REV. F. L. HOWALD OFFICIATES AT DAUGHTERS WEDDING

At St. Peter's Lutheran church, Ottawa on Saturday afternoon, the marriage took place of Miss Marian Howald, elder daughter of Rev. F. L. Howald and Mrs. Howald of Morrisburg, to Cpl. Wes. Wenman of New Westminster, B. C., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Wenman of New Westminster Rev. Howald, the bride's father, officiated, assisted by Rev. A. Conrad of Ottawa.

The church was decorated with pink and white snapdragon,, with white satin bows on the guest pews. A. Loa played the wedding music.

Morrisburg taxpayers will pay in the municipality 8 more mills on the dollar this year than they did in 1949 ,it was decided at a regular meeting of council held at the Red Cross rooms on Monday night. This will bring the tax rate for 1950 to 38 mills, as compared with 30 last year.

The decision for the boost came on a split vote, with Messrs. Parker, Duprau, Agulnik and Broder voting for the motion, and Councillor Coligan casting the lone "nay" vote.

On a motion of Councillors Parker and Agulnik the treasurer was authorized to transfer $3,000 from the water works account to the 1949 loan from the Bank of Montreal.

Council adopted on motion by Mr. Parker and Mr. Duprau, a resolution that the tender of Leonard W. Barkley for furnishing young trees for the village as shade trees, be accepted The clerk was authorized to order a truckload of crushed stone for roadwork and the road superintendent was authorized to make a fill on High Street.

Requisitions were received from the Board of Education, for sums of $10,111.08 for the public schools and $9.750.18 for the High School for the year, and these were accepted.

The clerk was instructed to notify operators of garages and service stations to have checks made on their equipment, and to furnish written proof to the Council that there is no leakage from their tanks.

Council set a fee of $25 per year for use of water from their hydrant for spraying of the Stowell orchard.

A building permit was granted to Pyramid Paper Products on application of their contractor Mr. Daoust.

Before adjourning, By-Law no. 802 for the purpose of issuing debentures for a sewer on Victoria Street extension, was read a first and second time.

Mr. E. MacMillan Dies Following Operation

Universal regret was felt throughout the district, where he has been a well known figure for many years, and in his adopted village of Morrisburg, where he has been a most highly esteemed resident for the past several years, at the sudden death of Mr. Eugene MacMillan, which occurred Wednesday at the Brockville General Hospital following an operation. Although in indifferent health for the past five years, Mr. Macmillan had been able to be about the house until Monday, when his condition worsened. He was removed to hospital on Tuesday and it was then found necessary to perform an operation, from which he never rallied.

Mr. MacMillan was born in Cornwall in 1875, a son of the late Alexander MacMillan and his wife, Mary Anne Brown. He received his early education in Cornwall schools and learned the baking trade in that town. In 1896 he went to Chesterville, where he successfully carried on a baking business until il lhealth forced his retirement in 1945.

In 1893 he was married in Cornwall to the former Josephine McGuire, who predeceased him in 1925. Of that marriage were born five children, of whom four survive. One son, Ernest, was killed overseas in World War I. Surviving are Rev. Brother Peter (Stewart) and Rev. Bro. Christian (Bruce) both of the Christian Brothers, Toronto; Eric MacMillan of Chesterville; and one daughter, Mrs. F. V. Court (Hilda) of Brooklyn, N. Y. Also surviving, are his second wife, the former Mrs. Harry Winstanley of Morrisburg, whom he married in 1936, as well as four brothers and one sister: Wm. of Finch; Andrew of Norwood, N.Y.; Arthur of Prince Albert, Sask.; Neil of Kindersley, Sask.; and Mrs. Homer Patterson (Theresa) of Winchester, Ontario.

Funeral service will be held on Saturday at St. James Anglican Church at 1.30 p.m. The remains will be placed in the vault for burial later at Mount Pleasant.

ROBBERS CRACK MORRISBURG POST OFFICE FOR $1,500

Thieves broke into the Morrisburg Post Office sometime between Saturday night and Sunday morning, smashed open the safe, and escaped with cash and stamps valued at approximately $1,500. The robbery was discovered about 9.30 Sunday morning when the postmaster, Roy Geach, visited the office and found the wrecked safe.

Entrance was gained by removing a window from a covered brick passageway connecting the R. H. Bradfield Hardware Store with the warehouse in the rear. Once in this passageway, the robbers carefully replaced the window, so that they could work unobserved, and then forced open a locked iron fire door. A glass in a transom over the inside door was broken, and the bolts holding it pushed back with a stick. This put them in the hardware store, where from the office in the rear, where they were again shielded from view, they cut a hole through a brick wall into the washroom of the Post Office There they were hidden from observation by the partition that separates the lobby from the working portion of the office.

