Native of Chesterville District Dies At Randolph, Mass.

The death occurred on March 31st at Randolph, Massachusetts, of John Clement, brother of James Clement of Chesterville. The deceased, who was in his 69th year, had been in good health until the day previous to his death, which was due to heart failure.

The late John Clement was born at the homestead south of Chesterville, and lived there until he was sixteen years of age, when he went to New York City. He engaged in a grocery business in New York and in Lawrence, Mass., for a number of years. In 1890 he married Emma Mooney, who died in 1924.

Mr. Clement leaves to mourn his passing one son, Paul, who with his wife and three children reside at Randolph. Three brothers, James, Peter and Daniel, survive, also two sisters, Mrs. Peter Heveran, of Chesterville, and Mrs. Thoma Leavy, New York City.

Bride-Elect Guest of Honour of Her Morewood Friends

A charmingly arranged miscellaneous shower was held at the home of Mrs. Calvin Gordon in honour of Miss Luella Swerdfeger on Monday evening.

The rooms were tastefully decorated with pink and white streamers, the seat of honour being under an arch of evergreens and bridal bells.

The bride-elect entered the drawing room on the arm of her mother to the strains of "Here Comes the Bride" played by Olive Craik, and was presented with two artistically-decorated baskets laden with gifts carried by Shirley Lanoue and Master Dwaine Irven dressed as bride and groom, assisted by Verda Gordon and Mildred McConnell. The many beautiful gifts she received testified to the high esteem in which she was held.

The bride's book was signed and the bride-elect thanked her friends in her usual pleasing manner and extended an invitation to all to visit her in her new home.

After a dainty lunch was served the guests dispersed wishing the guest of honour bon voyage.

The following is the address.

Morewood, Ont., April 11, 1933.

Dear Luella,—We, a few of your friends and neighbours, have gathered here to-night to extend to you, one of this month's brides, our very best wishes for a long and happy future.

We have always felt that in you, Luella, we had a friend to whom we could turn for a cheery smile and pleasant word. Our friendship has been somewhat severed for the past few years because your duties called you to another country, still we have been able to renew it from time to time. We hope that we shall continue to do so.

We are told that "From the fullness of the heart the mouth speaketh," but we feel that we would like to express our good wishes in more than mere words, so we ask you to accept these gifts. We hope that they will express in a small measure, at least, our feelings.

We hope you will be spared many long and happy years to use them and may they ever remind you of your friends in Morewood.

Signed—Mrs. Calvin Gordon, Mrs. Wm. Irven, Mrs. Bertha Countryman.

Delegates to Presbyterial Appointed by United W.M.S.

The regular meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the United Church was held yesterday afternoon in the auditorium of the church with the president in the chair. Miss Merkley read the scripture reading and led in prayer, after which the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Reports were heard from the different secretaries, and arrangements completed for the "Thank-Offering" service. Delegates were appointed to the Presbyterial, which is being held in Brinston on May 3rd. After the hymn singing, the Easter messages were given by Mesdames Hummel, Fulton and Lloyd. A series of short prayers followed. Mrs. Geo. Hunt gave a reading entitled "My Easter Offering." Following was a vocal solo by Mrs. D. M. McElheran, "Alone," which was pleasingly rendered and enjoyed by all present. Mrs. Melvin Durant conducted the "Easter" responsive service, and the meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

Cornwall Boy Badly Injured Run Over By Motor Truck

Dashing across the road directly in front of an approaching truck, Arthur Martin, eight-year-old son of Mrs. Bertha Martin, 846 Sidney street, was knocked down, one of the wheels of the truck passing over his body.

He was immediately taken to the general hospital, where it was found several ribs had been broken, and that he was suffering from severe bruises about the body.

The little lad had just left school, and was on his way home in company of several other schoolboys when the accident happened. Not noticing the approach of the truck, driven by Edwin Kennedy, the boy ran out on the road. The driver attempted to avoid striking the lad, but was unsuccessful.

One Dollar Gun License Plan Proposed by Challies

Establishment of a provincial-wide gun license, with the fee cut from $2 to $1, is provided for in the annually-proposed changes to the game laws, which were brought down to the Legislature Monday by Hon. George H. Challies, Minister of Game and Fisheries.

Two other features of the Challies amendments provide that trapping licenses shall not be issued to non-British subjects, and that in future bear may be taken only under authority of a license except in the cases of farmers trapping or hunting on their own lands.

As forecast, the Government had paid no attention to the two leading recommendations of this session's Game and Fish Committee, and has decided to amend the act to the extent of altering the opening dates of several of the deer seasons, and of setting up a buck law with department-regulated penaltiesf or the shooting of does and fawns.

Iroquois Dog Rescues Friend

Iroquois Post [illegible], town, is the owner of a dog which deserves special mention for the intelligence and bravery it showed a few days ago in rescuing a dog he had been playing with. "Tick," Mr. Cook's dog, and one owned by Miss Hendry, were playing on the ice in the bay below Ira Becksted's photography parlour when Miss Hendry's dog fell in and went under the ice. "Tick," after waiting a few seconds, plunged in and went under the ice and in a very short time came out holding the other dog with his teeth.

Car Insurance Rates Are Considerably Reduced

Toronto, April 11th.—Details of reductions of from 10 to 30 per cent on premium rates of automobile insurance, and increased bonuses for careful driving were announced to-day by the Canadian Automobile Underwrites' Association. Reductions apply to rates of fire, theft and collision insurance.

A 15 per cent reduction will apply to the premium rate for fire and theft insurance. While existing rate of full coverage collision insurance remains the same, reductions on rates for deductable collision coverage range from 10 to 30 per cent on amounts of $15 to $100. The new schedule of rates will not apply to Northern Ontario.

Increased bonuses for careful driving for the whole of the province will apply to motorists who have driven from one to three years without claims and range from 10 to 20 per cent.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture

Henocracy.

"Henocracy" is the term that the Illinois College of Agriculture applies to the new system under which hens are kept in individual metal coops, assembled in battery form. It is reported that at Miami, Florida, for example, 60,000 laying hens have been placed in batteries, in a 500-room hotel. The hen is even deprived of an opportunity to admire her egg for as soon as the egg is laid it rolls out of her sight into a gathering trough.

New Publications.

