the position of Passenger Traffic Manager Rail Lines, was born at Kingston, N.B., in 1871, and has spent his whole business life in the service of the Canadian Pacific Railway which he joined in 1891 as stenographer to the division passenger agent at St. John, N.B. In 1902 he himself had risen to be District Passenger Agent at this point. Two years later he was transferred to a similar position at Toronto, and in 1908 was appointed assistant general passenger agent at Winnipeg. In 1910 he became General Passenger Agent at Winnipeg, and in 1913 was promoted to the position of Assistant Passenger Traffic Manager, Eastern Lines, with office at Montreal.

Skeleton Is Found After Three Years

After a lapse of three years, the clothing identified as that worn on the day of his disappearance by Christopher Hulbig, a younger man of about 30 years, was discovered by Eugene Hellefrund Saturday on the rocks about 200 yards east of Bob Lake narrows near Lindsay. A gun and small personal belongs carried by the young man on the day he went away were found by the clothing. Only the skeleton remained. A jury was empanelled, and then adjourned to await the decision of the Crown Attorney. The missing man left home on September 29, 1919, and although search was made his whereabouts remained unknow. The place where the effects were found is seldom visited.

Body Found After All Night Search

An all night hunt for Kenneth Phillips, a six-year-old Smiths Falls boy participated in by a large number of men and youths, culminated at 9 o'clock Sunday morning in the finding of the body of the child in a mill flume. The boy was last at home at noon Saturday and was supposed to have gone to a country fair. Shortly before midnight, the fire alarm was rung and a systematic search commenced. About a year ago the boy's father died leaving a widow and five young children.

Tied Baby Up in Parcel And Sent it By Taxicab

Mrs. James Long, aged about 35 years, was Saturday night placed under arrest at her home in Madoc Township, charged with child desertion.

Mrs. Long visited Belleville city on Saturday and had with her a child four weeks old. Failing to get the infant placed in the Children's Shelter, she hired a taxi driver to take a parcel to a party about four miles from the city. Upon opening the parcel the child was found nearly suffocated. In the meantime, Mrs. Long had taken a train for Madoc, but was subsequently located at her home and taken to Belleville by the police.

Rapids Prince Little Damaged

The Canadian Steamships Rapids Prince, which has been stranded on a rock in the Lachine Rapids since July 30, was released Saturday afternoon, and is reported to have sustained little serious damage. The freeing of the steamer was effected by Captain John Donnelly, of the Donnelly Wrecking and Salvage Company, of Kingston, Ont. The steamer was disabled when a rudder chain snapped on the evening of Sunday July 30. The huudreds of passengers who were on board at the time were safely removed the next day. One of the stewards, however, was drowned accidentally.

Father Adopts His Own Six-year-old Daughter

Six-year-old Rose Edna Casey, of Worcester Mass, has become the adopted child of her own father by decree of the Probate Court, thereby revealing one of the strangest stories that has ever been recorded in the courts.

The decree, signed by Judge Frederick H. Chamberlain, permits Mr. and Mrs. Carlton E. McDougal, of Worcester, to adopt the child and change her name to McDougal.

It was only two years ago that the little girl's mother, Alma C. McDougal, died, and she and her brother, Harry Gilmore McDougal, were adopted by their maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Paicide Casey, of Worcester, and their names changed to Casey by authority of the court.

Then the grandmother died, and McDougal remarried. He and his second wife decided to adopt the girl. The child's grandfather, with whom the boy is now living assented to the change of name and adoption.

Why He Saved Him

There were two negroes down in Georgia, an old one and a young one, sitting on the same log, fishing. The young one became very drowsy, while waiting for the bite that never came. He kept nodding and nodding, until finally he lost his balance and fell into the river. A benevolant old Georgia gentleman, who just then chanced to pass that way, was delighted to see the other fisherman fling down his pole and line, plunge into the river and rescue the boy. The old gentleman said to the negro: "That was a noble act of yours to save that boy's life. Is he a son of yours?". "Oh, no," said the old negro, "he ain't no son ob mine." "But why then, did you take such an interest in saving the boy's life?" asked the gentleman. "Why, de fac'lam, massa, dat boy's got all my bait in his pocket."

