WHEAT

The enormous wheat crop this year has made it possible to use the lower grades for feed.

We found such ready sale for our last car that we have secured another car of the same quality and sells at the same attractive price which looks like the best feed value on the market.

We offer good quality wheat, whole or ground.

Whole Wheat $2.00 cwt.

Ground Wheat $2.10 cwt.

Girl: "Why? What would you do?"
Boy: "I'd put 'U' and 'I' closer together."

Don't forget the Big Reduction Sale all this week at Levere's Store, Inkerman. Everything at or below cost.

The rumor of the resignation of C A. Magrath, Chairman of the Ontario Hydro Commission is practically confirmed by Premier Ferguson, but will not take place for several months yet. The rumor that Ontario is to have a new premier is not yet confirmed.

There were seventeen "Macs" among the candidates for the forty three seats in Nova Scotia. The names of three out of four in Antigonish had that prefix. The Scott has always played a large part in Canadian politics. There have been ten federal premiers since Confederation. The first two were MacDonald and MacKenzie and two of their given name.

Canadians eat 356 eggs per person in a year, or nearly an egg a day. In the United States the consumption of eggs is 207 eggs per capita, in Belgium 213, France 133, Germany 117, and in Great Britain 110. Canada has invariably taken the lead in poultry advancement, and the position of "chief egg consumer" rightly belongs to her. She preaches egg production and practises egg consumption.

The Mission Band will hold a sale of home-made cooking, candy and fancy work in the S. S. Rooms of the Presbyterian Church on Nov. 17, 1928. An afternoon tea will also be served from 2.30 to 5.30. Come Everybody welcome. Tea 15c.

Old paint brushes, which have been allowed to become stiff or caked with paint to such an extent that turpentine does not loosen the bristles, can be softened in the following way. Take a package of any of the well-known brands of powdered soap and make a very thin paste, using cold water. Let the brushes soak in this paste until they are soft. Any brushes worth saving at all will come out clean and pliable.

The man who wins is the average man,
Not built on any particular plan,
Nor blessed with any particular luck,
Just steady and earnest and full of pluck.

For the man who wins is the man who works,
Who neither labor nor trouble shirks,
Who uses his hands, his head, his eyes,
The man who wins is the man who tries.

The Ladie's Aid Society of the United Church Winchester Springs, will hold their annual chicken supper in the church hall, Monday, November 19. Tea will be served from 6 to 8 o'clock. Thirty outside talents will furnish a good program. Admission fee 50cts.

Inquest Held

An inquest as to the cause of death of Angus Price, a section man on the C. P. R. who was killed last Thursday morning at Chesterville, was held on Saturday afternoon by Coroner Dr. P. McLaughlin and the verdict was that he came to his death by being hit and run over by a locomotive, but no blame could be attached to the train crew or his working associates.

In The New School

Although not completed, and with carpenters, plumers and other workmen busy about the place, classes are now being held in the new public school. Owing to the weather and lack of conveniences, the children were not comfortable in their temporary quarters and so the transfer was made. The official opening of the new school does not take place until the second week in December, which ceremony will be performed by Premier Ferguson.

Where Summer Smiles

Summer weather lingers on Canada's Pacific Coat. Victoria and Vancouver are fanned by balmy breezes and bathed in mollow sunshine. Motoring is a joy; golf and other outdoor pastimes are a delight in this ideal envirement. Thousadds flock to the coast each winter to bask in its wonderful climate and the Coast knows how to receive them and make them fool at home.

Canadian National train service is the favored route to this pleasant land. Convenient from all eastern points, it takes the traveller through all the great western cities and crosses the magnificent Canadian Rocky Mountains at the lowest altitudes and on the easiest gradient; yet always within sight of their lofty peaks

Is It Yours

Now don't all speak at once. The editor of the Press has a very handsome eversharp pencil. He don't know how he came in possession, or where he picked it up But the pencil belongs to someone who has carelessly left it where the editor has unconsciously picked it up. Is it yours?

A Good Sale

A postponed sale is not always a good sale, but in attendance the sale of Mrs. Cass, at her residence, Whitney Ave., could not have been better attended than it was on Saturday afternoon last. It took auctioneer Morrow some little time to get everything warmed up, but once he got going they went along in old time regularity.

Nothing To Do

The amature play "Nothing to Do" put on by a company of ladies and gentlemen from Ventnor in Lannins Hall on Monday night drew a full house, it being the only public entertainment for that evening. The play was under the auspices of the Public Library Board as was announced by the chairman of the Board, Rev. Mr. Davies. Between the acts there were selections rendered in the way of solo, trios and recitations all of which helped to pass a pleasant evening.

Some Ballot

Through the thoughtful kindness of our friend Mr. Cass, of Portland, Orogon, the Press received last week a copy of the official Ballot for Precinct No 220, Multnomah County, Orogan," used on Nov. 6, and is some ballot. It is 42 inches long and 14 inches wide. It is printed in type about the size of the reading matter of this paper. Just what kind of ballot box is used to receive the ballots we do not know, but it would require one of some size where there are many voters. The United States citizen must be an intelligent voter to know how to correctly mark such a ballot. We would imagine that a ballot in pamplet form would be more convenient.

Control System Is Attacted by Ontario Farmers

Four resolution dealing with the liquor question are on the agenda for the annual convention of the United Farmers of Ontario in Toronto on December 4, 5 and 6. The liquor resolution point to the increase in the jail population and the increase in crime usually associated with liquor, demand the stoppage of the export of liquor and the abolition of home brew licenses, besides expressing general disapproval of the government control system in Ontario.

There are 32 resolutions altogether, one of the most interesting being a proposal that the government should withdraw its financial support from the Ontario Women's Institute. Two resolutions on this matter will be submitted. One of them urges the withdrawal of the support on the ground that it is unfair that one section of the people should monopolize the service of a department which is financed by all the citizens. It advocates instead the organization of a similar government lecture service which shall be available to all organizations without requiring them ts sacrifice their idenity and submerge themselves in the institute movement. The other resolution contends that the service should be freed from the 'suspicion of political patronage' or of political bias by being operated by a federal bureau, rather than as a provincial department.

Cadet training in the public school is deprecated by the executive committee of the United Farmers of Ontario which will submit a resolution urging the convention to go on record as opposed to the expenditure of a dollar of public money for training cadets in the public schools of the province.

Other resolutions include the following: That the government make a practical move towards disarmament by reducing the annual appropriation for military purpose; that country judges and sheriff, if just and sufficient evidence be furnished, be given authority to excuse a summoned farmer juror and call another in his stead: that any further increase in the sessional indemnity of members of parliament be opposed; that a law be enacted fixing the date of elections by statute; that an effort to abolish or reduce the income tax be opposed, and that musical instruction in all public schools be made compulsory.

WORLD-WIDE ORGANIZATION.

Women's Institutes Now Almost Encircles the Globe.

The women of Canada will be interested to note the progress of Women's Institutes in Great Britain, for it was a Canadian, Mrs. Alfred Watt, of Victoria, B.C., who was instrumental in establishing in England during the war these organizations, which Premier Baldwin has said constituted Canada's greatest contribution to England. The twelfth annual general meeting of the National Federation held in London recently attracted 8,000 delegates from all parts of the country. The pioneers did not have an easy time, and as Lady Denman, the chairman, said, they were frequently told not to interfere, but to "stay at home and mind the baby."

To-day in England there are about 4,000 branches, while Scotland, starting from England, has 500. The situation has changed and the movement meets with encouragement and approval, partly because it has become self-supporting, and for the last two years has been able to dispense with the financial assistance which at first it received from the Minister of Agriculture. "Its effect," says the London Times, "has been to enlarge the sympathies of cottage housewives by talks and lectures on art, history, literature and other subjects of interest, to institute a revival of old-time village industries and handicrafts, and, generally speaking, to relieve and brighten the monotony of their everyday life." At the London meeting it was suggested that the practical usefulness of the work might be extended if urban and rural district councils were asked to co-opt members of local women's institutes on to their housing committees so that women might express their views, especially on the problems of rural housing.

This remarkable movement, which had its beginning in Saltfleet township, Wentworth County, Ontario, in February, 1897, now almost encircles the globe. The majority of other organizations have been founded on the plan which has worked so well in Ontario, and many of them still look to Ontario for inspiration.

In Belgium there are over 700 branches; in Germany the Countrywomen's Association was formed a year after the Ontario organizations and now has 1,313 local associations; Ireland has 21, Poland 900, Finland 399, New Zealand 13, India 150, while Australia, Czecho-Slovakia, South Africa, Southern Rhodesia, Natal, France, Sweden, Holland, and other countries also have their association. Some are called by different names, as in the United States, where the Home Bureau reaches millions of people and is purely rural, but all have the same objectives, home and country.

SIXTY YEARS OF PROGRESS.

Royal Colonial Institute Celebrates Its Diamond Jubilee.

The Royal Colonial Institute celebrates its diamond jubilee this year. The largest and most influential organization of its kind, it can look back upon sixty years of progress and effective contribution to the development of the Empire.

Founded on June 26th, 1868, the institute is as old as the Dominion of Canada, and its story is a pocket edition of the story of the Empire Overseas. There were 174 members at the start, and the Duke of Manchester, Lord Normanby, Lord Carnarvon, and Lord Grenville were among the first vice-presidents. In the following year the membership had risen to 300, while the membership now exceeds 14,000.

In 1871 its staff consisted of Dr. C. W. Eddy and two clerks, and the library, which now numbers 200,000 volumes and is the finest of its kind in the world, consisted of a few books on a shelf. An official approval was placed upon the institute in 1878 by the acceptance of the office of president by King Edward, then Prince of Wales.

The Never-Open Door.

The queerest hotel in Great Britain is now closed. It was in a village near Bury St. Edmunds, and though it was fully licensed no traveller could quench his thirst there. Nor could he get food or any kind of accommodation. The owner was a rabid teetotaller who adopted this method of asserting his principles. In the end the justices refused to renew the license. They came to the conclusion that the public had no need of an inn which never opened its doors.