Publications of interest to farmers recently issued by the Department include the following: "Vegetable Gardening" (Bulletin No. 369) by T. H. Jones, Dep't of Chemistry, O.A.C., and O. J. Robb, Horticultural Experimental Station, Vineland; Annual Report of the Ontario Agricultural Union for 1932; and the 62nd annual report of the Entomological Society of Ontario. Copies of these interesting and valuable booklets can be procured through your local agricultural office or by writing to the Publications Branch, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

Weekly Crop Report.

Farmers throughout Ontario are elated at the higher prices being paid for hogs and still further increase is prophesied owing to the scarcity. The farmer who continued in the hog business will now reap the benefit of his good judgment.

There is a large demand for one-day-old chicks in most parts of the province.

Beneficial rains for winter wheat and clovers have fallen recently in many parts of the province.

Roads are soft and highway officers in numerous counties are enforcing the half-load regulation on trucks.

Considerable activity in preparation for spring work is noticed everywhere and farmers in Kent County report injury to new seedings of clover.

Warm rains have helped in Lincoln County to revive wheat, alfalfa and clover fields.

Some cars of certified seed potatoes are coming into Middlesex and there is more than usual interest in soy beans.

A big increase in number of old orchards being pruned and sprayed this year is noted in Welland.

Hog prices in Wentworth reached $6.00 per cwt.

Breeders' reports in Durham indicate [illegible] per cent lamb production.

Revival of Old Practice Seen In Brisker Export

Since the beginning of January, Canada has shipped to Great Britain some 6,000 head of cattle, and this number will be increased to 20,000 by the early part of June.

With the revival of our export trade with the Old Country, a popular practice of some thirty years ago may be re-established. Transportation companies make provision for one man to travel with each carload of cattle and, when export trade was brisk, many farmers availed themselves of this opportunity to visit Great Britain. In addition to those engaged in agricultural pursuits, it has been stated that a great number of Ontario's older professional men, during their college days, visited England and Scotland as a result of getting the job of tending cattle in transport.

Ontario Sends 302 Entries To Regina Grain Show

Of the 2,500 entries received by the World's Grain Show and Conference at Regina on the closing date, 302 were from the Province of Ontario. A. H. Martin, Secretary of the Ontario Committe, states that the classes receiving the heaviest entry from Ontario are: Red clover 29 entries; alsike 26; white winter wheat, 16; medium or late oats, 14; six-rowed barley, 15; field beans (small white) 13; alfalfa, 12. All the leading grain and seed exhibitors of the Province have made one or more entries.

D. L. Scott, Carleton County, who won the $500 malting barley prize at the 1932 Royal, is represented in several classes, and Mrs. Mary E. Maycock, of Prince Edward County, the only woman who has ever won three championships in succession at the Chicago International Grain and Hay Show, has sent an excellent sample of beans. Howard Fraleigh, M. P. P., Forest, is represented in the Flax section, and J. H. Lampman, of Ridgetown, a winner at Chicago, is forward again with beans. G. Gordon Finlay, also of Kent County, winner of the grand championship in soybeans at Chicago last year, has sent an extra good sample to Regina. The Ottawa Valley, Peel County, and Northern Ontario are represented with superior product, and when the judging is completed there should be some good news for Ontario.

The World's Grain Exhibition and Conference is held at Regina this year from July 24 to August 5.

Wound Dressings.

The grafting compounds mentioned tried in a small way as wound dressings and in addition several asphalt paint compounds. The effect of tree vigour on wound healings was evident. Medium-sized wounds on vigourous trees healed quickly and well without any treatment. Most of the materials used retarded healing on all wounds as compared to those untreated. The two exceptions were Braco and Latex, which encouraged callus formation. The clean, healthy callus formed with Latex has been mentioned previously. Paraffin was intermediate in its effects on wound healing.

The value of these compounds so far as prevention of decay is concerned, is still uncertain. Small wounds, up to 1½ inches in diameter, will doubtless heal safely without any treatment whatever. Larger wounds should have the point of infection and decay, the centre of the wound, protected. One of the tar compounds, kept away from the outer edge of the wound, should be valuable as it lasts indefinitely and penetrates into the wood. Braco is very satisfactory and protects for at least three years. The asphalt paints, if kept from the outer edge of the wound, appear to give good protection. Ordinary paint and liquid grafting wax are not so satisfactory.

Never While Grass Grows May Liquor Be Sold Here

Buffalo, N. Y.—Come what may in prohibition, there is one village in this state which will always be dry. It is Cattaraugus, in Cattaraugus County, founded in 1852 by Joseph Plumb, a firm believer in abstinence. Mr. Plumb deeded a tract of land as the site of the village to the village itself, and each purchaser of property thereafter got a deed containing a clause that "never so long as water flows in the streams and grass grows, shall liquor be sold as a beverage in the village."

The liquor ban was backed by a penalty which provided that in event of violation of the terms of the deed by a property owner, the land should be forfeited and revert to the original owner.

Only once since Mr. Plumb's time have the terms of the deed been questioned. A saloon was established in the village, but after a long legal fight, the State Court of Appeals upheld the provisions of the deed and the property owner in question was forced to forfeit his property.

Mr. Plumb founded the village at the time the Erie Railroad was being built, and was said to have been displeased at the drunken brawls and roistering of many of the labourers employed in construction wor[illegible]

A young barrister, in a harrying cross-examination of a landlady, was trying to discredit her boarding house in the eyes of the jury.

She spoke of certain lodgers who never went out at night, and the barrister pounced upon her at once.

"A queer set of people seem to live in your house, madam," he said. "Is there some reason for hiding themselves from the public?"

"They're studying for the law," replied the landlady.

Elk In Petawawa Preserve Wintered In Fine Condition

The wapiti, or elk, 25 in number, which were brought last fall from Wainwright Park, Alta. to the Petawawa game preserve, have come through their first winter in the east in splendid condition.

They seemed from the outset to take naturally to their new surroundings in the Petawawa preserve. The season was comparatively mild and all Winter they ran at large, browsing at times and feeding also on the hay provided by the keeper and are now sleek and fat. They will provide an interesting attraction for visitors in the district this summer and can be seen at almost any time, cavorting near the roadway which runs by the preserve, or resting under the trees nearby.

Eggs of the famed Nipigon trout are being hatched at the rearing station in the preserve this spring and the trout minnows will be cared for there until they are large enough for distribution in the late summer and fall among the streams in this part of Ontario.

Unemployed Men Reject Work And Are Refused Meals

Oshawa.—At least 60 unemployed men who have refused to accept work on the Government airport project at Trenton went without supper Monday night. In refusing meals at the hostel welfare officials carried out instructions of the welfare board that men refusing work be turned out.

