Robins Build Over School Doo r

It surely must be a satisfaction to the Public school teachers of Chesterville and a compliment to the pupils, when their nature study teaching has borne such fruit that a pair of robins can build their home on the ledge directly over the main entrance to the school without being molested.

James Cochrane, Winchester

On Sunday, May 7th, at 7 a. m. there pssed away one of Winchester's most highly esteemed and oldest residents in the person of Mr James Cochrane, aged 82 years He is survived by his wife, one daughter, Mrs. F. A. Campbell of Winchester, and one son Benjamin of Napanee. The funeral service was conducted at the home of Mrs. Campbell where he resided, on Tuesday, at 2 p. m. by his pastor Rev. J. Glassford.

A Sure Sign

Walkerton Telescope:—Prof. W. H. Lynch, a prominent Missouri educationist, is a strong advocate of the use of the local newspaper in the schools as a text book. He says: "Anybody who can read the Lord's Prayer should take the home paper. If I were blind, deaf and dumb, and could not read, I would take the newspaper and have it thrown in at the gate, so that people passing my home would say "There is one person interested in the welfare and upbuilding of his own community."

Reported Death of Arthur Brown Untrue

Like Mark Twain, Mr. Arthur Brown of Morrisburg, can say that the report published last week of his death "is very much exaggerated." Like other local papers of the country The Record was led into the error of announcing the death of the former inspector of Public schools for Dundas by the Toronto daily papers publishing the item under a Brockville heading. Mr. Brown has been very ill but we are informed that he is now much better and making satisfactory progress toward recovery.

Toronto Early Express Derailed

No. 24 C. P. R. express due at Chesterville 5.10 a. m., arrived here two hours late on Monday morning. The cause was the derailment of the four sleeping cars of the train through the spreading of rails at or near Maberly. Engine, baggage cars and day coaches got by the bad spot in safety, but not so the "sleepers," which left the rails and bumped along the ties. Fortunately they remained right side up, and of the scores of passengers in dreamland only one suffered hurt, and he was a man who had one of his toes injured. As one wag among the passengers observed, "This was the toe-tal casualty list." After transference of the occupants of the sleeping-cars to the day coaches, the train proceeded on its way. Two of the passengers were Messrs. Clare Purdy and Herbert Robertson of Smiths Falls, who boarded the train at Sharbot Lake. Having gone but a short distance from the Lake before the derailment both of the Smiths Falls men were wide awake, the former saying that he had a presentiment of danger and that when the emergency brakes went on he was standing in the the passage-way of the car with a hand on right and left seats.

Premierr Drury Gives Advice To Graduates

Premier Drury was the central figure at the spring convocation of Queen's University yesterday afternoon. In a speech that was well received he gave some advice to the graduates. He reminded them that life was the real university, and urged them to be good students and to play the game. He warned them against getting "swelled heads," and impressed on them that all men were equal, and that there should be no favorites.

E. W. Beatty, president of the C. P. R., presided in his capacity as chancellor, and conferred honorary degrees.

Cornwall Man Killed When Tank Collapses

An accident attended with fatal results occurred in the yards at the factory of Beach Furniture, Limited, Cornwall, Tuesday afternoon, when the large tank collapsed, crushing to death D. Clavette, a married man of East Cornwall, and injuring John Crawford and Earl Whitford, a junior hockey player, the latter only slightly. The company was considering letting a contract for the removal of the tank, which they proposed to replace with a steel tank. The receptacle had a capacity of 15,000 gallons and was made of wood. At the time of the collapse it contained approximately 8,000 gallons.

The company placed George Hough, master mechanic at the factory, in charge of the men, and they were engaged in taking down the frost casing, which protects the pipe through which the water enters the tank. Mr. Hough and Julius Miller, manager of the factory, had just left the men at their work and were about 12 feet above the ground when suddenly there was a crash and the tank fell in a heap of timber and iron girders to the ground, pinning Clavette beneath it and killing him instantly. The water scattered over the ground in torrents when the tank fell.

Lawn Bowlers, Attention!

Tomorrow, Friday evening at eight o'clock, in Molsons Bank, a meeting will be held of all those interested or who would like to become interested in lawn bowling, for the purpose of re-organization of the Chesterville club. The primary object of this meeting is to induce men young, old and middle-aged to come out and play the game of lawn bowling of an evening. Your fees, whatever they may be, are not the consideration, it is your presence and participation in the game that is most desired. Everything for the enjoyment of the game is here—good greens, lots of bowls and veteran players for coaching in the fine points of the game. All that is lacking is enthusiasm among a sufficient number to make the play interesting. This invitation is to you. Will you come? If you do not the other alternative is the passing of lawn bowling in Chesterville. The greens will not be kept up, the implements will be disposed of, the enclosing fence sold and one of the finest and oldest games will be but a memory in Chesterville.

Growing Wiser

Canada is not a bad place for a home. This is the verdict of the Manitoba Mennonites, who went to Mexico to escape the obnoxious educational laws and other regulations of civilized life. The exiles have only been away a few weeks and now they want to get back. Mexico is hot. The land is not suitable. Surroundings are unpleasant. There is no guarantee of peace and safety. These and other disadvantages more than offset the privilege of bringing up their children in ignorance. They find it better to know English in Canada than to know only German in Mexico. These people are not the stuff to be martyrs, or even pioneers. They claim the convenience and protection of an organized community without belonging to it.

Yesterday Was Clean-up Day

Yesterday afternoon all the stores of Chesterville were closed to permit of a clean-up of all premises and the carting of the refuse to the dump. The clean-up was fairly general and more or less thorough. The temptation was too strong in a few cases where perfectly lovely angle worms came into view, not to use them, especially as fish in the Nation were biting freely.

