CHARLES F. WHITTEKER

The Township of Williamsburg lost one of its most highly respected and prominent citizens on Friday October 12th, 1928, when Charles F. Whitteker passed away at his home at the age of sixty-seven years and two days.

The late Mr. Whitteker had been in failing health for some time, but his end came as a great shock to his host of friends. Deceased had been a lifelong resident except some years, while acting as assistant to the Superintendant of Canals. He had always taken a very active interest in church and municipal affairs, and at the time of his death was a member of the church council of the Lutheran church at Williamsburg. He had served as a member of the Municipal Council and Counties Council for some years. He had also taken a great interest in the formation of and conduct of Williamsburg Lodge No. 480, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, and was also a last District Deputy Grand Master of the Order.

On November 1st, 1882, he was married to Deborah Whitteker, who, with four sons and three daughters survives: Wm. R., Rowena, Rev Hugh, Bridgewater, N. S., Robert and Ward at home; Mrs. Lyle Casselman, Mrs. Clifford Casselman, Williamsburg, and Phyllis, Montreal, also one brother, Dr. W. C. Whitteker, Vancouver, B. C., and one sister, Mrs (Dr.) H. B. Ford, Tompkins, Sask.

In his home life deceased was revered and loved for his kindly, sympathetic spirit, his frank manner, and spirit of helpfulness.

The funeral service was held in the Lutheran church, Williamsburg, and was conducted by his pastor, Rev. C. R. Cronmiller, the text being taken from 2nd Timothy, 4th Chap., 7th and 8th verses.

Williamsburg Lodge A. F. and A. M. had charge of the funeral. The pall bearers were all Past District Deputy Grand Masters, namely, Right Wor. J. C. McFarlane, of Cornwall; Right Wor. Glenn A. Shaver, Lunenburg; Right Wor. Frank Shaver, Aultsville; Right Wor. Aaron Sweet, Winchester; Right Wor. O. D. Casselman, Chesterville; Right Wor. W. C. Davy, Morrisburg.

THOMAS F. KING

A prolonged indisposition has at last proved fatal to one of the earliest pioneers of the Porcupine camp, in the person of Thomas F. King, who passed away at St. Mary's Hospital, Timmins, on the morning of October 13th. The deceased had been suffering from heart trouble for a good number of years, and lately had been an inmate of the Toronto General Hospital for some time. His stay in Toronto appeared to have improved his condition considerably, and he returned to Timmins, only to fall ill again about two weeks ago. He was removed to the hospital and slowly sank, until the death occurred today. Born in Morrisburg, Mr. King was one of the early ones who settled in McDougall Chutes, now known as Matheson, in 1908, and later moved to Porcupine in 1910, when the rush commenced into this section. Arriving in Porcupine, he opened a billiard room and subsequently moved the building to Timmins and had it erected on Pine Street South, where it now stands. He took an active interest in the affairs of the town, and served for two terms on the Town Council. He was also President of the Board of Trade for one year, and had always been an energetic member of this important body. His wife died nine years ago, at the birth of the only child Frank. The only living relative, apart from the son, is a married sister, Mrs. William Sutherland, of Tommins. The body was shipped to Morrisburg on Monday for interment, J. T. Easton having charge of the arrangements.

ELBURN EMERSON BARKLEY

On Saturday afternoon the people of Dunbar and vicinity were shocked and saddened by the fatal accident which occurred on the farm of Ernest Shaver, and which resulted in the death of Elburn Emerson Barkley, aged 14 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chris. J. Barkley.

The young man left his home in the morning in the best of spirits, to lend a helping hand in the silo-filling, and was anxious to assist where he could, as was shown in the act which resulted in his death. He left his loaded wagon to help Mr. Heveran unload his, then all, to quickly trying to clear the clogged pipes for Mr. Dillabough. Not being an experienced hand, he came in contact with the knives. The machine burst and suddenly and sadly the young life had passed away, before kind hands and doctor's care could be given.

The funeral was held at the Lutheran Church, services conducted by the Rev. Cronmiller. A very impressive address was delivered, the text chosen from Deut. 34th chapter, part of the seventh verse. The choir furnished appropriate music. Many floral tributes were received, expressive of sympathy.

Elburn was of a child-like, playful nature, always willing to do a favor, and will be greatly missed in the community from which he has been called. Much sympathy has been expressed, and is extended to the bereaved ones in their sad loss.

Besides his father and mother, he leaves four brothers, Cecil, Percy, Ernie and Ralph, and one sister Dena.

ROBBERY UNDER ARMS ATTEMPTED AT DAILY CAFE

(Chesterville Record)

A near tragedy was enacted in Chesterville Tuesday night about 11 o'clock when marauders attempting to enter Henry Fong's Chinese restaurant from the rear in the Kearns Block, fired a shot from a shot gun from close range which narrowly missed Fong and bored a large hole in the wood work of the kitchen. The shot was heard by several on the street and on learning what had taken place the block bounded by Main, King and Queen streets was immediately surrounded and an attempt made to round up the guilty party.

Frank Merkley, Jack Elliott and Charlie Morrell, standing on Main street opposite Flynns hotel, heard the shot and thinking some one had been shot started south when they saw two men emerge from between the buildings and run across the bridge. These are believed to be the ones wanted.

At the time of the attempted hold-up Fong was standing near the sink in his kitchen peeling potatoes when he heard a noise as if some one was coming in at the back door. He opened the inside door and passed out the screen door, holding it open while he warned the party to get away. He was told to stop his noise and the shot was fired, likely from about a .20 guage sawed-off shot gun, judging from the unburned wad which was picked up later. The shot was low passing through the door way and entering the wood work of the sink about nine inches from the floor, going through the other side about six inches above the floor. When the holes were lined up it showed that whoever fired the shot must have stood inside the open shed about six feet from where Fong stood with the door open. An electric light bulb had been removed from its socket in the shed to prevent Fong from getting a view of the intruder as he would switch the light on before opening the door.

AWARDED $1875 AND COSTS

At the Supreme Court of Canada, at Ottawa, the case of Hiram and Bernice Shaver, formerly of Winchester, and Elizabeth Cameron, of Ottawa, was tried. The case arose out of a collision that occurred last spring at the corner, a mile west of Winchester, when Miss Cameron, who was coming from Ottawa, in making the turn went too near the ditch at the south side. In order to save an upset, she turned sharply to the left and came in collision with a car Mr. Shaver was driving. He had his wife and children with him, and they were all thrown into the ditch, and somewhat cut and bruised. After hearing all the evidence the plaintiffs were awarded $1875 and costs.

The amount of damages was made up as follows: Mr. Shaver, $500; Mrs. Shaver, $800; the child, $200; $375 was allowed for medical and surgical expenses—Winchester Press

SUNDAY'S AUTO MISHAPS

Two very serious automobile accidents happened in this district last Sunday afternoon when the traffic on all roads was particularly heavy.

On highway No. 2, a short distance west of Woodlands, a traffic officer on a motor cycle proceeding west behind a car attempted to pass and was so blinded by the sun that he could not see well and pitched into a car coming from the West. His cycle was damaged considerably and the officer seriously cut and bruised about the legs. He was taken to a Cornwall hospital.

About half past four on Highway No. 31, about three miles south of Williamsburg, Clinton Beckstead, young son of Allan Beckstead, was the innocent cause of a serious head-on collision when two cars were badly smashed and four people more or less injured.

Grant Casselman, with his wife and child in a Pontiac, were going south, as young Beckstead appeared on a bicycle directly in his path as a Star sedan was coming from the opposite direction driven by Mr. A. C. Smith, of 130 First Ave., Ottawa, along with whom were his wife and two children. Casselman swung to the left to save the boy and the two cars met. Both front ends were smashed as well as the steering gear of Casselman's car and the wind shields of both cars. The two Smith children were cut about the face when thrown against the seat in front of them and Mrs. Smith was cut by flying glass. Mrs. Casselman and her little boy suffered from shock and broken glass while Mr. Casselman received a heavy blow when the steering column was broken. All are reported to be progressing satisfactorily.

A motorist going south on Highway 31 turned onto No. 2 while going at a good rate, disregarding the stop sign crashed into a Packard passing through Morrisburg during the afternoon.