The large and heavy safe was moved to the rear of the office and behind the sorting racks, where it was tipped on its back. The robbers then went to work, breaking off the combination knob and cutting the metal of the door with chisel and sledge. Once through the metal, it was a simple matter to force back the locking lugs of the safe. Some of the tools used were taken from the hardware store, while others the thieves brought with them and left behind. These showed they were not novices. A punch used was the correct size to drive the rivets from the safe after the heads had been chiselled off. They also had small iron wedges to drive in and force an opening between the door and the wall of the safe. A faded car rug placed in the opening in the brick wall, probably to protect their clothes, was also left behind. Money orders and notes were not taken, the thieves showing a preference for cash and postage stamps.

Although police are investigating even the slightest clue, they have not yet been successful in getting a lead on those who may have been responsible for the break-in.

Chief of Police Clare Biccum of Morrisburg is in charge of the investigation, and has been sasisted by members of the RCMP, the Ontario Provincial Police and the inspectors of the Post Office department at Ottawa.

THEATRE CONTEST WON BY IROQUOIS CHILD

A "Most Beautiful Child Contest" was successfully staged at the Cameo Theatre Wednesday night in connection with Foto Nite, under the able direction of Mr. Thomas Parker Master of Ceremonies.

A little two-year old girl, Rosemary Roberts of Iroquois, won the contest by drawing the most applause from a capacity house, and was presented with many appropriate gifts. The runners up were also awarded prizes.

The management regrets very much that through an oversight, the names of prize donors—Saver's, English Stores and Tom Fraser, were not mentioned from the stage.

Due to the success of this initial contest it is planned to continue next week and will be open to all children between the ages of 2 and 5 years of age.

The name called to be ofered $90 was that of Mr. Ernest Marcellus of Iroquois. An oddity is the fact that Mr. Marcellus was in town and is understood to have been at the theatre between shows, but had left before his name was called. The offer is now $95 for next week.

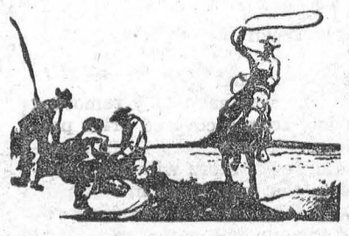
Riders for the Hoot-Owl Pool

by G. H. SHARP



CHAPTER TWO

As the funeral sermon was being preached, a dozen or more riders came up the road that bordered on the cemetery. Ab Abbott was riding in the lead, his men following him. Behind them was a spring wagon.

More than one man there beside that open grave unbuttoned his slicker so that he could get to his gun quickly. They all knew what was under that wet tarp in the spring wagon. The Triangle outfit was bringing to town the dead body of the cowboy Sheriff Hank Roberts had discovered just below the Bob Anderson place.

The sheriff slipped through the crowd that stood in the mud there beside the open grave. He stepped up on his horse and rode to meet that grim cavalcade now entering the graveyard gate.

"They'll be through over there in a few minutes, Abbot." Hank Roberts blocked their way.

"We ain't got all year to plant this cowboy." Ab Abbot's heavy, purplish face had an ugly look. His eyes were bloodshot, cold as ice.

"Where's his coffin?"

"He don't need one. He was tough. Anyhow, he was in the hole to me for a hundred dollars. I got no money to pay out for coffins." He turned to his men. "Yonder's a pick and shovel. One of you men get to work on the hole. Dig fast. Take turns. Dig over there where the ground is soft. The quicker this plantin' is over, the sooner you get whisky in your bellies. Get at it."

As the preacher's last words were spoken and the slicker-clad men bowed bare heads in prayer, paying final tribute to a friend, the Triangle cowboys began digging a grave near by. The dead man in the spring wagon would be buried without a word of prayer, without even a pine box to hold him. Wrapped in the soiled, rain-wet tarp under which he had slept so many nights, he would be dumped into a hole in the ground and covered with earth that was soggy from the rain.

Sheriff Hank Roberts, a sawed-off shotgun across his saddle, stood guard between the two burial parties. His face wore a grim, worried expression and his puckered eyes glinted. He would be glad when that prayer was finished, when the crowd of men standing beside Bob Anderson's grave broke up and left.

Now the prayer was finished. The men with wives and families lost little time getting to their rigs. The younger men of the Pool mounted their horses and rode through the gateway, headed for town and a drink to warm them.

