This is the week of the Ottawa Winter Fair, and it is attracting a large number of visitors.

A French proverb says the most wasted day of all days is the day when we have not laughed.

There is no mystery about the production of winter eggs. Care and feed will do it says the Farmers Advocate.

When it comes to automobiles there is no antique craze among the women. They all want next year's model.

When you plan, and with good reason,
For a joyous Christmas season,
Plan to treat the salesfolks squarely
Plan to do your shopping early.

Those who remember when a good cow sold for $30 must get a shock from the reports of sales nowadays, with grade milkers fetching $200 or more. Dairing is fast becoming "big business.

An old time "Tory" paid the Winchester Press a compliment one day this week, but he didn t know it. He said 'I would top your paper, only the family won't let me." It is needless to say that he is a strong supporter of the Fergurson Government Control policy.

No Man Ever Is

—Educated without first acquiring a love for knowledge;

—Helped when something is done for him he should do for himself;

—Prosperous who spends more than he earns;

—Strong who cannot control his own temper;

—A good executive who is obliged to drive his help;

—Successful who makes money at the cost of his convictions.

A young man in Smiths Falls has been found guilty of giving liquor to a 13 year old girl with intent to assault her. Magistrate Sparhom of Smiths Falls is generally very lienient and human in passing judgment on prisoners, but on this case imprisonment with the lash is almost too lienient. Such human monsters ought to be put out of harms way for life.

Having discovered that government control does not control, the Government of Manitoba now proposes to increase the facilties for the sale and consumption of liquor, in order, as it is said, to overcome bootlegging. But bootlegging would go on if there was a liquor store at every corner. There was more bootlegging in Orillia when thirty places were selling liquor legally than there is to day, which is saying a good deal. But in those days it went by another name—Orillia Times.

The New Jersey rector penned the following:—

"In this country we have listed some 167 varieties of religion and at least 40 more not listed. Besides the main and better-known divisions such as the Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Episcopalians and Roman Catholics, there are many large communions of earnest Christians banded together and separated from the others, in competition with them. We have, for example, such sects as the Six Principle Baptists, the Two-Seed-in the-Spirit Predestinarians, the Duck River Baptists, the Pilgrim Holiness Brethren. There are two sects of Brethren, conservative and progressive split on the question of whether man's coat shall have one button or two, the two-buttoners being progressive. We have the Zarepath, the Holy Rollers, with a female bishop, the Pillar of Fire."

Celebrated Wedding Anniversary

We have been reading of late of men and women who have past the century mark and are still active. Remarkable as it is not any more so than to have lived for nearly sixty years as man and wife, raised a big family, and still enjoy not only the appearance but the vigor and spirit of the young. Yet such is the happy and very rare experience of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Docksteader, of Winchester, who on Wednesday of last week Nov. 23rd celebrated the 56th anniversary of their wedding day. The majority of Press readers cannot look back that far. But away back in 1871 this section of Dundas was somewhat wild and uncultivated, and conveniences were not many. But in the little village of Metcalf Jennie McConnell was led to the matrimonial alter by Nelson Docksteader of Cloverdale, and they were united by Rev. Mr. Chant, of the Methodist Church. They settled on the farm owned by Mr. Docksteader's father, and now owned by his son, near Harmony Church. To this union nine children were born six of whom are living. There are twelve grand children and one great grand child. This rare and interesting anniversary was made the occasion of a grand re-union, and it was a very happy day at the home of the aged couple as their children and grand children gather about them showering them with goodwishes and blessings And there was a big chicken supper, and grandma Docksteader was as active and capable in its preparation and serving as any of her children. It may be mentioned that Nelson is one of the few remaining veterans of the Fenian Raid Rumpus and took part in the battle at the Windmill. He has in his possession a medal presented to him by the government for his service. The Winchester Press joins with their many friends in congratulations and best wishes for many more years of wedded happiness and good health Mr. Docksteader is 79 years of age and Mrs. Docksteader 73 years of age.

Mr. and Mrs. Docksteader received letters of congratulations from outside friends, and from their pastor Rev. Mr. Waddell and Mrs. Waddell with a "God bless you both" message.

At Farran's Point a few nights ago burglars entered the shop of John A. Sheets for the second time this year by removing a large pane of glass and took away a large amount of clothing, boots and shoes, etc. They even lit a lamp in the storehouse and there changed all their clothing, leaving the old outfit behind.

Taken Over Bakery Business

Mr. J. E. Jackson this week took over the bakery and grocery business recently conducted by Mr. J. A. Carkner, and is now in possession while Mr. Carkner has taken over the farm in the Summers Settlement recently occupied by Mr. Jackson. They are both still producers of the "staff of life" as it were, and the Press wishes both continued success in their new sphere of labor.

McCrea vs Lannin

Constable McCrea had Wm. Lannin charged with violating a corporation by-law compelling all dance halls to close at midnight. The case was tried before Magistrate McCormick last Saturday. Lannin's contention was that his was not a dance hall, but a theatre and as such was not subject to the Corporation by-law, but under provincial jurisdiction, Magistrate McCormick gave his decision this morning dismissing the case against Lannin with cost.

Near a Fatality

How near a person may come to death aud yet escape was the experience of a car load of members of the Osnabruck Centre Dramatic Club last Friday night, when they were returning home. They had reached the four corners. There was snow on the road, and just at that time enough fog to make driving difficult. Being new to the road the driver of the car in question in making the turn applied the brakes, and the car swung about and went into the deep ditch backward. Had it gone over sideways, or had it gone over the culvert and turned upside down, nothing could have saved the occupants from serious injury, if not death. As it was they escaped with a bad scare, and their car was hauled out with considerable difficulty.

C. G. I. T. Concert

The concert and play presented by the Live Wires C. G. I. T. group in the Town Hall on Tuesday last was a decided success A good crowd was in attendance. The various items on the program were carried out faultlessly by the girls and much credit is due their leaders. The play was very pleasing and the parts were well acted out.

The program was as follows;
Opening Remarks—Dr. Muriel Fetterly, Chorus, Follow the Gleam—C. G. I. T. Group, Piano Duet—Mabel Waddell and Norma Robinson, Patriotic Drill—The Group, Piano Solo—Margaret Durant, Folk Dance—The Merry Milkmaids, 8 of the group, Piano Duet—Margaret Durant and Ruth Melvin, Play entitled: Campfire Scenes—By the Group, Taps, God Save the King.

Celebration of Holy Communion in St. Matthias Church next Sunday morning at 10.30 o'clock. Service and intercession on Wednesday evening.

On Wednesday of last week the Ontario Managers Association of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., gave a dinner to the Managers and Assistant Managers in the King Edward Hotel, Toronto. The Assistant Manager of each district whose agents wrote the most business, read the report for the district. Assistant Manager W. D. McQuaig had the honor of reading the report for the Smiths Falls district. Agent Gibb of this town contributed very largely to this report.

Dr. Grenville W. Goodwin, the Eye Specialist, of Ottawa, will be at the Hotel Winchester, one day only, next Monday, Dec. 5th. Dr. Goodwin is a graduate of the Royal College of Science, Toronto, and the American College of Optics, Detroit, has examined the eyes of over ten thousand people including many from this vicinity, so you may come to him with every confidence. Satisfaction guaranteed. Remember next Monday at Hotel Winchester, also at McClusky House, Chesterville, Tuesday Dec. 6th.

Great interest was manifested in the election held last Saturday throughout the County where the boys 12 to 21 years of age rallied to select their representative for the 7th older Boys Parliament.

Two canidates were in the field—Brock Harper of Chesterville, who was member last term, and Gerald Helmer of Winchester. The campaign while keenly contested was carried through in true Tuxis spirit and with a deep desire to promote a spirit of good fellowship.

Gerald succeeded in winning the election and the first to inform him of his success, and extend congratulation was Brock the departed candidate.

Gerald will give a good account of himself when he goes to Toronto during the Christmas holiday. The local group are proud of their pretors success and join with his many friends in extending congratulation and good wishes.

Gave Good Play

The Dramatic Club from Osnabrook Centre who put on the little play "Deacon Dubbs" in the Town Hall last Friday night, certainly made a good impression and performed their parts well. The hall was nicely filled, and the entertainment was under the auspices of the local Orange Lodge.

The United Church

Owing to the illness of Rev. Mr. Waddell, the pulpit of the United Church was occupied on Sunday morning by Rev. Mr. Stafford, of Morewood, who delivered a thoughtful and deeply spiritual sermon. In the evening Rev. Mr. Newman, of Chesterville. was the preacher, and he gave a forceful and inspiring address.

A Big Sale

The largest sale of the season will take place at the Edward Thompson farm, three miles east of Iroquois, River Road, on Wednesday, December 7th, 1927, in order to wind up the Estate, the Executors will sell 30 head of cattle, mostly milch cows, heavy work horses, swine, harness, farm machinery of all kinds, Empire milker, corn blower, incubator, 2 De-Laval Separators with power attachments, Louden litter carrier, gasoline tanks, and very many other chattels. Sale at twelve-thirty SHARP. Everything must be sold.

Slipping and Sliding

The way of the automobilist was very slippery on Monday last, and the ditchers were many. The rain that froze as quickly as it fell made the roads like a sheet of greased glass, and it was almost impossible to keep a car on the road. This was especially so between the four corners and Cass Bridge where the road is high and rounding. It is reported that seven cars had to be assisted out, but fortunately no damage was done or person hurt. A party on their way to Morrisburg with Doc. at the wheel took a sudden turn into a farm yard, where they found two other cars had taken temporary and unwilling shelter. Fortunately the weather turned milder later in the night and in the morning there was no sign of ice,

Phil Will Retire

Mr. Phil Fader, who for the past two years has been Mayor of Lemington, Ont. will not be a candidate this year. According to reports Phil has made a good Chief Magistrate of a live growing town, and retires with the good wishes but regrets of his many friends. Mr. E. J. Gott, M. P. for that section in a personal letter to "Dear Phil" expresses his regret at his retirement, and he writes, "Few towns could boast of as fine, young, good-looking, sincere and active mayor as the town of Lemington for the past two years" Then the writer goes on to say that few towns in Ontario have been better managed or shown greater progress. Phils many friends in Winchester rejoice to learn of his splendid activites and wish him continued and increasing success.

