Two Men Seriously Hurt Car Overturns on Road

Ottawa Residents in Auto Rolling Over on Morewood Road Two Miles North of Chesterville.—Excessive Speed Blamed.

Two men narrowly missed death when the car in which they were driving towards Chesterville turned over on the road two miles north of town on the Morewood highway Friday afternoon. The men, Edw. Stewart, 18 Meglund ave., Ottawa, and Harry Benson, Room 34 Canada Life Bldg., Ottawa, were badly injured. Benson suffered a broken hip, broken collar bone and severe lacerations about the head, while his companion received torn ligaments of his shoulder and had two ribs cracked.

The accident happened shortly after one o'clock and, according to police, after the auto rounded the double bend in the vicinity of the "fur farm," it weaved to the grass on the roadside twice, turned sidewise and rolled to make a complete turn and a half on the middle of the road. The driver, Harry Benson, was thrown clear of the wreckage, but Stewart was in the car with part of the top draped about his head. He was extricated and assisted passersby to remove Stewart to the side of thee road where the latter was placed on the seats from the auto.

After some time Allan Gormley, of Crysler, came on the scene as he was proceeding to Chesterville, and summoned medical aid. Dr. A. B. Clayton of Chesterville attended the wounded men who were later taken to the Civic Hospital, Ottawa, in Dixon's ambulance.

The cause of the smash-up was said by the victims to be a blow-out, but police are inclined to think excessive speed was the fault, as the flat tire did not appear to be blown, but rather pinched. Constable Garnet McLean of town investigated and had the wreck removed to Munro's Garage. The machine is a complete loss.

When they are well enough to leave hospital, it is expected both men will appear in court, Benson on a charge of reckless driving, and Stewart for failing to have his license transferred. It is said the auto, a 1929 De Soto sedan, was purchased a month ago from an Ottawa firm.

Funeral at Williamsburg Former Chesterville Girl

Miss Myrtle Bogart Was Well Known in Chesterville Where She Grew to Womanhood.

At her home at Williamsburg where she had resided for the last few years death came to Myrtle Bogart after a serious and fatal illness on Wednesday, August 21st. She was tenderly and faithfully cared for during the last of this illness by her sisters, Mrs. Sheldon Ouderkirk and Mrs. B. Hess, also by her uncle, Mr. W. A. McElroy.

She was well known, loved and esteemed in this community where she was born, attended school and lived for many years. Although handicapped physically all her life, she never complained and was always cheerful, accomplishing more along life's pathway than many who have much better health.

Her funeral was from her home on Friday to the United church at Williamsburg where Rev. Mr. Adey preached the sermon. "Does Jesus Care," a solo, was nice sung by a member of the choir, Mrs. P. Hennesy. Many beautiful floral offerings were received from the family, relatives and friends. Interment was made in the family plot at the Maple Ridge cemetery.

Pall bearers were Arthur McElroy, Arnold Bogart, Willie Ellis and Lyle Marcellus.

Left to mourn the loss of a dearly beloved and unselfish sister are: three brothers, Howard, Bruce and Garnet; five sisters, Mrs. M. Brown (Ethel) Mrs. Sheldon Ouderkirk (Marguerite), Mrs. Slater (Greta), Mrs. B. Hess (Helen), and Mrs. Sarquharson (Dora).

Local Men Complete Re-Building of Launch

25-Foot Boat Goes to Hummel Camp on Lievre River in Quebec After Rejuvenation in Local Yards.

Early in the summer, Hummel Bros., Harry and Ralph, secured a 25-foot launch along the St. Lawrence which had seen its best days, brought it to Chesterville, and proceeded in their spare time to overhaul it and make it ship shape. While this was being done, Jim Slosser installed an engine from a Star car with the necessary cooling system, and at the week end the craft was transferred on a Morris Transport truck to the upper waters of the Leivre river in Quebec and launched at the Hummel's camp for its trial spins. The boat proved up to expectations and is said to have developed a speed of around 12 miles per hour and will carry 15 passengers. Among those who made the trip over the week end and enjoyed a spin were: Ralph Hummel, Harry Hummel, Gordon Cummings, Syd Morris, O. L. King and Jim Slosser.

FINE EVENING AT DUNBAR.

On Tuesday evening last, softball was played by Bush Glen and Dunbar in which Dunbar was successful. Mr. George K. Casselman erected a dancing platform south of his store which was nicely lit up with gas lanterns Mr. Moon, looking down upon the proceedings beneath the shade of the old apple trees, made the evening ideal. Mr. Miles Marcellus and family furnished the music, assisted by Mr. Frank Bronskill and Mr. Charlie Colingridge. Messrs. Donald Kyle, Wilfred McMillan and Charles Collingridge sang several solos. Three cheers were given for the orchesta and all joined in singing the National Anthem which brought an unforgetable evening to a close. Mr. Roy Marcellus and Mr. Billy Marcellus gave some fine step dancing.

"Afternoon With the Flowers" Is an Interesting Event

Library Filled With Quantities of Summer Bloom—Show Sponsored by Women's Institute.

A very lovely afternoon was spent yesterday by the Womens Institute and friends, the occasion being "An Afternoon With the Flowers." All the available space in the Library was filled with flowers, among which were noticed blue scaliosa, annual and perennial Galardi, phlox of all colours, different varieties of marigolds, asters, zinnias, roses, dahlias, sweet peas, gladioli and many others.

Mrs. Haldane Durant, Mrs. O. L. King and Mrs. W. N Fulton were the prize winners for gladioli; Mrs. O. D. Casselman, best table bouquet; Mrs. Melvin Durant,, best decorative bouquet; Mrs. J. Hughes, best dahlia; roses, Mrs. O. D. Casselman. Mr. Jas. Riddle exhibited a grape fruit tree about three feet high and also a pot of peanut plants. Mr. Geo. Harper had on display a peach tree. These gentlemen both received special mention.

A very fine musical programme presented by Mrs. W. N Fulton, Mrs. A. D. Munro of Arvida, Mrs. Thompson of Cayce, South Carolina; Misses Addie and Madge Campderros, Marcia Hughes, Grace Allison and Lillian Graham added very much to the pleasure of the afternoon. Tea was served and the thanks of the Institute given to the judges, Mrs. C. W. Casselman, Miss Lenora Merkley and Miss Helen Lacey, who performed the difficult task of judging in such an efficient manner.

Former Maple Ridge Man Lived Many Years in Kemptville

John St.C. Parker Was Born at Maple Ridge 77 Years Ago.—Died in an Ottawa Hospital.

Tribute to the memory of James St. Claire Parker, well-known and highly respected resident of Kemptville, who died Monday morning at an Ottawa hospital, was paid by many friends and relatives attending his funeral Wednesday afternoon, held from the residence of Henry Moore, Kemptville, to St. Paul's Presbyterian church.

Service was conducted by Rev. W. W. Turner, of Winchester, assisted by Rev. W. J. Hurlow, pastor. Mrs. F. Gill presided at the organ with a full choir in attendance.

Born at Maple Ridge, 77 years ago, he was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Parker, pioneers of the district.

The pallbearers were: C. Beckett, W. B. George, G. Young, J. H. Allen, G. Langstaff and W. Stewart, all fellow members of the Masonic Order. Mourners and survivors include two daughters, Mrs. Pearl Munroe, Saskatoon, and Mrs. C. E. Jamieson, of Napanee; two sisters, Miss Hattie Parker, Maple Ridge, and Mrs. Alford of New York, and one brother, John of Maple Ridge.

Interment wasm made at Maple Ridge cemetery with Rev. W. W. Turner officiating.

LIGHT FROST LAST NIGHT.

FOLLOWING a cool wind all day yesterday, the temperature last night is reported to have dropped to the freezing point, but without injury to growing gardens in the village.

Funeral of Mrs. I. Pelletier Attended by Large Crowd

Born in Province of Quebec in 1858, Lived Here All Her Married Life Except Two Years in Kemptville.

