Ploughing Match Cancelled.

A disconsolate looking man around Chesterville on Monday was F. C. Nunnick of the Commission of Conservation when he had to give up for the second year in succession the holding of a big ploughing match for Dundas county at Chesterville. With conditions overhead ideal it was hard to believe that the land was not in fit condition to go on, but the continuous rain of Saturday, Saturday night and Sunday had saturated the ground to such an extent that it was utterly impossible to do anything else but call it off.

The Board of Health Forbids Meetings.

Whether the grippe is Spanish or otherwise Cherterville is certainly feeling its effect. Action has been taken by the local Board of Health cancelling all church services, where desired, closing the schools and forbidding the holding of public meetings and entertainments until further notice. There were no services in the Methodist, Presbyterian and Anglician Churches last Sunday and the same conditions will prevail next Sunday. The schools have been closed during the week and entertainments cancelled. This has made it necessary to postpone the Chautauqua Festival to a date in November, likely about the 18th, particulars of which will be announced later. The races have been declared off advertised for Wednesday next as a result of the shut down on the assembly for that evening, which is always a big feature for race day.

Dr. O'Donahue a Victim of Pneumonia

Yesterday shortly after the noon hour Mr. O'Donahue received the sad news that his son Capt. (Dr.) W. C. O'Donahue had passed away at the Water street hospital in Ottawa a victim of pneumonia. Perhaps no other casualty message has been received by the public of Chesterville with more regret than that of Dr. O'Donahue's death. Coming to Chesterville about the summer of 1917 he soon became popular with the young people and much esteemed for his medical skill by those who had his services, his practise increasing as time went on until a few months ago he decided that his skill and training belonged to his country, when he enlisted for overseas medical service and was taking his prelimenary training before going to France. Tuesday morning his father having been advised that the doctor's condition was serious, went to Ottawa and spent a short time with his son and saw that every thing was done that could be of any benefit but without avail.

The deceased came to Chesterville from Smiths Falls but after graduation had practised for some time in British Columbia.

The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the parents and sisters in their bereavement.

The funeral will take place at St. Mary's Church tomorrow, Friday, morning at nine o'cloch after which interment will be made at Westport, Out.

Jacob A. Beckstead Passes Away

On Thursday last another of the old residents of Chesterville district passed away when the end came to Jacob A. Beckstead at the advanced age of nearly ninety-two years. While greatly beyond the alloted span of life, until a very short time ago Mr. Beckstead had enjoyed comparatively good health, but having contracted a cold with other complications which at his great he had not not the vitality to fight off. On June 8th last, the deceased and his life partner, who survives her husband, had the distinction of completing three score and ten years of married life, an event which was the occasion of many congratulations. A family of eight children survive, being Mrs. G. A. Beckstead and Mrs. Geo. Hummel of Chesterville, William Alexander on the homestead at Grantley, Mrs. Simeon Armstrong of Williamsburg Jacob Daniel whose address is not known, Rev. I. N. of Lansdowne and Mrs Casselman of Winchester. The funeral was held at Trinity Methodist church on Friday, Interment being made in Maple Ridge cemetery.

Influenza Very Prevalent.

The epidemic of influenza which has many victims in and about Chesterville has been the direct cause of several deaths during the past week or ten days, some being attended with particularly sad circumstances noteably that of Mrs. Jas. Short which occurred at the home of William Bowman. Mr. Short was at Thomloe in New Ontario when his wife took ill and although advised at once to come home was not aware of her death on Thursday until his arrival. A family of small children, themselves victims of the influenza are left to mourn their mother.

Won M. M.

(Hamilton Times)

For conspicuous bravery in saving the life of his wounded superior officer Pte. Dwight S. Coons, has just received the military medal. Pte. Coons won his distinction at the battle of Bapaume where he took part in a great charge to capture an enemy trench. The superior officer was badly wounded, and Pte. Coons carried him to a place of safety under a terrific shell fire. Pte. Coons is 21 years of age and enlisted with the 173 battalion. He was transferred to the 54th battalion with which he has been serving for over a year in the front line trenches. He was a former Collegiate boy and a well known and well-liked member of St. Johns Presbyterian Church. Pte Coons, in wining the military medal has captuped one of the proud distinctions of the war, the medal only being conferred on those who have done some deed of conspicuous gallantry.—Pte. Coons was formely of Morewood, and is a nephew of Mr. Frank Marcellus of Goldfield, Mrs. William Elliot of Morewood and of Mr. Chester Marcellus of Morewood.)

Lockwood-Carr

A happy event was solemized at the parsonage. Finch, on Sept. 12th when Sarah J. Carr of Finch, and H. Lockwood of Chesterville, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, Rev. Leach, tying the nuptial knot. The bride was becomingly dressed in a suit of burgundy silk and white silk waist.

Kyle—Beach

A quiet wedding was celebrated at the home of the bride's father at Colquhoun on Wednesday, Sept. 25th, at 7 p.m., when Annie May, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kyle was united in marriage with Mr. Hector McIlmoil Beach of Hemmingford, Que, the Rev. Hugh Cameron, B. A., of Morrisburg, officiating. Only the immediate relatives of the contracring parties were present. Mr. and Mrs. Beach are spending a few days with friends at Winchester before leaving for Hemmingford. The Record joins in extending best wishes to the young couple for a pleasant journey through life.

CLEAN TINWARE

(FARMERS CUT THIS OUT)

All pails and cans used for milk should be of metal with all corners and joints completely filled with solder. Every crevice makes a place for milk to lodge and contaminate the next milk that goes into the vessel. To wash tinware, it should first be rinsed with lukewarm water, then thoroughly scrubbed with a brush and finally either steamed or rinsed with boiling water. Cloths should never be used for either the washing or drying of tinware.