At a small Devonshire inn the food and accommodation are good, but the landlord refuses to allow his clients more than three drinks a day. He declares that three drinks are enough for anyone and his plan seems to work very well.

THE SPEAKERSHIP.

British "Speaker" Is Expected to Entertain.

The Speakership of the British House of Commons, to which Capt. Fitzroy has just been elected, carries with it £5,000 a year, a house in the Palace of Westminster, a state coach, and stables in Grosvenor Road. The Speaker can also look forward to a pension and a peerage when he gives up his office.

Mr. Speaker Whitley, who retired a short time ago, missed one of the adventures of the Speakership. He never rode in his state coach. But that, perhaps, has been his good fortune, for the vehicle is not one in which to go joy-riding. It weighs 2¾ tons and dates from 1700. Not since the coronation of King George has it been seen in public. On that occasion Lord Ullswater — then Mr. Speaker Lowther—rode in it, and did not enjoy the experience.

A thoughtful state provides the Speaker with coach, harness, and stables, but not with horses. The coach might never have left its house in Chancellor's Yard at Westminster to take the Speaker to the coronation, had not a firm of brewers come to the rescue with the loan of their two heaviest dray horses, which, despite the unfamiliar trappings of the ornate state harness, made the ancient vehicle rumble along gaily.

But these horses were not accustomed to the long wait they had to endure foodless, and nose-bags being no part of the trappings of the coach, they scented hay in the padding round the pole, and made a meal of it.

Few M.P.'s have seen the coach; many do not even know of its existence; nor are many aware that the Speaker has stables in Grosvenor road. Mr. Speaker Whitley used the stables as a parage.

The new Speaker will find much of historic interest, including pictures of all his predecessors, in his house at Westminster. The little patch of grass at the foot of the clock tower is Speaker's Green, and the windows of his house overlook this little oasis.

A considerable amount of entertaining is expected of the Speaker. His dinners and levees are events of the Parliamentary year. No invitations are issued for the levees beyond a notice posted at the House, but M.P.'s regard this as a command.

The story is told of a Labor Minister who wrote to the Speaker saying he thought it his duty to come, but had neither levee dress nor evening dress, and could he come in his ordinary clothes? He got a cordial reply, telling him to come as he liked. He went, thus setting a precedent.

MERRY MAYFAIR.

Nell Gwynne's House Is to Be Torn Down.

Nell Gwynne's house in Shepherd's Market, Mayfair, London, is coming down. The names suggest a pleasant rustic atmosphere, but the market was not called after the Corydons of an earlier day, but after one Shepherd or Sheppard, who owned the ground on which the May Fair was held, observes a Morning Post writer.

That was a lively gathering, and it grew more riotous with the years, until, in the reign of George I., after it had been presented by the grand jury of Middlesex for four successive years as a public scandal, it was finally suppressed. Its end was largely due to the Earl of Coventry, who dwelt near by in Piccadilly, and for whom its sixteen days of merry-making proved too much to endure.

Another scandal of Mayfair was its marriages, which rivalled those of the Fleet. There Dr. George Keith, a drunken parson, made a fortune by celebrating marriages with privacy and despatch, and rich and poor were among his clients until the law stepped in and made clandestine marriages illegal. On the last day before the act came into force 61 marriages were celebrated at Mayfair, and there is on record a total of over 7,000.

Flute Worth a Fortune.

Not content with possessing the only gold flute in the world, Prof. D. C. Miller, of Cleveland, proposes to make one entirely of the more precious metal, platinum. Such a flute would probably be the most expensive musical instrument in the world.

It is its probable tonal quality, however, that makes the platinum flute so desirable in Prof. Miller's eyes. He has invented a unique device, the "phonodeik," by which he produces waving lines of light on a screen, showing the tones produced by musical instruments of different densities. His gold flute, for example, produced an entirely new set of tones, and he believes that platinum, being denser than gold would give still another tone quality.

EARLY ENDURANCE RIDES.

One Man Rode 1,000 Miles In 1,000 Consecutive Hours.

In 1604 one John Letton made a wager that he would ride five times between London and York, a total distance of 990 miles, within six days. He accomplished the feat with something to spare, starting on a Sunday morning from St. Martin's le Grand, London, and finishing at York on the evening of the ensuing Friday.

Fifteen years afterwards Bernard Calvert rode from London to Dover, thence crossed by barge to Calais and was back again in London the same day, having performed the whole journey in seventeen hours.

In 1701 Mr. Sinclair, a Kirkby Lonsdale man, wagered that he would ride one of his own ponies on the Swifts at Carlisle 1,000 miles in 1,000 consecutive hours. He accomplished the feat. In 1773 Mr. Thomas Walker and Captain Hay matched their horses to run the whole of the distance from London to York, about 200 miles. Mr. Walker's horse failed to stay the journey and died from exhaustion at Tadcaster. Its opponent, however, completed the task in forty and one-half hours, and required no fewer than twelve bottles of wine to be administered to her from time to time as a stimulant.

Perhaps the greatest achievement accomplished in the New World was that which brought fame to the name of one daring rider, Aubrey, who in 1851 rode out from the plaza of Santa Fe to the public square at Independence, a distance of nearly 800 miles and through a country peopled by Indians still on the warpath. It was for a wager of $1,000 that he undertook to ride alone from Santa Fe over the trade trail to Independence within six days. It is said that no man, and many tried, could keep pace with the flying Aubrey, who spared none of his horses, and as a result reached his destination in five days and nineteen hours. His feat cost him the lives of several of his best horses. After he was carried off his last worn-out horse he became unconscious and remained so for forty-eight hours.

FLOWERS AS FOOD.

Play an Important Part In the Daily Menus of Other Lands.

A hungry British workman would have something to say if stewed daffodils were placed before him after a heavy morning's work, but in other hands, particularly east of Suez, flowers play an important part in the daily menu.

In Madras and other parts of India, as well as in the wild regions of Afghanistan, flowers are cultivated for food, and in Southern India, where the population is mainly vegetarian, lotus jelly is considered a great delicacy. The petals of young flowers are soaked in a sugar solution, and boiled until they form a stiff paste, which is powdered with more sugar and moulded. But it is scarcely a dish for the Western palate.

Shrub cakes, made with blossoms, ghee, and bazaar sugar, are popular in the north, and sold at two-pence apiece. They lead to abdominal troubles, but as the natives enjoy the strange concoction, they attribute subsequent ailments to Providence.

Every visitor to Ceylon, however, should sample butter-blossom, which is boiled and flavored with cinnamon or cloves.

Chinese cook lilies in milk and eat candied jasmine, while Japanese have a keen appetite for flowers, a taste which is shared by the Egyptians, who serve rose-petal jelly, prepared with powdered sugar, water, and isinglass, at the end of a meal. In Morocco the coarse porridge is definitely improved when served with a jelly made from pomegranate flowers.

In the West Indies, where exotic plants are as plentiful as cowslips at home, floriculture caters for the tables of all classes. A confection of banana blossoms delight the natives, and resident Europeans have been known to express their appreciation.

H. M. S. Victory.

Nelson's famous ship, H. M. S. Victory, has been refitted. Great pains have been taken to ensure that the ship shall appear just as she did in Nelson's day, and the renovation has cost near $500,000.

The famous and historically correct picture of Nelson's death is now placed as near as it is possible to tell to the spot where he fell. The Victory will, of course, never float again; she stands in Portsmouth in a dry berth.

Twenty seamen and twenty marines live aboard. Nelson's own quarters have been completed just as they were 123 years ago.

"Talkies" Owe Their New-Found Voice to the Telephone

All predictions lead to the belief that talking moving pictures—the Movietone—will be used universally very shortly, and the silent drama will perhaps be less dominant. Engineers of the Bell Telephone Laboratories were making a careful study of the ways in which speech is produced, when they discovered and developed the successive steps that have led to this newest achievement in motion picture entertainment. The telephone is, therefore, "Daddy" of the Movietone, which is being rapidly introduced to enthusiastic audiences throughout this continent, with Montreal as the first Canadian City to have installed the required equipment. Madge Bellamy, Fox Star, is shown above impersonating Sir Harry Lauder. Oval inset shows inspection of a wax disc upon which sound vibrations will be recorded.

FINANCIAL NEWS

Summarizing business conditions in Canada in is November Letter, the Royal Bank of Canada writes optimistically as follows:

With agriculture prosperous, manufacturing plants active, building construction achieving new records in all parts of the country, and mines producing increasing quantities of ore, it is not surprising that the employment index for each month in 1928 should be well above the level of the corresponding month of any previous year. Import and export statistics reveal a large volume of trade and all indices of Canadian business conditions show that the country is enjoying a sound prosperity. A continued broad and steady development of the type indicated by these statistics from agriculture, mining and manufacturing, will be of greater service to the ultimate welfare of the country than a sudden boom. From this viewpoint, the present tightness of money constitutes a healthy restraining influence, preventing over-speculation and too rapid expansion.

With harvesting completed, or nearing completion, throughout the country, the farmers are negaged in fall plowing and in the preparation of the land for the crop of 1929. The Canadian wheat crop as a whole has been the largest on record, amounting to about 575 million bushels.

An average of the crop estimates of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, the Manitoa Free Press, and the North West Grain Dealers' Association indicates that crops of the three prairie provinces will amount to 540 million bushels of wheat, 315 million bushels fo oats, 115 million bushels of barley, 15 million bushels of rye, and 4 million bushels of flax. In the other provinces the season has been normally satisfactory for agriculture.

