Empire Day Procession

The pupils of Chesterville's schools made a good showing on Wednesday of last week when Empire Day was celebrated by a parade through the principal streets of the town headed by the Citizens' Band. The Public and Separate schools were represented by a full complement of pupils, while those of the High school who could not resist the allurement of the band joined in unofficially to swell the total to a number surprising to most of our citizens. The Empire Day message of their Majesties to the boys and girls of the British Empire, contained on a record with unbroken seal and released for the first time on Empire Day was delivered through the Public school's victrola.

Little Girl Killed Near Russell

A terrible accident happened last evening on the Ottawa and New York Line about a mile from Russell, when Dorothy Jean, the three year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Boland was instantly killed by the evening passenger train. The little tot had evidently wandered on to the track and had been playing there unoticed by any one, until the engine was so close that it could not be stopped in time. The little one was getting out of the way of the train when it is beleived she was struck by the engine step and her head completely severed from the body. The grief stricken parents are almost wild over the tragedy. Mrs. Boland is a sister of George Adam of Finch.

Canadians Return Wiser From U. S.

Twenty Kingston young men who were enticed to Massena, N.Y., to work in the aluminum plant are back again, and content to remain in Canada. They found conditions not as represented. For 50 cents an hour they worked in a blast furnace in eight hour shifts, but could not stand the terrific heat. Their money was held back three weeks, and board was found to be $2.00 a week more than advertised. Forty Canadians in all left, and the plant manager endeavored to have all arrested for not living up to the conditions as he had paid their head tax,

An Editor Talks Back

We apologise, says the Innisfail (Alta.) Province, for all the mistakes made in former issues and say they were inexcusable, as all we have to do is to hunt news and clean the rollers, and set type, sweep the floors and pen short items, women's meetings, etc., and make paste and mail the papers, and talk to visitors, and distribute type, and carry water and saw wood, read the proofs, hunt the shears and write editorials, dodge the bills, dun the delinquents and take cussing from the whole force, and tell our subscribers that we must have money—say that we have no business to make mistakes while attending to those small matters and getting our living on hopper tail soup flavored with imagination and wearing old shoes and no collar and a patch on our pants and obliged to turn a smiling countenance to the man who tells us our paper isn't worth two dollars anyhow, and that he could make a better one with his eyes shut.

A Patch on His "West"

Miss Dooley was instructing her class in geography.

"Now you have in front of you, the East; on your right the South, and on your left the North. Now William, what have you behind you?"

William (in tears): "A patch on my trousers, and I told mother you'd see it."

Two Women Hurt When Train Hits Bus

A motor bus of the Yellow Bus line, Ottawa, operated between Prescott and Morrisburg, was struck by a G.T.R. train at Cardinal while crossing the track, and was badly damaged. Mrs. Captain Deliney and daughter, of Prescott, occupants of the bus, were badly bruised and cut with flying glass.

Judgment Against Hydro Far Reaching

The Hydro Electric Commission of Ontario has no right under the Act of incorporation to erect poles on highways in Ontario. This is in effect the judgment of Mr. Justice Rose in a suit heard in Owen Sound Monday, wherein the hydro claimed $2,200 from the county for damage to a power line while extensive road work was in progress on a county road. The claim was dismissed and the judgment has a very far reaching effect and is important to every municipality through which hydro passes.

Mother Saves Child From Being Killed

Mrs. William Larue, of Belleville, narrowly escaped death on the C. N. R. track when she made a heroic rescue of her daughter Helen, three years of age, from an approaching express train. The little one wandered upon the track and the mother seeing the child's predicament, rushed to its aid. She seized the child as the engine approached and threw herself over the rails, her shoes were cut and the lower portion of her dress was torn to shreds by the wheels of the engine. The child was bruised somewhat when the mother threw it from off the track.

Beggar Your Neighbor

The other day an invalided nurse, who had lost her health in France during the Great War, and who, physicians report, will never recover, requested an acquaintance, a lawyer, to visit her at the hospital where she is now lying. Upon his arrival he was informed by the lady that she had been persuaded (by a couple of high pressure salesmen) to invest what funds she had some nine hundred dollars, Upon being asked what she had received for her her money, she handed him the following list: L.R. Steel Realty Company (gone bust), Detroit Windsor Bridge (a dream, the stock of which wa sold by the broken down R. T. Scott Company) and an equally valueless bunch of Texas oil stock. It appears that these scoundrels had gained access to a hospital where this lady was formerly a patient and by devices usually employed by such gentry had persuaded her to part with her money. To put it bluntly they had robbed, in cold blood, this invalided, bed-ridden nurse of every dollar she had in the world. Presumably the robbery was performed in a quite legal manner, and there is precious little chance of the Attorney being able to recover. Porch climbers, bank robbers and hold-up men at least take some chances; but high pressure salesmen are under no risk when they undertake to rob bed-ridden nurses. And still there are those who, in opposing Blue Sky legislation, tacitly acquiesce in a continuance of this game of beggar your neighbor.—Toronto Saturday night

