HENRY'S Shorthand School
Ottawa, Ont.

No School in Canada offers a better training, or ensures a more successful future. Henry's leads all others, and ranks among employers as "THE SCHOOL OF HIGHER EFFICIENCY"—a fact borne out by more than 600 pupils who have, since January, 1913, left other Ottawa schools to come to it.

Therefore, it is not surprising that business men, in advertising for stenographers, should specially say, "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

Sugar Hut at Elma Burned

Sunday night abut 9.30 o'clock fire destroyed the sugar hut belonging to Mr. Oscar Beckstead in his sugar bush near Elma. He had just recently installed a new evaporator and it is reported that it was brought safely out of the fire. He had quite a quantity of dry wood in the hut and had been boiling sap through the day but thought the fire had all been put out before leaving early in the evening.

Members of Wo's. Inst Hear Interesting Talk on Ireland

A most enjoyable afternoon was spent by the members of the Women's Institute at their regular meeting held yesterday. After the business routine, a delightful talk on "Ireland" was given by Mrs. L. Doering who by using a map, conducted her hearers through a tour of the principle cities of the Emerald Isle, emphasizing the diversity of scenery and interesting features in the different sections.

Mr. Hunt, president of the Horticultural society, spoke in the interest of the society.

The tea table was presided over by Mrs. D. Allison and Miss E. Harrison, assisted by Mrs. Reaburn, Mrs. Fairbrass, Mrs. Senn and Mrs. Hewitt.

New Bill Plans Dog Ban In Deer Hunting

When Hon. Charles McRae brings down his annual amendments to the fish and game laws in the Legislature, there will be included in the new legislation an amendment prohibiting the use of dogs in deer hunting.

The fight to ban dogs from the sport of deer hunting started several years ago, but only in the last year or so has the anti-dog group gained much ground. A caucus of the Conservative members on Friday discussed the problem for over an hour, and it will be taken up again in the fish and game committee on either Thursday or Friday of this week.

The Government, while realizing the sporting element introduced by dogs into hunting, is deeply concerned over the decreasing number of deer in Northern Ontario. While aware that many deer are killed by wolves, it is understood the Government's attitude is that dogs should be placed on the banned list in order to learn just what effect they have on the deer population.

Poison in ridding the deer coutry of the wolf menace will be more widely used in the future, it is said. In some areas where deer roam in large numbers, wolves have been thinned out and the danger largely removed. This was done by use of poison.

There will be a three-day session of the fish and game committee, starting this week. The first day, and possibly the second, will be taken up with fish problems, and the last day will be devoted to game matters, with the dogs holding the stage as the most important problem.

It is rumoured that opposition to the banning of dogs will not be as strong as it was last year, though there will likely be plenty of argument in committee over the pros and cons of the situation.

Big Fish Are Biting

Ottawa.—When Real Grosleau, fishing from the Quebec shore of the Ottawa river, near Montebello, felt a "catch" on the end of his line, he little dreamed of the startling events to follow.

According to the story reaching here, Grosseau tugged on the line with all the strength fo his brawny frame, and after a half hour battle, when he was near exhaustion, he landed a sturgeon of staggering proportions. Grosleau did stagger in fact, being very tired after the long pull, and that was the opening for Mr. Mammoth Fish. He bit Grosleau on the leg and cripped him so badly he was still limping today, 48 hours after making the amazing haul.

The "young whale" was finally given the K.O. and brought to Montebello by wagon. He scaled 217 pounds.

Carrying of Guns and Rifles Without Permit

The police have received notice that a number of persons are getting the habit of carrying around guns and rifles without being in possession of a permit to do so; also complaints have been received regarding illegal shooting, trapping and fishing and sharp action is to be taken to put a stop to it and those found breaking the law will be severely dealt with.

Judge: "When you married him you promised to share his lot, didn't you?"

Wife: "Yes, but I didn't know then it was just a lot of trouble."

DANCE IN CHESTERVILLE

A dance under the auspices of Chesterville L. O. L. 2686 will be held in the Orange Hall, Chesterville, on the evening of Friday, March 27th, with a good orchestra in attendance. Refreshments will be served. Admission 35c each person. 21

EASTER TEA

An Easter Tea will be held by the Women's Institute in the Library on Thursday, April 2nd. Tea will be served from three to six o'clock. There will also be a sale, home-made baking and candy, Easter plants and cut flowers. Special orders will be appreciated and may be given to Mrs. Hughes, Mrs. Doering, Miss Moad, or the secretary, Miss McGee.

PLAY AT MOREWOOD

A play entitled "Aaron Slick from Punkin Crick," (a clean rural comedy in three acts) will be presented under the auspices of the Presbyterian Ladies' Aid in the Presbyterian Hall, Morewood, on March 27th, commencing at 8 o'clock. Admission 35c and 25c. 21

EASTER DANCE IN CHESTERVILLE

A grand Easter Dance will be held in the Music Hall, Chesterville, on Easter Monday, April 6th, when the music will be supplied by the Capital Troubadours of Ottawa, one of the outstanding five-piece orchestras of the capital. Refreshments will be served. Admission, including tax, $1.50 per couple, which includes refreshments.

Chesterville High School Met Superior Opposition

Chesterville's High school hockeyists returned from their invasion of the Queen City Sunday afternoon whither they had gone on Thursday to uphold the brand of hockey that put them at the top of the heap in the E. O. S. S. A., but which was not quite good enough to arrive at the top with the whole province competing. In the draw they stacked up against the three-times title holders in Windsor-Walkerville Tech. to start the series, and, after playing one of their best games, were turned back by a score of 3 to 1. In the second game Saturday afternoon, when losers were playing losers, they had as their opponents Runnymede Collegiate, of Toronto, who were turned back by Belleville Collegiate the day before. The Toronto boys were also a little too much for Chesterville and romped off with a 6 to 1 victory. Chesterville was not disgraced by any means and put up a stubborn resistance from whistle to whistle, especially in the first game when there was more at stake than in the Saturday game.

It was quite a novelty for Chesterville radio fans to hear a game broadcast from Toronto with their own representatives one of the contestants, and excitement ran high throughout the district as the play-by-play account of it left every one visualizing victory for Chesterville when with Windsor one up Chesterville was swarming around the net in the second period and raining shots on the Windsor goal, which were all cleverly taken care of. A few words were spoken by Mr. C. D. Nadeau, of Collingwood, formerly an ardent supporter of Chesterville hockey who was down for the game, and by Arnold Lynch, who, with Ralph Hummel, was in charge of the team. Tommy Carpenter, another old Chesterville boy, now of Toronto, also greeted the home town.

The team while in the city was entertained by the Nestlé's Milk Products Co. with a sightseeing drive around the city, dinner Friday night at the King Edward hotel and as guests at a big wrestling show, all of which contributed to a most enjoyable outing as a wind-up to the season's hockey.

Made Comic Strip Rug

Halifax.—Maggie and Jiggs, the well-known comic strip characters, have been adapted to art moderne and worked into a hooked rug by Mrs. M. Blakeney, of India Harbor, Nova Scotia, who despite her seventy-odd years keeps abreast of the leading designs. Maggie is resplendent with thecostume jewellry so popular this spring, her earrings and necklace perfactly matched as to colour, and the where-have-you been expression is cleverly depicted.

Jiggs, with the proverbial cigar, is apologetic, and around the border are the appropriate rolling pins. Mrs. Blakeney, who arrived in Halifax from Indian Harbor on a business trip, plans to do another Maggie and Jiggs rug which will include Fifi and his diamond collar. Mrs. Blakeney operates a general store and hooking of rugs is a sideline with her.

"A donkey discovered a mine that has paid $43,000,000." And other donkeys have put ten times as much into mines that have paid nothing.

