WILLIAMSBURG I.O.O.F. VISITS CARDINAL LODGE

The officers and members of the Regal Lodge, I.O.O.F., Cardinal, were delighted with a visit from the brethren of Williamsburg Lodge on Tcesday evening. The Williamsburg brethren brought with them a class of candidates, to whom the Cardinal degree staff exemplified the first degree.

The visiting brethren were afterwards entertained by the members of Regal lodge to a luncheon. Toastmaster Bro. Pearce, noble grand of Regal Lodge, called for a toast to the King, which was responded to by the singing of the National Anthem. A number of addresses were delivered by both the visitors and members of Regal Lodge. Among the speakers were the candidates who had the opportunity of making their maiden speeches. Bro. Booth replied, and gave an instructive address on Oddfellowship.

Among the other speakers were: Bro. Whittaker, N.G. of Williamsburg Lodge; Bro. O'Shaughnessy, V.G. and degree master of Williamsburg; Bros. Grayfield, Johnston and D.L. Collison, also of Williamsburg, and Bros. M. Casselman and E. Coons of Cardinal.

Bro. W.T. Kingston, grand warden of the Grand Lodge of Ontario, delivered an important message from Grand Lodge.

MRS. GEO. E. COOK

Relatives and friends throughout this district were grieved to learn of the sudden death of Mrs. George E. Cook of Toronto, who passed away while journeying from Belleville to Toronto on Friday, Feb. 8th.

Mrs. Cook, accompanied by her husband, Dr. Cook, had been spending some time with their daughter, Mrs. Chas. Cameron, and Mr. Cameron, at Belleville. On their return to Toronto, Mrs. Cook suffered a heart attack on the train, at Trenton, and was advised by a physician to return to Belleville. Although her condition was apparently somewhat critical, there was hope that she would stand the strain of the return trip to the Belleville Hospital, but she died in the ambulance before reaching the institution.

Mrs.. Cook, whose maiden name was Helen H. Smyth, daughter of the late Oliver Smyth of Matilda, was born in 1871. She received her early education in her native township, later attending Morrisburg Collegiate Institute. She later graduated in Arts at Toronto University, and shortly afterward was united in marriage to Dr. Geo. E. Cook.

After their marriage, Dr. and Mrs. Cook resided for a year in Edinburgh, Scotland, where the former took a post-graduate course, after which they returned to Chicago where the doctor, for two years, practised his profession. They later became permanent residents of Toronto.

The late Mrs. Cook is survived by her husband, two sons and two daughters, namely: Messrs George Norman Cook and Arnold E. Cook, both of Toronto; Mrs. Wm. Proudfoot, of Toronto, and Mrs. Chas. Cameron of Belleville. Also surviving are one brother, Mr. George Smyth of Matilda Township, and three sisters, Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Freeland, of Vancouver, B.C., and Mrs. Locke, of Matilda.

The funeral service was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cameron, Belleville, on Monday. Rev. Stuart Parker, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Toronto, conducted the service, assisted by Rev. Walker, of Belleville. The remains were afterward conveyed by C.N.R. to Morrisburg, for burial in Mount Pleasant cemetery. Rev. J. Burkholder officiated at the grave, where a large number of relatives and friends assembled to pay a last tribute of respect to the departed.

Among those from out of town, who were present at the service in Morrisburg, were: Dr. Cook, Messrs G.N. and A.E. Cook, Mr. and Mrs. MacMahon, all of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Cameron, Belleville; Mr. Geo. Smyth, Matilda; Mr. Ralph Kilgour and Miss Bessie Kilgour of Beauharnois, Que.

The pall bearers were: Messrs Norman Cook and Arnold Cook, sons; Oliver Smyth and Fielding Smyth, nephews; Harold MacMahon and John H. Meikle.

WILDA YVONNE SMITH

There passed away at her home here, on Tuesday, Feb. 5th, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Smith, in her eighth month, born May 16th, 1934. The little girl was playing with a paper bag in which were a couple of beans, and while trying to swallow one, choked to death, before medical aid could arrive.

She leaves to mourn, besides her parents, two brothers.

The funeral was conducted by Rev. Dr. Donald MacRae, at 1.30 Thursday afternoon.

Among the floral offerings were: Wreath, Nettie Casselman; Sprays, Mr. and Mrs. Asa Woods, Mr. and Mrs. Ora Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Stitt; spray from mother, father, and little brothers.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank all those who so kindly helped us during our recent, sad bereavement, also for the many beautiful floral offerings.

MR. and MRS. HOWARD SMITH.

SPENCERVILLE RINK DESTROYED BY FIRE

Fire of unknown origin early on Tuesday morning completely destroyed Spencerville community rink, the construction of which in 1929 cost $10,000. The outbreak was first discovered at 4 a.m., but even then the fire had gained such proportions that nothing could be done to save the building. Six thousand dollars insurance was carried on the building.

The rink, a building of 110 by 90 feet, was o f corrugated iron, built on a wooden frame. Spectators' benches, dressing rooms storages and offices in the interior were all of frame construction. From appearances at the time of the discovery of the blaze it seemed to have started in the dressing rooms at the south end of the rink. These were heated by individual stoves.

The rink was closed for the night at 1.30 a.m. by the caretaker, Ray Snail, and then everything appeared to be in perfect order. Whether the fire started from overheated stovepipes, a carelessly thrown cigaret butt, or defective electric wiring is not known.

As yet no plans for reconstruction have been considered, but it is likely that a meeting of the directors will be held shortly.

Although badly bent and twisted, a considerable portion of the corrugated iron may be used again. In addition to the building, a large number of skates and hockey equipment owned by patrons of the rink, were destroyed.

There is no firefighting equipment in Spencerville, and only the fact that the wind was blowing in the right direction saved nearby residences.

CORNWALL MAN FATALLY INJURED

Fatally injured when he was run over by an atuomobile and then a heavy passenger bus early Wednesday morning, Louis Pecore, 42 years old, Cornwall, died at Hotel Dieu Hospital there late Wednesday afternoon. Pecore suffered a fractured skull, a badly crushed chest, and the impact of the automobile and bus tore a large portion of his scalp from his head.

Dr. C.J. Hamilton, coroner, has ordered an inquest, which will be held at Cornwall next week.

The accident occurred about 12 miles west of Cornwall, on provincial highway No. 2. Pecore was lying on the highway and was first run over by an automobile driven by George Cox, of Ottawa. Cox told police he tried to avert the accident, but his automobile was on top of the man before he could stop. After the accident, Cox and a companion, J.K. Gamble, of Toronto, went back to the man on the road, but were unable to get him off the highway before a large bus had passed over the body. They attempted to signal Ivan Casselman, driver of the bus, but he did not notice them in time. Pecore's body was pinned beneath the heavy bus, and jacks were used, to extricate the man.

Harry Sheets, 22, of Farran's Point, who was alleged to have been lying in the ditch on the side of the road when Pecore was run over, was arrested by Provincial Constable Kennedy of Cornwall, and was charged with intoxication. He is in Cornwall jail.

When Casselman brought the bus to a halt, Cox and Gamble immediately searched for the injured man, but could not find him on the highway. A hand was seen projecting from beneath the bus, and close observation revealed that the man was pinned between the low springs and the roadway. Casselman feared that if he moved the bus, the man might be crushed, so nothing was done until help arrived. The bus was then jacked up, and Pecore was rushed to hospital, after being beneath the bus for more than an hour.

Police learned that Pecore and several companions had attended a party at Farran's Point, but they were at a loss to explain how Pecore came to be lying on the road. The road was very icy where the accident happened. The bus was empty at the time.

Returning to Ottawa late Wednesday night, Cox stated that Pecore was lying on the lower part of a U-figure grade, hence the lights of the car did not immediately reveal him. He did not notice the man until a few feet away, and then was under the impression that it was a log. He swerved to avoid the obstacle, but believes the two outside wheels of his car passed over Pecore. Immediately stopping, he noticed lights of another car right behind. He and a passenger, J.K. Gamble, tried to signal it to stop. With the driver of the car which had been approaching, they searched the road, but could find nothing, until they looked under the second car, where they saw Pecore pinned between the lower springs and the roadway. After unsuccessfully trying to dislodge him, they telephoned for police and an ambulance.

The TUDOR HOUSE

By MRS. STANLEY WRENCH

(Author of "Sing for the Moon" "Strange Lovers," etc).

SYNOPSIS

Michael Borde is unmarried, born and bred in a Birmingham slum, is now a wealthy motor manufacturer. One day he visits the countryside around his old home and rescues Daphne Eden from a menacing tramp. He falls in love and proposes Daphne accepts and introduces him to her father, who greets him with the words 'Get out of here you cur — you ruined my home — stole my wife — curse you!'