The Small Town Merchant

What sort of a fellow is the small town business man. Well, after studying him for a number of years, right here, we believe he is somewhat of a hero. He always welcomes you. If the weather is cold, he'll let you warm your shins and hang around the stove any time. If you have a good job and are making your $25.00 or $30.00 per week, you don't hang around his place much—he knows why. Because that's the time you are sending your coin off to Eaton's or Simpson's where cash is necessary. He always "chips in" if some family is in need or a neighbor woman in distress and her fatherless children are in want of food and shoes. When you are stuck yourself and come around for a bill of goods, with a "charge this please." He does—without rubbing it in. All through the winter his generosity keeps the wolf from your door, and when the factory opens up in the spring, you forget this and the contents of the first pay envelope you get goes off to Eaton's as fast as the Royal Mail can carry it, while from time to time you are flush, he annoys you each month with a statement with a codicil praying that you "pay a little on account next pay day." The country merchant is useful at times and even in Thessalon the good folks have gotten into him deep. Fancy men of small means having on their books, amounts ranging from $1,000 to $18,000—laying awake o'nights wondering if they will ever get back what belongs to them again. That's about what kind of men do business here. Honest, kind-hearted, hard-working fellows, who toil night and day to make a living for their families.—Algoma Advocate.

Changes In Motor Vehicle Act Become Law in 1924

The Highway Travel Act, 1923, becomes law in the province on January 1, 1924. The bill has become law with only minor amendments to the form which embodied the report of the Parliamentary committee which toured the province last year. Copies of the new act are to be distributed to all motor owners in the province in order that they may familiarize themselves with the provisions of the act.

The salient points, summarized, are: Rear lamps, illuminating license plates, must have bulbs with a minimum candlepower of four instead of the present commonly-used two-candlepower light. Parking lights on the left rear fender will be legal anywhere in the province. At present they are only made legal under separate municipal bylaws. The spotlight is legalized, with the proviso that it must be attached to the lefthand side of the car and mounted so that its beam is permanentely directed to a point at the edge of the roadway 75 feet in front of the car. Police officers are given the power to stop cars on the streets and highways to inspect brakes and to order the immediate adjustment of any brake found faulty.

Magistrates will endorse license cards following conviction of the holder for any infraction of any section of the act. Overhanging loads on any vehicle must carry a red light at night and a red flag in the day time.

In addition a number of changes are made in the penalties for speeding and reckless driving, though the rates of permissible speed are not in any way affected. Speeding penalties are placed on a sliding scale, increasing with the speed. Magistrates are also given the right of recommending to the Department of Highways the cancellation or suspension of motor vehicle licenses for definite or indefinite periods.

One of the major reasons for the postponement of the time of enforcement of of the new act is the unsuitability of the 1923 license cards for endorsement. Originally the consolidated act was to have been made effective from September 1, but it was considered advisable to allow a lapse of time until January 1, 1924, to give motorists the opportunity of familiarizing themselves with the changes. With the distribution of the 1924 license plates, copies of the act will be issued and the identification cards accompanying the plates will be sufficiently large to permit endorsement by a magistrate in case of conviction.

FIVE YEARS' AGONY ENDED

When He Took "Fruit-a-tives" For Rheumatism

The Medicine Made From Fruit

There can be no doubt that "Fruit-a-tives" is the long sought remedy for Rheumatism and Lumbago. From all over Canada come letters testifying to this fact.

Mr. John E. Guilderson of Parrsboro, N.S. writes: "I suffered badly with Rheumatism for five years—tried different medicines—was treated by doctors in Amherst—and here at home—but the Rheumatism came back.

In 1916, I saw an advertisement for "Fruit-a-tives" and took a box and got relief, so I took them for about six months and the Rheumatism was all gone and I have never felt it since".

Colt Long Missing Joined Herd of Deer

A remarkable story is told by Wm. Holmes, farmer, a few miles from Renfrew, of how a young colt and deer would seem to have fraternized throughout the long and inhospitable winter far from habitation. Mr. Holmes has a ranch at High Falls Madawaska, and last fall when removing his stock of cattle and horses, a colt a year and a half old was missing. A long and careful search failed to locate it, the last and final search being made about Christmas. This spring he again placed a number of cattle and horses on the ranch, and upon a visit the other day almost the first he set eyes upon was the missing colt, rugged and shaggy, but in splendid condition.