In the first eight months of 1928, the amount of iron and steel produced in Canada exceeded the amount produced during the same months of 1927 by more than 30 per cent.; the newsprint production of 1928 exceeded that of 1927 by 15 per cent.; that of automobiles by 2 per cent , and that of flour by 16 per cent. In the tables given on the last page of this letter will be found the Royal Bank of Canada index of electrical energy production. The amount of energy generated in Canada for Canaidan use in 1928 exceeded the amount generated in these same months of 1927 by 19 per cent. Canadian manufacturing activity has been at a much higher level in 1928 than during 1927, and 1927 was a year of record-breaking activity.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics' "Preliminary Report of Mineral Production of Canada for the Six Months Ending June 30, 1928" shows that the value of minerals produced in this period was $105,600,000, compared with $99,000,000 in the same months of 1927.

The exports of lumber from British Columbia for the first six months of 1928 are 30,000,000 feet ahead of 1927.

Out in Rain Without Umbrella

It was estimated early this week that the short interest in Wall Street in Nickel must amount to at least 100,000 shares. With the market weak for a brief period, it would seem as though the shorts had increased rather than drawn in their lines, as there was not much opportunity for them to cover at yesterday's low levels. If this is the case their position is unenviable, to say the least, for the situation is that the stock which they have sold short is being called for deposit immediately. It does not appear likely that anyone who had had enough confidence in Nickel to stay with it through the somewhat stormy going that has obtained recently, will hold up their deposits of stock to accommodate those who have sold it short and done their best to destroy confiednce in the company itself, and all the factors that have gone to inspire confidence in the stock. Shareholders will immediately start depositing their stock, and it looks as though the short would have to stand some calling for orrowed stock. They will either have to buy in their lines or for the next few days will be somewhat slim, although, of course, the shorts can make adjustments with the certificates of deposit. The fact that London is a heavy buyer of the new stock at 33, indicating a value of nearly 200 for the present stock, naturally cannot offer much consolation for those who find themselves short. All in all, it is a very interesting situation, and appearances are that "those Canadians" have scored again

When Pain Comes

What many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali which neutralizes acids instanly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained the standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water will neutralize instantly many times as much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia described by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drugstore.

Calls Rule in India 'Pure Domination'

Mme. Larojini Naidu, Feminist Leader, Says Country Will Yet Be Free

Sees Peace of Victory

New York.—Mme. Sarojini Naidu, Indian feminist and the first woman ever elected President of the National Congress of India and, as such, successor to Mahatma Gandhi, explained to groups of Indian leaders and press representatives the latest developments of India's struggle for self-rule.

Robed in the costume of her native country, Mme. Naidu discussed the political outlook of India under English control only briefly, preferring apparently to confine her comments to cultural subjects. Besides holding one of the most important posts in Indian politics, Mme. Naidu is a poet, playwright, teacher and social worker.

Haridas T. Muzumdar, Secretary of the Naidu Reception Committee, explained that Mme. Naidu was "an unofficial ambassador to this country to interpret Indian culture." It is her first visit to the United States and it is felt, Mr. Muzumdar said, that her lectures in the country will promote better understanding not only between the United States and India but between the East and West. Following the luncheon, Mme. Naidu left for Chicago, where she will speak on the interpretation of Indian womanhood.

When asked about English influence in India, Mme. Naidu called it "pure domination." The form that India's struggle for freedom will take, she said, will develop later; "meanwhile the principle is there."

"Britain is trying to do something for education in India," she continued, "but she has spent so much for an army to guard India 'against its friends' that little is left for education. Puruely altruistic friendship does not yet exist between any nations. Pure domintion is more demoralizing to the ruling than the subject race."

Mme. Naidu said that the Simon Commission, which includes no Indian members, which the British Government has sent to study the Indian situation with a view to writing a new constitution for India, never will achieve anything because it cannot work "against the will of the people."

Ghandi, she said, is a man who represents the spiritual thought of India and one who is "looked up to" throughout the country. "There is only one feeling about Ghandi—he represents the soul of India and symbolizes all that is best in Indian culture. Our mysticism is a dynamic thing. It doesn't communicate with death but with life. Where you develop your muscles, we develop our mind, spirit and will."

Mme. Naidu, when asked about the significance of the marriage of the Maharajah of Indore to an American girl and told of the prominence the accounts of the ceremony received in the press, said that the reason for the interest shown in the marriage was "because you like stunts." Accounts of child-marriage in India, she said, have been exaggerated in America; and some of the stories about India, she added, were written by persons who had seen only "a few gutters and a few drains."

"Peace in a strong nation," she concluded, "is courage, and in a weak nation cowardice. You mustn't get the idea that India's peace is that of subsubmission. It is a peace of victory. The end is to be freedom for India and then friendly relations with England and other countries."

Saving Giant Tortoise From Utter Extinction

A very short time ago it seemed likely that when the giant Galapagos tortoises at the London Zoo had lived out their long, slow lives there would be no more of them to be seen. Our grandchildren or great-grandchildren would know them only from photographs.

Like many of the other strange creatures of the globe, they were being extinguished by folly, or greed or carelessness. The Galapagos tortoises are found only on the islands near the Equator, which bear their name, and 60 years ago they were innumerable. In later days whaling ships carried them off for food by the thousand, and left behind a legacy of dogs, pigs, cats and rats, which carried on the work of extermination by destroying the eggs.

When Dr. Townsend, of the New York Zoological Society, went to the Galapagos islands a year ago, he found that the tortoises had gone from all but a few islands, and there they had taken to the mountains.

The Galapagos tortoise is not of the build for a mountain climber, and this generation of his family would have been the last had not Dr. Townsend captured 180 of them and transported them in safety to places in South and Central America, where they can live protected lives.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Need Rich, Red Blood to Maintain Good Health

After passing the age of forty every woman has reason to grow anxious about her health. This time of trial, with its attacks of faintness and fits of depression, its often violent headaches and back pains is rightly dreaded by women; but if reasonable steps are taken to safeguard the health, no serious ill-effects will arise. At this turning point in life Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have given a helping hand to thousands of suffering women who were fighting a hopeless battle against poor health and waning strength.

The very best help for any woman of middle age is the health help given by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills reinforce the blood supply, enriching and purifying it. In doing this they nourish the starved and overtaxed nerves and give new strength and vitality to the whole system. By this natural process Dr Williams' Pink Pills completely dispel all pains and weakness, and a better, happier condition of health and spirits arises.

Every woman of middle age should take advantage now of the wonderful health-help of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box, by The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Fight Lone Battle

Farmers Are Lone Individuals, Struggling Against Organized Conditions, It Is Said

London.—The unsatisfactory conditions which are true of agriculture practically all over the world, and their decidedly poor state in England, afforded an interesting topic for Sir Horace Plunkett, who has long been a leader in bringing better living conditions for farmers in the British Isles. Speaking before the Allotments Organizatoin Society and Small Holders, Ltd., which encourages the taking up of small plots of ground to be worked in co-operation with other occupations, he said that the plight of English farmers largely springs from the same causes which bring dissastisfaction in America and elsewhere.

"The business of farming as distinct from the industry of farming is in a state of chaos," said Sir Horace. "The majority of farmers in this country buy everything they require in their industry at retail prices, sell everything they produce at wholesale prices, and borrow money on terms wholly unsuitable to the agricultural industry. The great mistake that farmers make is that they have not learned the meaning of modern conditions of combination. They are individuals struggling against highly organized conditions."

The farmers' plight may also be partly ascribed to the fact that while the slow processes of nature refuse to be hurried, man's inventive genius has made the industrial life of the city more agreeable than they were, continued the speaker. He poked some good-natured fun at certain so-called advances which are much heralded. "I hear a great deal about nitrogen from the air," he said, "about synthetic food and similar stunts. There was a delightful article in the press a while ago upon milk. Some inglorious physicist has discovered that the cow is quite unnecessary for the production of milk. All you have to do is take the grass to the laboratory and make the milk. Physically I dare say it is possible, but I don't expect to see that little industrial revolution in my own time."

Damage amounting to $600,000 was done in Kentucky by a tornado. I understand that there are thousands of anxious enquiries as to whether the old Kentucky home that everyone sings about is still all right.

To a Friend

I always pray for you with morning light,
When birds or sunbeams wake me to the day;
It is so sweet for parted friends to pray.
Thus may they help each other in life's fight.

Prayer spans the gulf of circumstance between
Our lives; I spend my thought on eager wings,
God bless my plea, to you a blessing brings,
And in His care I leave your life serene.

I always pray for you at close of day,
When in the quiet of my room I kneel,
With God and you in sympathy to feel;
It hallows sleep for parted friends to pray.

And through the working hours, oft silently
I lift my soul to God in prayer for you,
That He will bless your soul and bear you through,
I wonder—do you ever pray for me?

—Constance M Savage.

THOUSANDS OF MOTHERS USE NO OTHER MEDICINE

Baby's Own Tablets Are the Ideal Remedy for Babies and Young Children

Canadian mothers are noted for the care they give their little ones—the health of the baby is most jealously guarded and the mother is always on the lookout for a remedy which is efficient and at the same time absolutely safe. Thousands of mothers have found such a remedy in Baby's Own Tablets and many of them use nothing else for the ailments of their little ones. Among them is Mrs. Howard King, of Truro, N.S., who says:—"I can strongly recommend Baby's Own Talets to mothers of young children as I know of nothing to equal them for little ones."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont

World's Oldest Married Couple Dwell in Serbia

In a little Serbian village near Semlin are living probably the oldest married couple in the world. Documentary evidence proves that Demetrius Filienovic and his wife, Zivana, were already married and living in the village, where they had spent their childhood days, in 1339. Demetrius was then over twenty-one. He is fully 110, and his wife is 107.

They have lived together for eighty-nine years, and are now surrounded by numerous children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Both are in excellent health and in the enjoyment of all their faculties. Filienovic has never smoked or drunk spirits. He took his last glass of wine thirty years ago. —Tit-Bits, London.

