Henry's Shorthand School
Ottawa, Ont.

On the May Civil Service Examination, this year, we passed more stenographic candidates than the other local business colleges combined.

It is a common occurrence for Henry-trained students to get 100% in Shorthand 100% in Typewriting, and 95% in Composition.

These subjects being the most difficult on this examination, our record of FIRST, SECOND and FOURTH places for the whole of Canada, is at once explained.

During the past two years, more than 235 students have come to us from other local business colleges.

Does it not prove that we have a superior school ?

Our instruction being individual, you may start at any time.

Near Hunting Fatality.

While duck hunting in the vicinity of Summerstown last week Dr D. C. Casselman' dentist' was accidently shot through the arm above the wrist and narrowly escaped death. The party, having returned to camp after the evening's shooting, were engaged in cleaning the guns, when one of the number, not knowing the gun was loaded, attempted to break the gun, in order to facilitate the cleaning operation, causing it to discharge, the full contents of the cartridge penetrating Dr. Casselman's arm, who had retired to his bed for the night. Another member of the party, who occupied the same bed, miraculously escaped injury A doctor was at once summoned and the unfortunate was removed to the Cornwall General Hospital.—Morrisburg Leader.

Chesterville's Contribution.

The following correction appeared in the Ottawa Free Press last Friday.

Sir, —In the account given of the Women's Institute convention at Ottawa this week I notice that the village of Morrisburg is given first place in patriotic work.

Morrisburg has done well, but I believe that our small community of 832 souls has done better, we having raised about $2,500 for patriotic purposes, most of which has gone to the Red Cross Society at Ottawa in the form of cash or garments for the soldiers—we having always purchased our own materials.

Now, I believe that only a generous rivalry should prevail in all good works, nor would I have thought of instituting comparsious. But when comparsions are attempted the facts should be correct.

I feel sure that the Morrisburg representative at the convention did not make the claim of precedence. but in justice to our community, who have given such generous support to the Red Cross, I ask the courtesy of the insertion of this letter.

Chesterville's Recruits Given Watches

A large number of the citizens of Chesterville congregated in the Music Hall on Friday evening last, to pay a fitting tribute to the boys who enlisted for overseas service,—Messrs. McMillan, Cochrane, Jameson, Lawson, F. Merkley, Riddell and C. Merkley.

Mr. Hamilton, acted as chairman and ably filled the position in his usual capable manner.

The High School students presented Ernest McMillan, one of their comrades, with a wrist watch. Mr. Ball, principal, delivered a few remarks referring to the many virtues of Ernest as a pupil. Miss Ethel Bogart read the parting address, and Tom La Pierre presented the watch. The popular Ernest was deeply moved and expressed his gratitude in a few well-chosen words.

The clergy, Rev. J. B. McCorkindale, Rev. Fr. Crawley and Rev. H. E. Warren, addressed the boys as only clergymen can, imploring them to do their duty, in a manly upright manner, wishing them Godspeed, a glorious victory and a safe return.

Mr. Clement McCloskey sang "Why they named it Ireland" in splendid style. Miss McCloskey accompanied him.

Miss McCorkindale sang very sweetly "Bonnie Mary of Argyle" and "Coming thro' the rye". Her sister accompanied her.

Miss Amy Beattie's violin solos, accompanied by Mrs. Howard, were well received and heartily applauded, as was Mr. Fred Bolster's singing of "Canada my home."

Mrs. W. B. Lawson, in her ever graceful manner, presented the other boys present with their wristlet watches, donated by the citizens, after which Mr. O. D. Casselman addressed them.

It is needless to relate what a silver-tongued orator is Mr. Casselman. His patriotism, enthusiasm, and explanatory remarks governing the county of Dundas' attitude in the present crisis, were well and most emphatically delivered ; and a hearty applause was tendered him at brief intervals.

Mr. Casselman is appointed representative of the Canadian Grenadier Guards for this county and is earnestly soliciting enough men to form a platoon which consists of 65 men.

The High School students led by Tommy Carpenter and Bobs Lawson and Marion Casselman sang "It's a long way to Tipperary." The audience then rose and sang "For they are jolly good fellows" and "God Save the King." After the close of the meeting the young folks enjoyed a social dance for the boys.

The other recruits, Gallop and Coulby, with Riddell received their watches the following night.

Monday morning the boys were taken in autos to Finch to catch a morning train to Cornwall, and from there they went to Montreal, where they are now in training.

Several districts in Saskatchewan have been swept by fire buildings and crops being destroyed.

Shell making in Canada is now reorganized on a new basis, directly under the British Munitions department.

We were waited upon by delegations supporting and opposing this application, and after weighing their arguments and giving our best consideration to the problem presented, we recommend that the prayer of the petition be not granted.

"The ratepayers of the Glen Nevis Separate School section unquestionably are suffering from a grievance occasioned by the change in the regulations of Department after their school had been constructed, equipped and in operation, and we therefore consider that it is the duty of the Department, if in its power, by special legislation or grants, to remedy or minimize the grievance, if practicable."

This ended the business of the Council for the year 1915, and on motion of J. W. McLeod and A. D. Fisher, the Warden was asked to vacate the chair, J. A. C. Huot being appointed pro-tem.

Mr. McLeod, in making a vote of thanks to the retiring Warden said:

"I think it is our duty before leaving here, at least to tender a hearty vote of thanks to the Warden, Mr. Timmins, for the able, efficient and courteous manner in which he has presided over the affairs of the Counties. There were many nice things said about our Warden at the banquet last evening, and I do not think anything said was too good for him. It is with regret that we are parting with him, and we regret that he is not to preside over these meetings for another year. I have no doubt he will be succeeded by an able man, but I think it will be difficult to find a more worthy occupant of the Warden's chair. Words fail to express my personal feelings in Mr. Timmins leaving the chair. I have been very closely associated with him on the Board of Management of the House of Refuge, and he has shown much ability as a worker and as a presiding officer. It gives me very much pleasure to move that this Council tender him a hearty vote of thanks."

