Dr. Cyrul Fulton Dies Suddenly.

Dr. Cyril Fulton, a prominent physician of Lyons, N.Y., son of the late Oscar Fulton, M.P., for Stormont, died suddenly on Monday at Lyons. Dr. Fulton's brother, Lewis Fulton, 12 St. Alban's Street, Toronto, received word of his death and left on Monday to convey the remains to his former home at Avonmore, Ont.

Dr. Fulton, who was 40 years old, is survived by his widow but no children. He was Exalted Ruler of the Elks, and was also a member of the Grand Lodge of Elks.

The funeral takes place this afternoon at Iroquois.

Morrisburg Enterprise Asking for Protection.

A delegation from Morrisburg and Brockville, headed by Mr. Andrew Broder, M.P., and Mr. W. McComb, President of the Canadian Sheet Steel Corporation, Limited, on Monday waited upon Hon. G. P. Graham, and asked for the imposition of a protective duty on tin plate of 15 per cent. against the United States and 12½ per cent. against Great Britain and all other countries. It is claimed that the tin plate enterprise which was started some time ago in Morrisburg has found it is impossible to carry on the enterprise in Canada without the protection asked.

As the Government has many times considered the question of placing a duty on tin plate, and as it was thoroughly gone into by the Tariff Commission before the last revision of the tariff it is not thought that the application will meet with the approval of the Government on this occasion Mr. Graham promised to lay the matter before the Goveanment.

A young man named Mitchener made a vicious attack on Mrs. Geo. Duffy of Maberly a couple of days ago. Mitchener who was an orphan, had been brought up by Mr. and Mrs. Duffy, but owing to bad behavior had been dismissed by them and another young man was hired in his place. Mitchener came to Smith's Falls to live but a short time ago returned to his old home, and, finding her there in his place, he vented his former benefactress, the house at the time, made an at- Duffy ed in young been Coulthart—Edgerton.

On Tuesday, March 16th, 1909, at 4 o'clock, p.m, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Edgerton, Chesterville, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when their youngest daughter, Ethel Matilda, was united in matrimony to William Orvial Coulthart, only son of Mr. and Mrs. David Coulthart, of Morewood. The Rev. A. E. Runnells performed the ceremony. The bride was given away by her father, and little Miss Minnie Coulthart was flower girl, while the wedding march was played by Miss G. Coulthart, sister of the groom. The bride was dressed in white silk and allover lace and wore a wreath of orange blossoms in her hair. After the ceremony the guests withdrew to the dining room, where a sumptuous repast awaited them. A few hours were spent pleasantly, after which the young couple left for the train amidst a shower of rice, for a trip to Toronto and points west. The bride's travelling suit was of brown with hat to match. The groom's gift to the bride was a brooch set in pearls and rubies, to the flower girl a gold bracelet and to the organist a gold ring with pearl setting. Numerous and costly were the gifts received by the young couple. On their return a reception will be given at the groom's home at Morewood.

Nothing in the way of a cough is quite annoying as a tickling, teasing, wheezing bronchia-Cough. The quickest relief comes perhaps from a prescription known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And besides, it is so harmless that mothers give it with perfect safety even to the youngest babes. The tender leaves of a simple mountain shrub, give to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy its remarkable curative effect. A few days' test will tell. Sold by W. G. Bolster.

Missappropriation of Estate Money.

John Boyd, of Osgoode Township, was charged in Police Court at Ottawa, with theft by missappropriating $743.15 of the moneys of John Lee as executor for the estate of the late Sarah Lee. Boyd placed the above sum in the Bank of Ottawa there some years ago, acting as an executor for the estate of Sarah Lee. Later he was sued by John Lee for the amount and a judgement against him was secured. No money was forthcoming, however, Boyd having given it to his son. Boyd's defence is that he is holding the money for the proper legatees who have not yet applied for their shares. The prosecution claim he has converted it to his own use and the present action was enterred to punish him for the alleged theft.

Maurice Ryan was found guilty at North Bay of the murder of his brother Francis Joseph.

Hall at Newington Destroyed by Fire.

The Stormont Hall, Newington, was destroyed by fire on Tuesday of last week, along with the adjoining residence of Mrs. Emma Rombough. There had been a social in the hall early in the evening, and the fire broke out shortly after midnight. As the village is without fire protection, the fire could not be checked.

The contents of the hall, scenery, chairs and piano were destroyed. The building was owned by Helmer Bros., and was one of the finest country meeting halls in Eastern Ontario. It was partly covered by insurance.

Train Ran Into Load of Wood Near Prescott.

The G. T. R. mail train leaving Prescott struck about one mile from Prescott, a farmer's sleigh loaded with wood. The horses and driver escaped by the latter unhitching the king bolt less than a minute before the crash occurred. No one was injured, the only damage being done to the sleigh and the pilot of the engine. The cause of the accident was the sleigh sticking fast on the crossing.

TIME OF KINRADE MURDER

New Line of Evidence at the Adjourned Inquest.

Hamilton, March 19.—To-night when the Coroner opened his court every available nook was occupied, even the platform on which the presiding officers' chair was placed, and which had on other occasions been scrupulously kept clear, being crammed. The body of the hall was a mass of humanity, crowded as closely together as possible.

The evidence which was submitted can be roughly divided into three sections. The first dealt entirely with the movements of the Kinrade girls and others; the second told of the presence in the neighborhood on the fatal day of a man whose movements were regarded as being suspicious by some witnesses, and not unnatural by others; while the third and last section was the evidence of the doctors with regard to the result of their post-mortem examination.

ON BEHALF OF FAMILY.

It is of interest to note that the witnesses of the first and second class were called, so Crown Attorney Washington stated in an aside to the jury, at the request of Mr. G. Lynch-Staunton, K. C., who for the first time appeared in the interests of the family, and was associated with Mr. Thomas Hobson.

In the first place, it would seem that Mrs. Kinrade was on the street before 3.25 and after 3 o'clock, while Mrs. Clara Rudd, a neighbor, swore that she saw Ethel Kinrade in Herkimer street at 3 o'clock. In this she was supported by Charles Hossack, but there was a curious discrepancy between the witnesses. Mrs. Rudd stated that the girl was attired in a blue costume; Hossack was positive that the color of her dress was brown. Mrs. Rudd, however, has the advantage of being a woman, and the accuracy of the feminine sex for details of costume is a thing which no man can ever attain. There was, however, a remarkable expression of feeling in the court room as these details came forth. It was an expression to be felt rather than heard, and as if the eager auditors were of the opinion that at least some slight addition had been made to the slender array of facts of an absolute character which are in the hands of the Crown.

THE STRANGE MAN SEEN.

Then came a series of witnesses who gave evidence as to seeing a strange man in the neighborhood of the Kinrade house at a time which has so far been accepted as that at which the shooting took place. The most important of these was Mrs. King, who told that she saw a man running from an alley from which the Kinrade house could be approached. She was struck by what she termed his frightened looks, and watched him go to a neighbor's house, Mrs. Taylor's, knock, try the door, and remain there some minutes without getting a reply, and in the meantime throw anxious glances around. She saw him put his hand in his pocket several times, apparently take something out, and stoop over a box of rags. She spoke to Mrs. Taylor, who told that she had also seen the man, but had been too frightened to open the door. Mrs. Taylor was called, but was not in attendance, and will give her evidence later.

THE MAN DESCRIBED.

A Mrs. Sarah Willis also saw a man run along the alley past her fence, but attached no suspicion to the circumstance, while a third neighbor, Mrs. Cassels, thought it was just a man delivering goods, running from his delivery waggon. On one point they were agreed. The man wore a peak cap and a short, medium dark jacket. One also said he was very fair.

THE MEDICAL EVIDENCE.

Passing on to the medical evidence, it may be accepted as proved by Dr. Edgar, who, with the assistance of Dr. Balfe, made the autopsy, that Ethel Kinrade lived for ten or fifteen minutes after the wounds in the head were inflicted. She was actually killed by a bullet of 2 calibre through the heart. There were seven shots fired, which took effect, one only making both wounds in the scalp.

The inquiry was abruptly adjourned, for lack of further witnesses, until April 22nd, Mr. Blackstock saying that a lengthy postponement was necessary, indicating apparently that witnesses are to be brought from a distance.

BRITAIN IS GRATEFUL.

Appreciation of New Zealand's Offer of Battleships.