Testifying to the esteem which she had enjoyed in the community where she lived for more than half a century sorrowing friends paid tribute to the memory of Mrs. Isaac Pelletier, who died on Wednesday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Allan Moran, Victoria street, at the funeral which was held Saturday morning to St. Mary's Roman Catholic church.

Born in the province of Quebec in 1858, the former Mary Exilda Charboneau, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Charboneau, she married 58 yeas ago to live for two years in Kemptville before coming here, where her husband conducted a barber shop and store upwards of 50 years. Mrs. Pelletier was a devout member of St. Mary's Catholic church and of the League of the Sacred Heart. Her husband died three years ago. Her devotion to her family and interest in community affairs won a wide circle of friends who mourn her loss.

Requiem high mass was chanted by Rev. Father P. J. Keaney.

The chief mourners and survivors were, eight daughters: Mrs. Edward Burnette, Faust, N.Y.; Mrs. William Servage, Nutan, Sask.; Mrs. Theophile Labre, Chesterville; Mrs. William Rule, Tupper Lake, N.Y.; Mrs. J. L. Brisbois, Boston, Mass.; Mrs. F. J. Hughto, Rushton, N.Y.; Mrs. Allan Moran, Chesterville; Mrs. H. Bombard, Rushton, N.Y.; two sons, Henry, of Fort William and Fred of Detroit.

A wealth of floral and spiritual offerings were received by the bereaved family.

The pallbearers were Messrs. Bernard Coyne, Raymon Campderros, H. Cadieux and P. Chambers.

Interment was made in the family plot in the Lower cemetery.

Morewood Society Honours Two Departing Members

Mrs. Nimmo and Mrs. L. Marcellus Are Presented With Gifts by Presbyterian Ladies.

The August meeting of the Presbyterian Ladies' Aid of Morewood was held at the home of Mrs. Jack Nadeau on Wednesday last with many members present. Mrs. Poapst presided in the absence of the president. Regret was expressed at the removal of two members. Mrs. Lorne Marcellus a few months ago moved to Chesterville, and Mrs. A. Nimmo who was to take her departure shortly for Athelstan.

As a tangible expression of the sorrow of the society, the members presented Mrs. Marcellus with a beautiful crystal set, and Mrs. Nimmo with an electric floor lamp. The best wishes follow both to their new homes.

A social half-hour was enjoyed on the lawn and a dainty lunch was served by the hostesses, Mrs. J. McLaughlin and Mrs. J. Nadeau.

LOCAL GIRL SOFTBALLERS CLEAN UP AT MOULINETTE

Continuing their unbeaten career through the present season, the Chesterville Girls' Softball team went to Moulinette last Saturday afternoon and carried off the trophy from an entry list that included Cornwall, Finch and Cardinal. While Chesterville was winning from Cardinal in a one-sided score, Finch was triumphing over Cornwall, again placing Finch and Chesterville in the finals which Chesterville won by a narrow margin.

Two Iroquois Women Hurt In Automobile Collision

Mrs. W. M. Merkley and Daughter in Brockville Hospital Following Crash—Quebec Driver Questioned

Two women were injured when the automobile in which they were driving was in collision wth a car bearing a Quebec license on the King's Highway, more than two miles east of Iroquois Tuesday morning. Those hurt are, Mrs. M. W. Merkley, and her daughter, Miss Isabel Merkley, both Iroquois.

When they were removed to a Brockville hospital it was found that Mrs. Merkley had suffered a chest injury, while Miss Merkley had an injury to her hip. Both were kept at the hospital for X-ray examination.

Traffic Officer Rose of Morrisburg who investigated the accident, later questioned the driver of the Quebec car at Prescott, and indicated a charge might be laid. Constable Rose was told by J. C. Singleton, Chatham, Ont. that he had seen the Quebec car before the crash, and, while following it for 10 miles, had seen empty beer bottles hurled from the automobile.

Mr. Singleton said he came on the scene of the accident and assisted two men in removing the injured women from their car. He taxed the Quebec men with drinking and claimed they drove away when he did so. A license plate found near the scene of the mishap led to the questioning of the motorists at Prescott. It was reported there was only one man in the car when it was overtaken by Constable Rose.

New Scale Relief Payments Announced by Toronto

Lump Sums To Municipalities Based on Number on Relief and Ability to Pay Its Ow Way.

Toronto.—Relief sum payments to Ontario municipalities after September 1st, when they will have to look after their own relief administration, will be lump sum payments scaled according to the ability of the municipality to pay its own way and based on the number of persons on relief, Hon. David A. Croll, Ontario Minister of Welfare, has announced.

It had been announced originally by Premier Hepburn, when making known the Goverment's new relief policy, the payments would be on a monthly per capita basis. Mr. Croll said the lump sum payments would represent a maximum.

Further details of the new scale of payments will not be available until later in the week when the Government's new regulations will be published.

Preventing Bees From Swarming

Work done by the Bee division of the Dominion Experimental Farms has shown that the desire of bees to swarm may be suppressed to the minimum by eliminating the exciting causes. This is done by keeping every colony headed by young and vgourous queens, by providing sufficient space for maximum brood production and storage of nectar at all times, by using only good drawn comb in the brood chambers, and by providing shade for the colonies during the hottest part of the summer or proper ventilation of the hives.

Cleaning the Hen House.

At this time of year hen houses should be thoroughly cleaned, disinfected and whitewashed. At the Poultry Division, Experimental Farm the following whitewash mixture has been used with good results:

Slake ½ bushel of lime with boiling water, strain and add 1 peck of salt dissolved in warm water. Put 3 pounds of ground rice in boiling water and boil to a thin paste. Dissolve ½ pound of powdered Spanish whiting and 1 pound of clear glue in warm water. Mix all these well together and let stand for several days. Keep over a portable furnace and apply hot with brushes.

Water For the Poultry.

Extremely warm weather often causes heat prostration among poultry, therefore an abundant supply of clean, fresh water should be available to the growing and laying flock. Since water makes up 66 per cent of an egg its use is imperative. Clean water is necessary, not only from the standpoint of sanitation, but also to help control egg flavour.

At What Stage of Maturity Should Crops be Harvested?

Experiments by the Field Husbandry Division, of the Experimental Farms, show that crops cut at the following stages give highest yields of best quality.

HAY—Alfalfa, one tenth in bloom; red clover. in full bloom; timothy, when the bloom has fallen; grain for hay, when the kernels are in the milk stage.

GRAIN—All grain crops should be cut when the kernels are firm and before the heads are too easily shattered.

SILAGE—Corn, late dough; sunflowers, 50 per cent in bloom; red clover. full bloom; alfalfa, full bloom and wilted 5 hours after cutting; oats and peas when oats are in the dough stage.

ROOTS—As late in the fall as possible.

POTATOES—When the tops are all dead.

Weaning the Lambs.

Lambs should be weaned at around five months of age. The practice of letting the lambs wean themselves is to be discouraged since it prevents the mother getting a well deserved rest before the mating season, which is necessary for her health and vitality.

Young weaned lambs should have the run of some good fresh pasture. A good aftermath or a piece of rape that has been sown in the spring will be greatly enjoyed by them. Such a pasture is necessary to avoid a check in their growth as a result of the loss of their mother's milk; it will also help to prevent parasitic infestation so detrimental to growing lambs.

Cutting Soybean Hay.

With an increasing number of farmers growing soybeans for hay, it is important that growers should cut the crop at the proper time. Soybeans for hay should be cut when the pods are about half filled out. The most desirable combination of quality and feed value is obtained at this stage. Cutting should be done with the mower in the morning after the dew is off. It is usual to leave the crop in the swath for a day, or until the leaves are wilted, then rake into windrows and allow to cure. Or it may be left two or three days in the windrows and then put into small cocks. The hay should be thoroughly cured before hauling and handled in such a way as to preserve the leaves as much as possible.