P. A. Nolan seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously, the members standing and singing, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

In tendering Mr. Timmins the vote of thanks, Mr. Huot said, "You are certainly entitled to it, and I hope in years to come that we will have as able and as impartial a Warden to preside over the affairs of this Council as we have had in 1915."

Warden Timmins briefly thanked the members of Council for their kind expressions and said:

"I assure you that I appreciate the references which have just been made to me. I am proud of the good feeling that has prevailed during the year. I shall ever remember the kind words which have just been said of me. I wish to thank you all for your co-operation during the last year, especially the Clerk, who was always ready and willing to assist me. While in office I have served the Counties to the best of my ability, and while I do not expect to be a member of this Council next year, I hope you will be able to return to your municipalities and give a good account of your stewardship. I shall treasure, in the years to come, the kind acts you have done for me, and during those years I hope to be ever worthy of your trust, esteem and regard. I thank you, gentlemen."

The Warden's remarks were heartily applauded, after which Mr. Timmins resumed the chair.

M. S. Beckstead and J. A. C. Huot moved a hearty vote of thanks to the Counties' officials, which were fittingly acknowledged by A. I. Macdonnell, Clerk, and Jas. R. Simpson, treasurer.

With the singing of God Save the King the members dispersed and the Counties Council for 1915 was no more.

How the Community Hired Man Works

His Mission is to Co-operate not to preach. His Services are Freely Given to Every Farmer. How They May be Secured.

By Justus Miller, Canadian Countryman.

Not long ago a history of the district representative movement was given in these pages, and the nature of the work briefly explained. It was shown at that time how the representative attempted to take the idea of a demonstration on every farm to every farmer who wished to take advantage of it and how his efforts were limited by the size of its territory.

It was stated, also, that that wasn't the whole story, nor even the most important part of it so far as the individual was concerned. For the farmer, after all, is not so interested in what may be done or should be done, as in what actually is done for him, Some have suspected that the representative has been given the position owing to political influence, and some have wondered if, after all, any young man can come into a county and give advice that will really be worth a farmer's time to listen to. The object of this concluding article of our series upon representative work is to point out that not advice but work is featured, and how a farmer may co-operate most successfully with the new hired men who have been placed in the country to serve the community in such ways as are possible.

Now, at the outset, let it be made plain that politics have nothing to do with the appointment of the representatives. Each one must be a graduate of the Agricultural College, and must have had practical experience upon the farm. Each year the men required to fill vacancies or new offices are selected from the force in the field and graduating class, always with an eye to their executive ability and their practical experience as well as to their standing as students. Ability is always the determining factor. No question is made regarding their political tendencies at the time of their appointment or later. If at any time political influence is brought to bear upon them it is due to forces at work in their territories and not to instructions from headquarters nor to their own inclinations. This is a point that should be remembered always when working with the representative. It will render his co-operation more effective and will lead to a better mutual understanding all around.

The Board of Agriculture.

The first thing necessary, naturally, is for the representative to establish an office and to become acquainted with his clients. To aid him an Advisory Agricultural Committee, sometimes called a Board of Agriculture, is formed, consisting of prominent men in the county fully in sympathy with agriculture, the majority being practical farmers.

Different methods are employed to become acquainted. In the office an index system is usually kept, a card being made out for each farmer with his address, lot and concession, and such other information as is available. Thus much time is saved in visiting farms, as each one can be located quickly. Outside, at meetings, sales, etc., the representative attempts to become as widely acquainted as possible. Indeed, in one county it is stated that the representative in charge knows every man by his first name, and is similarly saluted by his

A few stories of work actually undertaken will show what is accomplished. We shall leave our readers to form an opinion of its value themselves.

When the Farmers Helped.

In an eastern county the newly appointed representative was advised to give practical demonstrations of orchard management. The district offered splendid opportunities to the apple grower, but for the most part the men were running mixed farms, and hence hadn't given much attention to profitable production, skillful grading and co-operative selling as the situation seemed to demand.

First of all the advice and co-operation of all the successful apple growers were sought. Then four orchards, located in different townships and situated along well travelled roads were secured. These had been neglected for many years, and were not producing profitable crops. The best cultural methods were followed, and the representative supervised the grading, packing and selling of apples. The work was carried on for three years. The average expenses for pruning, spraying, fertilization, cultivation, etc., averaged $67.52 an acre, while the net profits averaged $129.12 an acre. At different times practical demonstrations were held in the orchard when the work was discussed with the farmers interested in apple growing

But this was not all. A need was felt for still more direct work upon the farms. So each spring the representative and an expert provided by the Fruit Branch made a tour through the county with a spraying outfit. For a couple of weeks they drove from farm to farm spraying and pruning trees and holding orchard meeting at which were discussed orchard management in all its phases and the control of insects and fungus diseases. Neither of these men posed as an agricultaral Moses in any sense of the word. He simply worked among the farmers as any one of the latter might have worked had he studied the subject and had the time. They exchanged ideas and formed friendships.

During the winter a special series of fruit institute meetings was held in cooperation with the Superintendent of Institutes at which fruit growers and farmers were invited to attend. The reports of the demonstration orchards were read, figures being given in every case, and outside speakers were secured to discuss practical subjects. Following these, box packing demonstrations were given, all being invited to take part under the supervision of an expert packer. The value of this work is obvious.

To overcome the obstacles that existed in the way to profitable marketing a co-operative society was organized. It is now concluding its fourth year of operations. Over and above the prices that would have been secured by old methods the members—averaging forty—made a net profit of $10,939.80 in the first three years. They have now built a fruit storage house and are more enthusiastic than ever.