A despatch from London says: The Earl of Crewe has expressed to Sir Joseph Ward Britain's appreciation of New Zealand's offer of battleships, which he had communicated to the King, the Premier and the Admiralty. Sir Joseph Ward, interviewed at Wellington, said the Cabinet was unanimous on the Imperial defence question. He added that the burden upon the British nation for naval expenditure was enormous, and every loyal subject must feel in a crisis like this that he is called upon to help the motherland by more than words. New Zealand, proud of her past proofs of loyalty, stood today among the first in the British dominions for a ready and loyal response when the necessities of the empire called for it. At a dinner at Sydney on Monday night four citizens offered to contribute £35,000 if it were decided to present Britain with a Dreadnought by public subscriptions. The Lord Mayor of Melbourne agreed to call a meeting to consider the suggestion.

RABIES AT SIMCOE.

Young Lad Named Gurling Bitten on Thursday.

A despatch from Simcoe says: Rabies has again broken out in Simcoe. A small black dog belonging to Frank LeFortune, a liveryman, showing signs of having been affected, was destroyed last Friday, and one belonging to Mr. F. R. Pursel was shot on Saturday. It appears that LaFortune's dog bit a lad about eleven years of age named Gurling on Thursday, and it has been thought advisable to have the boy taken to the Pasteur Institute at New York. The Mayor has issued a proclamation that all dogs must be muzzled for two months, and it is hoped that this regulation will prevent any more trouble.

PANIC AT FIRE.

Narrow Escape of Audience at Kingston, Jamaica.

A despatch from Kingston, Ja., says: Fire that broke out on Saturday night in a public hall of Kingston, where a cinematograph show was in progress, created great excitement among the audience and endangered for a while the life of everybody present. Only the coolness of the manager of the show and his attendants prevented a catastrophe.

Servians in Germany have been [illegible] home for military service.

YOUNG GIRL SHOT.

Little Son of Mr. Ryan of Middleton Wounds His Sister.

A despatch from Tillsonburg says: The twelve-year-old daughter of Wm. Ryan of Middleton is still in a precarious condition from her wounds. The bullet passed entirely through her body. Ezra Parker, a brother-in-law of the girl, had been hunting on Monday and brought the gun to the house, laying it on the table. A brother of the injured girl, about ten years of age, began handling the gun, and accidentally discharged it, the ball striking the girl in the right side. She is doing as well as can be expected, and the physician in attendance expects her to recover. The girl's mother died about four months ago.

THE BANK STATEMENT.

Shows Good Times Heading Strongly to Canada.

A despatch from Ottawa says: According to the official bank statement it appears that during February the banks increased their note circulation by $1,529,292. Deposits on demand decreased by $317,928 and savings deposits by $1,779,992. Call loans in Canada increased by $3,255,140. Current loans in Canada show a reduction of $4,013,552, call and short loans abroad show an increase of $8,911,395. The general trend is to show that good times are heading strongly to Canada. Bank assets increased by $7,469,948 and liabilities by $8,450,915.

BLOWN FROM GUNS.

Daily Executions of Prisoners in Afghanistan.

A despatch from Peshwar, British India, says: It is reported that twelve hundred arrests have been made at Jellahabad, Afghanistan, in connection with the plot recently discovered to murder the Ameer, the heir-apparent, and the other members of the royal family. According to advices batches of prisoners are being blown from guns daily.

WARSHIPS FROM COLONY.

New Zealand Will Present Britain With One or Two.

A despatch from Wellington, N. Z., says: The New Zealand Government has offered to defray the cost of a first-class battleship of the latest type. The money for this purpose will be forthcoming immediately, and, if necessary, funds will be raised for the construction of a second battleship.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE ENDORSED

British Commons Passed Second Reading of Bill.

A despatch from London says: The House of Commons has again expressed a pious opinion in favor of woman suffrage. On Friday, by a vote of 157 to 122, it passed on its second reading the bill introduced by Hon. Geoffrey Howard, enfranchising every man and woman over 21 years of age, with one qualification, of three months' residence in one constituency. Premier Asquith, mentioning the division of the opinion in the Cabinet on woman suffrage, said the Government would not support the bill. Such a reform ought to be initiated by the Government. After a lengthy debate, the bill, at Mr. Asquith's suggestion, was referred to the Committee of the Whole House, one of the British Parliament's subterfuges for sending an undesired measure into oblivion.

EMBARGO RAISED.

Cattle From Michigan May Now Enter Canada.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The embargo against cattle from the State of Michigan has been raised by order in Council. It is still in force against live stock from New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland. The relaxation so far as Michigan is concerned is due to the fact that the authorities are satisfied that the foot-and-mouth disease has been stamped out in that State and the raising of the embargo will facilitate the movement of export cattle, many of which go from Chicago across the Niagara Peninsula for shipment from New York or Portland.

FELL INTO UNUSED WELL.

Body of Belleville Child Found on Premises of Hotel.

A despatch from Belleville says: David Brooks, three and a half years of age, son of Mr. S. Brooks, of this city, was on Saturday evening drowned by falling into an unused well on the premises of the Albion Hotel. The little lad wandered away from his home at 5.30 Saturday afternoon, and the body was discovered in the well on Sunday morning, at 10.30 by the hostler of the hotel.

WERE RUSHED TO HASTINGS

One Thousand British Soldiers Taken in Automobiles.

A despatch from London says: An interesting experiment was made by the War Office on Wednesday to demonstrate the utility of the automobile as a means of rapid military transport to supplement the resources of the railroads. Acting on the assumption that a hostile army had landed at Hastings, and that the railroad was blocked with troop trains, a relieving force of 1,000 men with full war kit and guns was moved to the scene by automobiles. Some 500 machines, loaned by members of the automobile club, picked up the men and their accoutrements at the various barracks and conveyed them to the Crystal Palace, whence the start was made. The machines travelled at the rate of twenty miles an hour over the hard frozen roads towards Hastings. The lighter cars with the men took the lead, leaving the heavier vehicles with the guns and stores to bring up the rear. Great crowds gathered along the route of the run to watch the column, which was over a mile long. At Hastings the cars were drawn up on the sea front.

WOLVES KILLED CHILD.

Strange Story From the North Told in Saskatoon.

A despatch from Saskatoon, Sask., says: A weird tale of the great northland is brought to Saskatoon by Fred Allingham and two companions, James and Mack J. Curtin, of this city, who have been spending the winter around Moose Lake, northwest of the Pass. According to Allingham's informant, a trapper had secured a number of young timber wolves, which he trained for driving, the animals having remarkable endurance and speed. On one occasion the trapper had been away on a long journey. After finishing up a hard day, in which the animals had not received any food, as is the way in treating dog teams while travelling, as the driver and the team approached the shanty that was their home, his little three-year-old child ran out to meet them. As the famished animals reached her, they jumped on her, and she was dead before her father could raise a hand. Seizing a sharp axe from his "boat," the trapper went at the wild creatures, and never stopped until he had killed the entire lot, numbering five.

IMMIGRATION NOT SO LARGE.

Quite a Falling Off This Year as Compared with Last.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The total immigration into Canada for the eleven months of the present fiscal year, up to the end of February, was 130,444, as compared with 247,056 for the same period of 1907-08, a decrease [illegible] forty-seven per [illegible]

ficials of the Inland Revenue Department throughout Canada, it is stated that only two samples of skim milk cheese were found, which would indicate that the sale of this product is relatively unimportant in Canada. In commenting on this fact, the Dominion analyst considers this a very satisfactory state of things, since the demand for cheap and inferior articles in food is usually an indication of poverty on the part of consumers. Examination was also made for fats other than butter fat, but no foreign fat was found in any of them, which is pretty conclusive evidence that so-called "filled" cheese is not known in Canada.

A despatch [illegible] Pernie says: Two Eng[illegible]men were found in a shack near the Great Northern station on Wednesday. One is dead and the other is in a dying condition. One appears to have been dead about two days. The other is demented, and can give no account of himself or of the dead man. By the labels on their baggage they appear to have left England in February last by the Empress of Britain. On the bed of the dead man was a purse containing nine sovereigns. USING PURGATIVES INJURES THE HEALTH

In the Spring a Tonic is Needed—But Not Harsh, Drastic Medicines.

A spring medicine is an actual necessity to most people. Nature demands it as an aid in carrying off the impurities that have accumulated in the blood during the indoor life of winter months. But unfortunately thousands of people who recognize the necessity for a spring medicine do not know what is best to take and dose themselves with harsh, griping purgatives. This is a serious mistake. Ask any doctor and he will tell you that the use of purgative medicine weakens the system but does not cure disease. In the spring the system needs building up—purgatives cannot do this; they weaken you still more. The blood should be made rich, red and pure—no purgative can do this. What is needed in the spring is a tonic, and the best tonic medical science has yet discovered is Dr. Williams' Pink Pils. Every dose of this medicine actually makes new, rich blood. This new blood strengthens every organ, every nerve, and every part of the body. This is why they cure headaches and backaches, rheumatism and neuralgia, and a host of other troubles that come from poor watery blood. That is why men and women who take Dr. Wililams' Pink Pills eat well, sleep well, and feel bright, active and strong. If you need a medicine this spring try this great reviving tonic, and see the new life, new health and new strength it will put into you. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CARE OF THE PIANO.