Dead at 105 years of age.

Mr. Charles Kyre of Williamsburg, at the great age of 105 years 11 months and 5 days, passed peacefully away on Tuesday evening, Sept. 24th, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John Young. He had been a life-long resident of Williamsburg where he had spent more than a hundred years. The end came after an illness of three weeks. He leaves to mourn a family of four daughters and three sons— Mrs. Jeff Newvine of Hermon, N.Y., Mrs. Charles Reid of Watertown, N.Y., Mrs. William Newvine and Mrs. John Young of Chesterville, Lemuel of Cornwall, Wesley of Chesterville and William of Grantley. He also leaves eleven grand children, being Mrs. Ernest Woodworth, Mrs. Frank Cook and Mr. Peter Newvine of Hermon, N.Y., Ernest, Muriel, Ruth and Dora Newvine and Delbert and Clifford Young of Chesterville and Mrs. Fred Heagle of Brockville. A brother in Montreal and two sisters in Morrisburg also survive. The funeral took place at Chesterville Presbyterian church where services were conducted by Rev. C. A. Mullin, interment being made in Maple Ridge cemetery.

Socks Received at Right Time.

France, Aug. 28th.

Dear Mrs. Grady, Berwick:—

Your socks received safely and note enclosed. I can certainly say I was very much pleased with them, because I was never in need of socks so much in my life before. We have been doing so much marching lately that it don't take long for holes to come. Its awful nice of you to be so kind to us boys out here, and I can't thank you enough for what you are doing. This is how I come to get a pair of your socks. A friend of mine got a parcel of socks and he certainly didn't take long in giving them away 'cause we were all anxious for a pair. I see by your address your home is in Ont. I have seen very little of the Eastern part of Canada my home being in British Columbia. Vancouver is my home and I certainly would love to be there soon again. I guess you people have had the good news and what we are doing. Us boys have sure given the Hun a lesson lately. I really can't see how they can hang on much longer, if they don't give in soon they'll get whats really coming to them before long. I hardly know what to write about but if you care for my address I'll enclose it Pte. C. Malacord No. 50902 No. 4 Canadian Field Amb. B. Section, France. There that does not look too bad. It must be put in the center of the letter or it may be destroyed and I don't want anything like that to happen. The weather out here has been beautiful up till today but it is raining now and looks as though it will break soon.

I must bring this short letter to a close hoping this finds you quite well. I remain yours truly C. Malacord.

CHILDREN ARE DRILLED.

Taught How to Escape Bombs From Airships.

Children in the public schools of London's East End have been taught just what to do when the approach of enemy raiders is signalled. By means of a system of whistles the children know just what to do and there is no confusion. They are taught to lie flat on the floor with intervals of space between them. It has been found that this method has prevented serious loss of life among the little ones in the school buildings.

The police are doing their best to lessen excitement during air raids and to provide protection. The system of warnings are not issued primaturely, and they are withdrawn promptly when all is clear. There are various methods of giving notice of impending danger, and they are proving adequate. By day sirens are sounded, sound rockets are sent up from London fire stations and other points, and constables on motor cycles and ordinary cycles, and in motor cars, are sent out blowing whistles and exhibiting "Take Cover" notices, motor cars bearing the warning illuminated are employed. There are no rockets used from half an hour after sunset to half an hour before sunrise.

When the people have the warning in any of these forms they should at once obey it. Warnings are only issued after information has been received from the military authorities. Adequate cover in the first instance is not so much for protection against bombs, but to avoid the danger of falling shrapnel. Every projectile which bursts in the air scatters five hundred separate bullets or pieces of shell, which, falling to the ground, are just as deadly as rifle-fire.

Much depends on the discretion and prompt action of the police. London is a vast working community, and the one object which the enemy has in view is to interrupt business. The policy of the police is to defeat this purpose by only issuing warnings when absolutely necessary. There is installed at the office of the Commissioner of Police a vast network of telephones which reach all parts of London—all the police stations and sub-stations—and communication is also made by means of column tape printing machines. Orders are carried out without delay, as promptitude is all-essential in these matters. The police have also organized a great system of air-raid shelters—ready-made dug-outs and bomb-proof buildings. These consist of tunnels, the Tubes, arches, strongly built schools, police stations, etc. Accommodation is found in this way for half a million people, without undue congestion. In addition, there are innumerable private buildings available for the public.—Boston Transcript.

Kipling's Son.

At the end of January I went to France, eager to see with my own eyes the great things that were doing there and to taste with my own lips the cup of danger. That at least I was bound to do before I could come home and urge my countrymen to face the duty and brave the peril of a part in this war.

Paris was not so dark as London but more tragic. After Belgium and Serbia the heaviest brunt of this dreadful conflict has fallen upon France. She has suffered most. Yet on the faces of her women I saw no tears and in the eyes of her men no fear nor regret.

If Britain was magnificent, France was miraculous! Loving and desiring peace she accepted the cross of war without a murmur. Her women were no less brave than her men. She wears the hero-star of Roland and saintly halo of Joan of Arc.

After meeting many men in Paris —statesmen, men of letters, generals —and after visiting the splendid American Ambulance at Neuilly and other institutions in which our boys and girls were giving their help to France in the chivalric spirit of Lafayette, I went out toward the front.