Daphne's father dies and she disappears Michael explains to her friend Mrs. Gregory that he was misrepresented He buys the old Tudor House owned by the Hamill-Hardy's. Mrs Gregory promises to mail a letter from him to Daphne arranging a meeting Daphne does not appear. On the way home Michael collides with a car driven by Diana Hamill-Hardy.

Mrs. Eden notices an announcement of the engagement of Michel and Diana Hamill-Hardy.

At the solicitors she is met by her stepmother

Mrs. Gregory dies. Daphne hears from her solicitors.

This was not going to be so easy. All sorts of documents and papers were here, some tied up in bundles and labelled with dates.

"Self and Michael Borde," Daphne read.

She unfastened the tape, spread out the papers, slowly and deliberately read each letter in turn. They were curt, short, typical of Michael. Even in those days he remembered that "Time is Money," and wasted nothing in letter-writing. These preliminaries to a partnership were methodically filed and numbered, then came the copy of an Agreement, there were a number of financial statements which she did not understand, and at the bottom a small black diary, filled with entries in her father's handwriting. Feeling as though she had trod on his grave, Daphne read these throuhh slowly and deliberately. The early part of the diary merely recorded Borde's entry into his life, and Richard Eden's work at that Midland garage, where it was evident he was bored and unhappy. He had no scope. That was what it amounted to, and the work was thoroughly uncongenial. Michael Borde he regarded as a skinflint, a nigger-driver, but at the same time as a man who undoubtedly would get on.

"I must grin and bear it," ran one entry. "But I refuse to taken on driving, even if we are short-staffed. Borde doesn't seem to mind what he does, and will get into a chauffeur's uniform and do anything, so long as it is making money."

Daphne winced. That bore out what Michael had told her himself. Confessing his early ambitions, how the lack of money had dinned itself into his brain, how he recognized that pennilessness was a curse, and how, when given his chance, he took it, but cared for nothing so long as it increased his bank balance, she realized how this hard nature of his might upset the man she knew her father to be.

Then came references to night driving, the phrase repeated again and again, but it was not until later Daphne glimpsed its significance.

"I wish to God I had never married again," ran the words. "She is a thorn in the flesh, an everlasting distress to me, and now I realize she is running after Borde, or he after her. Sometimes I hate her, loathe her, and yet I can't do without her....."

Shuddering, she laid down the book.

"Poor father," she whispered. "I begin to understand. That woman must have caught him somehow or other. She used to be quite beautiful, too, in her way. He must have suffered terribly——"

Soon after this the diary closed abruptly, so the tragedy must have happened a little afterwards. There were references to some invention, which he believed was going to make his fortune, but which as he bitterly wrote down, he would see that Michael Borde did not share.

"I was a fool at first, and told him most things. Now I work in secret, and I am negotiating with a firm in Stockholm. If they take it up, my lighting device will be fitted on every car, not only here, but all over the world. Borde laughed when I suggested it at first, he'll laugh the other side of his mouth when he finds I am a millionaire. Money is his god. He'd do anything for money."

Was that true? Had her father misjudged Michael Borde? Money was a means to an end .... and that end to him had been the Tudor house, a perfect setting for ..... for what? Suddenly she found her eyes pricked with tears, and hurriedly fastened up the bundle of papers again, resolved to finish looking over these at some other time.

There was a photograph of Lily Eden, beautiful in a rather flamboyant way. Bare neck and shoulders were draped lightly with a wisp of tulle, her pose was coquettishly reminiscent of Carmen, and Daphne dropped the picture as though it had stung her. There were her letters, too, but Daphne would not burn them with the others; some time must be made for them.

"Queer how I feel about it," ran her thoughts. "I hate her for messing up father's life, but I wonder if I should hate her quite so much if it hadn't been for Michael Borde."

She got up, locked the box, glanced at the grey ashes in the grate, then resolved to make her way up the field to the chicken-pens. It was there she had first met Michael Borde, and the best thing to do with such memories was to take them heartily by the throat aand choke them. A soft west wind met her, clouds above went hurrying past, the scent of gorse came down from the banks, and she looked down at the empty white road winding past the beech woods.

ON A NIGHT IN JUNE

Down in the hollow willows swayed their grey-green branches, a sudden gust of the west wind blew their leaves sideways, and they quivered into points of silver. The cuckoo called again, answered by another in the Vale, swallows swooped low, above in the blue swifts chased each other, screaming, and as she reached the summit, Daphne turned slowly and survey the lovely old house, nestling in the hollow.

"Lovely," she said slowly, "lovely. I wish it were mine."

Her face hardened. For the first time she understood what Lily Eden had done.

Smoke rose from its twisted chimneys, she could see the lawns like emerald oblongs set around with a blaze of color, and remembered that the early season of the herbaceous borders when lupins and delphiniums bloomed made a sight worth seeing.

Every Saturday afternoon the gardens were thrown open to the villagers and visitors from a distance. Daphne had often gazed admirably with the rest. Now Werburge Lucy would be barred.

As she stood looking down two figures on horseback rode through the arched stone doorway leading to the inner court, beyond which lay the stables. One she recognized, even at this distance, as Diana Hamill-Hardy; there was no mistaking that graceful figure or the big bay horse. The other, a man, was slightly built, but rode well.

They rode out at walking pace, and Daphne was slightly puzzled.

She knew that Michael was not yet married, and it seemed odd to her that Diana Hamill-Hardy should be at her old home and in the company of another man, for she was quite sure her companion was not Michael.

Daphne would have thought it still more odd could she have overheard the conversation of the two as they rode along.

New York's Richest Church

In 1697, when some of his Anglican subjects were worshipping in a for near the Battery, King William III. of England gave young Trinity Parish the land on which Trinity Church now stands at the head of Wall Street. There was no street then, but a wall, later razed to give the little city on Manhattan Island room to grow. Later, the royal heart was struck with the thought that the struggling church could well do with some funds, and he gave the parish the right to sell all whales, wrecks and flotsam and jetsam flung up on Long Island.

What revenue, if any, Trinity derived from that privilege has not been discovered. At any rate, the parish did not prosper fast enough for Queen Anne, and in 1705, the bestowed on it a tract of land, which became known as the Queen's Farm. It yielded a revenue of £40 a year.

As the thriving city began to spread out on its narrow terrain, the Queen's Farm became covered with rent-paying buildings. Subways underran it in later years, and rents went up. Though large slices of the farm were taken to provide for other Episcopal churches, King's College, now Columbia University, and other buildings, the little church at the head of Wall Street had 700 lots remaining, and prospered until it became the wealthiest church in New York, and, probably, in the country.

Recently the parish sold the east side of Hudson Street from West Houston to Clarkson Street, part of the tract it received 237 years ago from King William. The transfer marked the first change in ownership of this particular property since the royal grant. Four and five-storey buildings cover the block involved in the transaction, and, according to William S. Sussman, Inc., the broker in the deal, the buildings and the land on which they stand are assessed at $458,000. —Literary Digest.

Co-eds On Campus May Smoke If They Have Male Escort

New Orleans.—Woman students at Newcomb College may now smoke on the campus after 6:00 p.m.—providing they are accompanied by a "date."

They previously gained the privilege of puffing cigarettes in designated smoke rooms and on the dormitory porches, but the girls with escorts were out of luck.

The student council rule was amended recently to care for that.

What Does Your Handwriting Reveal?

GEOFFREY ST. CLAIR

(Graphologist)

All Rights Reserved

EDITOR'S NOTE: Tremendous interest is being maintained in these article_ on Character Reading from Handwriting, and more and more readers are taking advantage of the author's invitation to send them a personal charcter reading of their handwritiing. If you have not done so, you would find it hlepful to you, too, to find out the truth of your own personality revealed from the way you write.

Many of the letters that I receive from readers of these articles contain requests for more information as to the reasons for Graphology being so accurate, and many wish to know more about the underlying principles that make this so accurate and helpful a science.

In this week's article, I would like to go back to the beginnings of Graphology—when those who were beginning to wonder whether handwriting really did show something of the writer's character, were hitting in the dark, as it were. It will show you that for hundreds of years, research has been proceeding into the mysteries that lie beneath the apparently simple symbols that mark mankind's efforts to converse on paper.

The first known book on character from Handwriting was published in 1622—three hundred years ago—by a man named Camille Baldo. In the year 1792, the German historian, I. C. Grohmann, wrote on the same theme, and this was followed in 1823 by an Englishman, Stephen Collet.

