THE MORRISBURG LEADER

VOL. 95, NO. 15 — MORRISBURG, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, APRIL 12th, 1957 — $2.50 YR. IN CANADA; $3.50 IN U.S.A.

Authorized as Second Class Mail Matter by the Post Office Department, Ottawa.

A. CLAIR CASSELMAN IS RENOMINATED

Packing Spencerville Township Hall, Monday night, Grenville-Dundas Progressive Conservatives again nominated Arza Clair Casselman for the 10th time, to contest the riding in the coming federal election, now expected to be held on June 10th. He will be oppopsed by another A. C. Casselman, principal of the Cardinal Public School, as well as by a Social Credit candidate, Rev. R. H. James, of Metcalfe. Other candidates may still be selected.

Col. Casselman's nomination marks the tenth time he has been given that honour to contest this riding. Each time, since the end of World War I, he has won for the Conservatives and has sat in the House of Commons continuously except in 1925 when he withdrew in favour of Hon. Arthur Meighen.

The 66-year old lawyer from Prescott was given a standing ovation when chairman of the convention, Kenneth Ault of Winchester, announced that his name was the only nomination before the meeting.

Visibly moved by this solid support, Mr. Casselman said that what had been accorded him was a great honour —"so great that I cannot properly express my feelings to you. I know of no other case where a member has been given ten consecutive nominations, and this makes me feel very humble."

Turning to the political field, Mr. Casselman said that the Liberal government had become "corrupt" with power since it gained control in 1935. Not corrupt from the standpoint of dishonesty, Col. Casselman declared, but from the point of complete indifference to parliamentary rule and the welfare of the people. Referring to the recent boost in old age pensions, Mr. Casselman said they were "inadequate" since it covers a period when prices have more than doubled.

Mr. Casselman's nomination was proposed by Stanley Sanderson and seconded by Allan Farlinger and G. William Gorrell.

Donald Fleming, Pro.-Con. M. P. for Toronto-Eglinton was the guest speaker at the convention and he referred to the present Liberal administration as a "government with too much power for too long", and one which casts aside all pretence of upholding democracy.

During the pipe line debates he recalled that closure was used eight times in 16 days, although it had been used only six times previously in Canadian history and then only the end of weeks of debate.

The Liberal party, Mr. Fleming charged, is asking the country to re-elect not the party, but the Prime Minister, with the sure knowledge that no one knows how long he will continue as prime minister or even a vague idea of who may succeed him. "All members of the Conservative party should work for the restoration of the integrity of the Canadian Parliament", he said, "so that we will not be humiliated by a too-pouerful and too-power-loving party".

During his address, Mr. Fleming also commented on Canada's trade, stating that "Canadians should have at least some share in the deciding voice regarding their own resources" the Dominion-Provincial pattern of taxes in which he thought more tax powers shuld be given t the provinces. "Above all, he said you want to stop thetyrannical power and stop the march of centralization".

ARZA CLAIR CASSELMAN, who was unanimously selected at the Meeting of the Progressive Conservatives held at Spencerville on Monday evening, to carry the colours of that party in the forthcoming Federal Election.

DAVID A. SHORT DIES AT WILLIAMSBURG HOME

Death came very suddenly Wednesday morning last week to a highly respected resident of Williamsburg in the person of Mr. David A Short. Although of advanced age Mr. Short had been in his usual good health, and had just returned home from the post office with the morning mail, when he suffered a fatal heart seizure.

Mr. Short was born in Dunbar in May, 1877, the son of the late William Short and Hanna Wert. He was the last surviving member of a family of six children, and was in his 80th year.

Educated at Dunbar Public School and Morrisburg High and Model Schools, he taught school for three years. In 1903 he married Miss Pheobe J. Merkley, daughter of Robert S. Merkley and Louisa McIntosh. After their marriage they farmed in Northern Ontario until 1918, when they returned to Williamsburg to open a feed business. Mr. Short successfully operated the Merkley & Short Flour and Feed business for a period of 25 years, and since his retirement he had lived at the same residence. During his later years he had been an enthusiastic gardener, and took pride in the many fine gladioli grown in his garden. On March 18th last, Mr. and Mrs. Short quietly and happily celebrated their 54th wedding anniversary.