Barker: "Why does a woman always keep a man waiting so long after she says she'll be ready in a minute?" Harker: "Because she picks out a minute about half an hour away."

Ducks Are Scarce

After a little more than a week of open season the concensus of opinion among hunters is that the duck hunting is poorer this season than ever before. In fact, it is said that there are more hunters than ducks, only a very occasional black duck is seen, and divers, which are generally numerous around the shores and marshes, are very scarce. The great majority of hunters have reported no success so far.

Objects to the Pants

A horse owner was trying to sell a wind-broken horse, and was trotting him around for inspection. The owner stroked the horse's back and remarked to the prospective buyer:

"Hasn't he a lovely coat?"

But the other noticed that the horse was short winded, and answered:

"Ah I like his coat all right, but I don't like his pants."

Be Warned in Time

Oshawa Telegram

A man who thought he could not afford to take the "Telegram" sent his boy to borrow the copy taken by his neighbor. In his haste the little lad ran over a hive of bees, and in ten minutes looked like he sounded. His cries reached his father, who failed to note a barbed wire fence. He ran into that, cutting himself severely, ruining a perfectly good new suit. The cow took advantage of the gap in the fence, and got into the corn. Hearing the racket his friend wife also ran out upsetting 4-gal. churn of rich cream into a basket of kittens and in her alarm she broke her new $20 set of teeth. Indoors, baby, left alone, crawled through the cream into the parlour, ruining a brand new carpet. During the excitement the eldest daughter ran away with the hired man; the dog broke up eleven setting hens, the calves got out and chewed a few holes in some of the best linen on the line. To School Principals and Teachers:

By Royal Proclamation, His Excellency the Governor General of Canada has been graciously pleased to designate the week commencing October 2nd, 1922, as Fire Prevention week. The object of the period thus set apart for observance, is to reduce the tremendous fire waste of the Dominion, especially that which is directly due to carelessness and avoidable causes. To the furtherance of this purpose, it is recommended that special instruction on the subject of Fire prevention be given by the teachers, that suitable literature be distributed to the pupils and that drills be held in all schools, colleges and educational institutions throughout Canada.

It is obvious that the schools of Canada provide one of the most fertile fields for propagating the truths of Fire prevention. If the minds of the young can be impressed with the fact that carefulness and cleanliness characterize good citizenship, fire waste in Canada will eventually decrease. The lessons learned at school will be carried home and cannot but measurably affect parental habits. Will you therefore during the school week commencing Monday, October 2nd, carrying out the programme we have herein suggested?

It has too frequently been stated that the teaching of our schools fails to touch practical things and does not prepare the pupils to take an intelligent part in everyday life. If the observance of Fire Prevention Week, 1922, awakens general interest in conditions that cause the annual destruction in Canada of property worth more than $45,000,000 besides hundreds of lives, such will be eminenently practical. Habits of care so inculcated and the sense of personal responsibility so created, will relate the teaching of our schools to a subject that measurably affects the economic welfare of the nation at large and vitally concerns every community and every individual in the land.

A Bad Sign

Teacher (seriously)—Do you know who is the laziest person in this room?

Percy (innocently)—I dunno.

Teacher—You ought to. Who is it, when everybody else is industriously studying, sits and watches the rest or looks out of the window?

Percy (brightening)—Why, you, Miss Jones.

The Fear of Lightning

St Thomas Times-Journal.—There is much less risk during a thunder storm than there is of being run over by an automobile on a highway. Nevertheless, many usually intelligent beings, knowing thunderstorms to be mostly harmless, fear them—or let themselves fear them by mere self-suggestion. Of course, nature helps to create apprehension over a thunderstorm by the excellent way in which it is gradually staged. There is a tremendous suggestion in the preparations. The atmosphere is tense, the sky menaces with awe and there are deep rumblings of the coming storm that have a natural cumulative effect on those who claim to have nerves and those who get satisfaction out of timid poses.