Small Beginnings

Away among the Alleghanies there is a spring so small that a single ox could drink it dry on a summer's day. It steals its unobtrusive way among the hills, till it spreads out into the beautiful Ohio. Thence it stretches away a thousand miles, leaving on its banks more than a hundred villages and cities, and many thousand cultivated farms, and bearing on its bosom more than half a thousand steamboats. Then joining the Mississippi, it stretches away some twelve hundred miles more; until it falls into the great emblem of eternity. It is one of the great tributaries of the ocean, which, only obedient to God, shall roar and roar, till the angel, with one foot on the sea and the other on the land, shall lift up his hand to heaven, and swear that time shall be no more. So with moral influence. It is a rill, a rivulet, an ocean, boundless and fathomless as eternity.

Castoria is purely-vegetable, harmless and endorsed by the medical profession Avoid imitations. The Chas. H. Fletcher signature marks genuine Castoria.

More Immigration Fads

Toronto Telegram: Hon. Robert Forke, who, as Minister of Immigration, feels that he must do something to stem the tide of immigration oratory, proposes to establish in England schools for domestics. These, it is presumed,, will take girls from the factories and fit them for positions in Canadian homes. But why stop with these girls? Why not schools that will take men from the ranks of the unemployed and turn them into farmers? One proposition seems just as reasonable as the other.

Empire Ambassadors

Spectator (London): The existing means of diplomatic intercourse between Great Britain and the Irish Free State leaves much to be desired. Now that the British Government has appointed a High Commissioner to Canada, it is to be hoped that a similar appointment will be made in the Irish Free State without delay. . . . Diplomatically, if not commercially, the direct representation of Great Britain in Southern Ireland is quite as important as British representation in the Dominion of Canada.

The Ideal

It is no easy matter to keep hold of an ideal; it slips away amidst the excitements of society and the preoccupations of business; it is compromised amidst the onsets of temptation and the accesses of passion; but it must be recaptured and set up as the signal and standard of everyone who has not abandoned the struggle for a life which is more than mere existence.—James Stalker, D.D.

"One Horse Newspaper" is the manner in which in a letter to the Globe, Hon. G. N. Gordon refers to the weekly newspaper that has been supporting the Toronto Globe in demanding justice for a returned and disabled soldier, who, for party reasons, was shamefully put out of the running for the position of postmaster of Simcoe, by the Postmaster General, although properly approved and appointed by the Civil Service Commission. The Simcoe Reformer, undoubtedly one of the best weekly newspapers in Canada, and more ably edited than many of the daily newspapers, is no doubt the paper referred to by Hon. Mr. Gordon. But Mr. Gordon might better have kept quiet on the subject for it at once exposed his narrow vision of public opinion and his littleness of soul. As old as history records have we instances of otherwise able and capable men hampering their influence and ultimately bringing about their own downfall by just such snobbery as that shown in his letter to the Toronto Globe by Mr. Gordon. The weekly newspapers of Ontario can well take care of themselves, and whether, in the estimation of Mr. Gordon they are one horse or only half a horse, they have not yet developed into braying donkeys.

Many people plod along through life worrying about the future. "Today is not so bad," they sigh, "but what of the morrow?" In this frame of mind they are altogether incapable of enjoying the blessings of today, and should the anticipated trouble come tomorrow, they are ill-fitted to meet it. But nine times out of ten the fearful individual never overtakes the disaster that has an existence only in his moody forebodings. To enjoy life we ought to face the world with a smile rather than a frown, and as the sunshine eventually dispels the clouds, so the difficulties we fear for the future will disappear as we near them. No bridge should be crossed till it is reached and when the place where the bridge was seen in our imaginations is reached, there will be no obstacle, and, like the Children of Israel, we will be able to cross dry-shod.—Exchange.

Ex-Governor Al. Smith, candidate for President of the United States last week, and defeated so overwhelmingly by Herbert Hoover, is a good loser. When he knew that Hoover was elected, he at once sent him a telegram of congratulations. He did not turn about and lay the blame on others, nor did he find fault with the verdict of the people. He accepted his defeat like a man, and wished the new administration every success. Al. Smith made a sad mistake when he lined up with the liquor interests, but he is nevertheless a good fighter and a good loser. All the same the people of the United States are level headed enough to use proper discretion when it comes to electing a president.

The new Ontario Liquor permits have 13 pages. Thirteen is said to be an unlucky number. But the liquor permits have also an unwritten page. A page that in the future years many a young man would be glad to blot out or forget. It is a page of dissipation, of waste, of sin. A page that sapped his manhood, that seared his brain power, that took from him his manly ambitions. The 13 page liquor permit of 1929 is indeed an unlucky one to whoever buys it.

Premier King in his wonderful address at an non-partisian banquet tendered him at Ottawa last week, at which Sir George Foster was chairman, and represented the Ottawa Branch of the League of Nations Society in Canada, gave a clear, comprehensive, and understandable explanation of the Kellogg-Briand treaty, of some of the scenes at Geneva, where the treaty was considered and signed by all the leading nations of the world. Premier King said that unless honor had departed from the nations of the world, there could not be a recurrence of the dreadful war of 1914-18. But here is a message from the Prime Minister's address that should be blazoned throughout the whole Dominion. "I have come back to Canada with the feeling that in no place in all the world is there one where children may live brighter and better lives than in this great Dominion of ours," said the premier with feeling. "We should all be glad to live in a land where there is less fear and poverty, than anywhere else in the world."

This hymn was written in July of this year by a girl nineteen years of age, who is in domestic service in England and was read to a big congregation by Dr. Campbell Morgan at one of his services last week at Westminster Chapel.—says the Orillia Packet.

Lord of all pots and pans and things, since I've no time to be
A Saint by doing lovely things, or watching late with thee,
Or dreaming in the dawnlight, or storming
Heaven's gates,
Make me a saint by getting meals, and washing up the plates.

Although I must have Martha's hands, I have a Mary mind;
And when I black the boots and shoes, Thy sandals, Lord, I find.
I think of how they trod the earth, what time
I scrub the floor;
Accept this meditation, Lord, I haven't time for more.

Warm all the kitchen with Thy love, and light
it with Thy peace;
Forgive me all my worrying, and make all grumbling cease.
Thou Who didst love to give men food, in room or by the sea.
Accept this service that I do—I do it unto Thee.

The Winchester Press has no fault to find with the war being waged by women against cigarettes, but we would like to see them give a little more attention to the awful waste and evils of cosmetics. When we think of the two the latter is the more harmful.

Three women were elected to the United States Congress last week whose Christian names are Ruth. Now Ruth is a beautiful as well as Biblical name, and the U. S. Congress will, no doubt, profit by the presence of its Ruths.

More than 11,000,000 tourists visited Ontario during 1928 and spent about $100,000,000 according to figures obtaining at the Provincial Parliament building today. This is an increase of over 20 per cent over the record made last year.

Al. Smith says he will never run for public office again. We would imagine he'd feel that way.

We listened to a game of football being broadcast over the radio last Saturday, and we imagine that everyone was getting some kick out of it.

Completely new and original in appearance, with a number of interesting engineering features, the new Olympic Series Oakland Six is on display this week in Winchester at the showrooms of D. Melvin.

Smarter, roomier than a year ago, with bodies of distinctive design, and a chassis said to be the last word in mechanical refinement, the latest Oakland models bears only a passing resemblance to its predecessor—the New Canadian Oakland Six brought out a year age. The name of the new Olympic Series commemorates the performance of Canada's representatives at the Olympic games and its beauty of line is said to be reminiscent of the lithe grace of a trained and perfectly conditioned athlete.

Briefly, the new line offers a bigger, faster, more powerful engine; new Oakland type internal expanding 4 wheel brakes; masterful body creations by Fisher; new Duco color combinations; higher, larger cross-flow radiator with grill front; adjustable driver's seat; chrome plated lamps of new design, sturdy ten-spoke wheels, Lovejoy shock absorbers and spring covers as standard equipment; new steering gears; sturdier frame, and a host of other improvements that are destined to make the car a distinguished addition to the aristocratic motor car family of the Dominion. The United Church

(Contributed)

On Sunday morning Rev. J. A. Waddell gave a Thanksgiving message that was appropriate for the members of the W. M. S. at their autumn Thankoffering meeting, taking Luke 17: 17 as a text. He said this story of the ten lepers is being repeated every day. Ingratitude is too wide spread. We fail to acknowledge the mercies of God. He urged us to give a word of appreciation, and spoke of many ways in which we can express our regular attendance at church and sharing all our privileges in truth. "Let us give way and reveal to God that we are grateful for these blessings and willing to share them with others," said the pastor and his appeal was effective in as much as a generous thankoffering was given.

Deut. 8: 2 was the text of the evening when an impressive Armistice service was held, the two minutes silence being observed at 11 a. m. and again at the evening service. The pastor spoke of this fitting tribute of silence and of the great sacrifice made by those who had paid the price in the Great War. He asked "Are we going to be worthy of that sacrifice? What a debt we owe them all. We believe the sacrifice has not been in vain. It should call us to a fuller consecration. Christ is calling all to put on the whole armor of God and help to bring in a better and a happier day."

Special and appropriate music was given by the choir and the hymns were also in keeping with the occassion. Next Sunday afternoon the Mission Band will hold their Thankoffering service.

News Of Chesterville

There passed away at her late residence Elma, near Chesterville, last week Mrs. Arthur Thom at the age of 67. She was well known and very highly respected by a particularly large number of friends. The late Mrs. Thom is survived by two sons, Clark, of Calgary, Lyle, at home, and one daughter, Nettie, also three sisters and three brothers, Mrs. W. H. Casselman and Mrs. W. A. McElroy, of Chesterville, Mrs Geo. Little, Messrs S G. Carlyle, W. L. Carlyle, and M. D. Carlyle, all at present residing in the West. Mr. Thom predeceased her five years ago.