Faced with a delegation of a dozen men and women led by J. Houston and Vera Rock, backed up by a mob of 300 unemployed, Relief Administrator J. C. McGill stood firm and refused demands to give the men their supper.

"Tell the men to say they are willing to go to Trenton, and all will be put back on full relief at once," McGill told the deputation.

Twenty-five men are still needed to fill the quota of fifty from here. Pressure brought to bear earlier in the day caused a number of men to withdraw their names.

Hon. William Finlayson Brands Liberal Leader As Russian Follower

Premier Henry Makes Spirited Defence On His Purchase $25,000 Block Of O. P. S. Bonds.

THEN PRIVATELY CONTROLLED

(Special From Ontario Legisture.)

AN OVERWHELMING majority was again registered by the Henry Government when the vote was taken on the adoption of the budget, the government being sustained by 75-20 in defeating the want of confidence amendment moved by the Opposition.

Hon. William Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forest, concluded the debate for the government during which he took a direct thrust at L. J. Simpson, Liberal, Centre Simcoe, in charging the latter with being a follower of the Russian group leader of the Liberal party, even adding the word communist to the group leader, inferred as M. F. Hepburn, M. P., provincial Liberal leader. Dr. Simpson asked a retraction of the word communist, and urged on by the allegation questioned where the Conservative party would stand when the "break" comes.

"The break never comes in the Tory party," thundered Hon. Mr. Finlayson. "On this side of the House, there is only one leadership, only one party, united under the British flag, with Canadian and Imperial traditions. The only difference between the Tory and other parties is that the Tory party goes on forever."

Replying to the demand for production of salaries of certain officials of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, the Minister observed that this problem should be dealt with in such a way as not to embarrass the commission, while he lauded the ability of F. A. Gaby, chief engineer, whom he described as being really the general manager of the greatest public ownership enterprise in the world. The matter should not be dealt with as a party political issue."

The Minister also replied to the suggestion of W. E. N. Sinclair, Opposition Leader to abolish the government's contribution to the teachers' and civil servants' superannuation funds ,in contending that the matter after careful consideration, had been rejected, the feeling being that to abolish these grants would be to break a pledge made with these funds.

Defending the government in its financial policies for the fiscal year, Hon. Mr. Finlayson pointed out that throughout the budget debate there had not been a single suggestion of impropriety on the part of the government, not even the suggestion that one cent had been spent without proper care.

"It is true the public debt has increased," he declared, "but so long as the people of the province want power, so long as they want good roads, and services of various kinds, so long will it be necessary to issue debentures and increase the debt."

Mr. Sinclair demanded production of the higher salaries paid to Hydro officials contending that the public owns the service and is entitled to the informatioin, while he also criticized the Highway Improvement Fund.

Premier George S. Henry made a spirited defence of his holding of a block of $25,000 in Ontario Power Service Corporation bonds before the Legislature in explaining his position contending the purchase was made long before there was any move of the Abitibi canyon power project failing to be completed or when there was the slightest possibility of the government having to take over the enterprise. The Premier intimated that if any member of the Opposition wants to suggest that the slightest loss has been caused to the province by his possession of the bonds, and desires to ask for a Royal Commission enquiry into details of the same, he can have that sweeping enquiry forthwith. Opposition members indicated they would not ask for this move.

The Premier in a lengthy statement pointed to his early school days in which he elected to be a farmer, then learned to plough a straight and clean furrow, and all through his life he had followed the same course. These bonds, he pointed out, were purchased when he was Minister of Highways and not Premier, while the question when he had the bonds, and the government commenced negotiations, what he was to do with them.

"Could I refuse on behalf of the government to have nothing to do with this great important question (the Abitibi canyon development) which might ultimately be of tremendous benefit to the province, merely because I held a few of the bonds?" he questioned. "I could not. I was elected to serve the people and any personal consideration had to be pushed aside and was pushed aside. Nof could I hand them to a broker to sell in the open market. Having by reason of my office acquired confidential information as to the financial straits in which the Ontario Power Service Corporation found itself, it would have been manifestly improper for me to sell the bonds to a purchaser who had not the same information."

As to the future of the enterprise, the Premier declared: "When we have pulled out of the present depression, and the province is moving forward to its greatest destiny and the development of its unparalleled resoruces, the people of Ontario will say that the acquisition of the Abitibi property by the Henry Government was wise and farsighted. I feel that when the matter comes to be viewed in its proper perspective, it will go down in history as one of the oustanding achievements in the development of the province."

The special committee of the House appointed to deal with redistribution held its first meeting under chairmanship of Hon. Wm. Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests, and will return their proposed schedules to reduce the size of the Legislature from 112 to at least 90 next week to the House.

Hon. Mr. Finlayson made a spirited denial to the stories appearing recently in The Toronto Star dealing with alleged irregularities in Northern Ontario road camps, while he issued a challenge to the newspaper to produce any information they might have on the situation before the public accounts committee. He claimed that two reporters of The Star had posed as Ontario Government officials in seeking information from a priest and a township reeve, Rev. Father Routhier, of Cobell, and John Dufrene, reeve of East Ferris.

Continuing its plan for economy, the Government has reduced grants to hospitals from between 10 to 15 per cent, Hon. Dr. J. M. Robb, Minister of Health announced, during second reading of the bill to amend the Sanitoria and Consumptives Act. In cases where the grants for half the year have already been paid, the deductions will be doubled for the remaining six months.

Two Cornwall Men Get Suspended Sentence

Pleading guilty to charges of perjury, Gerrard McIntosh, 26, and Alex O'Brien, 30, were given suspended sentences of two years in Cornwall Police Court Tuesday morning. The two men were arrested following the dismissal of a L. C. A. charge against Vincent A. Taylor, ex-provincial police officer, on April 3rd. In asking for suspended sentences, Lionel Chevrier, counsel for the accused, felt that they had been taught a lesson in spending 10 days in jail. He further stated that the men had been approached to give false evidence. The Crown recommended suspended sentences and Magistrate Milligan agreed, but impressed upon the young men the seriousness of the charge.

Home of Dr. Legault, Crysler, Rapidly Destroyed by Fire

Fire, believed to have been caused by overheated stovepipes in the attic, Friday destroyed the home of Dr. Louis Legault, of Crysler, causing damage of approximately $6,500, partially covered by insurance. Fanned by a strong east wind, the fire gained such headway that, despite the efforts of the firefighters, who were on the scene early, only an odd piece of furniture could be saved from the lower floor.

