ANNUAL CARNIVAL, MORRISBURG ARENA

The Morrisburg Carnival, an annual event looked forward to by young and old, was held in the Morrisburg Arena on Saturday last, and was much enjoyed by the large number who attended. The display of fine costumes was a credit to all concerned, and exceeded in quantity as well as in quality, those of past years.

The prize-winners were as follows:

Door Prize, $6.00—Miss Muriel Weegar.

Best Lady's Costume—Miss Audrey Daley.

Girl's Costume—Lois Casselman.

Man's Costume—Eric Roy.

Boy's Costume—Wallie Guay.

Races.

Girls, 20 yrs. and under—1st, Marjory Duval; 2nd, Phyllis Deeks.

Girls, 15 yrs. and under—1st, Minnie Taylor; 2nd, Jean Duval.

Girls, 10 yrs. and under—1st, Patsy Duval; 2nd, Sarah Murdock.

Free-for-all—1st, Minnie Taylor; 2nd, Dorothy Bowman.

Boys, 20 and under—1st, Arthur Coligan; 2nd, Lawrence Snyder.

Boys, 15 and under—1st, Harold Myers; 2nd, John O'Malley.

Boys, 10 and under—1st, Gerald Crober; 2nd, Armand Pigeon.

Free-for-all—1st, Mike O'Malley; 2nd, Wallace Guay.

The judges' task was not an enviable one, as their decision in choosing the best among so many worthy costumes, was most difficult. Those handing down the decisions were: Mrs. D.A. Currie and Miss Marion Coligan.

Messrs Fred S. Broder and Chas. Crober acted as starters of the races.

MRS. CHARLES S. BAKER

There passed away suddenly at her home in East Williamsburg, on Friday March 8th, a highly respected resident, in the person of Mrs. Charles S. Baker, in her 64th year. Having resided in this locality all her life, her sudden passing came as a shock to the community.

Deceased will long be remembered, as she possessed a kind and cheerful disposition, and was loved by all with whom she came in contact. She was a daughter of the late Gordon and Francis Castleman.

She leaves to mourn her loss, besides her sorrowing husband, three brothers, namely Dr. Leonard A. Castleman of Santa Monica, Cal., John G. Castleman of Regina, Sask. and William B. Castleman of East Williamsburg; three nieces, Mrs. Chester Crawford, Dutton, Ont., Mrs. Walton Baker, East Williamsburg and Mrs. Andrew Burt, Wales, Ont.; three nephews, Mr. Gordon Castleman, Santa Monica, Cal., Mr. Clarence Castleman, Massena, N.Y. and Mr. Milton Castleman, East Williamsburg.

Floral tributes included: Wreath, Husband; wreath, Mr. and Mrs. Walton Baker, East Williamsburg; spray, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hackins, Dutton, Ont.; spray, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Crawford, Dutton, Ont.; spray, Mr. and Mrs. H. Sarginson, Aultsville, Ont.

The funeral service was held on Sunday afternoon in Whitney Memorial Church, and was largely attended. Her pastor, Rev. S.B. Holmes, officiated, taking for his text, St. Johns 14, first verse, "Let not your heart be troubled, ye believe in God." Hymns requested were "Nearer My God To Thee," "There Is No Night in Heaven," and "Peace, Perfect Peace".

Relatives from a distance who attended the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. Farnsworth, Norwood, N.Y.; Miss Annie Paige, Norwood, N.Y.; Mr. J.F. Paige, Potsdam, N.Y.; Mrs. Jack Pace, Summerstown, Ont; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Saddlemire, Williamsburg, Ont., and Mrs. Clara Alguire, Williamsburg, Ont.

Telegrams of sympathy were received from California; Regina, Sask and Dutton, Ont.

The pall bearers were Messrs John Casselman, E.A. VanAllen, Frank Casselman, Floyd Boucke, Frank Neadow and H. Sarginson.

The sympathy of the whole community is extended to the sorrowing husband in his sad bereavement.

CARD OF THANKS

I desire to thank my neighbours and other friends for their sympathy during my recent bereavement. To those who showed their last respects by attending the funeral, by sending floral offerings and loaning their cars, and to those who participated in the beautiful service, I hereby gratefully acknowledge their kindness.

CHAS. S. BAKER.

UNITED S. S. ENTERTAINS

The Eusebeia Class of the United Church, entertained the Ladies Bible Class to a social evening in the Sunday School rooms, on Thursday March 7th. After the business part of the programme, Miss Paddon welcomed the guests. The second chapter of the study book, "Christian Life in the Community," was taken by Mrs. Gorrell, followed by recreation, which consisted of physical culture, contests and games. Miss Fuller gave a very interesting talk on Morton's new book, "In the Steps of the Master".

Refreshments were served by the committee in charge, namely Mrs. Warring, Mrs. Mac. Robertson, Miss Fuller and Miss Paddon.

RACE TRACK FOR WILLIAMSBURG

The most enthusiastic meeting of Williamsburg was held on Tuesday night, 12th March. Not only was there a splendid attendance, but also solid support in favor of immediate organization, for the purpose of constructing a race-track and sports ground. The outline of business was presented by Mr. A.J. Casselman and Mr. L.C. McIntosh. Mr. J. Counsell was elected as chairman of the meeting, with Mr. Malcolm Beckstead as meeting secretary.

The title of the newly formed association is "Williamsburg Athletic and Agricultural Association," and this title will appear on the registered charter soon to be issued.

Dr. M.W. Locke was acclaimed president of theassociation, with Mr. H.W. Gilhooly as first vice-president. Mr. A.E. McGruer was elected as second vice-president, and Mr. J. Counsell as third vice-president. Mr. Malcolm Beckstead was the choice for secretary, and Mr. O.W. Graybiel treasurer.

Following are the elected directors: Messrs Hugh McIntosh, Willis Schell, L.C. McIntosh, A.J. Casselman, Ross Beckstead, Ed. Casselman, A. Froats, G. Strader, A. McGruer Jr., R. Loucks and C.W. Turner.

Associate directors: Messrs O.P. Becker, G. Buchan, J.D. Becksted, Strader McIntosh, J. Johnson, W.E. Trickey, Claude Casselman, Ken Pitt, Henry Merkley, C. Dewland, Bill Lane, Stan. McIntosh, R.F. Norval, C.T. Brown, J.E. Barclay, Lorne McIntosh, Frank Milligan, Alf. A. Casselman, Dr. Clark, G.K. Casselman and Jas. Macdonald.

The annual fees were decided upon at: $25.00, life membership; $5.00, honorary membership; $2.00, local membership; $1.00, non-resident membership. Tickets will soon be on sale.

It was decided to lease, for a term of five years, a convenient and suitable piece of ground from Mr. Hugh McIntosh, and this will be properly surveyed by an engineer, so that the Williamsburg track will rank with the best in the East. The work of construction will commence as soon as weather conditions allow, and every care will be taken in that work.

Mr. H.E. McGruer was elected as race secretary, to work with the directors, and he will get in touch with many track officials and stables to ensure the visit of best quality horses at the Williamsburg track.

Those attending the meeting contributed much ready cash, and fifteen honorary memberships were purchased. Great interest is being taken in this community effort, and a modern race track, with provision for other sports, is assured for Williamsburg.

MORRISBURG PLAINTIFF GETS $2,500 DAMAGES

Plaintiff in an alienation of affections action for damages, Clifford Lee Deeks, Morrisburg, was awarded $2,500 by Mr. Justice P. Kerwin, presiding at the spring assizes of the Supreme Court of Ontario, in session at Cornwall.

The jury debated the evidence for more than two hours before reaching a decision, and late Thursday afternoon, Justice Kerwin handed out his judgment. The jury found the defendant, Stanley Merkley, Brinston, guilty of alienation, but not of adultery, which was another charge against Merkley.

Deeks was represented by C.W. Bell, K.C., of Hamilton, and H. Beaumont, of Beaumont and Casselman, Prescott. J.A. Ritchie, K.C., of Ottawa, and J.L. Reid, Prescott, represented Merkley.

Deeks gave evidence on his own behalf and the other witnesses called for the plaintiff were his daughter, Doris Deeks, and Roy Burkholder. Ida Casselman, a former maid in the Deeks household, was the sole witness for the defence.

OUDERKIRK—MARSH

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. Marsh, Morrisburg, when their elder daughter, Mary Evelyn, was maried to Percy Edwin Ouderkirk, son of Mr. Harvey M. Ouderkirk and the late Mrs. Ouderkirk, Morrisburg. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Jenkins Burkholder.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of black velvet and sequins, with short velvet bolero jacket. She carried a bouquet of Talisman roses. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Harvey Grieve, who wore black velvet, and corsage of deep red roses. Mr. Wm. McGannon was groomsman. After the ceremony, a buffet luncheon was served, immediate relatives being present.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Ouderkirk left for Niagara Falls and Buffalo, the bride wearing a smart black and white ensemble, with sealskin coat. On their return, they will take up residence at the Windsor Hotel.

The TUDOR HOUSE

By MRS. STANLEY WRENCH

(Author of "Sing for the Moon" "Strange Lovers," etc).

SYNOPSIS

Michael Borde, 40, unmarried, born and bred in a Birmingham slum, is now a wealthy motor manufacturer One day he visits the countryside around his old home and meets Daphne Eden. He falls in love and proposes. Daphne accepts and introduces him to her father, who greets him with the words: "Get out of here you cur—you ruined my home — stole my wife — curse you."

