MORRISBURG'S NEW FERRY DOCK

In Ideal Location, Now Under Construction

The people of Morrisburg and vicinity have been wondering when to expect developments of the much talked-of new dock site and terminal of the Morrisburg-Waddington Ferry Line. Now they are assured by the work already done, that the boast of George D. Howith, genial executive of the Ferry Line, was not vain, idle vapouring, when he said that the Morrisburg-Waddington Ferry Service would ultimately develop into the fastest crossing on the St. Lawrence River, taking into consideration planked railway bridges and all.

The new location of the dock will obviate the delay in turning round, which is a source of annoyance to passengers (so near and yet so far) and will also eliminate the heavy cost to the Ferry Company of breaking ice daily during the winter months in the present dock used by them.

Residents of Morrisburg, and especialy the hotel and tourist home owners, should welcome the efforts of Mr. Howith in that this faster crossing will mean increased trade for them and the town. An attractive Chamber of Comerce office building and Customs House at the new ferry terminal will make a very decided improvement in the approaches to the town from the east and south.

In these days of competition, busines men cannot afford to hide their light under a bushel, and with the Ferry Line's offices and the Customs House on the Main Highway, Morrisburg should and will obtain the conseqeutn increased share of business that the new dock and its environs will attract.

Further, the new Reciprocity Treaty with the States will in time bring increased shipment of freight, and with a still faster ferry service, goods will come in every increasing quantities to Morrisburg, for transshipment to Waddington where plans are already being made for immediate railway connection.

Morrisburg welcomes the constructive energy of Mr. Howith, who at a time when work was scarce, has made it possible for a number of families to benefit and add sorely needed funds to the family exchequer.

It should be remembered that the tourist trade is the largest ranking asset of Canada today. In 1935, there crossed into Canada citizens of the U.S.A., considerably in excess of the population of Canada, and anyone who has done as much as Mr. Howith has done to place Morrisburg on the map is not only to be commended, but should be supported in what he is trying to do for what we believe to be for the benefit of the community as a whole.

RECITAL IS HUGE SUCCESS

One of the outstanding entertainments of the season was staged in Castleman's Memorial Hall, on Friday November 15th, when the voice pupils of Mrs. Florence Hubbard McKee, of Waddington, N.Y., rendered several vocal numbers, which were a credit to the pupils as well as to their instructress.

The hall was filled to capacity, and the generous applause which greeted each number marked the popularity as well as the merit of each rendition.

While the success of the evening's program reflects much credit upon Mrs. McKee and her pupils, much credit is also due Mr. Stewart Hall, who assisted Ms. McKee, and the accompanists, Miss Geraldine Edwards, Mr. Darwin Stata, and Mrs. Emma Drew Wilkins.

Miss Maye Suffell and Mr. Trevor Allison, who participated in this program, will be heard over station WCAD, Canton, N.Y., at 12.30 p.m. Saturday. Mr. Darwin Stata will be the accompanist.

Those taking part in Friday's program were as follows: Misses Geraldine Edwards, Maye Suffell, Francis Cummings, Geraldine Ault, Ruth Cummings, Vivien Barclay, Mrs. Ella Stowell, Mrs. Gladys Edwards, Mrs. Marion Jackson, Mrs. M.D. Bennett, Messrs Trevor Allison, Darwin Stata, Rev. Russell Archer, and Mr. Stewart Hall, who rendered two trumpet solos, one of which, "Canadian Fantasie," was composed and arranged for trumpet and piano by him.

MRS. E.J. HAMILTON

There died at her home in Brinston on Sunday morning, Elizabeth Blair, wife of Ed. J. Hamilton, and daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Blair, in her 64th year. The deceased was of unassuming disposition, and beloved by her friends and neighbours.

The funeral was held from her late residence to Hanesville United Church on Tuesday afternoon, Rev. E.C. Lacey officiating. Interment was in Hanesville cemetery.

She leaves to mourn her loss, besides her husband, three sisters, Mrs. Jos. Adams of Williamsburg, Mrs. Harry Cowan of Stones Corners and Mrs. Robt. Corker of Brinston.

The many floral tributes bespoke the high esteem in which deceased was held.

JURY INQUIRES INTO DEATH OF IROQUOIS PEOPLE

Placing part of the blame on the dangerousness of the crossing, a coroner's jury inquiring into the deaths of Earl Perry, 19, of Cardinal and Wilda Ellis, 17, of Iroquois, instantly killed at the Victoria street crossing in Iroquois last Friday by an extra freight train of the C.N.R., strongly recommended protection for the crossing.

The following verdict was rendered: "Wilda Ellis and Earl Perry came to their deaths as a result of a collision of a car with an eastbound extra freight on Friday, November 15th, at 7.55 p.m., in the village of Iroquois where Victoria street crosses the Canadian National Railway. In the opinion of this jury the accident was partly due to the dangerousness of this crossing and strong recommendation is made for either a bell or a subway at this point. Attention is drawn to the fact that this makes three deaths at this point in the past ten years.

Saw Pair Perish.

The crossing was only 75 feet from the home of the late Miss Ellis. Evidence disclosed that her father, William Ellis, and a brother of Earl Perry, Bertle Perry, had seen the two young people go to their deaths.

He had looked out the window of his home, about 75 feet from the railway tracks, and had seen the back of the car go up on the railway, the father testified. There was nothing to obscure the vision of the north side of the tracks, he said. Immediately afterwards he heard the crash. He did not hear the train whistle. "I usually hear trains whistling for this crossing, but I would not like to say positively that this train did not whistle."

No Whistle Heard

Bertle Perry also did not hear the train whistle, although he was on the street in front of the Ellis home. He did not even hear the bell of the train ring, he said.

Standing in front of the Ellis home with Perry was Miss Doreen Hutt of Iroquois. She did not see the train coming until it was almost on top of the automobile, she testified, and not in time to give warning to the motorists. She did not hear the train whistle nor the bell ring, and could not recollect having seen the headlight of the train.

Evidence of the train crew was to the effect that all the proper signals had been given for the crossing. This part of the evidence also revealed that the automobile had been caught by the rear axle in the pony engine and had been dragged until the train had come to a stop.

Swears He Gave Signal

James Denneny of Montreal, engineer in charge of the train, swore that he had blown the whistle and rung the bell for the crossing. The train was travelling about 35 miles an hour, he said, and was carrying 34 cars. As soon as he heard the brakeman shout, he applied the emergency brakes and was able to stop the train within the length of itself. The headlight was burning and he thought it could be seen at least one-half mile away when the train was brought to a stop. The train could not have been stopped sooner, he said.

Curtis Owen, fireman, said he saw the automobile drive right in front of the train. He also was of the opinion that the train was stopped as soon as possible, and was certain that the whistle had been blown and the bell rung for the approaching crossing. There was nothing to prevent occupants of the automobile seeing the approaching train he asserted.

John Morris, brakeman, testified that as the train was approaching the crossing he saw the car approaching the tracks, going about ten miles an hour. It seemed to be picking up speed and crossed the tracks right in front of the approaching train. He shouted to the engineer to apply the emergency brakes. Right after he did so, he heard the impact as the train struck the car. He first saw the automobile when the train was 200 feet from the crossing and had a clear vision of it. The whistle of the train was blowing and the bell was ringing he averred.

Dr. F.W. Snedden, of Iroquois, stated that he was at the scene of the accident a few minutes afterwards. He found the lifeless body of Wilda Ellis lying on the south side of the track 75 or 100 feet east of the crossing. She had a fractured skull. Perry had not been thrown from the car.

Perry was the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Perry of Cardinal. He and Miss Ellis were just starting out by automobile to see a moving picture show when the tragedy occurred.