Mr. Short was a faithful member of Wiilliamsburg United Church and served as secretary-treasurer for more than 20 years. He is survived by his wife and a number of nieces and nephews.

The funeral service was conducted at his home on Friday, April 5th by ev. E. Bugden of Chesterville, and interment was made at Maple iRidge cemetery. The pall bearers were Ethan Algire, Oran Wert, Edwin Deeks, Reginald Barkley, Oliver Smythe, and Ward Casselman.

The floral tributes were many and beautiful, showing the high esteem in which Mr. Short was held.

MORRISBURG CHAMBER OF COMMERCE SEEKS NEW INDUSTRY.

A meeting of the Morrisburg Chamber of Commerce was held on Thursday evening in the Legion Hall, with the president, Rev. J. Maxwell Allan presiding.

Among other important items on the agenda, it was disclosed that every effort is being made through the media of the Canadian National Rail ways Industrial Development Committee and the Eastern Ontario Development Association to obtain industry in this area. Already industries wishing to locate in Canada have sent representatives to this area to look over the terrain and study the facilities available. A brochure, prepared by the E.O.D.A., giving complete and detailed information on this Village was shown to the members. This brochure, at no expense to us, has been sent to all Banking houses, Boards of Trade, Chambers of Commerce etc., for distribution throughout Canada, United States, and also many foreign countries, to interest industry and stimulate interest in the Seaway Valley.

The Secreary drew attention to the very real effort being made by citizens of other towns and localities in supporting their Chambers of Commerce to boost their town and their village to interest industry. Brockville has filmed "The Brockville Story" and Renfrew County has produced a $7,000.00 film showing the natural attributes of their towns and depicting the go-ahead atmosphere of their people. In order to cvarry out a successful attraction to industry — large and small — the help of each of our citizens is required.

With the removal of traffic from the old No. 2 Highway our Motels, Hotels and Tourist Homes, have already felt the lack kof trade. It was moved a letter be sent to the local Village Council for the necessary steps to be taken to have two large illuminated signs located on the new No. 401 Highway, near the junction of No. 31 Highway which will direct tourists to our Motels and business places in Morrisburg.

Several merchants were present, seeking the assistance of the Chamber to obtain more satisfaction with Hydro in making the required settlements. It was decided a meeting of the retail merchants and all business men of the village would be held in the Legion Hall, on Tuesday evening, April 23rd at 8.00 o'clock to consider settlements made to date with our business houses.

The irregularity of certain merchants in not closing on Good Friday and closing on Easter Monday was discussed. Amotion was made recommending to the merchants and business houses of Morrisburg, that all places of business be closed on Good Friday which is a Statutory Holiday and open on Easter Monday.

A motion was also made to publish a list of the presently paid-up members of the Morrisburg Chamber of Commerce, as follows:

Allen, Rev. J. Maxwell; Beavers, George; Beamish Stores, Ltd.; Blancher, Dr. K. A.; Bnd, Hubert L.; Bucan, Robert; Casselman, Bruce; Casselman, Carman; Connor J. Dain; Central Gas Service; Coligan, Lawrence; Crowder, Trevor; Dominion Stores, Ltd.; Edgerton, Arthur; Gibson, James C.; Gorrell, G. William; Johnston, Harvey; Jowett, George; Kirkwood, W. J.; Hoy. WINCHESTER HOSPITAL AUXILIARY HOLDS REGULAR MONTHLY MEETING

Mrs. P. Roberts presided over the March meeting of the Winchester District Memorial Hospital Auxiliary held recently in the Town Hall at Winchester. There were 35 members present, representing nine units. The topic for the new Essay Contest open to Auxiliary Members was announced as "What Hospital Work Has Given to Me" and the President asked that any member or members wishing to enter could secure further particulars. The Regional Conference meeting for this area will be held in the Ottawa General Hospital on April 29th.