Motor Cars Damaged at Russell

Russell Leader—We have often been told not to stand too long on the street or some one would tie a horse to us, but on Saturday last Mr. Walter Fitzsimmons left his Chevrolet car standing on the corner, and Rev. Mr. Jobb, of Morewood, made a noble effort to park his car on top of Fitzimmons'. While turning the corner the radius rod on Mr. Jobb's car broke, causing it to get beyond control. Whether or not it was a case of "birds of a feather' it flocked straight at the standing car, and in consequence both cars were considerably damaged.

Raising Persian Lambs

Vanleek Hill has the honor of being the first place in Ontario that a Persian lamb has been born, Mr. Chas. H. Reasbeck, Silver Fox Rancher, is the first breeder to engage in the Karakul Fur sheep industry, in the province of Ontario. He recently purchased fifteen head of selected pure bred Karakul sheep, consisting of two rams and thirteen ewes, in which there are three distinct blood lines. His flock, since importation has increased to twenty-one head and more lambs are expected.—Vankleek Hill Review.

Shaving a Crime

The city council of Sacramento, Cal., has made shaving a crime. For the next thirty days any male resident who touches his cheek with a razor will violate an ordinance passed by the city council. Offenders will not only face the possibility of arrest and a fine, but the scorn of a whole city bent on making the days of "49 celebration," which closes there May 28, an event long to be remembered, if only for its whisker crop. Citizens are stocking up with clothes, hats and boots of the types worn by the old goldseekers.

J. J. Gardiner--Smith's Falls.

Death came with startling suddenness last Saturday evening to one of Smiths Falls' most prominent citizens, in the person of J. Joseph Gardiner, after an exceptionally busy day. He had gone to his home and partaken of the evening meal, when shortly afterwards he suddenly collapsed and died almost instantly. The late Mr. Gardiner was born there about forty-seven years ago. In addition to his real estate and insurance business he was also manager of the Canadian National Railways' town ticket and express office. He took a very keen interest in municipal affairs, serving for some years on the School Board.

Threw Her Infant From Car Window

On Tuesday a bundle of infant's clothing was found in front of the Academy of Music at Lindsay. It was reported to Chief of Police Short, who consulted the secretary of the Children's Aid Society and discovered that the latter had received word from the Social Service Department of Toronto regarding a Verulum Township girl. It had developed that this girl had been in the Toronto General Hospltal and on Tuesday returned home. While the train was travelling between Burketon and Lindsay the girl stripped the babe of its clothing and threw it out of the coach window. She disposed of the clothing later when she arrived in Lindsay. To a Provincial police officer, who arrived in Lindsay the girl made a complete confession. She said that while on her way from Burketon to Lindsay the child became cross and developed convulsions. She got tired of caring for the child and decided to throw the child out of the window.

Fined for Disturbing Church Service

Two youths at Manotick were fined one dollar and costs by Magistrate Joynt on Monday after pleading guilty to a charge of disturbing a religious service in the Anglican Church there on March 26th. The sentence was suspended. Three others charged with a like offence pleaded not guilty and the charges against them dismissed as the prosecution had no evidence to offer.

The disturbance took the form of the ringing of the church bell, which also acts as the fire bell of the village, during the period the congregation was worshipping. The ringing of the bell caused a considerable commotion and resulted in the members of the congregation abruptly leaving the service. beleiving that the village was on fire.—Carp Review

No Fodder to Feed Cattle
Farmer's Herd is Seized

A herd of cattle in the township of Loughborough has been seized by the Kingston Humane Society inspector under the Provincial Act owing to the inability of the owner to provide feed for the animals. The local society president J. R. C. Dobbs, states that he will buy feed for them and as they become fit for the market they will be sold to pay for the feed.

The herd consists of forty head and there was no fodder on the premises and the owner had no money with which to buy it. The situation constituted cruelty to animals according to the interpretation of the Act by the local inspector and the matter being brought to his attention he was compelled to make an investigation and seize the cattle.

House flies have a codsiderable range of flight. Some that were dusted with finely powdered red chalk and afterwards released were taken within less than twenty-four hours in fly-traps six miles away. Observations at Kebecca Shoal off the coast of Florida seem to show that flies came down the wind from Cuba ninety-five miles away.

Cut Chore-Time in Half

Do you realize that an average farm uses one ton of water a day? How long are you going to handle this tremendous bulk by old-fashioned, wasteful methods?

Modern farmers let the wind pump and distribute their water. They cut chore-time in half. They have running water in the house, the barn and stables, and pasture.

Not with old-fashioned windmills. But with big, sturdy, efficient double-geared Toronto Windmills, constructed throughout of galvanized steel, strong and rust-proof.

A Toronto Pump and a Toronto Water-System, combined with a Toronto Windmill, gives you a real city water service.

Toronto Pumps and Water Systems can also be supplied with a gasoline engine or electric motor.

Our Windmill, Pumps and Water System booklets show you how to cut out waste time and energy on your farm—how to make more money. Write for them. They are sent free.

Song Birds and Hungry Cats

The following item was taken from Forest and Stream and is very applicable to Chesterville and vicinity.—With the return of the migrating millions of song birds, which nest and rear their young in the north, public attention is called to the importance of guarding these feathered visitors from the prowling cats that are sharpening their paws and licking their jaws in anticipation of the animal feast on soft meated fledglings. For white insect eating birds are protected from the man who would kill them or rob their nests, the cat is still permitted freely to vary an unlimited menu with young robins, thrushes, wood peckers, orioles, wrens and other songsters. It is urged that precautions be taken wherever possible to keep cats out of trees in city and farm gardens during the nesting season. Six inch collars of tin set at right angles to the tree trunk, six or eight feet above the ground have been found to be a cheap and effective contrivance to keep the cats away from the bird nests, both day and night. It is an unwritten rule among sportsman that a cat found stalking in the woods or fields shall be shot. Farmers have discovered that once it tastes wild bird meat, the best pet cat loses any value it may have had as a mouser As far as the statutes are concerned the cat still utilizes its nine lives to advantage in bird hunting. The writer knows of a summer cottage on our own Mississippi Lake under the veranda of which four cats had taken up their abode. Upon the floor being taken up, enough feathers and bird bones of every variety from partridge to sparrow, were discovered to fill seven or eight pails and we are heartily in favor of every lover of the birds, shooting prowling cats on sight.

