District Orange Service

There will be held in the Morewood Methodist Church on Sunday, Nov. 12th at 2 30 p. m., the annual District Orange Service of the district of Winchester.

Fire at Inkerman

Early Monday morning fire broke out in the store of Mr. Burrell at Inkerman, which quickly spread to the Wesleyan Church near by. Both buildings with contents were destroyed. The cause of the fire is not known. Winchester fire engine and brigade went up but could not do much as the fire was too far advanced.

Servage—Shay

A quiet but pretty marriage was solemnized at Riceville parsonage on Oct. 31st, at 3 o'clock when Eva Elizabeth second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Servage became the bride of Aca George only son of Mr. and Mrs. George Shay. The ceremony was performed by the bride's brother Rev. H. M. Servage. After a buffet luncheon, Mr. and Mrs. Shay motored to Plantagenet and took the west bound train for Ottawa and other points.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Burd Honoured

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Burd celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding day on Oct. 27th, when about a hundred and fifty friends and neighbours gathered in for a dinner which was served at six o'clock. Each table held the bride's cake which was daintly decorated with silver candies and maple leaves. Mrs. Burd received many costly and beautiful pieces of silver, showing the esteem in which she is held.

Mrs. Burd meeting with quite an accident Friday morning did not take much pleasure out of the evening but everyone else did. Everybody enjoyed themselves in dancing until the early hours of morning. After midnight when lunch had been served Miss Helen Armstrong played "Silver Threads among the Gold" which was sung by Misses Ida Carruthers, Anna Belle Burd and Prudy Ouderkirk. Other singing also entertained the crowd. Mr. and Mrs. Burd living together the past twenty-five years have enjoyed life and we hope that in the coming years they will look upward to that brighter path beyond and enjoy life much better than in the past and say, as Paul said, "Grow old along with me, the best is yet to be"

Mrs. Wm. Stubbs, Nelson B. C

While visiting her daughter, Mrs. H. Loucks, Morewood, Mrs. Wm. Stubbs of Nelson B.C. passed to her reward Oct. 31st. Although deceased had been afflicted with paralysis for more than five years, and was in her 73rd year, yet the end came sooner than was expected for on Sept. 17th she and her husband travelled from Nelson B. C. to the home where she died. Those who mourn are her husband Wm Stubbs, her daughters, Mrs. H. Loucks, Morewood, Mrs. H. H. Pitts, Nelson B. C., Mrs. O. B. Appleton, Proctor, B. C., Mrs. R. Clayton, Seattle, Wash. her sons, Allan Stubbs, Nelson B. C., E. H. Stubbs, Lethbridge, Alta., her sisters, Mrs. Abigal Robinson and Mrs. H. Scott, Los Angel's, Cal., Mrs. D. Staeger, Ashland, Wis, Mrs. Allan Loucks, Riverside, Mrs. Helen Brydges, Morrisburg, her brothers, Allan and Stanley Tyrrell, Escanaba, Mich, and eighteen grandchildren. She was predeceased by a sister Mrs. E. Beckstead and two brothers Daniel and Francis Tyrrell. The funeral services were held at the house, the Rev. S. H. Cooke, assisted by the Rev. F. L. Jobb officiating. The text was Paslm 37, verse 37. Mr. A. W. Reveler and Mrs. E. L. Munharvey sang "My Father Knows". The remains were interred in the Woodlands cemetery past which the majestic St. Lawrence flows. This is very near the scene of her earlier days. Deceased was born at Riverside on May 25th 1850. Early in life she joined the church. Her education was obtained in the old school house at the Churches. The highest tribute that can be conferred upon her is included in that profound term, "Mother" she was ever a true, sweet, strong and unselfish wife and mother, a christian in every sense of the term. She was interested not only in her own family but was ready at all times to assist others in any way that lay within her powers. Her superior mental fitness was manifested through the long years of suffering, at all times she was most patient and hopeful, and near the last when she felt the end not far away she calmly resigned herself to the inevitable, knowing full well that God's way is best Her life appeals to all who knew her.

"A mother is a mother still,
The holiest thing on earth.

Eight Cars Seized by Custom Officers

Eight fine looking automobiles were seized by the Niagara Falls customs officials Monday and Tuesday. Included in the capture are three large limousines. In each case the occupants had goods concealed somewhere about the cars. While the customs officials would not give out names, it is known that seven of the cars are from Toronto. Monday in particular there was a special watch on, and not one part of the cars crossing the bridge was overlooked. Bonnets were lifted and engines inspected as well as the insides of cushions and upholstering. All kinds of things were confiscated, including wearing apparel and cigarettes. The cars which have been confiscated will be redeemed on the owners paying the assessed value of them in Canada. Most of the seizures were made from prominent people of Toronto, Brantford, Hamilton and other cities.

Whiskey In Fish Barrels

Federal officers at Malone one day last week had their suspicions aroused by a carload of salt herring shipped from Canada and they made an examination of the contents of the barrels. Hidden with the salt fish in the barrels they found 1,200 quarts of Scotch whiskey. The shipment consisted of 135 barrels of fish and the liquor was valued at $7,000. The liquor was seized and the fish confiscated, —Massena Observer.

Bones of 350 Chinese To Be Sent To Orient

The Steamship Esther Dollar sailing from Boston for the Orient, November 15, will carry with her the bones of 350 Chinese who have died in New England, some of them as long ago as 1889, it became known lately.

This part of the steamship's freight—350 tin boxes, each inscribed with the name of a Chinese and the date of his death – will be landed at Hong Kong, where relatives of the dead will claim the remains for interment in ancestral soil. The work of exhuming the bodies from cemeteries throughout New England is now proceeding.