It will surprise many readers to learn that the well-known writer, Edgar Allen Poe, was an industrious seeker after the truth about character delineation from handwriting. And we find that Sir Walter Scott, whose novels, whilst not so popular today as some years ago, are still ranked as classics, wrote the following in 1829, in his book, "The Chronicles of the Canongate": "My first impression was to thrust the manuscript in the fire . . . A little reflection made me ashamed of this feeling of impatience, and as I looked at the even, concise, yet tremulous hand in which the manuscript was written, I could not help thinking according to opinion I have heard seriously maintained, that something of a man's character may be conjectured from his handwriting. That neat, but crowded and constrained, small hand argued a man of a good conscience, well-regulated passions, and, to use his own phrase, an upright walk in life, but it also indicated narrowness of spirit, inveterate prejudice, and hinted at some degree of intolerance . . . . . Then the flourished capital letters, which ornamented the commencement of each paragraph, and the name of his family and of his ancestors, whenever these occurred in the pages, do they not express forcibly the pride and sense of importance with which the author undertook and accomplished the task?"

These words of Sir Walter Scott are significant of the awakening interest in the possibilities of recognising the truth about a person's nature from his manner of writing, many years ago.

I would like to put it in another way to my readers. Do you not recognise the handwriting of your friends? Even if you are accustomed to have correspondence from a score of acquaintances and friends, as a rule you can identify each one by the writing. Some of the handwritings will look somewhat alike, but you rarely make a mistake in properly identifying the writer. This shows that each writing has its individual chacteristics. From a realisation of this fact, which is self-evident, it is not a long step to an assumption that, if different writings show the individual characteristics, then it is possible to accurately identify those characteristics.

And that is exactly what Graphology does.

Would you like to have a personal character study from your own handwriting? And have you any friends whose real natures you would like to know? Send specimen of the writings you want analysed, stating birthdate in each case. Send 10c coin for each specimen, and enclose with 3c stamped addressed envelope. If in addition you would like to have a copy of Mr. St. Clair's new chart —the Graphochart—which contains over 100 illustrations, and shows you how to analyse handwriting for yourself, send an additional 12c for your copy. You will find it very interesting and fascinating. Address: Geoffrey St. Clair, Graphologist, Room 421, 73 Adelaide Street West, Toronto, Ont. All letters are confidential, and will be answered as quickly as is possible, having regard to the large number of letters that are coming in.

An auto-manufacturer has just completed a million-dollar proving-ground to give his car the acid test in staying power and endurance. It seems to us a much simpler method would be to let a friend take it over the weekend.—Judge.

1 tablet for making junket
1 pint milk
3 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon cold water
1 teaspoon vanilla flavoring
½ cup tapioca pudding (or left over pudding)

Put 2 tablespoons tapioca pudding in the bottom of five dessert dishes. Dissolve tablet for making junket in 1 tablespoon cold water. Add sugar to milk, flavored with vanilla flavoring. Warm to lukewarm—not hot. Add dissolved tablet for junket. Stir a few seconds and pour immediately over the tapioca. Let set, and then chill in refrigerator.

SMALL BUT DELICIOUS

Some of the most delicious cookies, cakes and hermits are brought to the table in tiny pieces. For a light bite at night or for a bridge luncheon you will find these tiny tasties particularly pleasing. Here is one I feel sure will appeal.

English Yums

1¾ cups sugar
1 cup evaporated milk
⅛ teaspoon cream of tartar
½ cup oleomargarine
½ pound pecans, chopped

Combine sugar, evaporated milk and cream of tartar. Cook, stirring constantly, until the soft-ball stage is reached (238 degrees F.), Add oleomargarine and cook until the mixture again comes to the soft-ball stage (238 degrees F.). Add nuts and beat until the mixture becomes dull—pour into a shallow pan which has been spread with oleomargarine. Allow to set and cut into inch squares. Makes 30 1-inch pieces.

SPICY PUDDING IN MODERN MANNER

Nowadays there's no need for spicy desserts to be a chore. Housewives used to chop and shave pounds of fruit peel and beef, apples, raisins and citron for mince pies and puddings. Here is a modern recipe for a delicious pudding, made at a minimum of time and labor.

Spicy Peach Pie

1 (9oz.) package dry mince meat
1½ cups peach juice and water
1 cup fresh or canned sliced peaches, drained
¼ cup lemon juice
Pie crust

Break mince meat into pieces. Add peach juice. Place over heat and stir until all lumps are thoroughly broken up. Bring to brisk boil; continue boiling for one minute. Allow to cool. Line a 9-inch pie plate with pastry and fill with mince meat mixture. Place drained sliced peaches over top. Place upper crust on filled lower one and press edges firmly together. Trim off surplus pastry. Bake 35 minutes in a hot oven (400 degrees F.).

NOTE: One cup peaches is sufficient for this recipe; however, 2 cups may be used, making a large pie, serving eight. The 1 lb. 14 oz. can furnishes 2 cups fruit.

Steamed Fruit Pudding

1 (9 oz. package dry mince meat and ½ cup water boiled almost dry
1 egg, slightly beaten
½ cup nut meats, finely chopped
¼ cup orange juice
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
1½ cups dry cake crumbs

Break mince meat into pieces. Add cold water. Place over heat and stir until all lumps are thoroughly broken up. Bring to brisk boil; continue boiling for three minutes or until mixture is practically dry. Allow to cool. Add slightly beaten egg, nut meats, orange juice and grated rind to cake crumbs. Blend thoroughly. Fold in cooled mince meat. Pour into greased pudding mold, eight individual molds, or baking powder can, filling two-thirds full. Cover tightly and steam one hour, having boiling water half way up on molds. If additional water is needed during steaming, it must be boiling when added. Serve warm with hard sauce or whipped cream. Serves eight.

CARE KEEPS PERMANENT

Within the past few weeks a good many women have wanted to know how to care for the permanents they got during the holidays. The majority complain of dryness and a few say that their hair is unmanageable now. All want to have healthy scalps and smooth coiffures.

A dry condition is fairly easy to remedy. You need hot oil shampoons, of course, and, since you don't want to brush out your finger waves, you should massage your scalp with your fingertips every night before you go to bed.

Sit beside a fairly low table, putting your elbows on it and resting your head in your hands. Place fingertips flat against the scalp and try to move it backward and forward as well as in tiny circles. Remember that your scalp — not fingers — should move. If you are a little careful, this simply treatment won't disturb your wave. However, it will stimulate circulation and cause the oil glands to function properly.

If your hair is frizzy and never seems to look sleek and well-groomed ask the operator who gives you a finger wave to apply a little brilliantine before she puts on wave set lotion. Between shampoos, use a bit of it yourself. Simply pour a few drops on your hair brush and then lightly draw your hair across the bristles before you start to arrange your coiffure.

Newfoundlanders Help Clothe Island's Needy

As winter closes down on Newfoundland's scattered outports, the Service League of Newfoundland is making a final drive to provide clothing for impoverished residents who might otherwise go scantily dressed through the cold months.

One garment from everyone who can afford to give — this is the League's objective. The appeal is being directed particularly toward Newfoundland's women, who are urged—if need be—to knit or sew at least one warm piece of clothing for some needy person.

Lady Anderson, wife of Governor Sir David Murray Anderson and head of the League, is behind the move. She had ordered the League's sewing rooms thrown open to the public, urging all women to use their facilities in making up their contributions.

About 250 frogs took part in a jumping contest at Angels Camp, California, and 20,000 spectators watched them jump. The contest, inspired by Mark Twain's story, "The Jumping Frog of Calaveras County," is held annually to revive memories of California's gold rush days, when frog-jumping was a popular pastime among the miners and prospectors. The record jump of 13ft. 1in. was made by a frog named "Budweiser" some years ago.

Tooth troubles afflict monkeys and apes as well as human beings, it is revealed by Dr. Adolph H. Schultz, of Johns Hopkins University. Dr. Schultz found that teeth lost through disease are more common among some ape species than in some human races.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON VII.—February 17.—Peter Teaches Good Citizenship (Temperance Lesson).—I. Peter 2: 11-17; 4: 1-5. Golden Text—Love worketh no ill to his neighbor: love therefore is the fulfillment of the law.—Romans 13: 10.

The Lesson in its Setting

Time. — The date of the Epistles of Peter cannot be absolutely determined. It is commonly understood that his first Epistle was written, probably, in 60 A.D.

Place. — Some believe that the reference to Babylon on the Euphrates River, but it is more generally believed that it refers too the City of Rome.