The very prologue of a storm heightens its effect until the final outbreak, after long drawn out preparations. There is created a sort of apprehension that really needs a tonic of slow, mechanical work to keep the mind from suggestion of danger. The mind should be occupied on ordinary things, routine toils, and kept away from storms and results. There is really no much to apprehend, if you figure it all out. The silliest thing possible is to do futile things during a storm. People that "prepare" for a storm do lots of infantile things that should shame themselves. Putting knives and forks away, turning mirrors to walls, opening doors and windows, pulling down blinds, or shutting off lights are childish things to think of in a storm. After that it is worse to sit down and and think of the coming crash. All such foolishments make people think there is real danger in a thunderstorm simply by thus suggesting it to themselves.

Highest Tea-Room in the Empire

Hundreds of tourists this summer drank tea in this tea room, 7985 feet above sea level in the Canadian Pacific Rockies.

A few days ago there opened the highest tea room in the British Empire, 7,985 ft. above sea level on Saddleback range, in the Canadian Pacific Rockies. It is one of the quaintest of log-cabin shelters.

If you care to follow one of the loveliest mountain trails, we can climb together. If you believe in wood nymphs, if you love Alpine flora, so much the better, for the forest paths are aglow with starry flowered faces.

Leaving Lake Louise the trail plunges immediately into the wooded aisles of Mount Fairview. Each turn and a more beautiful vista. Mossy slopes where grow the saxifrages in their natural environment. Frilly fungi holding dew-drops in their cup-like receptacles, in grayish green colorings, offset the browns of the fallen pine cones.

Rhododendrons grow wild here. To meet them growing wild on a mountain slope in the Canadian Rockies is truly a joy. There they are in close proximity to the wild heliotrope.

On we climb, pausing to revel in a valleyed panorama. Far down below is Paradise River, winding and twisting, like a platinum ribbon unfurling in a wayward wind. Little Lake Annette, shy and demure, lies in a hollow. A lazy marmot creeps out to see what human dare disturb his morning siesta. Gazing at us in a disgruntled manner, he saunters off, whistling to his mate that enemies were approaching.

As the cliffs become less tree-clad, vegetation becomes less prolific. But to recompense this lack, nature had clothed the rocky crags with heather. Yes, there it is, the white bell-like blossoms proclaiming their message of love.

Another climb, this time over rocky stones, where one steps cautiously, envying the agility of the wild mountain rabbits that dart back to shelter at our approach, and we reach the goal of our ascent! We have climbed to seven thousand, nine hundred and eighty-five feet above sea level!

True to its name, sits the Saddleback Cabin Tea-house, resting between two higher peaks, which take on the appearance of a Mexican saddle.

Snow-capped Mount Temple stands guard while trails leading to Sheol Valley and Paradise Valley look enticingly attractive.

A delightful English atmosphere permeates the interior of this old cabin, the original portion being well pencilled with names and dates as far back as 1899, by mountaineers, who sought shelter for the night, or protection from a short-lived blizzard, which occasionally varies the monotony of too perfect weather.

The hostess, a charming, fair haired English girl dispenses true old-world hospitality, and has made a happy selection of cottage pottery, for use on the log-pedestaled tables, done in dull blue tones.

Decking the tables are wild flowers blending harmoniously their colorings, the large mountain aster in soft lavender tones snuggled up closely to the yellow arnica; the plumy seed pods of the chalice cup soften the vivid red of the Indian paint brush, and the purple beardtongue and heliotrope are also tucked in together.

A strapping youth from Calgary climbs the trail twice a day with provisions, for this "top-o'-the-world" tea-house, and carries buckets of snow to be melted for the brewing of tea.