Fought a Wolf With Bare Hands And Won

With his bare hands, J. W Tripp, farmer killed a big wolf at Cloud Bay, and his pelt was presented to George Coo, clerk of the court Fort William, for Government bounty. When Mr. Tripp, visited his trap he found a wolf nipped by one leg, but in a fighting mood. Dared by companions to engage the forest marauder in close combat, Mr. Tripp laughingly accepted the challenge. On the Cloud Bay farm there then commenced an hour's engagement which might have delighted habitues of the Roman Amphitheatre. Circling around, seeking an opportunity to get in the first lick, the man at last launched himself through the air landing with his knees on the animal's back and his hands at its throat. When the gripping fingers finally held the wolf's throat until all breath was gone, Mr. Tripp fell across the brute's body entirely exhausted.

Saves Children And Bear

New Liskeard Speaker—From Falardeau comes the story of a fourteen-year-old girl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. St. Jacques, who took her little brother and sister, three and five years old, carrying the younger, for two miles along a bush road with heavy timber on each side. Then the fire trapped them and they took refuge in a culvert. There she used her skirt, wet in the water of the culvert, and fought the fire. She saved not only herself and the two children, but also a bear, which took refuge with them in the culvert. After the fire had passed she took the children home a mile. The bear looked after himself.

When Arm Severed Starts Walk For Physician

Ross Gernsey had his left arm taken off by contact with a saw in a mill near Harlow Thursday. He was alone in the mill at the time, and walked half a mile to his boarding house, where he received first aid. He then started to walk to Flinton, where the nearest physician had his office, but on the way was picked up by a couple of travellers, who rushed him there in their auto. When the party arrived at Flinton they found that the physician was not at home, and it was necessary to make the trip to Tweed to get medical aid. The doctor at Tweed gave temporary aid, and had him taken to a Belleville hospital, where he is today reported to be doing nicely.

Familiarity

"Did you inform father you intend to marry me ?" asked the girl with fluffy hair. "Yes," answered the young man with large eyeglasses. "All he said was that he wasn't very well acquainted with me and he didn't see why I should tell him my troubles."—Washington Star.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTES OE EASTFRN ONTARIO

It was the unanimous verdict of the several hundred delegates in attendance at the eighth annual convention of Women's Institutes of Eastern Ontario held in the Chateau Laurier, Ottawa on Oct. 24th, 25th, and 26th, that it was the best in the history of the District. Representations were present from all the counties in Eastern Ontario—the several branches in Dundas sending full representations.

"For Home and Country" has been the motto of the Institute since its organization 25 years ago, when three Institutes had been organized.

Today there are 950 branches with a membership of 30,000 and the several reports presented showing the diversity of the avenues into which the energies of the members had been directed.

The address of welcome on Tuesday was given by Mrs. Thorburn, treasurer of the National Council of Women, who expressed the hope that the dominant note of the convention would be courage, and an unbounded faith in Canada. "When women encourage a spirit of helpfulness, and then we will have an ideal co-operation between men and women," she said.

Mrs. R. H. Grant, wife of the Minister of Education, replying to Mrs. Thorburn's address said that the influences of the modern age were shown in the Home, the Church, and the School, and it was the duty of the Institutes to make it a power rather than evil.

Mrs. Calvin Blair of Billings Bridge read an excellent paper on "Co-operative and individual Labor Saving Devices". She enumerated the modern appliances which would enable the resident of a rural community to do her work in a more efficient manner, and to save herself much unnecessary labor.

That the rising generation could b encouraged to stay on the land by beautification of the farm home, was the contention of Professor W. T. Macoun of the Dominion Experimental Farm who spoke on "Home Beautification". In concluding he offered the resources of the Experimental Farm to the Institutes desiring further information.

An interesting discussion followed Professor Macoun's address.

Lady Byng of Vimy who was one of the evening speakers did not appear as the wife of our Governor General, but rather as the President of an active Women's Institute in England.

"I have not come to speak to you, but to meet you all, and to ask you questions regarding Canadian interests in comparison with those of England", were her opening remarks.

She expressed her surprise at the diversity of work undertaken by Canadian Institutes, and she asked Mrs. Chas. Yates of Athens, who was presiding, for copies of the reports of the individual branches, in order that she might send them to the Home Land where they would doubtless prove inspiring as well as instructive.

It was regretted that Mr. G. A. Putman, superintendent of Institutes, was unable to be present owing to illness. His place on the program was taken by Miss M. E. Cowan who gave an illustrated address on her trip around the world, which was much enjoyed.

Wednesday morning's session was taken up in the consideration of Girl's work. Several girl's Institutes have been organized in this district, Miss Ethel M. Chapman, Assistant Superintendent Toronto, and Miss E. J. Guest of Department of Agriculture, Toronto, were the speakers.

Wednesday afternoon's programme covered a wide range of subjects. In her address "How to get into co-operation with the schools," Mrs. Freeman Campbell of Dalmeny offered many a splendid suggestions while Mr. W. M. Croskery of Kemptville, presented the claims of the Kemptville Agriculture School, choosing for his subject, "How to co-operate with the Agricultural representative in School-Fairs and other ways."

In her two addresses Mrs. J. Muldrew of the Soldier's Settlement Board, Ottawa, showed herself to be a mine of information. She recounted some of her experiences in visiting the homes of returned men, and enlarged upon the problems that confronted them, she also gave a practical demonstration of how to start a community information Bureau.