The assumption of inhabitants in that locality, which is also the opinion of Mr. Holmes, is that the colt had strayed in the fall, and became associated with a herd of deer, and following their rounds and benefited by their instinct in procuring food and comparative shelter, had fared remarkably well, of which its healthy appearance gave evidence.

Care of The Scalp

Among the minor ills—those, namely, which do not threaten life or impair physical efficiency—there is perhaps none that occasions more distress than the various troubles that affect the hair of the head. "A woman's glory is her hair," and man's would be his if he could only keep it! In most cases he could keep it if he would only begin to care for it soon enough, but good hair is like good health; we seldom appreciate it or think of means for preserving it until it begins to depart, and then it is often too late.

Many of the troubles with our hair—lack of lustre, brittleness, dandruff, thinning or actual baldness—come primarily from lack of nutrition. The skin of the scalp, unlike the skin of the rest of the body is stretched over a bony surface, so that its blood supply must be brought from a distance and is almost completely shut off by pressure against the skull such as that made by the rim of a man's straw hat or his derby. The stiff hat, by the way, is undoubtedly the main reason that so many more men than women grow bald. The few instances of baldness in women can usually be explained by lack of care or by neglect of some disease of the scalp.

The great thing in caring for the scalp is to maintain a good supply of blood for nourishing the hair bulbs. Massage—that is, vigorous rubbing night and morning combined with pinching the scalp between thumb and forefinger—will help greatly. If that is done faithfully from early life, a man may, if he avoids the stiff hat, not only preserve his hair but also retard or prevent its becoming gray.

Shampooing the healthy scalp beyond what is necessary for cleanliness—once every week or fortnight—is harmful. There is nothing better for the shampoo than tincture of green soap. After the washing, the hair should be thoroughly rinsed in cool or cold water, and then a very little yellow vaseline or a mixture of vaseline and lanolin should be rubbed into the roots. When the scalp has been neglected the hair may become dry and lack lustre. For that condition a pomade of equal parts of citrine ointment, yellow vaseline and lanolin is useful. A little of the mixture well rubbed into the roots at night once a week or so and washed out with a shampoo of tincture of green soap in the morning will often bring back the natural beauty of the hair.

Jr. Red Cross Auxiliary

The Twenty-ninth regular meeting of the Pep-timists was held in Room "A" on Friday morning April 18th.

The President and Secretary took their respective places and the membership buttons were distributed. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted after which we sang our song. The programme consisted of miscellaneous topics for the purpose of review, namely:—

"Blackboard Drawing of the Hair" by Kenneth Haley was explained by Irene Hamilton and Addie Campderros gave a talk on "The care of the Hair." Florence Cramer made a drawing on the board, of the "skin" which was explained by Bruce Harper. Jimmie Cramer gave a talk on its care. Hazel Francis drew a picture of the "ear" which was explained by Edith Hornby and a talk given on the care by Francis Fulton. Arthur Haley made a drawing of the "eye" which was explained by Ralph Durant and a talk given on the care by Minnie Neelin. A picture of the "tooth" was drawn by Amy Fairbrass and explained by Mabel Henderson. Willa Ellis then gave a talk on "The care of the teeth."

Our Director then gave us a talk and explanation on "How our Bodies resemble a Motor Car" which was enjoyed by all.

The Treasurer reported 22c in the Mite Box. Minnie Neelin, Reporter.

Presbyterians Await Action of Assembly

Presbyterians all over the Dominion are much interested in the meeting of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. In Port Arthur, commencing June 6, this Assembly will decide the fate of a movement for church union in Canada, which has been slowly progressing to its consummation for the past twenty years, namely, the coming together of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational churches to constitute a United Church of Canada.

The Church-Unionists point out that every progressive movement, whether it be religious, social or national, has had its detractors, and the church union movement in Canada has not been an exception. Organized opposition among the Presbyterians has been in force during the past eight years to the union, this propaganda having been intensfied during the past year.

The anti-unionists have based most of their arguments upon the proposed legislation, which they declare is coercive and means the institution of the state church idea. On the other hand, the Union Committee states it is as anxious as anybody that there shall be no coercion against the minority and that the United Church shall be free from all state entanglements, and the proposed bill will probably be amended to clear away any ambiguities.

