Judgement in Favor of Separate School.

The following case was heard in the Divisional Court at Toronto on Tuesday and while judgment was reserved at the time of trial, the decision has since been given in favor of the Separate School.

Before Mullock, C. J. Clute, J., Riddell, J.

Chesterville Roman Catholic Separate School Trustees v. Village of Chesterville.—E. E. A. DuVernet, K. C., for defendants, appealed from judgement of County Court of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, in favor of plaintiffs for the recovery of $105.-81 and interest from 14th December, 1905 and costs. The action was brought to recover the amount of school taxes paid by two men, McCloskey and O'Keefe, and credited by the defendants to the Public School Board of the village, but which the plaintiffs alleged should have been credited to the Separate School Board. The main issue was as to whether or not one Father Quinn had authority to give the notice provided by sec. 42 of the separate schools act, for McCloskey and O'Keefe. D. B. Maclennan, K. C., for plaintiffs, opposed appeal. Reserved.

Winter Thunder.

We had the first storm of the season on Friday. It was not the regulation thunder shower that is associated in one's mind with a sultry summer day, negligees and white dusks, ruined water trips, or bedraggled picnic parties, but a sharp driving shower accompanied by a temperature that demanded fur coats and other warm clothing. Lots of people have been asking what the thunder and lightning at this time of the year signify in the matter of weather.

Rev. John S. Burnett Died at Cornwall.

Rev. John S. Burnett, one of the best known clergymen of Eastern Ontario, died at his home at Cornwall on Sunday, aged 82 years. The late Mr. Burnett was born in Scotland, and after his ordination was for some years assistant pastor at Dumfries. He came to Canada about forty-four years ago, and was first stationed at Brantford for a couple of years. He then came to Cornwall, where he spent a year and a half as assistant to the late Dr. Urquhart, at St. John's Church. In 1868 he was appointed pastor of St. Andrew's Church, Martintown, where he remained twenty-eight years, retiring in 1896. Afterwards he spent a year or so in Scotland, but returned to Cornwall, where he has since resided.

He was an ex-Moderator of the Montreal and Ottawa Synod, and was several times Moderator of the Glengarry Presbytery. His wife died two years ago. The funeral services was held at St. John's Church Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Robinson Displeased.

Displeased at what? At the report the RECORD had last week of the case of Hamilton vs. Robinson, recently held at Cornwall, and which resulted in Mr. Robinson being unseated and ordered to pay the costs. Ever since the municipal election held here on January 6th last it has been a live issue, and we might say, still continues. While we were confident that irregularities exisited at the poll on that date, still there are very few people who follow them up, especially when a considerable amount of money has got to be guaranteed. Now that the case has been heard and judgment given, we believe that in future Chesterville will have a secret ballot.

In order that we should not appear as favoring any person in connection with the case—a position continued throughout—we took our report of the proceedings at Cornwall, from the Freeholder, published at that place, and which we supposed to be truthful and reliable, and not until Friday afternoon were we apprised of its incorrectness? when Mr. Robinson said we ought to know better than to insert such a report when we knew it was wrong. When we told him from where it was procured, he disbelieved us and stated that we had taken it from the Montreal Herald and that Mr. Hamilton had something to do with it. We said not, but he persisted in his belief, and certainly does not want to read the RECORD for a while, as he wanted us to discontinue sending it to his address.

We know that Mr. Robinson buys live stock in town, but we quietly informed him that neither he nor Mr. Hamilton published the RECORD.

If Mr. Robinson wants to be convinced as to where the item came from that appeared in the RECORD last week, he can have his wishes supplied by calling at this office, but I could not get him to come on Friday.

If Mr. Robinson wishes to correct the item that we published last week we will gladly do so over his own signature.

Alexandria Glengarrian Bought by B. B. Keefer.

The Glengarrian, the oldest established newspaper of Glengarry county was sold at Alexandria on Tuesday, by the Toronto General Trusts company under a chattel mortgage for $2,000, held in trust by it.

For many years the Glengarrian had a very successful history and wielded a powerful influence as an exponent of Conservative principles. In recent years the paper passed under an inefficient management with consequent loss and indebtedness and the forced sale today of its plant and good will, etc., resulted. The office is well equipped with modern printing and job plants, located in a progressive town of 2,500 inhabitants, and at the centre of a fine agricultural district, thickly populated with an intellegient reading people. Under capable management the Glengarrian should quickly recapture any ground which it may have lost and resume its old position as the leader of public opinion in that district.

Mr. B. B. Keefer of Ottawa, bought the property for $2,000, the face value of the mortgage.

Ault—MacArthur.

A very quiet wedding ceremony was performed on Tuesday afternoon of last week at 2 o'clock at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Hepburn, Canal street, Morrisburg, when a very popular young lady, of New York, formerly of Morrisburg, in the person of Miss Flora M. MacArthur, was united in holy wedlock to Mr C. S. Ault, the popular merchant of Aultsville, the ceremony being performed by Rural Dean Anderson. They were unattended. After the pleasing ceremony, the happy couple took the afternoon train for Montreal. On their return they will take up their residence in Aultsville. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and costly presents from her numerous friends in town and from a distance. The Leader joins with the happy couple's numerous friends in extending congratulations.—Leader.

$100.00 paid by Dr. Shoop for any recent case of Grippe or acute Cold that a 25 cent box of Preventics will not break. How is this for an offer? FINANCES FOR PAST YEAR

Receipts and Expenditures of the Province of Ontario.

Total receipts $8,320,419.19
Total expenditures 7,714,245.61

Surplus ....$ 606,173.58

In plain figures, that is the financial statement of the province of Ontario for the year 1907.

For details, there is a volume of some 800 printed pages, prepared under the auspices of Hon. A. J. Matheson, Treasurer, and through it he who would may plough.

During the year the entire turnover was $11,817,658.81, which included a balance of $3,310.636.70 on hand at the end of 1906. Of this, $2,429,329.15 was advanced to the T. & N. O., which left a balance on the proceeds of the bond issue of $1,561,881.61.

The surplus for 1906 was $429,299.32, and for 1907 the sum of $620,159.68.

BIGGEST REVENUE.

The two big sources of revenue were the mines and the subsidy. From lands, forests and mines the province got $3,068,494, and from the subsidy $1,734,020.68.

The receipts were the largest in the history of the province, being $1,180,-940.80 more than the year previous and $2,304,243 more than 1905. This is accounted for by several circumstances. The subsidy increased by $394,742, being one half-yearly instalment granted by the Dominion Government. Then the income from lands, forests and mines increased $815,294, including $1,085,000 received from the sale of Cobalt Lake. Advances of $7,-919 from liquor licenses, $50,000 from incorporation of companies, may also be noted.

The remaining $1,867,269.06 is made up of payments to the asylums, $2[illegible],-000 in interest, $120,000 in railway aid certificates, $587,162 under special statute, and many small amounts.

SPECIAL.

Of the special expenditures during the ye[illegible] the following were the most interesting:—Refund to Montreal River Pulp Co[illegible] $20,000; purchase of yacht Lurline, $10,000; members of Legislature visiting mining districts, $4,585; Prince Fushimi, $1,265; funeral late Hon. J. W. St. John. $2,454.35; English journalists, $4.500; mining engineers, $6,305; new roads in mining districts, $34,623.

During the year $17,925.49 was expended in enforcing the Liquor License Act, which includes the salaries of special officers. The trip of the British artillerymen to Cobalt cost $245.58.

The travelling expenses of Mr. A. H. U Colquhoun, [illegible]ty Minister of Education to the Congress on School Hygiene in London, Eng., were $526.34.

COST OF HYDRO.

The expenses and salaries in connection with the Hydro-Electric Power Commission amounted to $40.524.21, of which the salaries came to $14.448.42. Last year the expenditure was $26,000.

The Text Book Commission cost $7,-292. In the statement T. W. Crothers, one of the commissioners, is put down as receiving $192 on account of services, while the other two commissioners received $2,000 each. Mr. Crothers refused to accept payment over his expenses.

SCHOOL BOOKS CHEAP.

Of course, those who pay know all about the reduction in the price of school books. But, in reply to a question, Hon. Dr. Pyne put on record the fact that all the Public school books and English, French and German texts in High schools had been reduced from 50 to 66 per cent.

As to Separate school books, which are issued under different agreements, no changes or reductions have been made. It was also expected, added Dr. Pyne, that the prices of all text books would be reduced, and as soon as possible.

AN INCREASE IN REVENUE.

Financial Statement of Dominion for Eleven Months of Fiscal Year.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The financial statement of the Dominion for the eleven months of the current fiscal year, as entered on the books of the Finance Department on Feb. 19th, shows a total revenue of $87,607,299, an increase of $8,629,749, as compared with the corresponding months of 1906-07.

The total expenditure of the Consolidated Fund account for the eleven months was $60,720,353, an increase of $10,735,686. The capital expenditure for the period was $25,768,488, of which $20,183,830 was for public works, railways and canals, including the construction of the National Transcontinental Railway.

The surplus of the total revenue over the total expenditure for the eleven months is $1,118,458.

For the month of February the total revenue was $6,577,020, a decrease of $740,793, as compared with February last year.

For the eleven months, the total Post-office revenue has been $6,357,-320, an increase of $652,097. Customs revenue has increased by $7,040,878, and excise by $545,364.

RAISE THE AGE LIMIT.

Make Youths Under 20 Keep Away From Pool Rooms.

A despatch from Toronto says: Legislation to raise the age at which youths are permitted to frequent pool rooms was asked by representatives of the municipality of Orillia, who called on the Attorney-General on Wednesday. There was an agitation to reduce the license fee payable by those establishments and in view of the feeling against allowing boys to spend their time in them, the municipality suggests that youths under 20 be forbidden to visit them. The minimum age at present is 18 years.

PERISHED IN SCHOOL FIRE

165 Chi[illegible]n Caught in the Flames in [illegible] of Cleveland, Ohio.

[illegible]spatch from Cleveland, Ohio, [illegible] in a fire which completely destroyed the common school building in Collingwood, a suburb, on Wednesday, one hundred and sixty-five lost their lives.

The fire was started by an overheated furnace. The flames quickly spread, but a panic ensued when the building filled with smoke and the 400 children attempted to escape.

There were but two exits in the building that were available. One soon became choked with the children, who madly dashed for the open air. Those who fell in the doorway were trampled upon by the ones behind and soon the doorway was impassable.

ESCAPE WAS CUT OFF.

The frightened and panic-stricken children turned to get out through the windows and by any other means that could be found. Escape was cut off by the flames, which by this time had spread throughout the rooms. The building was of brick, yet this did not retard the progress of the fire.

In a few minutes the lower floor fell, precipitating scores of children to the basement, among the burning embers.

A HEARTRENDING SCENE.

The scene about the building was heartrending. Quickly the news of the terrible catastrophe spread throughout the village and hundreds of parents were crowded about the building in search of their girls and boys.

In a few minutes twenty bodies had been taken from the ruins. Plainly the writhing or stilled forms of dozens of others could be seen in the basement. Nearby factories dismissed their men and instructed them to assist in the rescue. They braved the fire and made heroic efforts to save the ones who were not dead.

Three little girls met instant death in attempting to jump from the third floor.

FRANTIC FATHER'S EFFORTS.

A man named Doran, who arrived upon the scene early, when the children were crowded in the front door, discovered his little girl among the mass of injured and crushed. He caught the girl by the hands, and in his frantic efforts to save her pulled her arms from her body.

The last four, who were children of the janitor of the building, lost their lives together.

ONE EXIT CLOSED.

The greatest loss of life was caused by one of the exits being closed, to which point scores of the children rushed. Their escape was blocked by a door that opened inward. In this manner they were delayed in reaching the other door and windows.