"Beloved, I beseech you." He is not addressing all men, or even all so-called religious men, but those whom he describes in the preceding passage as "an elect race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a people for God's own possession." "As sojourners and pilgrims." The A. V. translates the first word as "stranger." It means, more literally, "one who lives in a place without the right of citizenship, a foreigner."

"Having your behavior seemly among the Gentiles." They were pilgrims among the Gentiles, citizens of another country, and one of the reasons why they were to abstain from these things was that their lives might bear true testimony to God who had made them a holy priesthood.

The words indicate the growth of a widespread feeling of dislike showing itself in calumny. So in Acts 28: 22 the disciples of Christ are described as 'a sect everywhere spoken against.'

"Be subject to every ordinance of man." The word translated "ordinance" is used ordinarily in many senses, e.g., of peopling a country, of founding a city, of setting up games, feasts, altar, etc. Here it apparently selected as the most comprehensive word available. It refers to all human institutions which man set up with the object of maintaining the world which God created." "For the Lord's sake." "Not because the Lord ordains as Caeser, but because the Lord's life was one of obedience, because he himself showed respect to Pilate, and because he commanded his people to obey (Matt. 22 : 21)."—Charles Bigg. Also, no doubt, so as not to bring dishonor on the name of Christ. "Whether to the king, as supreme." The Roman Emperor.

'Or unto governors, as sent by him' "St. Paul calls the magistrate a 'minister of God' (Rom. 13 : 4): St. Peter does not go so far as this. What he says is that the magistrate is to be obeyed because Caeser sends him; and that Caeser, through a human institution, is to be obeyed, because order is God's will."—For vengeance on evil-doers." Punishment of those who break the law and violate rights of others was never intended to be measured and inflicted by mere individuals, each acting independently, but by the state as a unit, and through proper appointed officers. "And praise to them that do well."

"For so is the will of God." "They might demand why they should go on in patient well-doing amid the detraction and ignorant opposition of foolish men; but he forecloses every objection, by saying, "So is the will of God." "That by well-doing ye should put to silence the ignorance of foolish men." When men act as though they knew the truth concerning that of which, in reality, they are ignorant, they are then fools.

"As free, and not using your freedom." Believers are free (by redemption in Christ) from: (1) the power of sin (John 8 : 36); Rom. 6 : 18-22) (2) the law of sin and death (Rom. 8 : 2); (3) the law (Gal. 5 : 12). "For a cloak of wickedness." Similarly, the Apostle Paul: "use not your freedom for living in iniquity. "But as bondservants of God." On the one hand, they were freedmen, in Christ; but that very relationship made them the slaves of God.

"Honor all men." "The fact that there were in every man traces of the image of God after which he had been created, and infinite undeveloped capacities might issue in the restoration of that image to its original brightness, was in itself a reason for treating all, even the vilest and most degraded, with some measure of respect.

"Love the brotherhood." "There is, as far as it appears, no case where a fellow-man, as man, is called 'a brother' in the New Testament.

"Fear God." (cf. 1 : 17). "Love persuades a man purely for the goodness and loveliness of God, to fear to offend him, though there were no interest at all in it of a man's own personal misery or happiness."

"Honor the king." These last two admonitions are found in close relation, though with a slightly varying emphasis, in Prov. 24 : 21.

"Forasmuch then as Christ suffered in the flesh." The phrase, of course refers to Christ's death on the cross. "Arm ye yourselves with the same mind." "Since Christ suffered according to the flesh." "For he that hath suffered in the flesh." When ease opposes duty, the putting down of the fascinating enemy necessitates suffering." "Hath ceased from sin." The flash may have it desires; but the cleansed heart will refuse to yield to them."

"That ye no longer should live the rest of your time in the flesh to the lusts of men." "Don't let the flesh constitute the entire circle of your movements!

"For the time past may suffice to have wrought the desire of the Gentiles." "The language is that of grave irony. Enough time, and more than enough, had been already given to the world. Was it not well to give some time now to God?

"And to have walked in lasciviousness." To what permitted wickedness this word directly refers appears as it is defined by the Greek scholar, the late J. H. Thayer — "wanton (acts or) manners, as filthy words, indecent bodily movements," etc "Lustus." Same word as above (2 : 11). "Winebiddings." Only here in the New Testament, but in Greek translation of Deut. 21 : 20, and Isa. 56 : 12. "Commonly it is used for a debauch, an extravagant indulgence in potations long drawn out, such as may induce permanent mischiefs on the body." "Revelling." Here and Rom. 13 : 12; Gal. 5 : 21. "In the Greek writers properly a nocturnal and riotous procession of half-drunken and frolicsome fellows." "Carousings." Drinking bouts, banquets, "not of necessity excessive (Gen. 19 : 3; 2 Samuel 3 : 20; Esther 6 : 14), "And abominable idolatries." The word translated "abominable" means forbidden by law, "the natural law of reason and conscience,".

"Wherein they think it strange that ye run not with them." The verb here translated "run" expresses the blind haste of the wicked man who rushes headlong on his pleasure."

"Into the same excess of riot." It is the word used to describe the life of the prodigal son, who wasted his substance in "riotous" living (Luke 15 : 13). "Speaking evil of you." literally blaspheming you.

"Who shall give account to him that is ready to judge the living and the dead." The Judge is the Lord Jesus Christ. The judgment of men shrivels into insignificance in the light of a judgment to come when our actions will be weighed by the holy Son of man himself, and a verdict rendered that will abide for all eternity.

Worth Knowing

ALL OVER THE WORLD strange finds are being made almost daily.

For many centuries people believed that Egypt was the oldest country in the world.

Now we know that Egypt is, comparatively speaking, a new country in spite of the fact that evidence proves that it was a civilized place ten thousand years ago.

CHINA'S HISTORY is so old and so important that the Japanese, always enemies of the Chinese, even the Japanese have many books devoted to Chinese history.

A great Japanese historian said only recently that he had spent twenty-five years studying Chinese history and had found it to be the most wonderful of all histories.

ANCIENT INDIA counts as new anything that is not ten or twenty thousand years of age.

Thousands of years amount to very little among the Hindus. Their history goes back hundreds of thousands of years, back and back until it becomes so dim that historians can not trace it.

SOME DAY SOME MAN will make a long study of those and other books and the people of this earth will learn something new to them.

Now it is almost impossible to make a complete study because as the translator goes further into the past he comes upon changed words of which he knows nothing.

The language has passed with the passing of ages and what was once simple to read is now almost like a thousand sets of lettered blocks dumped into barrels.

Black Lingerie

Paris. — Black lingerie spells "it" in undergarments for spring, 1935 fashion showings indicate.

Newest night dresses, slips and chemises are fashioned of filmy black georgette bordered with black lace.

Other new lingerie colors are dove grey, baby blue and white as alternatives for the traditional pink.

Helene Yrande displayed glamorous night dresses of blue, green, grey and flesh satin fashioned with high empire waistlines and cape shoulder lines. Some have wrap-around satin skirts and jackets to convert them into cocktail frocks.

News And Information For The Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Time to Think of the Garden

The new seed catalogues are now out, and this is the time for farmers and gardeners to start planning the garden for the coming season. The average garden, if carefully planned, can be made to produce an abundance of cheap but healthful and nourishing food for summer use, as well as for storage for winter. Thd well manabed garden may be relied on to provide the farmer with up to 40 per cent. of his food requirements.

Many of the vegetable crops lend themselves to successional sowing, making it posible to extend their season considerably. It should be remembered that tender growing vegetables are superior to fully grown crops both for summer use and winter storage. Large size in vegetables is often an indication of coarseness and poor quality, with considerable waste.

Alfalfa for Poultry

Alfalfa in the green state has long been recognized as an ideal poultry feed when used in conjunction with the usual grains and mashes. It is used extensively as range or as cut green feed for birds in confinement during the spring, summer and fall months in most alfalfa-growing areas, but the value of the hay as a winter feed is not so generally known. So much of the year's success depends on the number and quality of chicks hatched each spring, that it is important to do all possible to increase the fertility and hatchability of the eggs and the livability of the chicks. Experiments have shown that 20 per cent. better fertility and 6.4 per cent. better hatchability of fertile eggs can be obtained from birds where alfalfa hay instead of straw is used as litter in the breeding pens. The alfalfa should be used as litter during the winter months preceding the breeding season and the same treatments given to males and females.

Clover and Grass Seed Market

Little change is reported in the seed situation in Eastern Ontario. Seed is continually moving from localities in the Ottawa Valley where available, and consists mainly of red clover and timothy. Only a small quantity of timothy seed remains to be marketed, and most of this is held by growers for local sale. Timothy seed prices remain firm at 14c to 16c per pound. Red clover seed growers are now being paid 19c to 21c per pound, basis No. 1 grade. Alfalfa seed is moving rather slowly on account of that remaining for sale being mostly of poor quality. It is expected, however, that in the counties of Russell and Carleton, where most of the present crop was grown, it will find a ready local market later in the season. No. 1 alfalfa is being bought at 18c per pound.