The procedure at the Assembly will be that the Assembly's committee on church union will ask it to endorse the proposed legislation in its amended form and send it to the Federal and Provincial Governments for enactment. Unless there is a sudden reaction, there is stated to be every prospect of the Assembly taking the final step into the union, controversy it is held, will at once cease and a process of legal adjustment and amalgamation will be instituted.

The Assembly will appoint its 150 representatives to the General Council of the United Church, which will meet in Toronto a few days after the passing of the Act of Incorporation. The General Assembly, the Methodist General Conference and the Congregational Union will all be simultaneously convened in one city, meeting in their representative churches, for the purpose of finally ratifying the union. Representatives of each church will then assemble in a large central hall, where the United Church of Canada will be publicly consummated.

Jack Miner and the Canada Goose

Monday evening a fairly large crowd in the Music Hall had the pleasure of hearing Mr. Jack Miner tell the success of his efforts in conserving bird life at his place at Kingsville, Ontario, where hundreds of wild geese have learned they will find safety in their migrations of Spring and Fall. While the pictures thrown on the screen showed hundreds and hundreds of Canada geese in the air and fearlessly about the Miner homestead they were possibly second in interest to the talk given by Mr. Miner when telling of the inception of his plan for winning the confidence of these very alert birds, and the great increase in the number of his bird visitors each returning spring. At one time Jack Miner was as ruthless a destroyer of bird life as he is now an enthusiastic preserver of it. He has gone so far as to believe that the human race represents the "wild" life of our land while the Canada goose is typical of the intelligence and faithfulness to a trust, that should belong to the so called higher order.

Jack Miner's big heart is not monopolized by the Canada goose but goes out to most of the feathered tribe. Very interesting pictures were shown depicting to what extent the confidence of robins may be gained, by any one interested in winning it. It is not possible for many to become intimately acquainted with the intelligent Canada goose, but all can make friends of our less spectacular but worthy smaller birds in the shrubs and trees surrounding our homes.

The keenness of Jack Miner's observation was shown to Chesterville folks when he pointed out the grand opportunity which a couple of miles of the Nation presented for the conservation of bird life, adding much to the attractiveness of our country life.

Naturally as Jack Miner grew in years, his sympathies broadened until his conservation plans included the welfare of the boys and girls of his neighborhood, for whose benefit he has laid out on his place an ideal playing field of two and a half acres on which is said to be one of the finest baseball deamonds in Ontario. There are only two conditions imposed on the boys who play there, they must not smoke cigarettes nor use foul language.

We have given the above short synopsis of Jack Miner's talk, simply that conditions surrounding his place may be compared with conditions in Chesterville today. It is considered a crime in his vicinity for boys to rob bird's nests and kill the young. Of course we know your boy would not do it. The neighbor's boy does it. During this week we have known boys, not yours, but the neighbors, to destroy robins' nests and either kill the young or steal the eggs. We have kept particular tab on the boys who have cast longing glances at a robin's nest at the rear of The Record Office. We have warned away several including Boy Scouts and boys of tenderer years from homes where it might be supposed the training would have been such as to preclude this kind of "fun." The nest has been robbed nevertheless.

No doubt Jack Miner was told that the youth of Chesterville is not provided with a playing field and that the council in its wisdom has deprived the boys and girls of the one formerly available by not remitting the taxes against the property for its yearly use as a playing field.

We don't appear to stack up very high in the scheme of conservation.

Agriculture

An honest endeavour to re-adjust economic conditions as to place agriculture and its claims to the best intelligence, and the highest skill of our people, in the very foretront of national thought. A closer relation and more co-operation between the Federal and Provincial Departments of Agriculture. More liberal percentage of the total revenue for agriculture. Liberal assistance to the Dairy Business in developing best and most economic methods of manufacture and sale of all farm products in the raw or finished state.

Strive to secure educational efficiency first and foremost by the oppointment of a competent Minister of Education not one who has to have his policies and opinions framed by his subordinate officers. Every branch of Education from the Kindergarten to the University will receive due consideration, and no department will be dependent for recognition on the aggressiveness of its director or superior. Municipalities will be encouraged to bring all their grades of schools and departments under one Board of Education, thus elimating overlapping or the undue stressing of any one Branch. In Technical and Vocational Education, complete faith will be kept with the Boards receiving aid under the present scheme of grants, but by bringing such schools under precisely the same management as all other schools in the Municipality. An effort will be made to bring the different classes of schools in proper relation to each other. A more equitable system of grants for technical and industrial education. More Liberal consideration and grants to Urban and Rural High Schools.

Good Roads

More effective supervision of our present improved and constructed Highways. Not a road policy catering to the motorist and tourist but more special assistance in our rural market roads. Main Highways to compare favorably with adjacent Counties in surface condition and permanent efficiency.