A stirring appeal for the abolition of drug traffic was made by Judge Emily Murphy of Edmonton who said that 90 p. c. of the addicts were English speaking.

"Unless we strangle the drug traffic the drug traffic will strangle us" she said.

Mrs. Murphy is Police Magistrate and Judge of the Juvenile Court in and for the province of Alberta. Last year in the United States 500,000 lbs. of opium were used, and this did not include the amount smuggled. The drug habit affects all class and conditions in this country. In her judical capacity Judge Murphy has much to do with the victims of the drug habit, she noticed a particularly sad case. A little girl of fifteen whose father died on the field in Flanders was brought before her, she had been addicted to the drug for two years, and got her first taste from a cigarette.

At the Evening session on Wednesday, Dr. Margaret Patterson, Police Magistrate of Toronto spoke on, "Some needs of the country revealed by the court" She scored the dance halls, claiming they were a damage to the community and urged upon mothers to realize the great responsibility that rested upon them in the protection of their children. "We ought to get back to a realization of things worth while." the speaker declared, " and get rid of the dislike of honest labor."

Dr. Patterson introduced the subject of the feeble minded and the next speaker (Dr.) Helen MacMurchy of the Federal Health Department enlarged upon this. It is a national question and in Canada practically nothing was being done. The feeble-minded should have some special consideration.

Apart from the address by Mrs. Geo. Edwards, President of Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario on Federation the closing session of Thursday morning was largely taken up with the presentation of resolutions and reports of convenors of standing committees.

Twenty Dollars Found

A banker sauntering home saw a $20 bill lying on the curbstone. Of course he picked it up and recorded the number and bank of issue in case of a claimant for it. At home his wife remarked that the butcher had sent in a bill for meat amounting to $20. The only money he had with him was the money he had found, which he gave to her and she paid the butcher. The butcher paid it to a farmer for a calf and the farmer paid it to a merchant who in turn paid it to a laundress, and she owing the banker a note of $20, went to the banker and paid her no e. The banker recognized the bill as the one he had found and which upto that time had settled one hundred dollars of debt. Later he found the note to be a counterfeit one. Now will some of our financial friends tell us what has been lost in the transaction, and by whom, if anybody?

U F. O. Affirm "Us For Ourselves"

The Globe, yesterday published the following regarding the action it is expected delegates of the United Farmers of Ontario will take at the Progressive conference in Winnipeg on Friday.

The United Farmers of Ontario intend to hoe their own row in Federal politics. The executive of the movement is as strongly opposed to fusion in Dominion politics as it is to broadening out in provincial circles. At the progressive conference in Winnipeg on Friday, it is believed the members of the Ontario contingent will vote soiidly against any proposition leading to a realignment as far as their party is concerned.

The Ontario members left for the west. Each one had received a copy of a resolution passed by the executive of the U. F. O. expressing the opinion that "The interests of Agriculture will be served best by the farmer group maintaining its identity." Though the members as usual, were reticent about talking for publication, it is believed that they all share this opinion. More than one expressed the conviction to the Globe that any move to link the Progressive in any way with the King administration would be defeated decisively.

"R. Y. Halbert, M. P., for North Ontario, assured the Globe that there was no danger of fusion being consummated. Mr. Halbert is still convinced that 'the farmers must hoe their own row and hoe it clean.' He believes that on this subject the Ontario group will be unanimous.

"Mr. Halbert and all the other members refused to discuss their attitude toward Hon. T. A. Crerar. They expressed satisfaction with the result of the last session and were of the opinion that it would not be wise to disturb the alignment of the various parties at Ottawa."

Who Won The War?

London, Ont., Advertiser.—Of syndicates that secure features for newspapers there is no end. In this morning's mail comes one from New York, that has been sent out broadcast, although it cannot be intended for Canadian consumption.

Four German warriors have been secured to state that it was the American Army that won the war toward the close of the year 1918. They are Ludendorff, former Crown Prince Wilhelm, Gen. Von Einem, and Gen. Gallwitz.

Then comes some of the display wording: "It was the American soldier that whipped us." And again: "How the Prussian Military leaders compare the bravery of the Yankee fighters with members of all the other allied armies.'

And, of course, these four Germans have picked up a few dollars in good money for the things they have written, and for an equal amount would probably be willing to write a series showing that the troops, of any other nation were instrumental in bringing the war to a conclusion.

Any agency that seeks to turn such a damnable discussion to dirty dollars and dirty cents in profit ought to be cut from the list of civilized newspapers.

In nearly every circle the discussion of who won the war has been dropped. The Canadian troops—and they paid the price to the limit—are satisfied to know that they did their best, and that when they fell they fell facing the foe.

We believe that the American soldier has much the same view. He was a new soldier at the close of the war, fresh, well equipped and hopeful, and he played his part, and he played it well.

France stood the shock of war right from the start. Her lands were devastated, and her towns ruined. The French soldier fought some of the greatest battles of the world. He held on at Verdun when the world said it couldn't be done. We have never yet heard him claim that he won the war?

And the Old Contemptible who crossed over the Channel right at the start in 1914, and with little munition and small support in the way of artillery, stood up against the whole force of the German army. He paid the price and he paid it to the limit—yet do we hear this battered old warrior stand up to proclaim that he won the war?

It's poor, mean business that seeks now to get newspapers to buy stories that are built and based on the idea that American soldiers won the war on the say-so of four scrapped and defeated German war lords. It is putting words into mouths of thousands of Americans who do not relish the idea of vain boasting in a war that brought death, suffering and misery to the whole world.