In southwestern Ontario, the 1934 crop of clover and grass seeds was unusually small and practically sold out more than a month ago. That remaining is largely of the poorer qualities and small lots held for local sale. Prices being paid growers, basis No. 1 grade, range from 18c to 23c for red clover; 18c to 20c for alfalfa; 20c to 28c for alsike; 5c to 6½c for sweet clover; 17c to 18c for timothy and 16c to 20c for Canada blue grass.

The Necessity for Farm Accounting

This year far more farmers than ever before are making an early detailed list of the items of their farm business to see what they own and what they owe; in short, to find out how they stand as they wind up one farming year and begin another. Some record of receipts and expenses, together with an inventory (a list with values of live stock, feed, implements, and other assets on hand) is really necessary. The record not only shows the farmer what he is actually worth and whether or not he is getting ahead, but also gives him a basis for a statement for obtaining bank credit. Further, the record includes a list of property for collecting fire insurance and settling estates, as well as a guide for the coming year's financial plans.

A record of each department of the farm business should be kept, because it is the only way of finding out which part of the farming pays and which does not.

The Index Number

The level of prices of farm products is a matter of great importance to the people of Canada. It affects the purchasing power of the largest single group of the population, and thereby limits the market for large quantities of industrial goods. In comparing prices over a period of time, it is rather difficult to establish exact relationships. Therefore, statisticians use a device known as an index number. This number represents the relative position of prices at a given time, as compared with those in a period when conditions were fairly stable, and prices of the different groups of commodities occupied a reasonably satisfactory relationship. For instance, prices in the year 1926 have been used by many statisticians as a period on which to base the comparisons with other years. In 1929 the index of field crops (grain and vegetable products) was 94, compared with 100in 1926. In 1932 the index had dropped to 41 and to 35 in January, 1933. During 1933, however, the index rose to 46, and in 1934 ranged between 48 and 61.

Barley Crop Important

Barley has competed strongly with wheat as a revenue producer on Ontario farms. This grain holds an important place, for several reasons. It is a comparatively high yielder. Experiments show that mixed with early oats, returns from the combination exceed highest yields obtainable from either grain separately. Also, in analyses, it is shown that in carbohydrates and protein, barley compares very favorably with field corn. Barley is also the north country corn. In northern counties, where early frosts render the growing season too short for the production of large crops of corn, barley is found to be an excellent substitute. It grows rapidly and is the shalowest rooted of all the cereals. Because of these two points, barley does best of all cereals on ground which is insufficiently drained and hence is cold and backward in spring. In recent experiments by the Department of Chemistry, O.A.C., it was noted that the highest yields of barley were realized where it followed a root crop. The department's experiments with frtilizer on barley, showing a big increase in yield where fertilizers were used, are important in view of the fact that this province last year sowed 508,000 acres of barley.

Potatoes for Feed

The feeding of potatoes to live stock provides a very satisfactory outlet for the lower grades of the crop. Second-grade potatoes may be used as a feed for hogs and also in limited amounts for cattle, sheep and horses as a substitute for grain. For pigs, the potatoes should be boiled, mixed with the grain, and fed with other concentrates. A protein supplement needs to be fed with this. Experiments indicate that it takes about 420 pounds of potatoes, fed after cooking, to equal 100 pounds of corn or barley. For the best resutls in swine feeding, the proportion of potatoes in the ration should not be greater than four pounds to one of concentrates. Potatoes may furnish half of the dry matter in the ration for cattle and sheep, and one-fourth for horses. Dairy cows should not receive more than about 35 pounds per day as larger amounts may impair the quality of butter produced. For fattening sheep, from two to three pounds daily should be fed with the grain. For cattle and sheep feeding, the potatoes should be chopped and mixed with the grain, and should be raw. They may be fed raw to hogs, particularly brood sows if time and labor cannot be spared for cooking.

MISS PAULINE BARCLAY

The village of Iroquois and surrounding community was deeply grieved on Tuesday, to learn that one of their most popular young girls, in the person of Pauline Barclay, had passed away, after an illness of a month. Stricken a month ago, she was given every care by loving parents and her sister, Miss Marion, trained nurse of New York, and just when reports began to look favorable for her recovery, new complications set in.

The deceased, who was in her 27th year, was a valued employe of the Bell Telephone Co., and was one of the best operators on the switchboard in Iroquois for years. She took an active interest in the United Church Sunday School, and all young people's activities. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Barclay, and was born at Iroquois, where she also received her education. Possessed of an attractive personality, she enjoyed a wide circle of friends, who mourn her loss.

A large crowd of friends gathered for the funeral, which was held at the home of her parents on Thursday. The service was conducted by Rev. T. Knowles. Friends expressed their highest esteem by great banks of flowers which filled the room in which the casket lay. Among those present from a distance were Mr. Duval of Ogdensburg, W.D. Earle of Brockville, manager of the eastern division of the Bell Telephone, and M. Burns of Brockville. The whole staff of the Iroquois exchange also attended in a body.

Mourning her loss are her parents, and one sister, Marion, of New York.

The remains were placed in the vault at Point Iroquois, for interment in the spring.

Fire, presumably from overheated stove pipes, destroyed a log building on the farm of Mr. Weldon Beckstead on the main travelled highway between Chesterville and Williamsburg. The building housed two horses and a number of pigs, and a stove had been installed during the winter months. Before retiring on Tuesday night, Mr. Beckstead had built a fire, and about 10.30 o'clock the neighbours discovered the fire, but it had made much headway, and was beyond control. The building was a complete loss, along with the horses and pigs and a quantity of feed. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

Y. P. LEAGUE

The business meeting for the month of February of the young people of Luther League, held in the basement, was a great success. A number of members and a few visitors were present. The young people have joined in reading a chapter of the Bible every day. Rev. Conmiller explained more clearly to us the book of St. Matthew, which had been covered for the month's work, which was quite interesting. Next month will be the book of St. Mark.

It was moved and seconded that a game be purchased to play in basement, for amusement at our meetings.

The meeting was adjourned. Then came the program, which consisted of two solos by Miss Vivian Barclay, two songs by Mr. Rex Casselman and Howard Whitteker, accompanied with guitar; Mr. Whistler, a visitor, gave a short sketch of Shakespeare. The program was enjoyed by all.

Refreshments were then served, and the meeting closed with prayer by the Pastor.

Arthur J. Henry called in town on Friday.

Winter's worst has come and gone if the traditional groundhog's shadow survey can be accepted as a true harbinger. Saturday was groundhog day, and no matter what hour of the day he deserted his lair, it would have been impossible for him to see his shadow, for the sun did not expose its face all day. NEWSPAPERS BEST.

Newspapers provide the best way for clothing merchants to advertise their clothes to the public. This has been agreed by the National Association of Retail Clothiers assembled in convention in Chicago. They have decided unanimously on an advertising program for the coming year which is scheduled to spend by far the bulk of the total appropriation on newspaper advertising.

The clothing men know from long experience that the buying public looks to the newspapers for the announcements of merchants and manufacturers. And the people read the advertisements, have a chance to read them a second or third time if they wish and to discuss them. Then they act and buy. That's why the clothiers are making sure they will do the bulk of their advertising in the columns of the newspapers. — Border Cities Star.

EIGHTH GIFT OF BUFFALO

The Canadian Government has given a gift of four buffalo from the herd at Wainwright Park in Poland. Poland is the eighth country to receive shipments of buffalo from Canada as previous shipments have been presented to South Africa, New Zealand, England, Australia, France and Belgium.—London Free Press.

RESPECT.

A Scot was walking with a Roman Catholic friend in London. On passing Westminster Cathedral his friend raised his hat, and the Scotsman followed suit.

At this his friend said: "You're getting very pious, raising your hat as you pass the cathedral."

"Was that the cathedral?" the Scot replied. "I thought it was the Bank of England."—London Observer.

STUDY OF PEACE.

Princeton University has just now made a change in its curriculum which is causing wide comment.

Hitherto it has been giving courses on the art of war which were given in conjunction with the Reserve Officers Training Corps. In the place of one of these courses on the operation of an artillery battery, instruction will be given on the agencies for the promotion of peace. Instead of another course on communication systems and gun firing will be one on civil and military law.