Standing for the principal that the Province render every practical assistance, and co-operation of the Hydro Electric Power system consistent with the safe and economical development and administration of Hydro with the financial demands of the Province as a whole and that every effort be made that the services of the Hydro-Electric be extended to the rural communities. Municipalities interested ought to have additional representation on the Hydro Electric Power Commission. The reservation of all water power within the jurisdiction of the Government for development so that the benefits of cheap and abundant electric energy may be extended to all parts of the Province.

Mineral and Timber

More honest and efficient system for the sale and disposal of timber lands, as some instances in the past prove waste. Closer co-operation between licenses and the Government so as to conserve the young and growing timber. The system of fire ranging be made efficient. The mining industry be encouraged in every manner consistent with the return to the Province of a fair proportion of the values. Adequate transportation facilities be provided for mines in remote districts. Prospectors be more fully protected so as to retain a fair proportion of their discovered wealth. Expert assistance be provided to prospectors for assays and technical advice.

Finance

Careful expenditure, elimating all unnecessary expense, initiating and carrying into effect a policy of the most rigid economy in the public service.

Responsible Government and Ministerial Responsibility.

Building and the Buyers' Strike

There is a buyers' strike on in the building business in the United States. The demand for higher and ever higher wages is the monkey wrench that has got into the machinery. The Board of Education of the city of New York has planned a building program involving upward of thirty-six million dollars. This has now to a large extend been deferred. Masons were getting $10, and in many cases $12, per day, but decided that it was not enough. Thereupon the contractors threw up their hands, and back ed by the Board of Education, they resolved to close down, and do no more building until prices receded. Aside from the schools New York had a building programme in hand, in large work only, amounting to upward of forty-two millions and this has been dropped until such time as there is a reasonable deflation in prices of both labor and materials.

The New York Telephone Company was to have expended some eleven millions, but have decided to postpone the work, while Columbia University has decided to defer a ten million dollar building project. Throughout the residential districts surrounding New York are hundreds, if not thousands, of uncompleted houses that bear signs to the effect that work upon them is discontinued owing to high costs.

In many other United States cities a similar condition pertains. The people have been bled to such an extend that they are now prepared to fight back, and it is predicted that both labor and building materials will be much lower in price before the business revives to even the point where work upon uncompleted structures will proceed. If one may judge from the newspapers this buyers' strike has the people solidly behind it, the chief argument being that building costs go directly into living costs. This, in turn, stimulating a demand for higher wages in all occupations, thus enlarging the vicious circle in which business and industry are imprisoned.

In Canada, while we are not faced with all the ills that pertain in our neighbor's country, we are none the less feeiing the effects of increased prices in both materials and wages in the building trades. But worst of all, perhaps, is the attitude of labor generally toward work. I speak by the book when I state that it now takes two men to do one man's work in the building trades as compared with ten or twelve years ago. Absurd instances come to my mind almost without number For instance, a tiler taking two weeks to tile a bath room that in the old days would have been completed in a week or less. Two men are engaged in laying brick hearths. One man mixes a few pints of cement, and sits down for the day while another man fits in the brick. From a close view of the situation I was impressed with the fact that this helper must have been brought along for conversational purposes. At least this is about all he did, aside from smoking cigarettes. In the interval a three thousand dollar truck stood at the door awaiting these gentlemen's pleasure. Two men arrive to lay a flag walk, and begin operations by trying to borrow a shovel, as they were too "nifty" to bring one along. Shovel secured one man removes a few inches of soil where the flags are to be placed while the other man looks on. Soil removed the digger looks on while the other man fits the stones. To sum up, I have seen a Pennsylvania Dutch woman lay a better walk in two hours than these two took a day at.

In these days workmen do not move about without an assistant, a helper. Said assistaut may be as useless as a fifth wheel to a waggon, but none the less they are deemed to be necessary, and of course, you pay for the luxury. I recall a specific instance. A water motor was required. The thing was not as big as an alarm clock, and anybody with a monkey wrench could have made the connection, but none the less it took two men and a boy to put it in place. In this instance the three were civic employees, and now and again we wonder why our taxes have increased something like on hundred per cent. with n a few years.

If our labor leaders would let up on the wage business and preach production to their members we might get somewhere. High wages are by no means objectionable, in fact they are very desirable, but with high wages should go economical and high production, both of which are now sadly lacking.