The funeral was very largely attended at the family home, where services were conducted by Rev. A. J. Fowlie, of Kemptville, the pall-bearers being Messrs W. H. Casselman, W. A. McElroy, John Casselman and McKenzie Thom. Interment was made in Maple Ridge cemetery.

Mrs. Fred Merkley is at present spending a holiday with her daughter in Montreal, where she intends remaining until after after Thanksgiving.

Mrs. Parnham Allison, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Allison, of Morrisburg, and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Graham spent the past week in Toronto. They also spent a day the guest of Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Brown at Kingston on their way home.

Mr. Kenneth Garron, of Lansing, Mich., is visiting his father, Mr. Issac Garron.

Messrs Arnold Kyle, of Toronto, formerly of the staff of the Bank of Nova Scotia here, and Orland Kyle, also of Toronto, have returned home after spending a holiday with friends in town.

The October meeting of the Morewood Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. A. B. Allison t is week.

Obituary

One of the oldest pioneers of this district passed away on Sunday evening last Nov. 11, at 10.30 p. m., in the person of the late Mr. Peter Darling, who was born seventy-five years ago at Waddington, N. Y. Scotch parentage and came to Canada with his parents at the early age of six years to Nation Valley where he has since lived.

At an early age he married Mariah Ball and to this union was born seven children. Five survives him: Mrs. Ward Smith and Mrs. J. A Bogart, of Chesterville, Garfield of Winchester, Frank of Grantley, and John of Chesterville.

After seventeen years his wife passed away and three years later he married Salome Shaver of Morewood, and to this union eight children was born, Mrs. John Bruce Wincheste, Mrs. Alex McLean, of Almonte, Mrs. Edward Panke, Oshawa, Miss Evangeline, Ottawa, and four sons, Hewitt and Gerald, of Oshawa, Wallace and Donald at home. The widow and children mourn the loss of a loving husband and a kind father. A husband and father that set an example to other men, the late Mr. Darling will be sadly missed in the home and district.

The funeral service was held Tuesday afternoon, leaving the house at 1 p. m for the United Church, Chesterville. The service was conducted by the Rev. R. E. Newman of the United Church, of which the deceased was an Elder since Union, previous to that he had been a lifelong member of the Presbyterian Church and many years he was an Elder in that Church.

The late Mr. Darling was active and a man of great ambition and took great pride in his home and farm and battled the world as the only son of a widowed mother, and lived to see the day when he was satisfied with his work well done. He had fought the good fight and we feel sure he will hear the Master say in the Glory Land "Well done good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

He also leaves to mourn his loss besides a widow and thirteen children, 27 grandchildren and two great grandchildren, and many nieces and nephews, children of his two sisters the late Mrs. Hutt and Mrs. Marshall The sympathy of this vicinity goes out to them all in their sad bereavement.

A large concourse of friends followed the remains to its last resting place, Maple Ridge, testifying to the esteem held for the deceased. The flowers were many and beautiful, among those were, Wreaths from Widow and Family, Mrs. W. L. Scott of Winchester, Carruthers Family, Nation Valley, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Hutt and Mrs. Hobart, Ottawa, Mr. and Mrs. W. Ault, and Messrs Arthur and Edward Hutt, Detroit. Basket—Staff and Nurses of Civic Hospital, Ottawa.

The pall-bearers were, Messrs Geo. A. Merkley, Geo C. Merkley, Grant Gray Ernest Gray, Norman Moodie, W. T. Rae.

Educated Welsh Still Believe in Witch Doctors

Foolish Superstitions Are Existent Among People of All Classes

MOLESKIN CURE

Incredible though it may sound in this matter-of-fact age, witchcraft is still widely believed in and practiced in Wales, and among its devotees are people of education as well as simple folk.

This fact was announced at the jubilee congress of the Folk Lore Society which is being held in Burlington House, Piccadilly. It occasioned no surprise in the audience, for this consisted entirely of men and women who have spent years in delving deep into the mysteries of the world's superstitions.

According to Prof. Gwynne Jones, belief in witchcraft is particularly strong in Cardiganshire, Montgomeryshire, and along the English-speaking border.

BEWITCHED COW.

"A medical friend of mine," he said "told me the other day that a young woman university graduate who had distinguished herself in science came to him and asked him if he could cure one of her father's cows, which, she declared, had been bewitched."

Another case which had come to his knowledge was that of an extremely intelligent and well-read man who, suffering from depression, journeyed 40 miles to consult a witch-doctor, though at the time he was being attended by his own family doctor.

There are many witch-doctors to be found in Wales, it seems, and their aid is sought by sufferers from all kinds of complaints.

A man who was suffering from asthma and could get no relief from ordinary medicines went in despair to one of them and was given a piece of moleskin to wear on his chest. "I am told," said Prof. Gwynne Jones, "that the man was cured of his complaint. Then one day his doctor came to him and removed the piece of moleskin from off his chest, and the asthma immediately returned."

FATHER AND A TOOTH

To superstitious beliefs there is apparently no end in Wales. Here are some mentioned by Prof. Gwynne Jones:

A man is expected to suffer from toothache before the birth of a child to his wife, and to lose a tooth every time a child is born to him.

A girl will know that she will get married if she is able to retain in her mouth a drink of water from a well, while she walks three times round the well.

A marriage will be unlucky if the bride returns to a house in which no fire has already been kindled.

A bird flying against a window at night is a portent of death; a tree that falls has a similar significance.

"You do so remind me of a telescope, Mr. Simms." "My appearance, do you mean?" "Partly, but you're so easily drawn out, seen through and shut up again."

HENRY'S SHORTHAND SCHOOL
Ottawa, Ontario
No school in Canada offers a better training, or ensures a more successful future. Henry's leads all others, and ranks among employers as "THE SCHOOL OF HIGHER EFFICIENCY"—a fact borne out by more than 600 pupils who have, since January, 1913, left other Ottawa Schools to come to it.
Therefore, it is not surprising that business men, in advertising for stenographers should specially say, "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

The Singing Leaf

By ALICE WETHERELL

Brown Leaf should have been lonesome. For she was the only leaf on the whole oak tree without a gay, gay dress. But she wasn't lonesome really. For Brown Leaf had a secret that made her very happy. So happy, indeed, was Brown Leaf, that all her sisters on the tree began to talk about it.

Brown Leaf heard their whispers. For after listening very closely to the birds all summer lon, Brown Leaf heard very, very quiet sounds. She used to waken in the morning to the sweet little chirp of the baby thrush. And that is a very soft sound. Yes, Brown Leaf's sisters were whispering about her, but what did she care? She had her secret.

"What makes Brown Leaf so happy?" she heard her sister in the scarlet dress say. "If I looked as dull as she does in that Brown dress I'd cry my eyes out."

"I can't understand," whispered Orange Leaf, another sister. "You'd think to see her smile that she had a dress as gay as any of us. But then she could have had if she had bathed in the sunset pool as we did, instead of listening to those thrushes all the time."

"Well," said Purple Leaf, "perhaps now the thrushes have gone away she will take a bath in the sunset pool, and still change the color of that dull dress."

"It certainly will be a dull party for her if she stays that color," said Scarlet Leaf.

Now Brown Leaf heard every single word her sisters said. But she was happy, for she had her secret still. Brown Leaf did know that the party was to be a fancy dress one. For the King of the Winds had issued an order to that effect. In fact, it was that order that had made all the other leaves bathe in the sunset pool. But Brown Leaf had not cared to be gay-colored. She had chosen brown herself.

Brown Leaf Chooses

"I'd like to be the color of your feathers," she had told the thrush.

"Bathe in the moonlight and listen to my song," the thrush had said. Night after night, she had bathed in the moonlight and listened to the thrush's song. And one moring she had wakened with this pretty new brown dress. Oh, if she could only get her great wish as easily as she had changed her color.

It would be easy to get her great wish. When she had asked the thrush about it, he had said:

"Watch the sunset every single night, and think of the loveliest sound you ever heard."

This advice was easy to follow. For Brown Leaf had always watched the sunset from her sheltered spot behind the thrush's nest. When the thrushes had been here, she had watched it with them as they sang to her about the lovely colors that she saw. "And think of the loveliest sound you ever heard." That, too, was easy, for wasn't the thrush's song the loveliest sound that she had ever heard?

Would she get her greatest wish if she did all this night after night? Brown Leaf couldn't tell, but she could try. She had got her other wish by trying. But this great wish was so much more important. She had wanted it ever since she had first heard a baby thrush whisper to its mother. Then she had wanted it more than ever when the young thrush had sung his first song to the sunset. She had wanted it so badly that she had sat and listened to that song instead of bathing in the sunset pool with all her sisters. She wouldn't move a tiny bit from behind the thrush's nest.

"I want to listen to the thrush. I want to learn to sing," Brown Leaf had said. And of course the other leaves had laughed at her.

A leaf sing! Who had ever heard of such a thing? What was Brown Leaf thinking of! She had wanted a brown dress and now she wanted to sing. Why couldn't Brown Leaf be like all the others?

Brown Leaf was sorry she had told her greatest wish. But she hadn't told her secret. She hadn't told them how she was going to learn to sing. Perhaps she would surprise them yet, even though they laughed at her.

The Fancy Dress Party

At last there came the night of the autumn party. Brown Leaf could hear the approaching music of the Frolicking Winds as they came, led by their king.

"Poor Brown Leaf!" she heard her sisters whispering. "She will have a poor time at a fancy dress party in a dull, dull gown like that."

And so that she might not hear their voices, Brown Leaf kept repeating to herself:

"Watch the sunset. Think of the loveliest sound you have ever heard."

"Who, who, who, who are you?" the winds kept singing as they came. And in a minute Brown Leaf say that all her sisters were up and dancing, while the winds were singing to keep time.

On and on the sisters danced, until at last they dropped from weariness. "Stop, winds, we're tired. We're going to sleep," they all were calling. And when Brown Leaf looked down she saw that the winds had left her sisters down among the flowers in the garden.