The preacher got into his buggy and drove away. Then only Mae and Webb Winters stood beside the open grave that held the body of Bob Anderson.

Mae, whose name was Kathleen Mavourneen Murphy, had reddish hair that glinted like copper, steady gray eyes, a wide, red-lipped mouth that laughed easily. She held tightly to Webb's arm. She wore a long, black slicker and a black Stetson that Bob had given her. She had ridden to the funeral on the fat, black pony Bob had given her for her birthday. She had come horseback because she knew that Bob would want it that way.

"He's gone," she whispered.

"He's gone, Mae. A whiter man never lived. Now we better go back to town."

The old grave digger stood some distance away. He was used to open graves and coffins. He swamped around the saloons for a living. Grave digging was a side line. He stood there glaring at the Triangle cowboys who were using his tools, cursing them in a whisky whisper.

Sheriff Hank Roberts sat his horse, watching that other grave being dug. His lips thinned as he saw them drop the tarp-covered dead man into the muddy grave. He saw Ab Abbot drain what was left of a bottle of whisky, then toss the empty bottle into the grave.

"Cover him up, boys," he said. "He's dead. So's the bottle."

Mae and Webb had ridden away. The sheriff caught up with them as they reached town.

"Drop in and see me at the office, Webb," he said, then rode on ahead.

Webb and Mae rode through the pines to her cabin. Webb put wood on the open fire and they sat there without talking.

They were sitting there when the sheriff's wife came with a laden tray.

"She hasn't touched a bite in I don't know how long," the white-haired Mrs. Roberts told Webb. "Now you run along and I'll look after her. It's a woman's job, times like this."

"If you need me," said Webb, "send somebody to find me. I won't be far off."

He walked up the street to the sheriff's office. Hank Roberts motioned to a chair.

"Webb, I got bad news for yuh."

"I reckon I can stand it. Let's have it."

"You're under arrest for the murder of Bob Anderson."

Murder is an ugly charge to make against a man, and the murder of a friend adds to its ugliness. The trial of Webb Winters lasted two days. Those members of the Scissor-Bill Pool who had joined Ab Abbot in pressing the murder charge gave their testimony. They had lost a part of that three thousand dollars that had vanished. They openly accused Webb of murder and the theft of that money.

Ab Abbot and two Triangle men swore they had seen Webb and Bob ride together along the trail that led to Bob's place. Their testimony conflicted with Webb's sworn statement that he had left Bob at the fork of the trail.

Webb sat in the packed little courtroom during those two days of the trial with his jaws clamped tightly, his narrowed eyes watching the men who accused him of murder.

Beside him sat the sheriff, grave, soft spoken, not unfriendly to the prisoner. Behind them sat Mae and the sheriff's wife. Now and then Mae would lean forward and whisper some word of encouragement to the accused man, and the hard light in Webb's eyes would momentarily soften. Mae kept telling him she knew he was innocent, that he would win out.

When Ab Abbot and his men were called to the witness stand, Sheriff Hank Roberts laid his hand on Webb's arm.

"Easy son, I don't want to put handcuffs on yuh."

Webb had nodded. He spoke through clenched teeth, his eyes fixed on Ab Abbot.

on perjured evidence."

"I'll hang onto my bushy tail, Hank. I ain't done with Abbot. Never will be 'til I watch him fill a grave. But I give you my word the other day that I'd make no bad breaks, and I'm stickin' to that promise. Let 'em go up on the stand and lie. I'll pay 'em off some day. I didn't kill Bob Anderson no more than I killed that Triangle cowboy.

Where To Look

A learned individual was anxious to clarify a few points on art. He approached the girl behind the information desk at a public library and asked, 'Where can I find some data on Correggio and his 'Flight into Egypt'?"

The girl stopped powdering her nose long enough to inform him, "Everything on aviation in room 123."

"We'll have a white wedding, won't we' Sandy?"

"Ay . . . if it snows."

Chronicles of Ginger Farm

by Gwendoline P Clarke

At last! Blue skies and bright, warm sunshine. And birds singing for joy from tree-tops—trees that are bare now, but with swelling buds that give promise of new life and new beauty. Spring has been long in coming . . . now we think we never heard the bobolinks sing so sweetly nor the robins chirp so happily. Spring is a wonderful time—a time for new hope; new ambition; new desires . . . and new work.

Right now, I am writing from my portable sunroom—alias the June Bug, alias our car—and from this vantage point, I can watch the cows alternately sunning and exercising themselves in the yard. Maybe cows don't understand much about birds and buds—they seem to recognize spring more by their sense of smell. About this time of year, you see bovine noses lifted high in the air and there is a definite inquisitiveness about what may lie on the other side of the fence. Who knows—some day there might even be a blade of green grass growing! And where a person would clap their hands for joy, cows and young cattle let go with their heels and chase each other around the yard.