It is said that as a result of this stampede alone scores of children lost their lives.

TWO TEACHERS MISSING.

Of the nine teachers of the school seven are accounted for. The two missing are Katherine Weiler, of Cleveland, and Grace Fiske, of Cleveland.

Principal Frank P. Whitney, of the school, estimates the number of dead at 165. The pupils were mostly little children, ranging in age from 9 to 12 years.

ENGINEER RESPONSIBLE.

Finding of Commission on Quebec Bridge Disaster.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The report of the Royal Commission appointed last September to investigate the cause of the Quebec bridge disaster was presented to Parliament on Monday by Hon. Geo. P. Graham. The findings of the commission are put clearly and succinctly. In brief, they place the whole blame for the catastrophe of August 29th last upon basic defects in the design of the structure. There was no defect of material, no lack of care in construction, no deficiency of common professional knowledge on the part of all concerned, but to errors in judgment on the part of the designing engineer of the Phoenix Bridge Company, Mr. P. L. Szlapka, and of Mr. Theodore Cooper, consulting engineer of the Quebec Bridge & Railway Company, is directly attributed the failure of the lower chords in the anchor arm to sustain the enormous stress required of them.

THE ARMY IMMIGRANTS.

Howell, "and locate the right class of people for this part of the world, and if we get a fair chance we will solve the Oriental question in the most practical manner. Sixty single women were brought out and placed where wages range from $15 to $25 per month. We could have handled and disposed of as many more. All we ask is fair play and not too hasty judgment."

The information came about in a peculiar way through an employe of the Bank of Montreal noticing an advertisement in an English paper requesting information as to the location of the missing heir. LETTER FROM THE KAISER

Demand That Lord Tweedmouth Produce It In Parliament.

A despatch from London says: An outburst of anger against Emperor William on the part of the British public, equalling that caused by the German Emperor's famous telegram to President Kruger in 1896 after the defeat of the Jameson raiders, has followed the announcement made on Friday morning by The Times that Emperor William had attempted to influence the British naval policy by a secret correspondence with Lord Tweedmouth, First Lord of the Admiralty. The suspicion that Emperor William was trying to meddle by underhand methods in a matter vital to Britain's national life caused intense excitement both in the House of Parliament and outside. In fact, the matter was considered so serious that Lord Tweedmouth broke his customary reticence and hastened to say that the letter from the Kaiser was a purely personal communication and had no reference in it to the British naval estimates.

THE TWO NAVIES COMPARED.

According to one version, Emperor William's letter to Lord Tweedmouth gave exhaustive details of the comparative strength of the navies of Great Britain and Germany, and basing his opinion on this comparison the Emperor said he thought the German fleet could not be considered more than one-fifth as strong as that of Great Britain. This being so, Emperor William thought Great Britain had no need to fear any rivalry in naval supremacy from Germany, and that consequently there was no need of any increase in the shipbuilding programme of Great Britain.

RHEUMATISM IN THE BLOOD

Cure it by Enriching the Blood With Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

There is only one way by which rheumatism can be cured. It must be treated through the blood. Liniments and outward applications may give temporary relief, but they can't possibly cure the trouble. And while you are experimenting with liniments the trouble is every day becoming more firmly rooted in the system, and more difficult to cure. The poisonous acid that causes rheumatism must be driven out of the blood, and you can only do this by making new, rich, red blood through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mr. Chas. H. Lumley, of Brickford, Ont., is one of the best known farmers in Lambton county. About three years ago, while Mr. Lumley was engaged in threshing, he became overheated, and this was followed by a severe chill that started the rheumatic pains. Mr. Lumley says: "I did not think anything of it at the time, as I was accustomed to being exposed to all kinds of weather. As a result I was unable to go about next morning. I had severe pains in my arms and legs which I treated at first with the usual home remedies. As these did not help me, and the trouble was growing worse the family doctor was sent for, but he did not have any better success. He told me I was suffering from a severe attack of rheumatism, and there can be no doubt about it, as I was confined to my home about four months before I was fortunately advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I sent for a supply, and it was not long before I found they were helping me, and by the time I had taken a half dozen boxes the trouble had enfirely disappeared. In other respects the pills also greatly improved my health, and I never felt better in my life than I have since taking them. I therefore most cheerfully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to other similar sufferers."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make cures of this kind after doctors and common medicines fail, because they actually make new blood. They don't cure the mere symptoms. They go right to the root of the trouble in the blood. That is why this medicine cures anaemia, indigestion, neuralgia, palpitation of the heart, and the headaches and backaches brought on by the ailments that fill the lives of so many women with misery. Do not take any pills without the full name, "Dr. Williams Pink Pills for Pale People," on the wrapper around the box. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MUSIC AND INSANITY.

Some Instruments Useful in Some Cases, Harmful in Others.

The effects of music on both the sane and insane depend more on the kind of instrument or instruments employed than on the variety of the musical production, writes a physician in the Medical Journal.

Strings and horns have a soothing effect; more stirring effects are obtainable from wooden wind instruments; more enlivening yet from brass; and the most agitating and thrilling of all from drums and the upper octave instruments, such as the piccolo.

A string orchestra when playing lively dance music caused some increase in pulse and blood pressure and an awakening of attention among the depressed, and increased motility among the excitable. Such instruments as strings and horns, especially playing soft or plaintive music, would be positively harmful in depressed conditions, but are useful in some mania cases, etc.

It has been noted lately in experiments on the effects of music on breathing that in the normal individual, listening to organ music, major or minor, loud or soft, shortens the respiratory pause and makes the breathing faster and shallower.

In hospital practice I found it useful to subdivide the concert orchestra for ward purposes, using certain combinations for certain cases, depending on effects desired, as previously described. Patients should also be allowed freedom of movement during concerts. Palliative effects at least are nearly always obtainable.

In matters of amusement, diversion and occupation, in disordered mental states, it is found necessary to have variety. The same diversion cannot as a rule be long used with the same patients.

If physical training is utilized, various methods are employed; music may be used to accompany the exercises, and the music and instruments may be varied. Baseball games interest the entire household and cause diverting conversation. The same is true, in these hospitals, respecting pool and billiard and bowling matches; and the benefits of patients' dances have been a matter of common observation and comment for years.

Rhythmic exercises, such as bicycle riding on level ground, are useful in states of partial exhaustion and in the spasmodic neuroses. Golf is frequently prescribed in many nervous disorders as a form of exercise, the dosage of which is easily regulated.

Calisthenic drills to increase the attention are apt to be too exhausting for mental cases unless sufficient reaction time is permitted, or the teacher accompany his commands with a performance of the same movements himself, thus permitting imitation, which is not accompanied by nearly as much mental exhaustion as the close and prolonged fixation of the attention demanded by following rapid commands only.

Duplicate whist I have found of immense value in many mental cases of long standing in which there is not much deterioration. It controls the attention for considerable periods, to the exclusion of annoying delusions and hallucinations.

Many hospitals are provided with pedagogic schools, the object of which is the awakening and re-education of dormant energies by actual participation in study or discussion. Spelling and mental arithmetic; geography of countries and places of special current newspaper mention; reciting or reading aloud—all have their value.

BEGGAR'S BANK BOOK.

A Clever Gang Captured by the Berlin Police.

A clever gang of Turkish, Greek and Russian professional beggars, who have been "working" Berlin, Germany since the middle of December after a series of successful operations in other continental capitals, was captured by the police a few days ago. Their profits had amassed at such a rate that they were compelled to open a bank account for the storage of their ill-gotten gains.

Their scheme was to send out four of the youngest members of the gang, who made a house-to-house canvas of various neighborhoods in the guise of deaf and dumb persons. A printed appeal which the "mutes" presented told a harrowing tale of how, during the last Turkish-Bulgarian hostilities, their parental homes had been pillaged, and the tongues of all the children of the household cut out by bloodthirsty soldiers. Subsequent attacks of typhoid had then robbed them of their hearing.

"Help me, merciful Christian," concluded the plaintive prayer, and God will recompense you a thousand times. The "beggars" often came home at night with pockets clinking with gold and silver. The swindle came to light last week in consequence of a piece of bad management at the headquarters of the gang which resulted in one of the beggars applying by mistake at a house which a colleague had successfully "worked" a couple of days before.

FOUR HOSPITALS FAILED.

James Heard, of Morton Park, Ont., says: "While employed at the Specialty Works of Newmarket 6 or 7 years ago, I bruised my ankle, but through neglect this bruise turned to an ulcerated or burning sore which caused me a great deal of suffering. I tried a great number of doctors, and was in the hospital four times. I tried almost everything, but nothing did me any good. I could not sleep at night with the scalding and burning pain, but from the first application of Zambuk I never lost any sleep, and felt nothing more of it than if I hadn't had any sore at all. It started healing and gave me no further trouble. I persevered with it and my ankle is now as sound and well as ever it was. I cannot speak too highly of Zam-Buk."

Zam-Buk cures cuts, burns, chapped hands, chafings, cold sores, itch, chilblains, eczema, running sores, sore throat, bad chest, ringworm, piles (blind or bleeding), bad legs, inflamed patches, rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica, abscesses and all diseased, injured and irritated conditions of the skin. Obtainable of all druggists and stores, 50c. or post-paid upon receipt of price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

HER ONLY CHANCE.

A clergyman twice refused to marry a couple who came before him, because on both occasions the bridegroom was intoxicated.

The clergyman said to the bride:

"I cannot understand why you come to church with a man who is to be your husband in a state like this."

The young woman burst into tears and said: "I cannot help it, sir. He won't come when he's sober!"

A GOOD TIME TO BUY CLYDESDALES

Those who know farmers who are paying for their farms and making money usually appreciate that to raise a few foals each year is a sure money maker. Clydesdale horses are recognized to be the best heavy draft herd of horses for Ontario and every up-to-date farmer should try this year, when prices are low, to procure a brood mare at the current prices. Quality and pedigree should always be considered when purchasing to breed from, so only high-class mares should be procured.

A number of chances in the way of auction sales have gone by, but there is an important sale to be held at Beaverton, March 12th, where many brood mares are to be sold, heavy in foal. This is an opportunity to be taken advantage of. These mares are owned by Messrs. Donald Gunn & Son, the proprietors of the famous Dunrobin Stock Farm. The reputation of these men is sufficient to guarantee a good sale and good animals. Farmers considering their own interests would do well to remember the date.

Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup is an unparalleled remedy for colds, coughs, influenza and diseases of the throat and lungs. The fame of the medicine rests upon years of successful use in eradicating these affections and in protecting mankind from the fatal ravages of consumption, and as a neglected cold leads to consumption, one cannot be too careful to fight it in its early stages. Bickle's Syrup is the weapon, use it.

A DILEMMA'S HORNS.

The young lady sighed deeply and was almost affected to tears.

'Harold," she said, "declares that if I don't marry him he will end his life. And I am afraid he will."

She stifled a sob, then continued:

"And Randolph declares that if I don't marry him he will go into politics and become great and famous, and then he says I shall see what I have missed. And I am afraid he will keep his word, too."

Overcome by emotion, she buried her face in her hands, not knowing whether to save a life or to spare the country another politician.

LITTLE AND LONG.

One James Little loved a maiden
As did also one John Long;
Both would call with bonbons laden
And on flowers both were strong;
Best show tickets both kept buying,
Hoping thus to please the maid
Each one with the other vying—
Competition's good for trade.
Both of them the maiden artful
Used to meet with smiling eyes.
But when each poured out his heartful
Gave indefinite replies;
So she kept them both a-guessing,
But she hummed a little song
To herself her thoughts expressing:
"Love Me Little, Love Me Long."

Local Option at Owen Sound.