Dr. E. H. Marcellus, coroner, presided at the inquest. The jury was composed of E. A. McInnis, foreman, William Barclay, John W. Marcellus, E. W. Keck, Colin Cameron, H. B. Everett, Earl Merkley and J. C. Gilder, all of Iroquois.

The GREEN GHOST

by Stuart Martin

SYNOPSIS

Maud Barron awakes with a premonition of disaster. She hears padding footsteps. Rushing into her father's study she finds him dead.

Dr. Sidney Foster, a friend, is joined by Detective "One Eye" Uttock, a mulatto, who has never lost a man.

Maud Barron and Hughes return to England. Dr. Foster gives Maud his address in case of need. He receives a telegram informing him "The Ghost" has reappeared.

Foster went through the overcoat pockets. No result. He stepped to the wardrobe and saw clothing suspended from the brass rod. He searched rapidly. Not a thing in the pockets except a box of matches and a tobacco pouch. He looked into the drawers of the dressing chest and of a small cupboard in a corner. He drew blank. Some letters were lying on a table. He ruffled them with his fingers. The print was not there. He saw some books on a rest and shook the covers. Out of one of them fell a small piece of paper. He picked it up and examined it. Though it was but three cornered scrap barely half an inch long at its extremes, his heart bounded. This, he felt, was part of his print.

He had no more time to lose. He came out and went quickly to his own room and opened his small medicine chest. Taking a piece of wax which he used for making his drug bottles airtight, he moulded it quickly in his palm, pressed the master key into it to get the impression, then came out.

He ran along and handed the key back to the housekeeper, and joined Hughes on the lawn. The latter was playing with the big dog, and on Foster murmuring an apology for keeping him waiting, they started off.

As they strode towards the woods Hughes started to whistle a tune light-heartedly. It was one of the songs that Miss Monteth had sung in the drawing room the previous night. The dog was leaping and twisting in sheer joy of freedom and when they reached the edge of the woods Foster stopped and pointed.

"It was here I saw it," he said. "It became visible about here by those trees, next that big beach."

Hughes gazed at the tree with pretended interest. He began to ask questions. What did the thing look like? How long did it remain in the quarter? Was it really a human face?

"It came across by these trees, Hughes. There is a big branch I spotted as it moved. It hung there like a will o' the wisp between these two trunks. Let us go over that way. Hullo! What's the matter with the dog? What has he found?"

The Alsation was running backward, and forwards among the bushes. Presently he yelped and trotted off deeper into the wood.

"A rabbit, I expect," said Hughes. Then: "Come here! Back, Wolf! Here!"

The dog did not obey the call but continued to trot forward, his nose to the ground. Foster ran after it, keeping it in view. Hughes came on behind. The dog dashed into a bush and barked joyously. Foster came up rapidly.

"What is it, Wolf? Good dog! Fetch it!"

The Alsatian's tail wagged like a semaphore signal as he crouched and burrowed his way into the bush. As Hughes came up the animal backed out of the shrub and worried something he had torn from the roots.

"What is it?" cried Hughes.

For answer the doctor seized a piece of black cloth which the dog held and commanded him to let go. He held the cloth up towards Hughes.

"Look here!"

Huges snorted his disgust.

"Bah! A piece of rag that has been lying there for weeks probably—"

"It hasn't been lying a day, Hughes. It is perfectly dry and it is unsoiled. I wonder if the dog has a good scent?"

"What's the idea?"

"If this is a piece of cloth that has been dropped, the scent may lead us——"

"Absurd! It may lead us to a travelling tinker or gipsy caravan or a rag and bone man. Oh, be sensible."

But there was a trace of anxiety in the sneer and Foster had his own ideas. He called the dog and presented the cloth to its nose. And just then a hand shot out and the cloth was snatched away. Hughes aimed a savage kick at the dog that sent it howling backwards.

"What's the matter with you?" cried the doctor. "Let the dog alone!"

A BIT OF RAG

Hughes crumpled up the cloth and threw it into the bush.

"It's nonsense!" he shouted. "Utter nonsense!"

"It's not nonsense." Foster picked up the cloth and held it against the sky. "Look at this. See these two holes cut out almond shape. Does that suggest anything to you? It does to me—"

"Anything would suggest something to you."

"Where is the dog? Here, Wolf!"

"Never mind the dog." Hughes's tone was cold and hard. He seemed to have frozen suddenly.

"But the dog is the very thing we need—"

"I've told you, Foster!"

But the doctor was too intent on his discovery to notice the change that had come over Hughes. Once more he bent down and held out the cloth to the dog.

"Here, Wolf!"

Hughes's foot shot out and kicked the dog agan, and his hand snatched the cloth from Foster, and once more crumpled it into a ball.

"You damned fool detective" he cried.

"What's that? Give that cloth to me!"

Hughes scowled and took a step towards the dog that was growling and showing his bared teeth.

"Give that cloth to me, Hughes!" Fohter's breath came from between his teeth. His jaw was set and his fists clenched. "You hear!"

But before Hughes could reply a big brown shape hurled itself between them, and the Alsatian's fore paws landed on Hughes's chest, and white fangs gleamed and snapped viciously close to his face.

Why at 40 You Think You're "GROWING OLD"

It's Frequently Just an "Idea." Not "Old Age." And According to Scientists, May be Something No More Alarming Than A Touch Of Acid Stomach

At about 40, many people think they're "growing old." They're tired a lot. Have headaches. Stomach upsets. Dizziness. Nausea.

Well, scientists say the cause, in a great many cases, is merely an acid condition of the stomach. The thing to do is simply to neutralize the excess stomach acidity.

When you have one of these acid stomach upsets, all you do is take Phillips' Milk of Magnesia after meals and before going to bed.

Try this. You'll feel like another person! Take either the familiar liquid "PHILLIPS'", or the convenient new Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets. Made in Canada.

Also in Tablet Form:

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at all drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

A WEEKLY TONIC

A "GROUCHY" CHILD

A great many letters that I receive from parents are about problems concerning their children. That is not surprising, for there are real problems connected with the training of children. I have a letter before me now which I wish I could quote in full, but space does not permit. I will quote it in part. Here it is:

"I have a little boy ten years old who is cross. He seems to have a grouch on all the time. Nearly every morning when he gets up he is cranky and if told to do anything he whimpers and whines. He has to study hard to get along in school, and at night when doing home work he scolds and cries about it all the time he is trying to study. I have started to teach him music but it is the same old story. He gets plenty of sleep because he is in bed by eight and gets up at six-thirty. He has a mile and a half to walk to school so gets plenty of fresh air."

The little fellow referred to has had some serious illnesses. Two mastoid operations when nine months old. Another at eighteen months when he had to be given a blood transfusion. He was in bed for seven months with muscular rheumatism just two years ago, and has since had his tonsile removed. I don't wonder that the little chap is grouchy although his mother tells me that he is now in good health and weighs seventy nine pounds.

I am writing personally to this mother because I want to say more than it is possible for me to say in this column. The case may have interest for other mothers, so I shall made on or two general observations which, I think, might be helpful.

In the first place, if this were my boy I would have him thoroughly examined by a competent physician every three or six months to make sure that his health was good and to keep a check on his physical progress. I would also be careful never to talk about his illness in his presence. I certainly would not remind him that he had been a very sick little boy. That would only suggest weakness to him and hinder his progress.

I would not force too much upon a boy like this. If he is finding it hard to keep up with other children in his studies at school, then it is hardly fair to tax him further with the study of music. I would be inclined to let that go for a year or so.

Perhaps the child needs even more sleep than he is getting. His grouchiness in the morning would seem to indicate that he is not getting enough sleep. If he must be up at six-thirty, why not try getting him to bed an hour earlier?

I would try to cooperate with this boy without imposing myself upon him, and without making him feel that he must give on account of all his doings in detail, I would try to win his confidence — not his confidences, but his trust in general. I would also encourage him, within reason, to mingle with other children. To go out and play with them and to learn to take his place among them.