Never Allow Instrument to Stand Close Against a Wall.

The dusting and polishing of the piano, whether it be a new and valuable baby grand, or the humble and more cozy upright, should never be left to the maid, but should be done by the daughter of the house herself. SOLDIERS OF FORTUNE.

Old Calling Has Not Altogether Lost Its Followers.

The palmy days of the typical soldier of fortune are popularly supposed to have passed away.

Nevertheless, there are still plums to be picked up here and there. Sergt. Baldock, for example, has just been appointed cavalry instructor to the army of Mulai Hafid, the new Emperor of Morocco.

This means that he exchanges his "non-com.'s" chevrons for an officer's epaulettes; while his former pay of a few shillings a day is increased to something like $7,500 a year, with "allowances." And this delectable little billet has become his, curiously enough, because he fought so gallantly at Marakesh for Abd-el-Aziz, the old Emperor, whom Mulai Hafid defeated and deposed.

In the same way the Chinese Government took into its service during the great Taiping uprising quite a number of Europeans who had previously warred against them on the side of the rebels. Some of these were men of low origin—runaway sailors and the like—yet they frequently rose to high rank, and such as survived retired with their fortunes made for life.

It is well-known, too, to Britain's intelligence department that there are several men of British nationality dwelling on the other side of the northern frontiers of India amongst the warlike border tribesmen. Some of these are deserters from the British army, and would meet with short shrift if they were caught.

Others are civilian adventurers, ex-civil servants and the like. But they are soldiers of fortune, ready and eager to fight upon occasion, even against their own countrymen; and for the most part they make a pretty good thing out of it.

SLEEPLESS LITTLE BABIES ARE SICKLY BABIES

When babies are restless, sleepless and cross it is the surest possible sign that they are not well. Well babies sleep soundly and wake up brightly. Sleeplessness is generally due to some ailment of the stomach or bowels, or cutting teeth. A few doses of Baby's Own Tablets will put the little one right and give it sound, natural sleep. Mrs. Jos. Goneil, St. Evariste, Que., says: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets a splendid medicine for constipation and stomach troubles. I give them to my little girl and they keep her lively and [illegible] Sold by medicine dealers [illegible] a box from

He Is Back At Work Again

Abraham Garand's Rheumatism cured by Dodd's Kidney Pill.

He suffered for Five years and was Four Months off work, but Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Him.

Alfred Station, Ont., Mar. 29 (Special).—After being laid off work for four months by kidney disease and rheumatism, from which he had been a sufferer for five years, Abraham Garand, a section man on the railway here, is back at work again and he gives all the credit for his cure to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I am forty-one years old," Mr. Garand said, when asked about his cure. "And have been section man here for ten years. For five years I suffered from kidney disease and rheumatism, also sciatica in my right hip, which descended to my feet. For four months I could not work. Reading of cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills led me to try them. I used nine boxes in all and to-day I am advising all who suffer from rheumatism to use Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Rheumatism and sciatica are caused by diseased kidneys failing to strain the uric acid out of the blood. Cure the Kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills and they will strain the uric acid out of the blood. Then you can't have rheumatism.

WORLD'S OLDEST SOLDIER.

Czar Kindly Greets a Veteran of 120 Years.

Probably the oldest soldier in the world, Andrei Nikolaievitsch Schmidt, who is aged 120 and fought in the Russian army during the Napoleonic wars, recently arrived in St. Petersburg with the object of seeing the Czar.

Though the newspapers at St. Petersburg have heard nothing of it, Schmidt was granted a private audience of the Czar. Schmidt was extremely proud, and despite his immense age he bore himself with martial air.

He was introduced into the Czar's study, and his Majesty received the veteran with extreme kindness. Schmidt answered several questions, but finally, overwhelmed with emotion, he broke down and burst into tears.

"A Grand Medicine" is the encomium often passed on Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and when the results from its use are considered, as borne out by many persons who have employed it in stopping coughs and eradicating colds, it is more than grand. Kept in the house it is always at hand and it has no equal as a ready remedy. If you have not tried it, do so at once.

"THE HOME OF THE HAT BEAUTIFUL"

FIENDISH CRUELTY OF MOORS

French soldiers in their late Moroccan campaign exercised great self-control, despite the awful tests put upon it by the cruel practices of the Moors. Of the scene after one battle a writer says: "As the chasseurs swept over the ground for the third time, they, indeed, saw sights which made them little inclined to grant the quarter prayed for by the wretches on whom they were spurring. Naked lay all their fallen comrades; one poor fellow had had his eyes gouged out; the blood was streaming from their sockets; he was still alive. Another had been disemboweled; a third was found with bound hands beside a fire, his head charred to a cinder."

NEGLECTED SCALD CAUSED MONTHS OF AGONY.

Spent Dollars in Vain, but Zam-Buk Cured Her.

Following we give the testimony of a lady who if she had known of Zam-Buk earlier would have been saved nine weeks of agony:

Mrs. Frederick Bryant, of 169 Railway Avenue, Stratford, Ont., says:—"I scalded my foot while preparing supper. Next day the skin came off and my foot was in a serious condition. I could not wear my shoe and had to lay up for nine weeks. During this time I used dozens of salves, but none did any good, in fact the wound developed into a running sore. I got no rest day or night from the pain. At this point a supply of Zam-Buk was obtained and a few applications had immediate effect in soothing the pain and irritation. A small supply proved sufficient to heal the scald, although I had spent dollars in other remedies. New skin has now formed nicely over the open sore.

"Zam-Buk is the most wonderful and effective remedy I have used, and I advise others to use it."

There is nothing to equal Zam-Buk as a family balm. Its uses are so wide. It has been proved a sure cure for eczema, ring-worm, ulcers, abscesses, piles, bad leg, suppurating wounds, cuts, bruises, chapped hands, cold cracks, and all skin injuries and diseases. Rubbed well into the part affected it cures rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, etc. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. per box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, on receipt of price.

A GREAT ENGLISH RAILWAY.

London and Northwestern is One of the Most Popular.

Among all the great railways in England the London and Northwestern stands out as one of the best managed, safest and smoothest railways in that tight little isle. Travellers from this side of the water are landed in Liverpool right alongside the commodious and convenient Riverside Station of this railway, where, without any extra cost for transfer of luggage, and with the utmost facility and despatch, and without leaving cover, they can take the train for any part of the United Kingdom. Special corridor trains, three or four if necessary, for London, are always in waiting on the arrival of the great steamships, that there may be no delays whatever. These trains are models of excellence and convenience, and have luxurious dining cars attached, generally two on each train, where most excellent meals are well served at reasonable prices. The coaches are kept very clean, and are well hung, and as the roadbed is one of the best in England, there is very little vibration, even when travelling at sixty to seventy miles per hour.

All Canadians will make no mistake in seeing that they are booked via the London and Northwestern always.

If some men were to lose their self-conceit there wouldn't be much left.

Municipal Franchises.

The bill introduced by Hon. Adam Beck in the Ontario Legislature "respecting certain municipal bylaws and agreements," is one of the most important measures which has appeared in politics in recent years. It prohibits the granting of any municipal franchise except by vote of the people. The bill is short and to the point. Practically the whole of it is as follows:

"2. The council of a municipality shall not grant to any individual or company the right to use or occupy any of the streets of the municipality or to construct or operate any railway, street railway or public utility in the municipality or to supply to the corporation for the purposes thereof water, gas, electric light, heat, or power unless and until the by-law setting forth the terms and conditions upon which and the period for which such right is to be granted has been submitted to and has received the assent of the electors of the municipality in the manner provided in The Consolidated Municipal Act, 1903, with respect to bylaws requiring the assent of the electors.

"3. Nothing herein shall apply to or affect any bylaw or agreement which is expressly limited in its operation to a period not exceeding one year."

An Old Case of Smuggling.