The Whitby Chronicle, whose editor has just visited Owen Sound, declares that local option is discussed in hotels, on the train, in the streets and in the shops more than any other subject He explains that he stopped at one of the large hotels, which was as quiet as a private house, and yet at which a good trade was done. The editor saw no drunken persons in Owen Sound, nor did he "hear any of the noises usual to the traffic." On Saturday afternoon there were a great many people in town, the streets were thronged, and the stores were busy, but the best of order prevailed. The editor concludes: "There is said to be much drinking at Owen Sound. There may be. At all events, it is not open, nor does it offend the eye ear and nose of the public as it formerly did, and this alone is a gain worth while." This is an encouraging report, but it is possible that it does not represent an exhaustive inquiry into conditions in Owen Sound. There is no doubt that local option there has been stubbornly resisted. There has been a great deal of illicit selling. The law by no means commends itself to the whole community It is certain that drinking has been decreased, and that good order prevails. Order, however, is the common condition of the towns and villages of Ontario, and this fact alone does not prove the success of local option. Perhaps it would be the simple truth to say that the measure is still on its trial in Owen Sound, and that except it is rigorously enforced ultimate repeal is not unlikely.—Toronto News.

Kenneth Horton, a six year old almonte boy had an exciting sleigh-ride on Friday. He was sliding down a hill when his sleigh turned an ran down a steep embankment into the river. The ice broke under the weight and the little fellow was precipitated into the water below. A passerby who was an eye witness of the incident succeeded in rescuing him.

While crossing from Morrisburg to the Island on Saturday night Mr. J. W. Allison had a narrow escape from drowning. Fortunately the timely efforts of those near at hand effected his rescue.

Mr. J. Wesley Allison of Morrisburg, suffered a heavy loss last week in the death of a fine horse. The animal was of the heavy Clydesdale type, a chestnut, one of the team used in connection with Mr. Allison's farm. This team was one of the finest, for draught purposes, in Eastern Ontario, and the loss is indeed considerable.

Family Re-Union.

A very happy family re-union took place at the residence of Mr. Simon Swerdfeger, on Wednesday, Mar. 4th, when the children, grandchildren and great grandchildren of Mrs. Catharine Swerdfeger, widow of the late Wm. Swerdfeger, gathered together to celebrate her eighty-sixth anniversary.

All her children, Mrs. Geo. Forrester of Morewood; Mrs. Jno. Saddlemeyer of Glen Becker, Edwin and Simon of Froatburn and Mrs. F. B. Marcellus of Chesterville; also all her living grandchildren, together with her two great grandchildren, Master Kenneth and Donald Bexstedt, were present, except Mrs. Roy Swerdfeger, Buffalo, N. Y.; Mrs. John Dain of Morrisburg, Miss Ruby Swerdfeger of Ottawa, Wm. and Curtis Forrester of Ottawa and Winchester respectively, and Geo. Saddlemeyer of Winnipeg.

The day being fine the guests began to arrive about 2 p.m., and by 3 o'clock all had gathered, when the children began to enjoy themselves with games, etc, the older members of the family conversing with "mother" and "Aunt Jemima.".

Mr. I. W. Bexstedt, the popular photographer of Iroquois, being previously engaged, was there taking the photo of the four generations and the family in different groups. Time passed all too quickly till six o'clock, when a very sumptuous dinner was served and greatly enjoyed. Then came music, games, etc. Mr. Jno. Saddlemeyer had his basket full of funny stories, recently supplemented and distributed freely. Everyone enjoyed themseves till ten o'clock, when all took their departure, the children all saying that "Grandmother's birth day is the best day of all," and hoping she could be able to enjoy many more, which was heartily endorsed by the older members of the family.

Mrs. Swerdfeger, the daughter of the late Jno. LaPoint, was married to Wm. H. Swerdfeger, who died nineteen years ago, on July 7th, 1845. She was always of a cheerful disposition, a faithful wife, a devoted mother and a good neighbor, always charitable, distributing freely to those in need, and in religion a staunch member of the Lutheran Church, and many there are who can "rise up and call her blessed."

Mrs. Swerdfeger has six children, the eldest being dead, twenty-three grandchildren and five great grandchildren and, notwithstanding her great age is enjoying good health and is especially mentally strong.

Warnock, against whose will an action is pending in the high courts, gave birth to a son this afternoon In his will Warnock bequeathed $5,000 to each of four daughters and the residue of the estate to Mrs. Eva Warnock. The mother of these girls who claims that she and not Mrs. Eva Warnock is Warnocks widow is now contesting the will, but with the advent of another heir to-day more complications have arisen. Providing the will is set aside Mrs. Eva Warnock and her child will inherit everything unless the first wife can prove she is the lawful wife.

NATION VALLEY "SOUTH."

The patrons of the Ault Factory in this neighborhood held their annual cheese meeting on Saturday last Mr. John Jamieson most ably filled the chair. The officers elected were nearly the same as last year. Mr. James Moody Secretary, John H. Marcellus, Treasurer; John R. Baker, salesman; George Merkley, Watson Carruthers and Amaziah Froats, form the committee. Rather a hot discussion lasting over an hour was held concerning the separating of the whey and making butter therefrom. This was put to the vote and carried by a majority of six but Mr. John Ault refused to put in the machinery unless they were unanimious as he did not want to lose any Patrons. An argument was raised regarding the proper way to hire a cheese maker. Mr. Ault has his hired by the season. Several did not like this putting forward their reason that a cheese maker hired by the season is more likely to waste the milk than one hired to make at a stated sum per hundred pounds of cheese made.

Stole From Father in Order to Marry

Peterborough, March 7.—When Mr. Vinette missed the sum of $140 a short time ago he notified the police, and P. C. Newhall took up the case. He found that Isadore Vinette, son of the complainant, was spending money freely, and that he had given his sweetheart a ten-dollar bill. The young man was arrested on suspicion, and the girl told the whole story when questioned. The young man, it appears, stole the money from his father to be able them to marry. The wedding did not take place.

In court young Vinetue was allowed to go on snspended sentence. The girl returned her share of the money.

The pall bearers were John McQueen, John Benton, John Cumming, William Steele, William McElheran and Allan Cameron. Children's Coats and Frocks From Paris

THE French modistes are particularly clever in designing suits for little girls that will carry out the idea shown in the reigning fashion, and they still maintain that simplicity of line necessary and appropriate for little tots. In the illustration shown today the single-breasted cutaway jacket, the pleated skirts, the panel fronts, the long shoulder line and the button trimmings are all shown, but adapted to the size and age of the little wearer.

A smart little suit of white or scarlet serge is fastened down the front with three brass buttons, and is cut with a round hem at the bottom of the coat. The skirt is side pleated and the jacket is trimmed with a narrow soutache braid. The white hat is simply adorned with a bow of ribbon to match the suit.

A more dressy little frock is that of light blue linen, with a guimpe of batiste or allover embroidery. It is, in spite of its appearance, very easy to make, and the result is charming. The linen hat is finished with a draped crown to match the little dress.

A suit of plaid and navy blue cheviot is cut in quite the latest style, whether for mother or big sister. It is made with a very long-waisted effect, and the loose coat is trimmed with small brass buttons. The plaid is of shaded blues, and the cuffs and collar of the jacket are finished in bright green velvet. The basin hat intended to wear with the suit is trimmed with velvet to match the collar.

A pink linen with the mikado sleeves and pearl buttons from shoulder to hem is worn with collar and undersleeves of baby Irish lace. The front of the skirt is finished in a box pleat with the belt at each side, so that the front line is unbroken. This dress is a fascinating design for quite a little girl, and the white canvas hat, with a knot of soft pink ribbon, gives a complete look to the costume.

All of the models given are very simple, and the two little dresses are just enough modification of a Russian blouse to make a distinction between frocks for little boys and girls. Instead of using allover embroidery and lace for the guimpes, they may be batiste or tucked handkerchief linen, and if pearl buttons are not used, wooden forms covered with scraps of the dress material may take their place.

The little white suit would be most attractive if made up in some darker fabric, and it would then be far more serviceable, while stitched bands of itself might be substituted for soutache braiding.

The little plaid dress would be a most attractive style for a checked gingham jumper, to be worn with a reefer of blue serge, with collar and cuffs of the same.

Hats for children of this size are most useful when made of canvas and lined with linen to match the suit. For that matter, the hat may be all white, with only a change in trimming, a bow or a knot to match each costume of the wardrobe.

Melon Bonnets

BABY caps for spring are made of three pieces, cut like the sides of a circular triangle and sewn together with a fancy stitch or a strip of lace insertion. Sometimes the sections over the face and at the back of the neck are made of dotted swiss, while the middle section is of baby Irish lace. In other caps all three sections are of fine nainsook, but the middle section is heavily embroidered. This new style is very becoming to the baby's head, and brings the joining of the sections just behind the ear, so that whatever lace is used as trimming will converge toward this point.

A very attractive cap may be made of allover embroidery, using valenciennes insertion between the sections; and for very plain bonnets pink linen may be used, with a little hand embroidery around the face. This cap is known as a melon bonnet, and bids fair to become the reigning favorite in juvenile fashions.

A Labor Saver

AN ENTIRELY new transfer cloth has been placed on the market that is indispensable to tailors, dressmakers and in embroidery, both in the shop and at home.

The transfer cloth is placed between the folded material and a tracing wheel run over the lines of the pattern or design, making the marking distinct and accurate on both sides of the goods. It is the most practical labor-saving device invented, and can be used on any material, stripes, checks or any color. The markings are permanent until your work is finished, when they may be easily removed with a soft brush, leaving no trace and doing no damage to the goods.

A Novelty for Embroiderers

THE transfer cloth closely resembles the old-fashioned paper muslin and is light gray in color. The tracing left is greenish gray, so that it may be used on black, white or any shade material.

It may be bought in sheets the usual size, being 18 by 27 inches, but special sizes may be obtained on order.

Ordinary transfer paper may be used once, while the novelty may be used practically any number of times to trace any variety of designs, so it is therefore quite a find for women who do handwerk. By its use, smocking, tucking, shirring are made easy, while [illegible] are rendered a simple [illegible] following a line in plain sight.

Odd Combination in Spring Suits

WHITE, that beautiful and always becoming color, has gone out of fashion, for in the new cloths shown for early spring stripes and huge embroidery dots have taken its place, and even white linen suits will not be worn this year. Of course all of the suits such as have been worn will be discarded for dresses with guimpes and cuffs of white lace and Eton jackets of some contrasting color or material. Thus a white flannel skirt will be worn with a striped three-quarter jacket, or a blue-and-white stripe linen semi-princess dress will be finished with a coat of dark blue. This new fashion will be very convenient for those who wish to wear the same coat with several dresses, but it is not so becoming as the white of last year.

Some suits are made of the natural pongee, with the skirts of the plain material, while the coats are Eton shape, embroidered by hand in large black dots. The same idea can be carried out in suits of voile, or even mohair, and, at least, if the fashion is peculiar, it is new and smart.

Huge Designs in Vogue for Spring

FLOWERS for the spring hats are of the most enormous size—huge roses and unnatural morning-glories—while even pansies have a forced look to which the real flowers never attain.

It is a most remarkable reversion to hats of some time ago. Such modest blossoms as forget-me-nots, rosebuds and violets will find no place in the fashions of the year, but calla lilies, Easter lilies and hydrangeas will be in great demand.

This same mammoth taste also seems to have influenced the designs of foulards and chiffons, for the season's designs are out of proportion—gigantic, in fact. The little old-fashioned prints have given place to huge bunches of orchids and sunflowers. It takes many tucks and pleats to reduce the size of the designs to human form.