Ottawa Teams Drop Two In Eastern Finals

Last night Ottawa hockey teams were not so hot when the Rideaus were taken into camp in Montreal Forum in a sudden death game with Hamilton Tigers on a 3 to 1 score, sending the Tigers into the Eastern finals with Truro Bearcats.

While the Rideaus were taking their trimming in Montreal, the Juniors were getting theirs from Winnipeg in Toronto, where the second game of the series, two out of three to count, was won by Elmwoods of Winnipeg, 2 to 1. The third game will be in Ottawa to-morrow night.

Smiths Falls Railway Man Wins $5,905 Lottery Prize

Smiths Falls, March 24.—Lady Luck bestowed an affectionate pat on the back to a well-known Smiths Falls railroader today when Harold Cummings, arriving at Bedell Station on his way to Smiths Falls, as a member of a freight train crew, was handed a telegram which notified him that he had won a prize of $5,905 with a ticket he held on the Irish Sweepstakes. The message was brief and contained only the information noted above but friends here are of the opinion that the ticket may yet be more valuable than the telegram would indicate.

The touch of Dame Fortune's hand came as a complete surprise to Mr. Cummings, who purchased the ticket here without a thought of winning. He says he has always bought tickets when the proceeds were devoted to a worthy cause and that his lucky pasteboard was purchased almost from force of habit.

Mr. Cumming's lucky draw was good news to his many friends here and he was today receiving congratulations on all sides.

Chalmer's W. M. S., Finch

The monthly meeting of the W.M.S. of Chalmer's United church, Finch, was held at Mrs. H. H. Nesbitt's home on Friday. The meeting was opened by singing the Doxology, followed with the Lord's prayer in unison. Scripture reading and Bible lesson by Mrs. Jas. Froats were taken from Mark viii. Nineteen members responded to the roll call.

A letter was read from Kincaid, Sask., thanking the society for bales sent.

The lesson from the study book was given by Mrs. P. C. James. After hymn 386, a reading from the Missionary Monthly, "Fight for the Folk on the Frontier," was given by Mrs. J. W. Carr. Mrs. J. P. McEwan, district vice president, gave an interesting talk on missionary work, followed by a vocal solo by Mrs. J. W. Carr, "Why Not I," accompanied by Miss Lida Wereley. The meeting closed with a hymn and the benediction.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. C. H. Jack, Mrs. P. C. James, Mrs. W. C. Johnstone.

Crysler Presbyterian Ladies' Aid Met Wednesday

The regular monthly meeting of the Presbyterian Ladies' Aid was held at the home of Mrs. James Currie on Wednesday, March 18th, with a good attendance.

The meeting was opened with devotional exercises led by the president. Mrs. Freeman Burd. Mrs. C. R. Wert read the minutes of the last meeting which were approved. Mrs. Wm. Paul gave an account of the material she had bought for aprons and other articles. The work was then carried on for a few hours.

The meeting was brought to a close by the singing of the doxology.

For That Tired Feeling Have Your Eyes Examined

THE APPROACH OF SPRING is often blamed for laziness caused by eyestrain. If you have an indispotion to buckle down to work, it may be the Springtime or it may be just laziness, but the chances are that your eyes are not working properly.

The energy consumed by eyestrain is sometimes appalling. If you find it difficult to work, have your eyes examined right away.

One Can Never Tell What Chidren Will Do

Oshawa.—When his house filled with smoke, E. Hopper, Colborne Street east, was at a loss to locate the trouble Sunday afternoon. Suspecting that something was wrong with the heating system, he tore up a register but could not discover the source. He then called the firemen, who found that there was fire in the water pan on top of the furnace. The children had emptied the pan of water and filled it with chips.

Climbing Into Firebox Railwayman Suicides

St. Thomas, March 23. — Ernest Dart, Clendennan Avenue, Toronto, committed suicide early this afternoon at St. Thomas by climbing into the fire box of a C. P. R. engine.

Dart was believed to be making his first trip as fireman with the crew of No. 86, a freight train, and nothing is known concerning him except that he was an efficient fireman and about 35 years of age. An inquest was ordered by Dr. D. L. Ewin for Wednesday evening.

Dart chose one of the most terrible deaths that could be conceived. The train arrived here about 10 o'clock, and about 2 o'clock was making up to return to Woodstock. The engineer and conductor alighted at the east end of the M. C. R. station for orders and, unnoticed, Dart stepped on the steam controls which open the door to the firebox, hooked the two halves of the door back, and crawled head first into the fire.

The engine at the time was carrying 90 pounds of steam.

Engineer Edward Nicholson, of 37 Jerome street, Toronto, was the first to return to the cab. He was surprised to see the doors of the firebox fastened back, and still further alarmed when he became conscious of the form crumpled up within. Dart's boots were still discernible inside the door.

Man Flags Passenger Train After Both Feet Gone

Brandon, March 22.—Grimly battling against pain and the fear of unconsciousness, James R. Oliver, of Sydney, N. S., retained consciousness for an hour Friday night, after he fell from a stock train, and was able to flag a passenger train which rushed him to Brandon hospital for medical attention.

With both feet severed when he fell under the wheels of the cattle train, Oliver lay beside the track, and as the passenger train approached, set fire to a piece of paper.

The flare attracted the attention of the engineer, a quick stop was made, and the injured man placed aboard the train. He collapsed and was unconscious when the crew lifted him to a waiting ambulance at Brandon. Hospital physicians, however, believe he will live.

Two Girl Stowaways Now Homeward Bound

Liverpool, March 22.—A prank which had unexpected consequences for two young Newfoundland girls was revealed today by their departure for home on a steamer from Liverpool after a three months' voyage to European ports.

Emma Mitchell and Mary McCarthy, after a dance on December 5 last, went down to the quay and in an adventurous spirit boarded the British steamer Port Alfred, about to sail from Newfoundland for England. When the vessel was two days out the girls, still in their dance frocks, were discovered, hiding and terrified They were treated kindly, but as stowaways and were put to work cleaning brass work. The crew subscribed enough to buy the girls suitable clothes from the ship's stores. A three months' voyage was ahead of them, for the ship called at various Continental ports before arriving at Hull, England.

The ship reached Hull early this week and then a deportation order was obtained against them. The girls were sent to Liverpool, whence they have sailed for home. The parents had been notified beforehand.

HINTS FOR CITY VISITORS

NO! Windmills are not large electric fans for cooling off the hogs and cattle.

We milk our cows at 6. A.M. and 4.30 P. M. A charge of twenty-five cents is made for children desiring to hold their tails—fifty cents if they ask us if we are draining their crankcases.

Cut your initials on our fruit trees all you wish. It merely kills them.

Don't feel that you have to get up for breakfast when you hear the hired man calling the cows. He didn't want to get up either.

There are no needles in our haystacks. Please ask your children to refrain from dissecting them.

Pay your bills in advance. The tires on our flivver are a little old and we do not care to do any racing after elopers.

THE NEWSPAPER

SPEAKING on the subject of publicity for a chain of retail stores serving many smaller cities and towns, the store director of a company describes the local paper as "our best clerk." He explains that it sees more people, gets more of their individual time, works longer hours, and tells its story with more accuracy. that any other clerk they can employ. These papers are going into the homes of the people, and are assured of their friendly attention. This is proved by the tremendous growth in importance of the press in the last few years, according to this authority, who declares that today the newspaper is the backbone of any constructive sales effort.—Collingwood Bulletin.