Yes, the weather this week-end is cause for rejoicing, but it also fills me with remorse. You see, last Wednesday came a letter from a niece, asking if it would be all right to come for the week-end, arriving Friday night. Generally speaking, any of our young relatives are more than welcome, but when this letter arrived, the house was inches deep in dust; the furnace was still going full blast with dirty, smoky coal; as a result, I haven't even started housecleaning — and the weather was windy, cold and depressing. The house wasn't fit for visitors and for some unknown reason, I could not find the energy to give it the proper cleaning it required—cleaning which I intended postponing until our belated spring showed some sign of turning that corner around which it has been hiding for so long. So I sent word to my niece suggesting she visit us a little later. And then what happened? The weather really changed and it has been warm and sunny. And the better the weather, the meaner I felt! I have one consolation — it really will be nicer in a couple of weeks when the spring flowers are out and the trees and shrubs come into leaf. And maybe by then, our worries at the barn will be over. Another calf arrived yesterday and two more are expected any day now.

And while we are on the subject of barn work, it might interest you to hear of a rather curious experience we had here last week.

In our horse stable there are three electric light switch boxes, all in a row. When Partner turned out the light one night, he got a shock. We 'phoned the electricians and they promised to look after the trouble the next day. But the next morning Partner and Bob both tried the switches and nothing happened, yet at noon Partner was shocked again. When the electricians arrived, they worked the switches and so did Bob. Nothing happened. "Guess the trouble must have righted itself," one of them said. Then Partner tried it again. "Oh no it hasn't! As far as I am concerned, it's still kicking like blazes!"

So the electricians went to work opening up the boxes. One box, that which housed the three-way switch, was choked with dirt and chaff, and had become damp with moisture from the stable. This collection was cleaned out and new switches installed in each box. But every time the men wanted to test the switches, it was Partner who had to do it—he was the only one it would shock. Why? The answer was in his boots! Partner was wearing leather boots; the other three men were wearing long rubbers. That morning when Partner had tried the switch and had not been shocked, he, too, was wearing rubber boots.

Now, what would have happened if the trouble had gone on without being detected is anyone's guess. Whether the dampness would have caused a short circuit and ultimately led to a fire, we don't know, but the electricians were definitely agreed it was a matter that needed attending to.

Our switch boxes have been in operation for five years without giving any trouble except for one or two occasions when the three-way switch for the pole light would work from the house, but not from the barn. Maybe that was the time when it should have been looked at. But it righted itself and, in our ignorance, we thought no more about it.

Now I am passing this bit of information along for what it is worth. Every one knows electricity can't be fooled with, but sometimes there is danger when one doesn't even know that danger exists. A yearly check-up might be a good idea!

ANNE HIRST
Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: I hope others will profit by my horrible mistake . . . A year ago I met a young man who was a perfect gentleman—until the inevitable happened. I gave in to him, because I loved him almost to the point of worship. I paid for it in health mental anguish, and money. Yet I did not expose him.

"We were not children, both in our late 20's, both from fine families. He was the first with me—yet now he has the audacity to say there have been others!

"He was a cad. After this experience, I think all men are selfish, conceited skunks.

"I say to other young women, don't give to any man what is sacred to you. Beat them at their own game. If you love a man, don't show it . . .

JUST ANOTHER FOOL"

A HURT HEART

* I'm afraid you show yourself in a poor light. Beaten by circumstances, yes. But you were at least partly responsible for what happened. You weren't an innocent young girl, you know. You were an adult, and you should have had more mature judgment.

* Perhaps you did lose your head. But weren't you, deep down in your heart, trying to forge a bond which you hoped would tie this man to you in marriage?

* When you failed, the man promptly became a cad and one of the race of skunks.

* His conduct was certainly reprehensible. But a wiser woman would have seen indications, during the "worship" period, that would have saved her from going off the deep end. She would have tempered her worship with restraint, and proved herself worthy of the overpowering love she knew.

* Your bitterness does you no credit. Where now is this great love that swayed you so? Because you are disillusioned, you let yourself seem a shrew and a termagant. You have grown bitter. A bitter heart is deadly to yourself and to all whose lives touch your own.

* Rise above this slough into which you have sunk. Take what is coming to you like a good sport. You played for high stakes, and you lost. Admit it, and go on from here.