SAID HE COULD NEVER BE WELL

"Fruit-a-tives" Restored Him to Health

159 Avenue Pius IX, Montreal

"For three years, I was a terrible sufferer from Dyspepsia and my general health was very bad. I consulted a physician and took his medicine but I did not improve; and finally he told me that I could not be cured.

At this time, a friend advised me to try "Fruit-a-tives". After taking two boxes, I was greatly relieved; and this fruit medicine made me completely well. My digestion and general health are now splendid".

Walt Mason's Ontario Appetite

In long gone days I used to toil on good, old, rich East Whitby soil. I fed the calves their sparkling milk, until they look as fine as silk; I milked the cows and fed the sheep and rocked the setting hens to sleep, and did about a million chores that kept me hustling out of doors.

And thus I gained an appetite that was an everlasting fright. Now that I'm old and fat and grey I look back to that vanished day, and wish that I could eat once more as I could eat in days of yore. Alas! there's nothing tempts me now! They broil a section of the cow, and hand it to me on a plate, with other dishes six or eight, and I just nibble in despair, and wish the blame grub wasn't there. And if I eat a pound or two, and drink the coffee that they brew, my works inside begin to squeak, and I lie down and roll and shriek, Dyspepsia has me for its own, and I just sit around and groan.

And so I look back in my woe to those glad days of long ago when I held plow and harrow down, not far away from Brooklin town!

The farmers said it was a treat to stand around and watch me eat. The women cooked all kinds of grub, and brought it to me by the tub, and I just threw the viands in until I couldn't wag my chin, and then my heart was sad and sore because I couldn't eat some more.

No inward qualms kept me awake; I had no colic and no ache; when next the dinner whistle blew they found me there as good as new.

Now I must feed on malted milk and other fluids of that ilk; if I get rash and eat a tart the doctors take me all apart and slice my system with a saw, and charge for every breath they draw.

What wonder, then, that I look back along the past years' winding track, to brave, glad days when I was young, before my knees were badly sprung? What wonder if I weep to-night for that long-vanished appetite, the appetite I used to know when I was wielding fork and hoe?

Good Ration Assists in Egg Production

How the profits in poultry-keeping are influenced by feeding a good ration is shown by records of 200 well-matured White Leghorn pullets at the Ohio Experiment Station.

During November and December these birds laid 4,805 eggs, which sold for $240.25; they consumed 2,745 pounds of feed, which cost $44.03. They returned $196.22 over feed cost.

The dry mash for the most productive lot of fowls consisted of ground corn, two parts; middlings, one part; ground oats, one part; meatscraps one part, by weight. In addition, a grain mixture of three parts corn, one of wheat and one of oats was fed.

Grain and mash were fed in equal parts the grain was fed in troughs in the evening so all the birds would go to roost well-fed. The small amount of grain left in the troughs was scattered in the litter for the following morning. This method of feeding grain induced the birds to eat more mash.

Mash was kept before the birds in open feeders, five feet of eating space being provided for each fifty birds.

Oyster shell and grit were furnished in hoppers. The green feed consisted of one pound of dry oats daily to fifty birds, fed when the sprouts were one to two inches long.

"Mamma gave you the biggest piece of cake," said five-year-old Edward to his little sisier. "She always gives you the most of everything."

"Well, never mind, Edward," replied the little girl; "she is going to put mustard plasters on us when we go to bed and I'll ask her to give you the biggest one."

Seven of One Family are Dead
Result of Eating Wild Parsnip

Seven members of the Lacroix family, prominent residents of L'Orignal, died Thursday under particularly tragic circumstances as a result of eating a poisonous herb known as wild parsnip. Just where the herbs were obtained is not known, but it is believed that the children of the family dug them up along the banks of the Ottawa River.

The deaths followed at intervals within the space of four hours after the noonday meal. The dead are Joseph Lacroix, grandfather, aged 75 years; Napoleon Lacroix, aged 40, the father of the victims; Mrs. C. Lacroix, his wife, and four children, aged 11, 10, 8 and 6 years respectively.

Mrs Lacroix was the first of the victims to show the effect of the poisoning. Twenty minutes after the meal she was noticed by a neighbor to collapse in her garden. Assistance was rendered, but nothing was thought of her illness because of the fact that she had not been in good health for some time past

General alarm was felt shortly afterwards, however, when Leopold, aged 10, and his sister, Louise, aged 8, frantic with fear, ran down the main street crying that their mother and father were seriously ill, succeeded in calling a doctor, and then on the way back to their home, suddenly collapsed on the roadside. They died in the arms of neighbors shortly afterwards in great pain.

Doctors worked heroically on the remaining members of the family, finally resorting to the use of strychnine injections in their efforts to counteract the effect of the poison already in the systems of the victims. Their efforts proved unavailing, their patients dying at short intervals until the two youngest members of the family alone survived.

Dr. Kirby, who is the coroner for Prescott County, stated that the wild parsnip has its origin in the regular family parsnip. He explained that the parsnip, after it has been in the ground for over two years becomes impregnated with strychnine, which increases in potency as the root matures.

That the roots which caused the death at L'Orignal of Napoleon Lacroix, his wife, his father and four of the six children were those of wild hemlock and not parsnips is the opinion of Dr. Hans T. Gussow, Chief Botanist at the Dominion Experimental Farm. Dr. Gussow said that he would be reluctant to accept the theory that eating parsnips, caused the sad disaster. Reports of similar nature he said, are made to the Government but on investigation it is generally found that these roots which caused death were not parsnips, but some poisonous root.