BUTTER FAT OF MILK FOR HUMAN CONSUMPTION

CLAUSE 3 of the new Ontario Milk Act regulations, providing for payment by butter fat standard on milk for human consumption, came in for some criticism at the annual meeting of the Woodstock Milk Producers. Mr. George Barr, director of dairying for Ontario, in reply, said that probably 80 per cent of the plants in the province knew very little about the method of testing because they had never done it until the first of January, but he was satisfied the work was better done in February and would be still better in March. His officials had been driving all over the province, except in the north, during the past two and a half months trying to get the men to weigh and sample the milk. The problem was bigger than was expected, but he hoped to have the machine running smoothly very soon. The case was mentioned of a producer in Hamilton district whose milk had been refused because the distributor said he could not afford to pay the statutory premium on 3.8 test. The Sentinel-Review remarks that there appears to be no redress, but that the situation would be unusual. "At a plant nearer home," it adds, "so much low-test milk is coming in as to prejudice the area on the Toronto market."

News and Information For the Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Ontario farmers annually lose hundreds of dollars from parasites in sheep and hogs. Dr. L. S. Stevenson has made a special study of this problem and has written several bulletins, copies of which can be obtained from your local Department of Agricultu e.

Commercial fertilizers when applied to various crops in conjunction with good farming methods give big returns. Phosphates increase yields of almost all crops on almost all types of soil. Potash pays especially on the sandy soils. Nitrogen for most farm crops should, as far a possible, be obtained from growing legumes.

Better seed pays big dividends in crop improvement. Production may be increased from 10 to 14 pounds per bushel and from 10 to 14 bushels per acre by sowing large, plump seed. The farmer will find it a paying proposistion to get the old fanning mill out of the storehouse, fit it up properly with screens and make a genuine clean-up of seed this spring.

Free Seed

One of the great vital forces responsible for success in agriculture is good seed, declares the Ontario Agricultural and Experimental Union, in announcing this year to distribute to farmers free of charge, into every township, county and district of Ontario, selected seed of the best varieties of field crops. Any farmer can obtain a list giving the details of this seed distribution for test purposes from his local agricultural representative. Included in the list are seeds for grain crops, root crops, forage, fodder, silage and hay crops, culinary crops, fertilizer experiments and a number of miscellaneous experiments.

Renewed War on Corn Borer

The need for renewed warfare on the corn borer was emphasized at the annual convention of corn borer inspectors of Western Ontario at London, when Prof. L. Caesar, provincial entomologist, led the discussion and issued instructions to the inspectors. Large corn producing counties of Western Ontaria are faced the possibility of another serious corn borer epidemic as a result of the prolonged drought. Unless much stubble ploughing is done by farmers and inspectors give careful surveillance, serious damage to corn fields may result. The new situation is unusual because of the pronounced drought last summer. Corn stubble became dry. The corn borer did not find the dry stubble to his liking and instead of spending the winter in the stalk about an inch above the ground as usual, it went deeper into the root. In the past many farmers have simply cut the corn level with the ground, thus avoiding ploughing the stubble under. This plan would not be effective under the new condition and a campaign is being started to have all stubble ploughed under before the middle of May, despite the manner in which the corn was cut.

Interesting Swine Course

Despite a heavy snowstorm which made roads almost impassable, approximately sixty young men were in attendance at the special swine course held under the auspices of the Council of Canadian Meat Packers and Provincial and Federal Departments of Agriculture at Montreal packing plants on March 9th, 10th, and 11th. It was voted the most successful course yet hed in Eastern Ontario. The programme consisted of lectures and demonstrations on types of live hogs and dressed carcasses. The following counties were represented in the gathering: Carleton, Glengarry, Grenville, Dundas, Renfrew, Lanark, Lennox and Addington, Prescott and Russell, Leeds and Frontenac.

An Advisory Committee

Immediately after the present legislative session, the Government will appoint an advisory board to aid Hon. Thos. L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, in the administration of departmental affairs and in solving present-day farm problems. It will probably comprise three members—one representative of the dairying industry; a second from the cattle, hog and sheep industries, and a third from the poultry raising interests. It will be absolutely non-political in composition and scope. The members will receive fair remuneration for their time, as well as travelling expenses.

55c a Bushel for Barley

Resulting from a conference in the office of the Minister of Agriculture, the Canadian Malting Company Ltd. is offering to pay a minimum price of 55c a bushel for Ontario barley, on and after September 1st, 1931, delivered at Montreal. The company will accept 1,000,000 bushels of barley at that price, providing it is sound and clean and reasonably free from other grains and weighing 48 pounds to the bushel. This is equivalent of the grain grade known as "Three Extra" and in a normal year should easily be obtained by the average farmer in Ontario. Barley has long been regarded by many farmers as a cash crop in Essex, Kent, Middlesex. Elgin and Perth, and it is hoped this announcement will give new confidence to these growers. A Montreal price of 55c would mean f.o.b. prices approximately as follows: Main line, Chatham and surrounding points, 40c; off lines, side lines or radial lines in same territory, 37c; Central Ontario points, 42c; Eastern Ontario and on to Montreal, 46c. These prices apply only to carlot shipments. This offer is 20c to 25c per bushel better than present prices on the Montreal market and should greatly encourage barley production in those counties where the crop is well and favourably known.

Weekly Crop Report

There is a general feeling throughout the province that the recent heavy snowfall has been of inestimable value according to weekly reports of agricultural representatives in various counties. Fields were well covered and prophets are most optimistic regarding the condition of wheat and clover stands. Orchards in Dundas have been receiving attention with some pruning already done. In Frontenac the number of sows farrowing this year shows an increase of about 100 per cent over last spring. Excepting for the syrup industry, few preparations have been made for spring work in Glengarry. Increased interest in certified seed is manifest in Grenville. In spite of bad roads, the soils and crops meeting in Haldimand are being very well attended. Farmers in Huron are indicating increased interest in better seed and fanning mills are being put in shape for screening work. In Middlesex, orchard pruning work has been general, while breeding stations in Welland report heavy orders for good quality eggs.

New High Quality Feed

Farmers, feeders and poultrymen will be interested in the production of a new high quality feed for poultry, swine and young livestock. This feed, called Oat Groats, is made by taking the hulls off the oats thus greatly reducing the fibre, increasing the protein and lowering the cost of the food nutrients by a saving in freight.

Although there is some varition in the chemical analysis, the average sample shows about 17 per cent protein and from 2½ to 3 per cent fibre. Oat Groats are fairly high in fat, containing about 8 per cent of this valuable nutrient. For young calves, young pigs and all ages of poultry, this feed will prove valuable in assisting rapid growth and general vigour because of the high protein and low fibre content. The price of this product is very low when the feed value is compared to other feeds.

By buying this feed in carlot quantities and using Canadian Barley to replace corn, the cost of production of poultry and livestock products can be substantially reduced. Farmers and poultrymen are advised to get in touch with their feed dealers regarding these products.

$15,000 Fire at Carp

Carp, March 22.—A spectacular fire which for a time threatened to wipe out the village of Carp broke out shortly before midnight in an unused store and tenement house at the west end of the village and raged for more than two hours, destroying the building and spreading to the houses on either side as well as to other more distant homes.

Caused in the opinion of Chief R. W. Hayes of the Westboro brigade by a match or cigarette butt tossed into the house, the fire was discovered only after it had made considerable headway, by J. Thibeault, proprietor of a garage across the roadway.

Flames shooting 30 and 40 feet above the roof bathed the village and countryside in a red glare that brought hundreds from their beds who added their efforts to those of the local volunteer brigade and of the Westboro Fire Department which answered a call at 12.50.

The total damage is estimated at from $12,000 to $15,000 and includes the shop and tenement owned by Mrs. Fred McCord, valued at $5,000; blacksmith shop owned by Herb Wetherly and its contents, valued at $7,000; side of house owned by Stuart Thompson, $500, and slight damages to other houses in the vicinity.