A smuggling case of interest locally was tried in the Exchequer Court at Montreal, on March 9th, before His Honor Judge Cassels, who, it will be remembered, investigated the marine Department scandal. From the evidence at the trial of the smuggling case it appeared two prominent Syrian firms were being prosecuted by the Government for defrauding the revenue. In April, 1906, the Collector of Customs at Morrisburg discovered that extensive operations were being carried on in smuggling shirt waists, shirt waist patterns, and other fancy goods from the United States into Canada. These firms had paid agents doing this work for them, and at times the principal visited Iroquois, at which point the goods were brought from Lisbon Centre, N. Y., being shipped there from New work, and then taken to points on the river, and taken in row boats to Iroquois, and shipped from thein to Montreal, and other points, and sometimes packed in trunks and taken to Montreal as baggage, sometimes by the agents of the firms, and at times by the owners themselves. From the evidence at the trial it appeared that the transactions were large. The two firms were prosecuted for $35,000. The evidence for the Crown was heard, and the case adjourned until 6th May on account of the illness of one of the defendants in the case. The crown had some fifteen witnesses, mostly from this section, among them were four Syrians, Mr. Duffy, railroad agent at Lisbon, was a witness.

Acquitted of Fraud.

The trial of Jacob Crossman, charged with disposing of a quantity of goods while insolvent with a view to defrauding his creditors of several hundreds of took place on Friday at Brockville before Judge Reynolds. His system of book-keeping was also called into question by the crown, but on both charges the evidence did not warrant a conviction, and Crossman was accordingly discharged from custody. Witnesses from Toronto, Montreal and Brockville were heard. The case has been hanging fire since early in January, during which time the accused was at liberty on heavy bail.

MISERY IN STOMACH.

Why not start now—to-day, and forever rid yourself of stomach trouble and Indigestion? A dieted stomach gets the blues and grumbles. Give it a good eat, then take Pape's Diapepsin to start the digestive juices working. There will be no dyspepsia or belching of Gas or eructations of undigested food; no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach or heartburn, sick headache and Dizziness, and your food will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin costs only 50 cents for a large case at any drug store here, and will relieve the most obstinate case of Indigestion and Upset Stomach in five minutes.

There is nothing else better to take Gas from Stomach and cleanse the stomach and Intestines, and besides, one triangule will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all your food the same as a sound, healthy stomach would do it.

When Diapepsin works your stomach rests—gets itself in order, cleans up—and then you feel like eating when you come to the table, and what you eat will do you good.

Absolute relief from all Stomach Misery is waiting for you as soon as you decide to begin taking Diapepsin. Tell your druggist that you want Pape's Diapepsin, because you want to be thoroughly cured of Indigestion.

Fire Destroyed a Warehouse.

At four o'clock Monday morning a storehouse owned by F. R. Pratt & Co., music dealers, of Smith's Falls, was discovered to be on fire. It was a large wooden structure situated in the rear of the Mills Block, and though there were many buildings close by the fire was confined to the one in which it started. The corner of the Mills Block caught several times, but by the good work of the fire brigade was saved.

The contents of the Pratt building included eleven pianos, mostly second-hand, and two organs, and these are all a total loss.

The blaze originated, it is thought, from a spark from a stove in the building. The storehouse and contents were insured for $1,250.

Death of Mrs. Price.

Mrs. Clarence price passed away on Thursday, March 10th, at her husband's residence, Newington, aged 31 years. Her maiden name was Lucy M. Baker, and she was a daughter of the late Barney Baker. She was ill only a few weeks, but the best of medical skill and careful nursing could not save her. She was of a quiet yet happy disposition and will be mourned by a wide circle of friends, having the esteem of all with whom she came in contact. Besides her sorrowing husband, who is left with an infant daughter, she is survived by her stepmother, Mrs. E. Baker, Duff's Corners, who tenderly nursed her during her illness; three brothers J. G. Baker, Manchester, N.Y.; J. W. Baker, Shortsville, N.Y.; and Benjamin Baker, Kingston. The funeral took place on Saturday to the Presbyterian church, of which she was a member. The pastor, Rev. Geo. W. Mingie, North Lunenburg who officiated at her marriage on May 29, 1907, preached a very touching sermon. The remains were then interred besides those of her parents in Lunenburg cemetery. A large concourse of friends and relatives attended the funeral. The pall-bearers were Gordon Fetterly and George Grant, brothers-in-law of the deceased; Duncan McDermid John M. Kittle, William O. Dawson and Charles E. Dawson. A beautiful floral pillow was placed on the casket by the brothers of the deceased. It bore the word "sister."

Among the relatives present from a distance were: James Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Baker, Manchester, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. George Grant and daughter, Norfolk, N.Y.; Mr. and Mrs. H Fusee and daughter, Monkland.

Spring Assizes.

Chief Justice Falconbridge ptesided at the Spring Assizes which opened at Cornwall on Tuesday of last week. There were no criminal cases, and therefore no Grand Jury.

There were a number of cases on the docket, but only one action went before the Jury. The three Jury cases on the list were D. F. Campbell vs. C. P. R., D. H. McMillan vs. C. P R., and D. Wiseman vs. C. P. R. The first case called was the case of D F. Campbell vs. C. P. R. An arrangement entered into [illegible] the event of a verdict being [illegible] tiff in the D. F. Campld then be enterd Wiseman, ster to form of questions, and the Jury answered every question in favor of the plaintiff, and found that the plaintiff's damages were $424.

R. A Pringle, K C, and George A. Stiles appeared for the plaintiffs in the three actions, and W. Scott of Ewart, Scott, Kelley & McLaren, of Ottawa, for defendant.

New York Mantle & Decorating Co. vs. McMartin—Action for price of materials furnished and labor. Application to refer accounts to be disposed of upon motion before presiding Judge in Toronto. Smith & Langlois for plaintiffs. Maclennan, Cline & Maclennan for defendant.

Johnson vs. McMartin—Action for price of materials furnished and labor. Application granted to refer accounts to be disposed of on motion before presiding Judge in Toronto. Smith & Langlois for plaintiff; Maclennan, Cline & Maclennan for defendant.

Pringle vs. Beach.—Action on contract. Adjourned to non-jury sittings. Smith & Langlois for plaintiffs; I. Hilliard of Morrisburg for defendant.

There were three other cases that were to have gone to trial, but were settled short before court, O'Connell vs. C. P. R, McKinnon vs. C. P. R and Tenny vs. C. P. R, R. A. Pringle, K. C., acting for the plaintiffs, and Ewart, Scott, McLaren & Kelley for the defendants.

LANCASTER BANK ROBBERY.

Some Light Thrown Upon Identity of Dead Burglar.

The Montreal Standard last Saturday published a curious story from the New Hampshire State prison, which seems to throw some light on the mystery surrounding the attempted burglary on the Merchants Bank at Lancaster, Ont., just four years ago. It will be remembered that late on the night of April 26th, 1905, the bank was entered and an attempt made to hold up the teller, H. VonMetzke, who was sleeping in the office. He stood the burglars off with a revolver, and in the scuffle which ensued, one of them was shot, and the party made off, taking their wounded companion with them. He died, however, just as they reached the railway station, and was left there. The officers who were working on the case, have never been able to place the parties to this burglary, and indeed have never been able to properly identify the man who was shot. The detective department had a photograph taken of this man after he was put in his coffin, and it was sent all over Canada and the United States, but without avail.

Warden Scott of the New Hampshire prison now sends a story of a very bad yeggman or tramp burglar, known as John Doe, the Rambler, who is doing time for a murder committed to avoid arrest for blowing a safe in Dover, N H., in 1906. He has been insane, but during a recent lucid period told of various crimes he and his old friend "Frisco Yaller" had committed, together with others whom he calls "Chi Eddie," "Canada Noble," "Six-feet-two" and "Pool Tom or Red Tom." One of his tales is of an attempt to break into a bank. They got into the bank all right, but there found the 'sleeper,' as he called him, who opened fire on them and 'Chi Eddie' was shot He said they made for the railroad yards, taking the injured man with them, but he died before they went far and they left him. In some town where they found themselves next day, they read an account of the affair and description of the man shot, etc. They all got out of the country and went west to Milwaukee.

Chief Carpenter says he has not the slightest doubt of Doe being really one of the mysterious gang who visited Lancaster, as his story and the facts of the case are identical. Of the rest of the gang, it was learned that one was killed in an affray at Wild Rose, and two others are now doing time in an American prison.

DEATH OR INSANITY

Nervous, Sleepless, Worn Out—Expected to Die or go Crazy with Nervousness.

"I could not sleep—I could not rest—was ready to cry on the least occasion—yet I was plump and fat. Can you imagine a more distressing condition than weakness of body and mind?" writes Mrs. Wensley; of Halifax. "I lost myself in a sort of self pity because health seemed so shattered, and with the mental distress that grew with my bodily weakness, I was a burden to myself and a greater burden to my family.

"Though I sought and really needed pity, I got very little, for I did not look so very sick. It was only my nerves that were sick, and anyone who has sick nerves knows too well how awful a sickness it is.