* You can, you know. This sad experience can make you more sympathetic with other women; it can mellow your nature so that you will never again condemn anyone—even men—but come to see all others as weak human beings who need your understanding and your charity.

If you have loved—and lost—rise above it. Admit your own responsibility and go on, a stronger and wiser woman. Anne Hirst will help you steer your course, if you write her at Box 1, 123 Eighteenth St., New Toronto, Ont.

Daddy's In Debtor's Prison—In Haddam, Conn., Mrs. Earl J. Goodrich and her nine children wait word of their 41-year-old husband and father, jailed under Vermont's "poor debtor's law." Goodrich was imprisoned after he failed to keep up $50-a-month payments on an $800 settlement for reckless driving. The children range in age from two months to 14 years.

TABLE TALKS
by Jane Andrews.

Modern Russian ideals ,and modern Russian procedures, are highly unpopular with all right-thinking people on this side of the Atlantic. But long before Stalin had a name, or at least that particular name, Russian people came to settle in Canada and the United States, bringing with them some of their customs, and memories of their favorite dishes.

You don't have to come from behind what is now the Iron Curtain to thoroughly enjoy some of those dishes; and you'll find them served in noted restaurants in many places. One great favorite is called:

PELEMINI

One egg and 1 cup of water are added to enough flour to form a thick dough. Roll it—better in parts—until quite thin. With a small glass or cookie cutter cut rounds and put in the middle of each a piece of filling (as described below), turned round like a nut. Close the pelmeni so that each piece looks like a half moon and boil the pieces for about 20 minutes in boiling water with a little salt, or in broth, in an open kettle. If broth is used, pelmeni may be eaten with the broth. But usually pelmeni are taken out of the water as soon as they rise to the surface, and are eaten with some melted butter, sour cream and grated cheese.

To reheat leftovers, roll in crumbs and fry in oil. They are excellent the next day.

FILLINGS FOR PELMENI

In Siberia, where pelmeni are prepared in fall for the whole winter and kept in barrels, the filling for the amount of dough described above would consist of:

½ lb. chopped beef and
½ lb. chopped pork (both grade A)

They are to be mixed with salt, pepper, a grated onion, a little broth (about a cup).

A different filling makes a different dish. For varenniki the filling consists of white cheese mixed with a little sugar, butter, and an egg yolk. Instead of eating with grated cheese ,sugar is used along with the butter and sour cream.

Another kind of varenniki, used in the Ukraine, is made with black cherries for a filling. They are also eaten with some melted butter, sour cream, and sugar.

With meat prices still soaring, more and more floks are buying fowl instead; so here's a recipe which sounds a little more complicated than most ways of dishing up chicken, but which I can assure you is well worth the extra bother. It makes a grand "main dish" when you're having guests, which is probably why it's called:

COMPANY CHICKEN

Chicken:

Cut in pieces 1 (3½ lb.) fryer
Wash thoroughly; pat dry. Save wings, back, neck, giblets for soup.
Melt in large heavy skillet
½c shortening
Put in paper bag
¼ c. flour
1 tsp. pepper
1 tsp. salt

Shake chicken in flour, a few pieces at a time. Brown well on both sides. Drain on paper towels. (Save drippings for gravy.)

Batter:

In medium-sized bowl, sift together
¾ c. yellow corn meal
¾ c. sifted flour
3 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. salt
In second bowl, beat until light
4 eggs
1½ c. milk
3 tblsp. melted butter

Stir into dry ingredients, then beat with rotary egg beater until smooth.

Pour into greased, heavy 10-inch baking dish (3 inches deep).

Arrange browned chicken on top.

Bake in moderate over (350 deg.) 1 hour, or until batter puffs up golden brown.

Gravy:

Bring to boil
2½ tblsp. drippings
2 c. water
Meanwhile, put in jar with cover
½ c. water
3 tblsp. flour
Shake until free from lumps.
Stir into stock; simmer 3 or 4 minutes.
Sprinkle with salt and pepper; spoon over chicken.
Serves 6.

So that none of that "company bird" goes to waste, it might be a good idea to precede it with this vegetable-noodle soup. I know of one man who said that, good as the chicken was, he liked the soup just as well or better.

CHICKEN VEGETABLE-NOODLE SOUP

Simmer
neck, wings, back, giblets in 3 c. water
Add
1 tsp. salt
Dash of pepper
Bit of chicken fat
When meat falls from bone, remove from stock, cool and cut up.
Simmer in stock until tender
1 onion
2 carrots
½ c. chopped celery
1 c. noodles
Salt and pepper
Add chopped meat and serve.