With the exception of the blacksmith shop which was insured for $3,000, all damage caused by the fire is a total loss. Carp has been singularly unfortunate in fire during the past year, seven buildings on the main street having been wiped out previous to last night's blaze.

CARROTS FOR WINTER USE

Experimental Farms Note

THE growing of carrots for table use has become an important branch of vegetable gardening or, better, truck gardening. The demand for carrots of fine quality that the housewife, in purchasing vegetables for home use, looks for is becoming greater as the consumer becomes educated to the various points of quality. It is hoped that the growers will bear in mind that if this demand is to be successfully met they must pay particular attention to the production of a commodity that will sell readiy.

The old and persistent idea of size of root and tonnage per acre has long since become antiquated and while a crop of fine large carrots looks nice to the grower, this same crop when offered for sale beside carrots of smaller size, with fine quality, will not be found to sell to advantage. Large carrots are in the truest sense coarse, rough and fibrous and only fit for feeding to live stock. The type of carrot required for culinary purposes is one that is of medium size, smooth, clean, fine-grained, tender and sweet.

The soil in which carrots are to be grown should be of a silty loam or sandy loam nature that is deep, rich in plant food and with plenty of available moisture. The practice of sowing the carrot seed early in the spring is quite all right for tonnage to the acre, or where the roots are to be marketed early in the season, but to obtain carrots of desirable size and quality for winter storage and marketing it is highly important that sowing be deferred to the latest possible date. Under Ottawa conditions, with a rich soil and moisture insured by the use of irrigation, the seed has been sown as late as June 20th. In sections where the fall is more open or longer, later sowings can be made. The usual cultivation is given and the plants thinned to one and a half or two inches apart. By the middle of October carrots of choice size were obtained that were of the highest quality. The same results could be obtained in many of the market gardens in Canada, thus providing attractive carrots for winter market that the consuming public would buy as quickly as the imported product that has little or no competition in the northern markets at the present time.

The varieties that can be used and should be used are Chantenay, Danvers and Nantes. These varieties all possess high quality when grown to the proper size, but like all other crops that are let develop beyond the desirable size, cannot be expected to possess the best quality. Let the growers make up their minds to supply the proper type of commodity at the right season and there is little doubt but that the market requirements can be taken care of. The soils and climates of this country can be relied upon to produce crops of the right kind if the growers will but employ the right methods.

An Irishman, strolling through London, saw some pictures in a photographer's window. One was of a young man taken after he had attended a facy dress ball in Mephistophelean costume.

After looking at it for some time, he went into the shop and said he wanted a picture taken of his brother and himself on one card.

The photographer made the usual preparations, and then asked for his brother.

"Oh, he's in Bristol," was the reply.

"And how," said the photographer, "can you expect me to take the picture of a man who is in Bristol?"

"Well," said the Irishman, "I'd like to know how you took Satan's picture. Did you meet him here?"

A Week in the Legislature

A DEFICIT of $2,670,000 in provincial finances for the present year was forecast by Hon. T. A. Dunlop, Provincial Treasurer, in his budget address to the Ontario Legislature.

Increased revenue was indicated from the sale of liquor of $2,500,000 through advances in price, and another $2,000,000 is expected from the tax to be applied on the capital stock of all companies operating in the province. Liquor prices were adjusted by Sir Henry Drayton, Chairman of the Board, which are expected to bring the required $2,500,000.

In his maiden budget speech, Hon. E. A. Dunlop was roundly applauded and congratulated for the manner in which he presented the labrynth of figures, and was more particularly applauded through the statement that the Government had refused to consider the tempting suggestion to suspend payments for one year on its debt retirement plan in order to avoid the deficit.

The Government also intends carrying its full share of old age pension expenses, highway costs and relief measures.

Total ordinary revenue is given as $59,985,000 and expenditure $62,655,000 while Ontario is in a better financial position than many of the other provinces.

Gasoline tax and motor license fees are expected to make larger contributions to the treasury this year. License returns are expected to jump from $5,253,999 to $5,885,000, while gasoline receipts are estimated at $11,000,000, compared with $10,756,835 last year.

Succession duties are placed at $9,225,000 while last year this source of revenue was $11,200,000. Department of Highways will spend $19,400,000, an increase of nearly $1,500,000. Education will also show an increase, with $12,015,000 on combined capital and ordinary payments compared with $11,773,407.

The Government's share of old age pensions of $2,650,000 is practically the same figure as the estimated deficit of $2,670,000.

HON. T. L. KENNEDY, Minister of Agriculture, announced a programme to capture a British market of some 21,000,000 bushels of barley purchased annually now from California. Col. Kennedy intends to enlist the support Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Canadian High Commissioner in London, in his effort to get this market for Ontario farmers. A trial shipment of Ontario barlev will be despatched to London through cooperation of the provincial and federal governments and the departments of agriculture. Col. Kennedy feels that British buyers will give preference to Ontario barley if they can be assured of the type at a proper comparative price and a steady supply.

IN a revised hospital bill, Hon. J. M. Robb, Minister of Health, introduced to the Legislature establishment of a regulated hospitalization system for the province. Second reading was given to the bill which provides for payment by municipalities and the Ontario government of maintenance for babies born of indigent mothers. Under this plan, the municiaplities will pav 90 cents a day and the government 30 cents for a period of fourteen days for these indigent babes. Upon the suggestion that hospital costs be divided three-quarters to the municipalities and one-quarter to the Government, which was contained in the Ross Welfare Report, Dr. Webb declared this division had been found inequitable in view of the present day heavy burden of taxation to the muncipalities. Agreements between hospitals and muncipalities must be ratified by the Department of Health, in view of the varying systems in hospitals and uneven costs in different municipalities.

ANNOUNCEMENT of 5.5 per cent decrease in the consumption of spirits, wines and beers in the province during 1930 was made in the annual report of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario. Sales totalled $52,283,001.73, compared with $55,360,569.81 in 1929, or a decrease of $3,077,568.10. This is the first time in the history of the Board that a decrease from year to year has been shown.

Greatest decrease came in the consumption of intoxicating beverage in imported spirits, these sales dropping $2,456,562.76 and far overshadow decreases in other beverages. Less domestic spirits were consumed, there being $11,654,935 consumed last year, as compared with $12,043,271 in 1929, or a decrease of 3.2 per cent. Domestic wines showed an increase, going up 17.1 per cent. the volume being $2,083,953 to $2,439,810.

THE Ontario Agricultural Committee at their weekly meeting discussed the present Federal act on the grading of hogs, during which a petition opposing the regulation was presented by P. J. Henry. East Kent, singed by 800 farmers of that riding. Representatives of drovers, buyers, packers and growers were heard in opposing and supporting the regulation.

THE Committee on Game and Fish at their organization meeting indicated that the wolf bounty will be increased to $25, while Hon. Charles McRae, Minister of Mines, indicated that there was considerable money to be made in wolf hunting. As formerly, the skins are to be returned to the killer. Amendments to the game and fish regulations are to be introduced.

"My husband is away much of the time and I want a parrot for company. Does this one use rough language?"

"Lady, with this bird in the house you'd never miss your husband."

Lady Poet: "My new spring poem has thirty-eight stanzas, all as good as the one I have read to you. To whom shall I dedicate it?"

Editor: "To your husband."

"But he is dead."

"So much the better. He'll be able to stand it."

The members of a country school board were on a round of inspection and the teacher was putting his pipils through their paces. "Who signed the Magna Charta?" he asked, turning to one boy.

"Please, sir, 'twasn't me," whimpered the youngster.

The teacher, in disgust told him to take his seat, but an old tobacco-chewing country man on the board was not satisfied, so he said: "Call that boy back. I don't like his manner. I believe he did do it."

Wholehan—In sad and loving memory of our dear brother, Thomas Wholehan, who passed away March 30th, 1928.