Very often, in a case like this, the parents have unwittingly spoiled the child — and they can hardly be blamed for that, for it is so easy to give in to an ailing child. If this has been done, then it will need to be wisely and carefully corrected. Treat the child as a person. One can be kind without being over-indulgent. Don't pamper him. Try to lead him and encourage him to feel that he is developing into a big, strong, healthy boy. Even at ten, a child can be made to feel that he has a little responsibility in life, and nothing so encourages the growth of manliness as the sense of personal responsibility and the feeling of independence. Give him little jobs to do and encourage him to do little things for himself.

Five Rules For a Successful Marriage

Dr. Adler, the well-known Viennese psychologist, gave the following rules for a happy marriage at his lecture in Toronto recently.

(1) There should be equality of the partners and both parties should be bodily and mentally healthy.

(2) They should be bodily and mentally attracted to each other.

(3) It should be proved that either party is capable of making and holding friends.

(4) The man should like to be useful, should like his occupation.

(5) Either must be more interested in their partner than themselves.

Dr. Adler said that "pampering" in the home made young people totally unfit to face matrimony. Several women asked how you could overcome effects of pampering. "As soon as the pampered people find their pathway is not so favorable they will change their ways," said the speaker. He also intimated that romantic love was on the wane, the people now married with much more intelligent understanding.

HEATING HINTS by James Stewart

ALTHOUGH banking the fire is a very simple operation, many people have trouble with it. Let me explain the method that I have found the most satisfactory.

First (and only if it is necessary to make room for fresh coal), gently shake the fire until you see the first red glow in the ashpit. Then with a shovel or hoe pull the live coals toward the front of the furnace, so that the fire bed slopes downward towards the back. Shovel the fresh coal carefully into the hollow thus formed. And, as in refueling, be sure to leave an exposed spot of live coals right in front of the fire door. This "hot spot" will act as a pilot light to ignite the gasses given off by the fresh coal, preventing them from escaping into the house.

When banking the fire for the night, the Ashpit Damper should be closed and the Check Damper open. The Turn Damper should be left as nearly closed as possible. And remember, it should never be necessary to leave the fire door open when the fire is banked. If you follow this procedure, your fire will stay in for the night and will deliver ample heat when you open the drafts in the morning. (4)

Victorian Centenary Loan Exhibition For 1937

A Victorian Centenary Loan Exhibition is being planned in London for 1937 to celebrate the centenary of the accession of Queen Victoria.

The exhibition will be mainly illustrative of women's activities during the reign, and it is hoped to reproduce the Victorian atmosphere throughout the exhibition. The proceeds will be given to King's College Hospital, which was founded two years after Queen Victoria's accession.

Harvest

Let songs arise to Thee, O God,
From every harvest field,
And let the nations praise Thy name,
For what the earth doth yield.

We, to Thy holy altar, Lord,
The fairest flowers do bring,
And with the first fruits, we present
To Thee our offering.

For Thou hast in Thy goodness great,
With plently filled the land,
No sparrow falleth to the ground,
Except by Thy command.

O give us grace that we may first,
The heavenly kingdom seek,
In confidence that Thou for us
Dost other blessings keep.

Enable us to look beyond
The things of time and see,
That greater harvest when we shall
Be gathered unto Thee.

CHEESE AS YOU LIKE IT

Few foods are so distinctive as cheese for few foods can be used in such a variety of ways in the luncheon, supper or dinner menu. There was a time when cheese was usually served as a final tidbit to a substantial meal, but today its high food value in addition to its savoury flavour is rightfully taken into account and this healthful food is one of the ingredients used in making an unlimited number of nourishing main courses. The following recipes are a few examples of how cheese may be combined with cereals or bulky vegetables to make a satisfying dish. Although in some cases the amount of cheese called for in the recipe seems small in comparison to that of other ingredients, the cheese may contribute the most food value due to the fact that it is such a concentrated food.

Cheese Ring With Vegetables

1 cup milk
1 cup soft bread crumbs
1 egg
1½ cups cooked macaroni
1 cup Canadian cheese, diced
1 tablespoon minced parsley
1 tablespoon chopped pimiento
1 teaspoon minced onion
3 tablespoons melted butter
Salt and pepper

Scald milk. Add to bread. Add well beaten egg and other ingredients. Pour into greased ring mould and oven-poach in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for about 50 minutes. Turn out on hot platter. Pour filling in centre and garnish with parsley.

Filling

1 cup medium cream sauce
2 cups cooked vegetables such as
1 cup cooked peas
1 cup cooked carrots
Salt and pepper

Ramekin of Egg and Spinach

2 tablespoon butter
2 tablespoon flour
1 cup milk
¾ cup grated cheese
1½ cups cooked spinach, chopped
6 eggs
Salt and pepper

Melt butter, blend in flour and seasonings and gradually add milk. Stir until mixture thickens. Add grated cheese, place ¼ cup spinach in each ramekin. Drop raw egg on top of spinach. Season with salt and pepper. Oven-poach at 350 degrees F. for 15 minutes or until eggs are set. Cover with cheese sauce and serve

Baked Tomato and Cheese

6 slices bread
1 cup cheese
2 cups tomato juice
2 eggs
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon minced onion

Butter bread and cut into cubes; cut cheese into cubes and put bread and cheese in baking dish in alternate layers. Beat eggs slightly, add tomato juice, salt, pepper and onion. Pour over bread and cheese and bake in moderate oven at 350 degrees F. for about 40 minutes.

SEASONING WORKS WONDERS

On days when you are bored with life and three meals a day, go out into the kitchen and experiment with seasoning. Many opportunities for cook's amusement and family pleasure lie in your condiment pots and jars.

Of course, you must use gumption in choosing seasoning. Don't kill the flavor of your food with your cinnamon or all spice or pepper. But while the soup that has been salted with too heavy a hand often seems like a tragedy, the tasteless dish is even more so. Desserts, candies and sweets of all kinds gain in flavor if a few grains of salt are added. Any combination containing milk or cream requires salt. Even coffee is more delicious if a bit of salt goes into the fusion.

Sugar Helps Vegetables

Sugar is another everyday seasoning that works wonders when judiciously used. Unless vegetables are fresh from the garden a little sugar is needed to heighten their natural sweetness. Tomatoes must always have a dash of sugar. Roasts develop a riches flavor when a bit of sugar is rubbed into the surface. All dressings and sauces containing lemon juice or vinegar need some sugar.

Both sugar and salt are helpful in blending several flavors into a smooth combination. Highly spiced sauces and baked-stuffs are very dependent on skilful seasoning with salt and sugar.

As a seasoning for meat and dark sauces, black pepper is more effective than white because the real strength of the pepper berry is found in the outer shells of which black pepper is made. You need two pepper mills in your house, a wooden one for the kitchen and a pewter one, say, for the dining table. This insures freshly ground pepper for all seasoning purposes.

Use Cayenne With Care

Cayenne pepper is something else again and must be used very sparingly, but a deft use of it lends zest to many a dish.

In soups, sauces and salads or with fish, meats and vegetables paprika's milk flavor is an addition. Itts vivid color makes it an excellent garnish, too. Remember, though, there are two kinds — the Hungarian which is pungent and the Spanish which is very mild.

Cream of lima bean soup made faintly pink with paprika is nice served with toasted pimento cheese squares and olives.

Toasted Cheese Squares

Ten slices of bread cut 1-3 inch thick, 1½ cups cream cheese, 3 tablespoons chopped pimento, 4 tablespoons butter.

The packaged cheese works up easily and smoothly. Mash cheese, add butter and pimento and mix until blended. Place five slices of bread, one on top of the other with cheese filling between. Repeat with remaining slices of bread. Put in refrigerator until firm, about ½ hour. Slice each mound of bread into 4 slices. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.) until brown. Serve hot.