Early Topping of Turnips.

The practice of "topping" turnips some weeks before the date of pulling in order to use the leaves while still green in the feeding of livestock, has been common in certain parts of the Dominion, and the question whether it is an economical operation or not has been settled by practical demonstrations. The data obtained showed that turnips from the non-topped crops had the higher food value. The inquiry also furnished satisfactory evidence of the marked growth of the untopped crop during the latter weeks of the season, the leaves during this period continuing to function as lungs and stomach, resulting in a heavier yield. The practice of topping the crop three weeks or a month prior to the date of pulling has shown to result in a lower yield per acre of nutrients, and is therefore non-economic.

Some Poultry Parasites Easily Controlled.

At this season red mites and body lice frequently cause serious loss in production, deaths may follow a bad infestation among both the young and the old stock, and considerable time and care may be required to bring the flock back into condition after the trouble has been located.

Carelessness or unsanitary conditions are usually responsible for the presence of these pests. They thrive on dirty hens and multiply rapidly in filth if it is allowed to accumulate in corners or cracks and crevices of the henhouse.

Lice live entirely on the body of the bird and irritate by crawling and biting. Their eggs are laid at the base of the feather, usually around the vent or under the wing. Fortunately, they are easily controlled and by using ordinary precautions the flock may be kept free and clean. The usual practice at the Experimental Station at Harrow is to apply Blue Ointment, which can be obtained at any drug store. A portion of blue ointment about the size of a pea is smeared between the thumb and first and second fingers and rubbed in around the vent and at the base of the wing close to the body. One thorough application when the birds are being placed in winter quarters is usually sufficient for the year. However, the birds should be examined at intervals because a reinfestation may occur during hot weather.

The red mites do not stay on the birds constantly. As a rule, they spend the day in some crack or crevice or on the underside of the roosts preying on the birds at night by piercing the skin and gorging themselves with blood. The control is comparatively simple. A solution of 1 to 3 crude carbolic and kerosene or one of the good coal tar preparations usually used as a disinfectant may be applied with a brush to the dropping boards, roosts and nests after they have been thoroughly scraped and cleaned. In the case of a bad infestation, when the mites have migrated to all parts of the house, a thorough cleaning and spraying with one of these agents will be necessary and should be repeated after an interval of two or three days.

Here and There

Fine percheron stallions, smartly groomed cavalry chargers of the mounted police, racing and pacing horses and mounts trained in jumping and for the hunting field mingle at the village of Montebello, P.Q., on the north shore of the Ottawa, for the annual Seigniory Club Horse Show this summer during August 15-18, Thursday to Sunday. A musical ride will be put on by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The event is under the patronage of His Excellency the Governor-General and Canadian and American society folks are expected in large numbers.

Enjoying a short stay at the Banff Springs Hotel on his way to taking up his post in London, His Excellency T. Matsudaira, Japanese Ambassador to Great Britain, stated to an interviewer, "I prefer just to enjoy myself and to forget for a few hours that there are more arduous duties than the contemplation of this lovely place."

Addressing a gathering of the Rotary Club of Victoria at the Empress Hotel, recently, Premier Joseph A. Lyons, of Australia, pointed to the British Empire as a great force for peace and urged Canada to cultivate a more favorable trade with his own country. Last year, he said, Australia bought from Canada $18,000,000 worth of goods, while Canada bought from Australia only $6,000,000 worth.

The Algonquin Hotel, St. Andrews-by-the-Sea, New Brunswick, opened for the summer season at the end of June, and is now the centre of much holiday activity. Their Excellencies the Governor-General and Lady Bessborough were among the guests and the famous Katy's Cove bathing beach is again as in former years very popular with the children and the younger set.

With the increasing popularity of vacation trips on the Great Lakes, the Canadian Pacific has expanded its Great Lakes steamship service to include calls at Port Arthur on westbound voyages as well as eastbound. These ships have been outfitted with deck sports, including quoits, shuffleboard and deck golf. Dancing and music bring pleasure to the evening hours. The schedule makes it possible to take an enjoyable week's trip going either way with overnight stops at both ends, Port McNicoll and Fort William.

The Maritimes are again this year attracting a large number of tourists from Canada and the United States. Across the Bay of Fundy there is a very pleasant steamer trip from Saint John to Digby where the Pines Hotel is located and from Boston to Yarmouth with its well known Lakeside Inn, there are regular sailings. Also the Cornwallis Inn at Kentville is a first-class centre for trips to the famous Evangeline Country around Grand Pre.

August is the peak month at the Banff Springs Hotel when between August 26-31 golf amateurs of the world will compete in the historic Prince of Wales Trophy and the Willingdon Cup. The course, a mile above sea-level and set in the midst of some of the most glorious scenery on the continent, is the locale of the play.

DRUNKEN DRIVERS RECEIVE NO MERCY!

THE man who takes a drink when he knows he is going to drive a car is deliberately asking for trouble.

It is time for strict discipline on this . . . on mad speed . . . on all forms of road selfishness that lead to accidents.

Persons convicted of being intoxicated while in charge of a motor vehicle will receive no mercy. It is better to drive carefully than to lose your driver's license . . . perhaps permanently . . . in addition to receiving a severe court sentence.

Former Winchester Man Dies in Ottawa, Aged 82

Native of Mountain, Lived Many Years in Winchester. — Well-Known Insurance Broker.

Andrew Christie, one of the best known citizens of the Ottawa Valley district, died Monday at an Ottawa hospital following a brief illness. He was in his 82nd year.

A resident of Winchester during the major part of his life, Mr. Christie was active in the fire insurance business for many years, and his work brought him in intimate contact with hundreds of citizens who held him in the highest esteem, and who will very deeply mourn his passing.

Born at Mountain, he took an active interest in affairs of his own community, and as a fire insurance broker he received the confidence of citizens of various towns of this district. He was a member of the United Church of Canada, and was bereaved of his wife one year ago.

Surviving him are three sons, Kenneth Christie, a member of the Toronto Hydro Electric Commission; Duncan Christie, of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa; Harold Christie, branch manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia, Toronto; two sisters, Mrs. L. Walker, Winchester, and Mrs. C. Pelton of Toronto.

The funeral is being held this afternoon at the Winchester United church with interment in Maple Ridge cemetery.

Waiting for the King

Canadian undergraduates who go to the Old Country in their summer vacations enjoy many unusual sights and meetings but the group shown above, encountered its biggest thrill when the royal automobile was stopped and the King and Queen chatted with them about Canada.

This party is one of many from Canadian universities that visited Great Britain this year under the auspices of the Overseas Education League by the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Britain.

They visited England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales and saw many famous schools and colleges in the British Isles, in addition to the sight-seeing features that are a part of every Old Country tour.

The group was viewing Buckingham Palace from the Mall when Their Majesties set out for a drive. They stopped the car and chatted with the Canadian students for 10 or 15 minutes.

Has High Hopes of Winning $500,000 Baby Sweepstakes

Tied For Second Place as Ninth Baby Born in Nine Years.—Leading Entrant Claims 11 Births.

Toronto.—Mr. and Mrs. John Nagle were happy Tuesday as they gazed at their newly born baby, with the hope the child might play a part in getting them the $500,000 bequeathed by Charles Vance Millar, millionaire lawyer and sportsman, for the Toronto woman giving birth to the largest family in 10 years following his death in October, 1926.

The baby born Sunday is the ninth born to Mrs. Nagle since Millar's death, to put her in a tie for second place with Mrs. Grace Bagnato, who gave birth to her ninth child last December.

Leader in the stork sweepstakes is Mrs. Matthew Kenny, who has given birth to 11 children since 1926. Mrs. Bagnato, however, claims only three of Mrs. Kenny's children are still living and that some of them were registered too late.

Also contending is Mrs. Steffano Darrigo, wife of a fruit merchant, who has seven babies registered since 1926. She also intends to register twins and another child who were still-born.