The subject was threshed out by the university together with the Reserve Officers' Training Corps and this action taken as a result. Which, we take it, does not mean that the Training Corps is done away with, but it does mean that the university is giving serious study to the agencies which make for peace. Which is a step up.—Halifax Chronicle.

PLATINUM PRODUCTION.

With continued prosperity in the nickel industry, Canada is capable of supplying the major part of the world demand for platinum and its allied metals, according to the Department of Mines, Ottawa. Cost of production in Canada of platinum and related metals is presently well below that of most producing countries. —Brandon Sun.

ACCIDENTS ARE CAUSED

The stubborn fact is that accidents do not happen. If cars are standing still they do no damage. It is when people get in and start to make them go that things happen, and the people in them are responsible. The safety of the roads and highways is not being guarded when we find the judiciary voicing the complaint that juries are freeing men who should not be made free.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

THE FLEA AND THE EMPIRE

A flea was the grand-daddy of the British Empire, we are told by Dr. Thomas W. M. Cameron. From his institute of parasitology at Macdonald College, Quebec, he tells a plausible story. The flea, he says, caused the Black Death in Europe. This ruined English agriculture and shifted into sheep growing. This made wool and broadcloth England's staple products and led to the necessity of finding foreign markets. This in turn led to the founding of the overseas empire.—Winnipeg Tribune.

OBVIOUSLY

As the crowded London bus came to a standstill, a stout, middle-aged man descended the stairs, carrying a small girl, obviously his daughter.

Tenderly placing his burden on the curb, he ascended the stairs again and shortly returned carrying a tiny dog. Placing the dog beside the child, he returned upstairs and again descended, bearing a second child, which he stood beside the first. Once more he ascended the stairs and again returned, carrying a third youngster.

These evolutions were eagerly observed by a passenger seated inside the bus, who, as father proceeded to dismount with his third offspring, exclaimed in a loud stage whisper:

"Lumme, 'e must have a nest up there!"—Vancouver Province.

EDDIE CANTOR TELLS ENGLAND

Eddie Cantor receives, or is said to receive some $10,000 for a brief radio broadcast in the United States, and so perhaps it was not unnatural that when he spoke recently over a British Broadcasting station, he expressed a decided preference for the system of his own country. His statement started a controversy that has been filling the letter columns of the Manchester Guardian, and which the Guardian summarizes in these words:

"So far there has appeared .... no sign of envy on the part of British listeners ..... The general feeling expressed on this side is that no swelling of revenue would compensate for the inescapable horrors of wireless advertisements."

The case for supporting broadcasting by the revenues from advertising, as made by Mr. Cantor, is that the competitive basis on which it rests evolves the "talent" that the radio needs—talent such as Mr. Cantor—and that the advertising brings in the money to pay such entertainers on a lavish scale. But British listeners would not submit to the invasion of their homes by the commercialism that dominates the wireless in the United States — and of which Canadian radio is not entirely free. — Ottawa Journal.

WOMEN IN PUBLIC LIFE

Ontario has now its first woman J.P. as well as its first woman K.C. while at Ottawa there is one woman in the Commons and one in the Senate. The entry of women into the fields of law and legislation has been singularly small.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

HERE'S A SUGGESTION.

A letter in a woman's paper suggests a Government department whose job it would be to create joy and happiness for one and all. A sort of Ministry of Transports, as it were.—Regina Leader-Post.

COUNTRY DOCTORS

Dr. Dafoe has undoubtedly drawn world-wide attention to the fact that the humble rural or small town practitioner hitherto unhonored and unsung, is, after all, one of the mainstays of the human race and a man of the moment, whether he comes through with quints or prescribes for chickenpox.—Border Cities Star.

CHANGING TIMES

The once-famous Police Gazette is resuming publication. It went into bankruptcy because it became effminate. Now it is to be edited by a woman.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

OUTSTANDING.

The Ottawa Journal, which has entered upon its fiftieth year of publication, is one of Canada's outstanding papers.

THE EMPIRE

THOMSON OR MACTAVISH

The kilt is becoming fashionable among Edinburgh town councillors, and I'm told not to be surprised if the Lord Provost is seen in one before long. As a Thomson, he is entitled to wear the MacTavish tartan. "Thomas" was, as early as the fifteenth century, written as 'Tomas' of "Tamas," and Thomson is a translation of "MacTomas," which has another rendering in MacTavish, Sir William Thomson is of the northern branch. The MacTomases of Argyl are a sept of the Campbells. —Glasgow Bulletin.

LIVING ARTISTS OR DEAD MASTERS

A curious correspondence has arisen in the English Press out of the display of the wedding presents which were sent to the Duke and Duchess of Kent. Criticism has been made of the number of valuable antiques which were among the gifts, and it is urged that public bodies like the Royal Academy and the City Companies should have tried rather to benefit present-day artists and designers.—Belfast Telegraph.

"DIE WAYS" NOT HIGHWAYS.

A big inquiry into the causes of motoring accidents is promised. It seems a little late. There will be accidents on the roads till their users acquire a new mentality. They will not do that till (1) We re-design our highways as single tracks. (2) We keep our homes well away from them. (3) We re-design our pavements to stop people stepping off them. (4) We devise a uniform lighting system to avoid the present jigsaws of light and blackness. (5) We substitute a national control for the whims of a hundred local authorities. —London Sunday Express.

WOMEN IN CRIME.

Women criminals in England and Wales have increased by 10 per cent in four years. Last year there were 6,779 convictions. It is by pure coincidence that the figures appear at the same time as the announcement that in Britain 18,500,000 of us go to the pictures every week, which means that one in every three of us is a film fan. But only one in several thousands of us lands in gaol in a whole lifetime, much less once a week. Every now and then a magistrate blames the films for crime. He is usually a very old magistrate who never goes to the pictures. When he was a boy they blamed penny dreadfuls! — Manchester Sunday Chronicle.

Position of Modern Woman Due Largely to Typewriter

Washington — The stenographer's favorite instrument, the typewriter, was described in an official report as an emancipator of women.

"The invention and development of the typewriter has opened more jobs to women than any other single machine, said a review by the women's bureau of its first extensive study of feminine white collar workers.

The pamphlet added that approximately one out of every eight women office workers in the seven cities studied operated a machine having some sort of a key board.

"In the seventies and eighties, the amanuensis turned out stilted and formal letters in a Spencerian hand and the word stenographer was almost unknown," the report said. "In this survey, the stenographic group formed about one-third of all office workers."

However, mechancial devices which have followed the typewriter were said to have resulted in reducing numbers on certain types of work.

The bureau studied some 43,000 of the 2,000,000 women at work in offices—a number larger than those employed in industry, in stores, or in any other occupation except domestic and personal service.

This cross-section sampling was done in advertising, banking, insurance, investment, mail order, publishing, and public utilities offices in New York, Hartford, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Chicago, Des Moines, and St. Louis, on salary, hours, promotion chances, and training required.

"More women were at work as general clerks than at any other job in the offices included in the survey," the report said. "While numerically the largest group, general clerks received a monthly median salary of only $90—a lower median than that received by any other class of employees except file clerks whose median was $81, tabulating or key punchers whose median was $89, and a smaller number of messengers whose median was $55. Stenographers, the second largest occupation group, received a higher median salary—$114.

"In Chicago, the only city where data on the salaries of men officers were secured women were found for the most part to earn considerably less than the men even for the same jobs.

"Negro women office workers included in the study earned much lower salaries than those of white women."

Lady Ashley and Senior Fairbanks May Be Married

Rome. — Douglas Fairbanks and Lady Ashley, arriving in Rome recently smiling and happy, steadfastly refused to discuss the possibility of their marriage.

"I have nothing to say on that subject," said Fairbanks when asked whether he contemplated being married in Rome. "That is my own business."

The American film actor said he was planning a long cruise on a yacht being prepared in the United States.

When asked whether Lady Ashley would accompany him on the voyage, he replied that that, too, was his business.

His attention was called to a remark by a newspaper correspondent that whenever an important event was about to happen in Faribanks' life, he came to Rome where his tailor lives and had a dozen suits made.

Fairbanks merely lauhed and asked how the weather had been.

Lady Ashley, who left the train without a hat, her blond hair cascading to her shoulders, and dressed in a luxurious fur coat, told those who approached her with questions about the rumored wedding. I never talk to newspapermen. I have nothing to say about that."

Both Fairbanks and Lady Ashley kept far apart as they walked along the station platform to avoid being photographed together.

Weather Map

Shows Eight Different Kinds of Air — Will Assist Aviators.

New York. — A new kind of weather map, showing eight kinds of air over the United States, was presented to aviation leaders at the annual meeting of the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences.