The home of Mrs. Paul, situated some 20 feet away, was threatened for a time, but the timely arrival of the Finch firefighting apparatus and the strenuous efforts on the part of those present saved the house from much damage.

Dr. Legault, who has been practising in Crysler village for the past 15 years, is well known in this vicinity.

A new amendment to the Meat and Canned Foods Act prescribes that when containers over four pounds capacity are used for jams, jellies and marmalades, the net weight of contents shall be declared in pounds, or pounds and ounces, on the principal label in letters not less than one quarter inch in height and of plain visibility.

The brooding and rearing of chicks is a comparatively simple matter, but to be successful eternal vigilance and attention to detail is required.

Local L.O.L. on Record Opposing S. S. Demands

At the last regular meeting of Chesterville L. O. L. No. 2686, held on March 15th, the following resolution was passed.

"Whereas the supporters of Separate Schools, are agitating for a series of amendments, to the Assessment Act of the Province, so as to provide for a division of the Taxes, received by the Municipalities, from Incorporated Companies and Publicly and Privately owned Utilities, on the basis of the Roman Catholic population of the Province.

"And whereas the Separate School Act of 1863, later incorporated into the B. N. O. Act of 1867, specifically provides that only the taxes from the realty of Separate School supporters, when so directed, was to be allocated for the support of Separate Schools.

"And whereas the Act of 1863, was understood by all the consenting parties thereto, to be a final settlement of the question.

"And whereas further amendments in 1886, provided for the division of taxes ,on shares of Incorporated Companies, whereby the Directors of such Companies, on the request of Separate School supporters holding shares therein, are permitted to divert the taxes ,accruing on such shares, to the support of Separate Schools.

"Be it therefore resolved

"That this Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 2686, of Chesterville, goes on record, as strongly opposing the present demands, of the Separate School Authorities, for such a division of the taxes, properly pertaining to the support of the Public Schools.

"We are aroused at this continual demand, of the Separate Schools for public money, to conduct their own religious system.

"We not only oppose these demands of the Roman Catholics, but we deem it our duty to advise the Government that the Public School supporters will not condone further extension, of the privilege of sectarian schools, at the expense of the Public School system of the Province.

"We would also call upon our representative, in the Legislature, to vigourously oppose this renewed agitation, and to do all in his power to maintain, safeguard and strengthen, the public non-sectarian school system.

"That this resolution be sent to the Premier the Hon. G. S. Henry, Minister of Education, our local member of the Legislature and the Press."

Keeping Up The Roads.

With state and county road commissions all over the country forced to curtail road maintenance and construction work because of reduced budgets, it is important that some roads be kept in good condition and that paving may be resumed without undue waste when conditions permit.

Any motorist knows what happens to an unpaved road when it is allowed to go without attention. Subject to traffic and all sorts of weather, it soon begins to disintegrate and when finally its repair is undertaken, the cost is more than a reasonable amount of maintenance would have entailed.

Onondaga County, New York, has found a solution that may well set an example for other counties to follow. Like the road officials of many another community those in Onondaga County were faced by a reduced budget and a demand of taxpayers that what money was available be devoted to employing more men to relieve unemployment.

The number of road employees was tripled by keeping expenditures for equipment and materials at a minimum. But, instead of putting additional men to some useless tasks, they were set to work preparing county road for paving at such time as traffic and budgets warrant. Grading and alignment were carried on and drainage systems, guard rails, etc., were installed just as if the roads were to be paved at once. These temporary roads were surfaced with gravel and treated with calcium chloride, which not only prevents dust but acts as a binder to provide a durable, solid surface.

This plan accomplished a two-fold purpose. It gave the county good roads at a relatively small cost when funds were not available for paving. And, by providing useful work for additional men, it relieved the county of a substantial expenditure that otherwise would have been incurred for welfare relief. Gravel roads treated with calcium chloride may be the answer to the unemployment problem in many communities.

CORN

Experimental Farms Note.

CORN for ensilage is still of considerable importance on a great many farms in Eastern Canada.

During the season of 1932, the Division of Forage Plants, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, conducted a test in which careful comparison was made of a number of corn varieties commonly grown for ensilage in Eastern Ontario, in addition to several that are not so commonly grown or so well known.

Judged from the standpoint of yield, the varieties ranked in the following order:

Dents—Wisconsin No. 7, Golden Glow, Leaming and Bailey.

Flints—Compton's Early, Longfellow, and Salzer's North Dakota.

All varieties were cut at the same stage of maturity, the "late dough" stage, and were presumably equal in quality. Wisconsin No. 7 yielded better than any other variety. Compton's Early yielded equally as well as Golden Glow, Leaming and Bailey and since the flints were harvested one week earlier than the dents this variety should be given the preference in districts where the season is somewhat short for using the dent varieties.

The main difference between dent and flint varieties for ensilage purposes (apart from yield) is in the production of suckers; the flints sucker very freely while the dent sucker very little, if at all.

Corn for grain is not of very great importance in Eastern Canada, except in southwestern Ontario, where the standard varieties for grain are those already discussed for ensilage purposes.

In addition to the ensilage test mentioned above, a test was also conducted at Ottawa to determine the best varieties of corn for grain production in districts in Eastern Canada with conditions similar to those prevailaing at Ottwa.

The varieties, Quebec No. 28 (a 12-rowed flint), and Twitchell's Pride (an eight-rowed flint) gave the best results in this test, both of them being quite outstanding in both yield and maturity.

Further details of these tests can be had by writing to the Division of Forage Plants, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, Ontario.

THE BATH TUB, as we know it, is a comparatively modern invention, but the ancient Greeks and Romans were quite familiar with baths. In those days, there were public and private baths which were important social centres. Hippocrates, the father of medicine, recommended the use of cold baths.

A clean skin is desirable. A dirty skin is apt to be offensive to others. Cleanliness of the skin enables it to function better, and so contributes to the well-being of the body of which it is the outer covering.

The application of cold to any part lessens the circulation in that part, but after the effects of the cold have worn off, there is a rush of blood back into that part. The shock of cold water causes irregular breathing for a short time, and increases the force of the heart beat. Obviously, cold baths are not suited to the very young, the very old, or those with hardened arteries.

The young and healthy individual who finds that he reacts well to the brisk rub after a cold bath may enjoy this form of bathing. There is no reason to think that cold baths make for health and resistance to disease. The cold bath should be avoided by those who do not react well to it and by those who suffer from any physical disorders.