New Movement is Made After Kidnapper's Confession

Confession of Kidnapper Absolves "Piccolo Pete" Murray and Names Others.—Investigations Secret.

London, Ont. — Renewed secrecy shrouds developments in the Labatt kidnapping case.

Sudden departure late Tuesday of two Canadian criminal investigators with an United States Department of Justice agent promised to lead to important developments police said would occur within a few days.

Departure of the officers, Sergeant E. G. "Ted" Weeks, of the R.C.M.P., Inspector Hamor Gardner of the provincial force, and an unidentified officer of the U.S. Justice Department, was veiled in mystery. Their destination was undisclosed, although an airplane trip from Detroit was hinted at.

The officers left London by motor car shortly after Kingdon P. "Piccolo Pete" Murray left in company with two immigration officers who released him in Detroit. The two cars travelled in the same direction.

Murray, self-styled rug and coat salesman from Covington, Ky., was acquitted on a charge of armed robbery and kidnapping John Labatt a year ago. "Pete" was completing nearly eight months in jail, awaiting trial, when cleared of blame in the kidnapping through evidence of Michael McCardell, one of the confessed principals.

McCardell swore in court Murray was innocent of the charge and Tuesday the Covington salesman, arrested as a suspect last January, was released by Judge Uriah McFadden when Crown Attorney Norman F. Newton announced no evidence would be offered against him.

Murray appeared nervous in the prisoner's box but regained composure once he was outside the courtroom. He smiled broadly for photographers and tld reporters just how it felt to get on the outside of a jail after seven months and 13 days inside.

Other arrests might follow, it was indicated. But whether police at last were on the trail of Russell Knowles or Albert Pegram, both sought for the kidnapping, could not be learned.

It was Knowles, Pegram, Jack Bannon and Louis McCaughey, general sales manager for the Labatt brewery now suspended, who were named by McCardell as the men hoping to share with him an expected $200,000 ransom for the return of the London brewer.

"I wonder why they don't hang horse thieves any more at Crimson Gulch," mused the salesman.

"Wal," mused Cactus Joe, "there aren't any more."

"No; no more horses."

IROQUOIS WOMAN DIES FOLLOWING COLLAPSE

Mrs. Joseph Brontmire died suddenly Monday on her farm on the second concession of Matilda township. Mr. Brontmire found her lying on the ground near the water trough. She died within a few minutes. She was in her 70th year.

Farewells Are Said to Rev. A. Nimmo and Family

Beloved Pastor of Morewood Presbyterian Church and Family Are Presented With Gifts.

On Wednesday evening, August 14, the Presbyterian congregations of Morewood and Russell met in the Hall at Morewood to bid farewell to their minister, Rev. A. Nimmo, and his wife and family. Rev. Mr. Nimmo has been pastor of these congregations for eight years and has made many friends who deeply regret his removal.

Rev. Mr. Turner of Winchester, interim moderator, acted as chairman for the evening's programme. Addresses were given by the Rev. G. H. Smith of the Morewood United church and Rev. T. McNaught of Russell United church, while Rev. Mr. Turner brought a message of regret from the Brockville Presbytery.

Musical selections were given by Mrs. G. Brown of Russell, Mrs. J. Smirle, Cannamore; Miss Beulah Carruthers and Miss Jessie Gordon of Crysler; Miss Harrington of Russell, and Mr. Irven Hitsman of Vars.

After the programme, Mr. Fred Weaver, member of the Board of Managers of the Morewood church, on behalf of the two congregations, read an appreciative address to the guests of honour. Messrs. Harrington and Baker presented Mr. and Mrs. Nimmo with a silver tea service, while Miss Isabel Hunter of Morewood and Miss Wilda Brown of Russell presented Margaret and Stewart Nimmo with a wrist watch and gold signet ring. Mr. Nimmo on behalf of himself and his family, made a fitting reply.

Lunch was served and a social time enjoyed.

Rev. Mr. Nimmo will be inducted to-morrow night as minister of the Presbyterian churches of Athelstan and Elgin, Que. The best wishes of a large circle of friends follow him to his new field of labour.

Morewood

Elderly Brother and Sister Honoured on Birthdays

On Thursday evening last, a few friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hanson, Straders Hill, the occasion being Mr. Hanson's 85th birthday, and also his sister, Mrs. Henry Strader's, 75th birthday.

About nine o'clock the guests-of-honour were escorted to the drawing room, where a large birthday cake, adorned with 85 candles, centred the drawing room table. Lunch was served by Mrs. Henry Hanson, assisted by Mrs. Ross Hanson, Mrs. Nettie Strader, Mrs. John Bogart, Mrs. Burl Robinson and Miss Olive Strader.

A delightful evening came to a close near midnight with the departing guests wishing Mr. Hanson and Mrs. Strader many more happy birthdays. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Henry Strader, Iroquois; Mrs. Ancil Locke, Mrs. Thelma Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. Walter McGowan, Dundela; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Johnston and Eva, Mrs. Nettie Strader, Toyes Hill; Mr. and Mrs. Eslie Pitt, Miss Olive Strader, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Hanson, Straders Hill; Mr. and Mrs. John Bogart and Clifton; Mr. and Mrs. Burl Robinson, Elma.

ELMA MISSION BAND.

The August meeting of the Elma Mission Band was held on Saturday, August 17, in the United church at Elma. Following the business part of the meeting taken by the presidnt, Leda Burton, reports were given by the mite box convenor, Lyle Merkley; treasurer, Joye Dillabough; World Friends convenor, Miriam Wallace; and sick visiting committee, Lois Robinson and Miriam Wallace. Worship was conducted by the leader of the Band and a story was told by Miss Woodwark, a visitor to the Band. The meeting closed with the prayer, "Our Father."

Mother: "No, Tommy; I've told you a dozen times, I won't give you a penny for sweets."

Tommy (in aggrieved tones): "I don't see where father gets the idea that you are always changing your mind!"

YOUNG MELVINS BOY DIES.

On Wednesday morning, the funeral service was held in Winchester Baptist church of John Lobb, a young boy in his teens, who passed away in an Ottawa hospital on Monday. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Lobb, and several brothers and sisters live in the Melvin Settlement on the John Black farm. Owing to the absence of his pastor, the service was conducted by Rev. H. L. Vail of Vernon. Mrs. McKendry sang "There'll be no Dark River There."

It's Simple to Qualify For House of Commons Race

If You Are 21 Years Old, Have $200 Ready Cash, and 10 Obliging Friends, You're All Set.

Ottawa.—Any Canadian, man or woman, who has reached 21 years of age, who has $200 in cash and ten friends to sign a paper, may run for the House of Commons. In theory, at least, he doesn't need party endorsation, a platform, campaign funds or anything else—the field is free and open.

In comparison to the complicated United States electoral system Canadian laws are simple and easy. Every two years Americans go through intricate manoeuvres to elect 435 House representatives and 32 Senators, one-third of the upper House. Nominees are chosen either by conventions or by primaries, sometimes by both as in New York State. The electoral machinery for the presidency is still more complicated. Party candidates are chosen every four years at national conventions and the president is elected by a so-called Electoral College consisting of representatives of each state.

If any Canadian decides he could run the country better than the present member for his constituncy, he will encounter few obstacles preventing him from trying to convince his neighbours of his qualifications. In the first place, he must obtain nomination papers from the returning officer for his riding—that might cost him a three-cent stamp. Then he induces ten qualified voters to sign the papers, and that should be easy, considering the ease with which petitions are filled with names. The next consideration involves $200 in cash, which law compels every contestant to post as a guarantee of his good faith. If he wins the election or secures half as many votes as the winner, his money is returned. If he finishes far in the rear, his money is confiscated by the Treasury, which is one way of telling him he had no business to be in the race.