An open discussion on a "Garden Party" resulted in the idea being dispensed with for this year, and instead, each unit would make money in their own way, to be turned in to an Auxiliary "Jack Pot" in September.

A cash donation was received from the Morrisburg Bridge Club, also a very substantial cash donation from Metcalfe W. I., as well as two cases of fruit juice from Carlsbad Springs W. I.

Mrs. Casselman prpesided at the ppiano for the National Anthem.

FISH AND GAME CLUB TO HOLD ANNUAL MEETING ON WEDNESDAY

The annu al meeting of the Morrisburg Fish and Game Protective Association will be held in the Canadian Legion Hall on Wednesday, April 17th, at 8 p.m. This will be an important meeting for the oldest Fish and Game Club in Ontario, as much of the fishing and hunting territory formerly used by the members, has been taken, and much more has been rendered unusable by the St. Lawrence development. For these reasons alone, it is expected a good turnout will be there.

This is a crucial year for the Morrisburg Fish and Game Club. If you are truly interested in conservation be at the meeting on Wednesday.

ANNE HIRST
Your Family Counselor

Dear Anne Hirst: I am shocked to learn that my fiance's family object to his marrying me, and after we have been engaged for two months! I have met most of them and believe I could get along well with them all. He claims he still loves me but is too confused to think straight. He is obligated to his father for setting him up in business, and I can only think he fears to oppose their wishes.

Why don't they like me? My people have been here for three generations, and my family life has been a happy one. I'm a college graduate and hold a good position, belong to two good clubs and have many fine friends. If his people have any reason for their attitude I don't know what it is, and apparently my ex-fiance doesn't either. (I broke the engagement at once, of course.)

I know he is seeing another girl who his family have entertained; he says he feels he "must play along with them." We still date once a week, but it isn't the same. What is the matter with him? He is 30, I'm 26, and we are both mature enough to know what we want. Why won't he fight for us?

Shall I keep on seeing him? Or leave town for a while? I can get a leave of absence. Please advise me, for I am—

MISERABLE.

A WEAK CHARACTER

I don't quite get the point of this man's feeling obligated to his father. His father's starting him in business is not reason enough to allow his family to run his personal life; his financial arrangements with his father can be carried on no matter whom he marries.

Why his family suddenly object to you I cannot know, unless they have chosen this girl for him and demanded that he marry her. (Why didn't they say so earlier?) And what does his acquiescence indicate? That he is a spineless creature whose love for you is not so deep as to make him strong enough to battle for his rights?

In such a crisis, it will be well for you to take a leave and disappear from his sight. Only missing you can reveal to him the real state of his heart. When you come back you will find out where you stand, and design the pattern of your future accordingly.

I am so sorry!

WIFE MISSES FUN

Dear Anne Hirst: After two years of marriage I've decided that all my husband enjoys is his radio and TV. He doesn't care to visit nor to entertain; he thinks married couples should stay home, period. He used to enjoy the theater, but we haven't been for nearly a year. I used love dancing more than anything and I miss it so much! Before we married he promised we would go dancing regularly, but now he says he thinks it's silly.

My friends are gradually passing us by and I can't blame them. I feel we are shutting ourselves off from the usual social life, and I confess the prospect alarms and irritates me, when it is so easy to solve. I would compromise if he would. What do you think?

ESTHER.

You have struck the chord that can bring harmony into your married life. If your husband will take you to the theater once or twice a month, welcome your mutual friends at home, and plan evenings of dancing, you will be as generous and sit before TV without a whimper.

Radio and TV, to my mind, can never take the place of friends. They are one-sided entertainment, they permit of no participation. One needs the give-and-take of good conversation, the exchange of opinions and ideas, the thoughtfulness and kindness and loyalty that hold people together throughout the years. Your husband mixes with others all day, but you have no such outlet; it is you who need social intercourse, the lift of spirit and laughter that it supplies.

Marriage is always a compromise of conflicting tastes, and most of us work it out satisfactorily. I am sure that you can, too.