A Promise More Than Kept

When the publishers of the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal two years ago announced that the owner of the paper wished them to reduce the subscription price from two dollars to one dollar a year, they promssed that not a single feature of the paper would be eliminated, but new features would be added, and the paper made more valuable than ever. It is frankly admitted by their million of readers that their promise has been more than fulfilled, and to-day The Family Herald and Weekly Star at one dollar a year is the marvel of the newspaper world. No home in Canada would regret this investment. Just think of a great big 72 page publication at less than two cents per week, and every page of it alone worth the money. No wonder The Family Herald and Weekly Star has over a million readers. It deserves them all and more too.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. George McKeown spent the week-end with Mr. Bobbie Dunn, Ottawa.

Miss Minnie Earle, of St. Sixte, Que., is spending this week at her parental home here.

Mrs. T. A. Hill, of Ottawa, spent the week end at the home of her brother, Mr. Geo. E. Earle.

Mr. Clifford French, of Blanche, Que., spent the week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo Earle.

Mr. J. C. Irving, Brandon, Man., is visiting friends in this section for some weeks. When he left Brandon a few weeks ago there was a foot or more of snow on the ground and it was below zero weather.

Had Good Sale

Mr. Geo. Helmer, Maple Ridge, reports that his sale held last Friday, and advertised through the Press was a splendid success. Like many others, George is well satisfied with the results of his advertisement in the Press.

Cars in Collision

A collision between Ray Lavere's studebaker and Roy Annable's Chev. occurred on Thursday night last at the corner of Main and Gladstone street. Roy was coming out of Gladstone St. and Lavere was travelling west on Main. When Annable reached Main he saw the other car coming. Lavere tried to get behind Annables car but a post interfered and his car struck the Chev. with considerable force, and doing considerable damage.

Special Meeting Of The Presbytery Of Dundas

A special meeting of the Dundas Presbytery was held on Friday at Winchester for the purpose of a conference on evangelism with the Rev. Tom Sykes, the great English evangelist. The meeting opened at 10 o'clock, with Rev. C. K. Mathewson, chairman, conducting the devotional exercises. After stating the purpose of the meeting, Rev. Mr. Sykes was introduced to the members and friends of the Presbytery. He spoke on the devotional life, its decline and recovery.

The afternoon session opened at two o'clock and the first hour was spent in discussion of methods of creating and maintaining the devotional life. Among those taking part were the Rev. G. I. Campbell, of Ottawa, representative of Evangelism and Social Services of the United Church, under whose auspices Mr. Sykes is working: also Rev. J. H. Miller, Rev. R. P. Stafford, Rev. Donald MacLeod, Rev. C. H. Brown and others. At the close of the discussion it was decided to hold two or more retreats of two or three days' duration at convenient places on the presbytery for ministers and laymen. The following were appointed a committee to carry this into effect; Revs. J. Hursts, C. K. Mathewson, J. H. Miller D. MacLeod, C. H. Brown. and Mr. W. L. S. Merrill. A letter of sympathy in his illness and hopes for a speedy recovery was sent to the pastor of the church, Rev. J. A. Waddell.

Mr. Sykes was then called upon to speak. He introduced Mr. Piper, his singer, who favored them with a solo, entitled "My Master Has Gone to a Far Country." Mr. Sykes spoke on the text, Isa. 40,-31, giving a clear ringing challenge for the realization of the bigness of the task confronting the church and her ambassadors to-day. Mr. Piper sang "A starless Crown."

The evening service was open to the public and a large audience greeted the speaker and his soloist. Mr. Sykes spoke on "The Heart of Britain," a very gripping message. The visit of Mr. Sykes to Dundas Presbytery will long remain as a time of refreshing to those permitted to hear him. A resolution of deep appreciation for the services of Mr. Sykes was moved by Rev. D. MacLeod and seconded by Rev. Mr. Shaver. The meeting closed with the benediction by the chairman.

Who Kissed Him?

A Story of the Breaking Out of the Great European War.

By JOHN Y. LARNED

Edward Brewerton was considered the handsomest man in his class at college. His was not that class of beauty that is purely physical; he was an intellectual fellow, a man of character, and this was stamped upon his features. Moreover, though there were girls who were stupid enough to tell him that he was an Apollo, instead of making him conscious of his beauty, it disgusted him.

On leaving college Ned concluded to see something of the world before settling down to work. He sailed with the American multitude in June for Genoa, from there proceeded to the Italian lakes and thence on into Switzerland through the St. Gothard tunnel. In the train leaving Lugano and in the same compartment with him were half a dozen American girls traveling under the care of a middle aged lady. The girls were evidently having the time of their lives. Their duenna was giving them instructions by the way, pointing out this and that object of interest, a peak, a cascade, the track of an avalanche, anything that they should notice.

Ned had met no Americans in his journey thus far—at least had made no acquaintances among them—and was at once seized with a desire to know these young ladies. One does not realize how precious one's fellow countrymen are till he meets them in a foreign land. Not only were these ladies fellow countrywomen of Ned, but they were all pretty, some of them very pretty, and there was one of them that had a pair of the most kissable lips he had ever seen.

The young man, though desirous of forming the acquaintance of this party, and especially the one with the kissable lips, sat with them for some time without meeting any excuse for doing so. One of them dropped a guidebook, but before Ned could pick it up the girl recovered it herself. Though he watched for an opportunity, none came. At last an idea came to him.

It occurred to Brewerton to put this party off their guard by pretending to be a foreigner and ignorant of the English language. He spoke German indifferently and French tolerably. When the guard took up the tickets Ned asked him some questions in German. This was sufficient to indicate his nationality. Later when the duenna asked him in English how many minutes were required for the train to pass through the tunnel he replied in German that he did not understand her.

This loosened the tongues of the girls.

"Lill," said one to another, "you've lost your bet that he is Italian."

"And you've lost yours that he is English."

"I knew he was German. He is my ideal of the principal character in Wagner's opera of 'Lohengrin,'" said another.

These remarks were made in a low tone, with continuous glances at Ned, who was apparently intent on the splendid scenery through which the train was moving. He did not hear all that was said, but he heard enough to tell him that he was an object of interest to his fellow travelers. Indeed, he received more attention than the peaks and the waterfalls along the route.

The kissable young lady in the party was, judging from a mischievous smile that hovered about her pretty lips, the arch mischief maker of the lot. They called her Jack, all except the duenna, who addressed her as Jaquelin. To her not even the most magnificent peak lifting its head far above the clouds was a matter of serious consideration. It was of red stone, and she spoke of it as the "red headed one." She made several comical remarks about Ned which he heard plainly and caused her companions to laugh.

There is a station near the southern entrance to the St. Gothard tunnel, where all trains stop before plunging into the mountain, and many of the passengers alight to stretch their legs. Ned got out and walked back and forth beside the train. When he passed the compartment occupied by the girls two of them were at the window. They looked at him, their eyes dancing with mischief.

"I should not be surprised," he said to himself, "if, before this journey is over, those imps will play some game on me."

When the train was about to start he re-entered the compartment, and the few hundred yards separating the station and the mountain were soon passed. Just before leaving daylight he glanced up at the roof of the car and observed that the light had been covered by a woman's traveling hat, but had no time to determine how the feat had been accomplished. When the train entered the tunnel there was not a ray of light in the compartment.

It requires just a quarter of an hour to pass through the St. Gothard tunnel. Not a word was spoken during the passage. Some five or six minutes had elapsed when suddenly Ned felt a pair of lips pressed against his. That they were feminine was evident from the fact that, besides himself, there were only women in the compartment. Ned made a grab, but his hand slipped over a fabric of woman's apparel.

One of the girls had kissed him. Whoever she was she must have made a careful observation as to his exact position, for she could not see him. She first struck his cheek, but instantly passed to his lips. The whole contact occupied only one or two seconds.

Nine or ten minutes of darkness remained, during which the perpetrator of this bit of mischief might compose herself. Doubtless all the girls were conspirators and would bear themselves in such manner as to protect the guilty one. Probably the kissing had been done on a bet. Ned's opinion was that Jack had been the perpetrator, but he could not be sure.

The matter must have been well arranged during the stop before the train entered the tunnel, for when it emerged there was not the slightest indication on the face of any of the girls that anything unusual had occurred. Ned scanned the features of each without observing any betrayal. As for Jack, she began at once as soon as there was light to read a guidebook. The only person in the party who did not seem to have a secret was the duenna, and Ned made up his mind that the mischief had been hatched without her knowledge.

The ride to Lucerne was not long. Though Ned kept his ears open for information, not a word was spoken that would give him even an inkling as to which one of the girls had kissed him. He watched to see if the party were going to a hotel, intending to go to the same hostelry. But they went to a pension, and he lost track of them.

One day while Ned was in Munich a clap of thunder came from a clear sky in a declaration of war by Austria against Servia. It was followed by another from Russia, another from Germany, from France, England and the rest.

Ned, who was intending to return to America by way of England, had drawn the balance on his letter of credit, consisting of some $600. It was evident to him that he had better get out of Europe as quickly as possible. But by what route? To make his way through France seemed next to impossible. Italy was a neutral country, and the distance compared with any other route was short. He would go to Italy.

But the only mode of conveyance was legs. This did not trouble him. Indeed, he had been making pedestrian tours among the Alps. Putting what clothes he could carry in a pack on his back, he sallied forth to walk something like a hundred and fifty miles. Unfortunately he must pass through a portion of Austria. As soon as he struck the border he found everything in confusion. He was obliged to show his passport continually, and, as for getting a conveyance for any part of his journey, that was out of the question.

One morning while he was trudging along within ten or twelve miles of the Italian border he saw an Austrian officer with several soldiers stop an automobile and say something to some women in it, and they got out. Then the officer put one of his men in it for a chauffeur, and the machine sped away, leaving the women in the road.

Ned inferred that the machine had been taken by the Austrian government and hastened to offer his sympathies. He found a despairing group. And to his astonishment they were the duenna and the girls with whom he had passed through the St. Gothard tunnel. Forgetting that he was supposed to be a German, he said in good American English:

"Ladies, can I be of any assistance to you?"