The utmost latitude has been written into Canadian electoral laws. For instance, a man may run for Parliament whose name is not on the voters' list. He could live in Halifax, N.S., and contest the Victoria, B.C., riding without having seen it or going near it during the campaign. One of the few things he has not been able to do since 1911 is to run in more than one riding at the same election. That might land him in jail instead of Parliament.

Chesterville Fair Prize Lists Prove in Great Demand

With the awards increased in a number of classes, the prize lists issued for Chesterville Horse and Cattle Show on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week are in big demand, showing that much interest is aroused in this year's show and that the showing of horses and cattle will be very heavy. For those whose interest is in the harness horses, three good races have been arranged which are attracting some high class entries. Baseball will reach a peak in this district when Chappie Johnson's Coloured team from Ogdensburg will hook up with the St. Lawrence League leaders from Smiths Falls. This should produce a class of ball not seen in this place and without doubt will attract a large number from the Ottawa Valley. Chesterville Band will lead the big parade of prize winners at four o'clock when the best live stock in Eastern Ontario may be viewed. The day will be brought to a close by a street dance with separate platforms and two orchestras, one for the old-timers and the other for modern dancing and should eliminate any tedious waiting.

VALUE OF TOURIST TRAVEL.

Tourist trade as between Canada and the United States shows a balance of $73,000,000 in favour of the Dominion. Last year Canadian tourists' personal expenditures in the United States amounted to $47,000,000, an increase of 34 per cent over 1933, according to figures compiled by the Washington Commerce Department. During the same period, United States tourists to Canada spent $120,000,000, a total which will be exceeded considerably this year. The increased expenditure of Canadian tourists in the United States is attributed to a 22 per cent increase in Canadian cars entering the States.

MILES AND MILES FOR THOSE FAMOUS SMILES

Young Sirens of Callander Are Doing Their Bit for the Provincial Treasury.

THE young sirens of Callander are certainly "doing their stuff." At latest computations they were luring tourists off the beaten path at the rate of 10,000 cars a month. Every time the smiling Quintuplets are held up to the gaze of the curious throng beyond the wire fence which surrounds the Dionne hospital, it means that the fame of the youngsters spreads still further abroad and more and more tourists may be expected. It means money for the Provincial Treasury, too, if the estimate is correct that nearly $12,000 a month in gasoline taxes is being paid by visitors to the Quintuplets' home. Then 200,000 gallons of gasoline are being consumed in that period, or an estimate of 4,000,000 miles travelled. That means 10,000 cars with an average trip of 400 miles each. That is realy not too high an average per trip because many of the license plates carry the names of California and Florida and Texas, and they all go up the North Bay highway for the express purpose of seeing the babies.

Short, Short Stories With a Real Hard Kick

By
J. V. McAREE.

PERHAPS the Greeks had a name for them and maybe it was enigmatic, but it does not quite describe the curious, mysterious stories of which Alexander Woollcott is an earnest collector, and of which we find some specimens in a recent issue of Esquire, contributed by J. C. Furnas. They are stories which seem straightforward enough but yet puzzle the reader and annoy him greatly and perhaps keep him awake at nights. But instead of trying to describe them our time and the time of our readers would be better employed by considering some of the stories themselves. The most famous is one that seems to have originated many years ago but was recently retold by Hemingway and indeed formed the idea for a movie. Since movies are not commonly equipped with ideas you will no doubt be able to identify it. An English girl and her mother returning from India arrived in Paris in the middle of one of the great expositions, either in 1867 or 1901. They went to a hotel, were assigned a room and while the mother, who was not feeling well, lay down to rest her daughter strolled out to see some of the sights.

MISSING MOTHER.

After a few hours she returned to the hotel and entered her room. Her mother is not there. Neither is the luggage. The room seems strangely altered, with new beds, new carpets, and even, some say, new wallpaper. She stares at the key in her hand. Yes this undoubtedly is the room she left. She summons a maid, who knows nothing. She goes down to the clerk, who is bland but unhelpful. He knows nothing. Perhaps she even consults the register only to find there neither the name of herself nor her mother. Is she going mad? What had happened was that immediately after the daughter had left the hotel, her mother, feeling ill, had summoned a maid and a doctor. He quickly diagnosed the bubonic plague, then raging in India. In an hour she was dead. The police were informed. High government officials were notified. If the news spread that the bubonic plague was in Paris the exposition would be ruined, a government, perhaps, would be overthrown. Then followed the decision, the marvellous team play that removed every trace in the room, and sent the mother to her quicklime grave.

THIS IS A HONEY.

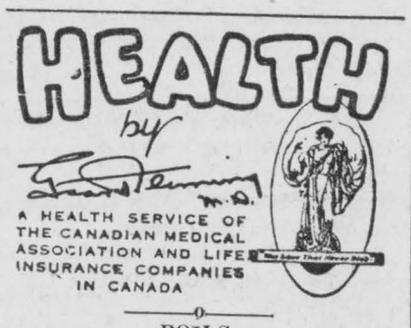

That is perhaps the best known of these stories but not, we think, the best. The palm goes to this story which must be told carefully or it becomes pointless. A man named Smith goes walking and meets an old friend whom he hasn't seen for twenty years. The old friend says "I've been married since we last met. We have a little daughter. Here she is." She is presented to Mr. Smith who asks her name. She replies "My name is the same as my mother's." Upon which Mr. Smith comments "Ah then your name is Margaret" and the little girl says "Yes." How did he know her name? This is said to have baffled some of the best minds that permit themselves to be fascinated by such little problems. The common answer is that Mr. Smith knew the wife of his friend before their marriage. This is ruled out, however, by the fact that the friend gave him the news of the marriage. The point of the story is that the friend is the mother herself. Why it is that everyone assumes the friend to be a man we cannot explain. Although it is said that the story could not be told in any other language but English and contain a mystery because in English the word "friend" has no gender.

HOW TO MAKE A HORSE RACE.

Another good story is that of the old Arab who on his death bed left his fortune to that one of his two sons whose horse would lose in a race from Mecca to Medina. The boys were racehorse crazy and the father wished to rebuke them. So they started the race and loafed along on equal terms for a week or so until it appeared that they might be old men themselves before they arrived. So they went to a wise old Arab with their problem. He listened, whispered a word or two and the problem was solved. The next day at dawn they were mounted and racing at top speed The race was won and lost and the money divided as the will provided. What had happened? The Arab had merely suggested that they change horses. There is also the neat story about the Englishman visiting Cannes who before leaving home had instructed his butler to forward him some important papers which he expected to arrive later in the day. He waited a week but no papers came. Then he wired to the butler who replied that the papers were in the letter box. He could see the envelope, but as the master had taken the mail box key with him he could not get it out. So the master telegraphed that he was sending the key back and that the letters should be rushed. The key was sent back but still no papers arrived. The reason? The key also was dropped in the letter box.

IDEA FOR DETECTIVE STORY.

We like, the story of the night watchman who on hearing that his boss was leaving for Detroit waited upon him and begged him not to make the trip. He had had a dream, he said, involving a coffin, and he had heard his employer's wife wailing "Oh, why ever did he go to Detroit?" The employer was unempressed and immediately fired the faithful night watchman. The reason was that he didn't want a nightwatchman who had dreams when obviously he should be awake. Another good idea for a detective story is found in the yarn of the Scotchman who took his wife to the Tyrol for their honeymoon. They went mountain climbing, and at night the husband with horror on his face, returned to the hotel to explain how his dear wife had fallen over a precipice and was killed. There existed one person in the world who was not acquainted with either husband or wife but who knew that the wife had been murdered. He was a ticket agent. In a newspaper he saw the photograph of the man and remembered that the man had bought the tickets from him for the Tyrol trip. He had bought one round trip ticket and one single ticket.

BOILS.

ACCORDING to Mark Twain, the place to have a boil is on the other fellow, a remark which will be appreciated by those who have suffered the pain and inconvenience of a boil which, more often than not, seems to select a most inopportune location.