The eight, discovered largely by airplane, are all kinds that exist in North America. They contain, and spill, all the types of weather troubles known, including those on which forecasters go wrong.

The map is a step in "air-masses" analysis, the new system of forecasting being inaugurated by the U. S. Weather Bureau. It was developed by Dr. Irving Krick of the California Institute of Techology.

No. 1 air is polar-continental. It comes down from Canada; is cold, dry and "stable." It may be chilly but contains few storms.

No. 2 is polar-Pacific, cold, fairly moist, sometimes showery and squally. There is polar-Atlantic, a twin of No. 2, but not quite as nasty in disposition.

Four is polar-basin. That is something they have between the Rockies and the Pacific Coast. It's fairly warm and the producer of nice weather.

Five is tropical-Pacific. This is warm and moist, but surprisingly, is usually "stable," or not stormy, because its heat has been cooled by passing over the waters of the Pacific.

Six is tropical Gulf and seven tropical-Atlantic. These two are twins in troublemaking. Both are very warm and moist.

Eight is tropical-continental — a trouble-maker for flying. It appears over northern Mexico and the southwestern tier of American states. It is hot and too dry for rain or clouds but its "instability" fills flying air with "bumps."

Ultra Short Radio Waves Give Interesting Results in U.S. Test

New York — New facts about ultra-short radio waves, showing that they spread like soft twilight in every direction, was reported to the American Institute of Electrical Engineers recently.

These short waves were sprayed all over Boston from an antenna 130 feet above the ground. A receiving set on a truck travelled all over the city and a surrounding area of about 55 square miles.

Never once did the truck completely lose the little waves. There were deep radio shadows in them in spots, as down behind buildings and under bridges. Some streets were brighter than others with these radio waves.

The Boston experiments strengthen a growing belief that they have powers of reflection that may make them very useful. In Boston seemingly the little waves splashed and reflected from all sorts of surfaces.

In spots completely hidden from the sending antenna, the waves seemed to be arriving by reflection from numerous other directions.

Over salt water the rays were usually bright and strong. After passing the water they lost this extra strength.

Under one bridge, as if under a deep shadow, the signal strength feel sharply. It rose again on each side of the bridge.

Overhead trolley wires cast deep radio shadows, apparently interfering with the short waves in all directions.

DAVID COPPERFIELD — Weekly Serial

Based on the Novel by CHARLES DICKENS

At Yarmouth that night there is a terrible storm. Outside the pounding breakers a ship-wrecked vessel is tossing. Before David can reach him, Ham is out in the sea in a breeches buoy, trying to save the lone survivor. But he is drowned when the ship goes down. The passenger is washed up, dead. It is Steerforth!

Soon there is more trouble. The frail Dora dies and David goes abroad to forget. A year later he returns, worried about the Wickfields. Then, with the aid of Micawber, he exposes Heep as a cheat and a forger, who had cunningly made Wickfield believe that he, himself, was a thief. This was the hold he had had on him.

In return for his unselfish act, David gives Micawber a sum of money so that he and his family can set sail for Australia, where they hope to find the good fortune that always seems to be just around the corner. Everyone is at the boat to see them off and, amid loud cheers, it slowly eases away from the dock.

That afternoon, Aunt Betsey beckons to Mr. Dick and points out the window to the cliffs where David and Agnes watch the sunset, then start talking to each other earnestly. Aunt Betsey is eaten up by curiosity. What are they saying? It looks like the beginning of a new life and new happiness for David and his childhood sweetheart.

NOT A RHEUMATIC PAIN FOR 4 YEARS

70-Year-Old Man Praises Kruschen

A man who once suffered severely from rheumatism writes:—

"For a long time I suffered with rheumatism, and at one time was laid up for about nine weeks. About five years ago I was advised to try Kruschen. I did so, and have continued using them ever since. Kruschen did the trick, as I have not had a rheumatic pain for over four years. I am nearly 70 years of age, and feeling fine, and always able for my day's work—thanks to Kruschen."—A. S.

Kruschen dissolves away those needle-pointed crystals of uric acid which are the cause of all rheumatic troubles. It will also flush these dissolved crystals clean out of the system. Then if you keep up "the little daily dose," excess uric acid will never form again.

Loses Trade

Germany's Balance Drops 380 Millions In One Year

Berl[illegible] — Germany's foreign trade balance dropped by $380,700,000 within the past year, it was disclosed recently.

While the 1933 foreign trade balance was favorable by $267,200,000, the balance for 1934 was unfavorable by $113,500,000. Increased imports of raw materials and cattle sent the total of 1934 imports to $1,780,000,000, an increase of $98,700,000 over the previous year.

Germany sent out goods valued at $1,666,000,000, a decline of $282,000,000 from 1933, attributed partly to decreased prices. Food exports declined one-third while the quantity of foods brought in increased, although its total value was smaller.

Why at 40 You Think You're "GROWING OLD"

It's Frequently Just an "Idea." Not "Old Age." And According to Scientists, May be Something No More Alarming Than A Touch Of Acid Stomach

At about 40, many people think they're "growing old." They're tired a lot. Have headaches. Stomach upsets. Dizziness. Nausea.

Well, scientists say the cause, in a great many cases, is merely an acid condition of the stomach. The thing to do is simply to neutralize the excess stomach acidity.

When you have one of these acid stomach upsets, all you do is take Phillips' Milk of Magnesia after meals and before going to bed.

Try this. You'll feel like another person! Take either the familiar liquid "PHILLIPS' ", or the convenient new Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets. Made in Canada.

Also in Tablet Form:

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at all drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Work of Country Doctors

(An Editorial from Toronto Star)

In medicine and surgery the man who counts is the man who is not satisfied with what he is told. He must verify, keeping his eyes open the while. He must refuse to believe that his memory is all he needs — that knowledge has been ascertained, that he can be taught and will thus know.

"The man," said Henry Ford recently, "who is going to reorganize all our lives is probably right now at work in a backyard shop, fiddling way with an idea that everybody tells him is foolish."

At the present time Ontario has three physicians or surgeons in general practice in rural parts who ar rest the attention of the world. These three men were and are local doctors doing their work in small communities.

The first to be named is necessarily the eldest, Dr. Abram Groves of Fergus, who was the first surgeon in the world to save a human life by removing the appendix. The first appendectomy operation was performed by this young Fergus doctor in 1833. Here was a man off by himself, thinking. He was, as Henry Ford would put it, in a backyard shop, fiddling with an idea that everybody said was foolish. Yet he came out with a great result. There is, right now, a book by Dr. Groves of Fergus, on sale in all the bookstores entitled "All In the Day's Work," and doctors and surgeons the world over will read it — we should all read it. It is published by MacMillans.

Another Ontario doctor who has arrested world attention is Dr. Locke, of Williamsburg, to whom patients come from two hemispheres so that he may manipulate their feet, twist their toes, loosen their cords and muscles, free the stagnant marrow in their bones and adjust their nervous systems. All this sounds irregular to physicians who were not taught this sort of thing at school. But without any question or room for dispute Dr. Locke is making the lame to walk and the bent and crippled to stand erect and be glad.

The third country doctor in the province who arrests world attention is Dr. Dafoe, of Callander, who in going about his local practice was suddenly confronted by the Dionne quintuplets and proceeded to handle the case to the admiration of physicians all over the world. Dr. Dafoe went to New York recently as the guest of Johns Hopkins, where he addressed an audience of physicians, after which he spoke at a public meeting in Carnegie Hall. He has not trained himself for this — he trained himself to the task of being a general practioner in a rural community. And he has succeeded.

Dr. Koch, the German, who identified and isolated the tuberculosis germ, was a country physician with a practice so small that he had time on his hands. He got interested in microscopy and, being a large, stout, young man, was locally accused of being lazy because he spent so much of his time fooling around with microscope and test tubes. Yet he was chasing an idea and he caught it and did much to deliver the world from a great evil.

Dr. Beaumont, a rural physician in the province of Quebec, nearly a century ago, found a patient on his hands whose case puzzled him. He performed an operation and was so interested in what was revealed of the man's digestive processes that he put a piece of glass in the man's side while he was in bed so that he could daily study the case and make notes. Off and on over a period of ten years he kept this up and then wrote a book on the digestive processes of the human body which is even yet a basic work on the subject.

The country doctor, relying upon his own diagnosis, jogging along in his buggy over bad roads, had time to think, reason, contemplate the whole range of things. The doctor today, scooting along in his motor car over cement roads, has not the chance to do this open-air thinking, but he gets more swiftly back to his office and ought to have more time for indoor thought—if it is as fruitful.