Daphne's father dies and she disappears. Michael explains to her friend, Mrs. Gregory, that he was misrepresented. He buys the old Tudor House owned by the Hamill-Hardy's. Michael collides with a car driven by Diana Hamill-Hardy Mrs. Eden notices an announcement of the engagement of Michael and Diana.

Mrs. Gregory dies. Daphne hears from her solicitors.

* * *

"Listen," Diana cried eagerly. "We want you to come round tonight. There are several people I'd like you to meet. Now don't say you're tired or bored, or have some other engagement at this hour of the evening," she laughed in that hard shrill way which annoyed him. "I know you have no engagements outside business." Again that hard laugh. "I suppose if I told you I am dying to see you you'd believe me, Michael. Well, I really do want you to come. I'll explain later. Where? Oh, I'm staying with Lady Adderbury. She has the Mousse Sisters here. What, you don't know them? Oh, Michael Borde, your education badly needs attending to. Well, come and make their acquaintance. You won't be sorry."

She gave the address, he wrote it down, but as he set back the receiver, Michael Borde frowned. The Mousse Sisters, yes, of course, now he remembered. They were dancers or cabaret stars, or perhaps something to do with Hollywood. Women of that sort had never interested him. Gold-diggers, most of them. Then, remembering Lily Eden, he smiled. She, too, was a gold-digger, but in a different way, and somehow, he had been rather impressed by that last effort of hers. He'd be bound there was some trickery underneath this invitation tonight.

What would happen if he did not turn up after promising Diana he'd be there? He glanced at the clock, frowned, hesitated, thought of that important City meeting tomorrow, when he needed all his wits about him, for a biggish thing was going through at Trotenleigh's Board. He had begun to be slightly suspicious of Trottenleigh. He was by no means the fool he had imagined. That country gentleman air, that gentle suave manner, all disguised something which in another man he might have described as chicanery.

He went into the immaculate blue and white tiled bathroom, turned on the taps, changing hurriedly, and studied his face reflectively. Curious how lately he'd imagined that he was looking older, and he frowned. He saw his own eyes darken, and understood why that shadow came.

Yet two hours later Michael Borde had forgotten everything else but the fascination of winning money. It was so easy, and his luck was in.

The click of counters was the only sound that broke the silence, except now and again when a deep sigh broke from one or another until the game was through.

* * *

"GONE TO BITS."

"I can't understand it. The Chief isn't the same since he's got mixed with these financiers in the City. What's he want to mess about with these Corporations and Companies when he's got a ig affair of his own to manage? Things are wrong. Somehow I sense the Chief is worried over something, too."

Miss Crick looked worried as she laid a sheaf of papers beside her typewriter. The other girl glanced up.

"Well, his love affair doesn't seem to have done him much good," she remarked. "He's gone all to bits if you ask me, since he got engaged to that hunting woman."

"Love affair,' echoed Miss Criik disdainfully. "You don't get me to believe that's a live affair. I can't imagine the Chief in love. No, it is one of those arranged marriages, you bet. The Chief isn't one for sentiment. All the same, Florrie," she lowered her voice, "I don't like the look of things just lately."

"What do you mean?"

The two girls drew closer.

'All sorts of rumours floating around, and you know very well in the old days Multi-Motors was as safe as the Bank of England. Safe, I suppose it's safe today, but there isn't the same standing, and there isn't the same feeling inside as well as outside. Besides," her sense of loyalty came uppermost then, "I don't like the look of the Chief. He's either ill . . . or worried . . . or he's taken to drink."

The eyes of her companion opened very wide then.

"Well, you see more of him than I do," she remarked slowly. "But you're right, too. I've noticed a difference."

In his office Michael Borde stood looking at himself in the mirror, and adjusted his tie. He was tired, physically and mentally, and as he turned over his engagement pad the words leapt to meet him "A youthful outlook is an essential in business" and he had caught himself yawning.

He sat up with a jerk, straightened himself squared his shoulders with something of his old energy, then slumped again, and leaned back.

"What's wrong with me?" he cried impatiently. "I'm used to late nights. Look at the times when I used to drive every other night and turn up fresh as paint in the morning at the garage. I could do the work of any two men then."

He had prided himself all his life on his capacity, had laughed at other men who needed so many hours of sleep, had trained himself to do with less, and to live sparely when occasion arose. Now he remembered that at twenty, one can do blithely the things that come hard at forty-one, and he winced as he read the words again about a youthful outlook. Getting up, he studied himself in the glass.

A little baggy beneath the eyes, a few more wrinkles, a slightly drawn and more aged expression . . hang it all, a man couldn't expect to look thirty for ever. Besides, with all this anxiety . . . he thrust remembrance away, then turning swiftly, took up a portfolio of papers from the desk and laid it down again.

"Curse him. I wish I'd never seen Trottenleigh," he said. "What the hell am I to do now? I can't get out of it, and there's going to be the deuce of a mess unless we can find more money."

Money—money—money — at one time the word would never have caused him a moment's disturbance. He had made big money in his time. Multi-Motors was sound, but here a slight uneasiness attacked him as he recalled rivals in the field. At one time he would have smiled, confident in his ability to fight any combine, or keep level with any rivals, but lately for the first time in his life he had lost confidence in himself.

British Women Urged To Go After Big Legal Posts

A woman barrister told the conference of the National Union of Women Teachers at Malvern, N.S., that she recently applied for a recordership though she knew she would not get it.

The barrister, Miss Colwill, assistant standing counsel to the Union, made her statement during a discussion on equal rights for men and women.

If women were going to have greater freedom they must accept greater responsibility. "In the legal profession,' she continued "we hear that women will not apply for a judgeship because they are afraid. Now we hear that women are urging on their colleagues to apply for every vacancy in the legal profesion.

"We owe a debt of gratitude to the Lord Chancellor for his recent statement that there was no reason why a woman should not sit on the Woolsack," she added.

Women must overcome the idea that they were not in a position to accept big jobs and leadership. The spirit of friendliness and help shown by men in the legal and medical professions towards women entrants was spreading.

Engineers Told of New Metal

A new metal which combines the strength and hardness of alloy steels with exceptional resistance to corrosion and heat was announced last week to the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers by Dr. W. A. Mudge and Dr. Paul D. Merica, both of the International Nickel Company of Canada. The new metal is called aluminum-monel metal, due to the fact that it is much like monel metal with four per cent. aluminum added.

What Does Your Handwriting Reveal?

GEOFFREY ST. CLAIR

(Graphologist)

All Rights Reserved

(Editor's Note: — If you have any problem that is worrying you, or if you would like to find out the truth not only of your own character but that of your friend, take advantage of the author's invitation to you, given at the close of this article. He may be able to help you, as he has helped many others.)

I have recently had some very interesting letters from readers who would like to know something about different phases of handwriting analysis. I am therefore going to deal with a few of these inquiries in this article, because I am sure that they will interest a large number of my readers.

Is a signature alone sufficient for you to analyse my character from?

Well, if you went to a photographer to get your photograph taken, and he only 'snapped' your feet, you would wonder what was the matter with him, wouldn't you? This may seem a trifle ridiculous to use as an analogy to your question, but there is a resemblance. However, the question you ask is quite justifiable, because many people do believe that a signature alone will reveal their character. However, a signature alone is NOT sufficient to analyse the writer's character. Very often, a signature is more what the writer thinks he is, or what he would like to be, rather than what he actually is. Not frequently, indeed, you will notice that a person's signature is quite different from the remainder of the writing, and I have seen some of the most ordinary, conventional writing, revealing a very unassuming character, and then the signature has been a mass of whirls and twists. The reason for this is simply that the writer puts all his repressed desires to "be someone" into his signature. With the whole of the writing before one, it is not difficult to see the real character behind the writing, but signatures are so often deceptive that I do not like to analyse a person's character merely from a signature.

Does handwriting disclose health symptoms or ailments?

This is one of the phases of graphological work on which there is some considerable controversy. There are handwriting experts who claim to be able to discern ailments from handwriting, and I recall that the late Mr. Jacobs of Ottawa claimed that his personal researches had led him to make some astounding discoveries in the realm of health and sex from handwriting. He claimed that he could discover the sex of an unborn child from the handwriting of the mother.

And recently, I am informed, some French graphologists have discovered some remarkable data on this same phase. But there is by no means unanimity of opinion as to the extent to which handwriting is a reliable indication of health symptoms, and this phase of graphology is undergoing a good deal of research, and must remain indefinite for some time to come. However, some ailments do show very clearly in handwriting. Heart disease and nervous troubles are two of these.

But, taking the subject of health generally, it is unsafe to lay down any definite claims as to what handwriting will reveal.

Next week's article will be devoted to a particularly interesting problem that a reader referred to me for my advice. It is in the form of a letter from a fairly young woman who is in love with a man whose wife wishes to return to him, although the man has instituted an action for divorce. There are some very interesting angles to this case, and it will be discussed fully and frankly in next week's article. Even if the problem raised is not YOUR problem, you perhaps know someone who is similarly perplexed, and in any case, as a practical modern problem you will find it of intense interest.