The first visit was under the escort of Captain Francois Morod to a chateau beyond Compiegne, where Rudyard Kipling with his family and I with my family had passed the Christmas week of 1913 together, as joyous guests of the American chatelaine, Mrs. Julia Park. She has given the spacious, lovely house for a military hospital. And there, while the German guns thundered a few kilometres away from us and a German sausage balloon floated in the sky, I watched the skilful ministrations of French and American doctors and nurses to the wounded. One thought haunted me—the memory of Kipling's only son, nineteen years old, who was with us in that happy Christmastide. The lad was reported "missing" after one of the battles between Loos and Hulluch. For six months I sought, through the German Legation at The Hague, to find a trace of the brave boy. But never a word!—Henry van Dyke, in Scribner.

Waiting.

"Walk in, sir," says St. Peter to the shade who has been sitting on a cloud for several days. "Come right in. I told you it would be all right for you to do so."

"Thank you," replies the shade. "I want to wait out here, if I may, until the fellow who sold me cantaloupes last summer comes along. I want to see you send him down the chute."—Chicago Post.

Model 90
Light Four

It is Not Economy to Pay Less!
Is it Wise to Pay More?

Usefulness, in ratio to cost, establishes the value of this car far and away ahead of others.

It is essentially a utility car!

Every part of its chassis is built of the quality of materials that provides for extraordinary service.

It is a work-car; a car you can depend upon for faithful, continuous service at all times, under all conditions.

Look at the spacious interior—the inviting, deeply upholstered seats—the ample leg-room—the nicety of every detail.

The motor is 32 horsepower; the wheelbase 106 inches. There are rear cantilever springs and large tires; non-skid rear.

There is the Auto-Lite system, the highest quality electric starting and lighting—the same kind as used on highest priced cars.

There is the vacuum system fuel feed of finest type.

Consider the complete equipment of this Model 90. Nothing is omitted.

Let us demonstrate—ride in this car and you will understand why there is such a demand for it from people who realize that—

It is not necessary to pay more—and it is uneconomical to pay less.

Instantly Killed by Shell

The following letter has been recently received by Mrs. Errat of Crysler, giving particulars of the death of her son, Pte. Alfred Errat, in action in France.

4th C. M. B Batt. Sept. 7th, 1918.

Dear Mrs. Errat.

No doubt you have received the official notification of the death of your son, No. 633754, Pte. A. Errat, of this Batt. The circumstances of his death which would not likely be included are as follows :—His battalion took part in the general advance made by the Canadian Corps on August 26th and 28th. During the successful attack south of Bothy on the 28th, your son, while carrying a stretcher from the front line, was instantly killed by an enemy shell which exploded close to him. The location of his grave and other particulars will be forwarded to you in due time by the authorities.

Permit me to offer my deepest sympathy in the loss of your son. He was a most efficient and gallant soldier and his loss to his comrades as a friend and to his battalion as a soldier will be keenly felt. All ranks of the Batt. join in this expression of sympathy. Yours faithfully W. K. Patterson Lieut.-Col.

EAT LESS.

That, Says Writer, is Whole Secret of Food Conservation.

The chief topic of conversation in London to-day, if The Daily Mail is to be believed, is not the war, but food. A sudden and inexplicable shortness in the supply of tea has upset the British equilibrium. The average Briton must have his tea. The first thing he or she does after getting out of bed in the morning is to light a lamp under a Russian samovar or British tea-kettle and brew a strong decoction of the Asiatic herb. Nine Britons out of every ten start the day in that manner, as their parents did before them. Next to the Russians, they are the tea-drinkers of Europe. One day last month the price of this necessity suddenly rose from 2s 4d to 4s and 5s. This threw Britons, rich and poor, into panic. A rush of buyers disclosed the fact that shopkeepers would only sell two ounces to each customer. Then everybody realized, as not before, that nearly every article of food was steadily increasing in price. Hence the universal theme of talk.

While Lord Rhondda, the British Food Controller, was "regulating" one staple, the "purveyors" would push up another article of diet. Then began the bitterest war ever waged against the "middleman"—the commission broker, who "scalped the market," robbing both producer and consumer.

This class of people has an ugly customer to deal with in Lord Rhondda. Before he was "ennobled" he was plain David A. Thomas, a colliery magnate of South Wales, and is now aged 61 years. He was a sturdy economist, despite immense wealth, and a foe to wastage in every branch of livelihood. When selected for his present job, he displayed his Welsh traits to a high degree. He organized the Food Department on a strictly business and unsentimental basis. He decentralized his task by creating more than 2,000 committees in all parts of the United Kingdom. His powers were such that he could put out of business any "food shark" at an hour's notice. He was not timid about exercising his authority. He knew his task was thankless and bound to be unpopular; but he went straight ahead. Where not a pound of butter was to be had, he found cream in plenty. He soon changed that, and best butter sells in London to-day at 2s 6d. He especially grappled with wheat, meat, and coal. On these he absolutely fixed prices. Luxuries will nearly regulate themselves, for if they go to fancy prices, the great majority of people quit using them. This boycott, self-acting, and not a matter of conspiracy, soon brings dealers to their senses; they get rid of their stock as best they can and do not purchase more.

Lord Rhondda soon saw that "profiteering" could not be stopped by a wave of his hand. He resorted to some harsh measures. He arbitrarily fixed the rate of profit to be made at each stage, from producer to customer, and limited the number of intermediaries. He enforced a scale of punishments, provided for in the bill, high enough to be deterrent, but not so high as to be vindictive.

The whole problem of the Food Controller, whether his name be Herbert C. Hoover or Lord Rhondda, is to induce people to eat less.

As more and more money is put in circulation, whether due to increased wages or to war-time commerce, the tendency is to eat more.