Sunday School Lesson

October 21.—Lesson III,—Christian Stewardship, 2 Cor. 8: 1-9; 9: 6, 7, 15. Golden Text—First gave their own selves to the Lord.—2 Cor. 8: 5.

ANALYSIS

I. THE FORCE OF A GOOD EXAMPLE, 8:1-5.

II. THE NEED OF CAREFUL SUPERVISION, 8: 6-9.

III. THE INSPIRATION FOR CHRISTIAN GIVING, 9: 6 ,7, 15.

INTRODUCTION—This important letter was probably written towards the end of A.D. 56, when Titus had come back from Corinth.

I. THE FORCE OF A GOOD EXAMPLE, 8:1-5.

V. 1. Paul refers to the Christians in Macedonia in order to stir up the mind of the Corinthians, and the circumstances of thee Christians are so set forth as to reveal the intense generosity shown by them. The only explanation Paul can find is that God has given them this grace and liberality. The next verses mention some of the qualities which distinguish this kindness of the Macedonians.

V. 2. (a) The offering was made in a time of great confliction. Severe punishments had broken out, and they had to endure incessant pain. This was a test through which they passed with great success. (b) The gift was made, not with a grudging spirit, but out of an overflowing heart. They realized what had been done for themselves by Christ. Often it has been the case that the followers of Jesus have come to realize what are the secrets of divine love in such moments of deep trouble. (c) It was done out of poverty and not out of wealth. The Romans had been very hard on Macedonia: they robbed them of their silver and gold mines and of other means of wealth, and still continued to exact heavy taxation. "The Macedonians said that their nation was like a lacerated and disjointed animal." Yet these kind people did not suffer their own need to prevent them from making this gift.

V. 3. (d) They gave far beyond their means, and did not stop to calculate which was their proportion.

V. 4. (e) They came forward without any effort on Paul's part to stir up the gift, and they insisted upon giving what they could. It was a free-will offering in the truest sense of the word. They looked upon it, not as a hard task, but as a real opportunity and privilege, and they pleaded with Paul to be allowed to participate.

V. 5. (f) They went far beyond his expectations. They did not limit their efforts to these gifts, but said that they were ready to meet his will in any other way he could suggest. They would send a companion to take their contribution. These were the qualities which distinguished this offering from Macedonia, and account for the praise which Paul bestows upon them. It was surely a real incentive to orinth. They must not fall below the standard of their brethren.

II. THE NEED OF CAREFUL SUPERVISION, 8: 6-9.

V. 6. Paul was a careful organizer, and knew that everything of this kind would have to be arranged beforehand with great thoughtfulness. Evidently the proposal that Corinth should share in the collection had been made some time before, and the difference of opinion which had sprung up between Paul and the church had delayed the gathering of the money. But now that they are reconciled Paul returns to the subject, moved by the hope that these people will make an offering worthy of themselves. We must read the whole passage in order to recognize the motives which are here actuating the apostle. He knows how readily suspicion may arise in the case of the handling of trust funds such as these. He will not do it all himself, but will take Titus and other members with him that they may share the responsibility. In vs. 20, 21 he tells them that he must be above reproach. We must also read the opening verses of chapter 9 in order to see how firm Paul can be, and how straightforward he is in all his practical dealings. The church can never be too attentive to any business arrangements into which she has to enter.

III. THE INSPIRATION FOR CHRISTIAN GIVING, 9: 6 ,7, 15.

Paul is greatly agitated lest these Corinthians should compare unfavorably with other Gentile churches, and he now supplies three motives which may urge them to do their very best.

V. 7. (1) They will reap in proportion to their sowing. This may not seem to be a very high motive, but it is one that works powerfully with us all, and at times it was employed by eJsus. See Matt. 6: 4, 6.

V. 8. (2) All they have is due to the kindness and love of God. Their power to work and to earn a living is the direct gift of their Heavenly Father, and they should seek to imitate the joy and liberality with which God treats them. God loveth a cheerful giver.

V. 15. (3) The greatest of all Christian motives is the love of Christ who came to save us and who gave his life that we might enter into eternal life. Christ is the unspeakable gift. It is an offering for which no words are sufficient in order to describe its magnitude. Then Paul reaches that which is the purest of all Christian motives, which is love. The one thing that can make our gifts worthy, both in quantity and quality, is the spirit of sacrifice, which we learn at the cross of Christ.

Serious Sheep Loss Can Be Prevented

A Little Iodine in Food Will Eliminate Goitre and Improve Health

A Great Scientific Achievement

Science now offers a means of eliminating many of the losses which were regarded as inevitable a few years ago. Goitre in sheep, hairlessness in pigs and joint-ill in colts, for instance, can all be prevented as a result of recent research. These three things, which exact a heavy toll in Canada each year, never visit the farm where the stockman feeds a little iodine, according to Lionel Stevenson, newly appointed Provincial Zoologist in Ontario.

Ioine, Dr. Stevenson points out, costs less for ten years than the loss or weakening of a single lamb. "There is no substitute," he says; "iodine must be present in the food. What you lose on one dead, weak or runt lamb, would pay for all the iodine required by your flock for ten years. Why take a chance with goitre when it costs little to insure your flock against such losses."

Not only does the use of iodine prevent goitre in sheep, but it also tones up the general health of the animal, according to Dr. Stevenson. There are larger lamb crops, greater gains in wool and meat, where iodine is regularly fed with the food ration.

The Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers recommend feeding iodine in the form of Potassium Iodide. Only one half ounce per sheep per year is required, but this amount, while small, is absolutely essential. "Buy medicated salt containing potassium iodide," they say, "or preferably, prepare it yourself by dissolving 4 ounces of potassium iodide in a pint of water. Sprinkle this over 100 pounds of salt and mix well. Let the sheep and lambs help themselves every day. Don't let the sheep get salt hungry."

English Speech

We are gifted with apt speech among ourselves. One of the tragedies of progress to me is the way in which apt and racy speech of the old England is disappearing under the process of what for want of a better name we call education. There is nothing more remarkable (and I should like some time to address some observations on that subject) than the amazing gift of the people of England to express themselves, until they are taught to speak a jargon that expresses nothing. One day on my walks in Wyre Forest I met an old woman, who accosted me with this salutation—a salutation that sounds to me Elizabethan, and that I defy any modern educationalist to improve: "May God, goodwill and good neighborhood be your company." Think what education could do to that! Those of us who are wealthy can send our sons to expensive private schools for four years, and then perhaps for five or six years to Eton, and we can finish up with four years at Christ Church. Think our son will say that to us? No, he will say, probably, "Pip-pip, Toodle-oo." For literature, I take my stand every day by the side of the illiterate, and I say to all of you, "May God, goodwill and good neighborhood be your company."—Stanley Baldwin, in "Our Inheritance."

We all finally come to do the things we swore we wouldn't.

The British High Commissioner

Sir William Clark has arrived in this Dominion to assume the duties of High Commissioner for Great Britain in Canada. It is forty-eight years since Canada named Sir Alexander Galt as her first High Commissioner in London, but Sir William is the first occupant of the complementary post to be chosen by Britain.

In the first interview given out on his arrival on these shores Sir William describes the functions which he has come here to carry out as "an additional channel of communication between the Government of Canada and that of Britain. . . . Co-operation and interconsultation have for long past, one is glad to think, been the keynote of the relations between the two governments and it is hoped that the creation of my appointment may make the bonds between them still closer. So far as in me lies it will be my earnest desire to do everything in my power to further that end."

Such a declaration will confound those pessimists who see in the new appointment some sinister effort to undermine the British Empire and to weaken the cordiality of the relations now existing between London and Ottawa.

Sir William Clark has had a wide experience in the machinery of government administration. He is a man of outstanding talent and strong personality, and it is hardly likely that he will ever consent to be nothing more than a transmitting agency between Ottawa and London. Sir William Clark announced that it will be his first task to travel throughout Canada from end to end in order to gain knowledge of the country and to discover the varying outlooks of the people in the different provinces. Such a course has everything to commend it, and when he has returned to Ottawa he will be in a far better position to interpret the negotiations in which he is to play the part of go-between. With such knowledge he will not merely be transmitter of communications, but a transmitter, interpretting the Canadian view with a detached and impersonal outlook, rather than the mere official viewpoint of a Cabinet which is bound to be influenced by the restrictions of political expediency.