And now we have the poor spectacle of trying to rake in the revenue by blowing into flame embers that are well-nigh dead. Meanwhile the world has passed on to the discusslon of greater things, and it is hardly likely that it will turn back.

The Kingdom of Wood Pulp

How many people understand the marvellous transition that has taken place when they hold in their hands a sheet of paper—even their daily newspaper?

Just a little while ago, it was a living thing in the forest. It spread its wide branches until they met in a vast canopy of brilliant green. Monarchs, each, of the Far Places, each roll of paper was a tree embedded in the firm mossy soil and raising its proud head to summer sunshine and the long, bleak winters of the Land of the Flying snow.

Then the sound of the axe was heard in the forest, and down the shadowy slopes echoed the lusty songs of men, as the chips began to fly. Straining horses dragged the prostrate logs over pine-needle paths, until river currents welcomed them to a still longer voyage of discovery.

Virgin forests are not desecrated when put to a man's purpose. It is merely a marvellous transition. Every forest tree is a library of books or a fluttering white stream from the heart of the Fourth Estate. And there is something of inspiration in the sudden knowledge that, as one reads, he holds in his hand the breath, the romance, the profound majesty and beauty of the forests.

But there is need for a united effort to save these forests from a real peril, a real destruction. Every year entire tracts of timber-land are ravaged by fire. The hunter or trapper leaves a live coal burning as he passes on; a match is tossed carelessly into dry leaves by the amateur woodsman. There is tragedy in this, a crime against Nature, against Man himself. It is not what we use that causes paper shortage; it is what we waste, what we wantonly destroy. Let every man be a custodian of our forests, in the things that he says, in the things that he does. Fire in a forest knows no quarter.

Let Us Make The Roads Safe

It is disquieting to know that during the first three months of the careful crossing campaign that the National Safety Council has been carrying on through the newspapers, the mails and the advertising boards the number of automobile accidents on railway grade crossings actually increased by thirty per cent over the same three months of last year. Although the Pennsylvania Railroad did not lose a single passenger last year, its trains killed fifty-six persons who drove on the tracks in automobiles. Judging from the returns received from the thirty-four states where death statistics are carefully kept, there must have been nearly twelve thousand persons killed in automobile accidents in 1920, and probably ten times as many injured. This year the number will be greater.

The extraordinary increase in the motor cars adds steadily to the dangers of the road. On pleasant days, especially at the week-end, the principal roads are so crowded with automobiles that the inexperienced or panicky drivers are almost sure to get into trouble. At the other end of the line there are drivers so confident of their skill and so proud of their ability to get out of the tight places that they become reckless of danger and regardless of the rights or the safety of others.

A railway train is by necessity confined to a single line of track on which except on occasional crossings no one has any right to be. We are, however, exceedingly careful to test the nerves, the eyesight, the caution and the self-possession of the locomotive engineer by repeated examinations. But we are not yet strict enough in our examination of automobile drivers. In many states the tests are perfunctory; in none are they severe. There are thousands of persons driving powerful cars along roads crowded with other vehicles and across dangerous railway crossings who, by reason of defects in eyesight, hearing judgment or nerve, are continually imperiling and often destroying the lives of themselves and of those they meet.

Neither, when a man has been proved reckless and lawless on the road, are we quick enough or relentless enough in depriving him permanently of his license. The problem is a new one. Never until lately have we had to deal with vehicles weighing tons and capable of railway speed on the public highway. We are still too mindful of the public character of the roads; we hesitate to bar anyone from using them. But the new state of affairs must be faced. Our highway boards must have the authority to keep careless, reckless, or nervously timid people out of the driver's seat in the present-day motor car; and, having it, they must use it. Otherwise the roads will become unsafe for anyone.

Scotch Church Dicipline Extends Even to the Grave

Acting in accordance with the old disciplinary days of the Presbyterians in Scotland, the Rev. George McLean of Dundee refused to conduct a funeral service because the family did not attend communion. The deceased was the wife of a publican named McDonald. The preacher said he would bury her under the rites of the church only if McDonald paid him a penny for every Sunday in the thirteen years during which he had not attended church the money to go for the unemployed. McDonald refused and sought another clergyman. McLean maintained that he acted only in accordance with the laws of the church.

A House of Pain

They passed a beautiful building during their travels.

"That's a fine house," said Brown to Jones, "an' I cannot bear to look at it."

"Why not?" asked Jones.

"Why?" repeated Brown, "Because the owner built it out of the blood, the aches, the groans of his fellow-men, out of the grief of children and the wails of women."

"Great Scott!" exclaimed Jones. The brute! What is he? A money-lender?"

"Oh, no, my friend; he is a dentist."

HEBRIDES THE 'TIN ISLANDS?'

Mystery of Lands Described by the Ancient Phoenicians Seems to Have Been Cleared Up.

Where were the tin islands? Every boy and girl has been taught that the Phoenicians visited Britain before the time of Julius Caesar to get tin for use in the manufacture of bronze. They have been told that when the ancient writers speak of the tin islands, or Cassiterides, they mean the Scillies, although little or no tin is found in those islands.

The fact is that no one could say definitely where the tin islands were. Some historians thought they were the little islands at the northwest corner of Spain, while others have believed that they had no real existence, and that in speaking of them the authors merely meant to indicate that tin came from overseas.

Now, however, an important discovery has been made that seems to clear up the mystery. Tin has been found in considerable quantities in the Hebrides, and everything suggests that these are the famous tin islands of the old writers.

The mystery has largely arisen owing to the fact that the Phoenicians, who were cunning traders, and did not want anyone else to poach on their preserves, kept the source of their tin secret.