In this case the toasting develops flavor quite as much as the seasonings.

TANGY DISHES

As every housewife knows, the brisk, chill winds of fall are natural appetite stimulants. The pungent odor of wood-smoke, the wine-like scent of apples fresh from orchards, the rime that mists the meadows at early morn—these are tokens that Jack Frost will soon be calling. The keen hunger roused by these signs of autumn is not appeased with common dishes. It needs something in accord with the season; something as tantalizing and stimulating as the fall itself. You and your family will appreciate these recipes at any time —but especially right now.

Alpine Steak

2 pounds round steak, ground
1 can tomato soup
2 cups cracker crumbs
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon poultry dressings
1 tablespoon minced onion
1 cup sweet pickles, thinly sliced

Combine meat, soup, cracker crumbs, and seasonings. Mix thoroughly. Fold in pickles. Press into a greased loaf tin and bake in a moderate oven (325 degrees F.) for one hour or until done. This loaf is excellent hot or cold and will keep several days in a refrigerator. Makes an excellent filling for sandwiches.

Chicken Salad

4 cups cooked chicken, diced
½ cup small sweet pickles, chopped
2 cups celery, sliced fine
hard-cooked eggs
2 pickeled beets
Salt and pepper
Mayonnaise

Mix chicken, pickles and celery. Add mayonnaise to moisten. Add salt and pepper if needed. Arrange on lettuce. Garnish with sliced eggs and sliced beets and more mayonnaise.

UNUSUAL DISHES

The good cook, who has learned the effect of new and unusual dishes upon her family and guests is in an envious position. Her meals are praised and eagerly sought after. She becomes the local "good cook."

Here are two unusual dishes made from cooked, dried lima beans.

Limas With Sausage

½ pound sausage
1 medium-sized onion
1 cup cooked, dried limas
1 cup tomatoes
½ teaspoon chili
½ teaspoon salt

Fry onion and sausage until well done. Add other ingredients and simmer for 30 minutes.

Lima Loaf

2 cups cooked, dried limas
2 tablespoons minced onion
2 tablespoons tomato catsup
3 tablespoons melted butter
1 egg, well beaten
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 cup soft bread crumbs

Combine ingredients and turn into a buttered bread pan. Bake in a moderate oven (360 degrees F.) about 25 minutes. To serve, unmold in center of platter, place strips of crisp bacon over the top and garnish with slices of fried tomatoes.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON VIII. — November 24
THE MESSAGE OF HAGGAI AND ZECHARIAH
Haggai 1 : 2-8; 2 : 8, 9; Zechariah 4 : 6-10.

GOLDEN TEXT—I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go unto the house of Jehovah.
—Psalm 122 : 1

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

Time—Events recorded in that part of the book of Ezra which is found in this lesson occurred between the years 536 B.C. and 516 B.C. Psalm 84 was written during the days of the monarchy. Haggai prophesied during the second year of Darius, 520 B.C., and Zechariah, a contemporary of his, prophesied during this and the succeeding years.

Place—Practically all the passages in this lesson record events taking place in the city of Jerusalem.

"Thus speaketh Jehovah of hosts, saying, This people say, It is not the time for us to come, the time for Jehovah's house to be built." It is not stated on what grounds the people based this assumption; but probably they palliated their indifference to religion by a pretended dread of Persian hostility.

"Then came the word of Jehovah by Haggai the prophet, saying, Is it a time for you yourselves to dwell in your ceiled houses, while this house lieth waste?" Their own comforts were their condemnation. If they had found means, leisure, and security to furnish such houses for themselves, it could scarcely be the times which prevented them from building God's house.

"Now therefore thus saith Jehovah of hosts: Consider your ways. Ye have sown much,and bring in little; ye eat, but ye have not enough; ye drink, but ye are not filled with drink; ye clothe you, but there is none warm; and he that earneth wages earneth wages to put it into a bag with holes." Nothing had prospered with these people. Their harvest were bad. The food they ate did not satisfy. The money they made vanished. So thousands of people can testify today that, having been u fair with God whom they worshipped and claimed to love, God has somehow made life barren in its permanent situations for them.

"Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: Consider your ways. Go up to the mountain, and bring wood, and build the house; and I will take pleasure in it, and I will be glorified, said Jehovah." No one mountain is here thought of. The reference is simply to those high lands where the most suitable timber for building purposes could be found. God himself makes this command, and, with the command, extends a precious promise that, if they will do what he asks them to do, he will not only take pleasure in it, but will be glorified in their work.

"The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith Jehovah of hosts. The latter glory of this house shall be greater than the former, said Jehovah of hosts; and in this place will I give peace, saith Jehovah of hosts." It cannot be said that the glory of Zerubbabel's temple or even that of Herod surpassed the temple of Solomon in costliness, splendor, and glory. If this passage is to be a literal fulfillment, it must be in a temple yet to be built. If, however, one wishes to confine the meaning of this passage to the true worship of God, which is known through and made possible through the Son of God, the Lord Jesus Christ, then, of course, the glory of the worship which Christ receives from his Church today, also the true temple of God, is far greater in glory, and truthfulness, and reality, than any glory which rested upon a material temple such as Solomon's.

"Then he answered and spake unto me, saying, This is the word of Jehovah unto Zerubbabel, saying, Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith Jehovah of hosts." You have taken your own measure; you feel your weakness to cope with your circumstances, but you are to understand that it is God's Spirit who is the source of every enlightening action that reflects glory upon God.

"Who art thou, O great mountain? before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain; and he shall bring forth the top stone with shoutings of Grace, grace, unto it." The great mountain represents colossal difficulties and hindrances, which, relying upon God's Spirit, would be levelled to a plain.

"Moreover the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying, The hands of Zerubbabel have laid the foundation of this house; his hands shall also finish it; and thou shalt know that Jehovah of hosts hath sent me unto you." This promise was fulfilled about four years later (Ezra 6 : 14, 15).

The Village Minister

Counselling the sad and weak;
Hastening words of cheer to speak
To the lowly and the least;
Smiling at a wedding feast;
Helping blind, relentless youth
Into patience, vision and truth.
Teaching downcast hearts to hope;
Clasping feeble hands that grope
When the earth scenes fade, and dim
Eyes look anxiously at him.
Kind, familiarized with death—
As wert Thou of Nazareth.
Now a little child to christen,
Now a patient hour to listen
To a burdened father's woes,
Up and down the street he goes,
Sharing every smile and tear,
Counting not his own life dear.
Walk beside him all the days
In our small town's devious ways;
Rest him, Lord, with birds and bees,
And the whispering of the trees.
He whose days are one long giving—
Keep in him the joy of living.

The Whopper

(It is claimed that experimental applications of light and heat have caused fish to develop twenty-five times faster than in natural conditions.)

James, when your angling efforts fail,
No shamefaced mien of yours announces
A catch that fails to tip the scale
At more than half-a-dozen ounces.
You do not seem the least put out,
You waste no time in useless sighing.
Nor rail at Fate, nor even doubt
Whether the worm was really trying.

Using a better salve than this,
And more traditionally proper,
You tell of the narrow miss
You had, of pulling out a whopper;
And we, impressed by what you say,
Forbear to combat your contentions
In which "the one that got away"
Attains phenomenal dimensions.

That was indeed a fish of worth —
We are not rude enough to doubt it;
But, since it gains in weight and girth
Each time you tell us all about it,
We sometimes feel (and are we right?)
A wonder whether your narrations
Have been exposed to heat and light
Experimental applications.

MULDOON'S DEATH DUE TO NATURAL CAUSES

Just two hours to the minute after the coroner's jury retired to consider a mass of evidence heard during the past three days at the inquest into the death of William C. Muldoon, a verdict was returned finding his death due to natural causes coupled with an accidental injury to his head.