We miss you at a thousand turns
Along life's weary way,
For life is not the same to us since
You were called away.
You left behind some aching hearts
That loved you most sincere,
That never have, and never can,
Forget you brother dear.

Men are busy in their sugar camps these days.

Rev. Mr. Newman, of Chesterville, passed through town Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. McPherson and Mr. and Mrs. Graham McPherson motored to Massena on Sunday.

Mr Oscar Beckstead had the ill luck of losing his sugar camp be fire Sunday night. His loss is considerable.

Mrs. Defoe, who has been so very ill for the last few weeks, is improving.

Tap your maple bush. Don't be afraid of the new law. After the interpretation that is being given of it one wonders why it was ever written into the statutes.

The regular monthly meeting of the W. M. S. was held Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. N. Barkley. There was a fairly good attendance and a good meeting is reported.

Young People's Society meets in the church on Friday evening. There will be choir practice also. Everybody come.

Services preparatory to communion will be held Sunday morning next at 11 a.m., "God is Calling Yet." Lord's Supper will be dispensed on Easter Sunday.

Mr. F. A. Beckstead, an employee of the C. P. R., spent the week end with his family here.

Mrs. L. C. McIntosh, of Williamsburg, spent Sunday with her parents here. Mr. and Mrs. Ira N. Dillabough

Large White Birds.

Large White Eggs

Do you know that there is as much profit in 180 twenty-four ounce eggs as there is in 300 twenty ounce eggs? Think this over before placing your order for chicks this year. Our Leghorns are large birds and lay a large chalk white egg. Our males are again from eggs direct from Hollywood Poultry Farm, Seattle, Washington, from hens with records of over 240 eggs in one year.

Barred Plymouth Rocks

Good Market Birds

Good Egg Production

Our Rocks this year are again mated to males from the Kemptville School Farm from hens with trap nest records oi from 210 eggs up.

Now is the time to decide the number of chicks you will start this year. Our incubators are running at full capacity. We already have orders on our books for thousands of chicks but can as yet supply chicks for any week in April or May. Following are our prices which are $2.00 per hundred lower than previous years.

Up to and Including	April 8th	April 15th and April 23nd	April 29th and May 6th	May 13th and May 20th	May 30th and June 3rd
100	$17.00	$16.00	$15.00	$14.00	$13.00
500	$80.00	$75.00	$70.00	$65.00	$60.00
1000	$150.00	$140.00	$130.00	$120.00	$110.00

One Week Old Chicks $3.00 per hundred over the above prices. Custom Hatching at a New Low Rate.

A BEAUTIFY CANADA CAMPAIGN

CANADA is a country of great natural beauty to which has been added the handiwork of the landscape artist and the horticulturist, and yet there is much to be done before the country assumes the mature charm of some of the older lands.

With the progress of time, however, the making of gardens and the embellishment and extension of parks becomes more pronounced. It is necessary only to note the growing importance of the horticultural society movement and the increasing activities of individuals and communities to see how widsepread is the interest in outdoor beautification and improvement.

One has only to look about to observe that these improvements relate not only to the home grounds, but also to industrial environments and to the reclamation of waste places. Offending scenes also, in many localities are being transformed into objects of civic pride.

The movement is neither urban or rural; it is both, taking in the country home as well as the town dwelling. Nor is it local or provincial, as it embraces the whole Dominion from coast to coast and extends from the southern boundary to regions in the far north, where even in the Yukon some of the finest gardens are to be found.

It is to give impetus to this highly desirable tendency that the Canadian Horticultural Council is setting on foot a movment for the greater beautification of Canada. The Ornamental Horticultural Committee of this body, under the direction of Dr. W. T. Macoun, Dominion Horticulturist has taken steps to have committees formed in each province, convened or directed by the Minister of Agriculture or the Provincial Horticulturist. These committees working with the central office of the council at Ottawa, it is expected, will carry the work down through the societies to even the remotest points that are reached by their numerous membership.

The work that has been planned to be carried out will include the improvement not only of homes, but parks, railways and highways. Special attention will be given to reviving interest in the cleaning up and the suitable ornamentation of cemeteries.

In keeping with modern practice, the council has adopted a suitable slogan, "Beautify Your Home Grounds and Make Canada More Beautiful." But it has gone further than this and has issued an attractive and very practical handbook, which not only lays down the general principles of modern landscaping, but contains explicit directions for planning and the planting of recommended material.

The work that has been undertaken will at once appeal to all who in any degree react to the impulse of patriotism, national, local, or civic. It is a development worthy of every encouragement that reason, idealism and love of country can suggest. Behind it stands the practical wisdom of keen and farsighted business men, who as railway, industrial, and corporation executives, or as leaders in municipal adminstration, have proclaimed not only in words but by definite action, the truth of the slogan that "Beauty Pays."

Mrs. Bour—Yes, I don't know how it is, but I feel thoroughly wound up tonight."

Hostess—"Really? And yet you don't seem to go?"

Ruth: "Here comes the parade and Betty will miss it. Where is she?"

May: "She's upstairs waving her hair."

Ruth: "Mercy. Can't we afford a flag?"

Russia is Really Blacker Than Painted Says Returned Engineer in Interview

Bread $10 a pound, cheese $15 a pound, tangerines $45 a dozen, eggs $20 a dozen—half of them rotten, caviar $50 a pound. Madame looks over the list to do her morning's shopping in Moscow. She and her husband, both Russians, live with their two children in one room. All four of them work. They earn per month about 700 rubles altogether ($300), and their total allotment of food, which is not enough to keep them alive, costs only about $35. Madame is buying extra rations, "luxuries" at the prices obtaining today.

Such is life in the U. S. S. R., according to Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Clifford who arrived in Montreal recently from Moscow and granted an interview to The Montreal Gazette representative yesterday in the Windsor Hotel. "We lived in the Savoy Hotel," Mr. Clifford said. "The diet was black bread and cabbage soup. Other accommodations in the hotel were of the same sort. It was the best we could get and it cost about $25 a day."

Mrs. Clifford recited some of the prices quoted above. There is a store in Moscow where "luxuries" for the table are sold to foreigners. Mrs. Clifford cited some of the prices that had been asked there. They were about one tenth of the price charged native Russians.

"When we got out of the country and reached London," she said, "we were both sick for two weeks from eating too much. With no cabbage soup in sight we were hungry all the time."

Mr. Clifford is a wood distilling engineer. For many years he has travelled about installing plants for producing charcoal and charcoal by-products, acetic acid or calcium acetate, tar and methanol or methyl alcohol. Before coming to Canada he was in Russia with Mrs. Clifford for a year, and he made no effort to conceal his delight in being out of the country, and out of it forever.

In the interview he explained many of the astonishing anomalies of life in Russia and revealed facts not generally reported in the books and articles about the country which have been flooding the bookstalls.

Most emphatically he declared that the Russians were inefficient, that their industrialization programme was a complete failure, that they had, in the past five years, developed nothing but their own natural resources.

Of living conditions in Russia Mr. Clifford said, "they could be no worse." Only two millions of the one hundred and fifty millions of people in the U. S. S. R. belong to the Communist party. The rest are followers who belong to patriotic societies and disinherited Russians of the better class in the days of the Tzar. The communists receive considerations that lift them well above the people in general. Although the maximum salary that may be paid an individual is only 275 roubles (approximately $137) a month, they have privileges thrown in which permit themselves to dress properly, secure better living quarters and get nearly enough to eat. Even so, they are obliged to live like the people. No one has more than a room or—if he is very lucky—two rooms in which to bring up a family. No one has any privacy at all.

Artists and actors are favoured slightly. They have become the propagandists of communism and as such they are valuable to the state. They too are allowed enough clothing to dress respectably, but no one is exempted from the necessity to buy everything he needs with a ration card.