Reduced food consumption can only be achieved by voluntary economy. It becomes a matter of national honor—a thing to be emulated and rigidly yielded to by rich and poor.

Indomitable Energy.

"Are you sure that our son has patience and industry and determination and those other qualities that make for success?" said the anxious mother.

"Great Scott!" rejoined the nervous father. "Can you doubt it? Haven't you heard him learning to play 'Home, Sweet Home,' on the mouth organ?"—Washington Star.

The Retort Courteous.

"George asked if your beautiful color was your own, and of course, dear, I had to tell him no."

"Yes, George taxed me with it, and I told him it was true—I had borrowed some of your supply."—Baltimore American.

One Argument.

Editor—Will you give me a single reason why I should accept your stuff?

Poet—I can. If you used it you could keep the stamps I inclose for its return.—Cleveland Leader.

A Modern Instance.

I want you now to understand
I only held Myrtilla's hand
For fun.
That seems no cause to make a fuss,
And yet our love affair was thus Begun.
I found her suited to my taste,
So slipped my arm around her waist
For fun.
She only heaved a little sigh.
She didn't scream and didn't cry
Or run.
But then it was I made a slip—
I kissed her on the ruby lip
For fun.
She murmured, "Yes, I'll be your wife!"
'Twas thus that I, upon my life,
Was won!

EMPIRE MILKING MACHINES

The Heart of the Milker

Another Battle Won for Dairymen

FOR months we have been experimenting—investigating—testing—fighting, to find a way to make the Empire Milking Machine, already the unquestioned leader, still more efficient for the dairy farmer.

THE BATTLE IS WON.

We have given the milking machine a new heart—the pulsator is the heart of the milking machine—and the result of our experiment, the new Empire Super-Simple Pulsator, is the most wonderful development since the invention of the Empire—the competent milking machine.

To be successful a milking machine must have a perfectly acting pulsator to cause the alternating action of suction and massage on the teats (to imitate the calf's "suck and squeeze") to occur with absolute regularity; and to make the change from suction to massage and back again instantaneous.

The Empire Super-Simple Pulsator, the pulsator without a piston, does that and more. It really is Super-Simple—so simple that it can be taken apart and put together again in less than two minutes. It has but five moving parts; nothing to wear out or "get out of gear." It cannot lose vacuum, so its action is perfect.

It places the Empire Milking Machine immeasurably in advance of all competition. Your cows should be milked by an Empire Milking Machine with the new Super-Simple Pulsator. It will milk them more rapidly than ever—it will solve your labor problem—it will increase milk production at a decreased cost; it will transform milking from drudgery into a pleasant chore.

Our factory is overtaxed by the increased demand for Empire Milking Machines, so go to your dealer at once, see the new Super-Simple Pulsator and tell him to order your Empire outfit without delay; or write for Catalog.

UNDERWEAR
We also suggest UNDERWEAR.
The wholesaler suggested to us many months ago that if we didn't buy Underwear then we wouldn't get a stitch of woollen underwear this year.
We bought.
We couldn't buy any now because the soldiers must have it all.
WE SUGGEST that you come in and buy your supply right now. Buy light weight for present and heavier for mid-winter wear.
There won't be any woollen to get later on.

Pte. Emerson Swerdfeger Killed in Action.

In a letter received this week from Balgonie, Sask., the parents of Pte. Emerson Swerdfeger, in referring to his death say—"Although very little in the line of particulars have reached us yet regarding the death of our dear son, on August 8th, we have heard enough to satisfy us that his death must have been instantaneous and that he had christian burial. A young man who had trained with him in England and in France was only two feet from him when he fell. The chum was severely wounded at the same time. Another chum lies in the bed next to Miles in a hospital in London. Clare heard of Emerson's death five days after and went to see his grave, which is marked with a slab bearing his name and number. It is in a quiet spot in France with about thirty Canadians who were killed in the same action.

"Had Emerson lived two days more he would have reached the age of 19 years.

"Almost the last letter we had from him, he said he was glad he had gone to do his duty to his country. He had only been in France since February and out of that time had spent five weeks in a hospital with a shrapnel wound in the arm.

"Miles went over to France in November 1917 and was severely wounded in May. He was taken to England on a stretcher on Sept. 13th but thinks he is improving a little."

Pte. Wm. Fyke Met Former School Mates in France

The following letter was recently received by Mrs. Wm. Plantz from her brother William Fyke. It will be noticed that it was just a few days before Orry Harper was killed that Will saw him.

France, Sept. 7, '18.

My dear sister :

I thought I would drop you a few lines to let you know I am in France and still alive and well. I suppose you will be surprised to hear that I am in France so soon, but don't worry about me, I will be all right—I have been so far any way. I have been here since Aug. 8th and been through one battle and came out o.k., and I am now having a little rest.

I met one of my old school mates the other day, Tom Merkley, and I tell you he was as glad to see me as I was him. We had quite a talk about home. He is the same old Tom. You can tell Dob to tell Dr. Hutt that I saw Tom Merkley and he is fine. Also have Dob tell him that I saw the Dr's. brother Lorne. I also saw Orry Harper who is fine and looks good. Tell Mrs. Harradine that I saw Alf. but not to speak to as he was on a truck and I on another. I saw Charley Dunn. Tell his mother he is a big man now,

We are having guite a lot of hot weather now with cool nights. We had a nice rain yesterday. France is a real nice farming country.

The band is playing now and it seems like home. Francis and Percy should be here and hear the bag pipers, they are the boys who can furnish the music. I suppose you picked lots of berries this summer. I heard that mother had been to the berry field. I don't think she is able to stand picking berries in the heat.