Dr. Gussow does not think these roots were parsnips. He stated that the roots of parsnips after the second year would waste away, and the new seeds would grow up. Water hemlock or some other poisonous root might colloquailly be called wild parsnip. It grows wild like a parsnip, and is very poisonous. Dr. Gussow said he could not understand how any grown-up person could eat a root like water hemlock.

Regretted His Purchase

When John O. Robinson, Trenton, wanted to buy the 100-acre farm of Chas. McDonald, in the township of Sophiasburg, Prince Edward county, the latter was reluctant to sell, but at last fixed a price of $10,000 on it, advising the would-be purchaser to think the matter over, and not to be too hasty, because success depended, he said, on hard work and strict attention to business. Robinson bought, however, in February, 1920, and McDonald and his wife retired to Picton. Later Robinson brought action for $3,000 damages for alleged misrepresentation. Incidentally Justice Orde remarks that there had been a decline in farm values. Some of the suggested misrepresentation is described as absurd, and the action is dismissed with costs.

The Rev. Smuggins: "Ye seemed awful affectit by my sermon the day, Mrs. Donald."

Mrs. Donald: "The sermon! Hoch, no! But if someyin handit ye a cayenne losenge instead o' a peppermit yin, ye'd be affectit yoursel'."

AERO CUSHION INNER TIRES

Fit Any Casing

NO Punctures Blowouts — NO Rimcuts Pumps — NO Patches Extra Tubes

SAVES TEMPER, TIRES, TIME AND TROUBLE.

First Cost : Last Cost

FACTS WORTH KNOWING

The automobile today is nearly perfect apart from puncture, blowouts and rimcuts to the pneumatic tires, which furnish the greatest expense, worry and danger to the user.

The Aero-Cushion Tire renders the automobile practical for both pleasure and business.

The Aero-Cushion tire is an inner tire, circular in form, molded in size and shape to fit the outer casing, composed of pure para rubber, highly porous, which makes it very light and resilient. This tire rides as easy as the present air tire when inflated soft and at less pressure than required. In effect it is an air-filled tire in which the air is divided into countless numbers of pores and air chambers instead of being confined in one large rubber tube. This air is imprisoned in these pores without pressure, rendering it impossible to escape by puncture or cuts

ECONOMY

As casings will average approximately 15,000 miles you save the cost of at least three sets of outer casings, besides many sets of air tubes. Furthermore after the wearing of one set of casings, you still have your set of Aero Inner Tires to be transferred to other casings, rendering a purchase of Aero-Cushion Inner Tires a very economical investment.

WORN OUT CASING

When the old casings are worn down to the last fabric. The Aero Cushion Inner Tires are transferred to another set of casings, at a nominal charge.

DURABILITY

The life itself of the Aero-Cushion Tire is indefinite; being indestructible from ordinary use, and it is practically impossible to tear or wear it out.

LIFE OE CASINGS

From the rigorous tests which have been made it has been established that with the use of Aero-Cushion Tires, your outer casings will average approximately 15,000 miles, being three times the mileage of air-filled tires.

Economy is the Keystone of Success - - Practice it by Buying

AERO CUSHION INNER TIRES

You're tired of air in automobile tires—everyone using it is. The constant work, trouble and fear is always with you. It has possibly never occurred to you that the troublesome air tube could be a thing of the past. This was a long tedious study with us until we successfully produced Aero Cushion Inner Tires. Our product was absolutely the first of its kind produced in the United States. Having been granted patent rights on our formula under the laws of the United States and Canada; and since 1915 has been used with absolute success by thousands of users of pleasure cars, electric, hearses and front wheels of Ford trucks, farm trucks and heavy trucks that were formerly equipped with Air tires in front and solid tires in the rear.

Says Indians Ready For a Finish Fight

Provincial and Federal authorities are passing the responsibility from one to another for action to be taken in connection with the threatening attitude of the Six Nation Indians on the reservation near Brantford, Ont. The surviving chiefs of these tribes, including Mohawks, Senecas, Onondagas and Tuscaroras, met recently and with historic ceremony over the traditional wampum, resolved to resist aggression.

The chief, General Deskaheh, is reported to have declared:

"Woe betide the armed force which sets hostile foot upon our soil. If one man of that armed force returns it will be because 4,000 braves have been slain."

The trouble arises over the attempt of the authorities to evict an Indian family from their homestead. At the council meeting aforesaid, it was resolved that the Dominion Government investigate the operations of its Indian Department.

Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, and head of the Dominion Indian Department, said that he regarded the matter as one for the Attorney-General of Ontario to deal with. The officials of the said Attorney-General's department declare that they are in no way responsible in the matter.

Canadian Postage Stamps Being Changed in Color

A number of changes in the color of Canadian postage stamps are being made, to conform with the new international regulations. A straw colored one-cent stamp is being issued, to replace the old green cent stamp, which has been in use for many years; and as the various offices exhaust their supply of green stamps, they will be replaced with the new issue. The red two cent stamp is being replaced with a green stamp, and should a six-cent stamp ever be issued, it will take the red color hitherto distinguishing the two cent stamp. The five cent stamp is of a violet shade, while the ten cent stamp is blue.

Prince of Wales Takes Japanese By Storm

P. C. Fenwick, London, Eng., antimony manufacturer, who arrived here from Japan on the Canadian Pacific "Empress of Russia," said that when he left the flowery kingdom the Prince of Wales was in the midst of his tour. The enthusiasm with which he was received passed description Mr. Fenwick declared. Everywhere he has taken the country by storm.

"The Prince has also rather shocked conservative Japan on two or three occasions, I think,,' said Mr. Fenwick. "On one occasion, when coming down a narrow cart-track while on a trip in the mountains, the Prince insisted on manning the shafts of a rickshaw in which Admiral Sir Lionel Halsey was seated.