"It is nothing for 30 people to live in one room in Moscow," Mr. Clifford said. "They keep their belongings under the bed. One sees advertisements in the papers every day for corners of rooms. It is impossible to rent space anywhere. Like everything else, it is rationed out, so many square metres to a person.

"The books about Russia are written by people who mean to go back into the country," he said. "They make money out of their work and it would not be convenient for them to be exiled from Russia. They are watched and although they are not dishonest they fail to present all the aspects of life in the cities of Russia in order that they may not compromise themselves with the authorities."

In denouncing the celebrated Five Year Plan, Mr. Clifford said that in travelling about he never saw any important developments except in the production of such raw materials as fur, timber and pulpwood, manganese, etc. Once he said, he heard that a plant was to be built for the manufacture of surgical instruments from the platinum of the Ural Mountains, but whether it was ever built he did not know. The general inefficiency of which he accused the Russians in their efforts to industrialize the country he attributed to the fact that all the old leader fell out of power with the advent of communism and were succeeded by a band of young men and women who had no experience.

Only a very deluded people could endure to live as the Russians do, he believed. Attacks on the Government are unknown. The press is entirely controlled by the Government and no private criticism is heard because no one dares to lift his voice against the Five Year Plan. Those who do not believe that at its close they will have all they need to eat and all the luxuries they want as well are discreetly silent; meanwhile the merits of the Plan are eulogized daily in the papers, in the theatres, on the signboards, everywhere. The individual is inundated with artful propaganda and completely cut away from the rest of the world.

Frontiers are watched so closely that it is impossible to have a letter sent through without it being opened and read. People crossing the line are searched. No one is allowed to leave Russia with any rubles in his possession. The most vigilant discipline is maintained everywhere under the shadow of the Cheka's terrific power. "The O. G. P. U., as this police organization is known, has more power than the Kremlin," Mr. Clifford said. "They have nothing to do with ordinary police duties They are only a political police."

Protests Are Futile.

Many anecdotes which were recounted by Mr. or Mrs. Clifford served to illustrate further the manner in which people live in Russia and the despotic power in which the power of the state is exercised. Foreigners in the country who feel they have had their rights violated and complain to authorities, threatening to protest through their diplomatic or consular offices, are simply told to go ahead and protest. "They don't care for anything," Mr. Clifford said. "They do what they want, and they are answerable to no one."

An account of the experience of a man who brought his car with him to Moscow from the United States served to show how keenly the authorities disapprove of luxury in all its forms. The unfortunate automobilist discovered first of all that a driver's license costs $250. That was the beginning of his trouble. The cost of a garage was equally high; the cost of gasoline around a dollar a gallon. In desperation, finding it impossible to take the car out of the country again, the harassed owner ended by giving it away.

"Even in Russia it is impossible to find out what is going on," Mr. Clifford stated. "In the newspapers there is only what the Government wants to print, and one is not allowed to travel freely in the country. On entering, he is asked to sign promises not to visit certain district..."

"What districts?"

"Turkestan, for example."

"Isn't there a new railroad running down there which was built in the last few years?"

"There is, but I understand it is already becoming dilapidated from neglect."

An hour's conversation failed to uncover any approval for anything Russian in Mr. Clifford. He believed the country was one despotically controlled by a band of youthful fanatics whose high purposes would never be realized. Only officials in the embassies who were exempt from liability under the laws of the country were able to live decently there. Both he and his wife were glad to be out of it forever.

Mr. Clifford, who is an Englishman, and his wife, a Canadian, left the city last night for Toronto.

There was silence save for the scratching of pens, for an examination was in progress.

Suddenly the eye of the examiner caught a student who was studying his watch with more than usual interest.

"Smith," said the watcher, "I will have a look at your timepiece, if you please."

Smith seemed worried, but handed over the watch.. The other opened it, and saw pasted across the dial a tiny slip of paper bearing the laconic legend, "Fooled."

Smith was allowed to resume his work but the examiner kept his eye on him. Soon he thought fit to have another look at his watch, and very reluctantly the boy handed it over.

But this time he did not go for the face. He opened the back instead. And there sure enough he found a carefully folded piece of paper. Unfolding it eagerly, he read, "Fooled again."

"How do you get him to chew his food?"

"I give him Shredded Wheat and it's so crisp he has to chew it—the more he chews it the better he likes it and the more nutriment he gets out of it. Many children bolt down their food without chewing—that means imperfect digestion, poor teeth and unhealthy gums. Shredded Wheat with milk makes a perfect food for growing children, and it's perfectly delicious with bananas or stewed fruit."

Fisherman's Luck

TREADING noiselessly on moccasined feet, Jack Berloe stole up behind the screen of elder bush and young birch which fringed the bank of the little river. He peered cautiously through the leafage. Below him lay a broad, amber-shadowed pool, its surface glassy-smooth except where an occasional slow swirl from the rapids above would wrinkle it for a moment and flash back a sharp gleam of sun. The rushing clamour of the rapids pulsed musically in the soft spring air.

It was a very promising pool, and Bedloe scrutinized it with the eye of the practiced, and very practical, angler. His rod and line were stout affairs. He was not a fly-fisherman. He used bait, according to season; and at this season it was the homely earthworm. His hand was reaching eagerly to his pocket for the tin bait box when a startling apparition on the opposite shore of the stream caught his eye, and he stiffened into instant mobility. He was an unlearned backwoodsman, but an expert in woodcraft and a keen student of the ways of the wild creatures.

A huge back bear was coming down the bank, moving briskly as if with a very definite purpose. And for a moment Bedloe wondered uncomfortably if that purpose could be in any way connected with Jack Bedloe. Knowing bears as he did, he promptly dismissed his foolish apprehensions. He could see that the great beast was fully intent on some business of his own.

At the water's edge the bear did not hesitate. He plunged straight in, to a depth that almost covered his back, wallowed forward some six or eight feet, and drew himself up upon what was evidently a submerged ledge. Here he sat back on his haunches, with one big forepaw uplifted, and glanced about him with a complacent air as if thoroughly pleased with the situation. He was sitting in perhaps ten inches of icy water, and Bedloe was at a loss to explain the animal's satisfaction.

It explained itself, however, presently. Bending low his great black head, the bear fell to peering down into the glassy current which slipped past the outer face of the ledge. Motionless as a rock, he held this attitude for a long minute while, equally motionless, Jack Bedloe watched him with eager expectation.

Suddenly that big uplifted paw, long claws protruding, flashed down into the water with lightning swiftness and swept up again, carrying a large, brownish fish. In the same movement the successful fisherman swung slightly on his haunches and hurled his prize far up the bank behind him. Assuring himself with a glance that it had fallen back into the water, he resumed his fishing.

Bedloe chuckled soundlessly in appreciation of his rival's dexterity. His quick eye had detected that the fish was only a sucker, one of the most sluggish of the stream dwellers; but he marvelled at the neat precision of the feat. It was clear that the bear was accustomed to do his fishing at this point, that he had the height and distance of the bank calculated to a nicety, and knew where the best fish frequented.

Two or three expectant minutes passed, the rushing of the rapids loud on the still air, and again the flashing paw sped down, again a big fish was scooped forth and hurled unerringly up the bank. With a little pang of envy Bedloe noted that it was a splendid trout, probably a good pound in weight. But this time the lucky fisherman had miscalculated his distance. The trout fell short of the top of the bank and, though half stunned, began to flop feebly down toward the water. With an impatient "woof" the bear floundered ashore and intercepted it, bit off its head to make sure of its future good behaviour and then returned hurriedly to his post. It looked as if he wanted to secure a good catch while the catching was good, and then make his meal at leisure.