My address is Pte. Wm. J. Fyke 8056025, 21st Can. Batt., "A" Co. B.E.F., France.

LADIES' STYLE INFORMATION

FALL 1918

Owing to the large amount of wool which is being used for army purposes, there will necessarily be a great shortage in the supply available for civilian use. As a result, substitutes are being used in the way of Silks and Silk and Cotton Materials for skirts and dresses, and Silk Plushes for coats.

COATS of Plush and other pile fabrics will be much in evidence, but Wool Velour is still the popular material. The large shawl and square collars are much favored with various styles in convertible ideas. The leading colors are taupe, brown, green, navy, black anb burgundy.

SUITS will be worn along simple tailored lines, and fashioned to outline the figure somewhat, above the waist line, but there are no startiingly new innovations. The skirts are remarkably plain. Taupe and brown are prominent shades, but navy and black are the staple colors.

DRESSES—The general outline is slender, and the shirts retain their long, straight lines. Panel effects are quite prominent, and sashes are an important feature. The long tight sleeve still predominates. Fringe is much used for trimming, also various types of embroidery, beaas, braid and buttons. The neck line is either V shaped or round with large flat collars hanging deep down the back. Some styles are shown with high collars.

SKIRTS—Silks predominate in plain as well as in fancy materials and are mostly shown in tunics, panel and draped effects. Tucks of all sizes are used for trimming, also buckles. Pockets continue to be a feature. Two piece serge skirts are considered staple and are made more conservatively.

Come in and inspect our stock.

CARD OF THANKS

The Sun Life Assurance
Co., of Canada. Montreal.

I desire to express my sincere thanks for your prompt settlement of the insurance held by my husband, who died on Sept. 23rd. This I consider remarkably prompt.

I also wish to thank the district agent Mr. E. B. Lynch for his services in effecting the settlement. I shall always speak most highly of your treatment to me.

Wishing your Company, continued success.

MRS. MERTON COLQUHOUN
Chesterville, Oct. 7th, 1918.

NOTICE TO COAL CONSUMERS.

All applications for coal must now be to your dealers on proper forms, which will be provided by your dealer for you to fill in and sign. On these forms you are not only to show the amount of coal required but also the amount of fuel of any kind in your possession, and must be signed under the declaration, that the foregoing statement is correct in every particular. Persons who have already placed orders for coal will note that under the new regulations it will be necessary for them to make new application at once as old orders will not be considered. This will enable me to keep proper tab on the coal situation, and between your dealers and myself we are in hopes of being able to supply a little coal to each applicant until such time as the supply of coal received shall be greater this winter. The present indications are that we may look for a shortage in the coal supply and it will be necessary for all consumers to make all provision possible with other fuel to take the place of the shortage in coal.

R. HARROP.
Local Fuel Commissioner.

CARD OF THANKS

Through the columns of The Record we wish to thank the many friends of Morewood and vicinity, for the kind letters of spmpathy, also all who took part in any way in the Memorial Service for our late beloved and lamented son, Emerson, who gave his life for his country on the plains of Picardy, France, on August 8th, 1918.

MR. & MRS. ARTHUR
SWERDFEGER AND FAMILY.

Another Crysler Boy Falls

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Errat of Crysler, have recently been notified of the death in action of their son, Pte. Alfred Errat. Pte. Errat was 24 years of age and enlisted in March, 1916, in the 154th Batt., receiving his preliminary training at Barriefield and from there went overseas, where he had been in the firing line until his death in action on Aug. 28th. The young soldier leaves to mourn his loss his parents, one brother and five sisters, who have the sympathy of the oommunity in their bereavement.

Had I but seen him at the last,
O'er watched his dying hours—
Or heard the last sigh of his heart,
Or held his drooping head.

My heart—I think would not have felt
Such bitterness of grief,
But God has ordained otherwise
And now he rests in peace.

Prodigal Waste by Big Earners

Side by side with a good deal of thrift, there is a good deal of thriftlessness among us, just now. In the writer's immediate neighborhood in the East end of Toronto, and no doubt it is the same in other places, unthrift is quite as much in evidence as is thrift.

It is suprising that this should be the case in this neighborhood, for it is one in which, only the year before the first year of the war, the people, very many of them experienced the pinch of dire poverty. Work was scarce. Many who bought their houses could not keep up the installments, or pay the taxes due on them. Many who lived in rented houses could not pay their rent. Yet, although this was only between four and five years ago, many of the people who suffered most have already forgotten that then they went hungry, and, in most cases, almost starving. They don't realize that what was then may be again. They don't believe it. They think that the present boom—for wages are quite abnormally high—will last for ever.

Here is a concrete case. A certain man who, four or five years ago, lacked food and all the necessaries of life, is to-day making big money at munitions. He is not putting by a cent. In three years and more during which he has been working on munitions, he has bought himself two cars. He gave the poor thing no rest. When it was "all in" he bought another. Yet this man will cadge for clothes for his children, and send his children to the school dentist.

Now when the call is for economy, many women whose husbands are making big money, are outrageously extravagant in clothes. One of them in the same locality is so in love with fine clothes that she was seen wearing a silk dress when scrubbing the floor. Until her husband got his present $50 a week job, they never had more than $20 a week to get along on. They have nothing saved (as she admits) and if the man was out of a job tomorrow, all they would have to show as a result from their present prosperity would be a quantity of partly-worn fine clothes.