"From the first Ferrozone strengthened my nerves, and it seemed to help them for I became stronger, more composed, slept more, and grew more hopeful. When I had taken Ferrozone for about two months I lost that miserable sense of dread. I never could tell what I was afraid of, but expected something dreadful. When I had taken Ferrozone for about two months I lost that miserable sense of dread. I never could tell what I was afraid of, but expected something dreadful was going to happen me. Ferrozone gave me the strength to throw aside all these fancies and made me well again."

Go at once to a druggist, get a few boxes of Ferrozone—start right on the road to health and vigor. Ferrozone will keep you there—will show you what it means to be healthy, vigorous, full of nerve energy. Once your braced up and energized with Ferrozone you'll never again be content with ill-health.

All dealers sell Ferrozone, 50c. per box or six boxes for $2 50.

The social that was held at J. J. McMillan's home last Friday night, in aid of the Presbyterian Church, was a decided success. The large crowd present spent a very enjoyable evening.

We notice that the Finch correspondent in the Freeholder of March 5th had a good deal to say regarding the manufacturing of cheese in Finch township. He says it has been a well known fact for several years back that proprietors of individually owned factories in this township, with a few exceptions, were anxious to raise the price of manufacturing to a higher rate per pound than necessary in order to pay a fair profit on their investments; but these private owners discovered that those factories which are owned and controlled by farmers were an inseperable barrier, therefore their scheme to raise the price of cheesemaking had to be abandoned. As a matter of fact we know this statement to be very misleading. We will give the scribe [illegible] produce one

WHAT every cook should know is, which wheat makes the best flour, and why.

Winter wheat is put into the ground in the fall, but does not ripen until the following July. It matures slowly, is soft and very starchy.

Spring wheat is sown in April or May, and ripens in August. It's a flinty, translucent wheat, rich in gluten and contains nearly twice as much nutriment as winter wheat.

Royal Household Flour

is made entirely from the hard, nutritious spring wheat, carefully selected from all the wheat of this kind grown in Canada.

Royal Household is fine, light and pure—milled by the most improved methods—in a mill as clean as your own kitchen.

Ask your grocer for Ogilvie's Royal Household — just enough to try. You won't mind the slight advance in cost when you see the results in your bread and pastry. 21

LIFE ON A TORPEDO BOAT

CRAMPED AND UNCOMFORTABLE ON A DESTROYER.

But Men Like the Dangerous Work Because of Its Great Risks and Big Rewards.

"A dog's life." That is the way the naval officer of years and experience describes existence in a torpedo boat destroyer.

The work is hard; the food often atrocious when the vessel is at sea, for the simple reason that in anything like rough weather it is impossible to cook or eat a meal in any comfort; the motion is harassing and violent—so harassing and violent that it used some years ago to be a favorite pastime in torpedo vessels whenever they put to sea to arrange a sweepstake in the little wardroom, the prize going to the officer who drew the name of the last victim to succumb.

The space below deck is cramped and confined, intensely hot in summer, bitterly cold in winter, for the plates of the vessel are of the thinnest and conduct the heat or cold to perfection.

ALL WEIGHT IS CUT DOWN.

to the utmost, and when the enormously powerful engines are running at top speed the vibration is consequently most trying.

In blockade it is their duty to close in at night upon the hostile port, facing the danger of floating mines, which again and again damaged the Japanese destroyers off Port Arthur. At other times they may have to attack the enemy's battleships.

The crew number some sixty officers and men, the officers being a lieutenant, a sub-lieutenant, a gunner and an engineer-lieutenant. There is no doctor for the simple reason that there is no room for him.

The officers are berthed aft in tiny cupboards opening out of a little ward-room, or in the wardroom, where they try to eat and sleep when off duty. But their number is so small that they are almost continuously at work, and hence, owing to the speedy exhaustion of her crew, a destroyer cannot long keep the sea.

IN THE STOKEHOLD.

The seamen are berthed forward, and sleep in what are generally known as "lammy suits," thick, warm garments suited to the chilly temperature of a destroyer's forward compartment.

All the crew receive "hard-lying" money, or a small addition to their pay to recompense them for the hardships undergone. The work is, indeed, "cruel hard," as they would tell the public, and nowhere is it harder than in the stokehold and engine room when the destroyer is running at any speed in bad weather.

For then she tosses and pitches, flinging the men this way and that amid the whirling machinery, while the battening down of the hatches makes the temperature almost insupportable.

The deck when the boat is running at high speed in a seaway is almost continuously swept by the sea.

Everyone is in oilskins and the waves from time to time break over the little bridge forward, from which the vessel is worked. The difficulty in navigating a destroyer is thus really great, for there is in which to spread a map or chart.

Yet, despite the acute discomfort of the work, the incessant drenchings, the alternate sufferings from heat and cold below, the difficulty of eating and sleeping, and the perpetual danger, destroyer life is not unpopular in the navy.

The severity of the discipline is greatly relaxed, so long as the men do their work, and they are permitted to smoke and enjoy themselves—if enjoyment is possible—at hours when in the orthodox warship they would be doing drill or holystoning the decks.

The officers in charge of a destroyer are expected, whether in peace or war, to do and dare. If they run their boats ashore in manoeuvres their offence is usually lightly visited, since it is realized that "nothing great is achieved by the man who fears the shore."

Judge (about to sentence)—"Prisoner, you have used this poor, half-witted fellow most unmercifully. You have beaten him most cruelly." Prisoner (surlily)—"He attacked me first; besides, he is a rascal, and gave me no end of trouble on the farm. It's not my fault, his being an idiot, my lord." Judge (severely)—"You should remember, prisoner, that idiots, after all, are men like you and me."

A pompous manufacturer of machinery was showing a stranger over his factory. "Fine piece of work, isn't it?" he said, when they were looking at a very ingenious machine. "Yes," said the visitor, "but you cannot hold a candle to the goods we are turning out." "Indeed," said the chagrined manufacturer, "and what is your line?" "Gunpowder," was the reply.

TURKEY'S LOST STATES

THE SULTAN ONCE OWNED HALF OF EUROPE.

Spain, Russia, France and Austria Have Annexed Thousands of Miles.

The "Terrible Turk," who may be taken as typifying the Empire of the Sultans, hold one record at least, which he is not likely to be deprived of. He has won and lost more territory than any other nation.

There was a time when the Sultan was the bugbear of the world. Even little children in our own country shook in their shoes when they heard his name mentioned, and those people who lived anywhere near him, dared not call their lives their own. But at last the tide turned. The Turk began to lose, and one great misfortune followed another.

Spain was the first big hit of the Turkish Empire to break free. The Moors, who were subject and paid tribute to the Sultan, were driven from province after province, until at length they were cooped up in the solitary Kingdom of Granada.

The last Moorish king to reign in Spain was Boabdilel-Chaco, or Boabdil the Unlucky In 1482 Ferdinand and Isabella, the King and Queen of Arragon and Castile, declared war on him, and in 1492 he had to surrender everything.

RUSSIA TAKES A HANDFUL.

Hungary, which now forms half of the dual monarchy of the Emperor Francis Joseph, was a province of the Sultan for a hundred and fifty years. Then it was torn from him by the sword.

After this came the turn of the Tsars. The Russians, whom he once despised, have been the Turk's worst enemies. They have either robbed him themselves or encouraged others to rob him. Peter the Great set the example, but was not, on the whole, very successful in his wars against the Moslems. At one time the Turks could have captured and massacred Peter and his army, but were frustrated by the slave girl, Catherine, whom Peter had married.

Catherine the Great tore the Crimea from the unhappy Turk, together with thousands of square miles of territory along the shores of the Caspian.

In 1821 the Greeks, who had been slaves of the Sultans for many centuries, rose in rebellion and drove the Turks out of the country. But then the Greek leaders began to quarrel among themselves, and civil war followed. The Turk took the opportunity to seize the country once more But the massacres and other horrors which followed aroused Europe. In 1827 the Turkish fleet was destroyed at Navarino. The combined fleets of Britain, France, and Russia took part in this operation.

FRANCE PLUCKS ALGIERS.

In 1828 Greece was acknowledged as a free and independent kingdom, with a king of its own.

For nearly a century Egypt, which the Turk conquered in 641, has been part of the Sultan's Empire in little more than name, and since 1882, when we occupied Pharaoh's country, after Arabi Pasha's rebellion the Turk has had practically nothing to do with Egypt.

The Moorish corsairs who had their lair in the pirate city of Algiers acknowledged the Sultan as their suzerain, but were defiantly independent as regarded all the rest of the world. Their swift-sailing dhows preyed on the commerce of all Europe, and, from start to finish, they seized many thousands of white captives, some of whom they ransomed, while others they doomed to slavery.