"Halfway down a wheel came off, throwing Sir Lionel out and upsetting the Prince. To those who rushed forward to rescue him the Prince said:—Get a snapshot of this, I want to send it home."

One of the Prince's aides told Mr. Fenwick that the Japanese courtiers were greatly shocked at the idea of the heir-apparent hauling one of his future subjects around in a rickshaw.

Save Fifty-Thousand More

The Canadian Committee of the Save The Children Fund is not relaxing its efforts. It feels that while there has been a fine response to the appeal, there is still much that Canada can do to help to alleviate the distress in Russia.

The Fund has now gone beyond $380,000. This sum is sufficient to bring relief to about 75,000 children. When we remember, however, that there are in the famine stricken regions of Russia more than 33,000,000 people who are suffering the pangs of hunger what Canada has done so far is a very small part of what ought to be done in the name of humanity. The same effort repeated will add another 50,000 or 75,000 children to those who are now receiving food at the hands of the Canadian Committee.

Is this not something to strive for? Are those who have not subscribed so far to be unresponsive to the cry that comes from Russia, the cry of little children who through no fault of their own have been bereft of the ordinary comforts and necessities which are the right of every child born into this world?

Send your subscription to Sir George Burn, Treasurer of the "Save the Children Fund," Ottawa, or forward it through your local committee or bank.

The Home Town

(The Ottawa Journal)

What man has not felt something tugging at his heart strings when, in some far-off spot, he hears on alien lips the name of his home town? How he warms to the friendly word; and how fiercely he resents criticism of the old town. How eagerly he pounces upon a newspaper with the long familiar name, and reads it through from weather forecast to the obscure advertisement in the extreme left-hand corner of the last page. As a citizen by his own fireside, he had exercised a citizen's inalienable right to criticize the paper, to sneer at its editorials, to turn in disgust from the puerilities of its funny page, to scoff at its society column, to condemn its standards of news value. Now he nods approvingly as he reads, perhaps, the dogmatic assertions of a dyspeptic editorial writer; a tolerantly reminiscent smile greets the familiar flowers of speech of the cub reporter, he chuckles over moth-eaten jokes and thrice old tales. And he fairly revels in the society page, the local notes, and the advertisemenrs, for do not these take him back on the wings of imagination to the old home town? Can this be "Fatty" Smith, whom he ducked in the swimming pool a quarter of a century ago, and who had drifted quite out of his recollection while they lived in the same town? By George, it must be—same initials--now apparently a fat alderman. And here was, or he was much mistaken, another acquaintance of other days, presenting her husband with a son. She had been one of his very first sweethearts. He had loved her passionately at the mature age of eleven. He could still remember her freckles, and the dimples that glorified them. She had had many successors in his hobbledehoy age, but to-day he felt a sentimental interest in her. She was part of the atmosphere of the old home town. And this, by all that was wonderful, must be "Double Windows" Jones, the intellectual prodigy of the school—advertising a new and very efficient vacuum cleaner! How can one account for this intangible something that draws a man to his home town? Its manifestations may be seen everywhere, but its causes lie deep in the heart of the race. It has no particular relation to the character of the town. One may feel pride in the glorious history of his home town; or in the achievements of its citizens; or in the high standards of municipal Government; or in its stately buildings, or its magnificent site. But these things have nothing to do with one's affections for the old home town, which is none the less real and compelling though it possesses none of these advantages, and in the eyes of a stranger may be supremely dull and uninteresting. Do you not remember walking down Regent street, or Fifth avenue, or the Rue de Rivoli, and missing a heart-beat as you caught sight of a familiar face in the unfamiliar crowd? On Sparks street his face would have left you cold. You would have exchanged nothing more than indifferent nods. But on this alien street, you rush forward to shake him by the hand; his face lights with a welcoming smile; and you obstruct traffic while he gives you the latest news from the Old Home Town. The sentiment may be in-explicable, illogical, but is it not rather a precious possession in a more or less utilitarian age?

John D. Rockefeller took a little girl in Cleveland a ride in his car, and, after she had comfortably seated herself, he asked her, "Where would you like to go?"

"Oh, I don't care," the little miss replied, "Where do you want to go?"

"I," Mr. Rockefeller replied with a twinkle in his eye, "I want to go to heaven."

"Oh, Mr. Rockefeller," the girl exclaimed, "I guess you haven't got gasoline enough to take you there."

Poor Mary

"Mamma, why do they wax people?"

"They don't, Where did you ever get that idea?"

"I heard Uncle tell Papa that at midnight the party waxed Mary."

Known to Indians as "Suicide Plant"

The shocking L'Orignal tragedy brings home the need for a wider dissemination of knowledge along the lines of our native poisonous plants. That a little common knowledge in this regard would have saved seven people's lives only makes the matter worse.

It is not the rarity of such plants as the Water Hemlock, but the very fact of their abundant and commence occurrence that makes for lack of attention in the public mind. The deadly nature of Water Hemlock has been known so long to those who have any interest in such things that it seems hard to realize the general ignorance with respect to it. The Indian knew the plant well and called it "Suicide Plant," making use of the root when life became insupportable. His white brother shows no inclination to look into such matters until he is shocked into interest by some catastrophe such as the present.

The Water Hemlock is an erect, branching plant from two to six feet tall, with large leaves. The flowers are small and white in umbel-like clusters, similar to the carrot. The part by which it is most easily recognized, however, is the tuberous base of the stem and the swollen roots.

In Spring these roots, with their crisp, white flesh, sweet taste and pleasant odor, and crowned by a sprouting growth of fresh leaves, are very attractive, both to the taste and eye. They have quite often been eaten by the unsuspecting, always with results like those which have lately shocked the Province. It is a rare case, indeed, in which the doctor can arrive before death takes place, for this root in Spring is the most rapid plant poison we have. When one is cut across the poisonous cicutoxin can be seen oozing from its flesh in yellow, oily drops.