This discovery of tin in the Hebrides is a very interesting fact, and it will be curious if the islands that first brought Britain into prominence should again become a source of wealth and fame.

Service Brings Increase.

Two beautiful little springs lived on the mountain side and drew their crystal water from the same source; yet as they grew older they grew very different, for the one insisted on running out of its banks and trickling down the mountain. Soon flowers sprang up all along the way and beautiful ferns and moss lined its banks. Its water was always cool and refreshing, and travelers always paused to chat with it—but its neighbor refused to leave its own shaded spot and soon became stagnant and sour and green. No one ever came near it save one old frog, and he was a "croaker." Which one are you like?—F. H. Cheley in "Stories for Talks to Boys."

Waterproof Glue.

To render glue insoluble in water, hot or cold, add a few crystals of bichromate of potash to the water with which the glue is being dissolved for use. After a part has been glued expose it to the light. For most purposes bichromate of one fiftieth part of the amount of glue used will be sufficient. Glue containing potassium bichromate becomes insoluble when exposed to light and allowed to harden thoroughly.

Wood and Cement.

When wood is used as a re-enforcing material for concrete it should be impregnated with magnesium chloride, and the wood must be so placed that any change in the cross-sectional area does not affect the durability of the structure. If the latter precaution is overlooked the concrete may crack.

Assyrians Wore Porcelain Rings.

In both Egypt and Assyria porcelain rings were in common use. They were painted with great delicacy, the painting often being burned into the enamel.

Looking Out For Number One

A man had rented a field from the owner with the stipulation that the rent was to be one fourth of the crop raised. At harvest time the owner of the land was amazed to find that he received nothing at all from the renter, and he naturally remonstrated.

"How's this? Wasn't I to get a fourth of the crop?" he demanded indignantly.

"Yes, you were," the tenant replied candidly, "but as it was turned out there was only three fourths of a crop."

Which reminds us of the man who promised to give a neighbor one of a litter of pigs when the youngsters were old enough to leave their native sty. Some weeks later the neighbor asked whether he might come and get the pig.

"Well, now, that's too bad," said the other. "You know the pig I was saving for you died."

Forest Fires and The News Paper

Many newspaper editors maintain that the daily and weekly press are paying the bills for forest fires. This refers, of course, to the destruction of paper-making woods, spruce and balsam.

This statement is not exaggerated. Spruce and balsam are the raw materials of newsprint paper. Dear wood automatically follows forest fires as the United States paper mills are finding today. When Ontario loses 700,000 acres of timberlands by fire in a single season and Quebec another 600,000 acres, it is not difficult to understand that the price of depletion must be paid by the ultimate consumer of wood products. We cannot hold down the price of newsprint paper and at the same time allow forest fires the right of way.

Weather Prophets Predict Mild Winter

Residents of the northern woods, long famed for their prophecies with regard to coming weather, are unanimous this fall that all signs point to an unusually mild winter. Bush-men and farmers arriving in North Bay from the north said that the Indian weather prophets of that section are taking their cues from the appearances of the heavens, and say that there will be less cold weather this winter than has been experienced in years.

Timber Lands

Owning timber land to-day is like having money in the bank, and prudent farmers are husbanding their resources in the shape of trees. A woodlot may be meagre, but with intelligent treatment it can be made to give a good turn either in yearly growth or in the shape of fire wood. Only dead or fallen trees should be used for the fireplace or the cooking stove.

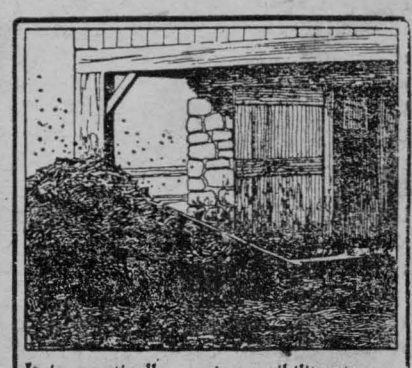
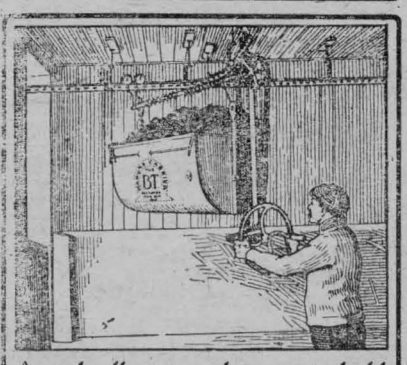
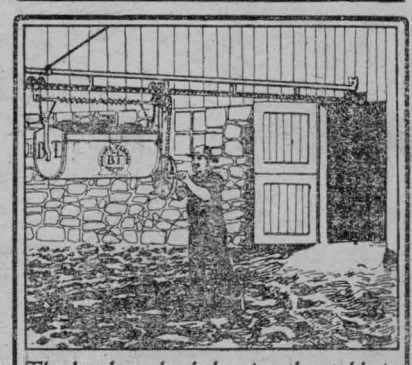
Day in and day out, the hard work of cleaning the stable has to be done. Stable cleaning with a wheelbarrow is a monotonous, hard, disagreeable chore. It is hard to wheel a heavy wheelbarrow load through a muddy yard and up a slippery plank. And the worst of it is, this hard, disagreeable chore has to be done every day.



It is practically an impossibility to get the manure far enough away from the stable. The conditions in the yard make it impossible. Manure piles right up close to the stable give off ammonia fumes that spoil paint and woodwork, rot harness and at the first opportunity breed flies.