If the temperature of the bath is practically the same as the temperature of the body, very little effect is produced on the body. Raising the temperature of the water causes the blood-vessels in the skin to dilate, the blood pressure falls, the heart beats with greater rapidity, and the breathing becomes more frequent.

It appears that, for the majority of persons, a bath slightly warmer than the temperature of the body is the most desirable. Such a bath does not throw any strain upon weakened organs, or disturb the smooth running of the body.

The application of cold or heat in one form or another to the whole or to a part of the body is a recognized and valuable form of treatment. The long-continued bath at body temperature is used to overcome restlessness and excitability of those who are suffering from certain mental diseases.

The hot bath increases perspiration and so produces a temporary loss of weight. There is nothing which can be added to baths which will bring about a real reduction in weight. Weight lost from the hot bath is regained as soon as fluids are taken.

That the use of baths is desirable from a standpoint of health, cleanliness and social relations is a reasonable conclusion.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

The garden crops should be changed around every season. Peas and beans are different in their effect on the soil from the deep-rooted beets and carrots. Wide spreading vines, like melons and cucumbers, are a change from closely planted crops, and tomatoes and corn are also distinct types from the common vegetables.

RADIO'S CRY-BABY.

The New Yorker.

ANY TIME you hear a baby crying on the radio you can be pretty sure that it is Miss Sally Belle Cox, aged 25. She is a tall, slender, blue-eyed blonde and the only professional cry-baby in the country, far as anbody knows. She makes about $100 a week by her bawling.

Miss Cox was born in West Virginia, went to a New England finishing school, and seemed destined for an ordinary tearless life when, five years ago, she got a job at an orphan asylum out in Cleveland. Her chore was to keep the orphans amused. One mid-winter afternoon, when Miss Cox's entertaining was falling rather flat, a small unamused girl baby began to squawl, the way a small unamused girl baby can. Miss Cox put her head back and suddenly and savagely began to imitate the infant. Well ,it brought down the house. The children squealed for more, and the squawler shut up and let somebody squawl that could squawl.

Years passed and Miss Cox cried a great deal, usually now for grown-ups who had heard of her mimicry. But she had no idea of making a profession out of her unique gift until she came to New York two years ago to take a job as swimming instructor in a swimming school. One day she read in the paper that the one sound the radio people had had no success at all in imitating was the wailing of a baby. Miss Cox put on her hat and went right up to the National Broadcasting Company. She showed the newspaper clipping to an executive and, greatly to his dismay, began to cry like a little girl right there in his office. A formal audition was arranged, with proper dignity, and she cried for several other officials, and was solemnly hired.

She worked for eight months in a feature called "Raising Junior." She was Junior. The programme stopped a year ago, but it's been revived and Miss Cox is now not only Junior (crying two-year-old cries, for he has grown up), but also a little newcomer, aged a few weeks. She is also the baby in the "Show Boat' 'sketch, and half a dozen others. On New Year's Eve she was "1933" for National Broadcasting, crying with appropriate feeling.

The age scale of Miss Cox's crying is from one hour to 14 years. She does the different ages by crying into a pillow with various degrees of muffledness. Buried deep: itsy bitsy baby. Just touching: young lady springing up like a weed and sore as the devil. The artiste never practices; she used to but she doesn't now. Also, she used to wander round Central Park, harking for baby cries. When she found one that interested her, she would stand studying it with such an intent look that its nurse invariably insulted her and shoved off.

She says that all babies cry alike; male ,female, Jew, Gentile, vaguely depressed, horribly unhappy—all the same. Miss Cox also can laugh, gurgle, coo, and squeal. We called on her at the Barbizon-Plaza one afternoon, in connection with a book we are writing about women who get things done. We asked her if she would cry and coo just once for us. Never in her life, she told us, had she been asked to cry and cook for a stranger before. However ,she got out her little pillow and went all to pieces. Then she gurgled and squealed and said goo-goo. It was charming and artistically fine.

HONEY RETARDS DISEASE.

To prevent the false impression being formed that because bees are subject to disease some honeys might not be good for food, it is important, says the Dominion Department of Agriculture, to draw attention to the fact that what affects bees produces absolutely no effect on human beings. So far as bee disease is concerned, all honeys are perfectly safe fo frood. Further, it may be noted that honey, instead of promoting disease, tends to retard it, because most of the disease organisms that attack man can not live in honey. Honey draws the water of their construction from the organisms and kills them.

When pigeons are flying free they invariably feed on a wide variety of grains; the breeder, therefore, is advised by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, to vary this diet when they are in the dovecote.

"EATS" MOTHER'S WATCH.

St. Paul, Minn.—Three-year-old Billy Jorgenson, who liked to fool his parents by telling them he had eaten some household article, made good by "eating" his mother's wrist watch. He was in a hospital here under the care of a physician who said he is in no danger but will have to remain several days.

Lady: "Mr. Murphy, I understand you used to be a sailor. You must have had many hairbreadth escapes. What was the most serious?"

Murphy: "Yes'm, I came very close to bein' drowned once. I went to sleep in the bathtub and forgot to turn off the water."

Stranger at Village Station: "Is this the 3.15?"

Porter: "We've nothin' so precise as that. We just calls it the afternoon down."

WHEN THE TURKEY THIEVES CAME

MY COUSINS, Addison, Theodora, Ellen and Halstead, came to the old squire's a year and a half ahead of me and by the time I arrived were well habituated to the place. Among other things then wholly new to me I found the family much interested in a plan to buy an encylopædia. Previously there had been nothing answering to an encyclopædia among the books in the farmhouse sitting room; the nearest thing to one was Grandmother Ruth's Bible dictionary, which was limited largely of course to scriptural subjects. For a long time the old squire had been feeling the need of a more general reference work, and after we young folks began to arrive he became convinced that such a work would be of benefit to all of us. Master Joel Pierson, who came to teach the district school and boarded at our house, strongly favoured the plan.

"Old Joel," as we called him, though he was then only twenty-two years old and was still an undergraduate at Bates College, was by far the liveliest, best and most enthusiastic teacher we had ever had. He had the knack of making even the dullest pupil interested in his studies, for Joel loved learning. He kept the winter term in our district for four successive years, and how he drove us on! It was under "old Joel" that we took our first timid lessons in Latin.