Fortunately, the plant is easily recognizable even at this stage. At the base of the stem is the characteristic bulbous portion from which the roots branch. When split in two this rootstock, as it is called, is seen to be crossed by numerous irregular partitions, separating narrow cavaties. Such partitions are found in no other Canadian plant and form an easily recognized danger sign.

Water Hemlock grows plentfully in moist places throughout Canada and is only one of many poisonous plants which everyone should learn to recognize. It should be stated that, although sometimes called "Wild Parsnip," it has no connection with the cultivated form.

Potato Cutture

(Experimental Farms Note)

Potatoes are easily grown. They are a very valuable cheap food. In one form or another they are wanted on everybody's table, every day, everywhere throughout the civilized world. Potatoes have been cultivated by Europeans for a little over three hundred years. They now require over thirty-five million acres of land and produce over five billion bushels of food annually. The average yield of this crop is about 144½ bushels per acre. The average yield in Canada is about 161½ bushels per acre. The following suggestions are given from experience and experiments on "Spud Island."

Soil—Potatoes do best in a warm, rich, deep sandy loam soil. They require a lot of moisture and should have good well drained soil.

Seed—Like begets like. The seed potato trade asks for Irish Cobbler and Green Mountain. They are recommended as among the best. Grow the potatoes that people want. Get seed free from disease. It is obtainable. Select it rigorously. Treat it with fungicides before cutting. Use large fresh sets.

Seed Bed—Potatoes require a lot of work and attention and like other worth while things, pay back most when they receive it. Plow and work the soil, make it friabie, work it thoroughly until the necessary tilth is obtained. A clover sod, top-dressed with 10 tons of barnyard manure, plowed in early autumn and thoroughly Spring worked makes a good seed bed for potatoes. Should your land need more fertility feed it with potato fertilizers.

Planting—Plant as soon as the land is warm enough. Do not allow the seed to get chilled before covering. Planting machines are satisfactory. Make the rows straight and from 30 to 36 inches apart. This will cheapen your cost of production. Plant the seed about 4 inches deep and from 12 to 14 inches apart.

Cultivation—Harrow the potato field with smoothing harrow before the young plants appear and once after they are up. Cover the plants with three inches of soil when three inches above the ground. The rear discs on the potato planter do this best. Use horse cultivator after every rain and at least every ten days until the plants crowd you out. Throw soil towards plants with each cultivation hilling them so that the tubers are all well covered.

Spraying is safe insurance that pays its own premiums. Start spraying in July and keep all the foliage covered with Bordeaux and poison or dust fungicides throughout the season until the first frost kills the disease spores.

Harvesting immature plants for seed. Dig potatoes in dry weather. When disease is present leave them in the ground until a frost occurs if possible. When the soil is very dry have the digger move a lot of clay so that the potatoes may not be injured by the machine. Handle all potatoes as carefully as eggs. Every bruise lowers their value and renders them more susceptible to disease. Allow them to sweat in the open and give them good ventilation and cool quarters for storage. Potato tubers must have air to live.

Barney Barnard, the famous Hebrew comedian of the English music-hall stage, had a new joke recently concerning a man who was bewailing the cost of keeping his son at college.

'Such expenses," he cried, "and the worst of all is the languages."

"Languages!" declared his friend. "How's that?"

"Well," said the agonized parent, presenting a statement, "here is an item: "Scotch—$50."

To Prevent Blindness

At a meeting of the New Brunswick egislature a regulation of the health department was passed requiring physicians nurses and midwives to instil a solution of silver into the eyes of babies at birth to prevent blindness. Hon. Dr. W. F. Roberts, the minister of health, explained that about fifty per cent of blindness occuring during birth was due to infection, and it was to combat this that the regulation was passed. The practice was already being carried out by a large percentage of the doctors. He announced that the department of health would supply physicians and others attending birth with the preparation.

The Shortest Thing in the world—

Isn't a mosquito's eyelash or a gnat's whisker, or any other part of any insect, whatsoever—IT IS THE MEMORY OF THE PUBLIC.

If you doubt this ask the first dozen men you meet the following questions :

When did the R34 cross the Atlantic ? Who was her pilot ? Ou what date was Lord Kitchener drowned ? What was the name of the ship that blew up and almost wiped out the city of Halifax ? What German submarine torpedoed the Lusitania ?

It is a safe bet that you would not get one correct answer.

Now do you see the necessity of persistent advertising ? When details of events of world wide importance are so soon forgotten how do you expect the public to remember you—and the kind and price of goods you sell—unless YOU TELL 'EM—and keep on telling them ?

THE WISE THOUGHT

(From Sketches of Irish Character, by Mrs. S. C. Hall.)

She was sitting under a fragrant lime tree that overhung a very ancient well; and, as the water fell into her pitcher, she was mingling with it the tunes of her 'Jews harp,' the only instrument upon which Norah Clary had learned to play. She was a merry maiden of sweet seventeen;' a rustic belle as well as a rustic beauty, and a terrible coquette;' and as she had what in Scotland they call a 'tocher,' in England a 'dowry;' and in Ireland a 'pretty penny o' money,' it is scarcely necessary to state, in addition, that she had —a bachelor. Whether the tune—which was certainly given in alto —was or not designed as a summons to her lover, I cannot take it upon myself to say; but her lips and fingers had not long been occupied, before her lover was at her side.

'We may as well give it up. Morris Donovan,' she said somewhat abruptly; 'look, t'would be as easy to twist the top off the great hill at Howth, as make father and mother agree about anyone thing. They've been playing the rule of contrary these twenty years, and its not likely they'll take a turn now.'

'It's mighty hard, so it is,' replied the handsome Morris, 'that married people can't draw to-gether. Norah, darlint! that wouldn't be the way with us. It's one we'd be in heart and, sowl, and an example of love and——'

'Folly,' interrupted the maiden, laughing, 'Morris, Morris, we've quarrelled a score o' times already; and a bit of a breeze makes life all the pleasanter. Shall I talk about the merry jig I danced with Phil Kennedy, or repeat what Mark Doolen said of me to Mary Grey?—eh, Morris?'