Miss Annette Whyman, who manages this unique tea-house is truly a keen lover of the open. Laughingly she told of the resentment of the squealing marmots, the thorny porcupines and the rock rabbits, when she first took possession of this log cabined mountain shelter. Two sleepless nights were spent, listening to the all-night sessions held by these furry creatures, over the advisability of evacuating their stronghold underneath the flooring. Finally, after much arguing, they decided a move was imperative.

To those of you who love the great open spaces, and the grandeur of mountainous trails, the writer would recommend this climb, filled as it is with the best that nature gives.

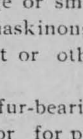

—Dorothy Perkins.

Miss Kenny Showered

A miscellaneous shower was tendered Miss Kenny on Monday evening, Aug. 28th, at the home of Mrs. L. A. Mackie, Sunnyside, where a large crowd gathered to do honor on the occasion of her approaching marriage, in which she is about to leave for her future home in Morewood. About ten o'clock the bride-to-be was brought to the parlor by Miss Aggie May Burd and Annie Wagner and placed under an arch of evergreens where she was showered with beautiful presents by Helen Armstrong and Jennie McNeill, while Miss Anna Bell Burd read a very appropriate address. After thanking her friends for the honor done her, the crowd sang "She's a Jolly Good Fellow" after which supper was served and an enjoyable evening spent.

A Long Cold Winter

In the same issue that announces the return of anthracite miners to work, is a report from Clarkson that we are to have a long and cold winter. The squirrels, chipmunks field mice, and other small animals of the woods are said to be already building their Winter houses, and these are extra warm and strong. Considering that all of last week was very warm with a July temperature, we believe the announcement respecting the return of the coal miners to be somewhat more reliable.

It is not yet safe to believe the squirrels, chipmunks, and field mice of Clarkson in their anticipations of a cold winter. The groundhog, the beaver, the peacock, the furry animals of the North have yet to be heard from. Last Winter for instance, the woodmen of the North told the newspaper correspondents that the beaver had built dams extra high. The bark on the trees was exceptionally thick. There were a dozen confirmatory indications—and we had a mild Winter. The Winter before was to have been a severe one. A peacock on Long Island began it with thick black scales on its feet, whereas it had usually been content to have light yellow ones. The squirrels, beaver, and other furry animals had extra thick coats and made special food preparations. But it was a mild Winter. So in middle September, the advices from Clarkson have to be taken on trial. Affidavits may be necessary, or else the people may be inclined to believe that a coal man with his Summer home at Clarkson has been hobnobbing with the squirrels and mice.

Considering that there will be a considerable anthracite shortage in the early part of the season, at any rate, the crop of rumors respecting a hard Winter will probably be much larger than the supply of coal. But severe Winters have been out of fashion in this part of Ontario for several years, and if the coming Winter is severe, it will be the operation of the law of averages.

The Eagle Screams

Ottawa Journal—During the recent debate at Washington on the tariff, with the item of cotton under immediate consideration, the Senator from Arizona said: "When civilization was imperilled, and our cavalrymen of the clouds were carrying the pennant of victory in their beaks and the American emblem in their talons, our brave aces and aeronauts felt secure. They knew they would not fail, because the wings of their steeds were made of Arizona long-staple cotton." This was all very pretty, and no doubt electrified the House; but not all the Senators were disposed to ignore the practical aspects of the matter in their appreciation of mere imagery. It has come to pass that even Americans are not all carried away by rhetoric.

The first critic said: "If we get as badly mixed in our logic as we do in our metaphors, God knows where we will end before discussion is over." That was to the point. Even an airplane cannot very well be an eagle and a steed at the same time, to say nothing about the doubt as to whether it was the talons of the flying cavalryman or the machine which held the American emblem fluttering among the clouds. But another Senator was straight to the core of the matter when he said—"We never had an airplane made out of long-staple cotton in the war, and everybody knows it. We did not get any airplanes over there." There was cold logic, and the naked truth too. The cavalrymen of the clouds may in rare instances have been Americans, but they certainly were not flying in American airplanes.