This success was not wholly due to the representative, nor did he claim credit for it. He did his part, but the underlying factor was the spirit of the men who co-operated with him. They felt a need, accepted the lessons taught by the practical demonstrations, and applied the results to their farm operations and business transactions.

How Dairymen Eliminated the Boarders.

In another county where dairying was the chief farm industry a need had been long felt for an efficient system of herd testing. The farmers had grown tired of keeping star boarders in their stables. They were busy men, hadn't a milk tester, and weren't fond of keeping accounts, so they appealed to the district representative who, at that time, had not long been stationed among them. He held a meeting, had them organize themselves into a herd testing association and then they all went to work.

Upon sheets secured from the Dominion Dairy Division each member kept a record of the performance of every cow in his herd. It didn't require much work either. He simply weighed the milk three times a month, morning and night, and recorded the figures opposite the cow's name. Once every week he put a sample of the milk in a small bottle containing a preservative, labelled with the cow's name or number. These bottles were kept in a box especially built for the purpose, the bottles, box and scales costing all told considerably less than five dollars.

Once a month these record sheets and the milk samples were taken to the agricultural office. There the representative tested the milk and filled out the sheet, recording the test and calculating the number of pounds of milk and fat and the value at the local market price. He washed out the bottles, put in a preservative, enclosed the complete record in the box and all was ready for another month's work.

At the end of the year he calculated the total milk or fat given by each cow, and after the value of feed consumed had been considered the net profit or loss from each was shown. The results were surprising, and the improvement in the herds has been marked from that year.

And again the representative only did good work because his clients were anxious to make use of him. He didn't show them how to farm. He just co-operated with them so they could more efficiently put their plans into execution.

The Case of Alfalfa.

In many counties alfalfa growing is a live question, and in some almost a dead one. But that it is a mighty useful crop where it can be grown successfully all farmers concede. And in a province so large as Ontario, with such varying climatic conditions, general experiments aren't of much avail—they must be adapted to local conditions. Also to be most convincing they must be carried on right on the old homestead.

At first several representatives conduced experiments upon plots near headquarters with this crop as with others, but without very satisfying results. They proved to their own satisfaction what varieties and crops were most suited to the locality, but comparatively few saw them. So now they have adopted the plan of supervising individual experiments wherever the farmers wish them.

In one county famous for its high class dairy cows, it had almost been decided that alfalfa was too doubtful a proposition to put much faith in. A few farmers in one township, however, asked their representative to conduct experiments upon their farms, such as they hadn't time to undertake themselves. After talking the matter over it was decided to plant different varieties, treated differently. As a result, it was found that Canadian grown seed innoculated with the legume culture and planted in soil containing sufficient lime produced an excellent crop which would withstand the winter. To-day many good crops of alfalfa may be seen in that township.

And so it goes with other crops, Different varieties of silage corn are secured by the representative, planted by the farmer, and together they discover just which one will give best results upon that particular farm. Varieties of grain are experimented with in the same way. Fertilizers are tested upon different farms until it is determined just what the soil in those localities requires to produce most profitable yields. And in a dozen other ways these practical demonstrations are conducted by farmer and representative working together to discover the "best" as it could not be discovered for that partlcular farm in any other way, at the same time so convincingly and efficiently.

In other ways the representative has proven his usefulness. He keeps a watchful eye on the damage done by insects and fungi throughout his territory. Against them he wages war, and when any threaten to become particularly injurious he promptly takes extraordinary measures of control. The army worm invasion of last year brought home this truth most convincingly. The following extract, taken from the annual report of the Oxford county office, explains itself :

"On account of the wide area attacked, we were called on to give "first aid" in different localities every day. Sometimes only one man would be interested ; some times two or three, or half a dozen. On answering the first call in one neighborhood, there were over thirty men sitting on the side of the road waiting for instructions. On one Sunday afternoon, for the first call in East Zorra, over fifty were present, waiting for advice. In less than three hours the same number had trenched and sunk post holes around an eight acre field where the outbreak occurred.

Give Him a Fair Chance.

These are a few of the ways in which the community hired man does his work. In many other lines his influence is felt, but a multiplicity of detail is unnecessary, as the same principal is involved in every case. His work is as practical as he can make it, and is carried on as near the individual farm as he can take. He is not a would-be gifted "know-it-all," and he isn't a theoretical "book farmer." He is a man with practical experience and a scientific agricultural training, who is anxious to accomplish such work in his county as his clients decide will be beneficial, and which they haven't the time or special training to undertake themselves. Above all, he is human, and will respond to encouragement.

So, after all, the work that the representative can do depends to a large extent upon how he is received and assisted Practically all of our Ontario readers can secure his services, and can judge for themselves how valuable his work will be to them. Do you wish to know what fertilizers your soil requires, and in what amounts ? Do you wish to have alfalfa tested on your farm? Do you wish a demonstration in spraying, pruning, packing or any line of orcharding ? Do you wish a short course in seed or stock judging to be held in your community ? Do you wish any seed you have bought to be tested for purity or germinating power ? Do you wish your land surveyed or the drainage laws explained ? Do you wish to have the cost of a drain that will affect your neighbors estimated ? Do you wish special information regarding the control of insect or fungus ? If so, ask your representative to help you. At the worst you stand to lose nothing, and you may gain very much.

But remember that many others may have requested his services—for a county is a large district for a man to handle. He may not be able to visit you upon the hour. And don't expect him to know everything off-hand. Give him time to study your particular problems and to find out from others what he doesn't know on the spot. Above all, give him a fair chance to prove himself, and lend him your assistance and encouragement. If you do that the chances are he will thenceforth be numbered among your friends—the ones you can make use of.

Just Salt.

In cleaning the windows of your store, the use of dampened salt will remove paint or other stains better than almost anything else. In winter if the windows are gone over outside with brine it will prevent the formation of frost for several hours. In fact as a cleanser and perservative the uses are practically without number.