'Leave joking, now Norry; God only knows how I love you,' he said, in a voice broken by emotion: 'I'm yer equal as far as money goes; and no young farmer in the country can tell a better stock to his share than mine; yet I don't pretend to deserve you for all that; only I can't help saying that, when we love each other (now don't go to contradict me Norry, because ye've as good as owned and owned it over again), and yer father agreeable, and all, and to think that yer mother, just out of devilment, should be putting betwixt us for no reason upon earth, only to "spite" her lawful husband, is what sets me mad entirely and shows her to be a good for——'

'Stop, Mister Morris,' exclaimed Norah laying her hand upon his mouth, so as effectually to prevent a sound escaping; it's my mother ye're talking of, and it would be ill-blood, as well as ill-bred, to hear a word said against an own parent. Is that the pattern of yer manners, sir; or did ye ever hear me turn my tongue against one belonging to you?'

'I ask yer pardon, my own Norah,' he replied meekly, as in duty bound; 'for the sake of the lamb, we spare the sheep. Why not? and I'm not going to gain-say, but yer mother——'

'The least said's the soonest mended!' again interrupted the impatient girl. 'Good-even, Morris, and God bless you; they'll be after missing me within, and its little mother thinks where I am.'

'Norah above all the girls at wake or pattern, I've been true to you, We have grown together, and since ye were the height of a rose-bush, ye have been dearer to me than anything else on earth. Do Norah for the sake of our young hearts' love, do think if there's no way to win yer mother over. If ye'd take me with out her leave, sure its nothing I'd care for the loss of thousands, let alone what ye've got. Dearest Norah, think; since you'll do nothing without her consent, do think—for once be serious, don't laugh.'

'I'm not going to laugh, Morris, replied the little maid at last, after a very long pause; I've got a very wise thought in my head for once. His reverence, your uncle, you say, spoke to father—to speak to mother about it? I wonder (and he a priest) that he hadn't more sense! Sure, mother was the man; but I've got a wise thought. Good night, dear Morris; good night.'

The lass sprang lightly over the fence into her own garden, leaving her lover perdu at the other side, without possessing an idea of what her 'wise thought' might be. When she entered the kitchen, matters were going on as usual—her mother bustling in style, and as cross as a bag of weasles.'

'Jack Clary, said she, addressing herself to her husband, who sat quietly in the chimney corner smoking his doodeen, 'its well ye've got a wife who knows what's what! God help me! I've little good of a husband, barring the name! Are ye sure Black Nell's in the stable?' The sposo nodded. 'The cow and the calf had they fresh straw?' Another nod. 'Bad cess to ye, can't ye use yer tongue, and answer a civil question?' continued the lady.

'My dear,' he replied, 'sure one like you has enough talk for ten,'

This very just observation was, like most truths, so disagreeable, that a severe storm would have followed, had not Norah stepped up to her father and whispered in his ear, 'I don't think the stable door is fastened,' Mrs. Clary caught the sound and, in no gentle terms ordered her husband to attend to the comforts of Black Nell. 'I'l go with father myself and see,' said Norah. 'That's like my own child, always careful,' observed the mother, as the father and daughter closed the door.

'Dear father,' began Norah, 'it isn't altogether about the stable I wanted ye, but—but—the priest said something to you to-day about—Morris Donovan.'

'Yes' darling, and about yerself, my sweet Norry.'

'Did ye speak to mother about it?'

'No, darling, she's been so cross all day. Sure I go through a dale for piece and quietness. If I was like other men, and got drunk and wasted, it might be in rasou; but—— As to Morris, she was very fond of the boy til she found that I liked him; and then, my Jewel, she turned like sour milk all in a minute. I'm afraid even the priest 'll get no good of her.'

'Father, dear, father,' said Norah, 'suppose ye were to say nothing about it, good or bad, and just pretend to take a sudden dislike to Morris, and let the priest speak to her himself, she'd come round.'

'Out of opposition to me, eh?'

'Yes'

'And let her gain the day then?—that would be cowardly,' replied the farmer, drawing himself up, No I won't.'

'Father, dear, you don't understand,' said the cunning lass; 'sure ye're for Morris; and when we are—that is, if—I mean—suppose—father, you know what I mean, she continued, and luckily the twilight concealed her blushes—'if that took place its you that would have yer own way.'

'True for ye, Norry my girl, true for ye; I never thought of that before!' and, pleased with the idea of 'tricking' his wife, the old man fairly capered for joy. 'But stay awhile—stay; aisy, aisy!' he recommended; how am I to manage? Sure the priest will be here himself tomorrow morning early; and he's out upon a station now, so there's no speaking for him; he's no way quick either; we'll be bothered entirely if he comes in on a suddent.'

'Leave it to me, dear father—leave it all to me!" exclaimed the animated girl; only pluck up a spirit, and wherever Morris's name is mentioned, abuse him—but not with all yer heart, father—only from the teeth out."

When they re-entered, the fresh-boiled potatoes sent a warm curling steam to the very rafters of the lofty kitchen; they were poured out into a large wicker dish, and the top of the pile rested a plate of coarse white salt; noggins of butter milk were filled on the dresser; and on a small round table a cloth was spread, and some delf plates awaited the more delicate repast which the farmer's wife was herself preparing.

"What's for supper, mother?' inquired Norah, as she drew her wheel towards her, and employed her fairy foot in whirling it round.

'Plaguy snipeens,' she replied: 'bits o' bog chickens, that you've always such a fancy for; Barney Cleary kilt them himself.'

'So I did,' said Barney, grinning; 'and that stick wid a hook, of Morris Donovan's, is the finest thing in the world for knocking 'em down.'