The Gladiolus

Written by the Canadian Horticultural Council

Garden varieties of the Gladiolus were produced by the crossing of many wild species introduced from Europe and Africa. The latter continent in particular has produced a large number of useful species; over 80 are listed from that continent alone. One of our latest acquisitions from Africa is Gladiolus primulius. It was discovered right in the spray of the Zambesi Falls. This species has a hooded blossom and its crosses are very graceful and include many beautiful tints of color, all of which have a more of less yellow shade.

The Gladiolus recommends itself for the small garden owing to the fact that although it is one of the most handsome flowers we have, it is comparatively cheap. Many of the best varieties of corms cost only a few cents each. They are easy to grow and perfectly hardy in this climate. They are particularly valuable for cutting purposes as they keep a very long time when placed in water.

Although Gladioli have been known as garden plants for over three centuries, they did not attract much attention until the visit of Her Majesty Queen Victoria to Fontainnebleau, France, in 1855. On her return to England Her Majesty took this flower under her patronage and had them placed on the Royal table at meal times. This fact soon made them fashionable, and ever since that date leading hybridists have been producing increasingly beautiful varieties in large numbers.

Gladioli are not very particular as regards soil, but prefer a fairly light warm soil, well drained; cold clays are objectionable. The soil should be deeply tilled b ut no fresh manure should be used For hand cultivation, plant in rows 18 to two feet apart and the corms placed six to eight inches apart in the rows. Cover the bulbs with three or four inches of soil.

This flower is one of the best for cut flowers. As soon as the first bloom appears the spike should be cut, always leaving all the leaves on the growing plant so as to build up the corm for next year's use. If placed in a vase of water the remaining buds will continue to open and remain fresh for a week or more. The water should be changed each day and a small piece cut off the stem daily

The corms should be dug and stalks removed before the severe frost. They may be stored in a cellar with potatoes as they require about the same winter conditions as that vegetable.

The following are all desirable kinds for this district, but there are many others. The number of days intervening between planting and flowering are only approximate as much depends on soil and season. By choosing varieties, each of a different flowering period, the season can be greatly extended.

Wild Flowers By the Roots

Among the many groups of persons coming into close contact with the important problem of wild flower preservation, none has a greater chance to help in its solution than have the teachers in the schools. The development of the public opinion of the next generation is in their hands, and the awakening of a wide ideal of the conservation of our natural forms will be, or should be, one of the corner-stones of this public opinion. While the needs of conserving our forests and our wild life are more generally obvious than the need of protecting some of our vanishing wild flowers, they are not more real.

Every teacher can take as a text the little bunches of spring blossoms with their little wilted faces pressed closely together, which favourite pupils bring to their desk on May mornings, rivalling one another as to who can gather the biggest bunch; they can explain the characteristics of the different kinds of flowers, because of which certain kinds, like the arbutus, should never be picked at all, while others may be picked more freely; they can tell why some kinds of flowers are never seen any more near large cities and are seen less plentifully even in some country districts; they can warn children not to destroy whole beds of anemones and hepaticas to make the bunches that ought never to be sold to the motorists. There is so much to tell and so much to learn about conditions in every locality.

A negro went fishing. He hooked a big catfish which pulled him overboard. As he crawled back into the boat, he said philosophically: "What I wanna know is dis: Is dis niggah 'fishin' or dis fish niggerin'?"

The honor of running the first ship into Montreal harbor from the ocean fell this year to Captain Edmund Aikman, commander of the Canadian Pacific steamer "Bolingbroke," a freighter. The "Montrose" of the same line was the first vessel to carry trans-Atlantic passengers into the port in 1923.

The number of strikes and lockouts in Canada during 1922 was 85. The number of working men involved in the strikes was 41,059 and the number of working days lost 1,975,276. Approximately fifty per cent of the time lost was in connection with the strikes of the coal miners in Alberta and British Columbia which lasted from April till the end of August.

Topping the grain shipments from St. John of the 1921-22 winter season by almost four million bushels and establishing a record for the port for volume in a single shipment for one vessel, the 1922-23 grain business through the Canadian Pacific elevators up to May 1st totalled 15,249,261 bushels. The single shipments' record was made on an all-wheat cargo of 359,793 bushels.

BONDS
Are Mortgages on Fixed Assets

When a township issues debentures (or bonds) it gives a mortgage on the whole township for security to the buyers of the bonds for the loan of their money for a definite number of years at a satisfactory rate of interest.

If the amount required is large it is divided into small mortgages, (that is, bonds or debentures) of $500 or $1,000 each, with the same security behind each, so that investors with small sums may take advantage it.

Bonds or debentures are rated the safest kind of an investment.