There is almost universal danger of fire in stores, and a good extinguisher can be made very cheaply by dissolving 20 lbs. of common salt and 10 lbs. of sal ammoniac in 7 gals. of water. This solution placed in bottles about the store affords a quick remedy for any ordinary fire.

Still another series of uses is found in the cleansing and polishing properties of salt. A mixture of salt and vinegar will clean brasswork beautifully and give it a fine polish. By heating the same mixture iron work can be treated in the same way. Salt and salad oil form one of the best furniture polishes, and these uses can be amplified many times by a little personal experimenting.—C. F. M. Monthly.

Here is a Famous Family.

Mr. James Kidd, of Beckwith, has a brother and a son and a daughter on the fighting lines in Flanders—the brother and son on the medical staff, the daughter on the nursing. His brother, Joseph, who is his next door neighbor in Beckwith, has two sons in the gas belt. In all these two Beckwith gentlemen have no less than twenty relatives at the front—sons, nephews and brothers. Mr. James Kidd has also two in the Ministerial ranks in Western Canada, each doing his bit there to promote the higher, and therefore holier and happier prosperity of humanity.

Warden Timmins Banqueted.

It was indeed a happy gathering that attended the banquet given at the New Windsor Hotel, Cornwall, by the members of the Counties' Council to the retiring Warden, W. G. Timmins.

The guests included, in addition to the members, many ex-members of Council, municipal officials and others from the three counties, while letters of regret at being unable to be present were read by the Secretary from Dr. D. O. Alguire, M. P., R. A. Shearer, M.P P., D. Danis and A. L. Smith of Cornwall; I. Hilliard, M.P.P., Morrisburg; and Dr. Hope of Alexandria.

After full justice had been done to the delicious repast repaired by Mine Host Laplante J. A. C. Huot, who acted as toastmaster, filling the position admirably, after "The King" and "Canada," were duly honored, carried through the list of toasts, which were proposed and responded to by the following gentlemen.

"The Army and Navy"—Proposed by P. Kirby and responded to by Captain Gillies, Captain McNaughton and D. A. Ross, Martintown.

"Our Governments"— Proposed by D. A. McNaughton, and responded to by J. W. McLeod, Geo. Johnstone, C. P. R. agent, Cornwall, and John Cameron, Finch.

"Our Municipal Institutions"— Proposed by J. E. Chevrier, and responded to by James R. Simpson, D. H. Meikle and George E. Clark.

"Good Roads"— Proposed by M. F. Beckstead, and responded to by W. J. Fisher and D. A. McNaughton.

"Our Learned Professions"—Proposed by John H. Meikle, and responded to by Dr. Marcellus.

"Our Guest"— Proposed by T. W. Ault, and responded to by W. G. Timmins.

"Education"— Proposed by Wesley Hamilton, and responded to by J. McCormick, Winchester: P. A. Nolan and D. McMillan.

"Agriculture"— Proposed by Eli Merkley, and responded to by B. A. Reddick, J. G. Adams and John Grady.

"Our Boys at the Front."

"The Ladies"—Proposed by Geo. L. McLean, and responded to by Joseph Thompson.

"The Press"—Responded to by W. Gibbons and W. R. Young.

In all the speeches the Warden of 1915, W. G. Timmins, was referred to in most eulogistic terms, and it is safe to say that "Bill" Timmins, as one of the speakers familiarly called him, will be numbered among the most popular Council heads who has ever presided the destinies of these three counties.

To some of the speakers fell the privilege of speaking on the Good Roads problem, and from the tenor of their remarks there is no reason to doubt but that this important work will receive a great boost in these counties in the next year or so.

It is perhaps, next to education, the biggest problem the counties' representatives have to deal with, and many, who, in the past were more or less indifferent in the matter are now numbered among the most ardent supporters.

In replying to the toast, "Our Guest." Mr. Timmins said that he felt greatly honored by the banquet which had been tendered him. In all his dealings with the members, and in connection with the Counties' business he had always endeavored to do the right thing. He admitted, not reluctantly, that in years gone by, he had been somewhat opposed to the Good Roads movement, but, like a kitten, he had had his eyes opened, and now was strongly in favor of the proposition. In concluding he thanked the members for their kindness to him, not only in giving the banquet in his honor, but also in the Council chamber.

During the course of the evening P. R. Munro gave a most amusing song, "The Man who put the Kibosh on the Kaiser," which was received with rounds of applause.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Laplante for the splendid banquet served, and the singing of the National Anthem and Auld Lang Syne brought the evening to a close.

The arrangements were in charge of J. A. C. Huot, J. W. McLeod, who acted as vice toast-master, and W. D. Bell, who are to be congratulated on the success of the event.

"My dear, a burglar fired a revolver at a Boston man, and the bullet struck a button, thus saving his life."

"Well, what of it?"

"Only this. A man could shoot at me with a shotgun and never hit a button."

"Think of it", said the candidate, as he took the farmer's infant on his knee "this boy, so small, so immature, may live to become the president of our broad and enlightened republic". "Nothing doing"! said the farmer, harshly. "That's a girl!" "Better yet!" cried the unabashed candidate. "This girl may live to rule the man who rules the republic!"

Her Advantage.

"A cook has one advantage over everybody else in the house."

"What is it?"

"They may all want bread before she'll knead it."—Baltimore American.

Irish Wit.

The foreman of a gang of railway men has more than his share of Irish wit. The other afternoon he was walking along his section of the line when he found one of his laborers fast asleep in the shade of a hedge. Eyeing the man with a stern smile he said slowly" Slape on, ye idle spalpeen slape on. So long as ye slape ye've got a job, but whin ye wake up ye're out of wurrk.."

GIRLS AFTER THE WAR

WHAT WILL BE THE EFFECT ON CANADIAN YOUNG WOMEN?