Boy's Toy Rang Wedding Bells

After a Bolivian tourist had hurled a stone at the famous Mona Lisa painting in the Paris Louvre, he explained away his action by saying simply, "I was seized wth the desire to do so."

Such impulses, however startling, are not so very unusual. A middle-aged businessman, highly respected and a pillar of his church, stood somewhat follishly in the dock of an East Anglian court. With his umbrella he had smashed hundreds of eggs displayed outside a store. "Something came over me," he told the puzzled magistrate. "I just felt that I had to break those eggs."

In yielding to this impulse he risked nothing more than a fine —and his reputation. But how can you explain the conduct of a normally steady and sensible motorist who, driving along a country road, suddenly swerved to the right and crashed through a thick hedge into a field.

An amazed spectator asked if his steering had gone wrong. "No," he replied, dazedly. "But I had an irresistible urge to see what would happen."

These people were seized with a sudden impulse, like the sailor who walked into a pub soon after stepping ashore, was at once attracted to the barmaid and almost immediately found hmself popping the magic question

After a moment's hesitation she softly murmured, "Yes." Friends of both parties shook their heads, prophesied. that the marriage would quickly go on the rocks. It didn't. The impetuous couple were ideally happy.

A sudden kindly act was the inspiration of another happy marriage. A girl was looking round a big store when she saw a poorly dressed small boy gazing longingly at a toy. Then he pulled out a few coins, counted them, and sadly started to walk away. His wistful expression touched the girl's heart. "Let me buy it for you," she said gently. Standing near was a young man. He was deeply impressed. "There's a girl in a thousand," he told himself, and made an excuse to get acquainted. Not long afterwards wedding-bells rang out for the couple, brought together by a generous impulse. Now they have a little boy of their own.

COMMAND PERFORMANCES—Photos above, made on the eve of their visit to France, are royal "command" pictures of Great Britain's Queen Elizabeth II, and her husband, Prince Philip. The Queen wears a white satin evening gown embroidered in gold and pearls. With it, she wears the riband and star of the Order of the Garter. Her diamond-and-emerald tiara and necklace belonged to the late Queen Mary. Prince Philip wears the uniform of a field marshal. The wings above his ribbons indicate he is a qualified pilot in the Royal Air Force.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM
by Gwendoline P. Clarke

Last week was "wrecking week" — the first of several I imagine. Sometimes, in a manner of speaking, things wreck us—this time we were wrecking things. While I was in the house ruthlessly filling up boxes for a bonfire, Partner was out in the driving-shed wrecking the faithful old binder. Johnny came along to help him. There it was in the corner of the shed, untouched for several years, its canvasses rolled and stacked on the platform, along with the reel-arms and other parts. It was a dusty, cumbersome looking piece of machinery that no one would have said thank you for had it been offered as a gift. And yet, were it not for the introduction of modern machinery that same old binder would have given good service for a number of years. The iron on it was still good and the woodwork as sound as a bell. Machinery was built to last when we bought it over thirty years ago.

And what a history is connected with that old binder. Money was hard to come by when we started farming so machinery was bought on time. It took us three years to pay for the binder. It cut good crops and poor. Sometimes the sheaves were so heavy you would wonder how it could deal with them. Or sometimes, after a bad rain and windstorm "lifters" had to be used to get the crop cut at all. One year, when spring crops were very heavy, and a ten-acre field of oats half cut, there came a terrific rain—a regular deluge. Before the field had a chance to dry out there was more rain. The first storm had come suddenly. All that could be done was loosen the canvasses and leave the binder in the field. It sat there all fall. It couldn't be drawn through a slough of mud, even by horses. We lost heavily on our spring crop that year—and I believe it was before the binder was entirely paid for.

Of course all our implements at that time were horse-drawn. Perch and Queen were hitched to the binder for the first round, then I would take Prince to the field and Partner would carry on with the three horses while I went along the outside of the field throwing the first sheaves out of his way. Sometimes, if we could afford it, we had a hired man for a few weeks. We paid him the going wage—a dollar a day and his keep. But even so I had to help in the field and at the barn. Partner stayed out until dark (by Standard time) and then did the chores afterward. It was usually ten o'clock before he was through. The children were not old enough to do much more than set the table, wash dishes and feed the chickens.