"We're not tired," the winds kept singing.

"No, we're not tired," said the King of the winds. "This is the time for our real music." Then he came up quite close to Brown Leaf and whispered:

"Sing a lullaby, and we shall play our harps."

"The King says I can sing. The Thrush was right," thought Brown Leaf. Then, as the winds began to play their harps, Brown Leaf watched the sunset, and thought harder than she had ever thought before of the Thrush's lovely song.

And as the winds played on their harps, Brown Leaf began to sing a lullaby to her sisters, who were lying in their cozy beds among the flowers. And Brown Leaf was very, very happy when she saw their looks of understanding and of thanks.—The Christian Science Monitor.

Great Shannon Power Scheme Will Drive Ireland's Industries

Army of Irish and German Workers Carry on Task of Harnessing River's Flow—Undertaking Called Second Only to Niagara

Dublin—Ireland's great need has long been for cheap, home-produced power to take the place of imported coal, and the Shannon electricity scheme is the first bold, well-planned attempt to meet this need.

To-day, huge, redpainted electric standards stretch spider-like from the Shanon works, covering the country with a network of cables through which it is confidently predicted that next year he industries and towns of the Free State will be supplied with light, heat, and power.

Previous schemes for utilizing the water power of the Shannon have come to nothing because of the natural difficulties. The problem facing the engineers was to get a continuous fall of sufficient volume, summer and winter, to maintain a constant supply of power. The Shannon is a river of variable flow. It fluctuates from 1,600,000 cubic feet in winter to 75,000 cubic feet in summer.

The plan of the Shannon scheme is: 1 To secure an adequate storage basin. 2 To construct a canal—the head race—from this basin that will lead t hewater to the point where the deepes fall is possible. 3 To guide the spent water through another canal—the tail race—back to the Shannon.

Lakes as Reservoirs

Three lakes—Lough Derg, Lough Ree and Lough Allen—are natural reservoirs, which can be drawn on to maintain the water supply. From Lough Derg to Limerick the Shanon flows in a winding course of some 30 miles, gradually dropping about 100 feet. The head race for the power development has been pland to begin where the water level of Lough Derg can be retained with the least effort.

In the present "partial development" scheme, only Lough Derg will be required for water storage. But in the "further development" which is anticipated to be reached by 1937, Lough Ree and Lough Allen will be used, while in the "final development" the storage capacity of the three lakes will be more than quadrupled by artificially raising the level of Lough Derg about 7 feet.

The weir and the intake building are situated about four miles from Killaloe. The intake building is a massive wall of reinforced concrete set at an angle to the river. Three pierced openings will admit the water to the head race. There is a smaller opening for navigaion. Boats going from Limerick to Killaloe will be able to proceed direct through the head race and the tail race by means of a lock instead of by devious ways of river and canal.

Flooding of Low-Lying Ground

The weir will restrain the Shannon from entering its natural bed and will help to raise the upstream water level by some 25 feeto. Six great sluice gates will regulate the outflow. Owing to the elevation of the water level, low-lying ground up the river will be flooded except where protective embankments are built. A fish pass will be provided in the weir to enable salmon to reach Lough Derg.

Some 4000 men are employed on the works, and of these over 400 are Germans. Close by is a small German village of wooden huts, gayly curtained, with flowers on the window sills. Fair-complexioned, flaxen-haired women may be seen swinging sturdily across this Irish mountain side passing from one hut to another.

The canal bed has been cut through the hills—the tail race for the most part being cut through solid rock. Mechanical diggers are at work. Caterpillar excavators crawl up the side. The town of Limerick is used to the sullen boom of the blasting. Notice boards in German are freqpent and trucks bearing the legend "Krupps" or "Siemens Bauunion" rumble up and down.

The strange mechanical "banker" weighs 250 tons. It keeps two mechanical diggers working at full capacity to supply its needs. This machine, brought over from Germany in sections, is busy making the bank of the huge canal, smoothing the side, picking up sand and gravel with one continuous pull.

Turbine at Power House

The center of all the work is the great power house at Ardnacrusha, where each of the turbines will generate electricity to the extent of 30,000 horsepower. The sluice house, an immense dam, stretches across the canal, pierced by six holes. Three of these holes lead to pipes 20 fee in diameer and 145 feet long. They convey water to a tapering spiral, like a gigantic snail shell, 100 feet below. These turbines are among the largest in the world and each bearing weighs 20 tons.

When the scheme is working, 105 tons of water a second will enter each intake pipe, and the bearing will carry a total weight of 502 tons, which is the greatest known strain any single bearing has to stand.

The engineer, overwhelmingly proud of this Irish achievement, said: "It is second only to the power station at Niagara Falls, and we had to make every bit of this, while that was ready made. Anyway," he added, with an Irish twinkle, "we shan't waste so much power here!"

When the work is completed, the water will trickle slowly in over a period of three months, during which time the bed of the canal will settle. Searching tests will be made for leakages. Then, in October or November next year, driven by Shannon power, electric lights will blaze and the wheels of industry hum throughout Ireland.

"With another rise in skirts and an abrupt drop in temperature, handkerchiefs continue to fluctuate."

Boy Matadors Thrill Spain

Feat in Bull-Ring Revives Interest in Old-Time Joust

Barcelona, Spain—A last desperate attempt to revive the past glories of the bull-ring is being made in Spain by means of two schoolboys, Manolo and Pepe Mejias, aged fifteen and fourteen.

Since Gallito, Spain's greatest matador of recent years, met his death in the bull-ring it has been generally felt in Spain that the days of the bullfight were numbered. And as no other star of his magnitude came forward to take his place, this feeling grew.

Now, however, these two schoolboys, descendants of a long line of bull-fighters, have suddenly stepped into the arena, and have won even the applause of the veteran toreador idols of yesterday.

Manolo and Pepe Mejias' names are on every one's lips, and their photographs in all the Spanish newspapers. When they killed six young bulls in the Monumental bull-ring in Barcelona the other day, there was not a place to be had in the vast building. Seats which normally cost about two shillingswere sold at a premium of from thirty shillings to three pounds.

Pepe, the younger, an unassuming child with soft brown eyes, looked even younger than his years, and once he had discarded his glittering costume of gold sequins, it was easier to picture him as a schoolboy rather than as a killer of bulls.

Manolo, his brother, a typical Spanish youth in appearance, was equally unperturbed by the tumultuous reception they had received that afternoon.

"Splendours of Sport"

"The people of Spain," said Manolo, "are neglecting the bull-ring for the football field, but we, descendants of a mighty race of bullfighters, have sworn to revive the splendours of our national sport.

"Bullfighting has lost its hold on the Spanish people because of timid toreadors whose first thought has been for their own safety, and not for the glory of the arena and the tradition of the real bullfighter, who would die before he would run away from the bull."

Pepe said that his greatest desire was to share with his brother the honor of becoming Spain's most famous matador.

The boys confessed that they had become bullfighters much against the wish of their father, Bienvenida, who was twice severely injured in the bull-ring at Madrid.

If Manolo, three years ago, had not confided to his brother his intention of jumping into the bull-ring at Seville with an old cloak of his father's which he had hidden under his jacket, the boys might never have achieved their ambition.

This action of Manolo's, although he was found out and severely punished at the time, proved to the father that nothing would thwart the boys' desire to become matadors.

Since then, under the experienced tutorship of their father, the boys have gone from triumph to triumph Manolo is desribed by authorities on bullfighting as the more stylish exponent of the "art," but Pepe is the more daring, and it is from this child of fourteen that the bullfighting "fans" of Spain are expecting great things.

Canada to Aid Amateur Radio Operators

Restrictions of Convention to Be Eased by Efforts at Co-operation

Canada in its endeavor to give the amateur transmitting radio man all the opportunities to experiment, has already done extensive work to enable him to carry on uninterrupted when the new radio convention goes into force on January 1. According to this convention, made last year at Washington, it is necessary to have the consent of other countries before any Canadian amateurs can operate with as much freedom as in the past with these foreign lands.

The first step, taken early in August, was to write to the two telegraph companies in the Dominion, the Canadian National Telegraph and the Canadian Pacific Railway's Telegraphs, and get their consent to allow amateurs the freedom of sending such experimental and personal messages as would other wise not find their way over telegraph wires. Both concerns wrote to Commander C. P. Edwards assuring him of their co-operation to help the amateur in this way.

Commander Edwards then had letters sent to all British dominions, the United Kingdom, the United States, Portugal, Philippines and a number of other South American and European countries through the Department of State at Ottawa. "We are the first country to have done this for the amateur," the Commander stated in Ottawa. "We want the amateur to be able to go right ahead with his work when the new convention comes into force."

He works with MAGIC

THIS MAN is putting up telephone poles. Early in the morning he is out making a way for the wire that is to come. At night when the gang gets back to camp he is tired.

But he likes it. There is zest in the work he is doing, for he is in new country. There have never been telephones here before.

He is blazing the trial. After him will come families and homes and stores and factories to make another city. Over the wires on the poles he plants there will be voices and laughter, business will hum, all the world will draw closer.

He works with magic. The wire transforms time and distance. Today you can lift the telephone at your elbow and within seven minutes hear the voice of your friend in England say: "Are you there?"

THIS MAGIC in the telephone has not come in a day. It has come with year after year of experiment and improvement. The telephone of today is no more like the first telephone than a machine gun is like a bow-and-arrow.

And the telephone of tomorrow will surpass the telephone of today. Tomorrow perhaps, this telephone at your elbow will bring you the face of the person you talk with, will hold new magic we now do not dream of.

THIS IS the urge to improve—to seek and to find something always better—which has been the definite policy of the telephone business since the first crude instrument reproduced the voice of its inventor fifty-odd years ago.

By no other policy could the telephone have kept pace with this country or contributed to its progress as it has done in reducing Canada's wide distances and differences of geography.