With the finding of the jury, the mysterious death of the Smiths Falls engineer on the evening of August 31 last, which has been the cause of a sweeping investigation by local and provincial police, has been cleared up. It is not the end of the case, however, as four of the star witnesses are to appear in court at Perth on Monday to face perjury charges that have been pending against them since the first inquest.

Jury's Verdict

The verdict of the jury was as follows: "We find that William Muldoon came to his death by reason of his physical condition coupled with an injury to his forehead by accidental means and by no external violence by any person or persons and that death occurred in his car at or near the property occupied by James Beckett at No. 29 Gladstone avenue in the town of Smiths Falls in the county of Lanark at or about 11.30 on Saturday night, August 31, 1935."

1936 MONTREAL MOTOR SHOW

The year 1935 has been a year of great prosperity for the automobile industry and sales and production have reached the high level of the record years 1928, 1929 and 1930. The great industry therefore looks at 1936 with much optimism. In order to surpass the records established this year, all manufacturers have done wonders in creating cars which will eclipse in all details the present models. For the first time in five years each company is assured of a busy year with return of prosperity in all spheres, and for once, economy has not been the guiding rule of all the great engineers.

That is why the 1936 motor cars, of which over a hundred models will be presented to the public starting next Saturday at the Montreal Motor Show, in the Sun Life Building, are creations of untold splendor. Never has the public had an occasion of seeing such a magnificent gathering of luxurious bodies and highly perfected motors, shown amidst an extravaganza of floral and luminous decorations never witnessed by the public in the past. Some of the new motor cars will be submerged amidst a miniature park of natural flowers of multiple colors and green foliage. Others will be literally under fantastic arabesques constructed of neon lights and phosphorescent tubes. This will be real fairy fantasy resembling the extraordinary displays seen only at the great Expositions in Paris, Chicago and San Francisco.

It is impossible to describe in a few lines the new things that will be illustrated in the coming Motor Show Let it suffice to mention that in some automobiles the frame has been altogether done away with; that in others the ventilation comes from below the seats, that some cars [illegible] been so perfected they will never back up if forced to stop by traffic regulations while climbing a hill; that some automobiles have four forward speeds, the last of which runs automatically going into operation when road conditions permit. We could continue without end if we tried to enumerate all points new and sensational.

For the first time in the history of the automobile industry the Motor Show will be held in the Fall. This decision of the manufacturers aims at levelling employment to keep their employees at work during a longer period of the year while in the past they were forced into idleness during Summer and Fall. But this change has another benefit. It will enable thousands of citizens who live outside of Montreal to come to this great Exposition to be held in the Sun Life Building, Saturday next, November 23rd, until the following Saturday, November 30th. (The Show will be closed all day Sunday, November 24th.)

All roads of the Province will be open to traffic at this time of the year making it easy to visit Montreal whereas this was impossible when the Show was held in January. For this reason, the Provincial Transport Company offer the lowest rates ever registered by them to those who will travel by bus to the Metropolis between Friday, November 22nd and Sunday, December 1st. The railways also offer special excursion rates to those who prefer to travel by train.

Motorists will be able to drive without difficulty to Montreal while those who have no automobiles, or prefer not to use them, may benefit by the special reduced tariffs on motor busses and trains.

There are many who will take this occasion to travel to Montreal to the Motor Show and at the same time to visit their relatives and friends. A number will grasp this extraordinary opportunity to do their Christmas shopping while preholiday sales are going on and magnificent displays are still being shown in the stores. This is why the transport companies and the hotels state thousands of reservations have been made in advance, the flow of visitors will be greater in Montreal during the week of November 23rd to 30th than at any other time this year for the Montreal Motor Show attracts people from all parts of the Province of Quebec, the Maritime Provinces, Eastern Ontario and the New England States.

Visitors to the Montreal Motor Show should not forget the contest prepared by the Montreal Automobile Trade Association Limited. The details of this contest will be given in special newspaper advertisements, or may be secured at the Motor Show. The winner of this contest may choose a 1936 model of Chevrolet. Dodge or Ford, and other winners will share $300.00 in cash prizes.

TO CUT DOWN CAR SPEED

When automobile radios first appeared, people were afraid they would distract the attention of drivers from the traffic and thus increase the number of accidents. Unquestionably they do tend to distract the drivers' attention; but this may not be all to the bad. When a driver half-consciously listening to the radio, he is less impatient with the traffic he has to get through.

The testimony of the average driver with a radio-equipped car is that listening-in while on the road reduces his speed about 10 miles an hour. And though speed alone may not be the primary cause of highway accidents, it certainly aggravates their severity. —Business Week.

THE BEST PLACE

Judge Millar of Hull is to be commended for the stern sentence of five years in the penitetiary imposed on a man caught robbing poor-boxes in a church. That offence was despicable enough, but the crime was aggravated by the fact that the thief drew a loaded revolver and sought to shoot himself out of capture. Prison is the best place for thugs.

"LAST POST" FUNERALS

——At the annual meeting of those administering the "Last Post Fund" of Canada, the Secretary recorded the year 608 funerals had been arranged for ex-service men, the largest figures thus far recorded within any single 12 months. Without much doubt the reaction from war strain and wounds is claiming more and more each year as they get older and the fact is one which again emphasizes the duty of giving these heroes every possible consideraion while they still remain.

RUSSIA'S GOLD

Russia went in for gold production in a big way. Russia surpasses now both Canada and the United States. By 1937 she intends to run ahead of South Africa and become the world's largest producer. The gold Russia has on hand today is exceeded only by the holdings of France and the United States. Russia, with its aid, is becoming a great power again.

AN EXAMPLE

MODERATION

Following extensive investigations, medicos have reported to the American College of Surgeons that smoking before breakfast is one of the surest ways of causing stomach ulcers. Individuals are warned to change their habits. While excessive use of tobacco on an empty stomach between meals is pointed to as dangerous, the period before breakfast is singled out as the most harmful.

For the confirmed addict of Milady Nicotine, a great deal of will power will be necessary to cut down, yet the advice of physicians should not go unheeded. The value of prevention is being preached more and more, though many of us are prone to disregard it as long as our health appears sound.

Moderation in all things is still a splendid motto to apply to everyday life. —Windsor Star.

A HAPPY THOUGHT

The appointment of John Buchan now Lord Tweedsmuir, as Governor General of Canada was a happy thought, and it may be regarded as a compliment to the people of this Dominion. We have had some men of high mental calibre at Rideau Hall, and several of literary ability, but none of such outstanding achievement in literature as John Buchan.

Canadians—some of them at least—believe we have a distinctive literature in this country, and that the Canadian author can hold his own with any beyond our borders. With the addition of Lord Tweedsmuir to the membership of Canadian Authors Association there should surely be no doubt on that point.

—Stratford Beacon-Herald

CARELESSNESS !

In new Brunswick a hunter thought he saw a bear moving in the brush, fired, killed his lifelong neighbour. In Quebec a hunter shot and killed a member of his party, thinking he was firing at a deer. Carelessness every year takes a fearful toll of life during the hunting season, just as carelessness costs multitudes of lives on the highways. Ottawa Journal

SKOODAWABSKOOKSIS

An unusual love poem has been published in New Brunsfick, where there are many quaint names. Professor de Mille decided to introduce some of the unusual names into a poem, two verses of which run as follows:

"Sweet maiden of Passamaquoddy,
Shall we seek for communion of souls,
Where the deep Mississippi meanders,
Or the distant Saskatchewan rolls?

"Ah, no! in New Brunswick we'll find it—
A sweetly sequestered nook—
Where the sweet gliding Skoodawabskooksis
Unites with the Skoodawabskook."