Of course we occasionally had binder trouble and I would be sent to town post-haste in the horse and buggy to get a new reel-arm maybe. Partner would be stooking until I got back. I can't remember that we ever had any major breaks although we sometimes lost considerable time when the knotter refused to function or the twine would break.

Eventually we got a tractor—a used one of course. Adjustments were made to the binder and it continued to give faithful service. By this time Bob was able to drve the tractor while Partner rode the binder. And what a beating he and the binder took! The horses had had far more intelligence than the tractor. Instinctively they slowed up and prepared for the jolt that always followed after crossing a water-furrow. But, with a somewhat inexperienced driver, the tractor kept right on going. I was no longer needed in the field but my services were definitely required to keep the binder canvasses in order. Sometimes by hand, sometimes with the sewing machine, I struggled to get patches on those blessed canvasses, year after year—and they were always brought in for repairs on the hottest and stickiest days. But perhaps my work paid off as in the years the binder was in use we bought only one extra canvas—and that was a used one.

During World War II Johnny was with us and we got through a lot of work. About the time Bob came out of the army Partner more or less went to pieces. Help was hard to get and combines came into their own. We had our grain custom-harvested. The old binder stayed in its corner of the shed until now, a dusty derelict of the past, reminding us only of the years that have come and gone; of good fortune and misfortune that came our way—but most of it, as I look back, was good. The hard times taught us much that we would never have learnt had it been easy going all the time. And the binder . . . well it is bringing us more now as scrap iron than it would as a piece of machinery.

And what of the scrap metal? Ploughshares to swords, swords to shares, binders to battlefields —where does it all end? I wonder. The binder had a long and useful life. It would appear its final destiny will be undeservedly uncertain and inglorious. And yet, how are we to know — it mght be just the opposite!

Modern Etiquette

by Roberta Lee

Q. If one is eating in a restaurant where small butter pats are served in a little paper containers, is it all right to let the knife rest on the pat when not in use?

A. Never. The knife, when not in use, should rest along the upper right part of the plate — and never, of course, with the handle of the knife resting on the table.

Q. When approaching a revolving door with a woman, does the man enter first so as to push the door for her, or does he allow her to enter first?

A. He allows the woman to go ahead of him. In fact, he is better able to control the revolving door if she does go first.

When The Bicycle Made Its Debut

There is only one absolutely silent vehicle. It can carry a dozen times its own weight, at speeds up to six times greater than that of a running man; yet its motor power is the same as that of the running man. It can be taken almost everywhere, and parked almost anywhere. It needs no supply of fuel. It is the most important means of transport in many countries and towns. It is a modern technical miracle. It's a bicycle.

It is difficult to believe that there was once a time when fathers were distressed to discover that their sons showed brilliant technical gifts. Yet this was the case with young Karl Friedrich Christian Ludwig, Baron Drais von Sauerbronn, whose father was a court councillor at Karlsruhe in Baden, Germany, toward the end of the eighteenth century The idea of a young man from an aristocratic family becoming anything so vulgar as an engineer was quite out of the question and there were only two careers open to him — the army and the civil service.

Choosing the latter, he began to climb up the bureaucratic ladder slowly and painfully, from forestmaster's assistant to chamberlain. But one day the inventor in him broke through the official hide of the courtier.

On that day in 1813, the people of Mannheim were given a special treat. They saw twenty-eight-year-old Baron Drais racing through the streets on the strangest vehicle they had ever seen. It was a kind of narrow car with two wheels about thirty inches in diameter, one running in the track of the other, and connected by a wooden beam; the beam carried a small saddle on which the Baron was sitting, his arms being supported by two little iron bars and his hands clinging to a wooden rod with which he steered the front wheel.

He propelled himself by pushing against the ground alternately with the right and left foot, almost like a skater . . .