Would YOU like to have a personal character analysis from your own handwriting? And have you any friends or sweetheart whose writing you would like to have analysed? You may be astonished at the revelations. Send specimens of the writings you wish to be analysed, stating birthdate in each case. Send 10c coin for each specimen, and enclose 3c stamped, addressed envelope to: Geoffrey St. Clair, Room 421, 73 Adelaide Street West, Toronto, Ont. Letters will be treated confidentially, and replies will be forwarded as quickly as possible.

Favors National Gallery

The trustees of the National Gallery of Canada are on safe ground in claiming that its activities are "a reliable index of public art interest." There can be accordingly no doubt that this is steadily expanding after reading the report of that institution for the last fiscal year. It has accomplished a great deal with a small appropriation of Federal funds and the evidence of the widespread appreciation of its work is singularly convincing.

The temporary premises that it occupies are completely inadequate. They make it impossible to exhibit at one time more than one-third of the collection that has been made. The exceedingly valuable pictures that were gathered together as a memorial of the war have been in storage for over fifteen years in a rented building.

The suggestion comes from the Winnipeg Free Press that the new structure be erected in a larger city than Ottawa, so that more people may have the chance to visit the gallery. There is, however, an advantage in having it in its present location for administrative purposes and such a national institution shall, for other reasons be in the Capital of the Dominion.

It can be made the means of attracting many Canadians to Ottawa, with which altogether too few of them are familiar. In this respect there is a great contrast with the people of the neighboring country, to whom their national capital is a source of legitimate pride and who are in the habit of making pilgrimages there whenever possible. It is quite as well worth while for Canadians to visit the seat of their Federal Government. Once they do so, they as a rule, wonder why they've waited so long.—Edmonton Journal.

"Those who would measure confidence in this country in the future must look first to the average citizen."—Franklin D. Roosevelt.

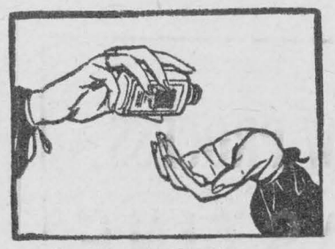
TRY FASTER WAY TO RELIEVE A COLD



1. Take 2 Aspirin tablets.

2. Drink full glass of water. Repeat treatment in 2 hours.

3. If throat is sore, crush and stir 3 Aspirin tablets in a third of a glass of water and gargle. This eases the soreness in your throat almost instantly.

Discovery Bringing Almost Instant Relief to Millions

Follow Simple Directions:

When you have a cold, remember the simple treatment pictured here . . . prescribed by doctors as the quick, safe way.

Results are amazing. Ache and distress go immediately. Because of Aspirin's quick-disintegrating property, Aspirin "takes hold"— almost instantly. Your cold is relieved "quick as you caught it!"

All you do is take Aspirin and drink plenty of water. Do this every 2 to 4 hours the first day—less often afterward . . . if throat is sore, the Aspirin gargle will ease it in as little as 2 minutes.

Ask your doctor about this. And be sure you get ASPIRIN when you buy. It is made in Canada and all druggists have it. Look for the name Bayer in the form of a cross on every Aspirin tablet. Aspirin is the trade mark of the Bayer Company, Limited.

BUFFET SUPPER SOLVES ENTERTAINING PROBLEM

Buffet suppers are the answer to an eternal question: "How can I give large parties with a minimum of preparation?" The modern procedure of letting each person serve himself from a laden table solves the problem entertainingly. Your guests will love the idea of choosing their own dinner partners, and they'll have a better time because their hostess is having fun, too.

After preparing a large dinner and worrying about how it is going to be served, any woman is really too worn out to enjoy her own party. Once she gets the buffet supper habit, however, she'll be able to face her guests with a calm, so-glad-you-came expression.

Four delicious food items are quite enough for the average party. Have one hot dish — preferably something in a chafing dish or casserole—a hearty salad, hot breads or sandwiches, meat or chicken, dessert and coffee. Put everything on one long table along with plates, silver, cups and saucers and let guests help themselves. They then can find their own seats and decide whether they want to balance plates on their knees or sit at card tables which you have provided.

Substantial Hot Dish

The hot dish should be rather substantial. You may serve a hot meat loaf, or, if you're having cold cuts or a roast, you might prepare a large casserole of baked macaroni and cheese or Spanish rice. Hot soup is always enjoyed and is an ideal first course if cold meat and salad are on the menu. Baked beans, particularly if you're having baked ham, is a good suggestion.

The salad not only gives zest to the menu, but adds a decorative note to the table. You may serve a simple one of lettuce or other salad greens, cubes of fresh tomatoes and diced culumbers or go in for fancy jellied varieties in individual molds. Better not serve the dressing on the salad. Put bowls or various dressings on the table and let each guest help himself.

For Chafing Dish

Creamed chicken, lobster, crabmeat, sweetbreads, oysters and mushrooms come under the heading of chafing dish delicacies.

To cream sweetbreads:

Put sweetbreads in cold water and allow to stand one hour; then drain and put into salted boiling water and cook slowly for 20 minutes. Again drain and plunge into cold water to keep them white and firm. Sweetbreads are always parboiled in this manner for subsequent cooking.

Cut sweetbreads in half inch cubes or separate in small pieces. Reheat in rich white sauce and serve on toast or in patty shells.

Cold cooked chicken and sweetbreads in equal parts combine well in a cream sauce.

Oysters and Mushrooms

Two dozen oysters, oyster liquor, 1½ cups milk, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 cup mushrooms, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon lemon juice, 1 teaspoon onion juice, 2 egg yolks, beaten light, 2 tablespoons butter.

Drain oysters and place in hot pan with a teaspoon butter. Toss them till they are plumped and ruffled on both sides, then place in hot dish. Add to oyster liquor the milk and flour and cook till thick. Add chopped mushrooms and cook two minutes. Add other ingredients in order named, then the oysters. Bring to boiling point and pour over hot buttered toast. The recipe would need to be doubled or trebled for buffet supper since it only serves 6.

To cream mushrooms alone:

Peel mushrooms and shop fine. Saute in butter for 5 or 10 minutes until juice begins to flow freely. Then add to rich white sauce and serve on toast. Broiled bacon goes well with creamed mushrooms.

Chicken En Casserole

This casserole dish is especially flavorsome and is unusual in its combination of vegetables.

One three pound chicken, 1 tablespoon minced onion, 1 clove garlic, 3 tablespoons butter, 4 cups chopped tomatoes, 2 cups diced carrots, 2 cups potato marbles, ½ cup green peas.

Clean and disjoint chicken. Add 1 teaspoon salt and 1½ teaspoons pepper to ½ cup of bour and roll each piece of chicken in mixture. Melt butter in frying pan and cook chicken until brown over a low fire. Then add onions, garlic, tomatoes, carrots and potatoes and cook twenty minutes longer. Turn into a shallow casserole and garnish with peas which have been cooked separately. Put in oven until very hot and serve with sprays of watercress.

Veal Roll

2½ lbs. veal cutlet, half inch thick, 1 lb. veal twice ground, 6 lb. sausage meat, 1 cup bread crumbs, ½ cup cream sauce, 1 small onion, grated, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, ½ teaspoon salt, 3 eggs, beaten stiff, 2 tablespoons shortening, 6 medium sized carrots, 6 small onions, ½ cup cold water.

Make a filling of the ground veal, sausage, crumbs, cream sauce, onion, seasoning and eggs. Mix well and spread on veal cutlet. Roll up and tie with string, season and put in a pan and spread shortening over (bacon fat will do well)surrounding with peeled whole onions and scraped carrots. Roast in hot oven until browned, add water, baste, cover pan closely and return to oven till tender. Serves 8 to 10.

Veal Loaf

Separate a knuckle of veal in pieces by sawing through bone. Wipe, put in kettle with 1 lb. lean veal and 1 onion; cover with boiling water and cook slowly till veal is tender. Drain, chop meat finely and season highly with salt and pepper. Garnish bottom of mold with slices of hard-boiled eggs and parsley. Put in layer of meat, layer of thinly sliced hard boiled eggs , sprinkle with finely chopped parsley and cover with remaining meat. Pour over liquor which should be reduced to one cupful. Press and chill, turn on a dish and garnish with parsley.

Dessert Course

For a meal of this kind a number of desserts will immediately suggest themselves to you. Ice cream is always good; so are fruit jellies topped with whipped cream, Charlotte Russe and things of that kind. Fancy individual cakes or pastries would fill the bill adequately and you might also have a tray of cheese and crackers for those whose diet says "Sweets are taboo." Coffee, of course, accompanied by salted nuts if you like, brings the meal to a close.

Try a buffet supper and enjoy yourself, Madame Hostess!

Since color is now recognised as having a profound effect on the nerves, it follows that its right use in rooms becomes a matter of importance. Colors are of two kinds—long-wave giving the sensations of yellow, orange and red, and short-wave giving those of violet, blue and green. Long-wave colors are stimulating and short-wave soothing; nature with sky, sea and foliage seems to favor the latter.

All rooms for living in need something of both qualities; it may be legitimate for a cafe only to excite, and a rest room to lull, but a parlor and a bed room cannot be so single-minded. In general, long-wave colors should be modified by use in small areas or in reduced strength, and short-wave by the introduction of lively relief.