A wheelbarrow does not hold much at a load, which means many trips before the work is done. The BT Carrier holds three times as much as a wheelbarrow. It will tackle 800 lbs. in one load.



The hard work of cleaning the stable is cut in two with a manure carrier. It runs on overhead track so it does not matter about the state of the yard. No planks to lay; no snow to shovel; no more pushing to the top of the pile with a wheelbarrow.

A Walking Tractor

An agricultural tractor wl ich is propelled by feet instead of by a wheel is described in Popular Mechanics magazine. The purpose of the machine is to provide a tractor that will operate equally well at all times on ground too soft or muddy for the effective use of propelling wheels. Mounted on a pair of steering wheels is a hood, with a radiator and power plant of automobile type. The sides and chassis of the hood are extend ed to the rear, and support two pivoted vertical levers, at the lower ends of which in contact with the ground, are flat, horizontal propelling plates, or feet. By means of a system of connecting rods and cranks in connection with the motor, these levers are caused to move backwards and forward alternately like the legs of any biped and the propulsion of one foot continues until propulsion of one foot continues until propulsion is started by the other.

Stay in Canada

Sir Auckland Geddes, British Ambassador to the United States, has been telling youthful Canadians to stay in this country, and build it up. He believes that this country will have big difficulties to overcome, notwithstanding its wealth of resources, and will need the strongest and best of its youth. In the past, the United States has attracted too many of our sons.

The advice is good. If the many Canadians who in the past two decades have sought opportunities in the United States had put their energy into building up Canada, this country might have been farther on. A large number of the young Canadians who went across the border have not succeeded more than they would have succeeded in this country. Some, in special lines, or with special qualifications, have found opportunities that a small nation cannot provide. But it is notable that in the last few years, young Americans have been coming to Canada in increasing numbers, They find more opportunity here. For one good job in the United States, there are twenty keen seekers, compared to one in this country. The ratio of efficiency and driving to retain good posts is much higher there. It is easier to make a mark among nine million prople than it is among a hundred and ten millions.

Canada not only needs the constructive services of her young men and women but must be prepared to give adequate rewards. This country is more conservative in business methods. Of the two countries, Canada has now much the greater field for future development It is usually the fastest growing country or potentially the richest in resources to be utilized, that contains most rewards for youthful initative and enterprise. Canada is one of the bright spots in the economic gloom, and should have no need to put her call to her youth to stay home on the basis of duty.

Oat Hulls a Danger To Live Stock

Oat hulls contain very little nutritive material for the feeding of live stock and are exceedingly difficult to digest, points out circular No. 11, just issued by the Seed Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. In fact, the circular goes on to say, feeds containing a high percentage of hulls have not infrequently been blamed for causing injury and even death to live stock. Happily, since the passing of the Feeding Stuffs Act in 1920, the fraudulent use of oat hulls has been gradually checked, and at present few manufacturers take the risk of using them in an unlawful manner. This is proved by a statement in the Circular that the percentage of oat hulls used in samples submitted to the Ottawa feed laboratory from various sources has fallen in the past four years from 59 per cent to 35 per cent. A store of examples are given of the illegal use of hulls in samples taken at random from those received in the ordinary way for microscopical examination at the Ottawa laboratory. These indicate that the practice has not been confined to anyone province, but it is gratifying to be told that during the past two years much has been done to protect the public by officials of the Seed Branch charged with the enforcement of this Act.

In brief, the Act limits the classification of feeds to three main groups, namely, commercial feeding stuffs, chops and mill stuffs, and requires a statement of ingredients to accompany each container of such stuffs or "chop" ofiered for sale. A summary of the Circular, which can be obtained free of cost by application to tbe Publications Branch of the Agriculture Department at Ottawa, explains that the hulls are generally used either unmixed or mixed with other materials. Unmix d they are usually pulverized, and appear on the market under attractive brand names and frequently without the proper labelling required by the Act. Mixed they may occur with more or less ground oats, where they often pass as oat chop; with one or more ingredients as commercial feeding stuffs, in which case their presence should be stated; or with mill feeds, either with or without screenings. When sold in accordauce with the Act their use in feeding stuffs is within the law, but when used as an adulterant the seller and the manufacturer are liable to prosecution.

The Ideals of a Great Journal

From the day of its inception fifty years ago the aim of its publishers has been to make of the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal a great paper, securing for its fame and character, so that it would be looked upon as a national journal for all Cauada; a paper instructive and pleasing, but not just a money making project. As a matter of fact, there has been no studied calculation about dividends or any kind of monetary gain, so long as the interests of the subscriber s were cared for. Competen judges declare that there is no paper published in the English language that gives such superb value as the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal. The subscription price is only $2.00 per year.