THE BIBLE

It is hard to believe all that pessimists say about this old world when daily sessions in London recently commenorating Bible Week were attended by thousands of people, when 15,000 Bostonians were present at a similar gathering in that city, when Bible sales in even Prussia have doubled within the past four years and when the Scriptures remain, generally speaking, the world's best seller.

—Brockville Recorder.

TEACHERS STAY LONGER

——For some years the average tenure of teachers has been lengthening in all parts of Canada. In the last five or six years especially, they have been moving less from school to school, as well as staying longer in the profession.

Continuance of the trend toward the more frequent choice of teaching as a life-time occupation is, however, endangered at the present time, by disorganization of the salary situation in some areas, especially in the rural parts of some provinces.

Manitoba teachers of 1935 have been at their job nearly nine years on the average, or tw' e as long as those of the earlier nineteen-twenties. Nearly one-fifth have done some teaching outside their own province, usually just a year or two, or long enough to see how things are done in another province, or perhaps in other parts of the Empire.

In the schools where they are at present engaged each teacher has spent 4¼ years on the average, or about half of her total time teaching. This is about the length of time that some of the churches normally choose to leave their ministers in one location Five years ago the teachers averaged only 2 3-4 years in one location.

—Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

THE EMPIRE

DESIGN FOR PROSPERITY

It is just five years since Australia, one of the first countries to be caught in the hurricane of depression, called in Sir Otto Niemeyer, of the Bank of England, to advise her as to the way to escape from the financial chaos which threatened to engulf her. Sir Otto propsed a series of drastic economies in expenditure, both Federal and State, which were only accepted after a violent political conflict involving the secession of Mr. Lyons, the then Labour Treasurer, to head a coalition of the Opposition parties. The sacrifices were heavy, but they were borne cheerfully by the Australian people and have been abundantly justified by their results. —London Morning Post

THE CAMPAIGN FOR TEA

The occasional announcement of the tea propaganda authorities outlining a publicity campaign to convert to tea drinking the 120 millions in the U.S.A. or, as in the case of the latest news, the 300 millions of India, always read to a layman a little like one of Grimm's fairy tales. Tackling the millions of varied consumers in the U.S.A. seemed a gigantic enough task, but this latest one of converting the Indian peasant to the habit of drinking his own tea is even more stupendous in its magnitude. In the case of America the propagandists were, and, incidentally, still are, dealing with people for the most part educated or at least capable of reading the widespread advertisements in the American papers . . . But when the propaganda organization turned its attention to India, as it did in the early months of this year, it found a completely different state of affairs. The newspaper-reading public of India, at a very liberal estimate, totals only 50 millions in a population of 300 millions. Actually the circulation of the leading newspapers used by the Propaganda Board totalled only a little over 10 million copies, but allowing each one to an average family of five, the grand total of 50 million readers was reached.

Angora Rabbits Produce Wool For Children's Garments

Sixty-five fluffy Angora rabbits are made to produce the equivalent of 260 soft wool sweaters for children a year in an unusual home business operated by Mrs. Netta Creque, of Hayward, Cal.

Mrs. Creque raises the rabbits in a backyard pen, shears them herself for their wool, spins it into yarn and knits the garments. Each animal produces four ounces of wool every three months, enough to make one child's sweater

Mrs. Creque shears each rabbit carefully with a pair of scissors and uses an old-fashioned spinning wheel to produce the yarn from the clippings.

Besides being soft, light and comfortable, the garments wear well and do not shrink, Mrs. Creque claims. She has made both a hobby and a business of the "factory," and the rabbits themselves don't seem to mind providing the wool.

A Lesson

From the Halifax Chronicle we take a news story which, we think, deserves to be noticed. It is the story of a 12-year-old boy, Ronald Dornadic evidently the son of immigrant parents, who appeared in a Sydney, N.S., court the other day as a witness for the Crown. Called to the stand to be sworn in, the youth was first questioned by Mr. Justice Carroll concerning his understanding the meaning of an oath. The dialogue between them was:

Judge: "On coming into this court what are you supposed to do, tell the truth or tell lies?"

Youth: "The truth, sir."

Judge: "Why the truth?"

Youth: "This is a court and I have to tell the truth."

Judge: "Do you know what this is," passing the Bible.

Youth: "Yes, sir, that's a Bible."

Judge: "What do you do when you don't tell the truth?"

Youth: "I commit a sin."

Judge: "What is a sin?"

Youth: "A sin is an offense against God."

Judge: 'Who is God?"

Youth: "God is the creator of Heaven and earth."

Twelve-year-old Ronald Dornadic went on to give his testimony in a candid, straightforward manner, and as he left the stand Mr. Justice Carroll said to him:

"I must congratulate you, young man, on the very efficient manner in which you have conducted yourself in this court, and I must congratulate your parents for the sound Christian doctrine they have taught you."

The congratulations were merited. For this boy with a foreign name had given the court and all of us a lesson not merely in the sacredness of an oath, but in truth for its own sake, for the sake of what falsity to it involves. Not a home in all this broad land but could take to heart profitably what was back of that young man's understanding.

THE BESSBOROUGHS

Mr. Bennett, one of the chief architects of the Ottawa Trade Agreement, has paid glowing tribute to Lord Bessborough's value in counsel. Nor will French Canada soon forget its delight in having for the first time in its history a French chatelaine at Rideau Hall. Lady Bessborough charmed all hearts, and Canada is especially proud of the fact that the son born to their Excellencies in August, 1931, was christened "George St. Lawrence" in honour of his Royal godfather and of the river on the shores of which he was born.

The Modern Blacksmith

The smith is not the mighty man he was in Longfellow's day, but in the mass he is but a shadow of his former self. The automobile has almost driven the horse off the streets in the big cities at any rate, and the profession of blacksmith used to be synonymous with horses. Probably no trades in the world have lost so much to march of time as that of the blacksmith and the harness maker.

The trained blacksmith, however is something more than a mere shoer of horses. He can fashion ornamental iron gates, fireplaces, door fittings, grilles and other things. Fancy ironwork has always been a feature of the English blacksmith's education under a seven years' apprenticeship system, and a great deal has been done in recent years to put this branch of art before the public. Recently the Rural Community Council of Essex prevented the shutting down of several forges by sending expert workers to instruct the local smiths in the finer aspect of blacksmithing. Nearly every English gentleman's home is approached by gates, and there has been a great revival of decorative gatework of much delicacy and beauty.

Devonshire is still the home of many picturesque smithys with thatched roofs, and their presence in a village of thatched houses is often only announced to the visitor by the musical rhythm of hammer upon anvil. Recently a rural Devonshire blacksmith was invited to fashion a highly ornate grille for the Prince of Wales.

But all smiths do not sit in their forges and await the farmer and his horses. Some of them have become itinerants, and carrying their equipment on a trailer they motor around the farms and shoe horses, repair plows and other implements in the farmyard. If they are lucky they may be able to find a spreading chestnut tree under which to do the job.

Coughing In Church

Coughing restlessness in church do not bother Stratford preachers, and they scorned the suggestion by a reporter that their congregation might be given a spell of relief in the middle of the sermon, in order to "clear their throats and change their position" writes the Stratford Beacon-Herald in this editorial. A cough during a sermon may be due to a cold, but it may also imply boredom, disagreement with the speaker, or even a bad conscience. Most preachersers can readily distinguish between a throatal and a temperamental affection. As for changing one's position in church, this can be done quite naturally, without stopping the sermon. It can be done in such a way as to indicate impatience, but it may also indicate a growing interest in the discourse. In the old days, when preachers would illustrate their secondlys and thirdlys with pointed stories, the entire congregation would change over their legs and show signs of relaxation and sudden interest.