What Joel advised had weight in our house; the old squire promptly decided to buy the encyclopædia. But the price of the one that we wanted was then a hundred and twenty-five dollars, which at that time seemed formidable. Grandmother Ruth deemed the notion extravagant. But Joel said, "Buy it! You will never be sorry. It is the best piece of furniture you can put into your house!"

It is pretty clear that Joel also had a private conversation with the old squire. "Have these young folks of yours help buy it," he is said to have advised him. "It will do them far more good if they have to earn some of the money for it themselves; they will prize it higher and use it more. It is the things that we work for that we really appreciate. Look at me, squire; I'm having to work my own way through college. But I shall know what my education is worth when I get it!"

So the old squire talked at matter over with Addison and the others and made them an offer: he would buy the encyclopædia and own it with them, provided that during the coming season we would earn sixty-two dollars and fifty cents—half the price. They readily agreed.

At first they thought that the easiest and pleasanest way of raising the money would be to tap a hundred maples out in what we called the sugar lot and boil the sap down to syrup, which at that time sold readily for a dollar a gallon. But on account of the east winds that prevailed throughout the month of March it proved an off season for sugar; they did not make syrup enough to market. Next they centred their hope on an acre of yellow-eye beans, which the boys planted, hoed and harvested. But that plan also failed in part. The beans rusted, and the boys raised only ten bushels fit for market; at a dollar and seventy-five cents a bushel they netted less than eighteen dollars.

Autumn found them still forty-five dollars short, and the prospect of getting the encyclopædia that year seemed very unpromising. Withal they felt very much ashamed to have Master Pierson return in November and find that they had failed, for "old Joel" believed in doing things!

Meanwhile Theodora and Ellen, wishing to do something to help on the good work ,had gone in company, during the month of April, with a young neighbour of about their own age, Catherine Edwards, to raise a flock of turkeys for the Thanksgiving market. Grandmother Ruth gave them how to proceed. They bought six dozen turkey eggs at another neighbour's, the Wilburs, and set them to hatch under hens.

Not to have their turkeys mixed up with the poultry at the home farm, the girls decided to raise their birds over at what we called the Aunt Hannah lot. That place was perhaps a third of a mile to the southwest of the old squire's and had formerly belonged to his sister; but the old lady had passed away a short time before we young folks went home to live. and the little farm had been joined to the larger one of her brother. The lot lay in the southerly lee of the great grove of maples that marked the sugar lot, and you reached it by a cart road across the west field. The quaint, bare, brown old house and barn stood solitary and unoccupied during most of the time we were at the old squire's.

Except for foxes, hawks and owls that unused barn was a fine place for raising poultry. The girls set their eggs over there sometime in April. Grandmother Ruth furnished them with sitting hens and went over with them to oversee the setting. Fifty-one chicks were hatched, and when I came in June I found Theodora, Ellen and Kate much engrossed in the cares of their large young flock. One or another of the three was obliged to go over there every morning and again in the afternoon to feed and look after the tender, witless little creatures, for nothing is more frail and helpless than a turkey chick during the first four weeks of its life.

How many trips those girls made over to the Aunt Hannah lot that season I don't know. -Ellen usually ran for most of the way! her bare brown head flying along the cart road is one of my earliest recollections of the old farm. Well I remember the worries of those three girls. They had troubles of all sorts with those chicks. Six died apparently from no cause whatever. Then after the chicks had grown larger a weasel got into the barn one night and killed two. Addison caught the little marauder in a steel trap set at the hole under the barn where it had crept in. A large hawk presently killed another; and then as the summer advanced an old yellow-backed vixen fox began her depredations. That wily enemy carried away five before Addison and Halstead, assisted by the old squire, dug out the burrow and put an end to her career. Then four more young turkeys disappeared in a way that we could not account for. The girls were in a state of constant anxiety, and at last they besought me, the newcomer, and Kate's brother Tom to sleep over in the old house; the place was so remote and the buildings so lonely that they did not like to pass the night there themselves.

They offered Tom and me a fifth interest in the flock if we would stay there nights and guard the turkeys.

At first I didn't much like the idea of it, for the old house had a rather spooky appearance, but Tom said he would sleep there if I would, and I couldn't well show the white feather at a challenge like that from a boy of my own age. Besides, the prospect of getting the price of six or seven turkeys at Thanksgiving had its attractions. We carried over three blankets, laid a hay bed in the front room of the old house and embarked on our career of watchmen of the flock. Tom fetched his gun, and I was equipped with a lantern from the stable at the old squire's.

I didn't sleep much the first night we were there, An owl came and sat for a long time on the roof, hooting dismally at intervals. Coons too were calling plaintively to one another, and up in the direction of the great woods we heard, or thought we heard, the distant cries of "lucivees." Once Tom fired off his gun as a warning to all prowlers. Toward morning we fell asleep. After the first night we were much more courageous.

Every evening therafter we were wont to set off at dusk, Tom from the Edwards farm, I from our place, and go "so-hoing" to each other till we met over at the gate that led from the old squire's south field into the Aunt Hannah lot; then we would go on down to the other buildings together. Sometimes we kindled a fire in the fireplace of the front room and when were not too tired read stories for a while.

It was, I believe, during the first week in September that we began our vigils there, though, truth to say, we were far from vigilant and generally were sound asleep. In October Tom had to give up his gun to an older member of the family who was going deer hunting; yet no turkeys were lost from that time on till Thanksgiving week about the middle of November. By that time, however, we did not in the least mind sleeping in the old house; in fact, we rather enjoyed it.

But during the night of the fourteenth of November, three days before Thanksgiving, something happened. About two o'clock we both waked suddenly on account of lantern light flashing in at the uncurtained windows. It flashed in two or three times, then disappeared, and we heard slight noises at the barn. "May be some of the folks from your house come over with a lantern," Tom whispered.

That did not seem likely to me, and I said so.

"Then 'tis somebody stealing turkeys!" whispered Tom excitedly and jumped up to look out. "Yes, sir! They're in the barn," he muttered. "The door's open! I can see a glimmer of light in there!"

We opened the house door and stole out softly. There was a thick lilac bush at one side of the doorstep, and we peeped round it. The night was dark and chilly, as if snow were soon coming. Between us and the barn door, where light glimmered faintly, was some large, dark object, and we heard turkeys "quttering." A moment later a man appeared in the doorway with the lantern, and behind him was another man, carrying two or three turkeys by the legs. They approached the rear of the dark object, which the light now revealed as a horse and wagon with a large crate in it, backed up to the wide-open barn door. We watched them from behind the lilac bush. They thrust the turkeys into the crate, shut it and went back for more.