Miss E. M. Knox of Havergal Discusses the Part Which the Great Conflict Will Play in Their Affairs —New Professions Must Be Found—First Aid Unions Suggested as an Outlet.

MISS E. M. KNOX, of Havergal Ladies' College, has written a thoughtful little booklet concerning the effect of the war upon Canadian girls. She realizes as others have realized that in some respects this war will be the most important event in a thousand years; that when it is ever we shall be looking out upon a new world. Just what that world will be we know not, but Miss Knox points to certain tendencies which appear likely to continue, and recommends that the education of women in Canada should be modified to comply with the conditions that are likely to exist for some years after peace is declared. She remarks, for instance, that as a result of the death and disablement of so many young Canadians, girls now in their teens can no longer look upon marriage with the certainty of former times. War has snatched their prospective husbands from them by the tens of thousands.

There must be, therefore, more women than ever crowding the professions, but the war will have made it more difficult than ever for young girls to obtain a foothold in some of them. In nursing, for instance, "their elder sisters are crowding the hospitals to take the place of those who are leaving for the front, and younger girls will find, as soon as the war is over and nurses on military duty return, that the profession is practically closed for four or five years, at any rate." Equally unpromising is the teaching outlook. Miss Knox says that this year for the first time teachers are finding it difficult to obtain employment. In the West rural schools are closing, and married teachers through lack of means are crowding back upon the profession. She does not believe that more than ten per cent. of the candidates training this year is the Faculty of Education will be able to secure positions. Stenographers, housekeepers and governesses are far more numerous than the vacancies for them. Domestic servants alone continue at a premium.

These unfavorable conditions are likely to be accentuated after the war for Miss Knox expects to see a great immigration of women later on. English women who have been called upon to fill the places of men sent to the front will not easily reconcile themselves to return to their old drudgery. Their thoughts will turn naturally to newer countries, and Canada is likely to receive many thousands of them. Because of the hardship of pioneer life upon womenkind these immigrants will not in large numbers go West, but will remain in the East to compete with Canadian girls in every calling that is open to them. It is plain, then, that if opportunities for marriage and for employment are to be decreased as a result of the war it will be necessary for women to open up some new fields for themselves. Miss Knox points out that it was after the Crimean War, and partly as a result of that struggle, that the modern woman was evolved, or rather that women began to occupy fields that had previously been the exclusive domain of men.

If strong leaders were at hand, what new lines of occupation could be created? she asks. In the first place, girls could learn, in addition to ordinary domestic service, first aid in carpentering, plumbing, and gardening, so that they might be not only capable managers in their own home upon small means, but also form a new society among themselves. A First Aid Union, under a capable House Mother, would consist of girls in uniform, who, as telephoned for, would be ready to help in emergencies, take care of children during the mother's sudden illness, nurse a convalescent child, read aloud, cook or wait at a dinner party, do the small repairs of the house, the week's mending, and be at hand for a hundred and one unexpected difficulties. A Norland Institution for infant nurses, a training centre for governesses, social workers, factory inspectors, market gardeners, chicken farmers, and the like might be established, and from centres of this kind girls could be drafted to the West, leaving city posts to those who come after them.

The writer believes that as a result of the war the moral training of young girls will be changed. She says: "The mother whose husband is fighting in the trenches looks for the same soldierly qualities in her children as in their father; for swift obedience, endurance, and power of self-sacrifice. In the school, instead of excusing and sheltering her children, she will insist upon a conscientious fulfilment of their duty." On the physical side there will also be new standards. More hardihood will be demanded, and in order that girls shall attain the maximum of physical health and strength their nerves must be sheltered during their growing years. This means less dissipation in parties and less nervous strain in the form of excessive music and other accomplishments. There will be a greater piety, a fuller realization of the basic truths of Christianity, a new conception of service and self-sacrifice. It will be a finer womanhood that will emerge from the chaos of war.

Banking Growth.

A striking illustration of the financial progress throughout the two older provinces of the Dominion during recent years, with respect to banking facilities, is graphically shown in a new addition of a Bank Map of Ontario and Quebec which has recently been issued by the Department of the Interior at Ottawa. According to the information which has been incorporated in the publication, the number of branches in operation in 1901, the first year for which statistics of this nature are given, totalled approximately 500, in comparison with 2,000 at the present time. This interesting compilation of current banking information is valuable also as a Railway Map, showing as it does, the location on the various main and branch lines, of all towns and cities. This, together with other general information, makes the publication very useful for reference purposes.

A Canadian Soldier Poet.

Patrick MacGill, poet and realistic novelist, now fighting at the front, is believed to have a rival in a Canadian soldier in the regular army, named John T. Gurnett, quartermaster-sergeant, who was born at Toronto and came to the British Isles more than 25 years ago. There is a very fine appreciation of Gurnett and his work in the Millgate Monthly, but the writer rather slipped up when he claimed Arizona for Canada, unless the poet-soldier, who is said to be clairvoyant, foresees that Canada is to add to her possessions in this wise.

Story of a Young Woman Who Found Her Soldier Husband.

A rather pathetic story comes from the representative of a Canadian newspaper in England, describing the plight of a young wife of a Canadian private, and the plucky manner in which she met and overcame the difficulties of locating her husband.

'Last Saturday nine hundred Canadian wives arrived in England by the Megantic. I played a small part in the fortunes of one arrival. Along with another chap, I was taking a stroll at the West Sandling Camp. As we struggled up a steep hill on our return we were accosted by a young wife who had a baby and a suit case. 'Will youse fellows run and get Pte. ——— for me?' she said.

"We said we'd see what we could do, and my companion offered to carry her grip.

"'It is not heavy. I can carry it,' was the reply.

"We walked ahead a few steps and I said to the other chap, 'You carry the baby and I'll take the grip.' We did.

"At the top of the hill we sent a man to locate the lucky hubby, who was not aware that his wife was coming.