When asked to keep his piratical subjects in order, the Sultan declared himself helpless to do anything. The freebooters went on doing as they liked for a long time. Then France became weary of patience, and forcibly took possession of the city in 1830.

NOW AUSTRIA GRABS.

Since then she has annexed 307,980 square miles of Algerian territory once subject to the Sultan.

Then came the Turk's worst time. Russia made war on him, and the Balkan States, which had been held as provinces by Turkey for hundreds of years, revolted, flew to arms, and did everything they could on the side of Russia.

Had the Tsar been left to himself the Turkish Empire would have been practically destroyed. The other great Powers, however, were afraid to see Russia too powerful. They insisted on summoning the Congress of Berlin.

By the terms of the treaty of Berlin, the Turk was almost swept lin, the Turk was alomst swept out of Europe. Bosnia and Herzegovina were handed over to Austria to keep in order. Roumania, Servia, and Montenegro were declared absolutely independent of him. Bulgaria was created into a principality, nominally under the Sultan's suzeramty, but in reality free. And now Austria has annexed Bosnia and Herzegovina.

YUKON INDIANS DYING OUT.

Not Like Other Tribes—Have Color and Beard of a Jap.

"The Yukon Indians are fast passing away," writes a trapper in Fur News; "the squaws are living, the children increasing apparently, but among the men, old and young, you hear the hollow cough of lung trouble.

"The Pelly River band had in 1899 twenty children, twenty squaws and fourteen men. That winter ten of the men died of pneumonia. You see the Hudson Bay band among them too; a great scar across the neck and throat, where the old scrofula has healed up.

"More than one-half of the adult Indians on the coast have this brand, called by this name because of the frightful disease brought on this coast 100 years ago by the sailors from Boston under Capt. Grey and from Liverpool by Capt. Vancouver, from Spain, in fact all over the world, and spread by the employees of the Hudson's Bay Company among the natives when after fur. The Russians did more than their share.

"The Yukon Indian is not like other North America red men; he is different in build, habit and certainly inferior to the average Sioux or Chippewa or other tribes of the Northwest. He is more like the Jap; has the same complexion, beard and hair, is a little taller and not so clean. The people are light built, undersized and great beggars. A few work at boating and wood cutting, but generally they are lazy and indolent.

"There are less than 1,000 big and little, in the Yukon country and about 2,000 dogs. The dog sleds and toboggans are the only thing they have to move with; never a horse or ox.

"They never have vegetables unless eating with a white man. Every tribe could raise vegetables at their summer camps if they would. They have good soil and every chance to raise radishes, lettuce, cabbage, turnips and spuds, as white men are raising all of these here for market and their own use.

"The tribes are small, from twelve to fifteen families; they are found in places from 100 to 200 miles apart. They live near a stream or lake when at home; but when winter comes they go for fur and meat. They travel all winter with the whole family outfit of kids, dogs, squaws and some old people, going from 200 to 500 miles on these winter trips, generally in a great circle.

"They stay a few days in a place, build new camps and make new trails and find new game. They live on meat they kill and fish they catch with nets. When good luck comes with meat or fish in plenty they dry and smoke a large quantity and put it in log pens where nothing can get to it. This pen is called a cache.

"These Indians kill fur at all times of the year, except directly after selling their winter catch in March; after that they have plenty to eat, so what is the use of trapping? They just lie around camp and smoke.

"One lad about 20 years of age shot a black fox and sold it for $600. It was worth $1,000 or $1,200. He bought $200 of calico, tobacco by the caddy and two blankets at $50 each. This young man, a full blooded Indian, could talk a little English, wore hat, coat and vest, breeches with knee stocking, watch and chain and a new Winchester rifle. They are inveterate gamblers and will lose their last cent at cards and don't quit but keep coming to the limit."

BANG GOES ANOTHER BELIEF!

Earth Not Round Like an Orange, but—Well, Read for Yourself.

When we were children we were told that the earth was round like an orange, and we were foolish enough to believe it. Moreover, we have been passing this intelligence along to the present generation in the smug confidence that we were doing the right thing.

But now comes Prof. E. H. Lowe of the Royal Society and makes us ashamed of ourselves, says Lippincott's Magazine. He says that our planet is not round like an orange or like a ball or anything else as homely as that.

On the contrary, he declares what in fact everybody ought to have known long ago, that "the lithosphere is an ellipsoid with three unequal axes, having its surface deformed according to the formula for a certain spherical harmonic of the third degree and displaced as a whole relatively to the geoid, in the direction toward southeastern Europe."

25,000,000 words are sent over the Atlantic cables annually.

When a very young man is in love it is awfully hard to interest him in the things pertaining to the next world.

TO MAKE A WIFE HAPPY

EVERY MARRIED MAN SHOULD READ THIS.

A Writer Tells How Husband and Wife Can Live Happy Together.

I have performed the feat, so I know all about it. The art of making a wife happy is as simple and natural "as winking"; and why so many husbands fail in mastering it is to me one of the inscrutable problems of life. If men would only bring to bear on it a fraction of the consideration and common-sense which they practice in their relations with the world and in their business life, neglected and unhappy wives would soon be as difficult to find as the North Pole, says a writer in London Tit Bits.

"It really takes so little to make a wife happy," said my wife to me, "that, to a right-minded woman, any effort on her husband's part to do so, however blundering and misguided, cannot fail to accomplish its purpose." And in this the whole secret lies. It is the wish that is all-important in a woman's eyes, and unfortunately it is this that so many husbands lack.

TOO OFTEN TRUE.

When once the prize is secured and the glamor of honeymoon days is over, the ardor of pursuit so often gives place to the indifference of possession, the fire of passion has burnt itself out, and the hearth that should warm and brighten the wedded life is cold.

On our wedding-day my wife and I took two mutual vows (1) to keep up through our wedded life the illusion (if such it be) of our courting days; and (2) to avoid the first quarrel. The first vow I found easier to keep than the second, for, so far from love ending at the altar, it seemed to grow stronger every day of our life together; and where love is it is always seeking expression in a thousand little ways that minister to the pleasure and comfort of the loved one.

THE MORNING KISS.

There is, for instance, a magic in the morning kiss at parting that gilds the whole day for the home-staying wife; and it is so little to ask and so cruel to refuse. During the twenty years of our wedded life I have always made a point of taking home some small thing to show my wife that she has been in my thoughts during the day—as she always is. A few flowers, a paper, a new song—such trivialities as these, but each a source of pleasure to giver and receiver alike.

BRIGHT EVENI[NGS]

Knowing ha[ppiness] of my [wife] I hav[e] eveni[ngs] willed[ly] been [with] sure [to] hobbi[es] game[s] hour [of] which [we] gethe[r] thous[ands] istrat[ion] wooin[g] ded [by] still [in] ter [be] hap[py] pr[ovide] c[ompanion] and not of perplexity and annoyance.

For the rest—and I could write reams on this subject—my wife and I have always made it a rule to have no secrets from each other; to share our perplexities and troubles as we share our joys; never to criticize one another before others; and never to contradict each other in the presence of our children.

RECOLLECTIONS!

And what we have made of our married life, others may easily make of theirs. It is no Utopian programme I have sketched; nor are my wife and I in any way different from or superior to the average wedded couple. What may seem difficult, with conscientious effort becomes a habit, as happy in its effects as it is easy in practice. And even if perfect success cannot be achieved, the measure of resultant happiness that is within the reach of all who try is sufficient to revolutionize wedded life and to make it, as it was designed to be, a sweet and sacred thing.

CHILD WIVES OF INDIA.

Restoration League Striving to Alter a Cruel System.

In India a girl must be married before she reaches the age of 12, or she and often her whole family is ostracized and suffers under the loss of caste. Caste enforces rules and regulaties marriages.

A man may be infirm, insane, loathesome, diseased, cruel and utterly reprobate, says the National Congress of Mothers Magazine, yet he can receive into his power through marriage and deal with her as he will a little girl of any age under 12 of the caste relations between them are according to the laws of that system.

Accepting these sacrifices to be duty and suffering under caste compulsion themselves, the parents place and often even drive their helpless little daughters into the most cruel unions.

The census of 1891 gives these returns of early marriages in British India:

Females under 4 years of age, 253,760; females from 5 to 9 years of age, 2,201,404; females from 10 to 14 years of age 6,016,759, and these to men of all ages.

In 1901 two women travelled through India investigating these dreadful conditions. With hearts rent with what they had discovered they returned to the United States and spread their knowledge wherever opportunity permitted.