"Oh, my goodness gracious!" exclaimed all the girls in a breath.

"For heaven's sake," said the duenna, "what are we going to do?"

"It is ten miles to the Italian border," replied Ned. "If you are able to walk it I think we can get a conveyance of some kind there."

"But we haven't a dollar with which to hire a conveyance."

"Don't trouble yourselves about that. I am well provided."

Under Ned's guidance and protection the party set out for the Italian border, striking it on a railroad north of Verona. They succeeded in getting transportation to Milan and thence to Genoa.

All expenses were paid by Ned until the party reached Genoa, where they found that certain Americans in Italy desirous of going home had chartered a steamer. The women were still without money, and Ned had just enough to carry them all home.

"I will pay the passage of each and all of you," he said to them, "on one condition."

"Name any condition you like," said the duenna.

"Tell me which one of you kissed me in the St. Gothard tunnel."

"Never!" exclaimed all the girls at once.

"Very well; then you'll remain in Italy."

Finally Jack broke the deadlock. "I cannot tell a lie. It was our chaperon."

There was a burst of laughter, and Brewerton gave in, pretending to take Jack's confession for a real one, though he knew that she was the guilty person.

The girls and their duenna occupied one stateroom on the return voyage, and Ned slept on deck.

Ned and Jaquelin on moonlight nights sat on deck a great deal. There is no further record of any more kisses between them, but Ned having tasted the lips of his companion once was not likely to sit in the moonlight without tasting them again.

A month after their arrival Ned and Jack became man and wife.

Ford
The
NEW CAR

ALL THAT engineers have learned, all that millions of owners have experienced in nearly a quarter of a century, have made possible this car which is today as far ahead of its time as was the famous Model T in 1908.

Sixteen million automobiles, serving their owners in jungle and desert, on mountain and plain, on bouleyard and highway, were the test cars that have made this new automobile possible.

Its advent marks a new epoch in automotive engineering in point of inbuilt quality—niceties of mechanical design, lavish use of the finer metals, precision in delicate machining processes.

Nowhere in its construction has there been slighting of either major essentials or minor details. From its outermost hub-cap to its innermost bearing, the new Ford car epitomizes engineering skill to a degree unexcelled in the annals of motor car manufacture.

This entirely new car surpasses the accepted standards of light car accomplishment; sweeps aside all boundaries of price class; establishes a new standard of acceleration, speed, power and smoothness that heretofore has marked only expensive cars as fine cars.

Yet Ford precision in large scale production, unparalleled in the history of automotive manufacture, places this car within the reach of every purse.

An advance showing of the New Ford Car will be made Friday, December 2nd, in the following cities:

Halifax	Ottawa	Hamilton	Fort William	Moose Jaw
Saint John	Kitchener	Brantford	Winnipeg	Calgary
Quebec	Peterboro	London	Regina	Edmonton
Sherbrook	Toronto	Windsor	Saskatoon	Vancouver
Montreal				Victoria

As rapidly as increasing production permits these public showings will be extended until all of the 736 Ford dealer points have been covered.

If you live in one of the cities listed above, visit the exhibit of this New Car. At other points, see your local dealer next Friday. He will give you complete specifications, prices and an excellent conception of its unusual features.

a LIGHT
on your horse-drawn vehicle at night may
SAVE YOUR LIFE!

Horse-drawn vehicles (as well as motor vehicles) on the highway at night now MUST display a light. This new law is designed to prevent accident to occupants of horse-drawn vehicles as well as of motor cars.

You will provide for your own safety by obeying this law. Drivers of fast-moving vehicles have become accustomed to looking for lights on ALL vehicles at night. The danger of accident to horse-drawn vehicles without lights therefore is greater now than it was when lights were not compulsory. At this season, when nights are darker and longer, the hazard is increased.

The light on a horse-drawn vehicle must be placed on the left side in a conspicuous position. It must show white to the front and red to the rear. It must be clearly visible at a distance of at least 200 feet. Where vehicles carry inflammable materials or are structurally unsuitable for carrying lighted lamps the Department, by regulation, may permit the use of a reflector instead of a lamp.

$5.00 Fine

The penalty for failure to observe this law is a fine of $5.00. Motor traffic officers or city or town police will apprehend all who fail to comply.

Interesting Data

Plants Bloom Out of Season When Their Light is Altered

By controlling the sunlight that reaches certain plants, it has been found possible to force them to bloom out of season, earlier or later than their usual period. Experiments have been made with dahlias, African marigolds, poinsettias, Klondyke cosmos and late varieties of chrysanthemums. It now appears that the plants produce flowers in direct relation to the length of the daylight period.

With this to guide them, experimenters trick the flowers into blooming at unusual seasons. This can be done by covering the plants or by taking them into the cellar for an hour or two before sunset each day. This produces sunlight conditions approximating Autumn, with a shorter period of daylight, and the plants bloom earlier. Conversely, it has been found that lengthening the short days of Autumn and Winter with the aid of electric lights of proper intensity prevents these plants from flowering in their normal season.

It is even possible to force different parts of some plants to blossom at different seasons.

Baldwin Takes Stock

There is a tradition in Britain that the Prime Minister should deliver an informal account of his stewardship at the banquet given by the Lord Mayor on the day of his accession to office. The custom has been repeated for so many years that the chancelleries of Europe await its delivery with keen expectancy and ambassadors and representatives of both small and great Powers attend.

Premier Stanley Baldwin has not disappointed the banquet guests and the far wider circle of statesmen and interested observers who read the speech to-day. Not only did he make a general survey of world conditions especially as they impinge upon and affect the policies of the British Empire but he traversed the situation in Britain with an optimism that carries conviction by its sincerity.

The keynote of his speech was the unstinted praise given to M. Briand and Herr Stresemann for their efforts in the cause of European peace. Nothing could more clearly indicate the swiftness with which national policies change or how the sentiments of whole people receive a new orientation rapidly and yet imperceptibly as the realization that nine years after the sounding of the bugle of armistice the Prime Minister of Britain is commending the example of the German Foreign Minister and urging the statesmen of the Balkans to emulate him.

"Britain, France, Germany and Italy, the protagonists of the great struggle of yesterday, now meet as partners and equals to advance the cause of peace and forward the convalescence of our common cvilization," says Mr. Stanley Baldwin, and in that single sentence epitomizes the vast changes that have taken place in the sentiments and outlook of the nations that but a few short years ago were at death grips.

What France and Germany have done in the quenching of hatreds and in the diminishing of mistrust in nine years can be achieved by those other nations with a common boundary where the flames of hatred and jealousy are stil rampant, a hindrance to the cause of world peace and to the "convalescence of civilization."

In appealing to the statesmen of the Little Entente and the smaller nations of Europe that they should follow along the path which Briand and Stresemann have hewn out Mr. Baldwin did not intend to minimize the efforts already made but rather to point out that the admission of Germany to the League and the co-operation displayed by the Great Powers, especially during the last twelve months, had made the responsibilities of the smaller nations greater and their opportunities richer. Pilsudski in Poland, Masaryk in Czecho-Slovakia and Paschitch, the founder of Greater Serbia, have accomplished a great deal under a heavy handicap. Yet so far their activities have been largely confined to domestic problems. "The time has come," says Premier Baldwin, "to widen the horizon of their vision, to come out boldly for the eradication of international hatreds and to aid the convalescence of our common civilization."—Montreal Star.

Reparations

Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger: (Parker Gilbert, allied reparations agent, has warned the German Government against carrying out the law to increase the pay of public officials.) One could not greatly reproach the reparations agent for he is doing no more than fulfilling his duty It is his task in fact to see that German tribute is paid in full and that the treasure chests of Paris, London, Rome, Brussels and New York do not suffer any losses by reason of the fact that the Government of the Reich wish to make some small improvement in the lamentable conditions submitted to by German officials. But with this letter of Mr. Gilbert's the veil is torn aside with which the German statesmen who were in support of the plan habitually enveloped the Dawes scheme.

My wife has run away with a man in my car!" "Good heavens! Not your new car?"

A motorist left his car outside a restaurant while he had lunch. On emerging, however, he observed that a constable was standing guard over it, so he quickly withdrew inside and thought swiftly. Having certain reasons for not desiring another summons that week, the motorist made an exit by a rear door, and, going home, telephoned to Scotland Yard saying that his car had been stolen. Half-an-hour later the police telephoned to say that the stranded car had been discovered outside the restaurant, and would the owner please call there for it?

Schwab Tells How He Shied at Aviation

Admits He Refused to Finance Wright Brother in Early Days

Chicago. — Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, told a meeting of mechanical engineers here that more than 25 years ago he was asked to help finance the Wright brothers in their early efforts to develop a heavier-than-air flying machine and that he did not aid them. Two years later, Orville and Wilbur Wright made the first flights by man in such a machine and had invented the system of control used in all flying machines to-day.

Asked for Support.

It was in 1901 that Charles R. Flint, merchant and banker, brought the Wright brothers to him seeking financial support for their flying experiments, Mr. Schwab related to the Chicago Chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, of which he is national president.

"I've been in a good many harum-scarum things in life but preserve me from flying," Mr. Schwab reported was his reply to Mr. Flint.

Mr Schwab became reminiscent as he recalled that next year will mark the fiftieth anniversary of his entrance into the steel business. Human engineering is the greatest profession of all, he said. The man who can make workers content and happy and personally interested in their work is contributing richly to life.

Source of Satisfaction.

The average standard of manhood of workingmen in America is as high as that of society, he said, and that is why he loves the working people of this country, he continued. As he looks back through the past half-century, he asks himself what are the real things that he has toiled to possess. They are not money, clothes, food nor other material possessions, for these do not bring real satisfaction, he said. The real satisfaction is in living a life that results in genuine friends and in going through life happy and laughing and with approval of one's fellow man.

"Happy is he to whom they say, 'Well done, good friend,'" Mr. Schwab declared. 'Be a friend to everybody and try always to do good and at the same time live to be a man among men," he advised his fellow engineers. "I believe in building on a true foundation of honesty, integrity and loyalty. What happy people we should be to be citizens of this richly endowed Nation."