The appointment of Sir William is a natural outcome of the Imperial Conference of 1928, by which the powers and privileges of the Governor-General in Canada were restricted, the Governor-General becoming the personal representative of the Sovereign while the ttawa Government transacted its business directly with the Cabinet at Westminster. This plan has worked well and the appointment of a High Commissioner should ensure an even smoother running of the machinery than created.

It is a tradition in England that she sends to Canada men of outstanding ability and brilliant gifts. To the long roster of men who have served the Empire so ably as Governors-General must now be added those who are to serve in the exalted office of High Commissioner. It will be a post demanding ability and qualities of rare tact and geniality. Sir William Clark's past record in the Board of Trade in India and in other branches of Imperil service warrants the confident expectation that he will set a standard in the new office worthy of the past which will be difficult to surpass. In so doing he will have the support and the good wishes of the united people of Canada.—Montreal Star.

Television Is Show Feature

Los Angeles Exhibit Proves New Subject Real Public Attraction

Los Angeles—Television radio-casts and receptions featured the sixth annual National Radio Exposition which was brought to a successful close here recently. Record crowds were in attendance at the Ambassador Auditorium, where the annual event was staged, every day of the six-day run.

The television booth was always a center of attraction. Here "seers-in" as well as "listeners-in" were afforded an opportunity to witness all of the steps in the process of television radiocasting and reception.

Under the supervision of a radio engineer images were radiocast from one part of the auditorium and picked up in another, and although in its early stages of development with ample room for improvement the demonstration was nevertheless interesting and pleasing to large gatherings of radio fans.

Many improvements in both cabinet work and the instruments themselves were noted, and the scores of display booths gave a comprehensive view of the year's developments in the radio field.

The cream of radio entertainment from 15 stations throughout Los Angeles County was heard during the exposition given alternately on five different stages in different parts of the auditorium. When one program was finished on a stage in one section of the building the lights were turned off on that stage and a stage in another part of the exposition would be illuminated and an other group of radio stars would appear.

Abit of color was added to the show when all the performers appeared in special costumes instead of street attire which they ordinarily wear when appearing before the microphone.

A Great Scientific Achievement

Ottawa, Canada.—The development of Garnet wheat, a new variety of great promise, is almost an epic in the realm of scientific achievement, according to the Dominion Cerealist at the Canadian Government Experimental Farm, Ottawa. This new wheat was placed on the market only two years ago after almost half a century of patient but determined effort connected with its breeding and evolution.

In 1914 Garnet wheat was included in the regular variety test-plots at the Experimental Farm, at Ottawa. In 1919 it was tested at the Experimental Farms in the Prairie Provinces. In 1925 the Branch Farms were able to sow 320 acres, from which was produced about 9,700 bushels. In 1926, some 6,954 bushels of Garnet seed were offered to Prairie farmers with a four-bushel limit to any one farmer. Some 2,826 farmers, including 862 soldier settlers, secured two to four bushels lots and this, together with seed from increasing test samples by two or three seed growers, made a grand total of some 14,000 bushels, or enough to seed 12,000 acres.

This year Garnet wheat was observed growing in all parts of the west. The section east of Prince Albert and north of Tisdale, Sackatchewan, is practically a Garnet country. It is an early maturing variety. It usually ripens from six to twelve days ahead of Marquis and has consequently enabled the area of wheat production to be extended much further northward.

In 1903 it was reported wheat would never grow in the Peace River country, Alberta. This year Garnet was being cut here on August 21st. Crops were more advanced in the Peace River district than further south, and some of the west's finest crops were seen there. In the Rio Grande section of the Peace River country on August 22nd(31 varieties of wheat were identified, and of these 16 were Garnet, seven Marquis, five Huron, one Turkey, one Ruby, and one Reward, which indicates the way in which Garnet wheat is spreading in Western Canada. As an early maturer and good yielder it has no equal. Its discovery is regarded as an epoch-making contribution to Canadian agriculture.

"A girl's trump card is her femininity," says a popular woman novelist. That obviously means a short suit these days.

A barrister was met by a friend the other day in the street with a number of law books. Pointing to the books, his friend said, "Why, I thought you carried all that stuff in your head!" "I do," quickly replied the lawyer with a wink; "these are for the judges."

Forest Fire Caused by Smokers

A U.S. View of a Question Vital to Canada's Forest Wealth

Smokers have been responsible for over a third of all the man-caused forest fires in the national forests of Oregon and Washington, according to a report just issued by the U.S. Forest Service. With a total of 293 man-caused fires so far this season, 100 were started by careless smokers. According to a press bulletin just issued by the Service, every time a careless smoker throws a burning cigaret into the dry grass or needles of a forest floor he is giving the fire demons odds of one to nine that it won't start a fire. We read:

"These odds, coupled with the fact that there is smoked and discarded in the United States the amazing total of 171,232 cigarets per minute, day and night, during the entire year, are believed to account for the large percentage of man-caused forest and brush fires that are started by smokers. Even if only one-third of the cigarets consumed throughout the country were smoked out-of-doors, there would still be over 50,000 chances a minute of a fire, foresters point out.

"To determine the fire hazard from smoking materials, P. D. Sale and F. M. Hoffheins, of the U. S. Bureau of Standards, recently made a series of tests with nine brands of cigarets and eleven brands of cigars. The tests were made by placing the lighted cigar or cigaret butts in a dry grass pad attached to a screen.

"Some tests were made in still air; others with winds of various velocities generated by a small electric fan. From measurements of butts found on concrete floors, pavements, and bare ground, it was estimated that the average cigaret butt is about one and one-fourth inches long; so half-length cigarets were lighted and burned down to one-fourth inches for use in these tests. Cigar-lengths used in the tests ranged from the whole to any length sufficient for relighting and testing.

"In fifty tests each with cigars and cigarets in still air no ignition of the grass took place. In a wind of one to three miles per hour the ignitions of cigarets amounted to 41.2 per cent.; in a three-to-four-mile wind 85.3 per cent.; in a four-to-five-mile wind, 50.8 per cent.; and in a five-to-eight-mile wind, 57.7 per cent.

"In cigar tests in a one-to-three-mile wind, the ignitions were 18.5 per cent.; in a three-to-four-mile wind, 8.1 per cent.; a four-to-five-mile wind, 25.4 per cent. The ignitions increased to 39.3 per cent. in a nine-to-twelve-mile wind. which was the highest in all the tests that were made.

"Cigarets took from 19.2 to 33.5 minutes to burn their full length; cigars from 2.3 to 5.17 minutes. The average time the cigarets took to ignite the grass was 5 to 9 minutes. The cigars took on the average for the various wind velocities and lengths all the way from 1 minute, 18 seconds to 4 minutes and 28 seconds.

RHEUMATIC MISERY

Relief Can Only Come Through Better Blood—Liniments of No Use.

In no other disease does the blood become thin so rapidly as in rheumatism. Not only does it become thin but it is loaded with impurities—rheumatic poisons. Without the pro-rheumatic poisons. Without the proper treatment these poisons increase, the inflamed joints swell and the patient becomes a cripple. Most treatments simply aim to keep down the pain, hence with every- unfavorable con dition a renewed attack follows:

To cast out rheumatism the blood must be enriched and the rheumatic poisons driven out with the natural secretions of the body. This can best be done through a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which have a specific action on the blood, giving it new richness and redness. Thousands have tried this treatment with beneficial results. That every sufferer from rheumatism who does not try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is neglecting the most hopeful means of recovery is shown by the statement of Mr. David Carroll, Pictou, N.S., who says:—"For years I was troubled with rheumatism. The pains were not continuous, but they always returned, and kept getting worse. I tried so-called electric belts and many medicines, but did not get more than temporary relief. Only those who have suffered from this trouble will realize what I suffered at times. I had begun to despair of getting better when a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In a short time I could feel this medicine helping me, so I gladly continued taking the pills and soon found that every trace of the trouble had disappeared and there was a great improvement in my general health. It is now two years since I took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I have not had the least twinge of the trouble in that time. That is why I confidently recommend the pills to other sufferers."

You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont.

40-Day Cape Town-Cairo Record Sought in Car

Cairo, Egypt.—G. S. Bouwer, a South African motorist, has left here by ordinary sedan automobile in an attempt to make the Cairo to Cape Town journey of 9,000 miles in forty days, thus breaking his own record from Cape Town to Cairo, the fastest journey yet recorded, of 117 days.