"The man returned with the news that Mr. Husband was in hospital.

"In the meantime I invited the young lady's confidence. She was seventeen. The baby was a year old. She was married when she was 13 and her husband 16 in Oswego, New York. Her home is in St. Catharines, Ontario. She had a big time coming over in the boat—was only sick two days. 'You bet your life' she had lots of money. 'Enough to last her a month.' She wasn't very struck with England.

"When we met her she was a mile from a railway station with a baby and a suitcase. And three thousand miles from home!"—Canadian Courier.

A PLOT WHICH FAILED.

Architect's Draughtsmen Had All Their Work for Nothing.

A German-sounding name is sometimes uncomfortable in this country at present. There is a well-known architect in Toronto whose name has a rather German character, and who looks a little like a German, when, as a matter of fact, he is a French Swiss. A few days ago some of the draughtsmen in the office tried to entangle him in a complication with the authorities—just for a joke. The architect is a well-known designer of big buildings in large cities, and so might easily be suspected of knowing a good deal about the city of Toronto and its environs.

The shrewd practical jokers who aimed to scare a loyal citizen by involving him in a charge of treasonable conspiracy, drew up a fine map of the Humber River west of Toronto, showing all its approaches, embankments, prominent buildings, etc. The specifications were nicely folded up in a blue cover, and over the top was written: "Chart outline, plans and diagram of the Humber River, prepared for His Imperial Majesty Kaiser Wilhelm by ———, and herewith respectfully submitted."

The map was placed very carefully in the breast pocket of the architect's coat—for he is a man who leaves his coat on a nail when he works. The plan was to have a policeman arrest the architect charging him with treasonable conspiracy. The architect, of course, would indignantly deny the charge. The policeman was to search his pockets, discovering the plan. After which, when the architect was scared out of his boots, the joke was to be explained.

But the ruse didn't work. The architect found the map of the Humber River in his pocket before he saw a policeman. And the joke was on the conspirators, who had wasted so much time and talent in making the plan.

Ahead of Panama.

Chief Engineer Weller is authority for the statement that the Welland Ship Canal, now in course of construction, from an engineering point of view rivals the Panama Canal. Those familiar with the geography of the peninsula will readily credit Chief Weller's statement. But there is another regard, and a most important one, in which the Welland Canal does not rival the Panama Canal, but far excels it, that is in the amount of trade it carries. American papers published a few weeks ago a statement of six months' business on the Panama. J. L. Payne, comptroller of statistics at Ottawa, gives a statement covering a like period of six months on the Welland Canal. The comparison is: Total of vessels pass canal, 3,314; Panama Canal, 496; total tonnage, Welland Canal, 3,484,327; Panama Canal, 2,367,244. The number of vessels to pass through the Welland Canal in six months is almost seven times that of the Panama, and the cargo tonnage is 50 per cent. greater. When the ship canal is completed it will permit the passage up and down of the largest lake freighters. The increased cargo tonnage of the large freighters will have the effect of diminishing the number of vessels in service, but it will at the same time largely increase the total cargo tonnage.

FALL AND SPRING PLOWING.

August and September Rains Often Make Autumn Plowing Advisable.

The average yields of spring crops, such as wheat, oats and corn, in the great plains area from spring and from fall plowing show that the blind following of a rule prescribing any particular time of plowing might cause a reduction as often as it does an increase in the yields. The great variation in the time and amount of precipitation in this region must be constantly kept in mind when considering the time of plowing. No dependence can be placed on a heavy precipitation in August and September, yet it frequently occurs. As moisture is considered the most important factor in crop production in the great plains area, its conservation is the primary object in cultivation.

Stubble, weeds and uneven ground are common means of retaining snow and holding a large part of the winter precipitation. In deciding when a field should be plowed, the question of whether a greater amount of moisture will be accumulated by holding the snow that falls than will be dissipated by the growth of weeds is paramount. It must be decided by the man on the ground. In answering this question several factors must be considered—namely, the amount of moisture already in the soil that may be lost through weed growth, the probable time before the weeds will be killed by frost, the possibility of increasing the water in storage in the soil by holding the snow that may come, the danger of soil blowing if the stubble and weeds are removed and the distribution of farm labor.

In deciding the time to plow the advantages and disadvantages of both spring plowing and fall plowing must be taken into consideration. Heavy rains in August indicate that fall plowing should be done, as the gain of moisture during the winter by the stubble land probably would not equal the loss of moisture taken by the weeds in the fall. If only light rains occur, however, the moisture in the soil produced by these rains probably would be more than offset by the greater quantity of snow held by the stubble during the winter and the reduction of the weeds in the crop. Spring plowing would then be better. The availability of labor in the fall will influence the amount of plowing done, but a greater effort should be made to do the plowing if there is heavy precipitation than if the rainfall is light. The only advantage in late fall plowing is that the amount of spring labor in preparing the seed bed is reduced.

Seed Row Drills.

A good way to make drills or seed rows of uniform width and depth is to have an attachment for the garden rake as shown in the sketch, writes Bert W. Verne of San Diego, Cal., in Popular Mechanics. The device consists of a piece of tin or sheet metal having V shaped projections on one edge of the width of the rows. The other edge of the metal is inserted between the teeth on the rake. Thus it can be easily drawn over the garden bed to mark the rows. After the seed has been planted reverse the tin and use it as a hoe for filling the row.

A Sale of Airships.

You want to buy an airship?
Which make do you prefer?
The dandelion's out of style,
But thistle makes a stir.

Some fairies choose the milkweed—
It carries quite a load;
I knew one who witch hazel bought,
Then found it would explode!

You want to travel swiftly?
To see the loveliest things?
And go quite safely? Seems to me
I'd try the swallow's wings.

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

People who are taking little farms with a view to getting a living income, together with the advantages of a rural home, naturally give a great deal of thought to the earning capacity of an acre, and there is much discussion of this subject.