For convenience, color relations are described as contrasts, harmonies, and discords. The three pairs of pure contrasts are red with blue-green, blue with yellow-orange, and violet with green-yellow, each pair consisting of long and short wave components which, having nothing in common, "tell" to a maximum extent when related to one another.

Harmonies are colors which do contain elements in common, as yellow and orange, red and violet, or blue and green. Discords are pairs of contrasts or harmonies used out of their special tone relation of yellow lightest, orange and green next, red and blue next, and violet darkest; typical discords are mauve with mustard and pale blue with flame.

In a room it is generally safest to have the walls and ceiling lighter than the floor, with a view to stability of effect. This suggests stimulating colors for them, since these are less exhausting when reduced, and, except for red, are naturally light and so not liable to look discordant; pink is a little difficult, but not so much as mauve or azure.

The scheme of a room may be in essentials either a contrast or a harmony. If the walls are stimulating it will be more restful to work on a contrast basis with, say, lemon walls, yellow-grey paintwork and violet floor, or light orange walls, "brick" paintwork and dark blue floor. If, however, the walls are, for example, sage green, the scheme may be a harmony of sage, apple green, and dark peacock, with contrasting accents — mats, cushions, pots—in vermillion or magenta.

The question of personal color preference is rather an interesting one; it has been suggested that such preference is a fact always due to some obscure chemical reaction. It appears that a vast majority of people prefer either red or blue—red in the case of women and blue of men—and that there is a general intolerance of greenish yellow, a color which oddly enough is fatal to certain insects.

PLAID TAFFETA BLOUSES

Jacket costumes in monotones for spring have plaid taffeta blouses for contrast.

Besides navy, which is highly regarded and black, interest is also shown in gray and beige. One gray frock in two-piece suggestion has a gay red belt.

So Smart All Day

Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished With Every Pattern

Here's one of those simple smart dresses that will brighten your winter wardrobe—perfect for afternoon bridge or tea. It's a dress, too, that will play such a vital part of fashionable spring wardrobe.

It's inexpensive and easy to make. The sleeves are merely joined to the drop shoulders and the standing band collar is quickly stitched to the neck. The rest of the dress is simple enough.

Black crinkly crepe with white collar trim or periwinkle blue with navy is another fascinating suggestion for this distinctive dress that may be dashed off in a jiffy—started one day and worn the next.

Style No. 2723 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18 years, 36, 38 and 40-inches bust.

Size 16 requires 3 7-8 yards of 39-inch material with 3-8 yard of 39-inch ronstrasting.

HOW TO ORDER PATTERNS

Write your name and address plainly, giving number and size of such patterns as you want. Enclose 15c in stamps or coin (coin preferred—wrap it carefully) for each number, and address your order to Wilson Pattern Service, 73 West Adelaide St., Toronto.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

PETER DELIVERED FROM PRISON — Acts 12: 1-19. GOLDEN TEXT.—Prayer was made earnestly of the church unto God for him. Acts 12:5b.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

TIME—The spring of A.D. 44.

PLACE.—A prison within the city of Jerusalem, perhaps in the tower of Antonia; the house of John Mark.

"Peter therefore was kept in the prison." This is not the first time Peter was in prison for his loyalty to Christ—see 5:18-20. It was to prison that Saul committed those Christians whom he dragged from their homes (8:3). "But prayer was made earnestly." The adverb here translated earnestly is from a verb meaning, literally, stretched out, and is the very word (as an adjective) used by Luke in his account of our Lord's prayer in Gethsemane—Being in an agony, he prayed more earnestly. "Of the church unto God for him. Crises make our prayers effectually definite.

"And when Herod was about to bring him forth, the same night." The helplessness of Herod when God intervenes must remind one of our Lord's words to Pontius Pilate, Thou wouldest have no power against me, except it were given thee from above (John 19:11). "Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, bound with two chains; and guards before the door kept the prison." Two soldiers were chained to Peter, one to his left wrist, and one to his right; two more kept guard at the door. Escape was out of all question.

"And behold, an angel of the Lord stood by him, and a light shined in the cell." Certainly the light was due to the presence of the angel, and one cannot but be reminded of a similar occurrence, when the shepherds were watching their flocks by night. "And he smote Peter on the side, and awoke him, saying, Rise up quickly. And his chains fell off from his hands." The writers of the New Testament never embellish their accounts of miraculous events with a mass of detail, as later writers were so in the habit of doing.

"And the angel said unto him, Gird thyself, and bind on thy sandals. And he did so. And he said unto him, Cast thy garment about thee, and follow me." It was not pride that kept the angel from that service. Things we would scorn to do are done by angels gladly. If it was not beneath Christ to wash the feet of Peter, it was not beneath an angel to tie his shoe-latchet. But the angel refrained (as angels always do), in that economy of strength which is divine, from doing for Peter in his hour of need what it was in his power to do himself.

"And he went out, and followed. And he knew not that it was true which was done by the angel, but thought he saw a vision." Note how careful Luke is to distinguish between visions and historical occurrences, enhancing the trustworthiness of his narrative here.

"And when they were past the first and the second guard." These were the warders, who were stationed one nearer to the inner door of the prison and another at some further distance away. "They came unto the iron gate that leadeth into the city." It was the gate outside the prison buildings, forming the exit from the premises. The prison seems to have been in the city. "Which opened to them of its own accord." The Saviour who has led you past one ward in the dark experience will lead you through another, and yet another. The gates will open as you arrive. "And they went out, and passed on through one street; and straightaway the angel departed from him." The angel's work was done. There was no more need for the ministry of miracle.

"And when Peter was come to himself, he said." That is, when he had recovered his self-consciousness. He was before in the half-consciousness of one who is dreaming and knows that it is a dream: except that in his case the dream was the truth, and his supposition was unreality. "Now I know of a truth, that the Lord hath sent forth his angel and delivered me out of the hand of Herod, and from all the expectation of the people of the Jews." James had been put to death and the Jewish people were eagerly waiting for the execution of Peter like hungry wolves.

"And when he had considered the thing." Peter's mind worked rapidly and he decided what to do. "He came to the house of Mary the mother of John whose surname was Mark." Mary was a woman of some property, who had not sold all her possessions; her husband was probably dead; Peter was so intimate with the family that he calls her son Mark the Evangelist his son.

"And when he knocked at the door of the gate, a maid came to answer, named Rhoda."

"And when she knew Peter's voice." She opened not the gate for joy, but ran in, and told that Peter stood before the gate." Here the ministry of bewilderment is joy itself!

"And they said unto her, Thou art mad." Three people in the New Testament are accused of being mad, all because they had messages so wonderful people would not believe them: the Lord Jesus (John 10: 20), Rhoda, and the Apostle Paul (Acts 26:24, 25). "But she confidently affirmed that it was even so." And so they went on debating the matter, while all the time the answer was waiting at the door. The answer often comes knocking at the door but we don't let it in, and we never know that the answer has been given. "And they said, It is his angel." It was a Jewish belief that each man had a guardian angel assigned to him.

"But Peter continued knocking." A little while before, that very morning, Peter had come to a great iron gate. And at a single touch of the angelic finger that gate had opened and let Peter through. And now he was at no massive iron gate, but the humble door of a very humble dwelling—and he continued knocking.

"And when they had opened, they saw him, and were amazed." The entire history of the New Testament is filled with amazement.

"But he, beckoning unto them with the hand to hold their peace, declared unto them how the Lord had brought him forth out of the prison." There were some things that only Peter knew about the goodness and power of God, and unless he would tell them they would never be known for blessing and encouragement by others. "And he said, Tell these things unto James, and to the brethren." This was, almost all agree, James the Lord's brother. "According to common Oriental usage, but apparently in opposition to the injunction of the Lord (Matt. 12:50), the family of Jesus maintained a pre-eminence of some kind or other in the Christian community of Jerusalem which was altogether different from the organization of the Church in other places.

"And he departed and went to another place."

The notice is so definite that we cannot build anything upon it; if Peter left Jerusalem at all, he may have undertaken some missionary journey.

News And Information For The Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Early Sowing of Tomatoes

The Dominion Horticulturist recommends early sowing of tomatoes and the use of early maturing, good varieties. Sowing should be done in time to have stocky, well grown plants in bloom and ready for planting out at the sign of settled weather. Soils with low nitrogen and high phosphoric acid content and a medium amount of potash are essential.

Poultry Breeding

Too oftein in selecting the stock for breeding, high egg records or some outstanding feature of the sire or dam are allowed to influence the judgment, without due regard to vitality or good breeding qualities that may or may not be present.

The selection for vigour and for those desirable qualifications that conform to the breed is comparatively simple, because these are mostly visible characters and can be chosen by comparison. Vigour is evident by the carriage, desirable body weight for age and breed, health and bloom of feather, and good bone formation. A clean-cut head with clear, bright and prominent eye in the male and female is a certain indication of brain power and nervous energy and the hall-mark of high vitality and reproductive strength.

Cod Liver Oil for Hens

When chickens are kept indoors where they do not get as much direct sunshine as when they are running outside, their mash should contain about 2 per cent. of a good quality of codliver oil. This oil is fed because of its vitamin D content, which is neede to help assimilate the ingested mineral matter. In the absence of a sufficient quantity of this vitamin, a chick may be undernourished on minerals even if it is given enough for its body needs in the mash. When sufficient vitamin D is not produced in the body of the growing chick, through the action of direct sunlight, or when it is not furnished in the shape of codliver oil, the minerals supplied in the mash may not be assimilated. Vitamin D is an important constituent of all chick feed as wel as laying hens' mash feed.

