Mets in Winnipeg to Seek Castrol Trophy

As this is being published, (on Thursday afternoon) the Morrisburg Mets, Junior B Lacrosse Champions of Eastern Canada, are approaching Winnipeg, where they will be competing for the Castrol Trophy, emblematic of the Canadian Championship.

Mets left town on Wednesday evening to entrain at Ottawa for the 'Peg, but not before they had been touted and tooted by a large group of fans, who, with the Morrisburg Legion Bugle Band leading the way joined in a noisy parade to cheer on their favourite athletes, who have suddenly become the favorites also with several hundred new fans who have watched this cinderella team come from behind so many times this season, to win their own league with only a single loss during the season; and then hammer the vaunted Quebec champions in both ends of a total goals series.

Going to Valleyfield on Sunday with only a two goal margin, Mets came from behind once again to take an 11-7 decision in the game and a 22-16 win on the series. But it was a costly win, for the Mets lost the services of young Donnie Mabo, one of their most consistent performers of the year, when he was racked up a gainst a steel post, and suffered a fractured jaw. However, by insistent pleading by the Mets' management, Donnie's doctor released him from Cornwall Hospital on Wednesday, in time to take the trip west with his team.

Scoring for the locals in their win on Sunday were Mick Mabo, Ralph Duvall, with a pair each; and singles to Brian McNairn, Gary Banford, Gino Cameron, Donnie Mabo, Steve Casselman, and Jim and Jack Notman. A point worth noting is that Gary Banford, a recruit from Iroquois, playing his first season of lacrosse, scored the winner in both games of this series.

At Winnipeg, the Mets expect to be paired first with Elora, the team that is the favourite with Western Ontario fans. Local fans however, have different ideas, and are quite confident that their beloved Mets are perfectly capable of scoring an upset, and picking up all the marbles, when the round-robin tournament is finished.

Prior to their departure, Mets received the following telegram from the Hon .Lucien Lamoureux, M.P. for Stormont-Dundas:

"Congratulatiions to the Morisburg Mets on winning the Eastern Lacrosse Title. Every good wish for continued success in your playdowns. We are counting on you to represent us in Winnipeg."

Last week, the team appealed for financial assistance, and a measure of their popularity was the way in which that assistance poured in. The management and players are most grateful to all the fans in the village and district who offered to help them.

THANK YOU—

To all the people in this area who have supported the Mets in any way, and to those who have made it possible for the team to represent Eastern Canada in the Castrol Cup Playoffs in Winnipeg this year:— Your support and generosity have been and are an inspiration to the club, and are sincerely appreciated.

THANK YOU!

The bride was attended by Miss Sharleen Lougheed of Thornbury as Maid of Honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. William Campbell of Toronto, sister-in-law to the bride, and Miss Judy Schmelefske, of Toronto. Joe Cougler is on Visit from Vietnam

Joe Cougler has been visiting his mother Mrs. Chesley Cougler while on convalescent leave from United States Airforce where his duties include aereal recognizance and motion picture photography. He has spent 17 months in Turkey on a classified mission and a period in Viet Nam where he was injured in action.

Joe reports that in Turkey the airforce station was 300 miles from Adana. the nearest city where horse carts are used as taxis. The population is 350,000 with 46 per cent Arabs, 42 per cent Turkish and Arabian mixture and the balance Turkish. He said that by our standards the people are very poor. The highest salary available is about 1000 lira, the equivalent of $100. However living is cheaper. A large loaf of excellent bread costs less than 3 cents and a full course dinner costs 35c, American money.

In Viet Nam Joe found the mail service most unpredictable with Christmas letters arriving in May or even later. People in that country are slower of thought and action than in Turkey.

Speaking of Turkish fod, Joe reported that bread is a delectable type of rye bread with a flavour all its own and is made in loaves at least twice as large as ours. Peaches and plums are luscious and delicious growing as large as grape fruit. However, he was not quite as enthusiastic over the mutten which is the popular meat.

The average age of a Turkish resident he noted, is about 38 years, due perhaps to the fact that sanitary conditions are most primitive and it is practically impossible for natives to maintain any degree of personal cleanliness.

Joe left last week for the airforce base at Louisiana where he will receive further medical treatment before returning to Viet Nam.

Eastern Corn Men Had Tour of Western Ontario

An intensive examination of the methods of growing and marketing corn employed by the highly successful Western Ontario corn grower was conducted by farmers from Eastern Ontario last week. A group of 41 Eastern Ontario corn growers whose current acreage planted to corn is in excess of 8,000 acres, made an extensive two-day tour of corn growing operations in Kent and Middlesex Counties.

The farmers visited 11 farms, both cash crop and integrated, a seed plant and the Ridgetown Agricultural College, after being flown from Ottawa to London on a cahrtered plane, courtesy of The Canada Starch Company Limited.

At each farm, the owner carefully explained his operation, methods through experience he has found to be successful, and then answered the barrage of questions coming from the visitors. Just about every means of drainage, soil preparation, fertilization, planting, weed control, harvesting and marketing were observed and the advantages and disadvantages of each discussed. The Western Ontario farmer frankly discussed with the visitors the many types of seed planted and the wide variety of equipment used in all phases of production.

The visiting group was possibly most interested in learning about the methods of harvesting, storing and marketing corn from their Western Ontario colleagues. The pros and cons of storing in cribs and allowing the corn to dry naturally in order to sell at a premium as opposed to using a picker-sheller, drying the corn mechanically, and storing or selling immediately, were thoroughly investigated.