The route is as follows: London, Paris, Simplon Pass, Milan, Florence, Rome, Brindisi, by boat to Alexandria, Cairo, Wadi, Halfa, Khartoum.

The Mediterranean, Once the Whole Known World

The world is on the march. Many a man or maid who might heretofore have had a circumscribed and limited life, now circles the globe, goes to South America and Africa, visits the picturesque West Indies region and enjoys the scenery and fathoms the mysteries of the Mediterranean which several centuries ago was the entire known world. What a thrill from day to day! What a broadening, inspiring experience!

Beyond doubt there is no more interesting region than the Mediterranean, and to-day its art, history and scenic wonders lure and fascinate thousands of tourists annually. Name but a few of its attractions—Egypt, Italy, Spain, Turkey, Syria, Palestine and the Isles of Greece where "Sappho loved and sung," and you have stirred a memory of longing in many hearts—hearts which yearn to have their wonderful dreams, covering the birthplace of the world, come true.

FINANCIAL NEWS

East Sudbury Deep Buys Important Gold Mine

The officials of East Sudbury Deep Mines, Ltd., announce the important addition to their property holdings, in the acquisition of the La Bellevue Mine in the State of Oregon, a property that has already reached an advanced stage of development, and is considered to have highly attractive possibilities. Concluding an extensive examination, a series of negotiations were started some four months ago, and have resulted in the acquisition of this property within the last few weeks. It is understood that the number of ore shoots which have been opened up to date by comparatively shallow tunnel workings, have already indicated ore in access of $1,000,000. The officials plan a further extensive development of the La Bellevue vein, as well as the immediate preparation for stoping, and the early completion of a mill. A crew of men are now at work on he property, and an aggressive campaign is planned.

East Sudbury Deep has options on some 2,000 acres North of the Frood Mines in the Sudbury Basin. Two diamond drills have been continuously employed since last spring, and over 10,000 feet of drilling has been done. Results are reported as encouraging. Holes Nos. 3, 5, 7, 9 and 12, showing replacement deposits characteristic of this district. Further diamond drilling on the property has been curtailed, pending the erection of a customs smelter in the district. Present activities will be centred on the La Bellevue Gold Mine, in order to get this property on a production basis at the earliest possible date.

Mining Briefs

It is decided that a railway is warranted into Sherritt-Gordon property, a distance of 35 miles from rail head at the Flin Flon. The construction interests who have full equipment at the Flin Flon would like to go with it without delay. It would save something like $50,000 by not bringing this equipment south. The vital question is whether Sherritt-Gordon has proceeded sufficiently with development for such a step to be taken.

A brokerage house journal has just published an interesting view on the situation surrounding the large nickel producers and potential producers of Ontario. The journal states that the outstanding development of the past year has been the entry into Sudbury of powerful unknown interests—presumably United States Steel Corporation or interests closely allied—into the copper-nickel belt, using as its agents the Sudbury Basin and Longyear interests. The object of the group is then stated to be the establishment of an industry to mine and smelt copper-nickel ores in direct competition with International and Mond.

Spectacular copper discoveries, equal to the Sherritt-Gordon when that operation was in its initial stages, are reported from northern Manitoba. The scene of the latest find is at Oxford Lake, about 160 miles east and slightly north of Le Pas. Prospectors are flocking into the field, and it is reported that several big operators are in there in a big way. Among these are mentioned the Lindsley interests of Toronto. The ground is being staked up rapidly and many operators are rushing in supplies before the freeze-up. Further details of these finds will be forthcoming soon.

Most of Mond Nickel shares are held chiefly in England, and the outstanding success of this company, which is in the same boat as International Nickel, has recently attracted attention of British investors to International Nickel stock. This is interesting, because if the British take on stock in a big way it will be more broadly internationalized.

A somewhat similar broadening of the market for Mond Nickel has taken place, by the purchase on a substantial scale of Mond shares by Canadian interests. So large are Canadian holdings now that plans are under way to appoint a transfer agent in Toronto and elevate the stock from the mining section of the Toronto Stock Exchange to the regular board, where it will take its place beside International Nickel.

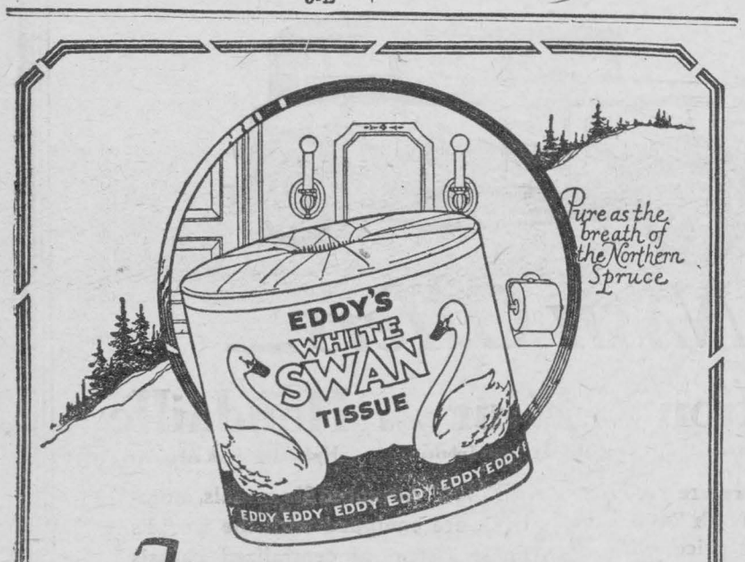

Halifax Shipyards Award Contract for Ice-Breaker

Halifax—Official notice has been received by the Halifax Shipyards, Ltd., of acceptance of their tender for construction of a new ice-breaker for the Dominion Government. The contract price is $1,220,000 and this tender, which was the lowest, was awarded over those of Canadian Vickers, Montreal, and the Davie Shipbuilding Co. of Quebec.

J. R. Nelson, manager of Halifax Shipyards, stated that work on the ice-breaker will commence immediately and the vessel will be ready for delivery to the Federal Government next fall. The new contract will provide steady work for upwards of 600 men for over a year.

Halifax Shipyards, Ltd., is a subsidiary company of the British Empire Steel Corporation.

A PROBLEM FOR YOUNG MOTHERS

Stomach troubles cause most of the distress of babyhood and childhood, and are the greatest problem that a young mother has to solve. The treatment for these digestive disturbances that make baby cry continually and disturb his sleep must be quick and effective, and, above all, perfectly safe.

The absolutely safe treatment for disturbances of the stomach and bowels is found in Baby's Own Tablets. Thousands of mothers have had their problem solved through them. They are guaranteed to be free from all injurious drugs and cannot possibly do harm to even the youngest babe—they always do good.

Baby's Own Tablets regulate the stomach and bowels; banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and promote that health-giving sleep which is so necessary to the welfare of the baby or growing child. The Tablets are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Belgrade to Raze Birthplace of War

Belgrade. — The Club Narodna Obrana, Europe's most famous "plot house," where plans for the assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand and his consort were perfected in 1914 will soon be torn down to make room for an office building.

It was in this crumbling shanty that some of the darkest political plots in history have been hatched. Under its roof final instructions were given to Tchavrilovitch and Princip concerning the crime which precipitated the World War.

From this clubhouse as a centre most of the agitation against Austria-Hungary was carried on. Since the war it has been used as a headquarters for the dissemination of propaganda against Italy.

Reduce the Acid

Sick stomachs, sour stomachs and indigestion usually mean excess acid. The stomach nerves are over-stimulated. Too much acid makes the stomach and intestines sour.

Alkali kills acid instantly. The best form is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia, because one harmless, tasteless dose neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Since its invention, 50 years ago, it has remained the standard with physicians everywhere.

Take a spoonful in water and your unhappy condition will probably end in five minutes. Then you will always know what to do. Crude and harmful methods will never appeal to you. Go prove this for your own sake. It may save a great many disagreeable hours.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drugstore.

OWL LAFFS

BY O.W.L.