Thus they succeeded in enlisting practical sympathy, which has been embodied in [illegible]

"As for the rest," Margery was speaking again—"I know it is only too true, but—why, why, why? It isn't David's way. From the little that I've learned I'm persuaded that some other genius of evil is at work prompting him to the thing that I know he must despise. Who is it, Mr. Strang; can you tell me that?

"You will tell me if you know," she passes swiftly to his side, her hands secure his cold, unresponsive fingers and hold them fast — "you will help me to undo the wrong that has been done? He's very young, is David; he's only a boy yet, and all his days are before him; and if it pleases you, Mr. Strang, if you have the secret I'm looking for, you may fill everyone of those days with joy, and if it please you, you may weigh every one with woe. And why should he suffer. Surely, you cannot know him, or you would never hesitate; he has a h art of gold, has David, and until this happened everything he did bore the stamp of truth. You will help me to clear him, Mr. Strang—dear Mr. Strang, you will tell me what you know and help me to set him straight with his little world?

"For my sake, then, if not for his." S ill holding his hand she sinks upon her knees on the filthy cabin floor. "I'm only a girl, Mr. Strang, and D vid and I are — friends; his joys are my joys and his griefs are my griefs, too, and if the path he has yet to tread be one of shame, I also walk the same way. No happiness can be mine unless he shares it, and he can have no sorrow of which I may not bear a part. For my sake, then, you'll do the thing I ask, won't you? I'll forget all the past, I'll look upon all these hideous days with joy, because of you, and I'll —pray—for—you—on — every—one —of—the — days—that — God—has —yet—to—give—me."

"We must get him saved before another winter, Miss. Oh, if only we could lay hands on that Tinion wastrel."

"Yes—but as we can't we must manage without him."

"Ay, Missy—what is it you're thinking on?"

Bravely she tried to meet them, tried and faltered. Only a matter of seconds and then—

"You promised to help me, Cap'n Dan."

"I'm here, Missy; say the word."

"You still think that David's in the dark, that he isn't conscious of all that's being done in his name and won't investigate?"

"Sure as death."

"I shall need more help than yours. How many of David's men can you rely on to do just what they're bidden and care for no consequence?"

"How many? Well, I don't think there's any more Tinions left. I can't say I mistrust any of them, but—anyway, those I'd want an affydavy with, wouldn't man one of David's brigs."

"And you yourself, Cap'n Dan? Whatever I ask you'll not refuse me, not turn back, you'll not call me foolish nor my scheme a mad one?"

"Miss Margery, you're hurtin' me."

"Forgive me, Cap'n Dan," she pleaded, "but I'm so terribly afraid All the time I've been building up this plan the way has seemed so smooth and easy, but now it is simply strewn with difficulty."

"What is it you want us to do, Missy? I'm growing fearful curious."

Margery told him. Told him the thoughts that had come to her on the heights and amid the stately trees, told him of the desperate ing had stagger- kest, wettest, queerest, fog er licked about us. An' all the murk, there's one ht at the masthead, it's you that's

"The cabin of an Allerdale brig's not exactly the proper place for a leddy, but you're mair welcome than I can tell you; an' me an' my ship's at your service. And I think I can say t' same for all aboard at t' present moment."

"Ay!" eleven bass voices rumbled an end rsement, and with a queenly little nod, Margery accepted their homage.

She turned again to Cameron to find him wriggling away from the table so that she might have his chair, but this arrangement she promptly vetoed.

"No, no, Captain Cameron, this is your ship, and that is your place —but I'll sit beside you if I may."

And then her heart throbbing so that its beating was a pain, her hands, hidden under her cloak, tightly clenched, Margery began her message—began and faltered and stopped. Once more that fear of the opposing voice, the smile of pitying contempt, the glance of blighting ridicule.

"Easy, Missy, easy; we're all friends here." This from Cap'n Dan.

"Ay, all of us." This from Cameron, who struggled to his feet.

"Mebbe I can help you a bit, Miss Margery," he continued. "I've a lassie of my oan at home, an' I'd take it kindly if somebody would stand by if ever she wanted to say the thing that was hard. You'll be wantin' to explain why you've called us in this by-ordinary fashion, but there's not a bit o' need for that. We ken it for ourselves. Cap'n Dan there has given a few on us, them you see around you, a glint of the way you've stood by Maister Davie, an' you've shamed us, Miss Margery, you've just put us all to shame. We all loved the laddie, we all love him yet, an' our hearts are sore for the evil way that he's chosen; but we've stopped at pity and blame, an' after that thought o' little but the seams that need caulking an' the grub that men shouldn't be asked to eat. That's hoo we've acted, an' if it hadn't been for the bit maid with a bright, bonny, gowden faith, David Graham would be a miserable hulk, a derelict, without a chance.

"There's one point I'd like to put myself an' the mates straight on. Right from the varra start o' this cruise we'd our peepers on Tom Tinion, an' perhaps when you take note of ivvery entry in the log book it's not surprisin' that we should have thought him in Maister Davie's pay. Now—we're not so sure about it. Cap'n Dan's told us about Michael Strang, an' —we're sure o' nothing. We seem to have drifted until t' middle o'

About the Farm

HOW TO OBTAIN LARGE MILK YIELDS.

There is no one best feed for cows. Big results have been obtained from many different rations. When the cow freshens, she must be treated as an invalid. She must be given light food for several days as her stomach is weakened during maternity. Her stomach gradually regains strength, sometimes in a week, other times in two or even three weeks. Feed her carefully, gradually increasing the feed. Watch the excrement closely. Experience will soon tell you as to the state of the stomach and bowels. The avidity with which the cow eats tells much. She should be keen for her feed at all times. If she is slow in "taking hold" she is getting too much, that is if she leaves anything but hay or straw. The cow can do her best work only when all the organs work in harmony. The importance of this will be readily understood when we consider that there is in the intestines of the wellfed animal some 150 to 200 pounds of fodder in various stages of digestion, writes Mr. George Rice.

It is not food alone we must supply the cow. A heavy milking cow takes 150 to 200 pounds of water daily, even when fed on a succulent ration. Too much water taken at a time acts as a purge and causes serious trouble. It seems natural for a cow to want to drink water after eating. Water should be before her at all times. Food and water are important, but there are other things to be considered.

We know that we can take two cows, feed them just the same, and one will produce more than the other.

Where does it come from. Sometimes from her own body. But then there are cases in which this factor does not account for the difference in yield. It is generally said one cow has the milk-giving function to a greater degree than the other. What is "function?" We might define it as a nice sounding word that we use when "stuck;" in a similar case the untutored Indian gives a grunt and we are just about as wise. If there is not some source from which the cow gets the increased amount of milk then she performs a miracle.

THE PART OF PURE AIR.

There is still another element that is too often not considered, and that is air. Air is as vital to the existence of animal life as it is to plants. A man can go for a long while without food. Some have fasted forty days and nights. But, deprived of air 40 minutes we would soon collapse. Just in proportion as we deprive the animal of pure air, we reduce the efficiency of the whole system. Pure air taken into the lungs, oxidizes the blood, promotes circulation, aids digestion, and produces the power that enables the animal to accomplish work.

The cow to be a good one must have great lung capacity. To produce well she must have sufficient pure air to fill her lungs. else her superior lungs are of no benefit. The oxygen that she breathes goes to the nerve centres, stimulating them to greater effort. Just exactly how, it is a little hard to explain. However, I will give you an example that I had in my work. Two years ago I had two cows of the same age, same breed, calved on the same date. They were in about as equal condition as it would be possible to have them. I tested them for a month at home. One gave right along more milk, also more butter fat, than the other. She could not be taking more from her body; if anything the one giving the least was losing the most in weight. I took them to the station for a dairy test. This dairy had a very bad reputation with us cow men.

VENTILATION.

The air in there is never good. Sometimes it is very bad. The committee in charge have done all they can to improve conditions, but the building is too high for one thing, and to get enough pure air on the floor where the cows are, it would be much too cold. Then the cows stand with their heads against a solid wall, and the air they breathe out cannot get away properly. Part of it must be breathed over and over again. It is bad enough for cows when they stand up. It is worse when they lie down. Judging by the manner this building, and a lot of stalls in the country are put in, we should think that the cows breathed through their tails, as the air has a better chance to circulate there. The less boards and other obstructions there are around a cow the better.

The way it affected these two cows was that one made no more while there than did the other. She fed all right, and was all right, but her superior lung power was of no use to her, as the air was not pure enough. There never has been any big work done in this pen in which the dairy test has been conducted. Yet cows have done better work before coming here, and others have done big work after leaving here. We had better follow this up to show how the air and heat affects heavy milkers. Anyone that has done much official testing knows that big work is not done by the cows if they freshen in the summer. We can get the feed all right and we can get the water all right, but we cannot get the air all right. We can get it pure, but we are liable to have hot spells. And that will knock a good cow out quicker than anything. We can see a good reason for this: A heavy milker takes so much air into her lungs that when it is too hot, it raises the temperature of the body too much, and the nerve centres are not stimulated.