An old woman who had called in the doctor to give her treatment for a cold was somewhat grumpy when she found that her own doctor had been unable to come, and had sent a young deputy. The old woman looked disgustedly at the doctor. "Hoots, man," she said. "I sent for you to cure ma cauld—no' to christen it."

Specialist Warns Against Cancer

Says if Disease Attacks Younger Generation Human Race Doomed

Dayton, Ohio.—If cancer should change its attack to the younger generation it would wipe out civilization within two years. That warning was issued recently by Dr. Gilbert Fitzpatrick, Chicago, president of the tion of Cancer and a specialist of international repute, at the joint meeting of the Southern Ohio, Ohio State and Hiami Valley Homeopathy Medical societies.

Dr. Fitzpatrick asserted newspapers of the United States must be used effectively if there is to be an effective warfare against the spread of cancer.

"All the medical deliberations confined to the four walls will be of no avail unless that knowledge is conveyed to the laymen,' he said in describing the public press as "the great American university."

Dr. Fitzpatrick declared annual physical examinations are one of the best methods in determining pre-cancer conditions and consequently in checking the growth.

CONDITIONS THAT CALL FOR A TONIC

Symptoms That the Blood is Thin Should Not Be Neglected.

Weak, lacking in strength, energy and ambition, nervous, sleepless, poor appetite, digestion disturbed—these are the symptoms of a great majority of people who have been benefited by the use of Dr Williams' Pink Pills. The great value of this medicine in cases of this kind is proved by the statement of Mrs. W. Hensher, Kingston, Ont., who says:—"Following a severe cold I was left in a run-down, nervous condition; I had pains in the back and limbs and could scarcely move about. I did not sleep well at night and was despondent and discouraged. I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills ,and can truthfully say that after the use of six boxes, the change in my condition was nothing short of marvellous. The pains vanished, I slept well, had a good appetite, and in every way felt well and strong. I also gave the pills to my daughter, who was in an anaemic condition and feeling quite miserable, and in her case, too, they restored health I hope my experience may help some other weak person."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. A little book, "Building Up the Blood," which contains many useful health hints, will be sent free on request.

Will Rogers on French Tariff; He's Also Still for Coolidge

To the Editor of The New York Times:

THE ONLY MEDICINE BABY HAS HAD

Is What Thousands of Mothers Say of Baby's Own Tablets

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets for her little ones she will use nothing else. Experience teaches her that they are without an equal for relieving baby of any of the many minor ailments which afflict him at one time or another. The Tablets never fail to be of benefit—they cannot possibly do harm as they are guaranteed to be free from all injurious drugs.

Concerning Baby's Own Tablets Mrs. Russell Hill, Norwood, Ont., says:—"I shall always have a good word to say for Baby's Own Tablets. I have given them to our baby girl. In fact they are the only medicine she has ever had and I am proud to say that she took second prize at our baby show. She is eleven months old and weighs 22 pounds. No mother whose child is peevish or ailing will make a mistake in giving Baby's Own Tablets."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or direct by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Britian a Continental Power

Paris Temps: By her signature of the Locarno Rhine Pact Great Britain not only made the Rhine her frontier, but made herself a European Continental Power, for a Power which is forced to defend its security on the Rhine is not in a position to rest indifferent in the face of European complications that endanger the general peace. The necessity is incumbent upon Great Britain, just like other Continental Powers, to assume the responsibility of guaranteeing all the nations alike before any step can be taken towards a reduction of existing armaments.

French Finance

Paris Figaro: (Care and thrift must not be abated, if a permanent improvement of French finances is to be effected). To prevent a relapse, which would be exceedingly grave, what must be done? Everybody knows the answer. We must have a continuity of policy which will allow the work which has been started to be brought to fruition. In theory this policy depends on the sovereign people, and it would seem that they had gone out of their senses, if they did not wish to make certain of their safety. But in practice the decision is much less a matter for universal suffrage than it is for the leaders, the committees, the different groups which dispose of a fraction of power, the caucuses and the electoral parties. Never has the paradox of democracies appeared greater than in times of crisis. For then all depends on the people; but on who do the people depend?

When Leghorns Bleed

We have had occasional losses in our Leghorn flocks from full grown hens bleeding to death at the comb. A small peck from another bird seems to start the flow of blood. Other members of the flock peck at the wound to obtain the blood and the bleeding continues until the bird dies from weakness and loss of blood.

A drug called adrenalin chloride can often be used to stop the flow of blood from the comb. The hen should be isolated when the bleeding is discovered so that other hens will not peck the wound. . It is important to locate a bleeder at once and apply treatment. Many losses occur because the bleeding bird is not located until she is bled white and very weak.

Watch for the pale Leghorn that remains on the perch and seems very weak. Examine the comb carefully. Sometimes only a drop of blood will show at a time and this slow bleeding will continue for many days before the bird dies. Sometimes a bird will apparently bleed to death from the small injury at the base of a feather. Examine a bird that seems pale and shows a splash of blood on the side of the body or wing. A bird with that type of injury will surely die from weakness if the gradual loss of blood is not stopped.

SICK ABED EIGHT MONTHS
After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Could Do All Her Work and Gained in Weight

Melfort, Saskatchewan. — "I had inward troubles, headaches and severe pains in my back and sides. I was so sick generally that I could not sit up and I was in bed most of the time for eight months. An aunt came to visit and help me as I was unable to attend to my baby and could not do my work. She told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after taking two bottles I could get up and dress myself. I also took Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine. When I first took the medicine I only weighed seventy-eight pounds. Now I weigh twice as much. If I get out of sorts or weary and can't sleep I always take another bottle of the Vegetable Compound. I find it wonderfully good for female troubles, and have recommended it to my neighbors. I will be only too glad to answer any letters I receive asking about it."—Mrs. WILLIAM RITCHIE, Box 486, Melfort, Saskatchewan. G

HIS LAST WORD

So far as Regulation 17 is concerned "I have given my last word" declared Premier Ferguson last week. Regulation 17 was practically the child of Premier G. H. Ferguson, when in the Ontario Legislature, when Sir James Whitney was Premier, he gave notice in the Legislature that "in his opinion, and in the opinion of this house no other language than the English language should be the medium of instructions in this province." This was when Premier Ferguson was a younger man, and his attitude on "one Language, and that English for Ontario" made him a little hero with the Orange Lodges of Ontario. If one language, and the English language, should be the medium of instruction in our schools in those days, is it not just as important that the English language should be the medium of instructions in our schools today. It is claimed that the regulation was not carried out and led only to bitterness and misunderstanding. Well whose fault is it that the Regulation was not properly carried out, and whose fault is it if there was bitterness and misunderstanding? Premier Ferguson may have a good deal of explaining to do before he will convince the Orange Lodges of the province that he was justified in terminating Regulation 17. J. J. Hunter, of Kincardine, Grand Master of the Orange Grange Lodge of Ontario, speaking at Sarnia last week, declared his opposition to the abolition of Rule 17, and promises that when the Grand Lodge meets at Barrie next month, it will be the live issue before the lodge. It would not be surprising if Premier Ferguson may yet give his last kick with his last word.

PROBLEM OF OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

The problem of our "young people" is, after all, the problem of parents, and not of the Churches. The Churches are doing the very best they know how to direct and guide young people in the right path, but unless backed by the parents their task, while not altogether hopeless, is extremely hard and does not accomplish much, comparatively. The law of the land is back of our public school system, and children up to a certain age are compelled to attend school and receive a certain amount of education and submit to discipline. But there is no law to compel our young people to attend a religious service, except a parental law. With too many the temporal and material welfare of the child is of greater importance than their spiritual and eternal welfare. Perhaps if in communities, or churches, Father's and Mother's Conferences were held, opinions exchanged, experiences given, it might result in some united system to better direct and guide the young people in the right path. "As the twig is bent so will the tree incline" and "train a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it" are truisms that cannot be sidetracked. And while that old proverb "Spare the rod and spoil the child" may in our modern days seem harsh, and some say cruel, it is a significant fact that our learned judges find it necessary to again introduce the rod of correction to present day criminals. Perhaps if most of those criminals had received a little of the rod in their youth, they would not have become criminals. It is a case of the state finding it necessary to do what the parents neglected to do.

WAS HE ANY USE?

The following taken from the editorial page of the Canada School Board Journal is appreciated by the Winchester Press:

"History does not ask how much money a man left, how many things he piled all about him, how many stocks and bonds he managed to get hold of, how much land he owned. It cares nothing about the selfish life, takes no interest in the accumulation of gold. The only question history will ask about you is the statement of the clear-minded Editor of the Winchester, Ontario, Press, after you have gone is, "What kind of a man was he? What did he do for his kind? What service did he render to humanity?"

Nothing truer was ever written. Service for community, sacrifice for needy ones, generosity for all and helpfulness in all circumstances are the things that give character to men and women and leave their impress for generations to seek to copy. A trustee, as guardian of the education that shall be given to the rising generation, fills a position unequalled in the realm of world possibilities. Do we as trustees exalt our office?"

PETITIONS, PRAYERS AND TAXES

Too many people when they request or petition a municipal council or a government for certain favors, do it in the same spirit that they make known their request to Almighty God, they don't count the cost. They consult their personal desires and advantages, but take no heed to the cost. And, thank goodness, municipal councils, like the Almighty, deny their request for their own good. We heard a ratepayer one day last week finding fault with the municipal council because it had not improved a certain street. Yet in the same breath he found fault with the council because the tax rate was so high. Our Municipal Council do the best they can with the means they are supplied with. Fortunate it is that they do not answer every request. They refuse to do so for the good of the taxpayers.

Owing to municipal elections in the near future, as a weather prophet we predict a windy month.

What a pity more of the Christmas spirit could not stay with us the other eleven months of the year.

Well, the new Ford is on the market at last. Ford kept the public guessing for a long while, now watch him as he puts his car over on them.

Premier Ferguson may yet find out that his "last word" as to Regulation 17, may prove as popular as his "last word" at the Conservative Convention at Winnipeg.

When the next Dominion Election comes on the Conservative leaders will be making an effort to round up the "lost sheep" the party lost at the last provincial election.

Now, wouldn't it be refreshing to this and other communities to hear their parliamentary representatives between times, as it were, and not only when an election is in progress.