Code of a Family Rules the Mitsuis

(Winnipeg Tribune)

In the Occident the name of Rothschild is one that by over a century of common consent, represents economic power and influence.

Today, along with the sharper projection of Japan's progressive intrests into Western and world affairs, the name of Mitsui figures largely as the dominating influence in the economic set-up of the leading power of the Orient.

Long before entering into financial enterprises in 1673, over three hundred years ago, the Mitsuis of the seventh century were established among the warrior aristocracy of Japan.

Hacherobei Mitsui came to the front as the founder of the business house at the latter date. The great sign of his business establishment still exists, reading, CASH PAYMENT AND A SINGLE PRICE.

Each of the eleven Mitsui families of today are under an identical code, bound to it by formal written pledges, unchanged in the past 35 years. Then the older rules of 1876 were drawn up anew but practically the same in principle.

* * *

These eleven separate Mitsui families of today occupy fields of banking, trade, mining, shipping, shipbuilding, insurance, trusts, warehousing, mining, manufacturing and brewing. They all trace their ancestry back to that seventh-century warrior, to the seventeenth-century tradesman and to a good many other celebrities.

They constitute by war the largest organization of its sort in the world and their world operations are spreading with the expansion of Japan's aggressive methods in world-wide trade and rommerce.

Examination of the code, as published in a recently issued book at Tokio, written by one of the family. Mitsuia Gomei Kaisha, gives an indication how seriously the House of Mitsui takes its obligations. Here are outstanding pledges:

Not to quarrel with relatives.

Not to over expand.

To observe thrift and avoid all luxury.

Not to retire from active business too early (the recent head of the house quite active work in 1933 at the age of 77).

To marry only on advice of the family council.

To employ able subordinates, and listen to them.

To make executives only of those who know how to do subordinates' work.

To sacrifice today, in order to avert a larger loss tomorrow.

To worship the gods, revere the Emperor, love one's country and do one's duty as a citizen.

In the days when Japan was changing from the old order to the more modern system not as other money lenders were the Mitsuis. They did not hitch their wagon to the local daimyos, (feudal lords) making a lot of money when the daimyos prospered but losing it all when the daimyos repudiated their debts. The businesslike Mitsuis confined their efforts to commercial loans, forfeiting some of the easy money and also escaping the losses. In 1876. And again in 1900, when the institution was reorganized on thoroughly up-to-date models, there was little need of change.

Long before western merchant princes were inventing advertising ideas these Japanese business men were practising them. Paper umbrellas, neatly marked with the store's advertising slogans, were given away to customers caught there in a sudden rain. Handbills were passed about the streets announcing the current bargains. Double entry bookkeeping was used by this ingenious family long before the West heard of it. Rest periods were set for employes, and a profit-sharing program arranged for the responsible workers.

Coal Miner Shouldn't Mend Clothes And Do "Sissy Work"

The State of Ohio agreed recently that maybe it would be all right for Ida Mae Stull to work in her own coal mine.

So Ida Mae, 34 years old and buxom, donned overalls, boots and carbide lamp and went back into the pits from which she was barred when state mine inspectors said loading coal was not for women.

"I've got to start making a living again," said Miss Stull. "I've been doing sissy work long enough. I've got no business baking cookies and mending clothes. 'm a coal mined.

"I've worked in the mines for 22 years. I've shot it down and I've hauled it out. I've cut props, dug entries and loaded coal. I can load five tons a day with pick and shovel, and that's as much as any man in the mines can do."

Miss Stull is part owner of a mine near here. She also keeps house for happy J. Wolfe, 65, who owns the other half of her mine and who was a former partner of her late father.

Ida Mae was barred from the mines last summer when a state mine inspector recalled a state law prohibiting women from performing "manual labor." She stormed and railed, but the state mine department was adamant—the law was the law.

Finally, however, Attorney-General John Bricker was asked for a ruling. He handed down an opinion that as long as Ida Mae owned the mine she could work in it.

HAUPTMANN FOUND GUILTY

Flemington, N.J., Feb. 13—Bruno Richard Hauptmann was condemned to the electric chair tonight by the jury that tried him for the kidnapping and murder of Baby Lindbergh.

White and unshaven, he tottered slightly as he stood between his guards and heard himself ordered to "die in the electric chair."

Edward J. Reilly, chief of defense counsel, announced an appeal would be taken. This may delay the execution.

The jury of eight men and four women spent 11 hours and 6 minutes in a bare, backroom of the old Court House where Hauptmann had been on trial since Jan. 2 before they reached their verdict.

"We find the defendant, Bruno Richard Hauptmann, guilty of murder in the first degre," said Foreman Charles Walton, Sr., in the deathly quiet of the littered, smoke-filled, courtroom.

The jury returned, and Hauptmann rose to face them.

"Gentlemen of the jury, have you reached your verdict?" the Clerk asked.

"We have," they chorused tremulously.

"Who shall speak for you?"

"The foreman".

"What is your verdict?"

Walton, the formean, his hands trembling greatly, unfolded a rustling paper.

"Guilty," Walton gulped, "guilty of murder in the first degree."

Justice Trenchard set the week of March 18 for the death of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

"Bruno Richard Hauptmann," Justice Trenchard said, "you have been convicted of murder in the first degree, and, according to law, you must suffer the penalty of death at the time fixed by the court."

BRIEF SKETCH OF BRUNO HAUPTMANN

Bruno Richard Hauptmann—age, 36. Birthplace, Kamenz, Saxony, Germany.

His education was slight—a few grades at ordinary schools, and then a trade school.

He went to work at the age of 12. At the age of 17, he became a soldier in the German army. He was gased.

Between the years 1918 and 1923 he found little work. He was in trouble with police on more than one occasion, and was convicted of a burglary. He walked out of a jail another time before he could be tried.

Hauptmann entered the United States illegally after two previous attempts had failed. This was in 1923.

He worked in the United States progressively as a dishwasher, mechanic, dyer's helper and finally at his trade of carpenter.

Married Anna Schoeffler, a waitress, October 10, 1925.

Arrested Sept. 19, 1934, after passing one of Lindbergh ransom notes.

Went to trial at Flemington, N.J., Jan. 2, 1935.

Convicted Feb. 13, and sentenced to die the week of March 18th.

SPORT FLASHES

While the roses last, toss a couple of bouquets to Joe Coleman, Iroquois goalie. Coleman, who has been the backbone of the Iroquois team for many years past, never showed to better advantage than on Wednesday night, when Iroquois engaged Cornwall Canadiens at the local arena. Although nicked for eight goals, Joe was the outstanding player on the ice. He played with scarcely any defence in front of him, and robbed the Canucks of many nice chances.

The biggest hockey deal in some time took place this week, when St. Louis Eagles sold to the Detroit Red Wings, the services of Syd. Howe, flashy wingman, and Scotty Bowman, rugged defence player, for $50,000 in cool cash. St. Loo also got Teddy Graham, late of Chicago, Maroons and Detroit to bind the bargain. Two days later, the Eagles parted with Frankie Finnigan, right winger, who went to Toronto Maple Leafs, in consideration of the sum of $8,000. These sales gave rise to a rumor that the Eagles were going to disband, which was promptly denied by those in authority.

Wilf Cude, young goalie of the Montreal Canadiens, got his first shut-out of the present season last night, when he helped the Canucks to a 2-0 victory over Maroons. The victory was all the more acceptable since it gave the Frenchmen possession of the Kennedy cup, emblematic of the profesisonal champ-ionship of the city of Montreal.

Frank Finnigan did not improve the scoring punch of the Toronto Maple Leafs last night, when the Maples lost to the New York Rangers 3-0. Said scoring punch was conspicuous only by its absence. The game was featured by a fight between aErl Siebert and Red Horner, Charlie Conacher horned into it also, apparently believing that Horner was unable to take care of himself.

The last scheduled hockey games in the Town League will take place soon. They will be: Maroons vs. Williamsburg, and Black Hawks vs. Maple Leafs. Watch for announcement.

Continuing their high-scoring, undefeated ways, Morrisburg-Waddington Sailors outpointed Commerce in the Ottawa City Intermediate Basketball League fixture, last week. The score was 57-34. This week, the Sailors not only collected their twelfth straight victory, but piled up a record score at the expense of Y.M.D., winning the league fixture by 139-7. From all appearances, Ottawa will be represented by one of the most powerful teams in history when the Canadian Intermediate basketball playdowns get under way.

Lou Gehrig, new Sultan of the Swat, arrived in New York this week from a world cruise, and almost immediately indicated that he would hold out on the New York Yankees for $35,000. Gehrig also announced that he thought the Yanks were a cinch to win the American League pennant this year. The training season opens in a few weeks.