Presently he struck again. But this time the intended victim was too alert for him, and his paw emerged empty. He gave a whimper of disappointment and glanced around him with such a sheepish air that Bedloe could hardly restrain his laughter. "Ef you only knowed who was watchin' you, I reckon you would feel small," he muttered under his breath.

After this, however, the bear was more careful. He had got his paw in, and there were no more failures to disconcert him. Within the next fifteen or twenty minutes he had landed half a dozen more good-sized fish —all suckers but one, and that one a huge, bright silver chub. Then, just as the watcher behind the bushes was beginning to grow impatient over this monotony of success, he seemed to decide that he had caught enough for a square meal. He floundered ashore, shook himself, gulped down the trout, then scrambled up over the edge of the bank to where the full feast awaited him.

It was clear that bear was perfectly unconscious that he was observed.

For a moment or two he stood and gloated over his prizes,—several of them still flopping,—then he pawed one forth delicately and bit a mouthful out of its back. At the same instant Bedloe, thinking to vary the proceedings, set two fingers between his teeth and gave a short, piercing whistle.

The effect was electric. The startled bear jumped as if a fire cracked had exploded under his nose, whipped around and stared all about him, sniffing the still air anxiously. It was evident he had no idea as to the direction from which the strange sound had come. For perhaps a whole minute he never stirred, but sat listening with all his ears, expecting the sound to be repeated. At last he came to the conclusion he had imagined it; or else the effect faded from his mind; and he turned again to his banquet.

He had no more than set his long white teeth into the dainty than again, out of the unseen, came that abrupt and strident whistle. He fairly jumped into the air, then rose upon his hind legs and searched earth and water in all directions for a solution of the mystery. Finding none, he stared at the tree tops, at the sky itself, and lastly at his pile of fish, eyeing them with uneasy suspicion. He dropped on all fours again and walked round the glistening treasure several times, till at last its lusciousness and his appetite once more dispelled his fears. But this time he selected another fish, the silvery chub, and pulled it well aside from the rest before beginning to eat it.

Relenting somewhat, Bedloe allowed him to gulp down two or three mouthfuls. Then he whistled again, even more harshly. This time the result amazed him. The bear seemed to shrink in size, his long fur drawing down flat to his body. He spurned the half-eaten fish from him in a kind of horror and raced away like a frightened cat, never once looking back; and the underbrush crackled in his flight. The mystery had proved too much for his nerves.

Jack Bedloe rocked with laughter. "I'm jiggered," he muttered. "ef he don't think it's them fish as makes the noise, when he bites 'em!" And it's just possible Bedloe was right. Not being convinced of his theory, however, he kept in hiding for some fifteen minutes more, to see if the animal would recover his nerve and return. And in the meantime he examined his tackle, and baited his hook carefully.

At length, tired of the inaction, he slipped through the bush screen and cast his line. But not a bite did he get. He fished the pool faithfully on that side, right up to the tail of the rapids and down again to where the pool widened into sandy shoals. Then he concluded that the bear knew that pool better than he did, and that the good fishing was on the other side. He waded across, threw in his bait, just beyond the bear's rock, and promptly hooked a half-pound trout, which, thanks to his sturdy tackle and rough and ready methods, he was able to throw clear up the bank even as his predecessor had done. Having scrambled up to secure his prize he knocked it on the head, strung it on a forked stick—as was his custom in lieu of carrying a basket—and then fell to examining curiously the bear's collection of suckers, each of which bore on its side the mark of those raking claws. At this time of year, while the water was cold, he reflected, even the suckers were not too bad eating. And it was a pity to leave them for some rascal fox or lynx. He proceeded to add the best of them to his string.

Now it happened that the bear, after having torn his way through the sweet-smelling spring undergrowth till his panic terror evaporated, had paused to consider the situation. He had observed that fish soon died when out of water. By this time all those fish would certainly be quite dead. They would be incapable of making those horrid noises when bitten. Some such conclusion doubtless formed itself dimly in his primitive brain. After some hesitation, he acted upon it. He was hungry. He wanted those fish, which were his lawful spoil. The creatures of the wild have a keen sense of proprietary rights. He turned and began to retrace his steps—hesitatingly at first, but as he thought of that rascal fox or mink possibly enjoying the spoil he whimpered and began to hurry; and a growing anger surged in his heart. But he went cautiously for all that. The black bear is a wary and sagacious beast.

So it came about that he approached the scene of his recent discomforture just as Jack Bedloe started to add the suckers to his string. At the sight of the dreaded man-creature he stopped short. Of man he was mortally afraid. For a few moments, and behind a screen of bushes, from a distance of perhaps a hundred yards he watched Jack Bedloe even as Jack had been watching him some while before.

At first his impulse was to flee again. Then once more his anger, the righteous anger of one whose rights are being infringed upon, surged up within him. The man was stealing his fish. He forgot his fears—though not, altogether, his prudence—and came on again.

Suddenly Bedloe, with that sixth sense that life in the wildrness sometimes develops, felt in the back of his neck that hostile eyes were upon him and faced about suddenly. There was the bear in the open, not fifty yards away. Bedloe was startled. The bear stopped short and eyed him doubtfully. Then, after a moment's hesitation, resumed his advance, his little eyes wrathful and resolute.

Jack Bedloe was in a quandary. He had no great opinion of bears; but he was unarmed, and this bear seemed to lack the retiring spirit of his kind. He appeared inclined to assert his rights.

Bedloe reflected that, after all, he himself was a poacher—a thief in fact. He felt himself in the wrong, under the circumstances; though if he had had his gun with him he probably would not have been so sensitive to the rights of the case. He snatched one of the suckers from the string and threw it so that it fell almost at the bear's feet. The bear stopped and took a bite out of it. But he was not to be put off with one sucker, when they were all his by the law of the woods. He continued his deliberate advance.

Somewhat hastily now, Bedloe tore the rest of the suckers from the string and threw them in his rival's path, swiftly, one after the other; and as the bear stopped to consider them he slipped his own lawful capture, the half-pound trout, behind his back, and stood calmly leaning on his fishing-rod.

"That's all ye're agoin' to git," said he in loud, incisive tones.

The bear halted again, impressed by the authoritave voice. He gathered the fish into a pile with his great paw, hesitated a moment with his eyes on his adversary, then squatted down and fell to his interrupted meal.

With a distinct feeling of relief Jack Bedloe turned, very slowly, and very slowly retired down-stream. At the sandy shoals he crossed to his own side of the stream, retraced his steps up the bank and regained his original hiding-place. Here moved by a malicious and, as he felt, unworthy impulse, he once more put his fingers between his teeth and sounded his piercing whistle.

This time the bear, engrossed in his feasting, paid not the slightest attention. Jack Bedloe chuckled appreciatively.

"You win, son," said he. "I guess I'll do the rest o' my fishin' up above the rapids."

CHEAPER CUTS MAKE TASTY DISHES

By Etta Bitta Pye

ONE of the most economical ways of achieving a delicious and varied menu is to make use of the cheaper cuts of meat. Meat is always one of the largest items in any food budget. Expensive roasts, steaks, and chops are undoubtedly delicious, but there are many cheaper cuts which, with a little appetizing touch here and there, may be made into such tasty dishes that one wonders why the secret was not learned years before. Mutton, round steak, neck, and other of the cheap cuts of meat form the basis of some of the best recipes composed by leading dietitians.

A cheap roast, steak, or piece of boiling meat may be used for one dish and the next day the left-over portion may be utilized in some novel meat dish that will be regarded by the family or your guests as a real masterpiece.

A little touch of sugar in these dishes made from cheaper cuts will go a long way toward making the dish appetizing. Do not use enough to sweeten it, but merely enough to give that required added flavour. Sage, thyme, Worcestershire sauce, curry powder, tomatoes, mustard, onions, salt and pepper, all have their place in dishes of this kind.