(ON WITH LAUGHTER)

Oh, horse, you are a wonderful no buttons to push, no horns to honk; you start yourself, no clutch to slip; no spark to miss, no gears to strip; no license buying every year with plates to screw on front and rear; no gas bills climbing up each day to steal the joy of life away; no speed cops chugging in your rear, yelling summons in your ear. Your inner tubes are all okey, and thank the Lord they stay that way; your sparkplugs never miss and fuss; your motor never makes us cuss; your frame is good for many a mile; your body never changes style; your wants are few and easy met; you've something on the auto yet.

Fable: Once upon a time a girl washed her hair and didn't mention it to nobody.

Another way to reduce is to use a shorter swatter so you must jump higher to get flies on the ceiling.

When a woman gets sick she puts on a newly ironed nightgown and fixes up her hair, but when a man takes down he just piles into bed looking like something the cat dragged in.

"You should not marry a man who deceives you during the engagement."

Ma and Paw now get home at 3 a.m. Sister and Brother at 5 a.m.—who the heck is going to let Grandma in?

Honest intentions won't pay honest debts.

"Well, daddy," said the pretty girl excitedly, "I am engaged."

"You don't mean it!" her father exclaimed.

"Certainly not," said the pretty girl, "but it's great fun all the same."

Keeper (speaking of new arrivel at asylum): "What's the matter with this fellow?"

Superintendent: "He says the air is free and goes around releasing it from people's automobile tires."

Gossip

My dear, do you know that my friend,
Mrs. A,
Said to me, over the fence just to-day,
That somebody told her, I believe
Mrs. B,
That she had been told by someone,
Mrs. C,
That Mrs. X said to her friend Mrs. Y
If she had her senses, she never would try
To sing in the choir next to old Mrs. Z,—
She knew of no woman who sang worse than she!

Then someone, the daughter of old Mrs. Z,
Told someone, I think it was young Mrs. B,
Who passed it along to my friend, Mrs. A,
Who told Mrs. C. just the very same day,
That Mrs. Z told Mrs. Y very plain
That Mrs. X surely was going insane,
If all she could do was to scratch like a cat,
She'd tell her in unvarnished language to scat!

"I never knew it was so easy"

It was a red-letter day in old Mrs. Jones' life — the day she made her first Long Distance call. But she simply had to speak to her son before he went abroad!

The operator was sympathetic and helpful. She asked Mrs. Jones her telephone number, name, the city and the telephone number of the party she wished to reach. Mrs. Jones didn't know the number, so the operator looked it up for her.

After the pleasant experience was over, Mrs. Jones exclaimed, "I never knew it was so easy! Why didn't I do it before?"

There is nothing complicated about it. Just say, "Long Distance."

The cause of most diseases is due to pressure on nerves where they leave the spine. This pressure prevents the nerves from carrying the normal amount of life force to the organs they supply, and disease is the result.

"Talkies" Owe Their New-Found Voice to the Telephone

All predictions lead to the belief that talking moving pictures—the Movietone—will be used universally very shortly, and the silent drama will perhaps be less dominant. Engineers of the Bell Telephone Laboratories were making a careful study of the ways in which speech is produced, when they discovered and developed the successive steps that have led to this newest achievement in motion picture entertainment. The telephone is, therefore, "Daddy" of the Movietone, which is being rapidly introduced to enthusiastic audiences throughout this continent, with Montreal as the first Canadian City to have installed the required equipment. Madge Bellamy, Fox Star, is shown above impersonating Sir Harry Lauder. Oval inset shows inspection of a wax disc upon which sound vibrations will be recorded.

DAN BARRY'S DAUGHTER

By MAX BRAND

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Finding the lifeless bodies of his two partners at their gold mining camp, Harry Gloster flees southward, knowing that he will be accused of the crime. On the way Gloster is jailed after getting into a fight with several men over a girl.

Joan Barry, daughter of a famous rider of the old plains, helps Gloster to escape. After eluding a posse, Gloster retraces his steps to Joan's cabin and is confronted by her guardian, Buck Daniels; they finally call a truce, however. Joan, partly in answer to the call of wild life within her and partly in an effort to find Harry Gloster, joins a bandit gang in the mountains. Joe Macarthur, a quick-shooting scoundrel, is made chieftain of the gang when he appears with a scheme to rob the Wickson Bank. Now the gangsters are discussing Joan.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"You've learned a number of new words, I see," said Dud Rainey, and smiled upon him deliberately, showing every one of his white teeth.

"I said that anybody could see that she was in love," remarked Lew Cambridge, leaving out his former emphasis.

There was a general murmur of assent, but Rainey answered: "Perhaps she does. I don't know. But for my part, I don't think she could love a man. She has a long-distance look in her eye—"

"What the devil are you driving at now?" asked Babe Cooney.

"Nothing," murmured Dud Rainey, and went on with his work.

Yet he had said enough to make them all watch her like hawks when at length she was called in for her dinner. It was noted that Joe Macarthur did not sit down with her to the table, although as chief of the band he had the right to assume the place of host.

Instead, he wandered out of the house into the open, wearing an expression half strained and half gloomy as if he had been brought in contact with something which he needed time to think over.

She made herself as perfectly at home as if they were all old friends sitting at the table in her own ranch. She chatted away busily. She told them how she had won the black stallion, and then how he had brought her through the mountains, picking his own way, while she sat in the saddle and let him go where he would. She told them how he had watched her fish, and how he had stood over her and observed the process of building a fire and cooking with a scrupulous interest as if it were something which he wished to learn for his own sake.

Certainly there was nothing peculiar about her, except that she was more lovely, more naive than any girl they had ever dreamed of, far less seen. And then, in the very midst of a sentence, she stopped speaking, straightened a little, and stared far off before her. They glanced hastily around at the door. But it was empty.

"What is it?" asked Babe ooney, his rough voice reduced to a whisper.

"Hush! Don't you hear?" she asked them.

They heard it then for the first time, the faint dissonance of wild geese crying out of the heart of the sky.

CHAPTER XXVI.

AN UNEXPECTED MERCY.

President Oscar Fern of the Wickson Bank was one of those persons who are envied, not for their brains, but for their luck.

When he established his bank there was no competitor. As a matter of fact, people have a greater respect for luck than they have for intelligence. They respected not Oscar himself but for the quality which had fallen from heaven upon him.

And as Samuel Carney, the lean and gray headed, terrier-like man who was cashier of the bank, walked down the street this morning, nearly every man who passed him said: 'There goes the brains of the Wickson Bank. Fern is a mighty lucky fellow to get such a man for mere wages! One of these days Carney will be made a partner, and then watch his dust! He's got the genius!"

Such was the atmosphere of adulation through which Samuel Carney walked. it had lightened his step on many a back and forth from the grind of the work at the bank. But today it did not help him. The morning was very hot, although the spring was not yet old and the hour was early; but there was a little foretaste of the blast of the summer sun, and the sidewalk burned Carney's feet through the thin soles of his shoes.

He hurried on to get out of the heat, and yet as he found that he was coming so rapidly to the bank he slowed his pace again. The bank had suddenly become a plague house to him. In that building he had built his reputation. In that bank he had established himself as a man of spotless integrity, of sound mind, and scrupulously honest business methods.

This was the thing which had been enshrined in the bank. Now he was to throw the idol away. He was to deceive his very employer, share in the loot that a band of ruffians secured, and afterward he must continue in his place, wear a solemn face about the crime, and in a year or more, perhaps, gravely accept the place of partner in the firm from which he had stolen.

"Hush! Don't you hear?' 'she asked.

The fifteen thousand, spent away from the home town, would awaken no suspicions. Moreover, who could ever connect him with such a crime? It could not be! His position in the town of Wickson was a brazen tower of strength. No eye would dream of looking toward him. And, therefore, no eye would see him.

Fortified with this thought, he advanced more easily toward the bank and opened the door, whistling softly, as was his custom, through his teeth. He almost ran into the president himself as he stepped inside, and he gasped with a touch of horror. The swelling form and the rosy, smiling face of Oscar Fern might have been a nightmare. This was a whole hour earlier than the time at which the president generally appeared.

"What's wrong, Sammy?" asked Fern. "You look like the devil—all shot, for a fact. No sleep?"

"No sleep," muttered Carney, his eyes on the floor.

"This damned touch of hot weather was what did it," Fern declared; "kind of bothered me myself!"

And he laughed apologetically, as if there was something ridiculous in the thought that anything could really trouble him in his sleep.