Birds Versus Bugs

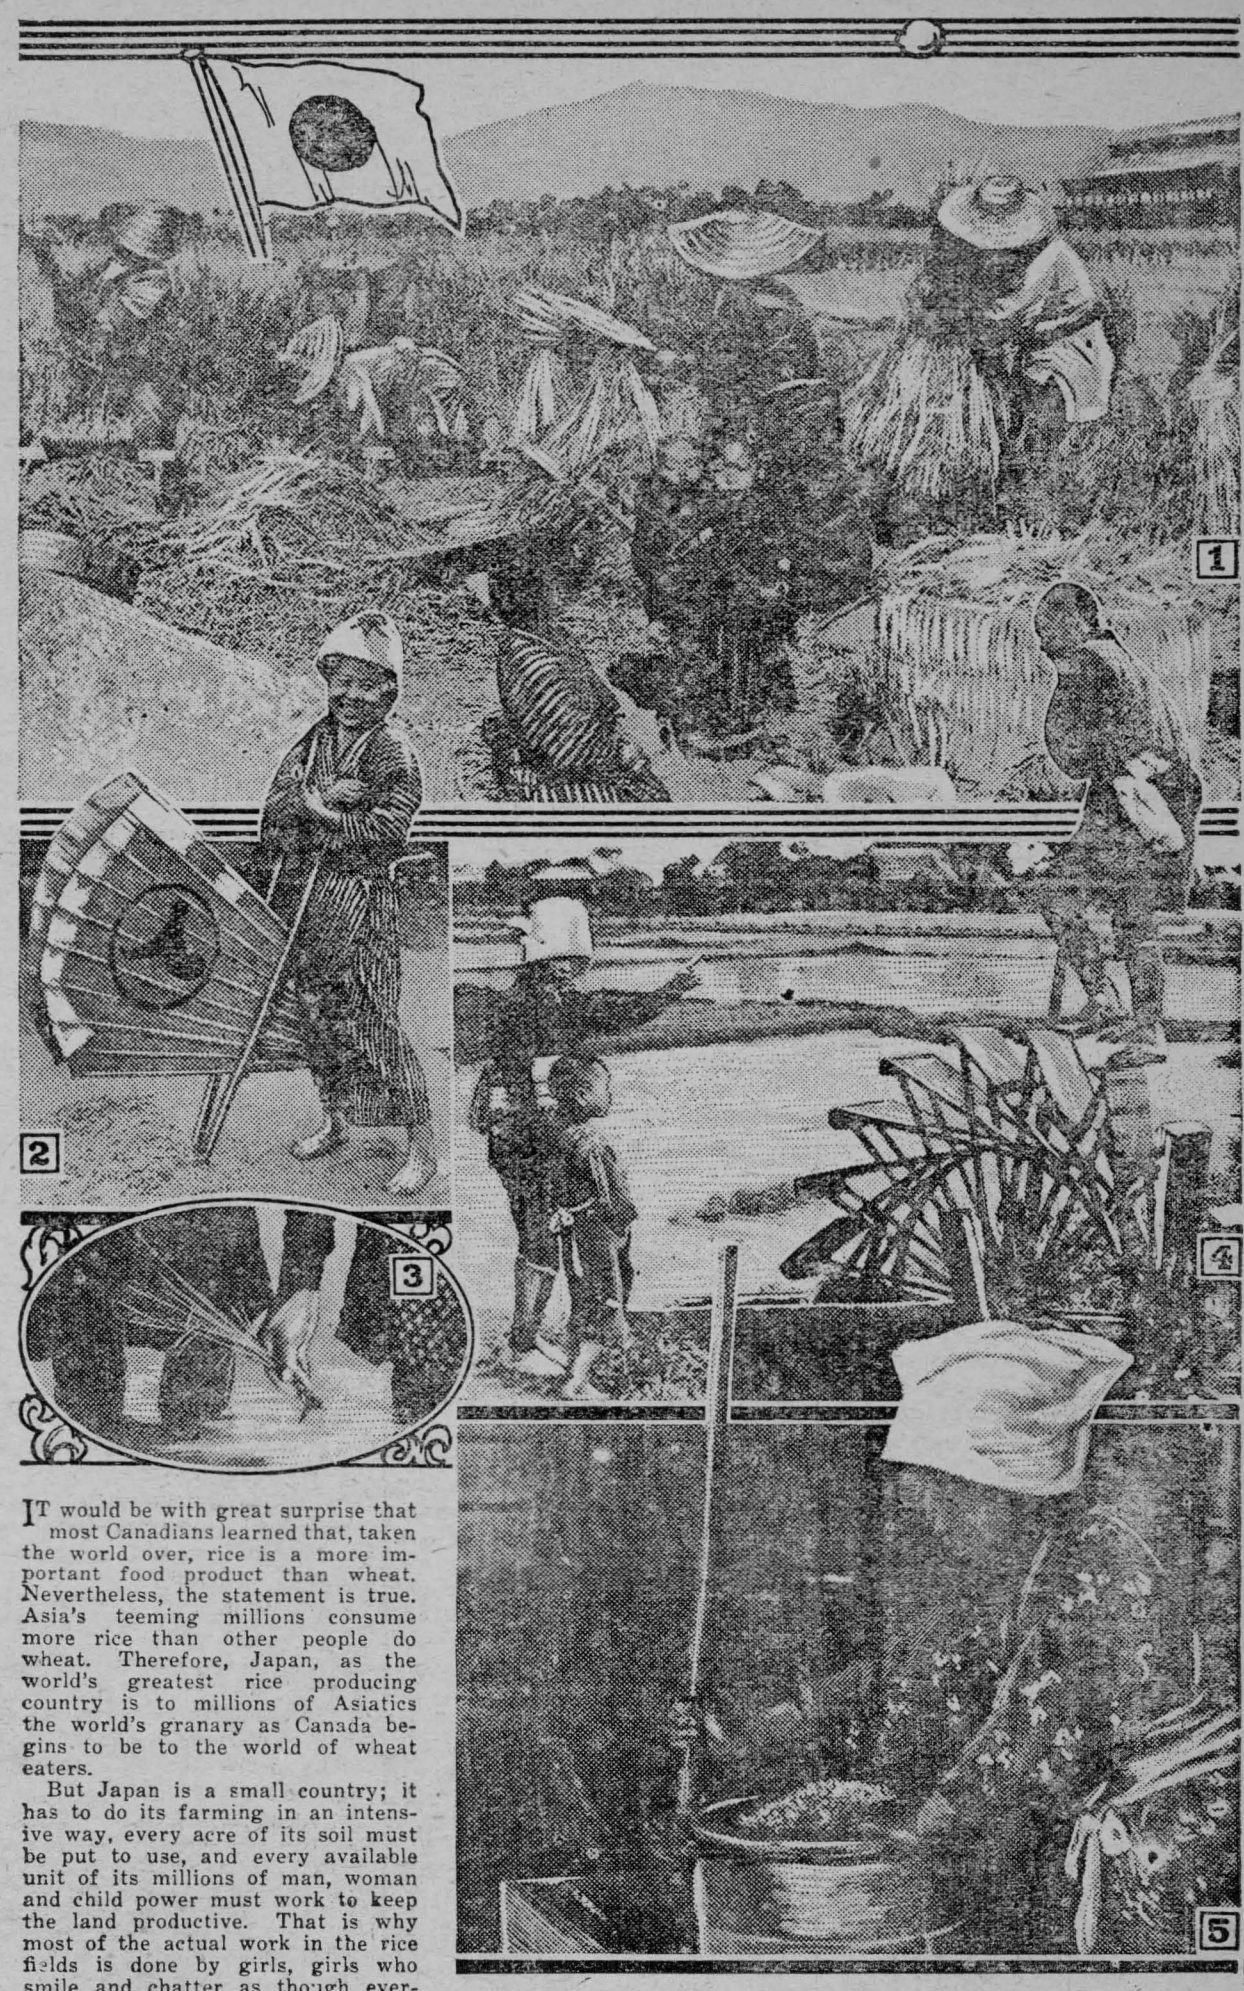
A woodlot that is sufficiently protected to serve as a bird sanctuary is a beauty spot where wild flowers and wild fruits will flourish. Moreover it would be growing valuable timber for future generations, and during the war we found our supplies of fuel of great importance. Strikes and industrial wars may make them more valuable in the future. Even in Western Ontario there is much land that would be better if planted to trees than going on as weedy pasture. One might go on to a great length showing why what is left of our woodlots should be preserved, and, where the cattle have been allowed to run in them, why they should be fenced in and replanted with young trees to give them a proper start. But I do not think any better argument can be found for this reforestation than that it will provide farmers with innumerable helpers in the strenuous business of keeping down insect pests. Every once in a while the entomologists issue a warning that unless insects are kept in check, food production will rapidly become unprofitable, if not impossible. Some of the most eminent of them do not hesitate to assert that unless the insects are fought methodically and strenuously they will render the earth uninhabitable for human beings. We have already developed all kinds of sprays and poisons as the munitions for this war, but I am inclined to think that the natural method is the best. Start a back-to-the-land movement for our native insectivorous birds by providing the neccsssary nesting places and hiding places for them, and protecting them from enemies. If it were possible to start the opposite of a sanctuary for house sparrows and cowbirds I wouldn't mind having one blazing in every township, but I hardly see how it could be managed. How would it do to start work with a slogan: "Bird sanctuaries instead of bug sanctuaries?"