"Yes, sir-ee!" Tom muttered. "They are stealing our turkeys! Who do you suppose it is? Don't look like anybody I ever saw. It's a black horse or a dark red one."

Evidently the thieves h... in catching the turkeys. ... month the flock, now f... taken to roosting on the high beams of the barn, and the rascals were obliged to climb up to them with a ladder and at the same time manage the lantern. Several minutes passed before they emerged to the crate again with three or four more. They returned immediatelv for others.

"Now what shall we do!" Tom muttered. "They don't know we're watching. They don't think anybody's watching. Shall we yell at 'em?"

I didn't quite dare. "They would thrash us. They might kill us!" I whispered.

"Maybe they would," Tom admitted. "But we've got to do something What can we do?"

Just then the rogues came out with four more turkeys, which they put into the crate.

We caught glimpses of their faces; they were grown men, strangers to us. We began to feel frightened.

All the while the crowded turkeys in the crate were "quttering," and after the thieves had gone back into the barn with the lantern and climbed up the ladder we stole forward to look at the horse and wagon.

"Guess by the sound they've got half the turkeys," whispered Tom. "But they mean to get them all! Now what shall we do?" he repeated.

"I had better run for home and tell our folks," I whispered. "You stay here and keep watch."

"I don't want to stay here alone with 'em," said Tom. "Besides, they would be gone, turkeys and all, 'fore you got your folks up and got back here."

While we were worrying over what to do the thieves came out several times with more turkeys.

"We've got 'em all but four or five," we heard one of the men say. "Best to be off, ain't it?"

"No," the other replied. "Let's go back and get the rest. These are nice plump turkeys wuth two dollars apiece!"

They went back, and we crept forth again from behind the lilac bush. Then Tom had a bright idea.

"Let's hop into the wagon and drive lickety-split for the old squire's!" he whispered excitedly.

"Wouldn't they catch us?" I objected; but Tom was already scrambling up, and I followed him.

There was a whip in the socket. As Tom seized the reins I snatched it out and gave the horse a sharp cut.

The surprised animal lunged forward, and we went past the house door with a great clatter.

"Whoa! Whoa, you old fool!" we heard one of the men shout from inside the barn; for they evidently thought their horse had started of its own accord.

I swung the whip again, and the horse started to run. Tom guided the outfit along the cart road.

"Whoa! Whoa!" sounded again and again behind us. And then, "Stop, you! Stop or we'll shoot ye!"

They were chasing us now, and at first I thought they were rapidly overtaking us, for the horse was by no means fast. Once I thought they were near laying hands on the back of the crate.

I plied the whip harder still, and the old horse gathered speed.

Suddenly there was a flash and a report like that of a pistol. They had fired, though perhaps only to scare us. At almost the same moment a stone, thrown from behind, struck the crate. Another went over our heads. That we were badly frightened goes without saying. But the crate sheltered us, and we crouched in front of it and lashed the horse.

The rogues had left the gate into the Aunt Hannah lot open, or they would no doubt have caught us there. We dashed through and came near having a spill in the ditch just beyond, for the horse tried to follow the route by which they had come across the south field, instead of keeping to the cart road up to the old squire's place. Tom had a hard time reining the old nag back across the ditch. I thought that our pursuers would surely catch us then.

We regained the cart road and went on at a gallop, shouting, "Help! Help! Help!" at the top of our lungs as we drew near the farm buildings and dashed into the yard.

After what seemed a long time Addison opened his chamber window and looked out.

"Who's there?" he demanded. "What's the matter?"

"Turkey thieves!" Tom cried. "Get your gun. Come out quick!"

After what seemed another terribly long while Addison issued forth; the old squire and Halstead following him. We told our story with haste and excitement. Halstead lighted a lantern, but apparently the scamps had gone, and none of us knew the horse or to whom it belonged.

Disturbed as the old squire felt, he laughed when we told him of Tom's bold ruse and the way we had run the still panting old horse along the cart road. "Worsted at their own game," he said; but he looked grave when we told him that they had fired on us.

By that time Grandmother Ruth and the girls had appeared, and Ellen at once begain counting the turkeys in the crate. There were twenty-eight—their entire flock except five.

"And they had gone back to get those!" Tom exclaimed. "They meant to make a clean sweep!"

"How could any one be so cruel and mean after all our hard work to raise them!" Theodora cried.

"Well, you have their horse and ...agon," remarked Addison. "We will make them settle handsomely if they ever come after the rig. I don't believe they will, though."

It was still dark and snow had begun to fall. We drove into the barn, put the horse into a stall, and liberated the turkeys. The barn doors were made fast, and, since we surmised that the rogues might make an effort to recapture their rig before morning, Addison undertook to watch for the rest of the night. But they did not return.

"It will be best to let the law take its course," the old squire said next day. "We will advertise in the county paper and invite the owner to come and prove property. He will no doubt enjoy doing that!" the old gentleman added, laughing.

Accordingly Addison wrote an account of what had occurred, and it appeared in the next week's issue of the paper. "We are holding the horse and wagon at the owner's expense," the account concluded. "He is hereby notified to appear in person, pay charges and make such arrangements as may be decided on."

But no one appeared; and after a fortnight we advertised again with equally barren results.

We went on keeping the horse from Thanksgiving week until into January; and then after further legal notice in the paper the sheriff was empowered to sell horse, wagon and harness at public auction. It was not a valuable outfit and altogether brought but thirty-seven dollars. We took care of course to bring a bill for expenses to cover that entire sum.

From rumours that were abroad during the winter we came to believe that the horse and wagon had belonged to a disreputable citizen who lived five miles from our place. The man's neighbours said that at about the time of our trouble he had lost a rig closely corresponding to the one that Tom and I had captured. Neither he nor his companion made any stir to recover their property; they were probably only too glad to avoid prosecution. Addison was for following up the matter, but the old squire thought best to drop it.

I have neglected to say that we found the five missing turkeys high and safe on beams in the old barn. After deducting expenses for feed, the girls calculated that the flock had netted them forty-one dollars.

Tom and I were content to receive a bonus of six dollars, for we estimated the glory of that night's victorious ride at not less than a hundred!

From all sources, shifts and expedients during the season, including the proceeds from the horse and wagon, the encyclopædia fund now reached seventy-nine dollars, enough to pay our half of the cost and meet the expense of a new oak bookcase for it, to be placed in the farmhouse sitting room. Master Pierson had already ordered the work for us. It arrived the first of February, ten handsomely bound volumes that we came to use with increasing frequency.