"What you need to do is to take a day off," Fern suggested. "Damned if you don't look hard hit!"

"A day off?' said Carney, seizing easily on grounds which would serve as a basis to work himself into an anger. "A day off? Where the devil would things be?"

The president caught his breath, frowned, and then looked somewhat agape over the head of his cashier.

"Doggoned if you ain't right, Sammy," he murmured. "Matter of fact, you never do take a day off, do you?"

"If a vacation came up and stared me in the face," said Carney, "I wouldn't know what to call it."

"That so? I was talking to Green on the phone. He says it's true the F. L. and M. is going to build a branch line into the valley."

Carney listened with half his mind. It was well enough to turn the subject, but he brooded savagely on his injuries as he went on into his room. They had brought it on themselves, he vowed. And then he flung himself into his work with a savage energy.

But, in spite of himself, he found himself coming to a pause every now and then, his eye possessed with a hazy vision of his wife, Agnes, meeting him at the door some night with a white face and saying: "I know it all! I know it all! Oh, Sammy dear, we won't talk about it. I don't accuse you. I know it was for Clare's sake and mine—but, oh, God, Sammy, we've thrown away our honor and we can never get it back again. We've thrown away our honor and nothing in the world can ever bring it back!"

Always he came out of this dream to hear his assistant murmuring beside him: "I say, Mr. Carney, if you'll excuse me for interrupting you, I want to bring this little matter to your attention and—"

When noon came he did not eat. Instead he took a walk through the fierce sun. He filled his lungs to the bottom with air. Then he came back and went at his work again.

The heavy footfall of the fat president entered the bank an hour and a half later. Oscar Fern kept Paris hours as far as the noonday meal was concerned. And Carney ground his teeth.

"You fat faced fool!" he snarled to himself. "You have the front. But who does the work? Who has the brains? Who's holding you up? I do it! I do it!"

Here there was a murmur from the little muffled bell in his room. It was a summons from the president, and he went in slowly, gathering up on the way two letters about which he must consult Fern.

He found Fern tilted back in his chair with his thumbs hooked into the armholes of his vest, his rubber heels on the top of the desk, and a fat cigar in his mouth. He was frowning at the ceiling and rolling the cigar from one side of his mouth to the other, champing at it nervously. He paid no attention to Carney as the latter entered.

"Here's another letter from Dundee about the terms," began Carney.

"Damn Dundee!" said Oscar Fern. "I want to talk to you, Sammy."

"Heard a good yarn?" asked the cashier with a secret contempt.

"How much money have you saved?"

It was a bolt from the blue. Perspiration stood out on Carney's upper lip. He wiped it away with the tips of his fingers.

"Why—a few thousand—"

"How's Agnes?" blurted out the president.

It made Carney start, almost rise from his chair.

"She's the same."

'You ought to get her out of town. Silence.

Nearly 500 Farmers Make Test

Ottawa, Can.—One of the newest varieties of wheat, known as Reward, a cross betwee nthe famous Marquis and a lesser known variety, labelled Prelude, has been holding the attention of nearly 500 farmers in Western Canada this year. Reports on it so far received by the Canadian Government Experimental Farm at Ottawa, where it was developed, are very encouraging. Reward ripens a few days earlier than Marquis, and is also believed to have rust resisting qualities, though these have yet to be determined. It produces an excellent quality of flour, but whether it will prove to be worthy of being recommended by the Canadian Department of Agriculture to the farmers of the Dominion will only be ascertained by further tests. Meanwhile Marquis wheat remains the undisputed champion. Ninety per cent. of the spring wheat grown in Canada and 60 per cent. of the spring wheat grown in the United States is Marquis, which is a product of the Experimental Farm at Ottawa.

Porto Rico Rich in Plant Beauty

Blossoms and Fruits and a Long Succession of Golden Days Make Life Easy and Peaceful in this Isle of Dreams

Porto Rico, now recovering slowly from the effects of the disastrous hurricane, has been called the "Isle of Dreams." The novel forms of plant life, the almost unbroken succession of balmy golden days, the constant sighing or the trade wind in the trees, all give a newcomer from the temperate zone the feeling that it is not quite real. Life there is so easy, agreeable, peaceful, that he feels sometimes as if he were in a trance, far removed from actuality.

The vegetation of Porto Rico is of fascinating interest to the plant student. Besides many varieties of palm trees, there are bitter almonds, mangoes, oranges, limes and grapefruit. One finds a thrill of novelty in sending a yard-boy shinning up one's own cocoanut tree to get a cocoanut for dessert. At first one is surprised to see limes instead of lemons used for iced tea and on fish, but one comes to prefer limes on account of their finer flavor and their cheapness. They sell at four for 1 cent, and are brought to the door by native vendors. Oranges ordinarily cost 6 cents a dozen.

The mango is one of the beautiful tropical trees. It is in thick foliage all the year round; its leaves are a rich, glossy green. The fruit, somewhat oval in shape, hangs at the end of a stem at least a foot long, limp as a shoe lace. Then there is the Santa Maria tree, with purplish pink bell-shaped blossoms.

The "Man's Love" Blossoms

Another interesting Porto Rican plant is the vine called Corazon de Hombre—("Man's Love"). This luxuriant vine has long, narrow, dull green leaves, bearing clusters of tubular blossoms ending in an irregular number of petals somewhat like those of a daisy. The flower, of a waxy texture, is at first pure white; later faint streaks of pink appear, gradually spreading until the whole blossom is a lovely shade of coral. This deepens finally into blood red, whence the poetic name expressive of its evolution.

A remarkable tree is the manzanilla, or "little apple," from which emanates a poison so subtle that weary travelers stopping to rest under its inviting shade are said to have never waked again. Still another is the ylang-ylang, specimens of which shed their fragrance over the charming Plaza at Ponce, on the south coast. The frangipani, from which is made a costly perfume grows wild in the woods. Many kinds of cactus lay snares for the unwary.

Besides, there is the coralita vine, with clusters of clear, bright pink; the showy bougainvillea, the delicate plumbago, hibiscus, both red and pink, and the brilliant poinsettia, which often reaches the second-story windows of a dwelling. In the forests are graceful tree ferns, wild oranges and tiny orchids far more exquisite than those in the florists' shops.

The cocoanut is one of Porto Rico's most useful trees. The juice of the green cocoanut is much valued as a drink by the natives. American soldiers found it useful first in the war with Spain. Frozen, with a little sugar added, it becomes a refreshing sherbet. Cocoanut ice cream is made from the milk of the riper fruit, and an even more delicious dainty is made by freezing a mixture of half cocoanut and half pineapple juice.

Porto Rican coffee is particularly aromatic. This year's crop suffered heavily in the hurricane. The natives have their own way of coffee roasting, one which does not appeal to many Americans. They mix coffee with sugar and burn it, the process resulting in a strong, pungent flavor.

Throughout the island main roads are fine and beautiful. Yauco, whose houses cling to the sides of its hills, and climbs to a point from which the sea can be seen beyond.

The American Railroad skirts the island, and, while the trains are slow and inclined to linger at every town, it is a trip worth taking. On account of the mountainous character of the island, the road is at times forced out almost to the water's edge; in places the spray from the sea comes near dashing into the windows.

Ontario Grain Pool

Toronto, Ont.—In its first year of operation, just closed, the Ontario Grain Pool handled over 1,750,000 bushels of grain for more than 7,000 producers. Payments for final settlement were distributed recently on the basis of gross prices of $1.32½ for the higher grades of red winter wheat and $1.30½ for white and mixed, with differentials for the lower grades, less the nominal charges for overhead and handling.

Sales were handled through the Canadian Wheat Pool, Winnipeg, and the same organization is to sell the grain delivered to the 1928-29 Ontario pool.

A man was waiting somewhat impatiently in a post office while the young woman clerk discussed the gossip of the day with one of her admirers. His annoyance being evident, she remarked: "Well, you needn't look at me as if I were poison." "Not so much poison as a counterirritant," he replied gravely.

Fine tea is always the most-desired. The slight falling off in price of cheaper teas cannot entice the tea-lover from his discriminating choice.