A Port Arthur Church "raffled" mining shares to help its finances. This is something new, but not any more questionable than many other of the schemes adopted to raise church finances.

While the Temperance forces are "waiting, watching" the liquor interests are very active, and are now demanding that beer of full strength to dispensed as of old. The liquor interests neither sleep nor slumber, but are everlasting at it.

No people work harder for their money than the farmers do, and no people are oftener victimized by scamps than the farmers are. It is because, living close to nature, a farmer is trustful and too often for his own good, is not inquisitive enough as to the doings of those who come to him in a business way. But surely recent experiences in this section should prove a warning to those most concerned not to fall into another trap.

Had Narrow Escape

James Hummell, Chesterville, escaped injury when his automobile plunged over the embankment at the eastern end of Carling avenue and dropped 12 feet into Central Park, Ottawa, at three o'clock Sunday morning. The automobile crashed through a heavy iron pipe fence and came to a stop against a large tree at the foot of the embankment. Mr. Hummell was not even cut, although he was somewhat bruised and suffered slightly from shock. The heavy fog which, at the time hung over Central Park and Patterson's Creek, is blamed for the accident. Mr. Hummell, who is a stranger to that part of the city, was alone at the time. He was driving east on Carling avenue, approaching O'Connor Street, and was not aware that Carling avenue stopped at O'Connor street. The automobile was only slightly damaged. The front left wheel was snapped off and the front axle broken. A front fender was badly crumpled. The glass in the car was practically undamaged. The automobile was removed from its precarious position with considerable difficulty.

Cloverdale

Mr. Stewart Declare and family are removing from Cloverdale to the R. Lang Farm.

Mrs. Charles Dillabough and children spent Monday at the home of Mr. Arnold Docksteaders.

A business meeting of the patrons of Cloverdale Cheese Factory was held in the school house, Monday night.

It is reported that one of Cloverdale's prosperous farmers was forced to leave his Ford on the roadside on account of the icy condition of the roads last Monday night.

Mr. and Mrs, Thomas Docksteader motored to Ottawa on Tuesday.

It is rumoured that the C. F. C. has advised the executive of the wheat pools to get in touch with the farmers in the vicinity of Vernon if they desire wheat cars handled with despatch.

The Farmers Club unloaded a car of coal and wheat last Friday.

Messrs Morton and Eldon Stobo, Albert Baker, Hirk Coughler and Kingsley McNamara spent one day last week at the Fat Stock Show.

Mrs. John Baker returned home Sunday after a week's visit at her former home here.

Good Bye Frank

On Monday evening Nov. 28th the young people of our community gathered at the home of Mr. E. Brisbois to say good bye to Frank Smith, who for a year and a half has been Mr. Brisbois able assistant.

Frank is a steay, hard working young man, and is going back to Ottawa, his former home to fill a position there. After a splendid lunch had been served, Mr. Smith was called to a chair in the centre of the room and an address was read by Miss Mary Carkner while Mr. Hugh Porteous on behalf of the company presented a purse of gold. Mr. Smi h replied in a very able manner, and thanked the young people for their kindness. Afterwards the young folks enjoyed themselves in games and dancing. We are glad that our young people are showing such a spirit of comradeship and kindness to all who came amongst us. The following is the address:

Dear Frank:—

It is with mixed feelings we come here to-night to bid you good bye nd to wish you success in your new position. We regret having to part with you yet we are glad that you are going to a place where opportunities to make a start in life are more numerous than here. We hope that in your new position you will be happy and prosperous and sometime you will come back and visit us. As a token of our friendship and esteem we present you with this purse of gold and ask you to spend it for something useful to yourself that will keep our names fresh in your memory. Arthur Porteous. Wallace Merkley, Robert Porteous, Mac Carkner, Hugh Porteous, Russell Bowman.

A Surprise

In the p. m. of Oct. 29th, Miss Nellie Elliott and Miss Rena Grey entertained a number of ladies in the form of a miscellaneous shower, the occasion being a surprise benefit in honor of Miss Jessie Nesbitt.

At Miss Elliott's request Miss Nesbitt was invited to the Elliott home for the afternoon and on her arrival was completely surprised to find such a gathering in her honor.

After a few hours social intercourse a presentation was conducted in a very unique way. Miss Nesbitt was advised, thro' a song, Don't mind the Rain," to not take life's cares too seriously and immediately, after, two wee tots entered carrying a huge umbrella decorated in harmonizing colors, with the color scheme of the room, from which hung various and tantalizing parcels. These Miss Nesbitt proceeded to investigate and many beautiful and useful gifts with appropriately worded cards were offered for her acceptance.

Although so completely surprised, Miss Nesbitt, who by her gentle unassuming demeanour has won for herself the respect and confidence of all, rose to the occasion and with a touching but nicely worded response thanked all present for their evident good will and with a kind afterthought invited all either singly or as a party, to later visit her.

Recherche refreshments were then served by the joint hostesses and too soon came to an end such an afternoon as will not soon be forgotten by those attending.

Staging Comeback

Bottomley Using Prison Record in Drive to Re-enter Commons

London.—The predictions of cynics that Horatio Bottomley, former Member of Parliament and former editor of John Bull, who five years ago was convicted of huge frauds, would be able to stage a successful comeback as the "people's friend," already show signs of coming true.

Within three months of his release from Maidstone Prison, after serving his seven-year sentence, minus the usual commutation for good behavior, Bottomley is not only back in the limelight, but in the sympathies of many of the very persons who lost their small savings when his Victory Bond Clubs went on the rocks with hundreds of thousands of dollars unaccounted for.

At a public meeting advocating prison reform, held in Queens Hall, Bottomley, as "ex-Convict 13," was enthusiastically received by an audience comprising workingmen and women as well as men in evening clothes and women in expensive furs.

Hopes to Re-enter Parliament.

At this meeting he even voiced his hope of reentering Parliament, and a voice from the gallery shouting "Oh, yes, you'll soon be Prime Minister," did not, as might be expected, rouse general derision in the hall.. His promise to "devote himself to the making of a world fit for the sons of God" is, it appears, still being taken at its face value by a large number of persons.

The story of how Bottomley, since his release, has been following out a carefully planned campaign for rehabilitation is characteristic of the whole career of Bottomley, which is one of the most picturesque and spectacular on record.

He left Maidstone Prison July 29, being released suddenly on ticket of leave some days before the scheduled time to avoid any public demonstration. As soon as he reached his Surrey home, a sumptuous estate with a private race track, he ordered the Union Jack hoisted above the door of the house, after accepting the devout homage of his family and retainers..

Homecoming Gets Publicity.

Within a few hours he was being interviewed and overwhelmed with congratulations, and next morning the papers carried detailed accounts of his homecoming, copiously illustrated by pictures of Bottomley clasping his gardener's hand, "dealing with" his voluminous correspondence and fondling his pet dog.

According to newspaper accounts, he was soon receiving letters at the rate of 1000 a day. Within a week 1,000,000 persons in London had watched him enacting "early morning scenes" on his estate, especially filmed by a leading British company. The heart of the nation" with an article in the Weekly Dispatch, Lord Rothermere's Sunday paper with 1,000,000 circulation, and presently there appeared, all over London, huge posters showing Bottomley in an oratorical attitude declaiming: "I have paid, but—."

Show Prison "Horrors"

These posters advertise a series of articles purporting to be a revelation of the horror of English prison life. In reality they derive their indignation mainly from Bottomley's unexpected bad luck of being treated like every other criminal. But they teem with the picturesque phrases and flamboyant challenges of the kind that secured Bottomley's triumph as a popular tribune, that made him a man so feared by the Government that he had to be taken into the most secret Cabinet councils during the war, and that once made King George do his bidding when Bottomley virtually ordered him to remove the Kaiser's Knighthood banner from St. George's Chapel at Windsor.

Indeed, Bottomley's charges so far stirred the present Government that the Home Secretary, Sir William Jaynson-Hicks, has deemed it necessary to inspect Maidstone Prison and issue an official declaimer. Bottomley, quickly returning to the charge, offers to go to the prison with Sir William and if he can't substantiate his charges of "frightful cruelty" to serve out the rest of his seven years' sentence then and there.

Running True to Type.

This is the old rhetorical Bottomley running true to type. Sir William, however, merely wrote him a letter saying he could not enter into any correspondence with him.

Bottomley's prison articles are to be followed by another series on the "humorous" side of his experience. Then will be given the "true" story of his life, and meantime he has published the "Songs of the Cell," with grotesque results.

What interests the general public, aside from his collossal arrogance as revealed in these writings, is the fantastic sums he is said to be receiving for them. Rumor says he got $50,000 for his first series in the Weekly Dispatch. Bottomley is an undischarged bankrupt, and as such is liable to having part of his earnings attached.

Shares Earnings With Creditors.

This has, indeed, given Bottomley a chance for his next bid for rehabilitation. He has voluntarily submitted to a court order to have a share of his earnings set aside for the benefit of his creditors. Further than that, he has even called together the members of his "Victory Bond Club," one of the lotteries that caused his downfall, and is offering to pay their legal advisers and accountants to straighten out the various claims, and to try and realize certain shadowy assets in France.

His whole attitude implies, without his saying it, that he was the victim of circumstances, and that eventually the "truth" will come out and vindicate him.

Says He Will Re-establish Himself.

"My first and last duty in life," he said to his interviewers immediately after his release, "is to re-establish myself in the honor and faith of my countrymen."

Bottomley is in his sixty-eighth year, and the enforced frugality of prison life has made him a healtyh and powerful man. With his undoubted brilliance and ability, and an effontery which probably has no equal, he may yet succed in his "ambition."

Meantime ,the spectacle of a bankrupt, convicted of wholesale frauds on the public, living on a beautiful estate with butlers and valets waiting on him, purchasing race horses and having conferences with his trainer, does not seem to leave the British public quite unperturbed.

A DISTINGUISHED FROCK.

This chic frock is decidedly smart yet an extremely simple style to fashion. The front is cut in one with a left side extension which is gathered and falls in graceful folds and the back is plain. The long dart-fitted sleeves have plaited insets at the sides and a separate vestee with a shaped collar is set under the front. No. 1673 is for Misses and Small Women and is in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years. Size 18 (36 bust) requires 3¾ yards 39-inch or 2⅝ yards 54-inch material, and ⅝ yard 39-inch material for the vestee and collar. (Price 20c the pattern.)