The Importance of Alfalfa

For a number of years, the forage crop specialists at the Central Experimental Farm have been studying the species and mixtures best suited for pasture in this district. Among other things, it has been found that the inclusion of alfalfa wherever possible, on land which it is adapted to, increases the yield of good quality hay and produces an early second growth which may be cut for hay or grazed at a time when the older pastures are at a minimum level of production. The importance of this fact cannot be over-emphasized, because good hay and good pastures are very necessary for the maintenance of high production herds.

The use of some alfalfa has also been found to prolong the life of the field as pasture for an additional year or two, for, being a perennial plant, alfalfa persists after red clover has disappeared.

Ontario Ginseng Root Rot

The increasing prevalence of two destructive diseases of the root of ginseng in the districts of Ontario where it is grown has created a problem of considerable economic importance. The root, which is the article of commerce and requires at least five years growth before it reaches a desirable marketable stage is becoming exceedingly difficult to bring to maturity principally owing to the attacks of brown rot on the one hand, and of "rust" on the other. Brown rot is the more serious disease of the two, and is also known as "the disappearing rot" from the fact that the affected roots may in a comparattively short time either completely disappear in the soil or leave as evidence only shreds of a skeleton shell. The name "rust" has been applied to the serious but less destructive disease because of the occurrence of rust-coloured lesions on the surface of the affected root. Rotation and rigid sanitation are the only control measures suggested, because varieties resistant to the disease have not yet been encountered by the Canadian scientists who have the matter under observation.

Fertilizer Application

Experiments have been conducted in Eastern and Western Canada for several years, oncerning methods of application of commercial fertilizers, with particular regard to the placement of the fertilizer in relation to the various seeds. It has been demonstrated that for wheat, oats, and barley more economical yields may be obtained by applying comercial fertilizer directly in contact with, or slightly below, the seed than by applying it broadcast. In certain crops, the germination of the seed is checked and in some cases completely ruined by contact with commercial fertilizer. While this does not apply to wheat, oats and barley, it is not advisable to seed corn in contact The fertilizer should be applied in bands about two inches to the side and slightly below or level with the seed. In the case of peas, the fertilizer should be separated slightly from th seed, preferably below the seed with one-half to one inch of soil between. Good results have been obtained with fertilizer or potatoes, both broadcast and in drill or row. It is recommended, however, to apply fertilizer in bands at either side of the row and level with, or slightly below, the sets or seed.

Seed Market Report

The buying of seed in Eastern Ontario proceeds actively as growers offer it for sale. Practically all the surplus of red clover and timothy in the St. Lawrence counties has been sold, but growers still have some sweet clover for sale. Prices offered farmers in this area are: for red clover, grade No. 1, 20c; certified 21c. Timothy No. 1, 16c; sealed, 17c; No. 2, 15c; No. 3, 13c. There is still a fair supply of alfalfa seed in the Upper Ottawa Valley which has been moving rather slowly of late.

There is relatively little seed unsold by growers in south-western Ontario, that remaining being small lots held for local sale. Generally the supply of field seeds in farmers' hands in this part of Ontario is much below that of other years, and some expect that shortages may develop in a few localities before the season is over. The seed trading season has now advanced to the stage of a movement from wholesale seed houses to the retail trade and market prospects in the next month appear bright owing to the uncertainty of sufficient supply. Prices being paid growers in this part of Ontario, basis No. 1 grade, range from 20c to 22c for red clover; 16½c to 18c for alfalfa; 20c to 25c for alsike; 4½c to 5½c for sweet clover; 12c to 15c for timothy and 12c to 14c for Canadian blue grass.

THREE FOR COLIGAN AS HAWKS WIN SEMI-FINAL

PLAY MAPLE LEAFS MONDAY

The final game for the Town League Championship will be played Monday night. On Wednesday, the Black Hawks qualified to meet the Maple Leafs, when they defeated Williamsburg 3-2. The game was fast and clean from start to finish, and was featured by the bright work of the goalies. Timmins, in the Hawk net, played his best game of the season, while Schell, at the other end, was no less brilliant. Art Coligan again stole the spotlight for the forwards. Elmer Park and Wally Guay also gave good accounts of themselves. For the losers, Sutton and Gauthier tried hard, but on the occasions when they got past the defence, they could not beat Timmins. The game was handled by Mike O'Malley and Hermy Smith.

The first face-off saw the Hawk line of Smith, Coligan and L. Laurin tear in to the Canadiens end, their rush being returned by Gauthier and Sutton, who were stopped at the Hawk defence. Failure of the Hawk forwards to get organized cost them the first goal, when Gauthier stole the puck inside the blue line, to plant the first one behind Timmins. Play was even for a while after this, both teams making some nice combination rushes. Elmer Park, Hawk defenceman, went through the whole Canadien team on a solo, but Schell saved neatly. Basil Millward also tried hard, but to no avail. "Jitters" Smith took the first penalty for an accidental trip. Just before the end of the period, the Hawks evened the count, when Art Coligan scored on a passout from Lennie Laurin, behind the Canadien net.

The second period opened with both teams just as fast as ever. Timmins saved a hot one from Sutton, and another from Gauthier, before Art Coligan broke loose from the back to test Schell with a nice shot from a few feet out. The Canadiens gave Timmins some anxious moments when Art Coligan was penalized, but "Timmy" held the overanxious Canuck marksmen at bay, till the end of the period.

Out of the first face-off emerged Art Coligan with the puck. On reaching the blue line, Art let go scorching shot, which Schell could not handle, as it burned right through his grasp and dropped in the net. With the game safely tucked away, the Hawks began to play a largely defensive game, shooting the puck down the ice when in danger. Guay was penalized, although this observer, in common with several others, failed to see any reason for the banishment. Play had just resumed when McIntosh was sent to the cooler for triping Art. Coligan on a breakaway rush. Playing on even terms again, the Hawks again showed their superiority, when Coligan scored his third goal of the game. The Hawks played defensively for the remaining minutes of the game, with Timmins making plenty of nice saves. He was beaten once for the second Canadien goal by Gauthier, but was able to hold out all the others till the end.

MANSLAUGHTER AND DAMAGE CHARGES HEARD AT SPRING ASSIZES

Returning its verdict at noon on Tuesday, after an hour's deliberation, a jury at the spring assizes of the Supreme Court, at Cornwall, acquitted Leslie C. Langley, of Norfolk Virginia, of manslaughter. The charge aorse out of an automobile acident at Santa Cruz, on November 6th last, when the car driven by Langley crashed into a tree. James Overton and Frank Lawless, Norfolk, suffered fatal injuries, and Elwin Mark Burns, Joseph P. Cushing and Langleyw re so badly hurt that they were confined to hospital for months. Cushing, whose home is in Kitchener, Ont., was hitch-hiking on the highway, and had been picked up by Langley and his companions only a few minutes before the accident. He suffered a fractured spine, and is still a patient at Cornwall hospital.

Ordered to Pay $1,500 Damages.

A judgment ordering C.W. Lant and his son, Byron Lant, Cornwall, to pay damages to the extent of $1,500 to I.R.W. Irvine, as well as the costs of the court, was handed down Wednesday afternoon by Mr. Justice P. Kerwin. The action was the result of a motor accident in Cornwall in June of last year, when Lant's automobile, driven by Byron Lant, struck Irvine as he was crossing the street. Irvine suffered a broken leg. Evidence revealed that the Lant automobil left skid marks 136 feet long at the scene of the accident.

MR. EDWARD A. AULT

At his home in West Hollywood, Cal., on Feb. 27th, there passed away a former resident of Iroquois, Edward Abbott Ault, at the age of 69 years. He was a brother of Mrs. J. McMartin, Morrisburg, and Mrs. W.G Robertson, Matilda.

Mr. Ault, a son of the late Edward Ault, left home while still a youth, and had spent the greater part of his life in the middle and western States, the last 14 years in Los Angeles. He was a druggist by profession. In his younger days, he showed marked literary ability, having had many poems accepted by magazines and newspapers.

Besides Mrs. Ault, he is survived by two daughters, Mrs. J. Hazelette of Delta, Col. and Mrs. L. Weaver of Los Angeles; three granddaughters, two brothers and four sisters.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Guy Hudson, Lutheran minister, at the Rulon Cheney Mortuary, after which the remains were cremated. Burial will be at Delta, Colorado, beside a daughter who died several years ago.

TO DEVELOP A NATION'S RESOURCES

In 1842, following the union of Upper and Lower Canada, when the Bank opened a branch at Toronto to succeed the agency there, and established offices in nine other cities of Upper Canada, the Honourable Peter McGill, then president of the Bank, explained why the directors had entered upon a policy of establishing branches or agencies in the then western province:

"The Legislature having conferred on the Bank important privileges, and authorized the creation and employment of a large capital, the Board, instead of concentrating it all in the large cities, felt it to be their duty gradually to extend throughout the province the benefits derivable from the use of it by the establishment of branches and agencies at such points and in such localities as appeared to them best calculated to encourage and assist the agriculture and commerce of the country, to develop its resources, and to promote the increase of its exportable productions..."