He was wearing a gray top hat, a green forest official's tailcoat, green trousers,and a shirt with neck ruffles and lace cuffs. The Mannheimers roared with laughter, but he went straight through the town on the road to Karlsruhe, which he reached some four hours later—a distance of forty miles.—From "The Prentice-Hall Book About Inventions," by Egon Larsen.

MEET 'JOHN' — It's a heavy armload for two-year-old Duane Meier as he introduces his pet, a month-old St. Bernard pup named John. Duane wears a 1920-vintage hat that looks like some of 1957's Easter Bonnets.

SEE NO EVIL—Chimpanzee, right, tried to throw a right cross but succeeded more in preventing his opponent from seeing what's up in the annual Shrine Circus. Battling for the title of "Chimp Champ", the sluggers had spectators roaring. They had their own simian handlers, two of whom carried the loser out. Chimps are members of the Bertram Mills Troupe.

Anything Happens In Scotland

Things that are almost unbelievable in England at once become credible in Scotland.

I am thinking in particular of one of the most enchanting animal stories ever written, Rowena Farre's "Seal Morning." It seemed to me quite possible that this was a work as much of poetic fancy as of literal fact — until I read it again in Scotland. Now I am sure it is just exactly what it purports to be, a simple record written well. And written truly.

"Seal Morning" is the story of a young girl and her aunt Miriam living in a highland croft with a strangely assorted family of animals. There are two squirrels, Sara and Cuthbert; two otters, Hansel and Gretel; a nicely mannered rat called Rodney; and Lora the seal.

Lora is the star. She plays the mouth organ, the trumpet, and the xylophone. She adores picnics. She loves humans. She is, all rolled into one, athlete, baby, musician, friend, and ham.

She is taken to a "ceilidh," or Scottish concert, where friends and neightbors perform for each other's edification. Not, however, when Lora is about. She will allow no performance but her own.

"The guests started to arrive, Lora, the most sociable and extroverted of creatures, greeted them warmly. I suggested to Uncle that I should shut Lora into his study until it was her turn to perform. But he and several of the guests vetoed this suggestion at once. She must stay.

"The singer smiled charmingly and started off with a few notes of an old Hebridean air before the inevitable happened; Lora raised her head and roared her way from a deep bass to a seal top C. Even a full Covent Garden chorus would not have been able to compete with that, and the singer wisely gave up there and then."

The theory was that the enthusiastic seal should be allowed to perform first. Then having completed her act, it was confidently presumed, Lora would be willing to listen to others. The confidence was misplaced.

So in this hilarious scene we see the seal playing, among other pieces, "Where My Caravan Has Rested" on the xylophone while perched on top of an upright piano and throughout the entire evening resolutely refusing to give way for any other performer. Shut up late in the study Lora wails so piteously that the guests at once let her out. Firmly ordered to keep quiet, "the result was no less disastrous. Seals have free-flowing tear ducts. . . . Lora, overcome with frustration at not being allowed to take part, sat with tears pouring down her face. Whereupon the sympathetic guests pleaded on her behalf and the other performers generously allowed her to take the platform again."

Lora also liked to meet the postman and bring the mail home, a proceeding that takes a long time and once is interrupted by a swim in the loch. Lora plays in the water with the otters, and even with the dog, Ben. She has races with a canoe, follows a boat at command, dives and retrieves objects thrown into the loch, goes on picnics and plays the trumpet. And always spreads her macintosh on the floor when she comes home wet.

Lora is, as they say, a poppet.

Equally playful and individual are the two otters and even Rodney the rat. Rodney also goes on picnics and he knows six words (basket, out, raisins, nuts, roof, and Rodney). He is a kindly phlisopher. He and the others and the squirrels and the dog, and Lora, all live in the croft together.

Reading this in a train in Surrey, flanked by stockbrokers and flashing past scores of identical back yards, each with white washing fluttering over patchy grass, it seemed almost too good to be true. Reading it in Scotland, however, with a mist on the hills and a strange dog looking up at the window and quite distinctly asking to be taken for a walk, it seemed just like plain common sense.