A few coughs during a sermon should not disturb the average preacher, but an explosive sneeze might. No preacher likes to feel that his efforts can be "sneezed at." As for restlessness this does not annoy the man in the pulpit so much as the sight of members of his congregation nodding or soundly asleep under his homiletical admonitions. The introduction of an interval in the middle of the sermon might serve the purpose of waking these sleepers, but we are afraid they would merely use it as an opportunity to turn over, so to speak.

Canadian Apples First at Cardiff

British Columbia Delicious Takes Highest Award in Dessert Class

Ottawa—For the first time since 1929 a Canadian won the highest award in the dessert apple class at the 15th Imperial fruit show at Cardiff, Wales, returning to the Dominion what is considered the blue ribbon of the world's greatest fruit exhibition.

The first prize cabled advices said, went to James Lowe of Oyama, B.C., whose exhibit of Delicious won him the show's major honor and $200 in cash.

For the first few years after inauguration of the Imperial fruit show, which brings entries from all parts of the British Commonwealth, Canadians carried away most of the leading awards. Since 1929, however, British growers have won the most coveted prizes in the open classes, beating Canadians by narrow margins.

Delicious, originally discovered in Iowa in 1881, is described as mild, acid, aromatic, with a red stripe, almost red skin and creamy, juicy, firm flesh. It is said to be good for dessert but only a fair cooking apple.

Water Subdues Burning Oil

A Spray Developed in England To Extinguish Tank Blazes

No one in his right senses would pour water on burning oil. Yet at the recent annual meeting of the National Fire Protection Association A. K. Brown advocated just that procedure. This does not mean that an oil fire can be put out just by throwing pailfuls of water on it, but it does mean that automatic sprinklers with properly designed nozzles can spray water on burning oil and extinguish flames.

The new method of coping with fires of liquids comes from England. There it was developed with such great success by a Manchester firm that American sprinkler manufacturers and fire underwriters could no longer ignore it. When it is more widely introduced carbon dioxide, carbon tetrachloride, foam and chemicals may be relegated to positions of minor importance.

Putting out an oil fire with water becomes a safe and sane proceeding when the nature of the blaze is considered. Oil and other inflammable and combustible liquids do not burn as such. It is the vapor given off that burns. Moreover this vapor must be mixed with oxygen and the liquid must give off vapor steadily.

Once started, the fire heats up the oil, but the vaporiatzion thus brought about soon reaches a maximum. Cutting off the oxygen to smother flames is one way of extinguishing an oil fire. Cooling the oil below the point at which vapors are given off and ignite is another.

The System Employed

In the English system the spray is strong enough to reach the surface of the oil. Either a foam or an emulsion of oil and water is thus formed. If the drops of water are too small, a mist is produced which is easily dissipated without doing much good. But if the drops are just big and heavy and powerful enough to strike the oil and mix with it at the surface, fires are sure to be put out. The principle is applied in some fifty installations in England, Ireland, France, Germany and South America. There is one installation in America—an asphalt-saturating tank near Bridgeport, Conn.

Since everything depends on the spray, the nozzle is important. Carefully designed spiral passages produce a moderately fine spray in the practice to distribute spray nozzles shape of a cone. It is the usual over the liquid to be protected at a height that varies from five to twelve feet. For extinguishing small fires a special portable nozzle has been designed to be attached to an ordinary hose strong enough to withstand a pressure of 100 pounds and to deliver sixty gallons a minute.

The first effect of the water spray is to increase the laze. But the surface of the liquid having been extinguished with the formation of a cloud of vapor, the flames retreat further and further from the tank and finally die out. Look at the oil when all is over and you see a layer of foam—apparently a collection of minute bubbles of oil in which air and water are imprisoned.

Milk a Food

Nourishing Fluid Quickly Absorbed By System

A good many people even today still cling to the old idea that milk being a fluid cannot be a food or a source of nourishment, says a writer in New Health Magazine. They regard milk as only for infants. No doubt the old-fashioned term of reproach, "milksop," is based on this notion. But though natural enough, all this is bad physiology. For to begin with, all food, however so[illegible] must be in the first instance be reduced to the state of solution in order to be absorbed and unless and until it is absorbed, it is not a food. Everything we eat, even the most solid—hard-boiled eggs, ham, biscuits, hard cheese—are all brought down to a state of more or less perfect fluidity before they are digested and then pass into the blood.

Take sugar for instance; unless it is dissolved in water or tea and so become perfectly invisible in its solution it cannot act as the energy-giving food for which we know it to be. But sugar dissolved in water is more of a fluid than is milk. Thus, with milk because some of its constitutents are in invisible solution, they are none the less energy-giving foods. Is not the solid cheese derived from milk by clotting, but the cheese is no more nourishing than was its non-solid precursor. The fact that a nourishing substance is in solution does not render it any the less nourishing.

Of the 1,750,000 childlren of British men killed or disabled in the Great War, and who came under the charge of the Ministry of Pensions, there are now fewer than 20,000. Altogether about £136,000,000 has been spent on them.

Nothing Was Effective — Until She Tried Kruschen

Constipation is an evil at any time. When it follows upon an operation, it is a condition that simply must be remedied. This woman tried various remedies, but found relief only when she took a regular daily dose of Kruschen Salts. She tells of her experience in the following letter:—

"I have used Kruschen Salts for about 10 years every morning without fail. I had an operation 10 years ago (abdominal), and found when getting over it that I should have to take aperients, as constipation developed. I took various medicines and pills, which somehow did not do much good.

"Finally, I tried Kruschen Salts, and found it very satisfactory, and have carried on with it ever since. My health is much better since I started using it."—(Mrs..) E. T.

Kruschen is the surest, safest, and most sensible way to keep your inside regular in its most important daily duty. You will find that your system never becomes hardened, but always submits to Kruschen's gentle and friendly power of persuasion.

Butter Shortage Due To Lack of Milkmaids

BERIN,—Too many "frauliens are sitting behind typewriters and too few behind glistening milk pails," the newspaper Tageblatt said in a discussion of Germany's butter shortage.

The shortage, the article said, is due in large extent to a "milk-maid shortage". Too few persons in Germany know how to milk cows said the writer in suggesting that more city girls be sent to the country.

Whether the "Pain" Remedy You Use is SAFE?

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about "ASPIRIN."

He will tell you that before the discovery of "Aspirin" most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief.

Scientists rate "Aspirin" among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this.

110 YEARS OF AGE

Britain's Oldest Woman Still Enjoys Her Tea

Believed to be the oldest woman in Britain, Mrs Caroline Merriott celebrated her 110th birthday in Mayday Hospital, Croydon, by being hostess at a tea-party.

Arrayed in her best clothes, and with a new white bonnet, she cut a birthday cake that had been specially made for the occasion, and entertained some of her friends

In spite of her age, Mrs. Merriott is still an active woman mentally, and her voice is surprisingly strong. She eats three meals a day, and drinks several pints of tea with great enjoyment.

When she was born she was so small that for a week after her birth they could not put any clothes on her. She loves to recall her father's tale of how one of her uncles bet £100 that they could put her in a quart jug.

"They tried," she gleefully said, "and they got me in."

Born at Tooting Corner, ten years after Waterloo, Mrs. Merriott remembers the Crimean War, the Corn Law riots, and the Coronation of Queen Victoria. She has been married twice, and her second husband died in 1906.

She worked in a laundry until she was 85.

Hunting Season To Be Best Known In Years

Reports received from various agents of the Canadian National Railways, at widely different sections of Northern Ontario and Quebec indicate that the Indians were right when they declared that big game and game birds were unusually plentiful this season. Throughout the North Country both moose and deer have been seen in abundance and in some sections, where the antlered king of the woods had been scarce for years, he appears to have returned to his old haunts. Deer is also stated to be seen in gratifying numbers on forest lands which previously had been burned over. They are feeding upon the grasses and second growth which are now growing in profusion.