The Senator was touching a raw spot when he bluntly told the rhetorical gentleman from Arizona that not a single American airplane had been flown in France during the war. They were to have been there in large numbers. By 1st July, 1918, to be specific, 22,000 American airplanes were to have been in use in France, in the hands of American airmen, and with all the necessary equipment. Congress had appropriated $860,000,000 for this elaborate programme, and the world was told much by the specially organized publicity bureau of the wonders of the Liberty motor. The appropriation was spent, and nearly $300,000,000 additional; but the United States did not land an airplane in France on 1st July 1918, nor at any later date. Her "cavalrymen of the clouds" were therefore unable to carry "the pennant of victory in their beaks," or to demonstrate the marvellous qualities of Arizona long-staple cotton.

Exchange Mysteries

Vancouver Province—It is announced from Toronto that Canadian money has been exchanged there at a premium over United States currency. For some time past exchange between the two countries has been practically at par. As yet no adequate economic reason has been given for the heavy premium that Canada has paid to the United States in the past few years. If it had been the result of the adverse balance of trade the exchange would still be heavily against this country. We have not redressed the balance of trade, but are continuing to buy from the United States more than that country buys from us. The explanation lies in the field of psychology more than economics. Canadians seem to have paid the premium on United States money because it was demanded, and now they stop paying because they can do business without it. This is not much of an explanation of our payment of twenty to fifty millions a year for several years as depreciation of perfectly good Canadian money. But it is the substance of the reasons that are given by the financial experts.

The Destroying Fire

By Nina Moore Jamieson

The busy time is working to its climax. Morning after morning the whistle of the thresherman salutes the air, and at evening, as the clank and rumble tells of one job finished and another in prospect, we sigh a little in anticipation. Threshing—then silo-filling—then ease the tension a little

It does seem a terrible pity when a man gets his crop into his barn and then fire comes along and wipes it all out. "No insurance"—"Loss partly covered"—these items figure variously in the newspaper reports of such catastrophes, but no matter what insurance there may be the loss is fairly paralyzing.

Surely there have been a great many of these fires this year—or is it just that I have noticed them more? Not so long ago a neighbor of ours had his house burned, losing as well, all the contents, and that was a depressing event. But just a few days ago the barn was destroyed by fire on the place where we lived before coming here.

Spontaneous combustion, folks said, from sweet clover in the barn, caused the outbreak. John and I were both rather overwhelmed when we heard the news, and we straightway went back to see about it.

It used to be that we could see the buildings from away south, for they perched on the side of a big hill. But there was only a naked space of unfamiliar outlines; the red roof refused to turn up at the usual turn of the road. Heaviness weighed upon us as we made the corner and came slowly towards the gate. There was the pear orchard, withered with the heat. The fruit lay on the ground or hung dejectedly from the branches.

The trough and pump where we used to water the horses had ceased to be. Of the great sweeping tree that stood to shade the stable yard with its graceful branches, and weathered even the fearful sleetstorms of last Winter there was only the brown and ruined trunk with gaunt arms outstretched, drooping as if in despair.

I did love that tree. it was so clean, and breathed the air up high above our heads. I used to think it spoke to the sun and the sky, and then leaned down to tell us—just as you have seen a mother lean down to whisper to her child The moonbeams in Winter time coming lightly through the twisted blackness of its limbs, made changing patterns on the snow. But the old tree is done for now,

The silo that John toiled over, last season, was scattered in ashes, near and far. The metal rods were tangled and knotted, and some of the ensilage still showed, a baked and blackened cake, down at the bottom of the pit. That silo was in the ground about ten feet, I think, when it was put up. We expected it to last a generation anyway.

Such a time as we had, filling it! The corn was very good, and it was all cut by hand—so tedious a process in comparison with binder-cutting. The machine for putting the corn into the silo was a small one, and took a long time on the job, though I'm told that it makes better ensilage than the big coarse cutting, quick-filling machines.