I got up; went down the hotel stairs and found the dog waiting for me. I asked it, "Do you want to go for a walk?" It said, "Yes." It wagged its tail and set out at my heel. We walked over the Elie golf course together. The only sounds were the lark in the sky, the sea on the shore, and a woman singing in the distance. If we had suddenly encountered a seal playing "Baa Baa Black Sheep" on the harmonica neither of us, man or dog, would have bought it unusual I'm sure. We didn't. But we might have. Scotland is a sensible but definitely enchanted kingdom. — By John Allan May in The Christian Science Monitor.

COMPLICATED BUSINESS

If a livestock feeder lives within reasonable trucking distance of a western grain farm he can and does buy feed wheat for as low as 60 cents a bushel. He simply takes his truck to the grain farm and makes a deal. The grain grower is glad to sell at bargain prices for cash because he does not know how many years he will have to wait before the Wheat Board will take his crop off his hands and the law will not let him sell through any grain dealer or export himself.

But if the feeder lives in British Columbia or one of the eastern provinces, he must buy through the Wheat Board and pay more than twice what the nearby feeder pays. So even with Ottawa paying the railway freight bills his grain cost may be far higher.

Once upon a time it was as simple to get a price on a bushel of grain as it was on CPR common or International Nickel. But with boot-legging, freight subsidies, fixed prices and state marketing, it takes a lot of figuring today.

Something New

While browsing through the seed catalogue and waiting for the weather and soil to turn warmer, one should note the new additions to the flower and vegetable world for the planting season of 1957. Usually on a special page of the seed catalogue will be listed brand new varieties and novelties. Among these will be the All-America winners for this year. These are new flowers and vegetables that in the North American field trials last year were awarded the most points.

In the vegetable lines there are a whole lot of improved productions. New, faster growing and crisper radish, more tender carrots, new beans, beets and corn. Over the years plant breeders have given us tremendous improvement in all vegetables. Not only are the varieties grown today far more tender than those of a generation ago, but they are also much earlier and more disease resistant. With these it is possible to have a good garden with much variety in areas where it was hardly safe to risk anything but the toughest things before. This progress has meant more to Canada than most countries because our growing season is so short.

Nursery Stock

This is the name given to anything in the way of started plants, shrubbery, trees, etc., purchased from seed house or nursery. Handling this is another early job. Generally the earlier one plants perennials, shrubs, roses, vines, and trees in the spring, the quicker and surer they will grow. The main thing is to keep them moist and not to expose roots to the air.

Good nursery stock will be moist, and limber on arrival with plenty of dormant buds. If one can plant promptly so much the better. But if the ground is frozen or not ready make sure the roots are kept moist and cool, and the branches or stems are shaded. If it is going to be several days or weeks before planting in permanent quarters one should "heel in", that is plant temporarily in a shallow trench, spreading out and covering the roots.

In transplanting nursery stock or anything else it is most important not to expose roots to air but to cover quickly and firmly with fine soil well pressed down and to make sure the ground about the roots is moist and stays moist for several days.

Sweet Peas

Sweet peas must be planted as early as possible if they are to do well. We can start just as soon as the last snow has gone and the soil is dry enough to dig without becoming muddy. One should follow planting directions closely; that is, sow in the richest possible soil and in a shallow trench. These plants must get growth before the weather turns warm. For their roots, they love a good mulch of rotted leaves with some well rotted manure. On top, place a few inches of soil.

Later on something to climb must be provided. Best materials for this are some of the branches the gardener will be pruning off his trees and shrubbery just now. Normally sweet peas will grow about three to four feet tall, but in Western Canada and some other areas where this plant really flourishes much more than this is common. When bloom starts these should be removed daily in order to encourage long stems and continuous blossoming.

How Can I?

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I remove the shine from a suit of clothes?