RHUBARB PIE

Pastry for 9 inch pie
1 cup white sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
1½ tablespoons corn starch
3 cups rhubarb cut in 1 inch pieces
1 tablespoon butter or margarine.

METHOD: Line 9 inch pie pan with pastry. Mix together sugar, salt and corn starch. Sprinkle one-quarter of this mixture on raw crust. Fill with rhubarb. Add remainder of sugar-corn starch mixture. Dot with butter. Cover with top crust. Bake in hot (450 degree) oven for 15 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees and continue baking from 25 to 30 minutes, or until rhubarb is cooked.

Private Enterprise Biggest Essential

I am one of the unrepentant who believe that free enterprise is essential to a healthy nation. I think freedom is necessary in order to provide scope for enterprise; but I also think that enterprise—real interprise, even adventurous enterprise — is necessary to achieve the maximum development of the vast resources of a new country like ours.

In advocating freedom of enterprise, I do not mean that governments should not have a large measure of responsibility for promoting vigorous economic activity and for contributing actively to human welfare.

I believe that social security, or insurance as I prefer to describe it, like ordinary insurance, can be a stimulus and not an impediment to enterprise.

I am convinced it is the duty of governments, federal, provincial and municipal, to do everything they can effectively to improve human welfare and to maintain conditions favorable to successful enterprise and thereby to high levels of employment and prosperity. We all want high levels of employment and prosperity, but we have always said the bulk of employment should be provided by private enterprise. I do not think it would be wise for any government to kill the geese that we are counting on to lay the golden eggs.

Hosea Reveals
God's Forgiving Love
Hosea 11:1-4, 8-11; 14:4-9

Golden Text: I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely. —Hosea 14:4a.

No Old Testament prophet expresses God's love with more tenderness than Hosea. His own heart-rending experience helped him to enter into God's attitude to Israel. He knew what it was to be forsaken by the one he loved. He knew the grief that comes in seeing that one sin greviously. Yet his love continued in spite of Gomer's action. He could convey God's message to backsliding Israel. God's love is seen in such expressions as, "When Israel was a child, then I loved him, and called my son out of Egypt—I taught Ephraim also to go, taking them by their arms—I drew them with cords of a man, with bands of love: and I was to them as they that take off the yoke on their jaws, and I laid meat unto them—How shall I give thee up, Ephraim? How shall I deliver thee Israel?—I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely."

Here is a message for backsliders today; for those who have known God's grace but have turned to the beggarly elements of the world. Peter describes their action in the words of a proverb. "The dog is turned to his own vomit again; and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire." II Pet. 2:22. But God cares.

"Oh! for the wonderful love He has promised,
Promised for you and for me;
Tho' we have sinned, He has mercy and pardon,
Pardon for you and for me."

Let us no longer spurn God's love, but turn from our sin to Jesus Christ as our Lord and Saviour.

Sewing Tips That Save Time.....

The following tips, from a garment trade expert, will enable you to give home-sewn garments a real professional look, beside saving you time and bother.

Picking Your Pattern

Buy an easy-to-fit, easy-to-finish design with straight seams at the shoulders and sides. Try to find a becoming style with few pieces and simple detail.

Study your pattern carefully, selecting the version you want to make. Circle it on the envelope and inside cutting chart. Let these be your blueprints for action.

Choosing Your Fabric

Check your pattern envelope first for fabric suggestions. The manufacturer knows the materials best suited for each design and the smartest fashion-wise.

Buy well-labeled goods. You'll want to know if it's shrinkproof, washable, colorfast, crease-resistant; if it's all-wool, cotton, nylon, and so on. Knowing your fabric leads to style success.

The fabrics most easily handled are cottons and lighter woolens with good body, in solid color, or small allover prints. If you are a beginner, by-pass plaids, checks, border prints, or stripes that require tricky matching.

Match your sewing materials to your fabric at the start — zipper, thread, binding, hooks and eyes—in color.

Patterns Meet Fabric:

Press the fabric. Spread it on a surface large enough to hold all the pieces at once, and straighten carefully.

Watch the grain of the goods in laying out your pattern pieces. Be sertain that all pieces to be cut from a fabric with a nap are going in the same direction. Follow cutting chart to the letter.

Work with plenty of pins (good quality—Size 4 or 5) and sharp scissors. Before cutting, mark every symbol with tailor's chalk or thread. A dress that's well marked almost puts itself together.

Don't cut deep notches. It's easier to cut pattern notches out instead of in—paricularly if the fabric frays.

Basting:

When hand-basting, work on a table. Remove pins as you go, and a backward stitch now and then for firmness.