But the silo and the ensilage are wiped out good or bad, and there is only the stone work of the foundation to show where it stood, The pigs in the pig pen roasted because there wasn't time to get them out. The poor silly hens did not know enough or they might have escaped easily. The horses were saved—the nice black team that came in after our Grit and Tory moved south—but the harness with its shining brass mountings, burned to a crisp on its peg on the wall. Think of it!

Being a tidy man, our successor had housed his implements carefully in the barn. And so lost them. If he had been the sort to leave his binder out in a fence corner from one season to another, the binder knives would not be lying among the ashes now, tangled like a bunch of string.

There he is with his horses, and no hay, no oats, no harness, no implements. No feed for his cows, no fat pigs coming on for tax-and-threshing money. Even his new cream separator "went up in smoke." He hasn't straw to make a hen's nest. That's what fire does in the country.

I think it struck John and me more heavily than it did anyone else except the owners, for we had memories and thoughts about it that no one else could have had. We had seen the red roof go on when the old one grew leaky. We knew just what it cost to have the stairs moved from the passage in front of the horses, and placed on the other side of the stable in front of the cows. I could look down against the north wall and see still the blackened chain that used to hold the big red cow that was mine to milk.

Onee when John was at a neighbor's wood bee, the twins undertook to let the cows out, and water them. It was cold weather, in March but they let the cows out about five times that day, and rejoiced as they put them in again. John, looking across from the neighbor's, saw and marvelled, but it did not hurt the cows. They liked it.

Once, too, when things had gone badly with me, and I felt hard pushed and wanted a quiet corner to cry in, I slipped out to the horse table, and crept up beside Tory, who was the kindest of the grey horses. I put my head down against her sleek warm neck, and she looked around so midly, so trustfully, that I just let a few tears come and no more. It seemed not so bad, then, because that big solid Tory let me lean awhile against her strength.

I remember the look of the sky as I came away. It was a clear deep blue, down across the valleys and the rolling hills. Little things seemed little, as they should. I had unhappily let the little things stand where great matters belonged, so of course my world seemed awry.

Up in that barn that now is only a memory, John and I stood many a time at the south door, watching the twins and there big brother as they took the short way to school. There I stood, too in some trepidation, on the day when my son first started out to "work a horse"

The granary was a place of hopes and dreams, too. We always made a survey after threshing, to see what we had, and what stock we could feed, and what need if any, there would be to buy. We used to sit on bushel boxes and make plans for the future. There we spent many an hour cleaning grain for seed, or filling it into bags to take to the mill before we got an engine and chopper of our own.

The root cellar was directly below. I remember one Spring John was selling a load of potatoes, and was called away on serious business before he could get them sprouted and bagged. So the youngsters and I went at them—oh, such a horrid job! Once and a while we came on a rotten or frozen one that went to pulp in our fingers. The sprouts were moist, and the root cellar was rather dark, and it was a stooping, grovelling sort of work that annoyed my finer, feelings very greatly.

At last we knocked off and started for the house to get supper ready As we crossed the yard we saw that we had visitors—and the floor was unswept and the house a trifle dishevelled, like ourselves. So we just made the best of it, and found, much to our surprise, that we were exciting much admiration in the hearts of our guests—not for our appearance, but because of what we had been doing with the potatoes! So enterprising so capable! We hardly knew ourselves!

And now it is all gone—the pig pen, hen house, straw shed, barn—with the big old timbers of early days, the prodigal abundance of space and material. The cement floors, and the masonery of the walls remain to tell what was. But to me, the memory abides. People passing along the road may say, "Too bad that barn was burned!" They cannot know the hopes and dreams we had in that plain old place during the years when it was our store house and work shop and place of business. It takes time to form that intimacy when a mere building becomes an old familiar friend. I feel a chill and a loneliness in realizing that it is gone—gone utterly.