New Zealand Enters Treaty With Japanese

First Pack Ever Signed in the Dominion With a Foreign Power

Auckland, N.Z.—The trade treaty that New Zealand has just signed with Japan is interesting from more than one point of view. It is the first with a foreign country that has been signed in New Zealand. The practice in the past in such cases has been to become a party to a treaty signed by Great Britain. In view of the urgency of the matter the home authorities agreed to New Zealand's acion. New Zealand concluded the treaty by virtue of the "sovereign powers," which for such purposes she possesses.

The treaty will confer substantial benefits on New Zealand, but Japan is merely to recive "most-favored-nation treatment" as before. Some comment has been caused by the mention by the Japanese Consul-General for Australia and New Zealand of the immigration question, about which New Zealand convictions are strong, but the treaty is purely a trade document. According to Mr. Downie Stewart, Minister of Customs, Japan gets no concessions, and she signed partly as a recognition of the way in which she had been treated by New Zealand, and partly because she desired to share in any tariff concession that might be made to other countries.

The advantage to the Dominion will be that from now its goods will receive tariff treatment as favorable as those of any other country. In the Japanese market Canadian butter has enjoyed a tariff advantage of ½d. a pound. New Zealand butter will now be on the same footing. At present the trade of New Zealand in butter with Japan is very small, amounting to only £22,000 last year, but it is believed and hoped that there is a great future for the Dominion's dairy products in the Far East.

Australia, largely because of its geographical position, has pushed trade with the East much farther. Whereas in 1926 New Zealand's total exports to the East were valued at only £320,000. Australia's were worth £21,000,000. It is felt that if New Zealand could develop such markets, it would be less sensitive to fluctuations in the main market, which is Britain.

Small Radio Set Brings Music to Gobi Desert

Peking—Carrying only a small receiver, the central Asiatic expedition of the American Museum of Natural History obtained little benefit from radio during the three months it was in he Gobi district.

Dr. Roy Chapman Andrews and his party had few reports of the world news except on one of two occasions when they put into a telegraph station or met missionaries.

The small radio outfit was taken to save carrying heavier apparatus. Its principal function was to pick up time signals which are broadcast each evening by the American station in Manila. Occasionally, the party heard talks from Viadivostok or Moscow stations, but none of the explorers understood Russian. However, when music was to be received, there was a scramble to hear each note.

The mob spirit and what I call conformitarianism are abroad in the land, crushing out individual judgment and action and silencing courage.—Nicholas Murray Butler.

Any Woman Can Look Stylish

By MAE MARTIN

Most stylish looking women know simple ways to make last season's things conform to this season's styles. Thousands of them have learned how easily they can transform a dress or blouse, or coat, by the quick magic of home tinting or dyeing. With true, fadeless Diamond Dyes, anyone can do this successfully. The "know-how" is in the dyes. Diamond Dyes don't streak or spot like inferior dyes. New, fashionable tints appear like magic over the out-of-style or faded colors. Tinting with Diamond Dyes is easy as bluing, and dyeing takes just a little more time. Only Diamond Dyes produce perfect results. They have been perfected by over 50 yars' experince. Insist on them and save disappointment.

Premier King Praised for Speech on British Migration to Canada

London.—Premier W. L. Mackenzie King has undoubtedly done much to remove the impression that the Canadian Government is not too enthusiastic towards British migration to Canada.

Both Lord Beaverbrook's Express and Morning Post, in editorial articles, declare that Mr. King has destroyed this impression, and both praise the Canadian Premier enthusiastically. "He commands the respect and honor of the entire Dominion," says The Express, adding that his speech was an event of the first importance and fruitful policy.

The paper mentions Mackenzie King's own career as an example to every young man in Britain of the opportunities to be found in Canada.

The Morning Post, which has been critical of Premier King, says it is glad to see he is so enthusiastic in the cause of British settlement in Canada, and suggests that the trouble with emigration lies either in the administration or in the principles on which it s worked.

Farm Hand O'Neil, Double Murderer, Sentenced by by Judge McEvoy

HANGS JAN. 4th

Barrie.—After nearly seven hours' deliberation, the jury in the murder case of George O'Neil, Tottenham farm hand, and former Cannington blacksmith, at 8.50 Saturday night returned a verdict of guilty. The prisoner was immediately arraigned and sentenced by Mr. Justice McEvoy to hang on Jan. 4 next.

O'Neil pays the penalty for the murder on Feb. 4 of Azor Robertson, aged 72, and his daughter, Mrs. Ruby Martin, aged 35, who were found burned beyond recognition in a fire which totally destroyed the Robertson barn.

Graff Zeppelin Proves Nothing

Trans-Atlantic Trip a Disappointment to All Air Men the World Over

Paris.—Interest in the transatlantic flight of the Graf Zeppelin, especially since the huge air liner ran into danger, has been as keen in Paris as elsewhere. The evening newspapers headline the latest available details of the dirigible's progress.

The voyage is declared to be a disappointment because it has not shown progress in the navigation of lighter-than-air craft. The fact that the first gale the dirigible struck damaged her, and that she has had to follow a circuitous course to make the U.S. coast, is said to indicate that dirigible navigation is where it has been for several years.

At Lakehurst, N.J.

"She has been too long getting here," said one officer, who refused to allow the use of his name. "Practically the whole advantage of 'airship travel lies in speed; the ability to make ocean voyages in half the time required by ocean liners. We had hoped the Graf Zeppelin would arrive in two and a half days or three at the most.

The big German airship has gained the enmity of the press by not keeping the world informed as to her progress.

Trip Unfortunate

Head winds, mechanical trouble and latterly shortage of fuel all combined to make the air giant's transatlantic passage a source of anxiety to the waiting world, and will certainly do little to popularize ocean-air travel.

Hardest Steels Cut Easily by New Material

Glass, Porcelain and Concrete Are Handled Effectively by Carbide-Cobalt Product

Philadelphia.— Cutting a screw thread in a glass rod, boring a smooth hole in a block of concrete, handling porcelain on a lathe and cutting the hardest of steels—things difficult or even impossible with present-day machine tools—are among the things that can be done easily with a new kind of machine tool material announced here by Dr. Samuel L. Hoyt of the research laboratory of the General Electric Co. at the annual convention of the American Society for Steel Treating.

The new material named carboloy, is composed of tungsten carbide and cobalt, the carbide being extremely hard and the cobalt giving it the necessary strength for cutting tools.

The possibilities of the new tool material were indicated by Dr. Hoyt in his references to experiments conducted with molded materials containing metal inserts, such as fabric gears used in automobiles. Cobalt-chomium alloy cutters, which had given the best previous service in this work, required redressing for every 150 parts machined; the new tungsten carbide tools, operating under identical conditions, finished 11,000 parts before they required sharpening.

Usual cutting tools will not affect a glass rod; instead, a rod of glass in a lathe will wear off the edge of a cutting tool that is pressed against it. The tungsten carbide tool quickly cuts into the glass, and can even be used for cutting a screw thread into the rod. Likewise, hard porcelain insulators can be machined on a shaper with the new material.

HOLES CUT SMOOTHER.

For drilling a hole in concrete and rock it previously was necessary to use either an expensive diamond drill or a "star" hammer, which really breaks its way roughly through the concrete. A drill made with the new cutting material has advantages over both of its predecessors, in that it is less expensive than the diamond drill and that it cuts a smoother hole than does the 'star" hammer drill.

One difficulty with to-day's tools has been that wear of the tool has caused a taper. In machining a hollow cylinder of carbon, for instance, the best tool steel loses its cutting elge and begins cutting a taper soon after starting; tungsten carbide tools take an entire cut without tool wear, and hence without tapering.

Sir Joseph Duveen Makes Generous Offer To the British Nation

London.—Sir Joseph Duveen, the famous art dealer, has made a further generous offer to the British nation. In a letter to Lord D'Abernon, chairman of the royal commission which has recently reported upon the national museums and galleries, Sir Joseph says: 'I have already promised a new gallery for Italian art at the National Gallery and engaged to meet the expense of the Tate Gallery reconstruction; I am further prepared to carry out a project I have long had in mind, namely to build a gallery for foreign sculpture at the Tate Gallery . . . I will build the necessary extension to the National Portrait Gallery, thus relieving the disastrous and in artistic crowding which now prevails. I will offer additional adequate funds to the trustees of the British Museum to enable them to provide a dignified and artistic setting for the incomparable splendor of the Elgin marbles and the Nereid statues."