Boils are caused by germs, which, penetrating the skin, set up the inflammation that goes on to the development of pus, the typical symptoms of what we know as a boil. These germs are constantly present on the skin and it is only under certain conditions that they seem able to penetrate the skin and to do harm.

Those who are tired physically or mentally, those who over-indulge in rich greasy foods, who take but little exercise and who are constipated—these are the individuals upon whom boils most frequently appear.

Boils occur more frequently in winter than in summer because winter usually means fewer fresh fruits and green vegetables and less exercise. In summer, the skin is likely to be cleaner because we perspire more freely and bathe oftener.

When we say that boils are caused by germs, it is simply another way of stating that boils are contagious. It follows that clean hands and, above all, clean finger nails, will help guard against trouble, for if these are allowed to remain dirty, they are more than likely to carry gems with the dirt to the skin they touch.

Boils usually occur in crops. The condition which allowed the first one to develop makes it easy for others to follow. Unless proper care is used in the treatment of the first boil the germs may spread to another point and so, a second boil comes along.

It is dangerous to squeeze a boil. Nature sets up a wall which holds the infection at this one place. A squeeze may break this defensive wall and so scatter the germs, leading to a serious if not fatal, abscess. Poultices which soften the tissues and provide the heat and moisture which favour the growth of germs are, for these reasons, not to be used.

A boil is an infection and should be dealt with properly so as to remove the infection. If a second boil appears there should be no delay in securing medical care so that the possible causes may be investigated and the treatment decided upon.

Questions concerning health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

YOUR FAVOUR ITE PICKLES.

THE pickle recipes I am giving you to-day were printed in this column last year and were such favourites that in case some of you may not have kept them I am printing them again.

SHIRLEY SAUCE.

24 peeled tomatoes
4 onions
4 green peppers, chopped
3½ teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons mustard seed
1 teaspoon celery seed
2 cups brown sugar
3 cups vinegar

Boil all ingredients together until quite thick. Seal in hot sterilized jars.

This pickle was a decided favourite with all those who tried it last year.

MUSTARD PICKLE.

Peel and slice 12 large cucumbers and three large onions. Sprinkle with salt and let stand over night. Drain and pour over the pickles the following dressing while still hot.

1 quart white wine vinegar
2 cups brown sugar
3 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons mustard
1 teaspoon turmeric

Make a paste of the sugar, flour, mustard and turmeric with a little of the cold vinegar. Bring the remaining vinegar to a boil and add the paste. Cook until it thickens and add to the cucumbers and onions while still hot. Allow to stand over night and in the morning bring to a boil and bottle.

BREAD AND BUTTER PICKLE.

2 dozen cucumbers
6 small onions
½ teaspoon turmeric
2-3 quart white wine vinegar
1-3 quart water
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon celery seed
1½ teaspoons mustard seed
2 sticks cinnamon
1 teaspoon cloves
1 teaspoon allspice

Slice the cucumbers and onions. Sprinkle with salt, and let stand over night. Drain. Tie the spices in a cotton bag and boil with vinegar, sugar and water; add cucumbers and onions and boil until tender. Pour into sterilized jars and seal.

PEPPER JELLY.

2 cups chopped sweet peppers
5½ cups granulated sugar
1 cup weak vinegar
1-3 cup lemon juice
1 bottle commercial pectin

Wash peppers and remove the seeds and stems. Chop fine; measure the pulp and juice. Place peppers, sugar and vinegar in a kettle; heat quickly to boiling, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and let stand 15 minutes. Reheat to boiling; add lemon juice, boil two minutes. Remove from heat, add pectin, skim, and stir occasionally for five minutes. Pour into clean jelly glasses; cover with melted parowax and allow to stand at least two weeks before using.

This jelly is an excellent relish to serve with cold meat.

FRENCH PICKLE.

1 quart peeled cucumbers
1 quart green tomatoes
1 quart onions

Dice above ingredients. Let stand over night in salt and water. Boil the following until the flour is cooked and pour over the pickles, then cook one hour longer.

1 quart vinegar
1 cup sugar
2 teaspoons flour
2 teaspoons celery seed
2 teaspoons mustard
1 teaspoon turmeric
½ teaspoon curry powder
½ teaspoon black pepper

Seal in sterilized jars while still hot.

Many vegetables used in making pickles may be ground in a food chopper. This is much quicker and much less tedious than chopping on a board or wooden bowl.

In using home-canned foods because of possible danger from botulinus poisoning, it is well to boil all vegetables for five minutes after the jar is opened. This should be done even if the food is to be served cold in a salad.

If, when the cover is loosened, there is an escape of air or liquid, it may indicate that gas has been formed by spoilage of the food. Always smell the contents, but do not taste. A peculiar odour indicates spoiled food and a single taste of food spoiled by botulinus is sometimes fatal.

The liquid should be clear and free from all clouded appearance; the food should be firm and free from mould.

Do not take chances with canned foods, if there is any doubt as to the condition discard it. One can of food is always cheaper than a doctor bill.

Chutney is a sweet pickle highly seasoned, made from a variety of chopped vegetables or vegetables and fruits. Chutneys are served with cold meats, sausages or stews.

In setting a table, all silver should be parallel and one-half inch in from the edge of the table. The pieces are arranged from the outside toward the plate in the order in which they are to be used. Knives should always be placed with the sharp edges towarl the plate.

Lydia Learns

LYDIA MARR could never keep tab on time. For some reason time was always running away from her and then turning suddenly to trip her up. That was her petulant thought one bright morning as she dressed hurriedly to start on a long-planned trip. As she ran downstairs the hall clock was striking the very hour that should have seen her at the station buying her ticket.

"O dear, that means a taxi!" she exclaimed and made a bee line from the bottom step to the telephone.

All through July and August Lydia had been busy with a stiff summer course; in mid-October she would settle down to important library work. Meanwhile it was her plan to crowd four long-standing invitations into six short weeks. She was going first to two of her college mates. Mary Warner and Frances Allen; then to Great-Aunt Alice Mason; then to her mother's old friends, the Lorrimers, who were anxious to know the daughter of Ruth Lea. It was an attractive itinerary, and there was no doubt that she deserved the pleasure.

The taxicab arrived with almost disconcerting promptness. There was no time for last small ceremonies. As Lydia tumbled into the vehicle in the wake of her steamer trunk she reached out and gave her mother a farewell grasp.

"I'll telegraph if I've left anything behind," she called back gayly.

Mrs. Marr's gentle face shadowed. She was thinking that Lydia wore her besetting sin as lightly as a feather. "But after all," she comforted herself, "what a good child she is at heart!"

As the car turned the corner a slim figure came hurrying from the opposite direction. It was Charlotte, Mr. Marr's young sister, who lived with an older brother at the other end of town.

"Just too late," she panted. "Three minutes ago I found out that Lydia hadn't returned my new blue sweater that she borrowed. You see, I'm going down the river to-night and shall need the sweater, but I'm morally certain that she has carried it off without noticing."

"Did it have tassels?" Mrs. Marr asked faintly. "I seem to remember tucking tassels into her trunk—"

"That settles it," said Charlotte. "But, no, I'll go up and look anyhow."

They went up together to the topsy-turvy room. There was no sweater to be found. On the way down Charlotte freed her mind. Being five years Lydia's senior, she felt privileged to speak frankly.

"I don't suppose that harum-scarum child has the remotest idea what she took and what she left behind."

"Who's a harum-scarum child?" Lydia's father called from the living-room, knowing well enough as he asked.

The telephone rang at that instant, and Mrs. Marr answered it. "O Lydia," she said, but there was no surprise in her tone.

"Ask her—" Charlotte began eagerly, but her sister-in-law had already hung up the receiver.

"The train was pulling out," Mrs. Marr explained apologetically, "and she merely shouted a few words and ran. She wants me to mail her blue silk blouse that she left behind."

Charlotte groaned. "She couldn't by any chance of course have left the right thing behind!"