Here are three dishes for delicious dishes that may be prepared from cuts of meat that are far from expensive. As a matter of fact, they are so much less expensive than some of the main-course dishes generally featured, that an extra green vegetable may be placed upon the table and you may still keep the cost of the meal below normal.

Mutton with Apples.

2 pounds mutton steak
3 apples
2 onions
1 tablespoon sugar
mint jelly

Cut the mutton into pieces convenient for serving. Trim off any superfluous fat. Roll each piece in flour well-seasoned with salt and pepper. Brown in a little fat in the frying pan. Arrange in a baking dish. Place sliced apples and sliced onions on top. Sprinkle with sugar, salt and pepper. Cover, bake in a moderate oven for one and one-half hours. Just before serving, spread top with mint jelly.

Stewed Ox Tail.

1 ox tail
2½ quarts water
4 carrots, diced
2 turnips, diced
2 onions, diced
1 large potato, diced
2 teaspoons sugar
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
salt and pepper
flour

Wash the ox tail. Cut in short lengths. Brown in its own fat. Cook the onions in butter. Add to the meat with 1½ quarts of the water. Simmer until the meat is tender In the meantime, cook the carrots and turnips in 1 quart of water for 10 minutes. Add to the meat, with the water in which they were cooked. Add also the potatoes, the Worcestershire sauce, sugar, salt and pepper. When the vegetables are soft, thicken the stew with a small quantity of flour mixed with a little cold water to a smooth paste. Cook until thickened.

Pilaf.

1 cup uncooked rice
1 cup round steak, ground
2 cups boiling water
2 cups canned tomatoes
1 onion
2 tablespoons butter
2 teaspoons sugar
salt and pepper
grated cheese

Fry sliced onion in butter until soft and yellow. Add to other ingredients. Cook the mixture in a covered baking dish until the rice is soft and tender. Uncover. Sprinkle top with grated cheese and bake until cheese is melted.

Will Be Second Baby Born at Rideau Hall

Ottawa.—Only once has a baby been born to the wife of a Governor-General while he was resident in Canada, and that was 58 years ago according to information available here. This fact is of particular interest in view of the fact that a child is expected to be born to Lord and Lady Bessborough after their arrival to take up vice-regal position.

It was on Saturday, May 17, 1873, that Lady Dufferin, the wife of Lord Dufferin, the second Governor-General of Canada, gave birth to a daughter, Victoria Alexandria, and although it is not recorded that the birth took place in Government House, it is assumed it did. In Lady Dufferin's "My Canadian Journal," the event is briefly recorded under the above date. It states: "A little girl was born this day, and the Queen has telegraphed that she will be her grodmother." Not since that day has there been a birth to a wife of a Governor-General in Canada.

Lady Dufferin's journal gives details of the christening. It was apparently a healthy baby, for on June 10 the following record is given: "We left Ottawa this morning very early, going to Prescott with our whole family, the new baby included." The next day they were in Quebec, and on June 16 the following entry was made: "The little baby's christening day. A large bouquet has been sent me in the morning, and beautiful flowers for the font. The cathedral was full of people. I had my whole six children with me, and they made a very good show. Lady Victoria Alexandrine Muriel May behaved admirably and slept soundly the whole time, in spite of the deluge of Jordan water."

Mr. and Mrs. Scrappins find themselves on a balcony where they can overhear spooners' conversation below.

Mrs.—"I think the young fellow wants to propose. We ought not to listen. Whistle to him."

Mr.—"Why should I? Nobody whistled to warn me."

WHOOPING COUGH

Whooping cough is really a serious condition. It is one of the communicable diseases, and it is passed from the patient to others in the secretions of the nose and throat.

Whooping cough, in the beginning, seems like a slight cold. There is running at the nose and a hoarseness or cough. After a week, the cough gets worse. The child coughs many times in succession, each fit of coughing being followed by a deep, sharp intake of air—the whoop.

The attacks may be violent and prolonged. The child vomits frequently after an attack of coughing. The inability to retain food, the loss of sleep and the consequent strain often result in the child's losing weight becoming very weak.

Whooping cough is serious because it weakens its victims to such an extent that other diseases, particularly pneumonia and tuberculosis, find their chance to attack, and they do, often with fatal results.

There would be considerably fewer sad results of whooping cough if people generally understood that it is a serious disease and that it should be treated as such. Very often children suffering from whooping cough do not receive the care they need and, as a result, they are much more likely to develop pneumonia or some other serious and frequently fatal disease.

A child suffering from whooping cough needs plenty of fresh air. Unless the weather is bad and he has a fever or some other condition which would keep him in bed, he should be out-of-doors every day. His room should be well aired, night and day, by keeping the windows and doors open sufficiently to provide for a gentle current of air through the room all the time.

If he vomits frequently, it may be found that smaller meals given more often will help.

Other persons must be protected, and so all secretions from nose and throat should be collected in old cloths or paper and burned. The dishes should be boiled and kept separately. The patient must be kept from coming into contact with others, particularly children.

Pertussis or whooping cough vaccine is used in the prevention and treatment of whooping cough. Its value has not as yet been definitely proved. Some believe that the results are encouraging enough to warrant its use. If your family doctor recommends its use, you should accept his advice.

As whooping cough is particularly dangerous in the first year of life, every effort should be made to protect the babies, and parents should never take a chance of allowing their baby to come in contact with children who have whooping cough or even colds, because what seems today to be only a cold may later turn out to be whooping cough or measles.

John: "What do you do when the brakes on your car give way?"

Bruce: "Hit something cheap."

ARE YOU GOING TO DRIVE YOUR AUTOMOBILE WITHOUT PROTECTION ?

The Highways Traffic Amendment Act of 1930 effective Sept. 1st, places a very heavy responsibility on the owner of a car.

AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE

DRIVE in SAFETY

with an Automobile Insurance Policy to protect you against the hazards of Fire, Theft, Collision, Property Damage and Public Liability.

Every Automobile Owner in Ontario should know about the new Financial Responsibility Law effective since September 1st. The new law makes necessary the abi lity to pay for damage.

In its general application, it requires that the motorist responsible for damage to person or property of others MUST PAY either personally or through insurance OR BE BARRED FROM THE ROAD.

The sensible thing to do is to carry Automobile Liability and Property Damage Insurance. It is better to have this insurance and not need it, than to need it and not have it.

People who depend upon their crops should not be without some kind of the above insurance.

The loss of crops and barns, sometimes dwellings, is a serious matter to all farmers.

The claims paid through this office, just recently, have been large.

We aim to satisfy our policyholders, and do our utmost on their behalf.

Possibly you believe that you are carrying enough insurance. Think for a moment what a total loss would mean to you. This, as you will admit, is quite possible.

Information regarding various forms of insurance glady given, you are under no obligation whatsoever, just call or write.

IN MEMORIAM

Servage—In loving memory of my dear wife, Mrs. Herbert Servage, who fell asleep in Jesus, April 1st, 1929.

Gone is the one I loved so dear,
Silent is the voice I loved to hear;
Too far away for sight or speech
But not too far for thoughts to reach.
Sweet to remember her who once was here,
And who, though absent, is just as dear.
God knows how much I miss you,
He counts the tears I shed,
And whispers, "Hush, she only sleeps;
Your loved one is not dead."
You left behind an aching heart
That loved you most sincere,
I never have and never will Forget you, Ethel dear.

Ever remembered by her husband, Herbert Servage.

Those Darn Smiths.

The teacher had punished Willie for talking by giving him the task of memorizing the surnames on two pages of the city directory.

It took Willie exactly three seconds to gain his liberty. He wisely opened the book at "Smith."