'If Morris Donovan's sick touched them, they shan't come here,' said the farmer, striking the poor little table such a blow with his clenched hand, as made not only it, but Mrs. Clary jump.

'And why so, pray?' asked the dame.

'Because nothing belonging to Morris, let alone Morris himself, shall come into this house,' replied Clary; 'he's not to my liking anyhow, and there's no good in his bothering here after what he won't get.'

'Excellent!' thought Norah.

'Lord save us!' ejaculated Mrs. Clary, as she placed the grill snipes on the table, 'what's come to the man?' Without heeding his resolution, she was proceeding to distribute the savoury 'birdeens,' when, to her astonishment, her usually tame husband threw the dish and its contents into the flames; the good woman absolutely stood for a moment aghast. The calm, however, was not a long duration. She soon rallied, and commenced hostilities: 'How dare you, ye spalpeen, throw away any of God's mate after that fashion, and I to the fore? What do you mane, I say?'

'I mane, that nothing touched by Morris Donovan shall come under this roof; and if I catch that girl of mine looking at the same side o' the road he walks on, I'll tear the eyes out of her head, and send her to a nunnery!'

'You will! And dare you to say that to my face, to a child o' mine! You will, will ye?—we'll see my boy! I'll tell ye what, if I like, Morris Donovan shall come into this house, and what's more, be master of this house; and that's what you never had the heart to be yet, ye poor old snail!' So saying Mrs. Clary endeavoured to rescue from the fire the hissing remains of the burning snipes.

Norah attempted to assist her mother; but Clary, lifting her up, somewhat after the fashion of an eagle raising a golden wren with its claw, fairly put her out of the kitchen. This was the signal for fresh hostilities. Mrs. Clary stormed and stamped; and Mr. Clary persisted in abusing not only Morris, but Morris uncle, Father Donovan, until at last the farmer's helpmate swore, ay, and roundly too, by cross and saint, that, before the next sunset, Norah Clary should be Norah Donovan. I wish you could have seen Norry's eye, dancing with joy and exultation, as it peeped through the latch-hole; it sparkled more brightly than the richest diamond in our monarch's crown, for it was filled with hope and love.

The next morning, before the sun was fully up, he was throwing his early beams over the glowing cheek of Norah Clary; for her 'wise thought' had prospered, and she was hastening to the trysting tree, where, "by chance,' either morning or evening, she generally met Morris Donovan. I don't know how it is, but the moment the course of true love 'runs smooth,' it becomes very uninteresting, except to the parties concerned. So it is now left for me only to say, that the maiden, after a due and proper time consumed in teasing and tantalising her intended, told him her saucy plan, and its result. And the lover hastened, upon the wings of love (which I beg my readers clearly to understand are swifter and stronger in Ireland than in any other country), to apprise the priest of the arrangement, well knowing that his reverence loved his nephew, and niece that was to be (to saying nothing of the wedding supper, and the profits arising therefrom), too well, not to aid their merry jest.

What bustle, what preparation, what feasting, what dancing, gave the country folk enough to talk about during the happy Christmas holidays, I cannot now describe. The bride of course looked lovely, and 'sheepish;' and the bridegroom—but bridegrooms are always uninteresting One fact however, is worth recording. When Father Donovan concluded, before the bridal kiss had passed, Farmer Clary, without any reason that his wife could discover, most indecorously sprang up, seized a shilelah of stout oak, and, whirling it rapidly over his head, shouted, 'Carry me out! by the powers she's beat! we've won the day!—ould Ireland for ever! Success, boys!—she's beat, she's beat!' The priest, too, seemed vastly to enjoy this extempore effusion, and even the bride laughed outright. Whether the good wife discovered the plot or not, I never heard; but of this I am certain, that the joyous Norah never had reason to repent her 'wise thought.'

A negro mammy had four boys who were so polite and well-behaved that they excited the interest of the mammy's mistress.

"Mandy," said the mistress one day, "how did you manage to raise your boys so well."

"Ah'll tell you, missus," replied Mandy. "Ah raised dem boys with a barrel stave, and ah raised 'em frequent."

Poor paint looks streaked to the naked eye.

It looks like ridges and furrows under the magnifying glass.

It's the Valleys in Paint That Make it Poor

The Valleys are the thin streaks
The Hills are the thick streaks

PAINT streaks are caused by the brush marks. No matter how much it is brushed, if the paint is cheap the brush marks are bound to show.

Good paint levels up to a smooth surface. Cheap paint dries with hills and valleys that are alternately strong and weak.

Just as a chain is only as strong as its weakest link, so is a film of paint only as good as its thinnest places—the valleys.

Most paints are made of only three things. Lowe Brothers High Standard is made of six—three more ingredients that exhaustive laboratory and practical tests have shown to be necessary to make good paint.

Add to this the fact that these ingredients are more finely ground, and you can understand why High Standard will always smooth out to a uniformly thick surface. Which is also the reason it lasts longer, and looks better as long as it lasts.

Come in and see the sample panels and ask for literature.

High Standard goes on smooth and stays smooth. That's why it looks better and lasts longer.

Gasoline Up in Price

Notification of an increase in the price of gasoline has been received by the dealers here. The increase which went into effect Tuesday is 1 1-2 cents a gallon, and sends the price of gasoline up to 40 cents a gallon retail. On the other hand, there is a slight falling off in the price of coal oil. Coal oil has dropped one cent a gallon.

Wood May Become Important as Fuel

In view of the threatened difficulty in obtaining coal in the near future, the question of the value of wood as a fuel again becomes important. According to the Forest Products Laboratories of the Department of the Interior, Canada, the main considerations in selecting wood for fuel are its weight and dryness. Pound for pound, all woods, equally dry, have about the same heating value as a ton of coal, but in the case of soft-woods, as much as two cords would, in some instances, be necessary to get the same amount of heat.