Our Fashion Book illustrating the newest and most practical styles, will be of interest to every home dressmaker. Price of the book 10c the copy.

HOW TO ORDER PATTERNS.

Write your name and address plainly, giving number and size of such patterns as you want. Enclose 20c in stamps or coin (coin preferred; wrap it carefully) for each number and address your order to Pattern Dept., Wilson Publishing Co., 73 West Adelaide St., Toronto. Patterns sent by return mail.

MODERN "POETRY"

When a poet of the established reputation of Alfred Noyes gives his opinion of modern poetry, it is worthy of consideration. . . "Absolute craziness," he termed it, and that is not too strong a term.

The remedy Mr. Noyes suggests for the avalanche of nonsense that is flooding the bookshops in the name of poetry is to go to the poets and discover what we mean when we talk about poetry. That seems to be a thoroughly sound and logical suggestion. If Homer, Virgil, Shakespeare, Dante, Tennyson, Browning, Wordsworth and the rest were poets, then poetry is music and rhythm. If they were not poets, then the world has been grossly deceived, and the bosh that is ladled out by the vers libreists is music for the spheres. You cannot have it both ways.—Montreal Star.

"Mother goes to the Methodist Church," said a little girl to the new neighbor. "And isn't your father of the same denomination, dear?" "I don't know zackly what daddy is; he don't go to church with mother. Uncle Robert said daddy must be a Seven Day Absentist."

The LAND OF FORGOTTEN MEN

by Edison Marshall

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

Big Chris Larson, Alaska cannery foreman, seeking boat connections for the outside world in a launch, is driven by a storm into a small cove. He and the hard-drinking Remittance Man leave the cove for the open sea in the cannery launch to answer a distress signal.

The Remittance Man forces Big Chris to put on his sea jacket. He finds comfort in the fact that he cannot return to Dorothy and his home in Georgia, from which he had fled following a tragic launch ride on the Savannah river. While so musing the ship strikes a reef and he is hurled into darkness.

Dorothy Newhall receives at her home in Augusta, Ga., a telegram from Pirate Cove, Alaska, then faints.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

In a moment Ivan himself was standing at her side, his countenance clouded in sympathy for her. She was ever amazed at this man. He was tall and looked slender; but she knew the iron in those long, easily flowing muscles. There was a darkness, a foreign look in his handsome face that fascinated her even as it estranged her, something Oriental and mysterious that she could not exactly trace or analyze.

He had come out of Russia at the beginning of the revolution, and was hailed at once as a new master of the violin. Before that time he was widely known in the theatre of Petrograd and the Russian court, but he had not cared to seek laurels abroad.

"My dear girl!" he told her, his thin face lighting. He took her hand, bowed, and touched it to his lips. Then they took seats, side by side, on the big divan. His voice streamed on, comforting, cheering not only with his carefully chosen though swift-flowing words, but by exquisite modulation of its tones.

"I suppose you'll never forgive me" he said at last, in a more quiet tour.

"I don't see how I owe you anything but gratitude—"

"You know what I mean. You remember—that morning—after the trouble. You remember that when Peter wakened from his drunken sleep and could not remember the fight on the deck at all, he wanted to stay and fight the thing through the courts? It was I, you remember—of course with your help—who induced him to flee. And his flight has ended—by that." He pointed to the telegram.

"I don't see how it can be held against you, in the least degree," Dorothy assured him earnestly. "You were kind—generous—wonderful all the way through." Her voice dropped a tone. "Besides, this is no worse—better, in fact—that he should die doing a decent thing—going to the help of a sinking ship—than to die—in the prison on Elbert street!"

"There would have been some way out! Life imprisonment, at the worst—"

"Life imprisonment! No, Ivan—not for Peter. Liberty was always a passion with him—with all his race, for that matter—and he'd rather be dead than in prison. I've got that consolation at least."

"How amazed I am that this should come from the North when we both supposed he was in South America."

She looked at him quickly. There was no doubt about the genuineness of this amazement. He saw her look of surprise and turned quickly in explanation. "He took such a chance, Dorothy! I had a perfect course laid out for him—one that no one could have followed—but up there, in American territory, he was in hourly risk of arrest! It frightens me to think of the risk he ran—"

"But there is no risk now!" she told him grimly. "He's past all that—"

"Yes. Perhaps it's for the best. Try not to mourn too much, little girl."

To turn the current of her thought he took his violin—a marvelous thing of shell-like mahogany—from its case, and standing beside the window, he began to play

He was telling her of his love—a love that would go through fire or water, triumph or disgrace. It was a love that glorified her, but yet it some way appalled her, too.

It was not the kind of love that Peter had given her—tender, almost fatherly, a tolerant, protective love and yet strong with that eternal strength of the Anglo-Saxon. Peter had been bitterly ealous at last, but it had taken many little indiscretions—harmless, truly, but yet doubtless intolerable from his point of view—to make him so. She would not dare play thus with Ivan! His jealousy would be like a firebrand, his hate like a dagger blade.

CHAPTER III.

PETER'S RESCUE.

When Peter Newhall was hurled into that awful sea he had no shadow of a dream but that this was his last conscious instant. There was no battling those mountainous waves, and the jagged edges of the cruel rocks would destroy him in a moment. Yet, as always in the last degree of crisis, the instant was one of marvelous clarity of thought.

Not merely the physical body strengthens and gathers reserve in a crisis. The mental powers are likewise enhanced, encompassing a whole world in one glance, the breadth of many years in an instant. "It's the end," Peter told himself in one flash of blinding light.

In that instant he thought of Dorothy. Her image was just as plain, just as vivid in that eerrie gray dawn as if he had just left her side. The enchanted hours that he had spent with her passed in instantaneous review before him—those hours before Ivan had ever appeared with his heavenly music, before the world had come to be too much with him and with her, the wife at his side. In that terrible instant his heart cried out to her as it had never done in the fullness of their happiness. She was his own, his wife, the woman that God had given him, and he wanted her beyond any reach of words or thought.

There was an abiding quality of strength in him yet—for all these last months of debauchery—and his last impulse was in prayer for her. He wanted her destiny to be serene; his last breath of vivid consciousness before he felt the first, shattering impact of his body against the crags was given to her, wohlly and without reservation.

The first blow against the crags almost knocked him unconscious; thereafter the struggle in that tempestuous sea was like a gray dream.

Instinctively he threshed about in the water to save the killing impact on his head, but he was only partially able to break the force of the blow. The knife edge of the crag sliced down across his face, gouging and tearing as it went, and through the inner passages to his ears he had heard his jawbone crack apart. Again the waves caught him, lifting him high, and again he was sped forward swift as a dolphin dashing through green water.

Half-conscious, he waited for the shattering blow that would mean the end.

He was staggering on the shore.

But it did not come. The wave spent itself; then, as it rolled back, dropped him on the gray, smooth rocks that were lifted above the water. In that dim instant he saw the gray line of the shore not a hundred feet beyond.

The waves had carried him, as if by miracle, through a gap in the reefs. Instantly a fighting spirit welled back in him: if he could hold on, keep consciousness a moment more, he might easily be washed ashore.

The waves caught him again, lifted him up, and he fought hard against them to avoid the full power of the shattering blow when they laid him down. He was fifty feet nearer now, and as the wave went out, he struggled ahead to avoid being inundated by the next wave. And almost at once he was staggering on the shore, saved as if by miracle, in the icy, brightening dawn.

Still in his half-dream he shook the salt from his eyes and looked about him. It did not surprise him that a ship should be lying just without the reefs, tugging at her strong anchor chain, or that closer view should reveal a stout dory manned with a full crew that had evidently been launched in an attempt to rescue drowning men. At first no reasonable explanation for her presence occurred to him: it was simply part of the miracle that had borne him alive through the reefs. Yet in a moment he had guessed the truth; that this was a wandering trader who had answered the same appeal for help that had sped the Jupiter to her destruction.

The ship they had come to save was beyond the reach of help She was a small auxiliary schooner; the dawn showed part of her stern and her broken, oating masts where she had gone down. Of the Jupiter there was nothing whatever to be seen.

He did not believe his rescue could be accomplished for some moments at least, so he took the only possible course to keep the blood moving in his veins—he got to his feet and struggled up and down the shore. The fact that the exercise caused a more active flow from his wounds could not be taken into consideration: it was better to risk death from loss of blood than to die swiftly and surely from freezing. But already the men in the dory had seen him and were trying to push into the little cove between the reefs. Still he ran back and forth, only half-conscious.

Blond, rugged men had gathered about him and were ministering to him when the last of his dim consciousness departed. When he opened his eyes he was on a clean bunk, and a little group of men—none of whom he could ever remember seeing before—were working about him.

One of them, he guessed presently, was acting as ship's doctor: his hands were scrubbed till the skin was pink, he wore a white apron, and his look was very businesslike. He was talking quietly with two of the ship's officers as he sterilized a set of villainous-looking surgeon's tools.

Their conversation drifted faintly to Peter's ears. "Dis is quite a fe'der in your cap, Bill," one of he sailors was saying in the good-humored, subdued voice hat is the peculiar characteristic of a certain great breed of seafarers.

Slips That Cost

Mankind is growing less sure-footed In spite of better pavements, sidewalks, floors and stairways the percentage of accidents due to slipping, stumbling, tripping or loss of balance is steadily going up. Thoughtlessness on the part of the victim is the explanation given by the State Industrial Commissioner. Employers in New York State paid $6,500,000 in the last twelve months in compensating 18,000 workers who fell. Only half of that number were injured in like manner in 1923. On stairs the causes for falling might have been eliminated with a little more care. Catching the heel of the shoe and misjudging the step are prominent in the explanations.

Ladders that slipped, boxes, chairs, tables or other makeshifts used in trying to reach something account for hundreds of accidents. Wet floors were charged with 700 slips on level surfaces sustained by restaurant workers and cleaners who should have been on guard against that condition. Many others fel while carrying trays, dishes or packages. Persons who fell while walking on level surfaces outnumbered those inpured by falls from elevations, but their falls were not so serious. As a matter of economy the employer is now trying to make his premises safe, but the worker seems still to entertain the idea that accident chooses its victims according to their luck.