And by no other policy can the telephone now meet the responsibility of serving Canada's future.

CANADA'S FUTURE is at least twenty years of unprecedented growth and prosperity. All the signs and barometers of business point to it. All the shrewdest prophets of business predict it.

The signs and the prophets are so sure, and the future is so unmistakable, that within the next five years more money will be needed for extension of the telephone system in Ontario and Quebec than was spent by the business in all its first forty years.

THE MAN pushing poles and wire into new country and the foresight which now is planning over one hundred million dollars of new plant to meet the needs of the next five years come from the same policy and the same purpose—to give Canadians facilities of communication worthy of their country and its future.

REVIEWS CANADA'S ADVANCE.

Canada's Status as Individual Nation Within Empire Welcomed.

Writing on "The New International Status of Canada" in the Revue des deux Mondes," Andre Siegfried emphasizes the long way the Dominion has travelled since its early days as a colony.

"The new relationship existing between Canada and England seems to be nothing but a personal union under the same sovereign," he says. "Every phase of subordination seems to be erased, leaving two states of equal status. This new statute brought forth, in our relations with England, has certain consequences: for example, the Governor-General, although he remained a representative of the crown, ceased to be a British agent; Great Britain's signature could no longer influence Canada; Chanak and Lauzanne prove that we have taken up the new situation in a serious manner.

"Our place in the society of nations is one of a country politically independent, and if our signature, in the documents of the society, is often seen with that of England, they are not dependent one on the other.

"We have also acquired during the last ten years certain essential organs necessary to an independent country, and this is evident if our relations with foreign countries are considered. It is not enough for a people to call itself a nation; it must be recognized as such by foreign countries. This is what has happened with regards to Canada, during the last few years and in a most admirable fashion. For every legation created by Canada, we have received the same in return. The United States, France, Japan, have already or will soon have their Ministers at Ottawa, and Great Britain herself will send a high commissioner, who will be Britain's agent in Canada."

From this evolution, says Mr. Siegfried, the Empire draws "new sources of life and moral unity, but her political unity belongs to the past."

"Europe, and France especially, cannot help but welcome with the greatest joy, this official entry of Canada into the international concert of powers. It is, we must admit, a worthy welcome to our country, and the quality of this gesture reveals what attention is being paid, in France, to the political evolution of Canada. In France, Canada is highly thought of; we are closely watched; we are loved and admired and the best mark of this admiration would be the nomination, as first Minister of France to Canada, of M. Daniel Serruys, a university graduate, who was thrown into the world of commerce and diplomacy by the reactions of the war and who is making a name for himself wherever he is to be found."

ANTIQUES ON TRIAL.

London Has a "High Court of Justice" to Protect Collectors.

A "High Court of Justice" for antique dealers to settle disputes regarding the value, age, or genuineness of curios and objects of art, is held in the West End of London at regular intervals.

Sometimes as many as twenty judges, including leading experts on antique furniture, pictures, china, and other specialized branches of the trade, attend to hear appeals.

Members of the British Antique Dealers' Association, as well as private collectors who buy their treasures through members, are entitled to appeal to the novel tribunal, and if necessary the judges have the power to call in independent experts to deal with difficult cases.

The articles in dispute are sent to the court as "exhibits," where they sometimes remain for several days for careful scrutiny.

The object of this court, which was established twelve years ago, is to protect collectors from fraudulent curio merchants, and at the same time to safeguard the interest of genuine dealers.

Here Endeth the Lesson.

Mr. Graham Moffat, the Scottish actor and author of "Bunty Pulls the Strings," in his book, "The Pawky Scot," relates an anecdote that indicates religion and thrift can be uneasy partners: "A Canadian farmer of Scottish extraction kept up the religious traditions of his race by reading each morning to his family and his field workers a consecutive chapter of the Bible. One fine day in the harvesting season, when time was precious, he struck the sixth chapter of 1st Chronicles, which consists of eighty-one verses of genealogical names. He droned on till he came to:—

"'And Shallum begat Hilkiah, and Hilkiah begat Azariah, and Azariah begat Seraiah, and Seraiah began Jehozadak.'

"There he paused and looked over the leaf.

"'Weel, my friends,' he said, 'they begat ane anither richt doon to the end o' the page, and a lang way ower on the ither side, so we'll jist leave them to it. Off wi' ye to yer wark!'"

Birds at School.

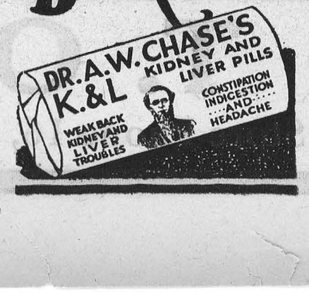
A pair of blackbirds which built their nest on the clock in the gymnasium at Wincham Hall School, Lostock-Graham, Cheshire, England, delighted the children by rearing their young within the school-room. The birds gained access to the gymnasium through a small window near the roof which is usually left open. They have on many occasions fed their young while a lesson was being given.

Aviation In Alaska.

Alaska now has more than forty landing fields for airplanes, and plans are under way for the construction of sixteen more, according to F. C. Crawford of Fairbanks.

Outnumber Men by Two Million.

Under the new voting bill in Britain, which gives equal franchise to men and women, the latter will outnumber the former by more than two million.



WASHING AWAY

Yorkshire Is Losing Fifteen Feet of Its Coast Every Year.

Is England tilting? asks a writer in Answers. Geologists think it is and that, while the north and west are slowly rising, the south and east are sinking. In 1909 gauges were placed at Newlyn, Felixstowe, and Dunbar to test the truth of the tilting theory. But the changes are so slow it will not be until the year 2,000 that our descendants will be able to prove whether there is anything in the idea.

One thing is certain, however; many of our coastal beauty spots are rapidly vanishing under the sea, and a number of popular resorts are having a desperate struggle to save themselves from the hungry waves.

When Caesar first arrived in Britain from France, nearly 2,000 years ago, the only chalk cliff he saw as he sailed up the Channel was Beachy Head. All the rest of the coast was downs sloping gradually to a gravel beach. Dover, like Hastings, stood on a small estuary.

Since those days the coast of Kent and Sussex has changed completely. Some parts have been washed quite away; others have been reclaimed.

The losses extend all the way from Whitby in Yorkshire round to Lyme Regis in Dorsetshire, but the parts that have suffered worst are those round Cromer, and the North and South Forelands. The erosion seems to have quickened up during the past thirty or forty years, and to-day it is believed that England's east and south coast are losing nearly 2,000 acres a year. Sussex alone is losing 400 acres yearly, the area of a good-sized farm.

Aldeburgh on the Suffolk coast is a great sufferer, for the North Sea is taking steady toll of the town. At one time the town hall was separated from the sea front by several streets. Now it stands facing the sea, all the streets between having vanished into the maw of Mother Ocean.

A few miles north of Aldeburgh the tourist can see a very small portion of the ruins of an ancient priory standing on the verge of the low cliff. This is all that remains of the once great town of Dunwich, famous for its wealth and beauty.

At Lowestoft the never-ceasing encroachment of the sea is a nightmare to the people. Enormous sums have been spent and are being spent to fight back the waves with groynes and walls. The latest scheme of defences will cost the town no less than £135,000.

All along the East Yorkshire coast people are crying: "Can nothing be done to save our homes and our land from the hungry sea?" Fifteen feet yearly is being shorn off Yorkshire. At Aldbrough the bungalow dwellers are feverishly moving their homes back to safer sites, while the Skirlaugh Council is in despair at the terrible inroads of the sea into its territory.

At Hornsea the waves in time of storm actually threaten the railway station. Some idea of the scale on which Yorkshire is being destroyed can be gathered from the fact that since 1786 thirty flourishing coastal villages have totally disappeared.

The greatest alteration to the map at present in progress is at Spurn Head, at the mouth of the Humber. The once great promontory, which carries a lighthouse and a number of cottages, will soon be an island, for all that remains between it and the mainland is a strip of soil hardly wider than an ordinary road.

EMBALMED HIS OWN BODY.

Man Drank Poison Enough to Kill 200 Persons.

Astonishment at the ease with which violent poisons can be purchased was expressed by a North Devon coroner, at an in quest on Walter S. Walker of Bickington, who died after saying that he was going into his gun-room to have a drink, says an Old Country paper.

"This is a most remarkable case," writes Mr. Thomas Tickle, the county analyst, in a letter read by the coroner. He continued, referring to the dead man:

"He must have drunk about a teacupful of the weed-killer, containing enough poison to kill about 200 people, in the most concentrated form to which it can be reduced and in the most active state possible.

"The man's mummy will possibly never decay, it is so thoroughly permeated with the most effective of all embalming agents."

Analysis, added Mr. Tickle, revealed the presence of 328 grains of arsenic oxide in the body.

The "Little Midshipman"

The "Little Midshipman," familiar to all lovers of Dickens, may still be seen keeping guard just inside the shop of a firm of nautical publishers in the Minories.

Dickens described him as a midshipman, but the figure is really that of a naval officer wearing the uniform of Nelson's time and taking an observation.

The figure is about two feet high, exquisitively carved in wood and appropriately colored. It is almost a century and a half old. It now bears a brass plate with: "This is the original 'Little Midshipman' immortalized by Charles Dickens in 'Dombey and Son'."

Eating More Grape-Fruit.

Grape-fruit is gaining popularity so rapidly in the Old Country that there was 421,000 boxes imported as against 15,000 in 1923, 48,000 in 1924, 141,000 in 1925, and 158,000 in 1926.

These handsome Seals, bearing the double-barred Red Cross, carry a message of hope to those who are afflicted with consumption. Every dollar received through their sale is used for the maintenance of patients.

The National Sanitarium Association is in need of funds to carry on the work of its hospitals in Muskoka and at Weston. Why not buy these Seals in lieu of others? Not only will you get good value in return, but your money will serve a greater end—for it will go to help someone in distress.