A costume for spring garden parties is composed of a small toque trimmed all round with huge sunflowers and a filet net dress with a huge design of becoming Easter lilies, embroidered in heavy white floss. It looks at a distance like a costume for a giantess, but when worn the effect is original, and good.

Colors on Lingerie Dresses

THE new white dresses shown in the shops have some touch of color in embroidery or lace, but the allover embroidery coats trimmed with lace are pure white. These are very useful to wear in the late afternoon, and, while they could not be accused of being warm, they do add a certain air of dressiness to the toilet.

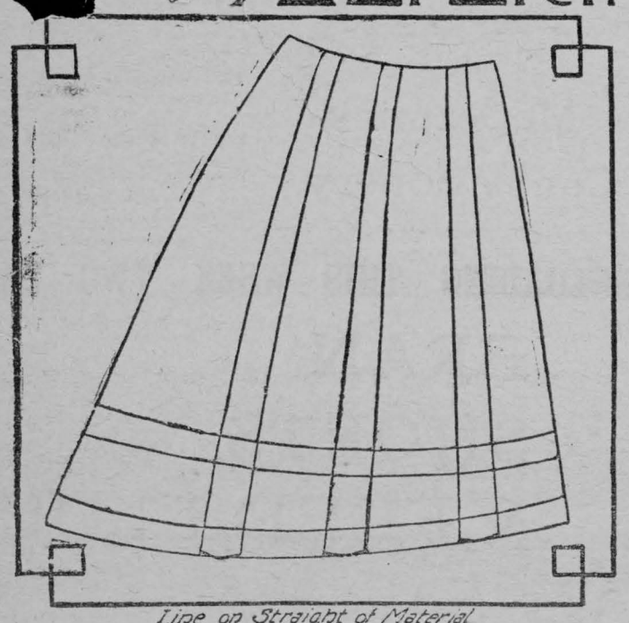
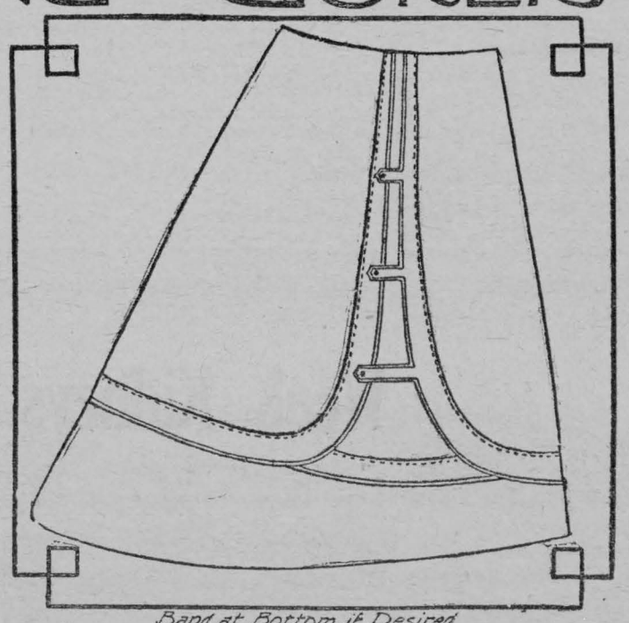
ALTERING GORED SKIRTS



Line on Straight of Material



Band at Bottom if Desired

Bands Velvet or Braid

NOW that circular skirts have returned with such force to popular favor, those women who have suits and dresses made with the ordinary gored skirts seem crushed with their misfortune. "What shall we do?" they cry. "This suit is too good to throw away, yet how can I disguise these awful seams?"

Three models to hide the old-fashioned seams are shown today; each of them requires the additional purchase of the minimum of material. All of these allow for a circular ruffle.

In the first model the seams are ripped, the breadth nearest the front is turned, two pleats are made of new material and set in, and all are stitched to the hip line. If a circular ruffle finishes the skirt, graduated bands of braid may be used to hide the joining; but the straight lines look better without any break between them, so the second method may be used to better advantage. In this false box pleats of new material, made with the straight of the goods, are laid over the seams and false tucks are made on the hem of the ruffle and around the bottom. This method enables the skirt also to be lengthened both at the bottom and at the top of the ruffle.

A panel effect is added by false tucks beginning close together at the waist line and extending to a curve around the line of the ruffle. The little straps may be added across the front if desired; also the braid around the skirt.

In all of the models shown new material is required. If it is impossible to match the old skirt, then some other material may be used, providing it is of the same shade. For instance, in the first model broadcloth may be used to alter the velvet skirt, or even pleats of taffeta.

In the second, if it is impossible to secure material to exactly match that of the skirt, some other variety may be used in its place.

The third model should be altered with material to match, otherwise the false tucks would look out of place.

Of course, in the question of an evening dress lace or chiffon may always take the place of the dress material. As for the lines of the skirt, the first and second models are most appropriate for small women, while the third model would have the effect of shortening the figure and is therefore only desirable for a tall woman or a woman of average height. The bands added at the foot of the skirt may be used to lengthen the back, for in some cases last year's dresses were not as long as the skirts of the latest style.

Three other models will be shown next week suggesting ways of altering gored skirts without requiring material to match.

New Girdles

MOST of the new high belts are finished in one long end with a tassel. This idea is carried out even in morning dresses, voile or pongee, and is becoming to the average figure, particularly as the new semi-princess dress is so much the rage. The belt at present is not fastened directly around the waist line, but slightly above it to give the skirt a very long line in front and on the sides.

Some dresses of light materials are finished in front directly below the guimpe in a large bow of the material. This is not unattractive for very slim figures, for it adds several inches to the bust measure. There will be, owing to the present increasing popularity of the guimpe waist, a decided leaning toward the very low line of the corsage, for it is becoming to every woman, and the guimpe will add whatever is necessary for the sake of modesty. Decolletage, however, can be overdone, and those who wish to keep the pretty guimpe in vogue must do all they can to see that it is not abused, for a peculiar thing about fashions is, that the moment any one line is overdone a reaction is sure to come.

Evening Gowns

SO MANY of the new evening dresses show the influence of the postilion jacket that it has become a very important thing to have lace drapery around the back and hips. The jacket runs over the shoulders and down both sides of the figure almost close to the armholes. It necessitates all of the evening dresses being made with a square neck.

The dresses under the jackets are made princess, but many of them hang quite loose in front, and are only held close to the figure by a gold braid belt fastened each side of the jacket and tied in a knot in front, allowing the ends to hang to the knees. To give the necessary severe line and breadth to the shoulders, folds of velvet are used, which curve from the waist line in back to the waist line in front.

These bretelles are sometimes as wide as eight inches, so that they give breadth to the shoulders and that small appearance to the waist that the clumsy folds of the lace coat almost obliterate.

DEGREES OF WRATH.

"Do you think the dog that bit you was mad?"

"I don't know that he was mad, but he certainly was a little peevish."

Lots of men would be worse than they are if they only knew how to go about it.

A SHADOWED PATH;

Or, The Curse Of The Family

People received her very cordially in society, and she was much admired and flattered, and flirted with; but beyond this no one, worth thinking about or accepting, desired to have for a wife a woman who had deserted her children.

It was a mournful day for Evan Crepton, that on which he received a letter stating that the boy and the girl, his son's tender darlings, had been left by a clerk of Messrs. Brown and Carter at a hotel in Tryddmordest, whence he was requested at once to fetch them. It was a cruel thing for him to read a haughty epistle written by Sir John Leslock, who flung, as it were, the children and a fifty-pound note at him, bidding him be thankful the while, and encroach no further on such unparalleled generosity; it was a bitter thing for a parent to think how his son's memory was treated; most sorrowful and most cruel, and most bitter of all, to consider that the mother of the little deserted ones had once been truly loved by aught of his flesh and blood; that he had built up proud hopes on the strength of the alliance—that she had been Watkyn's wife.

The last word seemed to bring the whole of his misery home to the old man's heart, and also to give him a clearer idea of what had happened, and of what he had to do. Without taking counsel with anybody on the subject, he first wrote on a sheet of paper, the words:—

"Returned by Evan Crepton to Sir John Leslock;" then enclosed the banknote therein, and finally directed the letter to St. James's Square.

Having accomplished which act, he put on his greatcoat, and drove off to bring his grandchildren home.

"Where are you going, father?" inquired one of his daughters, as he passed forth from the house.

"To Tryddmordest," he answered, and without another sentence of explanation departed.

After he had dropped the letter in the post-office, he proceeded to the hotel, when telling the landlord of whom he had come in search, he was ushered into a parlor, wherein he found the good woman of the house talking to the children, and trying, unsuccessfully, to stop their tears. Hand clasped in hand, they nestled close together on a hard, old-fashioned sofa, refusing comfort, and food, and kindness. As if all the world had been taken from them save each other, they stuck resolutely side by side—Evan mopping his sister's tears away, even whilst his own were flowing like a mountain torrent. They did not speak, nor move, nor ask for anything; they did not sob, nor make any violent demonstration of grief—they only cried on quietly and incessantly in a sort of hopeless, helpless, despairing way; which moved unto the most intense sympathy the soul of the landlady, who poured forth a tide of lamentations in Welsh, which they could not understand, and addressed words of encouragement to them in English, which they did not heed.

For a time, Evan Crepton stood in the doorway, contemplating the pair of dark-haired, grief-stricken children; but at length, unable to endure the sight longer, he stretched out his arms towards them with a sort of cry.

Both looked hurriedly up, and Alice catching through her tears a vision of an old, grey-haired man, weeping like herself, suddenly released her hand from her brother's—and bounding from her seat across the room, cried "Papa's papa," and was clasped the next instant to her grandfather's heart.

Very pitiful it was to behold that trio when the landlord and his wife left them alone together, the old man and the young children, mourning with one soul and one voice for the dead and the gone; very strange and very suggestive, to contrast their pretty clothes and his coarse garments; very good to see how blood linked blood together; how the boy and the girl clung with tenacious grasp around the neck of their father's father—how he, without a thought of the expense or trouble or annoyance they might prove, took the little orphans to his bosom and welcomed them home.

Home he conveyed them, to the amazement of his daughters and the irritation of his sons. There was a stormy scene that night at Ewmclydllan Farm, when women forgot the tenderness of their sex to wonder, "who was to attend to the town-bred brats?" and men fiercely demanded if their portions were to be taken from them to fit the intruders out as ladies and gentlemen.

"Watkyn usurped everything from, and gave nothing to us," they said; "and here are his children brought home, that the same game may be played over again. We have had one gentleman too many in the family already. Send the pair back to their baronet grandfather, and let him provide for them; give them to the proud woman who brought them into the world; they are nearer to her than to us—why should we be burdened with them?"

"Because I choose it," thundered Evan Crepton, "and the first one who speaks an unkind word to them leaves my house at once, and for ever." With which decisive sentence, the farmer finished the discussion and retired to bed.

But although he possessed sufficient authority to give the children a shelter, and to preserve them from absolute harshness, it was beyond his power to make their Welsh home a happy one.

With the fortunate adaptability of youth they soon became accustomed to the coarser style of living, which was at once the fashion and the necessity at Ewmslydllan Farm. The fresh, pure, country air gave them appetites for any food; all memories of, or care for better furniture, and softer beds, soon vanished from their minds. Mere bodily luxuries constitute no portion of the joys of childhood; but there were mental necessities denied them, which are absolute essentials to the happiness of every heart, and Evan Crepton writhed under the consciousness that the boy and girl, the offspring of his dead son, were coldly and unkindly treated; that they were made eternally to feel themselves intruders; that not a tongue in the house, save his own, ever spoke a loving word to them; not a hand but his was ever laid gently and caressingly on their heads.