I have visited ten and twenty acre farms, both north and south, where the vegetable crops were paying $300 to $400 an acre above the cost of the labor. I have known celery, onions, cauliflower, lettuce, tomatoes and several other vegetables to give a net return of $500 to $800 an acre. Cabbage and beans will sometimes do this also, but less frequently than the others. Potatoes may be made to average $100 to $300. Asparagus, rhubarb, cucumbers and horseradish rank high as money crops, but still are a little behind some of the others.

Numerous instances can be cited of small fruits returning $400, and apples, peaches, cherries, pears, quinces and plums $300 an acre or more. By adding a canning or preserving business the family on a little farm may add largely to these profits. It is hardly necessary to say that the kind of products must, to a great extent, be regulated by convenience to market, the special demands of a certain trade and the ability to sell to private customers at retail prices.

It takes both skill and industry on the part of a family to run a little farm on this intensive plan. Some will do the work indifferently and will fall short of the figures given. Others may prefer to devote their time to poultry, cattle and hogs, and there is no reason why they should not get a good living income from a twenty acre tract where dairying, hog raising and poultry management are the main features. Everything depends on the owner and his family. The average production in America of an acre of corn is under thirty bushels an acre, though more than eight times this amount have been grown. The average potato crop is less than 100 bushels per acre, though more than twelve times this number of bushels have been produced. When the intensive method is used the productive value of an acre of land would seem to the average farmer as fabulous.

There are three crops with which a beginner may specialize, as they fit well into a rotative scheme and are always in good demand. These are early cabbage, early potatoes and late celery. In making a garden raise two or more crops in one season these products should be considered. Of potatoes the farmer may try Irish Cobbler. They are about as early as any, are of uniform size and the quality is good. The seed tubers are selected in the fall, kept in a cool cellar till about the middle of March and then are put in shallow slatted boxes. If placed in a light and moderately warm room by the time it is safe to plant them they will have thrown out strong sprouts possibly an inch long. Do not break these sprouts. Keep them uppermost in planting. Each piece of tuber should have at least two eyes. A potato crop so handled will be quite early and pay accordingly. There are a number of late growing crops which can then be put in the ground and brought to maturity by September or October.

To have cabbages headed early in July it is necessary to have them set out before the middle of April. The plants may be bought from dealers or the seed started in cold frames. In buying call for early varieties. The cabbages are set two feet apart each way and on a fair piece of ground will grow a crop worth $400 at an average of 5 cents a head. The late celery can follow on this ground or the potato land, and it is also feasible to grow radishes, beets, carrots, turnips, lettuce and many other things.

Celery may be treated as a highly profitable crop. It deserves the most intelligent care. As moisture is needed regularly it will pay to have a cheap irrigation outfit. Without water celery is not crisp or tender. A light sprinkling of nitrate of soda along the rows helps this crop.

A TRADE PIONEER.

Late Robert Wilkes Was Important Figure in Canadian Commerce.

To the August number of The Trader, which is the organ of the jewellery business in Canada, Mr. W. J. Barr has contributed a brief sketch of the business career of the late Mr. Robert Wilkes, whose life was suddenly cut short more than a generation ago. A native of Ireland, and with only a very primitive educational training, he came to Canada at sixteen, and from that time he was left to make his own way in the world. After four years spent in the hardware trade he entered the service of the Rossin Brothers, wholesale jewellers, whose business he took over in 1857. For a discouragingly long time his progress was slow, but by extraordinary versatility and invincible determination he ultimately achieved such exceptional success that in 1879 he retired from business. At forty-eight, with a marked fondness and a rare aptitude for public life, he appeared to have a brilliant future in prospect, when his useful and promising career came to a tragic close in 1880.

The religious communion of Mr. Wilkes' deliberate choice was that of New Connexion Methodism, and of it he early in life became a strong pillar of support until it was united with the Wesleyan Methodist body in 1874. From that event till his death he was one of the most prominent and active laymen in the Methodist Church of Canada. In politics Mr. Wilkes was what may be called a philosophical radical. His experience in commercial business made him a free trader, and he so publicly announced himself when, in 1872, he consented to become the Liberal candidate in Centre Toronto, where he was elected by a very small majority. In 1874 he was re-elected by an increased one, but, as his party had a good working majority without him, he withdrew soon afterwards into private life. There is some reason to believe that after 1879, if he had lived, he would have been brought back into the Parliamentary arena, where he could easily have kept himself in the front rank of Canadian statesmen. It is worthy of note that comparatively early in life he acquired a practical command of both French and German, which he spoke fluently and found very useful in doing business in European countries.

Farming In Denmark.

Denmark has been termed the paradise of the small proprietor. Nearly two-thirds of her population make a living, and a good living, from the land, one-half of the agriculturists being their own masters. The secret of success has lain in technical education and co-operation. Every farmer, big or little, belongs to one of the great co operative associations, which guide him in the care of the land and cattle and dispose of his produce to the best advantage without the needless waste of competition. The result of the system has been to make Denmark one of the richest countries in Europe in proportion to her size.

Refused a Fee.

Mr. Donald Armour, the well-known surgeon of Harley street, London, was the hero of a little incident that must be of interest to Canadians. A paragraph appeared in the press lately that Sir Victor Horsley had been summoned some distance to perform an urgent operation on a soldier. He went at once, performed the operation, and traveled back to London, refusing to accept a fee. A few days later another paragraph was published explaining that it was was not Sir Victor Horsley, but Mr. Donald Armour who had done this generous act.

GET READY THE SILO.