Look for the double-barred Red Cross on every packet. None others are genuine.

For sale by school children and banks, or direct from the Xmas Seal Department, Gage Institute, Toronto 2, Ontario.

"Keep in mind you're Riding on Air!"

AIR lifts the load off the road. The heavier the load the more air it takes. That's why tire makers have worked out the correct inflation pressure for every size of tire for different loads.

Know the correct pressure for your tires, and stick to it. Don't guess it — gauge it. Two or three pounds under pressure cuts miles off the life of a tire.

Keep in mind you're riding on air, and if there isn't sufficient air, you're riding straight into trouble.

Old Sayings

As poor as a church mouse,
As thin as a rail.
As fat as a porpoise,
As rough as a gale,
As brave as a lion,
As spry as a rat,
As bright as a sixpence
As weak as a cat.

As proud as a peacock,
As sly as a fox,
As mad as a March hare,
As strong as an ox,
As fair as a lily,
As empty as air.
As rich as Croesus.
As cross as a bear.

As pure as an angel,
As neat as a pin,
As smart as a steel trap,
As ugly as sin,
As dead as a door-nail,
As white as a sheet,
As flat as a pancake,
As red as a beet.

As round as an apple,
As black as your hat,
As brown as a berry,
As blind as a bat,
As mean as a miser,
As full as a tick,
As plump as a partridge,
As sharp as a stick.

As clean as a penny,
As dark as a pall,
As hard as a millstone,
As bitter as gall,
As fine as a fiddle,
As clean as a bell,
As dry as a herring,
As deep as a well.

As light as a feather,
As tough as a rock,
As stiff as a poker,
As calm as a clock,
As green as a gosling,
As brisk as a bee,
And now let me stop,
Lest you weary of me.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear little daughter, Bessie Bluer Wright, who departed this life, Nov. 17, 1927.

Our Heavenly Gardener was going his rounds
And we could not His wishes deny,
When He asked that our dear little flower be sent
To bloom in His garden on high.

No stain was on her little soul,
Sin had not entered there;
And innocence slept sweetly on
That pale white brow so fair.

She was too pure for this cold earth,
Too beautiful to stay,
So God's holy angels bore,
Our darling Bessie away.

Sadly missed by Father, Mother and little brother Lowell.

Ten Years In Hospitals

How would you like to spend ten years of your life in hospitals? Perhaps you would be glad to if you had no other home most of the time and the hospital offered the only chance of staying alive. Mrs. Patrick has been living this way for years. Her trouble? Common enough—consumption, and she is poor and almost friendless. Her present stay at the Toronto Hospital for Consumptives has done her so much good, however, that she believes she will stay out for good when she leaves. She is anxious to get away to a quiet life in some small town, perhaps to open a small millinery shop. The excellent treatment she has been getting has put new life and new hope in Mrs. Patrick; but, of course, she and so many hundreds of others who have spent their last cent in the search for health must be helped by warm-hearted friends. A contribution from you would be greatly appreciated.

Such may be sent to Hon. W. A. Charlton or A. E. Ames, 223 College Street, Toronto 2, Ontario.

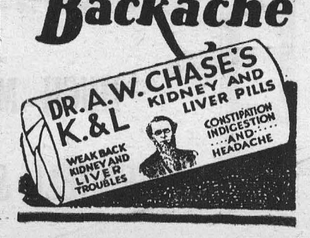
Why Is A Newspaper Like A Woman

That was a question put to its readers by the Leader, published in Fort Meade, Florida. For the best answer a subscription for one year was offered. Here are some of the replies:

Because they are thinner now than they used to be.
Because they have boldface types.
Because they are easy to read.
Because they are well worth looking over.
Because back numbers are not in demand.
Because they are not afraid to speak their mind.
Because they have a great deal of influence.
Because if they know anything they usually tell it
Because they always have the last word.
Because they carry the news wherever they go.

The correct answer is given thus:

"Because every man should have one of his own, and not run after his neighbor's"



SPLENDID AND INSPIRING BANQUET

Under Auspices of Dundas-Grenville Presbytery of The United Church.

The banquet in connection with the Laymens Assn. of the Dundas-Grenville Presbytery of the United Church held in Lannins Hall on Thursday night last, and put on by the Ladies of the Winchester United Church, was undoubtedly the biggest and most successful in the way of a banquet ever held in the County. Plates were laid for 450 guests, and counting late comers, there was fully 475 persons present in the hall. On the stage were two tables, accommodating the speakers, singers, and visiting clergy and ladies accompaning them. There were six tables the full length of the hall. The tables were all prettily decorated, and the scene as the guests became seated was one that must have been an inspiration to the speakers who had come to address them. They came from Prescott, Cardinal, Spencerville, Iroquois, Morrisburg, Chesterville. Morewood. Finch, Elma, Williamsburg, Winchester Springs. Dundela, Brinston, Mountain, Hallville, Inkerman, Kemptville, Heckston, Vernon and other places, a representative gathering of the leaders of the United Church in this Presbytery. Rev. J. A. Waddell, Chairman of the Presbytery, presided Rev. Mr. Stafford, of Morewood, lead the singing. Mr. Potter, organist of Winchester United Church, was at the piano The banquet was under the direction of Mr. H. B Fetterly, Chairman of Missionary and Maintenance in this Presbytery, who was assisted in the organization and arrangements by a strong committee of local men and women.

After the singing of a couple of hymns between courses, and the partaking of a splendid and efficiently served repast, from a Fruit Cocktail to Ice Cream and Coffee, the programme was opened with the doxology and a short prayer by Rev. W. R. Johnston, B. D., of Spencerville. The Chairman's remarks were brief and to the point. Mr. R. G. Douglas, of Ottawa, brought greetings from the Ottawa Presbytery, and urged upon layment the responsibility of more energetic support of the Maintenance and Missionary Funds.

Rev. J. Woodside, of Ottawa, also spoke briefly along similar lines, and urged upon the people of the United Church, the responsibility of their great work and uudertaking.

The speaker of the evening, Rev. Jas. Endicott, D. D., LL. D., Ex-moderator of the General Conference, was introduced by Mr. H. B. Fetterly, M. A., of Winchester. Mr. Fetterly first told of how the great banquet came about, and why, and his effort to secure an outstanding speaker He was pleased to say that his efforts had been successful. He then in a pleasing and humorous way referred to Rev. Dr. Endicott, as one who had travelled almost through, as well as over the earth and its several seas. How he had spent years in the heart of foreign lands where strife and rebellion were ever present, and had even eaten with a cannable in Africa.

Rev. Dr. Endicott is what might be termed a conversational speaker. He does not attempt any flights of oratory, and he does not talk over the heads of his hearers. To listen to his address over the radio one might think he was reading it. Yet to listen to him, to see the light and fire of his eye, the earnest and intent expression of his face, to watch his alert and spontaneous movements, as he unfolds and relates his wonderful and often thrilling and dangerous experiences as he travelled over the waters of the sea coasts of China, over the wilds and wilderness of Africa and other foreign countries, was to be carried with him through all those experiences. When we say that Dr. Endicott spoke for over an hour and a quarter, and never a movement of restlessness or weariness on the part of his big audience, is to tell in a way of the spell-bound interest they took in his address. Dr. Endicott was for many years a missionary in China. He related many of his experiences, of the dangers, the privations, and yet the glory of his work in the interior of China, and told of some of the almost unbelievable scenes of cruelty and hardship he had witnessed. He arrived in China during the time that natiou was in the throes of a rebellion, and when the foreigners were in danger of being all massacred. Of the splendid heroism of the Chinese Christians and what the cross of Jesus Christ meant to them. He told the story of his visit to Africa, of the transformation wrought in many places by the Gospel of Jesus Christ brought to the heathen and savage natives. And as Dr. Endicott related his experience and described the scenes, he asked his audience if they could as followers of Jesus refuse or neglect the call of their less fortunate. He told them that the missionaries they sent out asked only that they be empowered by the help of those at home to extend and carry on their work. They did not ask to be relieved, to have things made easier for themselves. All they wanted was to see the Kingdom of God established in every land. And thus was he encouraged, and the outlook brightened. Dr. Endicott concluded his most fascinating talk with an earnest appeal to the United Church to rally to the support of the cause of missions.

Altogether it was an inspiring sight to see the large hall filled with men and women, gathered together from many miles around, all bound with a single bond, that of Christian love and desire to extend the Kingdom of God. During his address Dr. Endicott referred to a gathering of Christian natives in Africa, and when he asked them if he would carry their greetings to the Christian people of Canada, they responded with hands uplifted and showed their approval. So on Thursday night there were gathered nearly five hundred of the members and workers of the United Church in this Presbytery, with one single aim. It must have proved an inspiration to Dr. Endicott.

That good old hymn, "Lead On O King Eternal" was then sung by the audience standing. Mr. McGuire, Spencerville, Chairman of the Laymen's Assn. for this Presbytery, spoke briefly and moved a hearty vote of thanks to Dr. Endicott and the other speakers, and the singers from Spencerville, and the committee at Winchester for the splendid evening enjoyed by all.

During the evening the audience was delighted and charmed with several selections from the male double quartette of Spencerville, eight gentlemen of the United Church, who possess voices that not only harmonize but reach the heart of their audience. It was no wonder that an encore was demanded. The Spencerville singers played an important part in the splendid event of Thursday evening.

Too much praise cannot be extended the ladies of the United Church for the part they took in making the banquet the splendid success it was. Their splendid organization, system, and energetic and well directed work eliminated anything in the way of confusion or hurry, and everything passed along like clockwork. They certainly deserved the very hearty vote of thanks that was so heartily tendered them.

Among the real hard workers, and on whom so much depends on such occasions were Messrs L. Mill, Geo Earle, Ezra Summers, A. W. Beach, H. B. Fetterly and others. They were on the job all the time.

The meeeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.