Even before the union of Upper and Lower Canada, the Bank sought constantly to encourage those factors in trade which would contribute effectively to the upbuilding of the country—a purpose which is as strong today as ever.

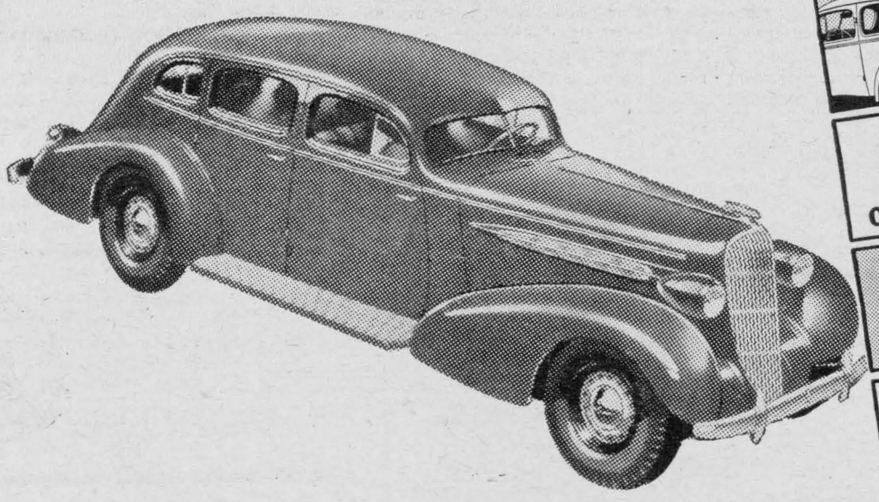
One Look Suggests a OLDSMOBILE Drive



SOLID STEEL TURRET TOP BODY BY FISHER

CONCEALED TIRE AND LUGGAGE COMPARTMENT

BIGGER HYDRAULIC BRAKES

KNEE-ACTION WHEELS with Ride Stabilizer

SYNCRO-MESH ALL-SILENT SHIFTING

LONG . . . low . . . rakish . . . with brisk streamlining that gives a realistic impression of fleetness and flashing power. One look at this new Oldsmobile makes you want to drive it. Why resist the impulse? Why not slip behind the wheel of the 90-horsepower, low-priced Six, or the big, 100-horsepower Straight Eight?

You are hardly seated when you begin to realize that here is something decidedly new in automobiles. You are immediately aware of the extra roominess, of the great width of door and seat, of the richness of appointments. Now . . . engine running? You can scarcely tell, it's so quiet. Shift silently with Syncro-Mesh Transmission, and you float away from the curb on a ride that you will long remember.

Let Oldsmobile out on highway and hill. Try not to show admiration as Knee-Action "steps" you, without "jar" or "neck-snap" over the ruts of a country lane. Notice the absence of noise and vibration at all speeds. Sense the pep and smoothness of the big, dependable engine. Then, as you come to a stop, feel the equalized grip of the husky hydraulic brakes.

Yes, by all means, drive one of these new Oldsmobiles. It's a revelation of how pleasant, and comfortable, and economical, modern motoring can be. It's a convincing demonstration of the great value which has won for Oldsmobile its description as, "The Car That Has Everything".

GOVERNMENTS AND TARIFFS.

Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King wants wider markets as does every one else, but when the United States market was being narrowed by United States tariffs he was afraid to do anything lest it should be thought provocative.. If the United States is now seeking wider markets in Canada it is because Mr. Bennett was not afraid to act. Mr. King cannot be blamed for the loss of markets, but he is blamable for not making up for that loss by conserving our own. He saw foreign markets closed to Canada by hostile tariffs. Yet he allowed those who framed those tariffs to have access to our markets on the same old terms. He held to his preference for wider markets while all other countries were raising barriers. He failed to realize it was a condition, not a theory, that confronted him.

Fearful lest Mr. Bennett should succeed in making a favorable arrangement for reciprocal trading, Mr. William Duff, M.P., during the last session and again this session, introduced a resolution calling for negotiations looking to that end. The resolution was withdrawn after debate, on the Finance Minister's representation that it was not helpful while negotiations are in progress. Better than any parliamentary resolution as a prelude to such agreement was the action of the Bennett Government in raising the Canadian tariff to meet, to some extent at least, the various advances in the United States tariff made while the King Ministry held power.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

KIND WORDS.

The Ottawa Journal publishes the records to show that in the last two years it has been the most quoted newspaper n Canada. It is a very creditable showing. Situated in the Capital, right near the seat of all our jurisprudence, it is not surprising that the editorials of The Journal are regarded as highly judicial. Our contemporary is never known to indulge in hysteria.—St. Catharines Standard.

ROLLING IN WEALTH.

Late in March there will be issued thousands of silver dollars in Canadian money. When these cart wheels get in circulation we'll be rolling in wealth.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

A TRUE EVENT.

The Soo can't spend $1 while only collecting 74 cents and keep solvent.

In the last five years, the city has been slipping behind as regards its uncollected taxes and the city lots it has had to take over from owners who couldn't pay their taxes.

If there is one lesson the Soo should take to heart it is that the city can't spend more money than it collects.

The government urges that all counties "live within their income," that is, that they shouldn't spend in any one year more money than they collect.

The only safe way for a city or an individual is to not go into debt.

Nobody knows what the future holds.—Sault Ste. Marie Star.

EXCITEMENT FORE AND AFT.

There was excitement fore and aft in the office of the Shelbourne Free Press and Economist Thursday afternoon. At the front, the Wesley United Church annual Sunday school sleigh ride was gathering. At the back a chicken hawk, evidently miscalculating on a predatory swoop, crashed through a large many-paned window to the intense surprise of the editor's son who was sitting at a linotype at the window. He captured it and released a terrified starling from its claws. The intruder's wingsspread tip to tip was 34 inches.—Shelbourne Free Press.

PRESS QUOTATIONS.

With its well-written and always interesting editorial page, The Ottawa Journal again tops the list of quotations from the daily newspapers of Canada as they have been compiled by the Dominion Press Clipping Bureau for the final quarter of the year 1934. This compilation is made quarterly of extracts from each of the 100 daily newspapers in Canada that are reproduced in other publications throughout the country. —Brockville Recorder.

RECORD OF SINCERITY.

Sooner or later the Canadian people are going to resent the continuous insinuations on the part of Opposition speakers and writers that the prime minister's program of reform for security is nothing more substantial than a pre-election soap bubble, pretty to look at, but ephemeral as mist on the mountain tops.....

Anyone professing to be a student of Canadian political history knows that Mr. Bennett throughout his career has been outspoken on behalf of reform measures, whenever he considered such reform measures necessary. He fought his own party in 1914 in opposition to a grant of $45,000,000 to those reckless adventurers, Mackenzie and Mann. He is an implacable foe of those who lobby on behalf of greedy corporate interests. He has urged restrictions on insurance companies. Again in 1928 he warned against stock speculation. He placed himself squarely on record more than a year before the market crash, in these trenchant sentences, spoken in the House of Commons on June 9, 1928: "Some people imagine that trading in pieces of paper upon which there are engraved words and figures constitutes the creation of new wealth. It is not so. The new wealth of the country is being created by the application of labor and capital to the natural resources of the country, and this trading in stock certificates, this great era of speculation in this country and on this continent, is one fraught with possibilities of the gravest danger to Canada."

Had the government of the day listened to Mr. Bennett in 1914, we would not in 1935 have so grave a railroad problem confronting us. Had the country listened to Mr. Bennett in 1928, the bitterly tragic effects of the 1929 debacle would surely not have been so widely spread. To accuse a man of insincerity with so staunch a record behind him of plain speaking on behalf of reform, simply is not good enough. Not for Canadians, who have a habit of thinking for themselves, and prefer to develop their thoughts from factual theses.—Dunnville Gazette.

AN ECONOMIC "GESTURE"

The depression is having a disastrous effect on the once-popular British custom of calling a spade a spade. Workers are not "sacked" nowadays; they are "suspended," "released," and so on as far as the art of synonyms will take us. The Manchester Guardian reports that a London firm recently received an application for a job from an unemployed man in which the art of "putting it gently" was raised to the nth degree. He wrote, "I am temporarily disengaged because of an economic gesture on the part of my previous employer."

Rather an ungracious gesture. —Winnipeg Tribune.

THE "SLOW" BRITISH.

A despatch to a U.S. paper says that American visitors to London never "cease to be amazed at the efficiency of His Majesty's postal service." Any letter deposited in the city before 5 a.m. is delivered by last post at 9 p.m., and a missive mailed in Brighton, 52 miles away at noon, is delivered the same evening without fail. Those "slow British" still continue to show the way.—Brantford Expositor.

THE EMPIRE

NEW USE FOR BAGPIPES.

The following appears in the "Bulawayo Chronicle" of January 12, sent to that South African journal by the farmer of West Field Ranch, Insiza, by name S. H. MacCallum:

Sir:—Here is something for pipers to think about. The following is a fact:

Some little time back the whole country was overrun by huge swarms of locusts; they were passing over the ranch all day, then, towards sunset they settled on the trees round the homestead. They were so numerous that the branches of the trees were bent down with their weight. Of course, we knew what would happen if they were allowed to remain there; by the morning there would not be a leaf left on any of the trees. So my cousin suggested I get out the bagpipes and see if that would shift them. I treated the suggestion as a joke. By jove! It was no joke. I played the pipes round the house, and will you believe, they could not stand it. They cleared away, though it was after sunset, for over 300 yards round the house. What ho! The bagpipes! Turn out the pipers when locusts are about. The tunes were "MacCallum's Lament," "Cock o' the North," and "Believe Me, If All Those .....". I am, etc.