Many families are literally eating up their big earnings. One that I know will give $9.50 for a leg of lamb for Sunday dinner. The father takes to work for his lunch, sliced ham bought cooked at a store, for which a big price is paid. The butcher who serves them says he could not begin to afford the expensive food they consume in large quantities.

War-time prosperity is just giving them a good time—for a time. What of the "lean years" that may be ahead? In the cases mentioned, and they are typical of very many in this one neighborhood, no provision what ever is being made for them.

Pte. Hugh E. Kearns Writes to Berwick Friends from England.

Mr. Thos. Kearns, Berwick.

My Dear Cousin:—

I will try and write you a few lines to let you know I am in England all safe and sound and well, and getting along very good. Had a fine long trip across the water which was not awfully rough. I was not sea sick but rather dizzy by times and then when we got on the ground it did seem to go up and down like the old boat and we didn't get over the dizz ness for two days. This is a most lovely place and nice scenery as far as we have travelled. We are not allowed to tell where we landed but you can guess the rest, it was in a very pretty spot. The houses here are mostly brick and the streets are very narrow. Remember me to all the neighbors I will write to some of them when I get the time. I have so many to write to that it keeps me busy. I do wish this war was over, for I am sure there would be many glad hearts but we can't complain for our camp is very nice, in a nice spot and the weather is very favorable, so far we are sleeping in the open air at nights which is much healthier than ten in a tent. We have quite a bit of sport here a concert every night and then we have sport every Wednesday and Saturday afternoons which makes it a little more enjoyable. The rest of the time we are drilling slow march, and I tell you we will be able to go through some very nice marching when we get back home to Canada if we will only have the good luck to return. I expect we will go to the reserve our next move. We were issued with part of the French equipment the other day and that means more work for us. Have you heard from Willie or do you know his address? send it and I will try and hunt him up if I can. How is uncle Jim Kearn's folks. Hope they are all well. Willie is here with me and he wants to be remembered to you all and he said he was going to write to you soon. He looks fine. Tell Mary to please send me a Sacred "H" Badge for I know she will likely have a few on hand and some of soldiers like to have them. I was sorry to hear of poor father's death but it can't be helped. There are many's the poor fellow here leaving this world without a moments warning. It seems sad to think I know I am an orphan but I will make the best of it I can get along allright. I suppose you are looking forward to the World's Fair, but I suppose the fairs are not like they use to be. Did the girls have to work in the harvest fields like they said they were going to do? You have much more time to write than I have so tell me all the news for it means a good deal to a soldier to hear from his home place. Your cousin, Hugh.

"A woman can't keep a secret", snarled Mr. Gabb.

"She can't eh?" replied Mrs. Gabb. "Why, you poor goose, I knew that you were engaged to me six months before you knew it".

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constant failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is a constitutional remedy, is taken internally and acts thru the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the system. TO every home there comes a time when every thought, every hope, every prayer for the future centres on the recovery of one loved one. In that hour of anguish, every means to recovery is sought—the highest medical skill, trained nurses, costly treatment. Does the price matter?

It may be so great as to stagger the imagination—a sum beyond the possible.

But does anyone ask, "Can we do it?" Money or no money, they do it. And somehow they pay.

It may mean doing without things they think they need. It may mean privations, sacrifices, hardships. They make unbelievable savings, they achieve the impossible, but they get the money to pay.

✦ ✦ ✦

To-day in this critical period of our nationhood, there is imperative need for MONEY—vast sums of money. Only one way now remains to obtain it.

The nation must save, every community, every family, every individual Canadian must save.

If anyone says "I cannot save" let him consider to what extent he would pinch himself to relieve the sufferings of a loved one at home; and surely he would not pinch less for our fighting brothers in France.

Without suffering actual privations, nearly every family in Canada can reduce its standard of living, can practice reasonable thrift, can make cheerful sacrifice to enrich the life-blood of the nation.

You who read this, get out pencil and paper NOW. Set down the items of your living expense. Surely you will find some items there you can do without.

Determine to do without them.

Start TO-DAY. Save your money so that you may be in a position to lend it to your country in its time of need.

The Auction Sale

A Purchase That Proved a Prize Package

By ETHEL HOLMES

The scene was not a new one to city people, but to a person from the country it was not only interesting, but amusing. At least so thought Sam Walton as he stood among the crowd in the office of the express company, for they were holding an auction sale of unclaimed packages. It was a case of buying "sight unseen," and there were much laughter and good natured ridicule over the worthless purchases that fell to the lot of some bidder who had calculated that bulk must necessarily increase the value of the hidden contents.

There were large packages that when opened proved to contain nothing save printed handbills of some long past entertainment or bargain sale. Others had samples of patent medicine within, and in one case an eager purchaser had paid $2 for a tiny box wrapped in white paper that contained liver pills. There were bundles of old clothing, packages of newspapers, boxes of cutlery, cases of samples of everything under the sun. Occasionally there was a real bargain, as in the case of the man who paid 15 cents for a battered and tightly locked suit case which proved to contain a brand new suit of clothes worth a hundred times the price he had paid for it. Another individual paid a dollar for a ragged bundle that contained dozens of pure linen handkerchiefs, and still another found himself the possessor of a five pound box of chocolates for the price of 25 cents.

Shouts of laughter followed the pulling out of a box of a very dainty pair of woman's bed slippers by a young man.

Sam Walton paused in the doorway and watched the fun going on within. Every time a package was opened by its eager purchaser there was a burst of laughter from the good natured crowd. Sam fingered the few silver coins in his pocket and turned to go away. Some fortunate individual had become the possessor of a fine shotgun as the result of a fifty cent bid on a narrow burlap wrapped bundle. It might be that an investment of his money would double it. It was a gamble.