It grieved him also to perceive how, as their own stock of pretty clothes was either worn out, or out-grown, the garments of old were replaced with commoner ones. He could not bear to see Watkyn's children thus palpably "going down" in the world; and when Alice complained that the hard leather shoes hurt her feet, and Evan wept about having to exchange his blue cloth tunic and little white trousers for a suit of corduroy, the old farmer felt as though some serious trouble had fallen upon him, and bought a lighter pair of boots for his grand-daughter, and comforted her brother with a pint of nuts.

The whole system was wrong — he felt it was ruining the children body and soul—chafing their tempers and injuring their healths; he could not absolutely complain of the treatment they received, because there was no one individual act which could be taken hold of—yet, still he saw that in his presence they were treated with cold dislike, and knew when his back was turned a course of systematic harshness was pursued towards them.

He kept Evan by his own side, as constantly as possible. Ploughing, sowing, reaping, stacking, mowing, the lad was always near him; a quick, intelligent child, full of talent and promise, whose misfortune it was to have been born a gentleman. There was no need to rear him above his station; for the tastes, and the feelings, and the manners of a higher grade than that in which he was placed had been bestowed on him by nature. From all things coarse and common he shrank instinctively, and to personal cleanliness he was almost a martyr, washing his hands and face free from spot or taint a dozen times a day, in the stream which ran at the back of his grandfather's cottage. He had a dislike to rough, loud conversation, and possessed so pure an accent, that his schoolfellows, referring to that and his erect carriage, always sneeringly called him "the lord." He was to be found during every leisure moment, either close to his grandfather's side, or else sitting with his arm round his sister's neck, reading to or with her—for, perhaps, the most touching thing about the children was to notice how, through all chances and changes, they remained true to one another.

They seemed to Evan Crepton like beings of a different race from his own sons and daughters; and it was this love and union existing between the pair which induced him to keep them still together at the farm, long after his common sense had told him they would be better away from it. The old man thought it hard to separate the young things, and harder still to part from them himself, for they were dearer and nearer to his heart than any other in the wide world; and he felt it almost impossible to give them up—even for their own good.

But it was necessary—his plain, practical, common sense, and his never subdued, hankering pride alike, told him that. It would be an impossibility, he saw clearly, to bring either brother or sister down to the level he had so long occupied; and even had the effect been practicable, his wishes would not have tended in that direction. The universal human desire to rise was busy within the farmer—not for himself, but for these children.

Besides, had they not a right to a good station? Was it fair to bring Alice up to tend poultry and milk cows, or well to break Evan's spirit and make him a tiller of the ground, a mere drudge of the earth? Did the boy not carry within himself the elements of success? and if he were properly educated, might he not make a way for himself in the world, as his father had done, and support his sister, and become a happy and a prosperous man? Sir Watkyn Shenkin had often stopped the lad on his way to school, and spoken kindly and encouragingly to him; and the farmer entertained little doubt, but that in after years the baronet might prove a friend to him, for Sir Watkyn was childless, and entertained a fondness for proteges.

Altogether, Evan determined it was best to send the children to some respectable boarding-school; and accordingly, after much and anxious deliberation, he took Alice to a bleak sea-side town in Wales, where a Mrs. Crickieth, who was greatly sought after by parents and guardians, kept a select seminary for young ladies, and subsequently drove his grandson twenty-five miles further on, to the abode of Dr. Mills, the principal of a classical and commercial academy.

The parting between the children had been so fearful a one, that Evan's grief was perfectly exhausted when he came to say farewell to his grandfather. He had wept so much before, that there was then little occasion for his relative's trembling exhortation for him to be "a man."

The boy had done crying, and so he remained very pale, and very quiet, whilst his grandfather stood stroking down his hair and vainly essaying to bid "good-bye."

"I must go now, my lad," Evan Crepton found voice to say at last; "I must go now, but don't let down your spirits, for I will come soon again to see you; and you will keep up your heart, my boy, and try to learn a great deal, and make haste to be a man, and then you and Ally and I can live together always. Remember, when you grow up, you are to be her protector. There, there, don't begin to cry again, for you shall both come home together at the summer holidays, and——"

Evan's stock, both of comfort and exhortation, here appeared fairly exhausted, for he took the lad silently in his arms and held him there.

But, when he attempted to release himself, the boy detained him with a convulsive clutch.

"Let me go, child!" he exclaimed, as though in some bodily suffering; "don't hold me so tight, you hurt me—there—there," and he gently unclasped the still twining fingers, and then a long, lingering kiss of farewell on the broad, open forehead of his dead son's boy.

"God bless you for ever!" he said; and without a word of adieu to schoolmaster or any one else, hurried from the house, as if mistrusting his ability to leave the lad behind.

"How ill the old man looked," Dr. Mills remarked afterwards to his wife; "do you know, I think he will scarcely live to see his grandson again." And the worthy pedagogue's words proved prophetic, for ere three months passed away Evan Crepton was dead and buried, and his sons and his daughters were talking of going to law about the stock and lease of Ewmclydllan Farm, and the money their father had left behind him in the bank. Before the old man passed away from earth, however, he made, as he thought, ample provision for his grandchildren. He paid over a certain sum both to Dr. Mills and Mrs. Crickieth, who agreed to educate and support Evan and Alice till the two were old enough to maintain themselves. Alice was to remain a governess at Mrs. Crickieth's, till her brother had "pushed his way into the world;" and the last act of a temporal nature the old farmer performed on this earth, was to address a most touching letter to his grandson, exhorting him to become a wise and a good man, and leaving Alice as a sacred charge upon him.

"My mind is almost easy about the children now," he said to his clergyman, when these arrangements had been completed. "No one can law them out of a good education, or deprive them of it; they are provided for till they grow up; but still, sir, it would be a comfort to me if you would see how they are getting on twice a year or so, poor lonely, desolate creatures."

The clergyman promised, and Evan died content; but somehow the former, being shortly after removed to a better living, forgot to perform, and so the children, whose mother had forsaken, and whose aunts and uncles hated them, were left to get through the world as best they could, without a single friend or relative to whom to turn in any emergency for assistance.

It was as mournful a situation as can well be conceived, but still neither sank under it; Alice bore every trouble and trial with that hopeless sort of patience which seems natural to women and girls, while Evan took his grandfather's letter as a text, and preached thereupon to himself ceaselessly. Dr. Mills said no boy before ever so hungered and thirsted after knowledge; and from the time he was eleven years old, the lad counted the very months till he should become a man, tall enough and strong enough to work and take Alice home. Endless were the plans and schemes and projects for the future the boy wrought out in the mine of his own fertile brain!—endless and absurd!

CHAPTER VII.

Meanwhile there had been changes in the old house among the Welsh hills such changes as time works everywhere on every one, and a few others, such as men and women work out for themselves.

Time can accomplish all things with all men; but people, forgetting that simple truism, marvelled much at the alteration a few years wrought in Judith Renelle, who, from a not particularly handsome child, expanded, as she grew up into something which was in those regions considered a miracle of beauty.

The old Welsh farmers touched their hats to her as she sped over the hills; whilst their wives relaxed their hard features and harder household cares when they talked of Miss Judith, the loveliest creature their eyes had ever rested on.

Children gave her their confidence on the shortest notice; the shyest among them coming to her as they would draw near to no one else. Even the clergyman of the parish church, who was one of that sect which seems to imagine that to admire anything in animate or inanimate nature overmuch is a deadly sin, could not avoid absolutely smiling with pleasure whenever Judith came tripping across the threshold of the gloomy rectory-house, filling their prim, sanctimonious drawing-room with some of the bright, gladsome sunshine she brought there, and took away thence again with her.

All unconsciously, it is true, but still the place seemed none the less light whilst she remained in it, because she never seemed to know that wherever her footsteps strayed a sort of flower of happiness sprang up around, which withered and died when she departed from the spot.

"Beauty is a snare and device of the devil;" and "the eye maketh vain idols for itself;" and "the lost heart of man worshippeth the fleshly tabernacle wherein the spirit dwelleth, and forgetteth the immortal soul, and the God who made it."

These were favorite forms of expression with the gloomily righteous clergyman; but somehow he always refrained from applying them to Judith Renelle, and he contrived to forget that beauty was a snare, and a lovely face a device of the Evil One to lead mortals to destruction, when he looked from the parsonage-window after her retreating figure.

THE VAGARIES OF DREAMLAND.

(By A. Banker.)

"Balmy sleep, kind nature's sweet restorer," is indeed one of her greatest boons to mankind; to the tired worker, whether the labor be manual, or whether it be the far more fatiguing toil of brain-work, or to those harassed by anxiety or apprehension; or to those hapless and pitiable individuals who have nothing to do—no pursuits, except perhaps that most insipid occupation of novel reading, no hobby, whether in arts, or craft, in nature, or philanthropy, in literature or politics, and whose whole life is a vapid, listless existence—to all these the tranquil repose of sleep is an incalculable and measureless boon.

But although the body is at rest, the mind is sometimes running riot; in a moment of time an incident, full of detail and crowded with adventure, flashing through it. (It has, too, from time to time, been recorded by those who have recovered from apparent death by drowning that at the moment when the heart practically ceases to beat the whole life-history from beginning to end, with every incident in detail, flashes through the brain in a most startling manner). And how fertile is the brain during sleep in creating imaginary occurrences; some full of rhapsody and enchantment; some grim and horror-stricken; and some an irritating series of vexations. A sportsman misses everything, or the trigger of his gun becomes jammed at every attempted shot; the bank cashier cannot count his gold; the mountaineer hopelessly stumbles at every step upon the ice. Everything, in fact, persistently goes wrong.

Or on the other hand the dreamer is revelling in scenes of ecstasy and loveliness. The constellations, for istance, of the midnight skies are transformed into the figures shown on celestial globes. Here is Andromeda flashing in starry beauty, chained to a rock, while brilliant Perseus, grasping gorgon's head which drips with crimson stars, attacks the sea-monster and rescues the beautiful maiden from his vengeance. Here magnificent Orion, scintillant in splendor, furiously pursuing winged Pegasus, while groves and glens of scintillant lustre, mansions gemmed in sparkling precious stones, and numerous splendent beings of dazzling beauty traversing those streets of gold, all add to the glistening radiancy of the wondrous scene. And then in a moment, all is vanished into the blackness and darkness of night.

But if a fanciful dream be a vision of such glittering splendor how transcendently sublime and majestic must be the beautiful vision of those supernal realms of glory which are the inheritance of those whose names are inscribed in the roll on high, and against whom the Accuser can bring no charge. For although those triumphantly victorious ones were but shining mortals yet having conformed their lives to the Divine Laws, and accepted as their Saviour the Son of God, who received in His own Person the punishment due to them, their transgressions cannot be punished a second time, and eternal justice is satisfied.

IS BLOODY SPORT.

Many Men and Animals Die in Bull Fights.

A new circus is being built in Madrid for bull fights which will seat over 17,000 persons. In 1907, 2,280 bulls and 2,720 horses were killed in the sport. Of human lives seven were lost, including that of Toreador Montes, who died in the arena last January, and whose death was considered a national loss.

Then there was the death of the "Bandillero" Melito, who, happening to be present at a bull fight and not being satisfied with the way the performance was being conducted, jumped into the arena. The enraged bull soon put him to death.

During the past year 82 persons were severely wounded, most of them matadores.

WHEN FATHER SHAVES.

The most exciting time we know
At home on Sunday morning,
And keeps us all upon the go,
All other duties scorning,
Occurs about the hour of ten,
When solemn-faced and grave,
Our father yawns and stretches, then
We know he's going to shave.

And when he cuts himself, oh, my!
There's trouble in the air,
Then everyone of us must fly,
For father will declare:
"This wouldn't happen if you'd make Those noisy kids behave!"
Oh, yes, it makes us youngsters quake
When father starts to shave!