All of which comes with appropriateness from one who bears the good Highland name of MacCallum.—Banffshire Journal.

EMPIRE TRADE.

During 1934 British import trade increased by upwards of $285,000,000, or 18.5 per cent. over that of 1933. Of that increase, $110,000,00 came from the Empire, which is 9 per cent. more than in 1933, while the increase in foreign imports was 8 2 per cent. British exports to the wor'd increased by something like $140,000,000, of which more than 75 per cent., or $110,000,000, went to the Empire, which is an increase of 13.5 per cent. over 1933, while the increase of exports to foreign countries was only three per cent.—Current British Board of Trade Figures.

EQUINE COMEBACK IN LONDON.

An attempt is being made to stage a comeback for that reputeably noble animal, the horse, as an angent of locomotion. At the Royal Agricultural hall this weeks crowds are gathering to admire the tremendous flanks, plaited manes and heavy hirsute hocks of the exhibited shires.

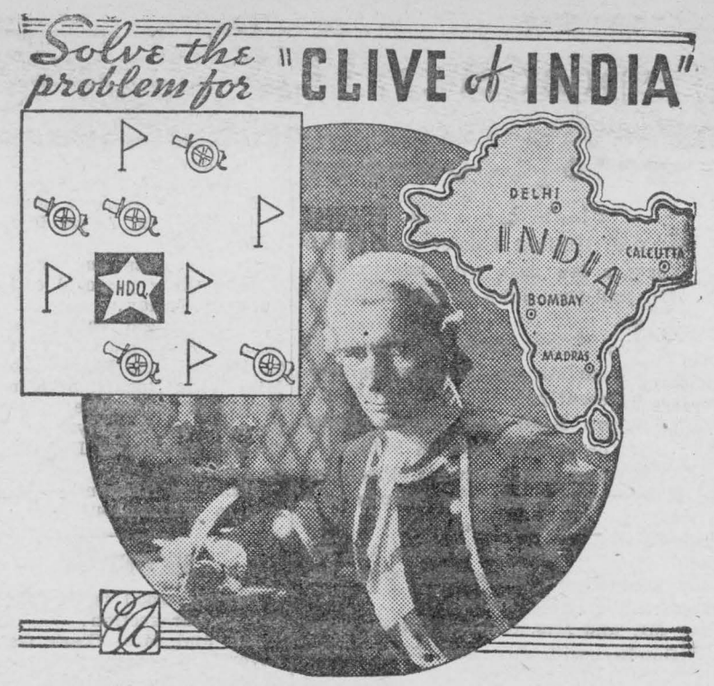
Brewers, coal distributors, big stores, and the refuse department of the corporation of the City of London favor horsedrawn vehicles. So breeders are producing faster-paced geldings to suit the traffic rate of a post-Belisha age; more horses are being put on the London streets this year than last, says the Daily Herald.

On the other hand, whatever Odhams press may hope for animal transport, the Beaverbrook press is definitely against it. A leader-writer of the Evening Standard was held up on his way to the office last Tuesday morning. Naturally annoyed to find the cause of obstruction to be nine horse-drawn vehicles, he ordered out the files, and discovered that horses are the chief villains in traffic blocks, that they are disappearing from the London streets, and that it is no kindness to the horse to keep him in London harness. What the horse thinks no one has yet discovered.—Time and Trade.

Only two so-called unlucky days are listed on the calendar for 1935. They are Friday the 13th of September, and the 13th of December.

If you would increase the volume of knowledge if a man knew at 25 what he thought he knew at 18.

A Military Problem



Can you solve this problem, one of the many typical cases from the military life of "Clive of India"?

Look at this square. In it are Clive's headquarters, indicated with a star. Then there are five infantry units, indicated by pennants, and five artillery units, indicated by cannon. Clive wants the territory and the units divided among five subalterns, so that each of the five will have in command, an area of equal space and identical shape, and each of the five will have one unit of both infantry and artillery. Can you take a pencil or pen and ink and divide the square to fit these requirements? Watch next week's issue for solution.

Decorative Windows Add to Appearance of Rooms

If You Want to Freshen Your House For Spring, Why Not Begin On Your Draperies

Architects predict that the time is not far off when, as a result of air conditioning and simulated daylight, windows may assume a purely decorative function in our houses. The decorators apparently are getting ready. For never have window treatments been more picturesque.

The woman who would like to freshen up her house might well begin with draperies. The newest ones are simple, straight-hanging and colorful. Heavy, dust-catching velvets are definitely out, crisp taffetas, lustrous satins and ingeniously decorated cotton materials are just as surelyin. Venetian blinds have almost entirely supplanted the oldfashioned shade and supply a background for the hanging.

CORNICES ARE POPULAR.

If the room is dark, the Venetian blinds are usually white with tapes to match the predominating color in the room. Sometimes, however, the entire blinds are colored.

Cornices are being used in all sorts of rooms this year. The most popular are of wood and the next most liked are of mirror and plain glass. Some windows in modern classic rooms are framed entirely of mirror glass, sides as well as cornices of clear, blue, rose or even green. One of the things they definitely do is add height to a room. The mirror effect is also being used, by the way, in doors to increase the apparent size of the room.

Glass curtains come four inches below the window sill just to cover the woodwork underneath the sill. Draperies touch the floor, and if there is a carpet to the edge of the floor may even be slightly longer than floor length and lie in folds on the carpet.

A decorating authority suggests for an English type living room draperies of heavy fabric without much sheen, wool damask, for instance. In the French living room taffeta is particularly appropriate, and for the French bedroom, satin. Linen is excellent for the Chinese Chippendale room and for the modern room, antique satin, contradictory as that may sound!

SATIN AND VELVET DRAPES

A prominent actress' exquisite bedroom had draperies of peach satin and white velvet hung on a pole covered with white velvet. The bedspread in this room is also of the satin-velvet combination. For a simpler bedroom, a cotton material with eyelet work and a banding of satin has one curtain half width and the other side a width and a half. The scantier one hangs straight, but the fuller one is looped up with long tie-back of the material piped with satin.

Draperies for a Chinese Chippendale-modern room are of black background linen with small white gardenias. The wooden cornice is covered with red satin trimmed to outline the shape of the cornice with narrow black moss fringe. The glass curtains are of transparent net, criss-crossed.

Doors as well as windows are coming in for special treatment from the modern remodeller. Those that are usually kept closed have panels painted in colors contrasting with the rest of the surface, or decorated with painted or appliqued designs. Silvering a door sometimes proves effective and a colorful painted one is particularly recommended for a darkish hallway.

Up-to-date

I've quite made up my mind, you know,
To keep up with the time;
I've been to see the Auto Show
And studied all the signs.

The brim must now come off my hat;
My trousers must fit tight
Below the knee—they must not flap
And catch the breeze's flight.

No longer will I swing my arms,
But fold them on my chest;
My coat must be (don't be alarmed!)
The same length as my vest.
And I must also bend way back
And gaze up at the sky;
My feet must go the beaten track
Without help from my eye.

My ears taped closely to my head
Will be another sign
I'm up-to-date,—or say, instead,
I follow the streamline.

Is The Motor Horn Doomed?

Several months ago English authorities made the experiment of outlawing the use of automobile horns in the night time. The thing has worked so well that they are now considering the advisability of completely prohibiting the use of such horns day and night.

The original idea was to permit tired citizens to get some sleep, undisturbed by the raucous honking of inconsiderate horn-sounders. Now the authorities believe that the disuse of horns promotes more careful driving, on the theory that the man who knows he can't sound a warning signal at all, will use his brakes a great deal sooner than he would otherwise.

The idea has possibilities, and it is well worth a trial to get reckless motorists to rely on their brakes rather than on their horns, to keep from hitting people. And above all it would take care of the humorist who starts sounding his horn continuously as soon as a driver two blocks ahead stalls his engine or is held up by a street car.

Most-Quoted Newspapers

The list prepared quarterly by the Dominion Press Clippings Bureau, of Toronto, showing the standing of Canadian newspapers in the matter of quotations by other newspapers, restores The Ottawa Journal to first place for the period of three months to the end of December last. With the exception of the third quarter of last year, when it was a close second, The Journal has held first place for two years.

The first ten in the final quarter are:

Ottawa Journal	1,662
Toronto Star	1,295
Toronto Globe	1,234
Toronto Mail and Empire	1,214
St. Thomas Times-Journal	1,204
Stratford Beacon-Herald	1,048
Brantford Expositor	845
Brockville Recorder and Times	836
Toronto Telegram	701
Winnipeg Free Press	686

Readers of The Journal may be interested in the figures for the first ten in the complete year 1934, the totals being made from the Clipping Bureau reports:

Ottawa Journal	7,467
Toronto Globe	6,236
Toronto Mail and Empire	5,442
Toronto Star	5,409
St. Thomas Times-Journal	4,671

NOT A RHEUMATIC PAIN FOR 4 YEARS

70-Year-Old Man Praises Kruschen

A man who once suffered severely from rheumatism writes:—

"For a long time I suffered with rheumatism, and at one time was laid up for about nine weeks. About five years ago I was advised to try Kruschen. I did so, and have continued using them ever since. Kruschen did the trick, as I have not had a rheumatic pain for over four years. I am nearly 70 years of age, and feeling fine, and always able for my day's work—thanks to Kruschen."—A. S.