A New Dish for Late Suppers

An excellent dish for the late supper on cold winter evenings when something hearty is not unwelcome is recommended by a writer in the Home Institute of the December "Delineator." The dish is cold pork pie.

The recipe for this English dish is as follows:

3 lbs. lean pork, ½ teaspoon cayenne, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 onion, chopped, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, ¾ pint water, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ¾ teaspoon sage.

Cut the pork in very small pieces. Add seasoning and water. Line a deep dish with short pastry, pour in the meat, cover with pastry and bake in a moderately hot oven two hours. When cold, this becomes nicely jellied. Any bones from the meat may be covered with water and allowed to simmer slowly to make a stock to use in place of the water.

"Absolutely chic and obsoletely thick are less alike to the eyes than the ears."

Twelve Greatest War Heroes Picked

London Writer Puts Albert of Belgium at Top and Includes Wilson

London—The twelve most outstanding figures of the war have been selected tentatively by a writer in the London Graphic, who appears to have been personally connected with the great struggle in an important capacity, but who hides behind the pseudonym of "Post Hoc." They are Albert, of Belgium; Lloyd George, Woodrow Wilson, Lenine, Hindenburg, Foch, Clemenceau, the Kaiser, Lawrence, of Arabia; Edith Cavell, Earl Haig and d'Annunzio.

It is admittedly a strange list at first glance, but the man who tries to take history by the forelock makes it clear that he is not choosing on the standard of virtue alone.

What he has tried to do is not to select the heroes of the war, but the "heroes" of the story of the war, the twelve figures who will live in history and legend, those whom one "will associate with the greatest upheaval of the early twentieth century almost without mental process—as Nelson or Napoleon are merged in their epoch."

Weighs Claims of Each

He then proceeds to justify his selection, weighing the claims of each name against its competitors for fame. About King Albert he has no hesitation whatever. "Time," he says, "has not relieved him from being the most purely heroic figure of the war. His great merit is that and his faith, despite the temptations put in his way to make a separate peace. Yet all the time his 'kingdom' was merely a strip of sand on the Yser. He carried on, amid his troops, in the muddy misery of succeeding winters, steadfast and defiant, preferring defeat to dishonor."

And the writer adds a picture of the "outcast King," walking alone on the sands, gazing long and sadly at the light of Ostend—his Ostend—glimmering barely ten miles away.

"Post Hoc" is equally sure of his ground in picking his national leaders for the lost. Clemenceau, he says, "has his niche forever as the greatest popular hero France succumbed to (if only for the shortest while) since "le petit Caporal himself."

Lloyd George Secure

Nor, he thinks, will anybody dispute Lloyd George's place. "He first got the shells, and then, suiting himself to the swing of the nation, drove like fury till the end."

Wilson he chooses from among all the Americans as the one really historic figure, for "whatever the pitiful denouement, he did stand out and like none othersince Bonaparte."

"There were six months in 1918," "Post Hoc" continues, "when the White House, with Wilson in possession, came to be looked upon as Delphi itself; ally and enemy alike stood in awe of this obscure professor as he appeared to ladle out the wisdom of the ages . . . as the very shorthand clerks seemed to be taking down history when he reigned to speak. Like Caesar, Wilson later rode through the capitals of the Old World, preparing the way for his Fourteen Points."

Case of the Kaiser

But then we come to two figures of a different kind—Lenine and the Kaiser. "Post Hoc" explains their inclusion by saying that "many of the most outstanding men of history have been 'of the deepest dye'." "Of course," he says, "the founder of Bolshevism goes into our list—virtually at the top. A sinister figure? yes; a man of blood? yes; yet this is no chronicle of spotless virtue. Vitalizing a new horror, Lenine profoundly influenced the course of the war (and of the peace!) A creator, a leader, an organizer, a whipper-in of brutish illiterates."

Similarly the Kaiser was all along the embodiment, the living symbol o the German people. "Seven million graves constitute his monument—and they will continue to do so."

The only other German "Post Hoc" admits to his list in Hindenburg, who "looks like finishing up as a second Wotan," and whose "Hindenburg line" will remain "quite an important furrow down the centuries."

Foch and Haig Eligible

And the only other soldiers he considers eligible to the twelve are Foch and Haig.

Neither Joffre nor Ludendorff nor Pershing passes the test! As for "Papa Joffre" he says, he is on the way to becoming a kind of legend, for "no one seems to know for certain whether he was a complete washout or a sly old strategist of great lethargy." Ludendorff, too, is a disputed figure.

The third of these omissions, Pershing, requires more explanations, and "PostHoc" doesn't hold it back.

"Had Pershing," he says, "commanded a larger force in the line than twenty-two divisions (last-minute munber) or for longer, actively, than six brief monts . . . he would have gone into any list of the first twelve." A more serious argument for his exclusion, according to this writer, is found in the heavy losses in the Argonne in the fall of 1918, and he adds his "belief" that the question of Pershing's relief from command had already arisen when the end of the war came.

Three Romantic Figures

The remaining three names in the list are romantic figures, figures important for their appeal to the imagination rather than for their influence. Thus "Lawrence of Arabia" takes precedence over Allenby, Maude and all the military leaders in the East: "Lawrence, brilliant, beautiful, outstanding genius on his cabbage patch, the hero of boys forever, and of grown-ups, too." So he enters "our elect." And so does Nurse Cavell, though all she may have done was to die. "Yet she lives on forever, internationally, on the strength of war service and therefore fills the utmost meaning of the term 'outstanding.'"

Finally, there is d'Annunzio, as the only Italian in the entire list. He is there as the "bringer-in" of Italy against her former Allies. As the "recognized inspirer of Fascismo when the Duce was still a sergeant of Arditi, and "as the very-much-on-earth acquirer of Fiume, this long-fingered poet-bomber and utter human contradiction cannot be barred from the ultimate dozen."

The list is more remarkable, perhaps, for its omissions than its inclusions, but "Post Hoc" explains them all. At one time, he says, Venezelos, Allenby, Grand Duke Nicholas, Colonel House and Lord Northcliffe were all among his candidates. Kitchener, Jellicoe, Beatty, Hoover, Page and others were all crowded out by a hair's breadth. None of these cases, perhaps, is as remarkable as Winston Churchill, who had to yield precedence to Haig. "Post Hoc" hates to omit him and grants him a long eulogy instead.

Finally, he says there is "a thirteenth who soars above them all," and that is the Unknown Soldier, resting in a million graves.

History's Most Expensive Party

Exclusive "Tea-for-Three" Costs Lady Houston $7,500,000

DEATH DUTIES

Chancellor Maintained the Right to Tax Estate of Late Husband

London—The most expensive tea-for-three in history—with Lady Houston, widow of Sir Robert Houston, multi-millionaire shipbuilder; Chancellor of the Exchequer Churchill, and Sir Douglas Hogg, chief legal officer for the Crown, discussing high finance over the cups—has enriched the Government by $7,500,000.

After the third cup of tea Lady Houston wrote the Chancellor of the Exchequer a cheque for seven and a half million. The Chancellor put it in his pocket and ordered another cup of tea around. Shortly thereafter the party broke up with Mr. Churchill giving Lady Houston a paternal pat on the back.

The huge payment represented a compromise figure between the $12,000,000 which the Government said Sir Robert's $35,000,000 estate owed in inheritance tax, and whatever reduction Lady Houston could negotiate.

Sir Robert, who left his entire fortune to the wife he married late in life, had one great hobby,—to escape the inheritance tax. A few years ago he made his legal residence in Jersey, Channel Islands, where there is no inheritance tax. But the Government maintained he was a resident of England.

It was a posthumous stroke of irony, therefore, which gave the Government $7,500,000.

"The idea of negotiating with Mr. Churchill my own settlement of the tax came to me spontaneously," Lady Houston said.

It might be added, in this connection, that the Government impounded her $2,000,000 yacht in which she likes to ride the seven seas.

"I sent a telegram to Mr. Churchill saying that I wished to present to the Government my share of the tax as an act of grace.

"The Chancellor invited me to tea at the Treasury in Whitehall. Sir Douglas was there," she added.

"We discussed settlement of the tax between sips of good tea.

"Finally I borrowed Mr. Churchill's pen and signed a cheque for one and a half million pounds—without missing a sip.

"Absolutely, signing of the cheque did not spoil my tea. We parted happily, Sir Douglas with his books, Churchill with my cheque and I with his pat on my back."

"Meet the Wife"

A delicious bit of exalted writing by the "enraptured reporter" is found in the world's account, recently, of Dwight Morrow's reply to the Mexican Consul's speech of greeting at Laredo:

"Now it might have been expected—it would have been natural enough—that a man, a banker by profession, unaccustomed to speech on public occasions, in a foreign land, speaking to a foreign mind and character, would be stiff, or, at best, formal. And in Mr. Morrow's case there was his self-imposed resolution not to commit himself about Mexico until he had talked with President Calles. Se he had to choose his words. He chose them to perfection:

"'It was very kind of you to take the trouble to come here to welcome me,' he said. 'I think you very much. May I present you to Mrs. Morrow?'"

In other words, the Ambassador, summoning every mental resource of the banker and diplomat, said to the Mexican official, "Meet the wife."—New York Evening Post.

Theatrical agents sometimes have to be rather cruel One day a somewhat faded woman called to apply for the position of chorus girl "Sorry," said the agent, tactfully, "you're too late." The applicant, knowing this was not true, burst into a volume of abuse, ending with, "I don't believe I'm too late at all." "Oh, yes, you are," said the agent. "About 15 years."

A Low Down Trick

Carp Review—One of the meanest tricks we have heard of for some time was "pulled off" one evening last week on the Ottawa-Pembroke highway four miles west of Carp. A farm laborer returning from work with his team on the waggon at dust was stopped by the driver of a motor car and asked where his light was. Upon telling the motorist he had no lantern he was asked if he had any money with him, and, answering in the affirmative he was told he was fined and if he paid the fine immediately he would only be taxed $10, but if not paid at once he was liable to be arrested and the fine would be doubled. The man handed over $10 and the would be traffic officer drove off. This laborer is an elderly man who can neither read nor write and was not able to secure even the license number on the car.