Paul, Lydia's brother, spoke up from the window seat. "What's Charlotte feverish about to-day?"

Charlotte told her tale of woe again, and Mrs. Marr accompanied the last paragraph with a short sigh. "In some ways Lydia doesn't seem to grow up," she said.

Mr. Marr looked slightly offended. "Well, if you ask me, she has grown up all too soon. What's a little carelessness? She's pretty popular anyway, with four different invitations to accept in six weeks."

"Yes, that's so," Paul's good-looking countenance flickered with mischief. "People should be patient with the younger generation. Remember your own youth, Aunt Charlotte."

Charlotte made a lunge for her nephew. The two had grown up together and were expert at tussling with each other.

"Stop romping, Charlotte" Mrs. Marr said, "and listen to me. If I understood Lydia over the telephone, she has left her blue blouse in your room. Will you bring it over next time you come?"

Charlotte fled with her hands to her face, and Paul looked after her thoughtfully. "Women folks are queer about their clothes," he mused. "Here we find Charlotte's sweater in Lydia's trunk and Lydia's blouse in Charlotte's room and both girls are fuming like hornets."

"But you should be just, dear," his mother commented. "In both cases Lydia is the one to blame."

Mr. Marr shook his newspaper impatiently, then peered round the edge. "She's only eighteen, Ruth. What's eighteen?"

Mrs. Marr had just discovered her daughter's gold thimble in the bottom of a vase. "Eighteen?" she murmured vaguely as she abstracted it. "That reminds me, I must order candles for the birthday cake."

September passed, and October arrived on the wings of a frisky wind. went down to Aunt Alice's farm and gathered apples like a boy.

As the time for her fourth visit drew near she pulled herself together with dignity. The Lorrimers were a stately old couple who had only recently moved to that part of the country. Mrs. Marr had known them when she was Lydia's age; Lydia herself had never seen them. "They will compare me with mother," she thought. "Well, I suppose I know how to behave."

The Lorrimers proved to be not only dignified but a little prim; however, they were very lovable. "She looks exactly like Ruth," was their instant verdict.

"So everyone says," Lydia replied. She added with an unconscious touch of complacency, "I'm thought to be like her in every way."

Old Mr. Lorrimer smiled. "Well," he remarked, "I should say you have a reputation to live up to."

Apparently Lydia lived up to it fairly well, for they asked her to lengthen her visit. But she must get back for her birthday party, she said; probably her mother was already planning the birthday cake.

Mrs. Marr was doing just that, planning a pound cake with white frosting. The family gifts were all ready; even Charlotte had forgotten her grievance and brought in an offering to add to the pile on the piano.

There were several exrta packages in the birthday stock. Two bore Frances Allen's name in the upper left hand corner; the third was from Mary Warner. Mrs. Marr was a little puzzled about them. "I didn't know that the girls kept birthdays," she thought.

Lydia was to come back on the afternoon of the eleventh. That morning the postman brought three other packages.

"This Marr girl, though Harum-scarum, seems to rouse friendly sentiments," Mr. Marr observed with a twinkle.

"Look, Charlotte," Paul said when his young aunt ran in for a few moments. "I point with pride to the collection on the piano. Pretty good haul for a scatterbrain, I should say.'

Charlotte surveyed the pile with unfeigned interest. "Fine," she said heartily. "I dropped in to ask what train Lydia is coming on. You and brother Henry will be at the office until late, so I'd be glad to run down to the station and help her home with her bag."

"Oh, thank you, Charlotte," Mrs. Marr said. "Lydia stopped over in Baltimore to do some shopping, you know. She'll be down on the five-twenty."

Lydia's eyes were dancing when she descended from the train, but her expression was somewhat rueful too. "Charlotte, what do you think? I got to the train to late to check my trunk Just wait until I telegraph back to have it sent by express."

Charlotte mustered a cheerful look. "My one hope is," she said, "that you packed that sweater of mine in your suitcase. The Cranes are coming to take me to camp by automobile to-night, and I'll need it."

Lydia gave a little groan "O Charlotte!" she cried. "Both times that you wrote for that sweater I forgot to send it. And now it's in my trunk, and the trunk's in Baltimore. But there, you shall have my red sweater, bless your heart."

"Where is your red sweater, Lydia" Charlotte asked dryly.

There was a moment's silence. "Oh, of course that's in the trunk too."

"Well, so far as that goes, I look like a fined in red, as you know." Charlotte's voice was brusque, but she softened it. "Run along and do your telegraphing or you'll be late for your birthday supper."

Lydia looked crestfallen all the way home, but by the time the family had gathered round for the feast she had brightened.

"I wanted to dress up for the occasion, but it wasn't possible," she said to her family. She made a repentant face at Charlotte and added, "I was in such a wild hurry to get back that I left my trunk behind. Now don't look scoldy, mother dear, not at the very moment when I'm turning eighteen!"

Mr. Marr cleared his throat. "Well, there's many a slip 'twixt trunk and trip," he remaked. "There, daughter, I've made an epigram for your birthday. What do you say?"

Lydia's spirits promptly rebounded. "That it's worthy of the occasion," she answered joyously. "Oh, look at this table—everything that I like best to eat and a mountain of packages!" Paul was explaining that one of the packages was slightly damaged. It had fallen behind the piano one day, and when he went to fish it out with his umbrella he poked a hole in the paper. "There, that bottom one, you see."

Charlotte's eyes were fixed with odd intentness on the package. Lydia wondered why, but the next moment she forgot all about it.

"I don't exactly understand," she said. "Aunt Alice never gives anniversary presents, and Mary and Frances and I always celebrate birthdays with letters. As to the Lorrimers, how did they know? Oh, I remember now mentioning my birthday when they asked me to stay longer. But the idea of their sending me a present!"

"Well, don't look gift parcels in the mouth," her father said. "The beefsteak's getting cold."

Lydia was wrestling with a knotty string. "I can't imagine what Fan can be sending me," she said with a little excitement. Then the paper fell apart and her face changed.

"Look how she's blushing," Paul cried. "It must be from Hugh Allen, not Fan, I should say."

"No, it's Fan," Lydia answered somewhat queerly.

Paul peered over his sister's shoulder. "Oho, a number of presents! The whole family must have chipped in!"

Lydia glanced at her mother, then at Charlotte. They could see her straighten a little as if to brace herself. "These are things that I forgot and left at the Allens'," she explained. "A hairbrush, bedroom slippers and a book. Fan wasn't sure about my schedule, and so she probably thought she'd better send them here."

"Oh, I see," Paul said a little flatly.

Lydia's face burned even more hotly over the next package. For the little box contained nothing more nor less than her own familiar fountain pen. "I thought I left that at Mary's," she said with a somewhat forced laugh and added, "Not that it matters much just where I left it."

Mr. Marr sharpened the carving knife energetically. "Well, girl," he observed, 'you do seem to have left a sort of trail."

Lydia was fingering two other parcels with a doubtful look on her downcast face.

Her mother noticed the look. "Why not let the others wait till after supper?" she suggested gently.

But the girl's chin had taken a determined set. "No," she said, "it is just as well to go through with it now."

The package bearing Aunt Alice's name in the corner yielded up a shabby, well-known sewing case and a pair of smudged gloves. It took a good deal of courage to open the larger of the two Lorrimer packages and even more courage to face the familiar kimono that tumbled out.

As Lydia glanced ruefully round the table she made a sudden decision. It had seemed at first that the only thing to do was to go ahead and treat the bad business as a joke so far as she could. But when she saw her father's discomfort and the pained sympathy in her mother's face, she changed her mind.

"There!" she said with a quick little gesture. "No more post-office packages until after supper. Maybe I'll have better luck with the home assortment."

She did; the family gifts were all that could be desired, and as Lydia cleared away the pile of papers and boxes her spirits rose again. The beefsteak looked delicious; there was thick cream for the rosy peaches, and the birthday cake was as light as a feather.