Sir Joseph Duveen makes the condition only that the British Government shall carry out the other recommendations of the royal commission.

Criticism Not Barred in Press Says Mussolini

Great Function of Italian Papers Is, He Says, To Interpret Fascism

Rome.—At the Palazzo Chigi, some 80 editors of leading Fascist newspapers in all parts of Italy, gathered to hear a statement by Benito Mussolini, the Premier, on the duties of the daily press.

Signor Mussolini emphasized the great function of the press as an interpreter of Fascist ideas and ideals, and added that this did not exclude criticism. He said the criticism, however, should not touch on fundamental points of the regime, nor on international relationships, as irresponsible utterances on these subjects made for misunderstanding at home and abroad.

Otherwise, said Signor Mussolini, there was complete freedom.

In the course of his address the Duce exhorted the editors to give as little attention as possible to police cases, sensational news and scandal purveying. He told them to keep such items toned down if they must be chronicled, and, in closing the meeting which was surely without precedent in the history of journalism, he told the editors to concentrate on "healthy comment" on the arts and sports.

Indian Home Rule

I. A. Spender, in the London Daily News: If some all-wise Indian lawgiver were given the task of framing a constitution for India, he would, I am sure, not dream of going to Canada or Australia for guidance. He would, I think, compare India not with Australia or Canada, but with Europe, and begin by asking how he could avoid the repetition in India of the troubles that have afflicted Europe. That, it seems to me, is one of the first questions which the Indian who is thinking of Dominion Home Rule must put to himself. With all its shortcomings and limitations, the British Government has at least helped the nations of India to become one people, saved them from the internecine wars and struggles which have afflicted Europe, and for a century or more kept the peace over almost the wildest area in which it has been kept in that period of the world's history.

Mexican Opals For Japan

Mexico City.—Jewelers in Japan are showing a marked interest in Mexican opals, it is reported, and are preparing to import these stones in considerable quantities for the Oriental trade. Stones of very high grade are sought by the Japanese.

A Picture Story of the Wilkins' Antarctic Expedition

BRITISH LEADER OF AERIAL EXPLORATION PARTY TO ANTARCTIC WILDERNESS

Within the next week Sir George Hubert Wilkins to sail from Montevideo, capital of Uruguay, South America, aboard the Norwegian whaler "Ronald", for the Antarctic base from which he proposes to make a 2,000-mile jump by plane across the "world's ice-box" to a point on Ross sea near Commander Byrd's proposed Ross sea headquarters. In the illustration the upper picture gives a birdseye panorama of Wilkins' first objective, Deception Island. The map at the lower left shows the route of the Britisher's proposed plane flight. In the lower centre are seen Wilkins and his fiancee, Suzanne Bennett, a New York actress, their engagement having been announced just before the explorer sailed from the United States. At the lower right is a sketch of the Norwegian whaler "Ronald", which is to carry Sir George, his three companions and their two monoplanes to their Antarctic. Both Antarcic parties are taking powerful radio sets with them in order to keep in touch with the outside world.

Steamship Fares Cut Farm Wages

Criticism in England of Government Aid to Emigrants

Arithmeticians in England are criticizing the Government's temporary transfer of unemployed workers to Canada for the harvesting, putting the case this way: The fare outward was about $60, of which the Government paid $25, lending a further $50 if needed, as it usually was. The fare back is $60, on condition "that a man has labored thirty days at harvesting and returns before Dec. 31."

As the farm wage is between $15 and $25 a week and keep—the lesser sum for the inexperienced—and as the harvest season lasts but eight weeks, the earnings would be some $120, or "barely enough to cover the obligations" for the return journey, if the worker spends even $10 in Canada. "That means," complains the Manchester Guardian, "that if men can afford to return to England at all they will arrive penniless," only able to say "Thanks for the buggy ride."

Canada a Nation

Sheffield Telegraph: Canada's whole position is too closely bound up with that of the British Commonwealth, and these islands, in particular, for her to link herself up with the Pan-American union, where it is probable that her and our special interests might clash at any moment. Asserting a claim to a special nationality entails no breaking of historic ties any more than that which follows the setting up of separate homes by members of one family.

White Australia

Cairns Post (Queensland): A White Australia is the national ideal in these great and magnificent southern lands; a White Australia that will be, though the younger of the daughters of the race, a factor of so great importance in the day's work of the world that it will claim the close attention and respect of nations that were old ere we began to breathe. To do the tremendous work that is before her, however, Australia must have population.

Announcement that provision for old-age pensions would be placed on the Statutes at the next session of the Ontario Legislature, was made by Premier G. Howard Ferguson in Toronto last week. The Premier's speech appeared to be almost incidental in a speech of sturdy Imperialistic tenor. "Next year," he stated, "there will be placed on the Statutes beneficial legislation, that is going to cost the Government a great deal of money. This decision has been entered into, not recklessly, but after a careful survey to get very best conditions for our aged and needy people. This Province must keep abreast of the most advanced conditions in the world.

WOMENS MISSIONARY SOCIETY

The Womens Missionary Society of the Eastern Conference of the Lutheran Synod of Canada met in St. Peter's Lutheran Church Williamsburg, Wednesday, October 17.

The opening service was conducted by Rev. C. Cronmiller, pastor of St. Peters Congregation.

Mrs. H. Bjorklund of Montreal sang very pleasingly the sacred solo "From Day to Day.".

The president, Mrs. J. L. McMartin led in the Collect for Divine Guidance and Help, after which the business part was taken up.

Roll was called, 32 delegates responding from Montreal, Ottawa, Dunbar, Williamsburg, Riverside, and Morrisburg.

The President then gave her report which was submitted to the Committee for same. In this report she urged that each society represented take up the Extension Dept. work, as a benefit to those unable to attend the regular meetings.

That they organize a "Mission Study Class" for the winter months and observe the "Week of Prayer."

That they give a stated amount to the "Maeder Memorial Scholarship" and to the "Hoffman Memorial" at Waterloo Seminary.

The reading of the minutes of last year's meeting held in Ottawa, were taken up and the Treasurer's report given.

Each Society reported on the work done by them in past year, which was considered a splendid method to learn the ways and means taken to raise funds.

The election of officers for next two years then took place and resulted as follows:—

Pres.—Mrs. M. Schwerdtfeger.
Vice-Pres.—Mrs. H. Bjorklund.
Sec.-Treas.—Mrs. G. Barkley.
Treas.—Mrs. K. McIntosh.

Mrs. J. C. Casselman of Montreal gave a very interesting report on the Convention held in Johnstown, Pa., in Sept., giving us a glimpse of the immense work in foreign fields by the W.M.S. of the United Lutheran Church of America.

A Missionary hymn was sung, after which Miss Clark of Morrisburg gave a fine report on the work done by the Young Womens M. S., and of the very special and instructive meetings conducted by the young people, of whom there were more than four hundred delegates.

These reports gave us an insight in the great work of which we are a small part.

A standing vote of thanks was extended to the ladies of the congregation, who so kindly entertained the delegates and friends.

The meeting closed with the singing of a hymn, and praying the Lord's Prayer.

The evening session was in charge of Rev. L. McCreery and Rev. Cronmiller, who conducted the regular vesper service.

The auditorium was comfortably filled, and all felt that "it was good to have been here".

DOUBLE WEDDING

The home of Mr. Oscar Becksted at Elma was the scene of a very delightful double wedding ceremony on Wednesday, October 17th, 1928, the participating parties being, Mr. Weldon Beckstead, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Beckstead and Miss Gladys O'Shaughnessy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John O'Shaughnessy; Miss Annie B. Beckstead, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Beckstead, to Mr. Lawrence Bennett Black, son of Mr. L. Black of Morrisburg, the ceremony being performed by Rev. John Hurst of Elma.

The brides were charmingly attired in Poudre Blue Georgette trimmed with silver and sequins. The home was beautifully decorated with flowers and autumn evergreens with a lovely wedding arch.

After the ceremony a sumptuous repast was served after which Mr. and Mrs. Weldon Beckstead left on a motor trip for Niagara and other points. Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Black for an eastern trip.

Out of town guests were Mrs. Nicol of Ottawa and Mrs. Black of Morrisburg. The happy couples were the recipients of many beautiful and useful gifts. They have the best wishes of their many friends in the community.