We know the danger's over when
Upon the door he knocks;
And mother goes to him again
With powder-puff and box.
Though generally he lets us shirk,
One hour we must be grave,
For each of us has got to work
When father starts to shave.

VOLUNTEERS' DUTIES.

British volunteers are subject to military law when training or attached to regulars or militia, and when on actual military service. They cannot aid the civil power, but can, as a body, protect their armories, using their arms for that purpose. It is only in the case of actual threatened invasion that volunteers could be called out by proclamation.

FINGER PRINT RECORDS

31,000 IDENTIFICATIONS IN DETECTING CRIME.

London Police Has Over a Million Finger Prints, and No Two are Alike.

An interesting account of the perfection to which the finger-print system of identification has been brought at Scotland Yard was given at the North London Police Court recently.

"I have been engaged in the study of finger-prints for ten years," said the police expert, "and during that time 31,000 identifications have been effected at Scotland Yard by means of the system. I have examined hundreds of thousands of impressions, and I have never known two finger-tips agree in ridge characteristics.

"Before a convicted person is discharged from prison his finger-prints are taken and sent to the department. When a man is remanded his finger-prints are taken, and if he has been convicted before, his whole history can be ascertained within two or, at the most, five minutes of the arrival of the impressions at Scotland Yard.

"But the classification must be very complicated," remarked the magistrate.

"No," the inspector replied. "The classification has been invented by Sir Edward Henry, the Commissioner, and is beautifully simple."

"I think you have over 1,000,000 impressions," said the solicitor who represented the police.

NAMES IGNORED.

"We have 120,000 sets with ten impressions in each set," stated inspector Collins. "We depend on the ridges, and ignore the names."

"And you never find two alike," said the solicitor. "It is not like handwriting."

"It is much more sure than the handwriting test," the inspector answered.

The case which gave rise to the statement was a striking proof of the value of the system.

After a theft of silver cups at the premises of the Eton Mission, at Hackney Wick, Clarence Clark was arrested on the evidence of finger-prints alone. He maintained complete reticence, and there was nothing else to connect him with the robbery.

When photographs of finger-prints left on a glass globe by the thief were produced in court the magistrate went down to the dock and compared them with Clark's fingers. He pointed out that there was a scar on the thumb impression and a similar scar on the man's thumb.

Clark looked at the photograph, and at once declared dramatically: "I plead guilty."

UNDER-SEA ERUPTIONS.

That volcanic eruptions are not confined to the land areas of the globe is a fact that has long been known, but it is only recently that definite information has begun to be collected concerning the localities where such disturbances manifest themselves in the midst of the oceans. During the past summer a submarine eruption, lasting for a considerable time, occurred near the Tonga Islands. The approximate position of the center of disturbance was determined by the efforts of the government of the Tonga Islands, and it is thought that this demonstrates the existence of a great submarine bank southwest from the island of Tongatabu. Such occurrences are of great interest to navigators, since they may create obstructions to navigation whose existence would be unsuspected if the eruptions giving rise to them passed unnoticed.

FUEL FOR THE FUTURE.

In the opinion of Prof. V. B. Lewes, when the existing supplies of fuel become limited, men must rely upon alcohol produced from vegetation of some sort, which may be produced in any required quantity. Professor Lewes thinks that the alcohol will be manufactured either from potato starch or sawdust, but a writer in Nature suggests that when the question becomes urgent, some highly specialized plant will have been brought into existence for the sole purpose of absorbing the maximum amount of carbon dioxid from the air, and he thinks that the wonderful improvements which hybridization has already effected save this idea from being regarded as too fanciful.

THE DIFFERENCE.

Gladys Vanderbilt wore lace 200 years old when she was married, but the ordinary married woman raises a howl if she has to wear last year's hat another season.

FRIENDLY COMMENT.

Miffkins—"Blowitz is always clamoring for justice for other people."

Biffkins—"Yes, and if justice was to knock at his own door he'd try to make a quick getaway through the back window."

Too many girls regard marriage in the light of a lark instead of a leap in the dark.

About the Farm

DAIRYING FOR PROFIT.

Ten years ago I purchased 30 head of yearling heifers. By their color and bone they indicated better than the average breeding. In the fall 12 of them were kept for milkers and the balance were sold. A month later two others were sold at the earnest solicitation of a stock shipper. It was here I made one of the mistakes of my dairy experience. I should have sold them all at the good figure offered and have gone to a dairy school. Then after studying dairy form I ought to have bought good milk cows in the prime with the remaining money. I would have delivered more milk to the creamery, with less work, and the consumption of very much less feed.

The heifers were bred to calve early in September so that they would develop a long milking period and be dry the hottest and most disagreeable part of the year. It is also the best method to realize the greatest number of pounds of butter-fat with the least cost per pound, for the evident reason that the cow is naturally giving a very large flow of milk during the season of greatest cost of feeding. As spring comes on she is further stimulated by the pasture grasses, holding to a good flow until time for drying off.

In the first year of my dairy experience the herd numbered 10, nine of the heifers just mentioned and one cow five years old. The total milk yield for the year was 27,800 pounds, as near as it can be estimated by adding to the creamery statements the quantity kept for table use and calf-feeding. This is an average yield per cow of 2,780 pounds or an income per cow of $19.38. The butter-fat was valued at 15½c to 21c per pound, the price paid by the creamery at that time. Profit was a minus quantity, but the experience was probably worth the difference, says Frank E. Uhl in Hall's Dairy Farmer.

My last year of dairying presents a more encouraging showing, though still not what it should be. The herd numbered 12 and constituted of one Jersey and one native heifer, four Jerseys and six native cows. The total yield of milk was 67,515 pounds. The best cow gave 6,590 pounds; the poorest, 3,625 of milk. The average per cow was 5,626 pounds. The poorest butter-fat record in the herd was 145 pounds; the best, 276.4; the average was 237.5. This is still below the ideal towards which I am working. The income, however, is considerably better than I made the first year. The average was $37.50, after allowing for the cost of feeding. The highest cow made me $46.40, and even the poorest cow made a gain of $16.25. In other words, she earned me $34.25, $18 of which was spent for feed. The best cow made a gross income of $68.40, but I fed her $22 worth of feed.

All milk for the family and all whole milk used in feeding was credited to the cows. Butter-fat was valued at 20c, the average price paid at the creamery during the year; skimmilk was credited at 15c per 100 pounds; and calves at from $2.00 to $6.00 each. Pasturage was charged at $1.10 per month, grain at cost and roughage at market value. Six cows gave net returns of more than $40 each.

In feeding these cows I was working for practical results, as every dairy farmer should. Net returns were of more interest to me than mere pounds of milk and butter-fat. After the practical limit is reached, a further yield of milk is gained at sacrificed cost of feed as well as needless drain [illegible] the nervous system of the cow. [illegible] not wish to be understood as [illegible] ing the experiments of our State [illegible] years ago of feeding a herd of [illegible] cows. It was a valuable illus[illegible] of what can be done. But I wou[illegible] tion the policy of a dairy farm[illegible] would feed his cows to their ut[illegible] pacity. The extra cost cuts d[illegible] profits and the danger of injur[illegible] nervous system is likely to [illegible] abortion or other cow ailme[illegible]

The low feed-cost above n[illegible] secured by feeding comparati[illegible] grain. For the most part p[illegible] used in the for[illegible] clover, [illegible] limited quan[illegible] alfalfa [illegible] bean hay. B[illegible] men[illegible] only mill fee[illegible] and turnips[illegible] ration. I[illegible] tured bo[illegible] ing m[illegible] milk se[illegible] to overcome the shrinkage [illegible] to flies.

Only two of the original ten heifers completed the sixth year of milking. One died at first freshening with symptoms of milk fever, a strange thing in a native heifer, one developed actinomycosis and was disposed of; two of them developed very small udders and were sold before the second season; one was sold after a second year's trial because she was too far below my standard of 250 pounds of butter-fat per year; another followed later for the same reason, one lost one-quarter of her udder and was fattened for the block; only one was deemed worthy of remaining with the herd to complete the seventh year, as number nine indicated that her profitableness was wanting. The tenth was almost an ideal dairy cow.

AS OTHERS THINK.

Everyone in Chesterville Has a Right to His Own Opinion.

While everyone has a right to his own opinion, yet it is wise to always consider what others think and profit by their experience.

Nothing makes life so miserable, or interferes so widely with the usefulness of the average American, as indigestion, and it is well for us to give fair consideration to what others think about this remarkable affliction.

Many people, from their own experience, are positive that Mi o na stomach tablets are an absolute cure for indigestion and the many disagreeable symptoms that follow this disease, such as distress after eating, coated tongue, bad taste in the mouth, dizziness, flatulence, nervousness and debility.

The way Mi o na is sold, on a guarantee to refund the money unless it cures, shows plainly the value of this remedy. There will be no charge whatever for Mi o na unless you are satisfied that it has relieved you of indigestion.

Mi o na wakens up the stomach muscles and strengthens them so that they take care of all the food you eat in a natural, healthy way, without pain or distress after meals.

Mi-o-na is sold by druggists everywhere for 50 cents, and we positively guarantee to refund your money should you purchase a box and be dissatisfied with results Write for free sample, addressing Mi-o-na, Box 977, Buffalo, N.Y.

MAGISTRATE FINED $10.

Case of Supplying Liquor in Prohibited Hours.

(From the Evening Citizen.)

Morrisburg, March 6—At a special court in the town hall, Morrisburg, on Thursday a charge was laid by License Inspector Foster against Mr. Thomas McDonald, J.P., for giving an order to procure intoxicating liquor for medicinal purposes, contrary to Section 74 of the Liquor License Act, on Feb. 8 1908. This was the first case of the kind heard here, and as the parties to it were well known much public interest was taken in the proceedings.

The magistrates were Messrs. A. A. Logan (presiding), W. K. Farlinger, J. S. Hickey, F. B. Robertson and M. J. Casselman.

Mr Irwin Hilliard appeared for the prosecution and Mr. George Bradfield for the defence.

The case for the prosecution was that Mr. Thomas McDonald gave to Mr. George Bradfield on Saturday evening, Feb. 8th, after the closing hour an order for a bottle of whiskey and Mr. Ryan of the American hotel, supplied him with the liquor. The plea for the defence was that Mr. Bradfield was ill and required the stimulant, and the argument of the prosecution was that Mr. Bradfield was not ill, and did not require the liquor for medicinal purposes, and that therefore, a breach of the law had been committed. The prosecution also contended that in any case, if Mr. Bradfield were bad, the quantity given under the order (three half pints) was excessive and unnecessary.

Mr. Ryan gave evidence, stating that liquor given for medicinal purposes was put up in large bottles and in small flasks and sold according to the quantity demanded by the purchaser. He knew that doctors and magistrates gave orders to obtain liquor during closing hours and he understood this was a genuine case In cross-examination he said he had had orders from doctors specifying the quantity in ounces, and some that didn't specify it.

Dr. Casselman said he could not tell whether Mr. McDonald acted bona fide, believing that Mr. Bradfield was ill; but if a man were ill or in a low condition a drink would strengthen him. He had given an order for a three half-pint bottle to persons who had asked for it because he judged from their condition that they needed it. He should have given Mr. Bradfield such an order if he considered it necessary. He considered that Mr. Bradfield, whom he saw at his house on the date in question, needed a stimulant.

Dr. McLaughlin, on being shown the requisition note and assuming it was for three half pints of whiskey, thought Mr. Bradfield might have required that quantity. But for some people, it would be better if they did not have whiskey when ill. Still he could not say whether the order was reasonable or unreasonable in this case; he did not know Mr. Bradfield's condition at the time.