His Bookmark

"How far have you studied Englfsh history, John?" inquired Miss Cross, the new governess, as she and John and sundry sisters settled down to the first lesson together.

"Just as far as my history book is dirty Miss Cross," said John.

Rice Fields of Japan



(1) The harvest time when the whole family goes in the fields to help gather in the crop. The water has been allowed to run off the fields and the straw is cut close to the ground.
(2) They clean the grain with busy fans and a bright smile.
(3) The young rice shoots are planted by hand by girls who wade in the warm, muddy water that covers the field.
(4) The water wheel that floods the rice fields.
(5) The primitive rice mill.

IT would be with great surprise that most Canadians learned that, taken the world over, rice is a more important food product than wheat. Nevertheless, the statement is true. Asia's teeming millions consume more rice than other people do wheat. Therefore, Japan, as the world's greatest rice producing country is to millions of Asiatics the world's granary as Canada begins to be to the world of wheat eaters.

But Japan is a small country; it has to do its farming in an intensive way, every acre of its soil must be put to use, and every available unit of its millions of man, woman and child power must work to keep the land productive. That is why most of the actual work in the rice fields is done by girls, girls who smile and chatter as though everlastingly wading in the glorified mud puddles of rice fields were a jollification rather than a labor. But the smile is characteristic of the Japanese, working or playing. It is a national trait. During most of the year Japan is a smiling land, and no doubt the people come by their propensities honestly enough.

Rice is grown in water-covered fields. If the water isn't there in the first place it has to be pumped up by curious little water tread wheels of one-man power. These are always worked by men because it is one of the easiest jobs on the rice farm. After the fields are covered by about a foot of dirty water they are ploughed. This also is a man's job, and a man usually does it, probably because the ox that draws the plow needs that kind of talking to. Then the girls step in—half way to their knees they go into the mud and water and by hand they plant the thousands of little rice plants that go to make up a field and through the succeeding months of the year they cultivate the water covered fields with hoes that seem too big for the little hands that hold them.

The grain ripens to harvest, and the fields are drained off, and after the men have cut it down with scythes the girls and children again take up their labors.

Threshing is a primitive operation. Large metal combs stand in wooden frames and the straw is first pulled through these, the ears of grain being torn from the straw in the process. The threshing is done by flails and the straw is cleaned by large fans in the hands of girls. It is then ground to flour by hammering with heavy wooden mallets or in primitive hand mills, and finds its way to the table in countless curious and delectable forms, such as only Japanese cooks know.

Japan is always lovely and interesting to the Western visitor, but never more so than when the rice harvest is under way.