By loosening the tension of your sewing machine, you can whirl through a firm basting stitch in a hurry. This is a short cut many women prefer.

Slip-baste plaids or stripes on the right side for easy matching.

Insert a piece of paper in the seam of a bias edge—such as a neck piece—to keep it from stretching as you work.

Stitching

To avoid puckering and marking your material, test the tension of your machine on a scrap before you begin stitching.

Take a short cut to secure stitches at the beginning and end of each seam or dart by retracing several stitches on the machine. If your machine doesn't reverse stitch, lift presser foot slightly with one hand, and with the other, draw cloth slowly toward you. This fastens thread.

Darts are firm if you baste them from the point to the widest part. Stitch from the widest part to the point.

Press each seam open as you finish it. Then fitting and finishing will be easy.

Stretch jersey a little for a neat job. However, always watch not to stretch bias fabric where is it joined to a straight piece. A puckered seam results.

Before hemming a bias-cut skirt, pin it to a hanger and let it hang at least 24 hours. It will sag at the bias grain, and the inevitable uneven hemline can be adjusted accurately to save alter changing.

Finishing Touches:

Try dress on, wrong side out, for an easy final fitting.

Finish seams with care. Pink seams on materials that aren't easily frayed. Overcast or edge-stitch seams on raveling slik and wool. Turn a fine French seam for lingerie garments.

Before turning a curved seam, slash along the edge to relieve bulkiness.

A professional-looking hem is a "must." To be certain it's even, wear heels when marking. Allow about 2 inches for a neat finished hem.

Make neat gathering easy by running three parallel rows of stitching about ⅛ inch apart. Pull thread of each and adjust the fullness equally. Elastic thread wound on bobbin with regular thread is another answer to simple shirring.

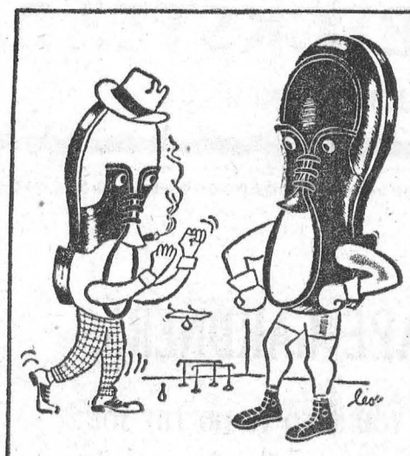
Use your ironing board for laying in pleats. Pin at top and bottom. Press in, then baste.

Sew buttons on fine wool fabrics with a small stay button underneath to relieve any strain on the fabric.

Final pressing turns the trick. Use a well-padded sleeveboard for short seams, a tailor's cushion for curved seams, particularly armholes. Regulate your iron carefully and use a pressing cloth or steam iron for your wools, acetate rayons, lined and faced garments.

Half a ton of mail goes out each day from the library of The Canadian National Institute for the Blind to our 17,272 blind Canadians. Included in this are volumes from the 15200 Braille books, the 3,884 moon type books and the almost 1,000 talking books comprising some 31,672 records.

Two mind readers met after an interval of some months. One of them immediately exclaimed in a hearty voice: "You're all right! How am I?"



"For brilliant footwork use NUGGET every day!"

Give shoes quick, easy shines with Nugget. They'll look better . . . last longer.

LOCAL STUDENTS TAKE PART IN MUSIC FESTIVAL

On Tuesday morning of this week a Grade 6 classroom choir from the local public school took part in the Ottawa Music Festival.

All but one of the seven schools competing against them were from Ottawa and its suburbs and had had previous Festival experience.

Final judging found the local school tied with one of the above and Iroquois, and with only 3 marks between them and the next five contestants. This is considered quite successful for a small group in their first experience of this nature.

Much thanks is given to those who supplied transportation and to the members of the Board who granted funds for a generous luncheon party following the ordeal. The children enjoyed themselves immensely, learned a great deal and are eager to work toward a higher goal next year

NEWLYWEDS HONOURED

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Casselman were honoured by their Winchester Spring friends and neighbours on Friday night last, when they were tendered a reception in the Orange Hall with more than 200 present. Music for dancing was supplied by the McMillan Orchestra.

Prior to the serving of lunch, Mr. and Mrs. Casselman were asked to come forward and an address was read by Mr. Lee McIntosh and the presentation of a tri-lite lamp, an occasional chair, a radio table and table lamp nd a smoker was made by Lloyd Allison, Keith Munroe, Hubert Hess and Harry Whittaker.

An attractive bride's book designed by Mrs. Lloyd Allison and Mrs. Lee McIntosh was signed by all present.