A. One method is to try rubbing the material gently with a piece of very fine black emery paper.

Q. How can I hasten the operation of whipping cream?

A. By adding three or four drops of lemon juice to the cream. The cream will soon thicken.

Q. How can I eliminate the basting of goods when sewing long seams?

A. When sewing long seams, try fastening the edges of the material with paper clips, such as are used in every office.

Q. How can I prevent rubbers from slipping off at the heels?

A. Cut two strips of chamois and glue them inside, up the backs of the heels.

Q. What is a good meatless sandwich filling?

A. Try using a sliced banana. Place on the bread and add a little lemon juice and a few raisins.

NOTICE

REGARDING "THE MOTOR VEHICLE FUEL TAX ACT" EFFECTIVE APRIL 1, 1957, IN THE PROVINCE OF ONTARIO

On April 1, 1957, The Motor Vehicle Fuel Tax Act came into effect in Ontario. The Act provides for a tax of 20¢ per gallon on fuel oils, other than gasoline, such as diesel, domestic, furnace, light, medium and heavy (except bunker), used to drive a motor vehicle OR used in any manner in connection with the construction and maintenance of any public thoroughfare.
Fuel oils commonly known as STOVE OIL, KEROSENE, COAL OIL AND DISTILLATE ARE EXEMPT FROM TAX, unless they are placed in the fuel tank of a motor vehicle or used in any manner in connection with the construction and maintenance of any public thoroughfare.

CONSUMERS—Please note

A tax of 20¢ per gallon is payable by:
1. Every person who receives fuel oil in the fuel tank of a motor vehicle.
2. Every person who receives fuel oil that is not exempt from tax in a receptacle of less than 40 gallons capacity, unless such receptacle is directly connected with a machine that is not a motor vehicle.
   Example—The person will not be required to pay the tax on the fuel received in a tank which is directly connected to the furnace for heating his home; or, similarly, a manufacturer may receive the fuel, less tax, if it is placed in a tank directly connected to his manufacturing equipment.
3. Every person who is not a registrant (see Registration Certificates below) and who receives fuel oil in a receptacle having a capacity of 40 or more gallons, unless such receptacle is directly connected with a machine that is not a motor vehicle.

SUPPLIERS—Please note

All suppliers of fuel oil must become registrants (see Registration Certificates below). Fuel oil may be purchased "less tax" by:
1. Any registrant who receives fuel oil in a receptacle having a capacity of 40 or more gallons. Such a receptacle must not be the fuel tank of a motor vehicle.
2. Any person who receives fuel oil in a receptacle directly connected with a machine that is not a motor vehicle.
   Examples—Furnaces, manufacturing units, etc. Such a person is not required to become a registrant.

REGISTRATION CERTIFICATES

Application forms for Registration Certificates may be obtained from the Comptroller of Revenue, Parliament Buildings, Toronto 2. A $1.00 fee must accompany each completed application form.
Every registrant must forward on or before the 25th day of each month to the Comptroller a return containing a complete record of purchases, sales, consumption and inventory of fuel oil for the preceding month, together with payment of the amount of tax shown therein to be payable. Forms for this purpose may be obtained from the Comptroller of Revenue, Parliament Buildings, Toronto 2.

REFUNDS

Persons who have paid tax on fuel oil that is not used to drive a motor vehicle or in connection with the construction and maintenance of any public thoroughfare may apply for refund of such tax. Application forms for this purpose may be obtained from the Comptroller of Revenue, Parliament Buildings, Toronto 2.

PENALTIES (IN PART) FOR CONTRAVENTION OF THE ACT

1. If any person not holding a Registration Certificate in good standing supplies fuel to anyone he will be required to pay a penalty of $100.00 for each violation.
2. Every person who fails to pay the tax in accordance with the Act shall pay a penalty equal to the amount of tax and $50.00.
3. Every registrant who refuses or neglects to collect the tax in accordance with this Act shall pay a penalty equal to the amount of the tax that he refused or neglected to collect and $500.00.
4. Every employee of a registrant who supplies fuel to a purchaser without collecting from the purchaser the tax imposed by the Act shall pay a penalty equal to the amount of the tax and $50.00.