DEACON HYNE LAYS OFF HIS SCARF

Deacon Lyslander Hyne, muffled about the throat with a heavy woollen scarf and shuffling slowly down the street, paused to pass the time of day with Caleb Peaslee. Caleb greeted him cheerfully.

"Wal, wal, Hyne," he called, "I ain't seen you for four-five days. What's been the matter, feelin' kind of mauger?"

The deacon essayed a hollow cough. Failing to achieve a satisfactory one, he said, "I d'know what's been the matter of me. I'got a cold, and this cough come on; then my head sot up and ached and so did my j'ints. I've been at it off'n' for near a week now. But today I told my wife I was goin' outdoors and get some fresh air. I sort of jealoused it might do me good."

"Do ye good sartan!" Mr. Peaslee assurred him. "I can rec'lect a man that was cured that way of sutin' he claimed ailed him for mebbe three-four years, In the b'ginning I should guess there wa'n't any gre't the matter with him, but he listened to folks tellin' him what he ought to do and what he'd better take and what to eat and what not to till he fin'ly cozened himself into bein' act'lly sick. He pindled down to halt what he ought to weigh." Caleb pinched his chin reminiscently. "Dr. Walcot told me afterwards that he'd gi'n Brady less'n a year to live."

The deacon forgot his ailings enough to brighten a little with curiosity. "Brady?" he repeated. "You don't mean Eb Brady? He weighs better'n two hundred pounds and don't look 'sif he ever had a sick day in his life.

Mr. Peaslee nodded. "That's the man. It was when the typhoid struck this town. That was thirty years ago pretty near, but even now folks'll speak of it as 'the sick winter.' There was somethin' like fifty fam'lies in the neighborhood in those days, and out of the fifty thirty odd had one or more cases of it. There wa'n't half 'nough well folks left to nuss the sick, and as for doin' chores and to fetch and carry, there wa'n't anybody. And Dr. Walcott had the whole of that on his hands.

"Wal, right in the midst of the wust of it Brady got to broodin' over himself, and he took a notion he'd got a tech of it same's all the rest. Livin' alone as he did,—he was a bachelor then.—he begun to get frightened; so one mornin' he kep' watch, and wheu Dr. Walcott come up over the hill Eb clapped an old shawl over his head and dragged himself out to the road and hove the doctor too, tellin' him how he was 'fraid he had the typhoid and wantin' to be looked over.

For a minute the doctor—so he told me afterwards—was on the p'int of tellin' Brady what he really thought of him, but then he had a thought and he got out and hitched his hoss. Once inside the house, he looked Brady all over and looked as wise and solemn as he could. Fin'ly he says: "I'm glad you called me when you did, Brady, for as 'tis I think you've got but one chance left; but you've got to do jest as I tell ye.'

"Wal, Hyne, Brady was near scared to death, and he promised he'd do jest as the doctor told him to. So with that the doctor opened his case and mixed up somethin' very careful and give Brady a good big dose of it. Then he says: 'Now you get on your heaviest duds and come right along with me,' he says, 'for that med'cine's got to work in the open air; it won't have a might of majesty inside the house.'

"So Brady wooled himself up in thick coats and went 'long with the doctor, scared so bad he couldn't talk. 'Twa'n't long 'for they come to a house where they was bout all sick, and when they turned into the yard the doctor says: 'Twon't do for you to go inside while that med'cine's workin,' and 'twon't do for you to set still outside; you've got to keep movin.' So you better get up some stove wood and lug it into the shed till I come out again.'

"With that he went in, and Brady, mindful of his promise, sot to work for the fust time in y. ars. The doc told me afterwards it was funny to watch him out of the winder; when he'd been at work ten minutes he'd shed coat after coat till he had a pile of 'em big's a small cock of hay. After a spell the doc came out, and Brady bundled up, and they went off; and every place they stopped the doctor found some chores for Brady to do. When it came night, except for bein' dog tired, Brady moved better'n he had for a year, and about thirty families had got their outside chores done for the fust time in days.

"And that was only the beginning: day after day the doc kept him at it, and every day Brady moved a little sprier and did more work. Fin'ly the day come when he felt so good he up and told the doctor that he believed he was wholly cured, and he says: 'I guess you'd better give me my bill doc, 'fore it gets so big I can't pay it.'

"The doctor looked at him a minute and then busted right out laughin'. 'Good land, Brady,' he says, 'you don't owe me anything! It's the other way round,' he says. 'I owe you, and so do forty families in this neighborhood. Bein' outdoors and workin' cured you; 'twa'n't me,' he says. And from that day Brady has never been sick as fur's I know."