"What am I offered for this perfectly good traveling bag?" sang the auctioneer as he swung above the crowd a rather shabby Russia leather bag. "It is tightly locked and from its weight must contain valuables of some kind. You can see from the labels that this bag has traveled abroad, and—25 cents? That's a joke, of course. I am offered 25 cents. Who will make it 35? Very good, sir," and so on.

Sam stood palpitating, his hand on the two lone dollars in his pocket. He was strongly tempted to enter the competition for the bag. It was a handsome one and showed signs of much travel.

"One fifty!" sang the auctioneer.

"One seventy-five," bid Sam Walton hastily, and to his surprise it was knocked down to him at that price.

To the great disappointment of his companions in the crowd he did not attempt to open his purchase. He paid the price and then made his way into the street and turned uptown toward his boarding place. As he strode on, swinging the bag easily, he gave little thought to its contents. His mind had immediately flown to the one topic that always lay uppermost.

That was Leona Denman.

Three years before the opening of this story Sam's father had received a letter from an old college chum, saying he had lost his wife in a recent railroad accident and he himself had been badly injured. He realized that he could not live many months longer.

His terrible anxiety was the fate of his little girl. He and his wife were without relatives, but the letter went on to say: "Walton, you know how I feel toward you. I believe you to be absolutely trustworthy and as splendid a friend as ever man was blessed with. Now, I will ask of you a great favor. Will you take my little girl into your home and be a father to her? She has ample means, and in my will I am constituting you her sole guardian."

And so six months later Leona Denman became a member of the Walton household, where she soon won her way into the hearts of all by her winning ways. But to Sam Walton's heart she did the most damage of all, for he fell violently in love with her, the "little girl" of the letter turning out to be a winsome young girl of nineteen.

She was very young in her way, and Sam, who was ten years her senior, had felt himself too old to allow a girl of her years to pledge herself to him. Living in the same house, it was impossible for him to keep from paying her many attentions, and he became much more lover-like in look and actions than he himself realized.

Leona, girl-like, had noticed it all and was very much in love with this rather shy, reticent man who was so honorably keeping his love for her in obeisance.

Many times she hoped he would break down, the barrier and speak out, but she could only wait patiently and by refusing the attentions of other young men show to him that they had no attraction for her.

He became entirely engrossed with his thoughts of the young girl and his home.

The lights of Broadway raced away, and he saw the cool, dim length of a village street. He opened a white gate in a white painted fence and went up the path between prim rows of sweet scented boxwood. There would be a light in the dining room, and he could see his father's pale, sad, intellectual face, his mother's gentle countenance with tear dimmed eyes, and opposite the empty chair (that was his) Leona Denman would be sitting, pale and beautiful.

They would look at his empty chair and in their hearts blame him for bringing disgrace upon them. His father was Leona Denman's guardian, and when one night a few weeks previous there had occurred a robbery of some of Leona Denman's securities some people had said that Sam Walton had stolen and sold them and spent the money on himself. They even described the details of the robbery, which were interesting to poor Sam, as he had been quite innocent of the whole matter.

Unfortunately two circumstances of the past year gave some substance to the theory that Sam Walton must be the thief. During the past year he had been spending money very freely on a new business which he was starting most successfully, and the jealous ones of the town were very ready to nod their heads and say, "It is easy to see now where the money came from."

To make matters still more suspicious, he had been putting a younger brother through college, and many had been the surmises as to where he got the money.

He had completed the circumstantial evidence against himself by going away suddenly. He was proud, too, and he had thrust aside Leona's soft hand and had lashed himself with the belief that his parents and the girl he loved also thought him to be a thief. There was only one other on whom suspicion might rest, and that was Jeremiah Lakely, the elder Walton's confidential clerk in the country banking house. But Jeremiah had proved an alibi and was so open and frank about the whole matter and told with such reluctance of the evidence against his employer's son that Sam in a frenzy of anger had rushed away.

He had been in New York three weeks and not even glanced at a newspaper. He dreaded to see his own name in startling letters across the front page. Most of his time had been spent in a search for work, and he had not yet found it. He had secured board at a quiet uptown hotel and paid for it in advance. His last week would be up the next day, and he knew not where to go. He now had a lonely silver quarter dollar in his pockets—and the leather bag, his prize package.

In his room at the hotel he tossed the bag on the bed and gave himself over to thoughts of what must have happened at home in Ferndale. What of his father, his mother, of Leona? Did they really believe that he was guilty of such a low down trick as stealing, and from the girl he hoped to marry?

After awhile Sam pulled the leather bag toward him and deftly unfastened it with a trick of his penknife. He opened the bag and stared at the contents.

There in the bottom, fastened together with a rubber band, were the missing securities for which he was now under suspicion of having stolen from his father's safe.

A half hour later Sam grasped his hat and went down to the nearest newsstand to buy copies of the evening newspapers.

He scanned them eagerly and found no reference to the affair of the stolen securities. Very likely it was an old story and had been replaced by some newer scandal. It did not occur to him that it had never reached the newspapers.

He must go back to Ferndale, and his money was spent. There remained his gold watch. That he pawned and took the first train for home. As the miles whirled backward under the wheels of the train his heart grew heavier. He was glad that it was midnight when he arrived at the village. It was the last train.

He crept down the familiar road from the station, and his heart beat faster as he neared his father's house. As he expected, everything was dark, but he pushed open the gate and strode up the path unashamed, for he knew he was innocent, and now he had ground pride under foot. He must make them believe that he was innocent.