Gives Damages to Smiths Falls Residents

Justice Lennox has awarded nominal damages of $20 each and costs on the county court scale against the Smiths Falls Board of Education, in favor of seven parents whose children were expelled from the schools while the smallpox epidemic was on in 1920. These children were not vaccinated. It is held that children may be excluded from the schools for this reason, but that in doing so the statute must be strictly complied with, which it was not in this case.

The judgment says;

"The status of three plaintiffs as ratepayers of public schools supporters, is not admitted, and the action will be dismissed as to these without costs. In a case such as this, children who have not been vaccinated can be lawfully excluded from the schools, if the provisions of the statutes to that end are complied with. The statutory proceedings justifying it must be carefully pursued. I think the statute has not been complied with, and that the plaintiffs, other than three, are entitled to at least nominal damages. Judgment for plaintiffs, other than Bashem, Cameron and Harrington, for $140 damages, $20 each, with county court costs, and as to the three plaintiffs named, dismissing the action without costs."

William Harwood, and other parents residing at Smiths Falls, who were conscientious objectors against a vaccination edict issued by the local board of health of the town in 1920, have been successful in the first round of their legal battle, in the Supreme Court of Ontario.

At the time of the hearing of the argument fifteen sets of stated facts were agreed upon, which traced the objections raised by Harwood for all to have their children vaccinated, and excluded from attending school. The plaintiffs sought damages, and during the course of argument the right of the individual to send his children to school, was largely stressed, and at one stage, Mr. Taylor McVeety, counsel for Harwood, maintained the exclusion of the children because they had not been vaccinated was "unlawful and unjustified."

Further the admitted facts showing that 11 cases of smallpox had occurred in the Smiths Falls district from Aug. 1st to Nov. 9th, 1920, and that the principal of the school had denied admittance to the children of the Plaintiffs because they had not been vaccinated. There had been no general order for the vaccination of the children of Smiths Falls. Later a vaccination order was posted, signed by order of "The Local Board of Health," bnt was not signed by Dr. C. L. V. Easton, the medical officer. It was contended the order was irregular and did not comply with the Public Health Act.

Keep On Smiling

When a dog is pleased he wags his tail and flaps his ears—but he can't smile. A horse expresses his sense of well-being by rubbing his head on your shoulder and neighing—but he can't smile. Birds chirp, cats purr, larks wheel high in the air and sing, roosters crow, monkeys swing violently by there tails from trees, bees hum—but man is the only member of the so-called animal kingdom that smiles. That's where he has it on every other living creature. When man is well pleased he can smile, and even when he isn't pleased he can give a pretty good imitation of a smile Of course, a smile isn't the remedy for every sovereign ill, but as the poet says, "It is easy enough to be pleasant when life goes by like a song. But the man worth while is the man who can smile when everything goes dead wrong."

The Year Around

A lady who is devoted to her home environment and stays there the year around was assailed by a friend who scarcely remains at home long enough to acquire an enviornment. Said the fashionable friend. "I know that you wintered here, but I was astonished to learn that you summered here, too." "I have not only wintered here and summered here," said the unfashionable one, "but you will be even more astonished tolearn that I always fall here and have sometimes prung here."

Friendship Groves

A farmer living a few miles Aurora, Illinois, has a lot of pleasure and gives many of his friends an enjoyable afternoon or evening by planting a Tree for a member of the party. He believes in recognizing the friend before he dies. The wife of this farmer enters into the same spirit of Tree planting and enjoys having the friends gather at their home and plant a tree for a friend. The occasion not only furnishes the opportunity for good friends to get together and have a good time, but also stimulates Tree planting in the community.

"I hope you were polite to papa." she said as he returned from the interview. "Polite? I treated him as if he were a king." "You didn't call him 'your majesty'?" "No, but I backed out of his presence."

Art Criticism

The famous artist had painted a portrait of himself and his wife. His little son, brought in for a private view, said; "I think its pretty. But who is the strange lady?" "Hyacinth," said the artist reproachfully, "don't you recognize your own mother?" "Oh, but then why did you paint her with that strange man?"