In reply to Mr. Logan, the doctor said in the case of a man who had been drinking heavily the liquor so obtained might be called a beverage or a medicine, but as to the latter there were other things to take into account in considering it as a medicine.

Asked if he would cut off the supply sharply from a man who had been drinking heavily, he said it might be best to do so; but he could not say whether he should have cut Mr. Bradfield off sharply under such circumstances.

At this point Mr. Hillard and Mr. Thomas McDonald held a consultation in private and, on returning to court, Mr. Hilliard said if the case went on he should have the painful duty of calling Mrs. Bradfield; and he would suggest to counsel for the defence that as this was the first case of the kind in the history of Morrisburg he would accept a fine, the minimum amount, which should cover the costs of all the orders in hand. The next witness would be Mrs. Bradfield and it would pain him very much if he had to call her.

Mr. Bradfield said the prosecution had pained him all they could and they might just as well call and pain her.

Mr. Hilliard—Well it pains me very much and I wish it could be avoided.

Mr. McDonald also urged acceptance of Mr. Hilliard's proposition, which he considered fair and honorable.

Mr. Bradfield again said he would just as soon the case go on.

Mr. Hilliard considered the course suggested best and said he should rather pay the fine himself. He knew Mr. McDonald would feel bad over it, the other parties to the case would feel bad and the community would feel bad. But the law had been transgressed and it was right that prosecution should follow. However, under the circumstances he should write out a check to cover the costs in this case. And notwithstanding that arrangement he should do his best to prosecute any one who gives an order and any hotelkeeper who filled an order that was not necessary.

Ultimately, Mr. Hilliard's suggestion was accepted and the fine of $10 and costs were paid by him.

MAKES LIFE MISERABLE

Troubles that Keep Half the Chesterville Doctors Busy.

For the sake of your personal welfare, just think a moment about the process of digesting food.

There are certain secretions called gastric juices that act upon the food after it is swallowed and change all the nutrition in it into life giving blood.

Anything that interferes with the secretion of these juices causes indigestion and makes a chronic state of stomach weakness inevitable.

From now on build up the strength and health of the stomach with Mi o na tablets. You will soon find yourself strong and never know the meaning of indigestion.

Half of the prescriptions the Chesterville doctors write are for troubles that result directly from a weakened stomach. Strengthen the stomach muscles, increase the secretion of gastric juices, and you will find that common afflictions—indigestion, with its headaches, dizziness depression of spirits, spots before the eyes, nervousness, sleeplessness and general debility—have been overcome.

If Mi o na did not have an unusually curative effect in stomach disorders, it could not be sold on the guarantee to refund the money unless it does all that is claimed for it.

Mi-o-na is sold by druggists everywhere for 50 cents, and we positively guarantee to refund your money should you purchase a box and be dissatisfied with results Write for free sample, addressing Booth's Mi-ona, Box 977, Buffalo, N. Y.

Treed by Wolves.

Port Arthur, Ont., March 9.—From dusk to dawn, with the thermometer below zero, clinging to a slim tree, while a pack of twenty ravenous timber wolves kept up an incessant chorus beneath, was the experience of Tom and Patrick Murphy, two trappers, in Silve Mountains, near here on Friday night. They started off into the woods and before they had gone far they heard the baying of wolves, which gradually became more distinct. They thought but little of the matter until they realized that the wolves were on the tracks, following them at a good speed, but two shots failed to scare off the leaders, so the Murphys got into a tree just in time as the leaders made a snap at them. In their hurry to reach safety Tom lost a portion of his clothing, and so without food or overcoats the men were kept in the tree all night. When morning came the wolves scattered out of sight, but the men managed to pick off nine of them, for which they collected $135 in bounty here.

I. O. F. to Raise Rates.

Toronto, March 7.—The Independent Order of Foresters will, it is stated, at the meeting of the Supreme Court in June, decide on an increase in rates, and a re-scaling of those members who joined previous to 1899. In fact, these latter will be asked to pay either in a lump sum or in some other way sufficient to bring them up to date in comparison with what the rates charged for at that age by the order, are now. It is claimed that the scale previous to 1899 was far too low. The plan is to rate a member for charges on his present age, on the theory that all along he has been getting too cheap insurance. An alternative is for this member to pay a lump sum for his arrears, with 4 per cent. interest, and then he would go on paying at a new assessment scale.

THREE PAST EXISTENCES

SAW PREVIOUS LIVES IN HYPNOTIC SLEEP.

Marvellous Case of French Girl—Could Remember Before She Was Born.

Some wonderful results, seeming to throw some light on the problems of reincarnation have recently been attained through the medium of a young French woman, Mlle. Marie Mayo Cyriame.

She was the daughter of a French engineer, who, having passed a part of his life in constructing railways in the East, died there. Her mother married again, the second husband being an engineer also, engaged upon the construction of eastern railways.

The girl was brought up at Beirut, in Syria, until she was 9 years old, in the care of native servants and in attendance at a school kept by nuns, who taught her to read and write in Arabic.

Being brought to France and placed under the care of an aunt who lived in Provence, she came under the observation of Colonel de Rochas, who, as one of the foremost investigators of psychological phenomena upon a scientific basis, had for years been engaged in the exposure of charlatans and in the study of varying phases of personality under the influence of hypnosis.

WENT OVER CHILDHOOD.

There were thirty seances in all. It was not until the seventh seance that complete exteriarization of the astral body was effected, and only in the fifteenth did Col. de Rochas feel justified in carrying the regression of her memory back to any previous existence.

Thus, Miss Mayo was taken back, in her condition of trance, gradually from 18 years of age to 16, to 14, to 12, to 10 years of age

She saw her astral body transform itself in appearance corresponding with the altered age, and her memory revived countless facts which she had forgotten in her waking state.

BABY AGAIN.

At 8 years of age she was at Beirut, and could remember all her Turkish, which had slipped away from her during the years she had lived in France. At the age of 1 year her language failed her, and she could simply nod "yes" and "no"

Then she went into nothingness, feeling only that she existed. She was carried back still farther, when she said she was "all in the gray," and remembered having had some earlier existence.

HER PRECEDING TXISTENCE.

With the seventeenth seance the full facts of those earlier lives of hers which could be evoked began to appear. Back to the moment of her birth, back to that time before her birth; beyond that and—

"Where are you now?'

"I am a woman, she calls herself Lina.'

"Are you living or dead?"

"I am dead."

"How did you die?"

WAS BRETON GIRL.

The tragedy of the girl's preceding existence was disclosed. The daughter of a fisherman in Brittany, she led the toilsome, hard life of the fisher child, yet was allowed to attend the parish schools long enough to learn how to read and write. As she grew into maidenhood she hoped for marriage, with the simple, natural desire and ambition natural to the young, innocent girl.

She was yet in her teens when the suitor she longed for came, a fisherman, like ther father. His name was Yvon. She was married when she was 20 years old; and then, indeed, she learned what life and love could be, and what sorrow could be.

The reincarnated fisher girl of the hypnotic trance—the girl who, as the guarded and sheltered young lady of this generation, was ignorant of the greatest fact of woman's life—passed through the pangs of childbirth, showed the happiness of the mother with her child, and showed the enguish of the mother when the child died, a baby only 2 years old.

COMMITTED SUICIDE.

There were no other children, for Yvon, her husband, was drowned in a shipwreck. Lina, in wild despair, flung herself into the sea from one of the precipices of her native Brittany.

Before the eyes of Colonel de Rochas, M. Lacoste and her physician, Dr. Bertrand, the subject underwent afresh the agonies of her supposed suffocation until, in mercy to the living girl before them, the intensity of her re-enactment of the obscure tragedy under the waves of the Brittany coast had to be mitigated.

Again and again, Miss Mayo, hypnotized by Colonel de Rochas, rehearsed her life and death as Lina and her formless, peaceful existence "in the gray' until, impelled to reincarnation, she assumed the amorphous haze of a fresh astral body and descended upon her present mother, Mme de Mayo, some months before her new birth took place. But the life of Lina was only the beginning of her memory's regression.

Before that she was a man—treacherous, dissipated, cruel, blood-thirsty. For half a century she was Charles Mauville, clerk in a ministerial office in Paris. Time and again during his career the streets of Paris ran with blood, and heads were cut off in the public thoroughfares.

Mauville himself joined in the savageries, committing murders with his own hand, because he loved to kill. He lived out his petty, bloody life, hated by all who knew him well, until he sustained a chill at the age of 50 years, and died of pneumonia.

AT COURT OF LOUIS XIV.

But Mauville was not the ultimate stage of regression in Mlle. Mayo's memory. She was in "the dark" for a long time previously, but before that had been Madeleine de Saint-Marc, wife of a gentleman attached to the court of Louis XIV.

PUTTING IT CONCRETELY.

Although Mr. Lawton was wont to indulge in a sort of language which left his hearers in some doubt as to his exact meaning, yet when he was "put to it' he never failed to make himself understood.

"No, I shouldn't want to live in a house like Philander's," he announced to Mrs. Lawton on the evening of his return from a visit to a nephew. "His cellar, now—it's most desperately overflowed whenever the weather is anyways damp."

"Just what do you mean by desperately overflowed?" asked Mrs. Lawton.

"I mean," said her husband, mildly, that all they had to do was to open the door that led from the kitchen down cellar, and the apples come floating right in on the kitchen floor. Is that plain to ye?"

GREAT ITALIAN BRIGANDS

SALOMONE IS HATED, WHILE MULONT IS A HERO.

Still Powers in Sicily — Newspaper Man Fell Foul of Failla Mulone.

A Palermo (Italy) correspondent writes:—Although the formidable Varsolona is heard of no more, during the last year or two there have been several candidates for succession. Among these, Salomone and Failla Mulone have outstripped the others. The former has been arrested and is to be tried in the Assize Court of Caltanissetta. The latter is still at large. The men present curious contrasts, for, while Salomone is hated by Sicilians, Mulone is their hero. The first became a brigand through politics; the second through love.

DRUGGED AND TAKEN.

Four years ago Salomone shot in the back his political opponent, the Syndic of Barrafranco. Since then he has lived by robbery, and has never hesitated to kill anybody who attempted to betray him. The circumstances of his arrest are tragic. A landlord, from whom, rifle in hand, he had demanded hospitality, administered to him a narcotic, mixed in his food. When Salomone was asleep the landlord summoned the carabinieri. The brigand, however, managed to awake at the right moment an took to his heels. He had not gone very far before he found himself surrounded by eight carabinieri, who managed to secure him after a brief struggle.

Then Salomone called the leader of the carabinieri and offered him 5,000 lire ($1,000) for permission to escape. Naturally, the bribe was refused, and the brigand was hauled off to jail. With him were arrested two priests and two gentlemen of Barrafranco, who urged him to kill the Syndic, and they will be tried with him.

MULONE IS HERO.

The Sicilians, uncultured, but chivalrous, hate Salomone. They have never forgiven him for shooting the Syndic in the back. That was treachery, because in Sicily homicide is regarded as a sort of duel without witnesses, in which the adversaries should face each other loyally and fight according to the traditional rules of chivalry in the country. But there is no doubt that his forthcoming trial will be followed with much interest.

Failla Mulone, who took to the forest after he had killed his sweetheart and his rival for her affection, is the true brigand of romance or melodrama, and he is beloved by the people, who recognize in him the ardent disposition, as ready for ferocious revenge as for magnanimous generosity, which is characteristic of the Sicilian race.

TO KILL REPORTER.

Two years ago he had one glorious hour of celebrity when he was surprised by a squad of carabinieri in a house in the Montedoro country, but managed to escape, killing two of the police and wounding several others.