In the Maritimes game is also reported plentiful, with a large number of moose available. It is interesting to note that the first deer to fall to the hunter's rifle in Restigouche County, New Brunswick, was one of the white species which are very rare in those parts. Known as Albino deer, very few have ever been taken in New Brunswick. The hunter who shot the white deer is going to have the head mounted.

MOTORISTS — READ!

Autumn is a season when travelling is keen, trees assume their colorful autumn dress; even nature seems flirtatious, as though to make herself sadly missed during the long winter months. Autumn, however, is a season which offers several dangers, when rains have soaked the highways, or early frosts have covered the surface of our roads with a thin coating of ice.

With the arrival of autumn, it is fitting to call motorists' attention to the fact that if they should be prudent and careful at all times, they should exercise even more caution during the period when the temperature may be an additional source of danger.

The few pointers to safety given below, which are borrowed from the Office National du Tourismne de France, do not particularly apply to autumn activities, but are so general that motorists can put them in practice at all times:

Motorists, be careful; human lives depend on your prudence. Remember that the highway belongs to everybody, and not to you alone, and that it is not a race-track.

Motorists, travel quietly at night. Do not arouse everybody in villages by repeated tooting of your horn or an open muffler. There may be women, children, aged persons, those who are sick, who need rest and quiet. Pass through villages quietly.

Don't imagine that you will amaze your passengers or passers-by by speed alone. They will be more appreciative of your safety and prudence.

Being prudent does not mean that you have to dawdle along the road. It is the grouping of a thousand and one minor matters, of sureness of the eye, rapid thought, adroit handling of the wheel, of anticipating what others may do that may be the cause of your having an accident.

It is in knowing when to slow down, and of sounding a warning before you reach a crossing, not at crossings themselves. It is stopping at level crossings—even if they are protected—before crossing over them. It is never failing to be master of your vehicle at all times, and of turning only when you are sure of being able to do this in perfect safety for all concerned.

Finally, it means observance of all precaution in turning, at the crests of hills, and when the road is slippery.

Being prudent means that you will prolong the life of your car, your own and those of others.

While travelling, never be a slave to a time-table. Tell yourself you are touring, not indulging in a race against Time. Look at the countryside through which you travel, and admire Nature's handiwork, stretched before your eyes. Retain in your mind memories of the picturesque sites which most impressed you. Forget about your business once in a while, play truant; you may discover, at the end of a road which others have passed by, unsuspected marvels.

HARRINGTON—SMITH

On Wednesday November 20th, at 10 a.m., a very pretty wedding was solemnized in the United Church, Morrisburg, when Gladys Mary Smith, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith, town, became the bride of Edward John Harrington, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Harrington, Cronwall. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Douglas Smith, B.A., B.D.

Given in marriage by her father, the young bride was becomingly attired in a woollen suit of navy blue trimmed with fur, a cream satin blouse, small metallic hat, brocaded slippers and accessories to match. She wore a corsage of roses and fern. Miss Olive Weagant and Mr. Harry Smith, brother of the bride, were witnesses.

Following the ceremony, the wedding party were entertained at the home of the bride, and immedately afterward, Mr. and Mrs. Harrington left to spend a short honeymoon in Monteal. On their return they will take up residence in Cornwall.

WILLIAMSBURG INSTITUTE ENTERTAIN MATILDA

The Williamsburg Women's Institute held the regular meeting in the clinic building on Thursday, November 7th. Mrs. Locke had the building decorated for the occasion with flags bunting and Flanders poppies. This meeting took the form of an Armistice programme and "O Canada" and the National Anthem were sung in unison.

The clinic looked very fine, and in the centre was a long table centred with a large vase of chrysanthemums. At each end were serving trays where Mrs. Luther Barclay and Mrs. M. O. Trickey poured the coffee. Small flags were also in evidence at each corner of the table.

The meeting opened with the sing ing of the Ode, and the roll call, a verse from the Bible on peace," was well responded to. The business par of the meeting was held, and Rev. Sydney B. Holmes gave a very fine address on "Armistice Day, and Why We Celebrate It." Mr. Holmes is a talented speaker and being himself a soldier he was well fitted to deal with his subject. After the address there was a short musical programme in charge of Mrs. Axworthy. Mrs. Hugh Thompson was the pianist. Community singing was in order and this was most heartily rendered by all. Mrs. Duggan and Mrs. Axworthy gave a fine duet, "Sweet and Low," and when encored sang "Loch Lomond." Mrs. Prosser sang very beautifully "Just Keep on Dreaming." The words of this song were written by Mrs. Alex. McGruer, Sr., and the music by G. H. Arnel Johnstone. This song is most popular and it is very beautiful. Mrs. Prosser, who is a talented singer, was heartily encored.

A vote of thanks to all who had taken part in the programme and to Mr. Holmes for his splendid address.

The singing of the National Anthem brought to a close a most successful meeting.

There were 76 present at this gathering. Matilda has 62 members which is a wonderful showing, while Williamsburg comprised the balance.

Mrs. McGruer, Sr., Mrs. Axworthy Mrs. Locke and Mrs. Whitteker were in charge of the decorating. The wheelchair boys are always on hand and helped in all the lifting and carrying of chairs and the Women's Institute are most grateful to the boys for their assistance.

The lunch served by the ladies was a special affair and all did their parts in providing.

To Mrs. Locke, as hostess is due the credit for such a wonderful meeting.

MISSIONARY TO LECTURE IN UNITED CHURCH

Next Wednesday evening at 7.30 o'clock in the United Church, Rev. S.R. Collins will give a lecture on his work as a misionary in Angola, Africa.

Mr. Collins is home on furlough, after spending several years in Camundongo, one of the mission stations of the United Church of Canada. He is giving two weeks time to the Dundas-Grenville Presbytery, and is visiting as many of the churches as possible.

The eyes of the world are turned on Africa in these days. This will be a splendid opportunity for the residents of Morrisburg to hear for themselves one who is capable of interpreting to us the deep needs of that great continent, with its millions of people. He is bringing with him lantern slides of his work, and these will help us to visualize the conditions that exist in Africa.

The lecture will be held in the church, and everyone is invited to avail themselves of the oportunity of hearing this missionary.

IROQUOIS UNITED CHURCH HOLD ANNUAL SUPPER

The Iroquois United Church put on their annual fall supper and program last Wednesday, Nov. 13th, which proved to be a great success from every angle. The finances and attendance were all that could be desired.

The program deserves special mention. All were delighted with the quality of the numbers that were given. The audience were favoured in having with them Mr. Price, noted Welsh tenor singer of Montreal, at present a patient at Dr. Locke's. His numbers were greatly appreciated.

The Rev. Douglas Smith, of Morrisburg, read some of Henry Drummond's works in a most interesting and fascinating manner, quite distinct from any other reader, and fastened the attention of his audience.

The rest of the program was given entirely by Mr. Epplett, principal of Morrisburg, Collegiate, Mrs. Epplett and family, assisted by Mrs. Pitt of Iroquois, who is the mother of Mrs. Epplett.

Mr. Epplett has a really accomplished orchestra right in his own family that will do them credit anywhere. Mr. Epplett plays the clarionette, Mrs. Epplett the piano, Billy Coons the coronet, while Gilbert and Herbert Coons play the violin and drums. The rendering of their numbers was very fine and well balanced, besides being well chosen for the occasion. The audience was delighted, and showed their appreciation from time to time.

Mrs. Epplett also sang in company with her mother, Mrs. Pitt, in a delightful manner, for both of them are endowed with rich voices that are always heard with delight.

Mr. and Mrs. Epplett have every cause to be proud of their family with such exceptional talents.

The church officials appreciate the very fine type of music that was rendered by them, and especially the fine willing spirit in which it was given.

All agreed that it was altogether one of the most enjoyable and appreciative programs that has been given for a long time, and will look forward to an early retun.