As he reached the front door a light appeared in the front hall. He could see it shining through the fanlight over the door. Somebody was coming.

The door opened, and his mother stood there, tall and straight in her white gown. Behind her was Leona Denham in a loose wrapper. Coming down the stairs was his father.

"We heard your step, Sammy," half sobbed his mother as he took her in his arms.

"Then—you—wanted me to come back?" he stammered as Leona seized one hand and his father the other.

"Yes. We could not understand why you went. The matter had not been thoroughly investigated. Your father suspected Jeremiah, and finally Jeremiah confessed that he had placed the securities in a bag and expressed them to the city to a fictitious name and address. We shall endeavor to recover them, and the case against Jeremiah will be dropped if they are recovered. Leona wants it that way."

As she spoke Mrs. Walton was leading the way to the sitting room, and as they reached it Sam Walton placed the bag, which had proved to be a prize package indeed, on the table and bade them open it.

And as the old people looked and exclaimed and wondered he took Leona into his arms and kissed her.

AUTO-INTOXICATION OR SELF-POISONING

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Absolutely Prevents This Dangerous Condition.

The chief cause of poor health is our neglect of the bowels. Waste matter, instead of passing from the lower intestine regularly every day, is allowed to remain there, generating poisons which are absorbed by the blood.

In other words, a person who is habitually constipated, is poisoning himself. We know now that Auto-intoxication, due to non-action of the bowels, is directly responsible for serious Kidney and Bladder Troubles; that it upsets the Stomach, causes Indigestion, Loss of Appetite and Sleeplessness; that chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Pain In The Back, are relieved as soon as the bowels become regular; and that Pimples, Rashes, Eczema and other Skin Affections disappear when "Fruit-a-tives" are taken to correct Constipation.

"Fruit-a-tives" will protect you against Auto-intoxication because this wonderful fruit medicine acts directly on all the eliminating organs.

Enemy Claimed London.

Large signs announcing that London and Paris had been captured by Germany and that the Kaiser was to exact indemnity from England were displayed on the walls of Fukien to deceive the Chinese, according to Dr. J. Preston Maxwell, medical missionary in charge of the Yungchun Hospital, Fukien Province, who arrived in New York recently. Dr. Maxwell says that German propaganda in South China is widespread and has been so since the beginning of the war.

"All sorts of reports were constantly being circulated to make the Chinese believe Germany was winning the war," he said. "It is only recently that the people of South China have been getting true accounts from the battle fronts.

"A medical registration is being put into effect in China, and it is hoped that this will eventually eliminate the 'quack' doctors who used to go about selling flour and oil as medicine. Where formerly we had nine medical patients to one surgical, now there is the same number of each. The Chinese are gradually overcoming their aversion to operations."

Ecclesiastical Candy.

One Sunday a young man from the north of Scotland, while walking out with his sweetheart, noticed over a doorway the sign, "Dairy and Confectioner." Wishing to give the young lady a treat, the youth entered the shop and asked for chocolate creams. "I dinna sell chocolate creams on the Sabbath," said the old lady behind the counter severely. "But ye selt sweeties to the woman that has just gane oot," said the young fellow, who indeed had seen the transaction through the window. "Ay, some ecclesiastical confectionery, but nae chocolate creams," said the lady, and went on to explain: "Ecclesiastical confectionery is peppermint draps, pan draps, and ginger lozengers, but nae chocolate creams."

Shrapnel.

Shrapnel, used extensively in this war against aircraft and troops in the open, was invented by Colonel Henry Shrapnel in England and first was used by the English in the Peninsular war of 1840. It was used also by the English at the Battle of Waterloo and helped considerably to defeat Napoleon. The shell is so made that it explodes a certain number of seconds after leaving the gun or upon striking. The shell in exploding sends slugs and bullets in every direction.

It was to protect against shrapnel that the steel helmets first were used in the present war.

A Giant Canal.

A new project of American engineers is a giant canal 250 miles long to connect the Arctic ocean and the Baltic sea, extending from Kandalaska, on the White sea, to Tornea, near the Swedish frontier on the Gulf of Finland. The cost is estimated at $150,000,000.

A Big Order

Cornwall Commercial College is asked For Unlimited Number of Shorthanders by Dominion Government.

(From The Freeholder, Cornwall, Oct. 3, 1918)

The Civil Service Commission, Ottawa, on Tuesday afternoon, (October 1) telephoned the Cornwall Commercial College for 200 stenographers and typists at salaries ranging from $50 to $100 a month. The School is sending out scores of students every month and at the present time is completely cleaned out of graduates, but is sending all advanced students available at this time.

There seems no opening for young men and women at the present time equal to learning shorthand and typewriting, which go in team harness in these latter days. Not only is there absolute certainty of very profitable employment as soon as proficiency is attained, which for a young man or women of ordinary intelligence with a fair education, should be in six months or less, under the admirable system of personal instruction which the Cornwall Commercial College provides, but the finest kind of a prospect is opened up for life work.

We think it was Dickens who said that the learning of shorthand was equal to making oneself familiar with three languages But modern methods have changed all that.

Do Not Put Off Buying Your Fall & Winter Jacket

Butterick Pattern.

Fair and Much Colder

Hasn't your suit begun to feel a little thin above the knees? And the wind in the back of your neck! Brrr! You know you need that coat—a soft thing of wool velours with a big fur cape-collar and cuffs. The fulness and flare come from the belt at the sides. In front and back it has the new flat panel effect.

We have our New Stock in and the prices are from 10% to 20% cheaper than if we had to buy them to-day.