On that occasion a Montedoro journalist telegraphed a long account of the affair to a Palermo newspaper. But Mulone, who is a modern brigand and reads the newspapers, was dissatisfied with the narrative of his prowess.

Accordingly, he wrote to the editor of the Palermo journal a letter, in which he swore that if the reporter returned to Montedoro he would be killed. He enclosed ten lire with the letter to pay for the publication. The poor journalist hurriedly left Montedoro, where he lived, and settled in Palermo.

PERSONAL PARAGRAPHS.

Interesting Gossip About Some of the World's Leading People.

The Kaiser's moustache, in its present form, dates back to 1894. It was a development of that individuality which he definitely assumed upon his accession in 1888, although the credit of the actual "discovery" must be given to the Kaiser's own private perruquier, who, in the early weeks of its existence, had to be in close attendance at Court to keep the moustache in place. No fashion has more completely changed the physiognomy of a people, for every good German has since considered it his bounden duty to pay to his Emperor the compliment of the sincerest form of flattery.

A pretty story is told concerning the Countess of Dudley, in which the dramatis personæ included two well-known Japanees jugglers, who were giving a performance at a London music-hall, and a canary which constituted a part of their stock-in-trade. The Countess occupied a seat in the stalls, and during the performance one of the little birds, after hovering round the auditorium for some time, gently flew down and perched on her lap. When an attendant came forward to claim the bird the Countess begged to be permitted to keep it, and the manager having given his consent Lord Dudley promptly constructed a tiny cage out of his programme, and in this the little songster was safely conveyed to his house in Carlton House Terrace.

Although her fortune has been estimated at $15.000.000. the late Baroness A. de Rothschild lived a most simple and unassuming life. The most exquisite dishes were served at her table and the rarest wines set before her guests, but she scarcely touched them. In later years she hardly even made use of her equipages. It was quite a usual thing to see her take the tram which passed her gate, running from Geneva to Versoix. The guards all knew her, and used to point her out sometimes to the other travellers. After she had seen all the splendor which wealth and a high social position can secure, the Baroness seemed to be more convinced than anyone of the vanity of riches and earthly magnificence. Her desire seemed to be to live like the humble, and find peace and happiness in the routine of their ordinary lives.

Mr. Justin McCarthy is now living in quiet retirement at Westgate-on-Sea, England, and his withdrawal from active literary life has been a distinct loss. No man of our time has seen more of life than this brilliant Irishman. He has known every man worth knowing in the Victorian era. It must seem an age to Mr. McCarthy since he caught his first glimpse of London. The Crystal Palace was in Hyde Park then, and the Duke of Wellington was walking down Whitehall in his blue coat and duck trousers. Lord John Russell was passing Reform Bills; Dickens, Carlyle, Thackeray, John Bright, and the young Victorians were in their prime. The young reporter knew them all. Mr. McCarthy has written novels, histories, and poems too many to remember.

The death of Sir Henry Colvile has removed from the British Army a man of many tastes and talents. Soldier, surveyor, balloonist, explorer, author, yachtsman, and photographer, he seemed able to turn a ready hand and facile brain to the most unexpected tasks; and the one clouded spot of a brilliant record is that Boer War incident at Lindley, the ultimate result of which was that General Colvile was placed on half-pay. Years ago, before ballooning became a fashionable pastime, Sir Henry had made a deep study of aeronautics, and one of his many ascents was on the occasion of his marriage, when he spent the first day of his honeymoon in navigating a big balloon from the Crystal Palace to Ely. He was as much at home on the waters of the Channel as he was in the air, and on one occasion, when serving in the Guards, he paddled a canoe from Dover to Calais in half-a-dozen hours. Sir Henry was also a lover of the dramatic art, and he has written two or three plays, one of the best of these being "The Nick of Time," the Guards' play at Chelsea Barracks last year.

Sir W. B. Richmond, R. A., is one of the most interesting artists of the time. He hates ugliness as much as he hates noise, and equals Ruskin in his antipathy to the unlovely in life. He also stands for pure air in London, and smoke is his abomination. No man is more ready to lend a helping hand to struggling genius. It is Sir William's proud boast that when he is at home he has as guest and student every third Sunday a poor factory boy who has a gift for drawing. He it was who "discovered" Austin O. Spare, the remarkable painter-prodigy. The famous Royal Academician was himself one of London's boy prodigies more than fifty years ago, when he astonished his relations by cartooning them upon doors, walls, tables, and window frames—upon anything, in fact, which would bear the mark of his pencil.

Queen Maud of Norway has been described as one of the cleverest members of the British Royal Family. She is talented beyond the average, reads hard, writes both prose and poetry, and speaks five languages fluently. Then she knows many minor arts and crafts, sews and spins well, can carve wood, bind a book, take a photograph, knit a stocking, play chess, and use a typewriter. And Queen Maud is a good athlete, rides well, can sail a boat, pull an oar, skate cleverly ,and has of late taken up the pastime of ski-ing. She is also a keen cyclist, and may often be seen wheeling about the lanes near Sandringham. Children are one of her greatest interests. The story goes that once, when a school class was under examination for her amusement, she took a shy little girl on her knee, and the child's answers instantly showed a marked improvement. The secret, however, came out later on, when the little one said to her teacher, "Please, ma'am, the lady told me what to say."

PAPER TROUSERS NEXT.

A firm in Saxony has established a process by which they combine paper and cotton, and make it into a serviceable cloth. Paper and cotton and paper and wool are so combined that suits, jackets, shirts and many other articles of dress wear are now being produced. Sufficient xylolin, as it is called, to produce a complete plain suit costs from two to three dollars.

A sentimental poet writes: "How can I meet my darling?" After some deliberation over the question we have come to the conclusion that he can meet her by approaching her from an opposite direction.

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments, must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential.

Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local.

Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional.

The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, seeking the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments.

The "Night Cure", as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, eases nervous excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—as a general tonic to the system. For positive local help, use as well

DENTIST ARRESTED.

Cobden Man Who Was Tax Collectoo in Town of Thorold.

Renfrew, March 30—Peter C. Cregan, the Cobden dentist who was arrested there Saturday by Chief McDermott of Renfrew, on information laid at Niagara Falls, Ont., on three charges of theft, is the tax collector of Thorold, Welland county. He is charged with embezzling between two and three thousand dollars of the funds of the municipality about a year ago. W. H. Mains, chief of the Ontario frontier police of Niagara Falls, Ont., arrived in town this afternoon to take charge of the prisoner, who has been detained here since his arrest, and will leave with him tomorrow for Niagara Falls, where he will stand his trial.

According to Chief Mains, Creegan is a married man with a family and 52 years of age. He is a dentist by profession and until a year ago practiced in Thorold, having also the position of tax collector of the town. He had numerous friends there and was highly respected. He got into financial difficulties, however, and in the spring of 1907 he was found to be behind in his accounts for something over two thousand dollars, it is said, and he was immediately discharged. His friends tried to straighten up the matter, and the municipality not wishing to prosecute him did all they could to come to some settlement. The matter dragged on during the summer and last fall he skipped the town without doing anything towards settlement. He went to Carleton Place and was employed by Dr. Winters of that place as his assistant, and placed in charge of his branch office at Cobden, where he has been ever since until his arrest on Saturday. In Cobden he had the respect of all the citizens and the news of his arrest came as a great surprise. As the police magistrate at Thorold is the clerk of the town, the information was laid before the police magistrate at Niagara Falls.

GEORGE ELLIOTT, JOHN A. CAMPBELL, } Auditors

The public generally will notice by the above auditors' report that we have on hand, over and above all outstanding indebtedness, the sum of $440 69 to the credit of the General Account. I make this plain as regards the council, we being unable to give the ratepayers a complete standing of the affairs of the township at nomination day.

ROBT. FRASER,
Reeve.

That languid, lifeless feeling that comes with spring and early summer, can be quickly changed to a feeling of buoyancy and energy by the judicious use of Dr. Shoop's Restorative.

The Restorativs is a genuine tonic to tired, rundown nerves, and but a few doses is needed to satisfy the user that Dr. Shoop's Restorative is actually reaching that tired spot. The indoor life of winter nearly always leads to sluggish bowels, and to sluggish circulation in general.

The customary lack of exercise and outdoor air ties up the liver, stagnates the kidneys, and oft-times weakens the Heart's action. Use Dr. Shoop's Restorative a few weeks and all will be changed. A few days test will tell you that you are using the right remedy. You will easily and surely note the change from day to day. Sold by Walter G. Bolster.

Wm. Feely Dead.

On Monday, March 30th, at two a. m., there passed away from this life one of the earliest pioneers of Cannamore, in the person of William Feely. Deceased was well and favorably known, and being of a kind and hospitable disposition, many shared the comforts of his home and fireside. He was the third son of the late Thomas Feely, and was born on the farm on which he lived (and died) on January 29th, 1842. On January 10th, 1870, he married Catherine Loughridge, eldest daughter of the late John Loughridge of Morewood, who with four children survives him; Jane, wife of Wilburn Merkley, of Buffalo, N.Y.; Jette Bell, William S. and John A. at home. Deceased had been a patient sufferer from that most fatal disease, consumption for about a year, but was only confined to his room for about two weeks.

The funeral took place from his late residence on Wednesday, April 1st, services being conducted by the Rev. D. Stewart, assisted by the Rev. A. E. Hagar in the Presbyterian Church, after which interment took place in the Methodist cemetery. Besides the sorrowing family and friends, deceased leaves one brother to mourn his loss, viz: Mr. Alex. Feely of this place. The rest of the family, three brothers and two sisters, having all passed on before.

The pall bearers were Messrs. Wm. F. Byers, Wesley Reveler, Thos. McGregor, John G. Smirl, John A. Glasgow and Jas. McConnell.

A line from "Gray's Elegy," might here be appropriately added:—

No more for him the blazing hearth shall burn,
Nor busy housewife ply her evening care;
No children run to lisp their sire's return,
Nor climb his knees, the envied kiss to share.

—FOR—

He has plowed his last furrow,
He has reaped his last grain;
No more shall awake him
To labor again.

S.

Cannamore, April 1st, 1908.

Levi Cossitt, one of the founders of the Cossitt company, proprietors of the large foundry at Brockville, is dead, aged 82 years. He was for thirty years a resident of Guelph. Mayor Cossitt is a nephew.

Little Boy Drowned.

The sad news was spread over town Monday afternoon that it was thought that Willie, the little five-year-old son of Mr. Jas. Caloran, had been drowned in the water course near their place, and in a short time the news was verified, when Mr. Frean Hummel found the little lad.

The Caloren home is quarantined for smallpox and the event is a very sad one, when it is impossible to extend the sympathy that the public would like to, but are barred. Many of us have little ones, and how we cherish them, and when we witnessed the event of the interment at night of the little fellow, it was an exceedingly solemn occasion, and one which should soften the heart of everyone. The RECORD extends sincerest sympathy to the bereaved parents.

Leap Year Banquet.

The ladies of the Chosen Friends Chesterville Council, No. 479, after their regular meeting Monday evening held a leap year banquet in Merkley's parlors.

The tables were handsomely decorated and well laden with the good things that invite the appetite.

The friends present did ample justice to the delicacies before them and Friend E. H. Beaucage, organizer from the Province of Quebec, was present and added much to the pleasures of the evening with his many spicy remarks. Other speeches were indulged in regarding fraternity Aid and protection of the order, which stands second to none.

We were surprised at the rendering of the different toasts by the ladies it being their first occasion. The membership has been constantly increasing and bright prospects are in store for the C. O. C. F. Chesterville.

Weak women get prompt and lasting help by using Dr. Shoop's Night Cure.