Kruschen dissolves away those needle-pointed crystals of uric acid which are the cause of all rheumatic troubles. It will also flush these dissolved crystals clean out of the system. Then if you keep up "the little daily dose" excess uric acid will never form again.

Catarrhal Deafness May Be Overcome

If you have catarrhal deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 oz. of Parmint (double strength) and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucous stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has catarrhal deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

BETTER BREED OF HORSES DESIRED

Celebrated Clydesdales For Eastern Ontario

Two of the ten Clydesdale stallions recently imported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture are to be kept in this district in an effort to improve breeding stock. The remainder will be sent to other points in Canada. Of the two to remain in or around Ottawa one is a five-year-old which will be ready by 1936.

Believing that unless something definite is done there will be a great dearth of good farm horses in all parts of Canada within the next few years, Hon. Robert Weir, Minister of Agriculture, has formulated a definite horse breeding policy. His present objective is to secure good breeding material.

Under the plan formulated free service, free board at the breeding station and half the cost of transportation will be paid on approved and selected pure bred mares of the highest quality. From these it is hoped to secure a number of high-grade stallions and mares which will be sold for breeding purposes.

In the event of a sufficient number of these highly selected mares not being available in any locality where one of the imported stallions is located, a second class of mares, not quite so good as the selected class, will be given services on a $5 and $10 basis. If more mares are needed a third class of grade mares will be arranged for on a payment basis and the foals be sold as grade geldings for work purposes. From the first two classes it is hoped to secure breeding stock.

The scheme goes further in that it arranges for the sale of the foals from the first two classes mentioned. This will be by yearly auction at central points in Canada, the auctions to be under government auspices and widely advertised so that breeders and farmers desiring breeding stock of known ancestry will be able to go to these auctions and bid on the animals.

The two animals to be kept in Eastern Ontario will likely remain at the Central Experimental Farm in Ottawa, where they are at present.

GOLD EXPORT IS NEARLY DOUBLE

Canada's January Total Sustains Increase Of Past 10 Months

Ottawa.—Gold bullion exported in January amounted in value to $10,835,000, all of which went to the United States, the Dominion Bureau of Statitics reported. In the corresponding month last year the value was $5,627,384.

Gold bullion exported in the ten months ended January amounted to $80,643,431 against $49,320,692 in the same period last year.

Raw gold exported in the ten months ended January was valued at $3,227,639 in comparison with $1,904,864 in the corresponding year last year.

Exports of aluminum in January amounted to 14,942 cwt., valued at $234,923, more than double that of January, 1933, when it was 6,806 cwt., at $140,913, the bureau reported yesterday.

DAIRY PRODUCTS IN CANADA

Total milk production in Canada, says "The Agricultural Situation and Outlook," published by the Dominion Department of Agriculture in co-operation with the Department of Trade and Commerce, continues to show an upward tendency which has been due almost entirely to the greater number of cows being milked. It is likely that this trend will continue during 1935. Cheese production continues to decline steadily with milk being diverted mainly to the manufacture of creamery butter and to the fluid milk market, due to more remunerative returns from these sources. Prices for cheese have been lower both on the overseas and Canadian markets during the past season, while butter prices on Canadian markets have improved during the past two years.

Creamery butter production has increased to such an extent that storage stocks are considerably higher than in the previous year. These high storage stocks will tend to keep butter prices at a lower and more uniform level during the early months of 1935 than in the past season unless some of the surplus stocks are exported. If no export movement takes place, a small carry-over in butter stocks is not unlikely, with a consequent depressing influence on prices which may cause a diversion of milk into cheese manufacture. Increasd production in many dairy countries and in Canada does not point to any marked improvement in returns for dairy products. Moreover, a general improvement in pasture conditions in 1935, with a consequent increase in butter production, would probably lower Canadian prices of butter. Canadian dairymen, however, can improve their economic position by a careful culling of unprofitable cows and by better herd management in breeding and feeding operations to increase the average production per cow.

A Man's Strength

You can't measure all men by the same standard.

You call one man wise because he invests his savings in real estate, and the other foolish because he spends all that he has for an etching, but they are both equally foolish.

Each invests in the thing that will bring him the largest measure of satisfaction. Each buys the thing that to him is bread.

Collecting butterflies is another man's golf; a rose garden is another's gold mine.

If you prefer staying at home with a pipe and a book while another man takes his lady to a dance, do not claim to be wiser or better than he. You may need to dance as much as he needs to read. In any case, each is feeding his appetite and doing the thing he enjoys most.

You don't measure a man's strength by the thing he indulges in, but in the degree of his self-indulgence.

Eastern Canada Potatoes Now Under Regulation

The Eastern Canada Potato Marketing Scheme submitted by representatives of the potato industry, has been approved by Hon. Robert Weir, Dominion Minister of Agriculture, and the Governor in Council, upon the recommendation of the Dominion Marketing Boarl.

The scheme embraces the provinces of Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Ontario. The potato growers in these provinces have been receiving inadequate returns for their potatoes and the position of the growers has been particularly difficult this year. A very large crop and lack of organization has resulted in demoralized marketing conditions. The 1934 potato crop for the four provinces is placed at 3,308,000 bushels, an increase of 8,188,000 bushels compared with the production in 1933.

Under the scheme, it is expected orderly marketing will result primarily through control of the grades of potatoes entering the commercial channels of trade and pototoes of inferior grades will not be allowed to glut the market. Consignment selling, which has been contributing largely to price demoralization will be prohibited and sales will be made under firm contracts. The scheme also provides for the development of export markets and for increasing domestic consumption of potatoes.

Feed Sunshine

Cod liver oil, the sunshine substitcte, in one of the most important items in the properly balanced poultry ration. Where birds are closely confined during the winter months, as is the case in most parts of Canada, they receive very little direct sunlight, and with the rations usually fed, they do not receive all the vitamins they require. Calcium and phosphorus are two minerals specially required for laying pullets and hens in the manufacture of eggs. The digestion and assimilation of materials, especially calcium, require one of two things; an abundance of direct sunshine or an abundance of vitamin D. Cod liver oil is rich in vitamin D, and is one of the reliable sources of this type of food.

H. M. Army and Navy Veteran's Mutual Benefit Society

One result of the very promising financial report that was tendered the members of this time honoured organization at their recent annual meeting, was the indication that there was every possibility that another object of the body may be achieved in the course of the current year. The establishment of a veteran's home in Toronto, to be operated by this body.

Little more than ten years ago it was felt by the then officers that the organization should have a band, this was achieved after great expenditure and brought to a state of such perfection, that before long, and for the past many years the band of His Majesty's Army and Navy Veterans has led the annual Warriors Day Parade on the opening of the C.N.E. This section of the organization also presents high class concerts at varied times and places throughout the year.

Struck on the head by a heavy belt which he was attempting to put on the pulley of a sawing machine Thursday, Mr. Geo. Casselman received painful injuries which might have proved fatal. Mr. Casselman and a number of other men have, for several weeks been sawing wood with a circular saw, and in replacing the belt on the pulley from which it had slipped, it wound around the fly-wheel, the one end coming in contact with the operator's head and inflicting a severe wound. Although his injuries are serious, Mr. Casselman is expected to recover.

Mr. James D. Becksted, a very highly esteemed resident of Williamsburg, celebrated the 69th anniversary of his birth on Sunday. The day was quietly spent at his home, where he was the recipient of many messages of congratulations from relatives and friends. At the noon hour, Mr. Hall was host at a delightfully arranged birthday dinner in honor of Mr. Becksted. A nicely decorated birthday cake with the allotted number of lighted candles adorned the centre of the table. Members of the family who were present for the occasion included his daughter, Mrs. Jessie Seekings and grandchildren, Jessie and Jamie Seekings.

In the first game of the playoffs in the Intermediate City Basketball League, held at the Y.M.C.A., Ottawa, Wednesday night, the Morrisburg-Wadlington Sailors scored, a 46-30 victory over Commerce. The result gave the Sailors a 16-point margin to take into the second game of the finals, which will be played next Wednesday night. All through the first half, the Sailors completely outplayed their opponents, and led at the interval 28-13. In the second half, however, Commerce held their own and Sailors were able to add but one point to the game margin. The game was marked by rough play, no fewer than 25 personal fouls being called on the teams, Commerce getting 13 and the Ferrymen 12.

Toronto Maple Leafs had a lot of wind taken out of their sails on Saturday, when they were defeated 7-4 by the Boston Bruins, who will be their opponents in the play-offs. If this game was any indication of what is to follow, the Maple Leaf followers and supporters might as well switch their allegiance now, so as to be supporting a winning team after the Stanley Cup finals are through.

Yip Coleman, outstanding member of the Magedoma hockey team of Brockville, has been adjudged the most valuable member of his team in the geme recently played between Chatham and Magedomas. Yip, a former player on the Iroquois senior team, was awarded the sweater donated by H.P. Conklin of Brockville.