The deacon looked at Caleb fixedly, but Caleb's face was free from guile. "Wal, anyway," the deacon said at last, "I'm feelin' enough better so's I guess I'll lay off this scarf, and mebbe you'd like to come on down to the post office with me. Hey?"

W. H. Fetterly & Son - Morrisburg

Sportsmen, Beat This!

I have just read in The Youth's Companion, writes a correspondent, the story of the dog that tracked the turkey back to the nest where it had been hatched. The yarn recalls to my mind a hunting story that an old man of the Ozarks told me a few years ago.

Seventeen miles out from the little village of X—, in Missouri, lived an old bachelor named Bill Green, who made his living by hunting and trapping. In those days the hills abounded in wild turkeys and deer and he often served as guide to hunting parties and to fishermen.

The season had opened, and a party of sportsmen from Kansas City had secured old Bill's services. In the party was a young fellow who evidently had had some experience in shooting deer, but whose stories of his achievements were exaggerated and long; the other members of the party were tired of his boasting. They were astonished therefore when old Bill, who by nature was taciturn, said to the young fellow:

"Say now that reminds me of the other mornin'. I got up just 'fore day and went down to the deer lick as I allus do, and there in the bright moonlight stood a great big buck. I raised my gun and was ready to fire when I noticed on the limb jist above nine turkeys roostin' in a row. At fust I was puzzled which to shoot at the turkey or the deer. Then all at once I thought of a plan I crept a little nearer and aimed at the limb where the turkeys sot. I fired away, and at the same instant I threw my gun and knocked down the buck; in a second I run up and knifed him. Then I looked above where I had shot and split the limb, which held every one of them turkeys by the toes. Well, sir, I took down the turkeys, tied them together and hung them round my neck; then I threw the buck over my shoulder and started for home, well satisfied even if I'd got no more game that morning. But, sir, as I was wadin' the creek fish smelled the blood on my clothes and jest run up my breeches legs and those breeches, bein' full big, got so heavy I could hardly walk. And when I tried to step on the bank the top button busted off and killed a rabbit ten steps away!"

Needless to remark, the young sportsman was silent for the rest of the dey.

"His wife married him to reform him, didn't she?"

"Yes, and now his daughters have come home from college and taken up the job where their mother left off."

Attractive Scenes in Blossom Time

LAKE CHUZENJI—JAPAN'S LAKE LOUISE — JAPANESE BEAUTIES AMID CHERRY BLOSSOMS

JAPAN has so distinctly put herself "on the map" that the well travelled person is now compelled to put the "Land of the Rising Sun" into his life's itinerary. Improved trade relations and growing interest in things belonging to the other side of the globe, make a closer study of the countries there of prime importance.

Transportation, trans-continental and trans-Pacific, has become so highly developed that it is as easy to get to Japan as to Italy. Ninety-two hours from Montreal to Vancouver, trans-Canada, and the fastest time across the Pacific—a trifle more than nine days—puts the traveller into Yokohoma, the chief port of the Land of Nippon.

Here the sights are unusual. Jinrickashas jostle one another in their competition to get the few cents charge for running the traveller in and out among the narrow streets amid crowds of strangely garbed people, curious shops, street hawkers, endless numbers of brilliant kimono-clad children, and carts drawn by men and beasts.

Adding to the natural beauty of Japan is the cultivation. Japanese are the best agriculturists and gardeners in the world. Tomes have been written about Mount Fuji and the mountains, lakes and streams of the country. Lake Chuzenji is the Lake Louise of Japan and Mount Fuji, its Mount Rainier, although not so high. The cherry blossoms are not so wonderful as those of this country—if one remembers the hundred miles of orchards in Nova Scotia's Evangeline Land and Annapolis Valley.

Those who are contemplating an early summer holiday might well select Evangeline's Land, Nova Scotia, for a trip. For miles and miles along the Dominion Atlantic Railway the land is one mass of apple blossoms. Cherry blossoms, too, dot the scene, making a sight that is wonderful and refreshing. The bulk of the Nova Scotia apple crop goes to Great Britain, but great quantities of British Columbia apples are exported to the Orient.

The cherry trees in Japan are raised for their flowers and not for their fruit, as, strangely enough, they bear no fruit.

Although the voyage from Vancouver to Yokohama is longer than the four days at sea from the Eastern seaboard via the St. Lawrence River Route to Europe, the Canadian Pacific Empress steamers, largest and fastest on the Pacific, are so thoroughly comfortable that the time slips away quickly. All of these steamers are so equipped that most all of the amusements to be had on land are also to be found on board.

April marks the beginning of the best season in Japan and even further down the Chinese coast to Manila.