SHOULD FRESHEN IN WINTER

I was testing two cows in June. The weather had been nice and the air exhilarating and the two cows had been doing well. Along came one of those very hot spells. The one cow dropped from 2.4 pounds of fat daily to 1.85. The other cow had not been doing such good work and did not drop so much. Dairymen are getting wise to the fact that in order to have their cows (that is those heavy producers), do big work, they must freshen in the winter, when the temperature can be controlled. Too much cold is also bad, and no wonder, considering the amount of water the cow drinks and the air she uses.

A cow not milking in the winter will not require so much water. But, if cows are to give a large amount of milk the following summer, they need to be well cared for, and put in good condition for the heavy demand that will be made upon their strength. Pure water is quite as necessary as good feed. A cow kept in an ill-ventilated stable at nights, turned out in the raw cold air all day, will not attain the desired vigor. Two wrongs never made a right. The cow should have good air all the time. We should avoid all drafts in the stable. Avoid extremes of temperature. Keep the air as pure as possible, even if a little lower temperature must be obtained, and be regular in feeding and milking.

A GOOD RULE, TOO.

Hearing that a large boot and shoe establishment was giving away a present of a foot rule with every pair of boots or shoes they sold, Mooney told his wife about the bargain, and said, as her shoes were nearly worn out, he would give her the money to buy a new pair if she gave him the foot rule when she returned.

His wife went to the shop, and after great trouble got a pair to please her. As she was leaving the shopman gave her a small box, which, he said, contained a foot rule.

She went home delighted with her bargain, and gave the box to her husband.

When he opened it, to his disgust, instead of a foot rule, was a slip of paper, on which was written, "Avoid tight shoes."

Why is a man supposed to saw wood when he says nothing?

FATAL FIRE AT CORNWALL

Windsor Hotel Burned, Three Lives Are Lost and Half a Dozen Are Injured in Early Morning Conflagration—Jump for Life.

The Windsor Hotel, Water street, Cornwall, owned by Alex. Laplante, was destroyed by fire Tuesday morning along with its entire contents. Three of the guests were burned to death in their rooms, and two more are in the Hotel Dieu, severely injured one of whom will die.

The dead are:—
George Hagely, Philadelphia.
John Gallen, Philadelphia.
Raymond Duquette, Winchester.

The injured are:—
Mr. St. Clair, a man employed on the rebuilding of the O. & N. Y. swing bridge across the canal, badly burned about the face, arms and hands; may die.

George Bess, tailor, Cornwall, leg broken, back badly hurt, and hands and feet cut and burned.

A. McMillan, back injured.
W. Rice, internally injured.
J. Mooney, hands and feet cut by glass.
W. Hollister, hands cut.
James H. Smith, hands cut.
Mrs. King, mother of Mrs. Laplante, suffering from shock.

The house was filled with guests and boarders, their being thirty-two in all, and those who escaped came out in their night clothes. Not one saved any of their wearing apparel

The fire was discovered about 1 a. m. by James Grundy, a pianist at the Wonderland Theatre, formerly of Montreal, who with Mrs. Grundy, were guests at the hotel. Mr. Grundy was troubled with a toothache, and Mrs. Grundy noticed that their little dog was barking, she said that she smelled smoke, and when her husband opened the door he found the corridor full of smoke. He at once seized his wife and pushed her down stairs through the smoke to the ground floor, which the fire had not yet reached.

The fire started somewhere on the first floor, and as the corridors were full of smoke most of the guests were obliged to jump from the windows. George Bess jumped from a third storey window and it is a wonder that he was not killed outright.

The people escaping in their night clothes ran to neighboring houses and it was quite a little while before the fire alarm was rung. By the time the fire brigade arrived on the scene the building was all on fire, and could not be saved. The firemen turned several streams on it, but could do no better than confine the flames to the hotel. Mr. Laplante like the other inmates escaped in his night clothes. He and his family were lucky enough to reach the rear stairs, escape by the main stairway being cut off.

It was not until the fire was practically extinguished about daylight that it was known for certain that any lives had been lost. The body of Raymond Duquette, burned beyond recognition, was found in his room on the first floor at the rear of the new building Several others were reported missing, but, having been taken into various houses and clothed and cared for, they one by one turned up, and at seven o'clock all were accounted for except two young men, George Hagely and John Gallen, coopers at the Cornwall brewery, and about 8 o'clock the trunks and bones of two bodies were found in debris under their room. They were probably suffocated and burned to death in their room, which was the second one from Duquette's. The man who slept in the room between says that he was awakened by a cry of fire shortly after one o'clock, and heard several parties running back and forth in the corridor, evidently to the back window where the fire escape was. He opened the door a little and seeing the hallway full of smoke, decided that the fire escape might be blocked and jumped out of the window, a distance of about fifteen feet. He escaped uninjured.

Hagely and Gallen were young married men, who came here from Philadelphia four weeks ago to work for the Cornwall Brewery. They were c... and roomed together. He has resided in Cornwall about four years.

Cory St. Clair, an employe of the Canada Bridge Company of Walkerville, Ontario, was one of the last to escape. He seemed to be overcome by smoke when he broke open the window. He turned around and dropped out feet first a distance of fifteen feet. He was terribly burned about the face hands and feet, the burning flesh hanging from his limbs. He was still suffering from a broken ankle, the result of an accident on the bridge about six weeks ago, He is from Sarnia.

The trembling walls of the wrecked hotel, which were a menace to people crowding around the ruins, were pulled down this morning after the bodies of the missing had been removed. The reason the fire brigade was not called out earlier is due largely probably to the fact that the fire was not noticed by an outsider and the people inside were too busy saving themselves and awakening other inmates to worry about a fire alarm. The alarm box was finally pulled by Fred Denneny, a young man whose home is on Water street near the hotel to which some of the night robed refugees came for shelter.

John Rourke, boilermaker for Weir & Sons, Montreal, who has been working on the Cornwall Drydock had a rather thrilling experience. He was on the third floor, and was almost overcome by the smoke but managed to reach a window. This he opened and hanging down by his hands dropped.

His feet swung inwards and he shot through a window on the floor below and landed alongside of Besse, who had jumped from an adjoining window on the top floor. Rourke escaped in pants and undershirt, and with only a few scratches. There was no night-watchman in the hotel, and consequently the alarm was spread throughout the house by the shouting of the aroused sleepers. The fire brigade did all could be expected of them. They turned out promptly after the alarm, but the whole interior of the building was by this time in flames and the best they could do was to confine the fire to the hotel.

Walter Rice, of Lachine, Que., who is a machinist in Miller's foundry, jumped from a window on the top floor and narrowly missed being impailed on a fence. His back was badly hurt. He is in the Hotel Dieu.

That the loss of life was not greater is no doubt due to the barking of Mr. Grundy's dog. Last night's fire was the most serious in years or since a large portion of Lorneville, an eastern suburb was destroyed by fire. A quarter of a century ago two men were burned to death in the police station. This was the last fatality by fire with one exception till last night.

The Windsor Hotel was bought by Mr. Laplante about five years ago and last summer was enlarged by a new wing. The loss to building and contents is about $25,000, insurance $9,000. Besides this the guests lost all their personal property. An inquest will be held.

A failing tiny nerve—no larger than the finest silken thread—takes from the Heart its impulse, its power, its regularity. The stomach also has its hidden, or inside nerve. It was Dr. Shoop who first told us it was wrong to drug a weak or failing stomach. Heart or Kidneys. His prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative—is directed straight for the cause of these ailments—these weak and faltering inside nerves. This no doubt clearly explains why the Restorative has of late grown so rapidly in popularity. Druggists say that those who test the restorative even for a few days soon become fully convineed of its wonderful merit. Anyway don't drug the organ. Treating the cause of sickness is the only sensible and successful way. Sold by W. G. Bolster.

DAIRY HERDS' COMPETITION.

The Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association Offers Many Prizes.

The Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association have decided to offer special prizes for competition among the dairy herds of Eastern Ontario. They have ascertained through Chief Instructor Publow, that the average quantity of milk per cow delivered to the various factories is but 2,700 lbs. The Association feels that this average is too small, so they have decided to divide Eastesn Ontario into five districts, and four cash prizes in each district, making a total of $250 00 as an incentive to patrons, hoping thereby to raise this average.