Scalloped Parsnips.

Slice and saute in one tablespoon butter, one medium-sized onion. When golden brown, add two cups stewed tomatoes, one and a half teaspoons salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, two or three cloves, pinch of cayenne, and one teaspoon sugar. Simmer until smooth. Have ready three cups of diced, cooked parsnips. Grease a shallow baking dish and place in it a layer of the parsnips. Add a layer of tomato, then a layer of parsnips, continuing this until all the ingredients are used, being sure that a layer of parsnips is on top. Sprinkle with three tablespoons grated cheese mixed with one-fourth cup bread crumbs. Brown in hot oven.

How about a cake or a batch of cookies that are "different?" The unusual always appeals and here are two recipes that are unusually appealing:

Prune Molasses Cookies.

- 2 cups prunes
- 1 cup shortening
- 1 cup brown sugar
- 1 cup white sugar
- 3 eggs
- ½ cup molasses
- ¾ cup milk
- 5½ cups all-purpose flour
- 8 teaspoons baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon soda
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon ginger
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- ½ cup chopped nut kernels

Boil prunes 30 minutes ,drain, remove pits, and cut in small pieces. Cream shortening with sugars, add well beaten eggs, molasses, milk and mix thoroughly. Combine with flour sifted with baking powder ,soda, salt and spices. Beat well ,add prunes, nutmeats and blend together. Drop by spoonfuls onto greased pan, and bake about 12 minutes in a hot oven (400 degrees F.).

Chocolate Prune Cake.

- 2 cups cooked prunes
- 1½ cups granulated sugar
- 2-3 cup shortening
- 2 1-ounce squares bitter chocolate
- 3 eggs
- 2¾ cups flour (pastry or cake)
- 4 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon soda
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Remove pits from prunes and cut prunes into small pieces. Cream sugar with shortening. Melt chocolate over hot water and add to creamed mixture; mix, add well beaten eggs and mix again. Sift flour with baking powder, soda, and salt and add alternately with the milk, a small amount at a time. Add prunes and vanilla and beat thoroughly. Pour into three greased cake tins and bake 25 to 30 minutes in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.). Put layers together and spread top and sides with chocolate butter frosting.

"I want a ticket for Virginia," Mose said to the ticket agent.

"What part of Virginia?"

"All of her," Mose came back. "Dat's her watchin' my suitcase."

"What kind of business is your father in?"

"He runs a store."

"What kind of a store?"

"Well, he has Ford parts for sale; buys butter, eggs and poultry; deals in real estate, paints and fencing; marries folks in his capacity as justice of the peace; runs the post office; sells stamps, hams, molasses and cider; serves meals and takes in roomers. I reckon you'd call it a drug store."

Syrups and sugars resembling or imitating the pure maple products present a problem which exacts constant attention on the part of the inspectors of the Dominion Fruit Branch in the administration of the Maple Sugar Industry Act.

Ex-Reeve And Mrs. Brownlee Celebrate Golden Wedding

Surrounded by a large family circle and hosts of friends and relatives, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Brownlee celebrated the golden anniversary of their marriage at their home on Main street here on Friday. Throughout the day the couple were recipients of greetings from their friends from far and near and many guests were present to offer their best wishes.

Both Mr. Brownlee and Mrs. Brownlee, formerly Mary Ann Pratt, are of Irish parentage and natives of Marlborough township, Carleton county, and were married at Prescott on April 7th, 1883. Following their marriage they resided in Marlborough for four years, moving to North Gower township in 1901. Nine years later they moved to Saskatchewan residing in Rouleau, Eston and Brock until in 1916 they returned to North Gower village and later took up residence in Kemptville. During these years Mr. Brownlee was engaged in farming and other business activities and social enterprises. For the past ten years they have lived in Chesterville, where they have gained a wide circle of friends.

Their family of five children, one child having died in infancy, are now all married and Mr. and Mrs. Brownlee are grandparents of 13 grandchildren and one great-grandchild. The children are: Mrs. Leonard C. Graham, of Hearne, Sask.; Mrs. Harry E. Johnson, of Rouleau, Sask.; William Henry Brownlee, also of Rouleau, Sask.; and Mrs. Stanley Fawcett and Mansell F. Brownlee both of Chesterville.

The couple were formerly Methodists and are now members of the United Church of Canada. Mr. Brownlee has the distinction of having been a member of the Orange Order for more than 52 years; is past master of six lodges, viz., Goodstown, Rouleau, Eston, Brock, Kemptville and Chesterville, and is this year honoured by the office of district chaplain for Dundas County. He is also a member of the Masonic Order, his mother lodge being Rouleau, Sask. He was also a member of the Canadian Order of Foresters.

Mr. Brownlee has held the offices of reeve and councillor in three municipalities, reeve of Snipe Lake and Eston, Sask.; councillor at Kemptville, and reeve of Chesterville in 1928. He is a staunch supporter of the Conservative party, and of the many messages he received on this occasion, one is from Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Canadian High Commissioner in London. Mr. Ferguson says: "I am glad of the opportunity given me of extending the very warm and hearty congratulations of Mrs. Ferguson and myself that you have enjoyed such a long and happy married career. It is pretty difficult for me to realize that this is a fact because I always picture you as a young and active boy. I hope, however, that your health continues to be good, and that you are just as keen and vigourous as you have always been. Please accept our hearty good wishes for many happy returns of the day."

Although now 70 years of age, Mr. Brownlee, with his wife, now 67, went about among their guests. Their home was beautifully decorated for the occasion in gold and green, and the table to which the guests sat down at noon to a delightful luncheon was prettily decorated in golden effect, with a huge wedding cake surrounded by golden flowers adorning the centre.

The local Orange lodge serenaded the couple presenting a gift and their best wishes for continued health and happiness. A gift of gold was received from William H. Brownlee and family ,the oldest son, residing in Rouleau, Sask. Among the numerous messages received were telegrams from Mrs. Harry Johnson, of Rouleau, Sask., and Mrs. Leonard Graham, of Hearne, Sask.; Rev. A. A. Pratt, of Kentucky, brother of Mrs. Brownlee, and Harrison Pratt, of California; greetings from the County L. O. L. of Dundas, and congratulations and a beautiful floral gift from the Ladies' Aid of the United Church, Chesterville .