It will save time if the silo and machinery are all ready before they have to be used. All silos should be cleaned thoroughly and any leaks or weak places repaired. A thin cement wash can be applied to stone, brick, or concrete walls. Wood silos may be painted with boiled linseed oil or hot creosote. One gallon of the latter will cover 200 square feet of surface, two coats. The creosote should be heated to just under the boiling point, but care must be taken to prevent its boiling over into the fire. A large kettle like those used in making soft soap is suitable for heating and the creosote may be applied with a brush the same as in painting, allowing the first to dry before the second is put on.

Many Hard Winters Ahead.

Paris, Oct. 25.—The world's rain cycle, beginning in 1902, which the French meteorological authority, Abbe Moreaux, director of the Bourges Observatory, predicted as the result of his study of the sun's face, is now, the Abbe says, ended. He forecasts a series, though not perhaps quite unbroken, of twenty-six hard winters, beginning the present year. According to the Abbe, it is impossible to say where in Europe the winter cold will be excessive; but probabilities are France will have to face more rigorous winter seasons during this period. He bases his prophecy regarding coming winter temperatures upon the supposition that the temperature curve all over the world can be calculated on the same principles as the world's rain curve.

MRS. MELTON'S LETTER

To Tired Worn-out Mothers

Jackson, Miss.—"I shall feel repaid for writing this letter if I can help any tired, worn-out mother or housekeeper to find health and strength as I have.

"I have a family of five, sew, cook and do my housework and I became very much run-down in health. A friend asked me to try Vinol. I did so and now I am well and strong and my old time energy has been restored. Vinol has no superior as a tonic for worn-out, run-down, tired mothers or housekeepers." —Mrs. J. N. The Heintzman & Co. Pianos

The Heintsman Co. Piano is without a peer in its class.

It Is Made In Canada.

Yet, that does not constitute our appeal for its favor. Too many inferior articles are being sold to-day whose only merits are that they are made in Canada. The Heintzman & Co. has maintained its own standard of excellenee for 60 years.

There are several styles; all can be examined and tried in our show rooms. Write or call in for illustrated catalogue. Easy terms of payment can be arranged.

An Evening of Merriment

A social and sumptuous turkey dinner was served at the home of Mr. Vincent McCloskey on the evening of Oct. 24th, for a few well-chosen friends. The table was presided over by Mrs. J. McCloskey while Miss Grace Leland, Vincent McCloskey and Leonard Clement acted as ushers. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Frank Oshier of Chesterville, Miss Estella Harrison, Grantley; Mr. Chas. Kearns, Anna Belle Kearns and Miss Doyle of Connaught; Miss Annie Moriarity, Goldfield; Miss S. McMahon, Ed. McMahon and Len Clement Limerick and Miss Grace Leland of Wales. The gathering was enlivened by witty and humorous stories and dancing was indulged in until the wee sma' hours, the music being furnished by Messrs. C. Kearns and J. McCloskey. Mrs. McCloskey's untiring efforts to make the evening a success was much appreciated by her guests. The gathering broke up after the singing of "Auld Lange Syne" every one retaining pleasant memories of the good time.

Our Brave Nine.

Dedicated to the nine heroes of Chesterville, who enlisted for overseas service of Grenadier Guards on Wednesday, Oct. 28th, 1915.—Mrs. S. McMahon.

They have gone, yes the nine,
And a great deal more,
They have left far behind,
Many hearts that are sore.

True and brave hearts were they,
When they answered the call,
To the King's late appeal,
Which was issued to all.

"More men, and still more,"
Help keep back the foe!
North, South, East and West,
Heed the call and they go.

To face peril and danger,
On the dense battlefield;
But the King needs their aid,
To his call they must yield.

And our nine noble boys,
For boys are they still,
Have ventured the task,
Midst peace and goodwill.

Of the citizens here, who
Have tried so to show,
Their respect and their feelings,
When the boys had to go.

But alas! this keen sorrow,
Which all the world knows,
Most is felt by the classes,
Whose boys face the foe.

Yet out of this wreckage
Let us pray, may attain
Glorious victory achieved
And a great conquest gained.

Oh Thou who dost silence
The wind and the wave,
Watch o'er them, our nine boys,
And bring them back safe.

The reeve and councillors of the Townships of Rear of Younge and Escott have each donated the amount which they annually receive for their services to the Red Cross Society. The clerk also followed the good example.

Mrs. Nellie McClung, the winsome and popular author, in one of her addresses said that it was pathetically true that the world takes your goods at the estimation you place upon them through advertising, or words that easily conveyed that meaning.

Mr. William McCue, a young barrister of Smith's Falls, while out hunting a few miles from Smith's Falls on Friday last, had the rare good luck to shoot a silver black fox, the first ever killed in that part of Ontario. The skin is a perfect one and will be worth from $1500 to $2500.

Rev. R. H. Archer preached his farewell sermon to a large audience in Holy Trinity church Sunday evening. Mr. Archer takes up his duties in Cornwall immediately. So many Anglican ministers have enlisted for the war that for the time being an ordained minister has not been appointed to this charge.

For the purpose of scaring away a number of boys performing hallowe'en pranks, Keith Moxley of Brockville discharged a 32 calibre rifle on Halladay street, the shot taking effect in the thigh of Gerald Danby, aged 16. Pending the injured lad's recovery, which is thought probable, Moxley is in jail on remand.

Mr. J. W. Bogart is another of the long list of people who have found Record advertisements to bring quick results. Last Thursday's Record carried a "Farm for Rent" ad. Friday morning applicants began coming, and up to Monday morning eight or ten applications from good tenants had been received. The farm was well rented. It pays to advertise in The Record.

Mr. H. T. Bowman of Newington, agent for the Deering Machinery Co., sold this fall no less than eighteen Oliver sulky plows. These plows are manufactured in Hamilton, Ont., and sold through the International Harvester Co's organization. Mr. Bowman can be rightly named the Plow King of Ontario. Mr. Robt. Ball of Winchester Springs, also Mr. E. Beckstead of Williamsburg, have met with equal success in the sale of this same plow No. 26.