Mrs. Casselman was the former Miss Helen Saddlemire of Williamsburg. The young couple will reside at Winchester Springs.

ISAIAH LOUCKS

After being in ill health for some time, the death occurred at a Brockville hospital on Tuesday, April 25th, of a well known farmer of the Williamsburg district, in the person of Isaiah Loucks in his 77th year.

A son of the late Guy A. Loucks and his wife, Alta V. Whitteker, pioneer residents of the district, he was one of a family of eight sons and daughters. He lived practically all his life in the vicinity where he was born.

The body rested at the Fitzsimmons Funeral Home, Iroquois, from where the funeral was held on Thursday afternoon to St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Williamsburg. The service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. J Neff, who preached a comforting sermon. The church choir led in the singing of the hymns "Jesus, Lover of My Soul" and "Peace, Perfect Peace" and also rendered an anthem "Nearer My Home". Miss Ethel Gordier presided at the organ. Interment took place in the Brinston cemetery.

Mr. Loucks is survived by his wife the former Fanny Thompson of Brinston; two sons, Garnet Loucks of Iroquois, Wilbert Loucks of Brockville and four grandchildren. One sister, Miss Christie Loucks of Toronto and two brothers, Reuben Loucks of Williamsburg and Guy Loucks, of Parry Sound, also survive.

WILLIAMSBURG LUTHER LEAGUE

On Friday evening, April 28th, the Leaguers of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Williamsburg, played hosts to the President of the Eastern District Luther Leaugue of Canada, Mr. Oscar Scheuneman, also Miss Elva Gust and Miss Marguerite Kramp, all of Ottawa. The evening was opened with the customary devotional period by the secretary, Harold Waldroff and a short business meeting, in which plans were made for the treasure hunt to be held on May 12.

Rev. Neff then introduced the guest speaker, who gave a short resume of the work of the Luther League of America and showed how it affects the individual Leagues by tracing its connection down through the Luther League of Canada and the districts in Ontario. He then spoke on the way in which a person can be a success in the worldly sense, and still be a Christian. After some games and cards a sing-song was led by Virgie Merkley. Then the Leaguers were served a lunch by Doreen Beckstead, Shirley Strader and Elsie Couglar.

Upon leaving the visitors were given the traditional "Lutherlyn" sendoff.

VISITORS ARE BIG BUSINESS

Do you know that in 1949 American visitors alone spent $270,000,000 in Canada? That's a lot of money—and it benefits every province, city, village—every individual in the nation! You can help to build this business even bigger—(1) by finding out all there is to know about it; (2) by kindling your friends' interest in it; (3) by impressing its importance on your elected parliamentary representatives; (4) by doing everything possible to make our visitors welcome. That's "Good Citizenship"—and good for Canada!

Your bank manager has available for you the resources, knowledge and experience of a banking system with branches throughout Canada and elsewhere and contacts in other parts of the world. He welcomes every opportunity to put them to work for you and the community he serves.

SPORTSMANSHIP IN "CANADA UNLIMITED"

Five game final!

A NEW RECORD, A NEW TROPHY FOR THE LEAFS OF '26!

Opening Day for International League ball in Canada is May 3—when Montreal Royals meet Jersey City and Toronto is matched with Syracuse.

Louisville stadium baked under a glaring Kentucky sun. On the diamond Toronto Maple Leafs were meeting the Louisville Colonels. The stake was the Little World Series championship. The Leafs—International League winners—had edged the Colonels in four home games. This was the deciding day.

An injury to Leafs' star pitcher forced a last-minute substitution. A win seemed doubtful—but sparkling pitching pulled them through. Held to five hits, the Colonels were shut out, 5-0. The Leafs became the only team in baseball history to gain the title in five straight games—a record that stands today.

Team spirit and good sportsmanship have won world-wide respect for Canadians. And team spirit with sportsmanship help you too—in work and play. Together they keep your opportunities in Canada . . . unlimited.

IN MEMORIAM

BARKLEY—In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Mrs. Abram Barkley, who passed away May 5, 1949.

You only have one mother,
Patient, kind and true,
No other friend in all the world
Will be as true to you.
For all her loving kindness
She asks nothing in return.
If all hte world forsakes you
To your mother you can turn.
So all we can do, dear Mother,
Is go and tend your grave,
And leave behind a token of love,
To the best mother God ever made.
I'd like to think when life is done,
Wherever Heaven may be,
That she'll be standing at the door
Up there to welcome me.
So you who have a mother,
Cherish her with care,
For you never know the heartache
Until you see the vacant chair.
Too dearly loved ever to be forgotten