Again Wins Cup

Our congratulations to the teacher, Miss Merkley, and the trustees of Nation Valley Public School, for having this year again won the beautiful Smith Cup donated by the Horticultural Council of the Provincial Horticultural Society for having the best improved and most attractive school grounds in Eastern Ontario. This cup was won by Nation Valley two years ago. Last year they were not so fortunate, but this year they again won first place. This is a special honor for those who have interested themselves in making the Nation Valley school ground one of the most attractive in the Province.

Mr. Wm Webb

This community was shadowed with gloom when it was learned that there had passed away a lifelong and highly esteemed resident of Winchester Springs, in the person of the late Wm Webb in the 77th year of his age. Eight months ago he was stricken with a paralytic stroke, but regained his health somewhat, until about the last three weeks during which time he had gradually weakened. Notwithstanding all that loving care and careful nursing, and the best medical attendance could do, he passed to his eternal home, Nov. 22 at 2 o'clock, Tuesday.

Deceased was the son of one of the earliest settlers in Dundas, George Webb, of Hampshire, England, and Isabella Patterson, of Dublin, Ireland, they having settled about the year 1830. Deceased was born July 8th, 1850. He lived practically all his life on the home farm. He was a loving father and husband. Honesty was his policy.

In 1875 he married Laney Casselman, daughter of the late Mr, and Mrs. John S. Casselman, who predeceased him in 1898. To this union there were born nine children, seven of whom are living, Eldon and Charlie, of Toronto, Everett, of Iroquois, George A., ol Cleveland, Erbun, of New Orleans, W. O., of Detroit, and Mrs. Ethel Thompson, of Iroquois.

In 1901 he married Mrs. Marguerite Steele Cameron, of Finch, who survives him and three stepchildren, Mrs. W. W. Stinson, of Ottawa, Mrs. R. Weaver, of Richville, N. Y., Mr. J. Cameron, of Willcox, Sask., one brother of Wisconsin, several neices and nephews and twenty grandchildren.

The funeral took place from his late residence on Friday at 1.30, in the United Church, and was conducted by his pastor, Rev. Hurst, of Elma, who took for his text John, chapter 11, and spoke very comforting words from verses 25 & 26. The service was under the Orange Order, No. 580. deceased being accorded full honors of the Scarlet Knight. Two of the Orange Brethren sang sweetly one of the deceased favorite hymns, Down at the Cross. The Choir rendered a beautiful anthem, Rest Weary Pilgrim. The pall-bearers were, R. A. Ball, S and W. Bolten, E. Munro, H. Nesbitt and H. McDonald, all members of the L. O. L.

The floral offerings were many and beautiful, Broken Circle—Wife, Pillow—Mr. and Mrs. Ed Webb, Mr. and Mrs C. Webb, Mr. and Mrs. E. Webb, Mrs. Ethel Thompson, Wreaths—Mr. and Mrs. O. Webb, Mr. and Mrs. Geo Webb, Mr. and Mrs, Erbun Webb, Miss Edith and Messrs J. W. and A. J. Webb and family, Royal Arch with Emblems from L. O. L. 580. Spray—Stepchildren, Cut Flowers—Sabbath School.

Interment was made at Maple Ridge Cemetery.

Obituary

The whole community was shocked to hear of the death of Mrs. Bryon Timmins, (Hattie E. Shaver) which occured in the Civic Hospital, Ottawa, on Monday morning last.

The end came with surprising suddenness as only a few days before Mrs. Timmns had been helping a neighbour get some foul ready for the market. While there she complained of not feeling very well and hurried on home. Not feeling any better the doctor was called in and he advised taking her to the Hospital. She stood the trip fairly well and on Saturday an operation was performed. She rallied and on Sunday felt very comfortable but towards night those watching her saw a great change. Everything that human skill and tender care could do was done, but she gradually sank and passed away very quietly on Monday morning.

Her loved ones were with her and she was conscious to the last, being able to converse with them and assured them that she was not afraid to go, asking that all look forward to a reunion later.

The funeral was a very large one, held in the United Church, Inkerman, of which she was a member, on Wednesday afternoon.

Her minister, Rev. C. H. Brown was assisted by the Rev P. Pollitt, of South Mountain, who sang by request, "Will the Circle be broken over there?" The body was laid away in the Knight's Cemetery.

There are left to mourn her loss her husband, J. Byron Timmins, three children, Delmar, Claud and Elleda, three grandchildren, her Father and Mother, (Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Shaver of South Mountain,) all her brothers and sisters. Her family feel the loss all the more keenly as it is the first break in a large family.

Besides the immediate family with their large connection, the whole community has lost a willing and cheerful worker, a good neighbour and faithful friend.

Mrs. Timmins had not been well for some years past but always made light of her ailments, and her passing is all the more lamentable because we shall miss her cheery good nature and ready smile.

It is a matter of great comfort that though the circle is broken here, there is a link yonder until the Day break and the Shadows flee away.

Obituary

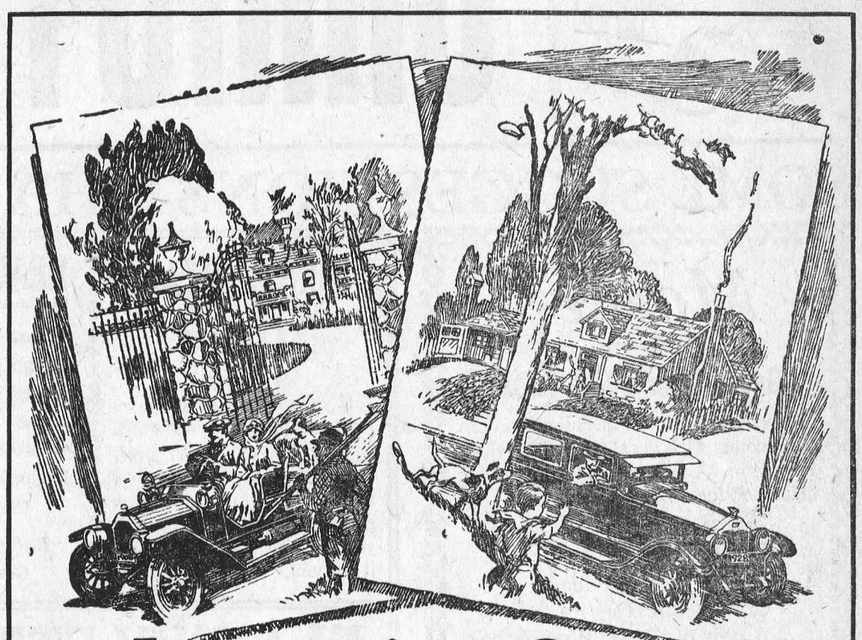
On Wednesday morning Nov. 23, 1927, there passed peacefully away at her home Winchester Springs Mrs. Thos. D. Nesbitt in her 76th year.

Until a few months ago, she was enjoying good health, and during her painful illness manifested great patients and fortitude, but gradually grew weaker until the end came. Her home life was marked by an intense love and unfaltering devotion.

She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, three daughters Mrs. J. Shaver, Mrs. G. N. Myers, Mrs. A. Runions, one son, Mr. T. Nesbitt of Iroquois, Ont., one brother Mr. W. S. Meyers of Sebetha, Kansas; and two sisters Mrs. W. J. Grey of Arkansas, Kansas; and Mrs. A. B. Woolsey of Kildare, Okla.

The funeral service was held in the Union Church on Friday Nov. 25th at 10.30 a. m. Her pastor, Rev. Mr. Hurst preached an able and impressive sermon on Luke 16: 22—Carried by the angels John 14; 3—I will come again and receive you unto myself. "There'll be no dark valley when Jesus comes," was rendered by the choir in a very touching manner. The floral tributes were:—Pillow—husband; Gates-a-jar—family; Wreath—Mr. and Mrs. M. Nesbitt, Avonmore.

Interment took place at the Maple Ridge Cemetery. The loved one is now safely home enjoying the rest that remaineth to the people of God. Let us therefore sorrow not for 'tis a glorious rest.



Luxuries Once But Necessities Now

PRACTICALLY any Canadian citizen may own today an automobile possessing elements of beauty, style, comfort and efficiency which no amount of wealth could have commanded a dozen years ago.

For the automobile industry has outgrown its original function as a supplier of transportation, and has in an amazingly short time, brought about the refinements which are exemplified in the present-day General Motors car.

Since its foundations first were laid sixty years ago, this institution has believed that every Canadian has a right to the best his country produces, has a right to satisfy his sense of beauty, his desire for comfort, his need for dependability.

General Motors has at its command the master minds of the industry. It has the finest automotive research laboratories and the greatest automobile proving grounds in the world, wherein have been pioneered and developed some of the industry's most revolutionary advances.

And General Motors has used its prosperity and success unstintingly in improving the quality and increasing the value of its products. . . .

It is thus that General Motors of Canada has played its part in translating once-inconceivable luxury into terms of every-day necessity. . . .

Extra Eggs Extra Profits

Every sack of Ful-O-Pep Egg Mash contains the correctly balanced feed to make hens lay most eggs. You get biggest profits out of Ful-O-Pep Egg Mash.

The base of Quaker Ful-O-Pep Egg Mash is pure oatmeal. This, with many other important ingredients, provides the right amounts of protein and carbohydrates which every money-making hen must have. Bone meal and calcium carbonate supply the minerals so necessary for heavy egg production. Those elements which the hen reproduces in eggs are fully restored to her. The Cod Liver Meal in Ful-O-Pep Egg Mash replaces missing sunlight during winter months, and its vitamines make all ingredients do better work.

Ful-O-Pep Egg Mash is finely ground. Easily digested. No waste. Hens eat it all. Gives you more eggs, bigger and stronger-shelled eggs, and of more uniform size. Therefore, it is the most economical feed you can buy. Ful-O-Pep Egg Mash and Ful-O-Pep Scratch Grains form the ideal combination to make heavy layers. Ask your dealer for them.

Quaker FUL-O-PEP EGG MASH

Made by The Quaker Oats Company, Peterborough, Ontario.