Charlotte could not stay for a second helping of dessert, for she had to be ready at eight o'clock to start on her outing. Passing Lyda's chair she bestowed an affectionate pat on her shoulder.

Paul chuckled as the door closed. "Charlotte's as prompt as the second hand on a clock," he said. "I'll wager she'll button her last button just exactly on the stroke of eight."

A shadow crossed Lydia's face. "Charlotte always like that," she answered somewhat wistfully. Then she said, brightening, "One more slice of cake, mother, and after that I'll carry all this property of mine upstairs and out of your way."

Up in her room she dumped the miscellaneous collection on the bed. The two unopened parcels she picked up and carried over to the window. Something was trailing from one of them; it was a long blue tassel with a familiar look.

Lydia fled downstairs with the parcels in her hands. "Paul," she cried, "please rush over to Uncle Edmund's on your bicycle and take this sweater to Charlotte before she leaves. She tried so hard to get it back in time for the trip. And then she saw it in my pile of packages—don't you remember how she looked at it?—and never said a word. Hurry; you just have three minutes.'

Paul was already at the door with the sweater in his hand. He murmured something about girls and their clothes, but he did not tarry.

"That was fine of Charlotte, you know," Lydia said soberly after a pause. "The only sweater she owns, and she didn't say a word when she saw the tassel poking out, because she thought I was having punishment enough."

Mr. Marr cleared his throat. "Charlotte's all right, a born trump!" Then he looked sidelong at the small parcel that his daughter was holding.

Lydia caught the glance. "The very last one, father," she said. "I think I'd better see what's inside and be over with it."

She cut the string and drew out a small box. Then she gave a little cry of delight. "Look, oh, look what the Lorrimers sent me!" She was holding up a gold chain of delicate workmanship, old and lovely. "The card says 'For Ruth Lea's lovable girl, from William and Emily Lorrimer.'"

Lydia saw the light come into her mother's face, saw her smile expansively. And all at once to her dismay she felt her eyes fill sharply with hot tears. "'Lovable girl,'" she repeated chokingly. When I've made such a dreadful goose of myself. You'd think they'd have sent me a memorandum pad if they were going to send me anything or—or a catchall."

Then two of the unaccustomed tears, overbrimming, ran down the sides of her nose and tickled her. She sneezed violently, and the next minute they were all laughing together.

Lydia ducked her head on her mother's shoulder. "They said right at the start that I was like you. And, oh, mother, I had the temerity to say I was thought to be like you in every way. Maybe this chain means that I am—a little—in spite of everything."

"There, there," said Mr. Marr, "you have a few merits, to be sure. I like the way, for example, that you scorn to wiggle out of a tight place. Put your chain on child."

His daughter lifted her head and eyed him doubtfully from under her wet lashes.

"All right," he said. "If you want me to, I'll admit that you did need a lesson."

"Well, I've learned it," Lydia replied as she slipped the chain deftly over her bright head. "Watch me remember it too!"

A CAR capable of getting 18 miles out of a gallon of gasoline when driven 30 miles an hour, for example, will get only 16.4 to the gallon, according to the bureau figures, when pushed up to 40 miles an hour.

At 50 miles an hour the same car will get 14.6 miles to the gallon, at 60 miles an hour it will get 12.6 miles to the gallon, at 70 miles an hour it will get 10.6 miles and at 80 miles an hour it will get 8.6 miles per gallon.

In addition to this, nearly seven times as much oil is used up at 55 miles per hour as at 30 miles an hour. These are facts well deserving publicity.

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

SCOUT FORTITUDE.

WROTE the physician of Scout B. L. Bonning of Weston-Super-Mare, England, who was awarded the Cornwell Badge for exceptional fortitude: "He was continuously recumbent, his system poisoned and his limbs crippled by large and painful wounds. Nevertheless I remember only his radiant smile and sturdy voice. If an operation was ordered he resigned himself to it in a most manly way, although the previous one had nearly cost his life. . . . Such cheerful courage and endurance surpass any I know in showing the spirit of man triumphing over hopeless odds." In spite of his suffering Scout Bonning passed his First Class Scout tests, bit by bit.

At Nablus, Palestine, Boy Scouts of a troop connected with the Beirut All-Moslem Association, hold evening classes for street boys.

CALL OF SEA ON THE PRAIRIES.

That the call of the sea persists in the blood of boys on the prairies is suggested by the enthusiasm with which junior leaders of the 2nd The Pas Troop of Manitoba acted as crew of the S.S. Tobin of the Ross Navigation Co. on a cruise up the Saskatchewan river. The boys were assigned watches and in turn acted as engineer, stoker, wheelsman, deck hand and ship's cook.

Rovers Go A'Roving

Here are five Canadian Rover Scouts on board the Canadian Pacific liner Duchess of York, in which they sailed from Montreal to attend the World Rover Moot being held this year in Sweden. Eastern and Western Canada are represented by the five, who, left to right, are: L. P. Dominik, of Peterboro, Ont., Allan Hiron, of St. Paul, Alta., A. B. Patterson, sea scout, of Oshawa, Ont., Kingston Webber, of Edmonton, and A. C. Kesseler, of Saint John, N. B.

The Canadian Rovers will form part of a British contingent of 1,500 attending the Rover Moot, or nearly half the entire number expected to attend. They will be in camp for six days at the Moot headquarters on Ingaroo Island, not far from Stockholm. Elaborate preparations have been made by the Swedish Rovers, hosts of the gathering, who are headed by Prince Gustaf Adolf, eldest son of the Crown Prince of Sweden. The camp will have a fire brigade, telephone system, post-office, hospital and will publish a daily newspaper in the four official languages of the Moot, English, French, German and Swedish.

The Swedish Moot will be the second World Rover Moot. The first was held in Switzerland in 1931. Two of the five Rovers in the above picture, A. C. Kesseler and Allan Hiron, attended the 1931 Moot.

GLEANINGS FROM THE GREENS

By The Secretary.

Thursday, Aug. 22nd.

Last Thursday Doc Clayton collected when he blanked Hanna in the second game and won from Hutt 6-2. The night was cool but the boys turned out five strong. Jim Hanna's brother, Robert, came out and while he claimed not to be a bowler got in some nice shots.

Score:

David, Marcellus, Olsen, Reaburn, Clayton—skip.....2 8 6—16

C. L. Hamlen, Haldane Durant W. Harper, Woods, Lacey—skip 6 3 4—13

Merkley, Lloyd, Flynn, Robertson, Hutt—skip.....4 5 2—11

R. Hanna, Jr. Hamlen, Hess, Alguire, J. Hanna—skip.....4 0 4—8

Haldane (Baldy) Durant, after waiting for a long time, has got in the game and gets away a nice bowl, besides, he comes out regularly, which is the best way to keep your hand in. Atta boy, Baldy.

Friday, August 23rd.

Last Friday Iroquois divided the points in the St. Lawrence League games played on the local greens when Clayton and Dixon won from Fisher and Hyslop, and Hanna and Hutt went down to Gilder and Shepherd. All the games were close with the exception of Jim Hanna's, and Jim couldn't get a break all night—just one of those games where the jack always rolled the wrong way. Doc Hutt went into the last end one up and apparently had things in the bag but Shepherd snatched it away and lay two, just enough to win. Billy Dixon coasted along and could not do anything wrong. The lads were on and Bill was never in hot water. Clayton got away to a bad start and had an uphill battle until the 12th end when he took the lead but Fisher came back strong and tied up in the 16th 13-all, got one more in the 17th when Doc took a run and cut him down from three and in the last end Safford for Iroquois put one on the jack which Art lifted, Doc drawing in his last two bowls to win, what a battle. Ken put up the lunch and the boys visited a while before going home.

The line-up:

Chesterville	Iroquois
G. G. Merkley	C. Dear
W. Harper	J. Safford
A. O. Robertson	J. A. Keeler
Dr. A. B. Clayton, skip 14	C. S. Fisher, skip 14