Taken on a complete tour of the Ridgetown Agricultural College, the site of much of Canada's experimental work on corn, the farmers saw the various developments that are being studied. Work on soils, fertilizers, seeds and weed control, were thoroughly explained and recommendations were made by the head of each of the college's departments as the party toured the school's extensive corn growing experimental facilities.

The system of draining and pumping water from the low lying fields in Dover Township, possibly one of Canada's most fertile townships, was examined and explained. The Eastern farmers were particularly interested in this phase of the tour, as they too face a major drainage problem that can be relieved by the implementation of the Nation River Project.

At the conclusion of the tour, one

COLD LIGHT ON LOVE

One of the colder symbols in the field of love is the firefly's lamp.

Perhaps too few of us see fireflies in this era when the commonest eerie light is the bluish emanation from a television tube. But, back in the days when houses had front porches that supported creaky wooden swings fireflies were the cheapest nocturnal attraction available to a generation not yet surfeited by entertainment.

Fireflies are slender beetles capable of moving slowly in the air like a helicopter. While in flight, the male firefly blinks a signal from the lantern that is built into his abdomen. The light may flash yellowish or reddish, depending upon the species of firefly. The light may flicker rather rapidly, like the signal lamp on a ship offshire. Or, it may be a longer, slow glow emitted at a languid pace. At least one species of firefly leaves its lamp steadily lighted while it dips and rises through a U-shaped arc of flight.

The intermittent flashes from a dozen fireflies may interest front-porch sitters. But the fireworks display draws a more intense response from female fireflies that are hidden in the taller grass on or near the lawn. When a female sees the proper number of dots-and-dashes signalled by a gentleman of her species, she responds by turning on her lamp. Most females seem to be poor fliers, and some cannot fly at all.

The language of love among fireflies has interested scientists because there is no heat in it. In all artificial processes of generating light there is a heat by-product. Some types of bulbs generate less heat than others, but some degree of heat always is present.

The firefly's lamp contains a chemical called "luciferin." Mixed with luciferin is an enzyme known as luciferase. When the firefly wants to glow, it permits oxygen to enter tubes that lead to the lamp. The presence of oxygen is necessary to activate the lamp. The necessity of oxygen tends to add to the mystery of how cold light is produced, rather than to explain it. In all our processes of light production, it is the hotter ones that require oxygen—like the bonfire, for instance.

Hounding the hippies

One way of judging the calibre of municipal leadership is by watching reaction to the presence of hippies in a community.

If the reaction is hysterical, inconsistent and somehow out of focus with the treatment of other social problems, it can be assumed that maturity and judgment is absent in the council chambers.

The phenomenon of the hippies is a distinct social development of the 1960s. It is evidence of deep underlying problems in our society. Yet the reaction of too many political leaders is entirely punitive. Their idea seems to be either to punish the hippies for being that way, or to shove them on to some other town where they won't be blighting our property values or business turn-over.

One of the most laughable attitudes, and one which prevails especially in Toronto, is that toward something which Toronto's mayor Bill Dennison describes as the "hardened hippie." You see, there are really two kinds of hippies, according to these people. Those who are out for a bit of innocent weekend fun, and then the fierce, gruesome, "hardened" hippie who must be hounded and punished at all costs.

There is plenty of evidence around that most hippies come from homes where there are serious emotional and psychological disturbances. In most instances, they are fleeing parents who are unable to offer them the mature love and guidance which adolescents need.

Because their gathering in large numbers sometimes creates health problems (such as the hepatitis scare which upset businessmen in Toronto's Yorkville district because . . . well, not because some hippies were ill, but because that was scaring the money-laden tourists off), it is now advocated in some quarters that hippies be punished for being what they are.

Toronto obviously cares more about the welfare of cars then the welfare of people. Witness the decision of the Board of Control to deny a responsible local group use of an old firehall as a shelter for hippies. Instead, it will be torn down and used as a parking lot.

The suggestion in Regina by health minister John Munro that penalties for offenses involving marijuana be reduced has predictedly brought loud protests from police. Munro says flatly that marijuana is not a narcotic.

But it is not only in Toronto that civic leaders either cannot, or refuse to, recognize that the kind of social illness which produces hippies cannot be stamped out by punitive action. This is really very little different in principle from the medieval practice of chaining the insane and whipping them for good measure.

Montreal's mayor Jean Drapeau, the man whose initiative and imagination gave this country Expo and his city a major league baseball team, becomes hysterical when you talk about hippies. Hound them out of Montreal because they might offend tourists, he apparently believes.

In British Columbia, the city council of New Westminster, in an action for which it clearly has no constitutional right, bans the sale of a hippie paper on the streets because "it is not a family paper." The paper in question, the Georgia Straight, is only faintly pornographic compared to the thousands of hard core obscene and sick pocket books which are merchandised on every newsstand in that city.

There is growing support for the idea that municipal politics needs to be brought into some kind of mainstream of political life in this country, so that more mature people will be attracted to this important level of public affairs. The only way of doing this will be to establish party politics on the municipal level, to give some common sense stability and leadership to political decisions in local affairs.

DEAR DORIS
advice from Doris Clark

Over affection

DEAR DORIS — My husband is an only child, just 19. My personal opinion is that my mother-in-law is terribly jealous of me. She walks the floor saying how he could get killed, or catch pneumonia. She goes on like this until I am at the end of my nerves. One time she said to Tom, "I love you, Tommy, even if you are married."

She is continually kissing my husband and loving up to him. He hates it and it makes me sick. Doris, do you think she is jealous?

We are living in Blanktown now, in a suite of our own. I moved out of my in-laws' place in three weeks. That was enough for me. I just told them Tom was coming home and we should have a place of our own.

I wish we could be 1,000 miles away from them. Maybe you will think it is me who is jealous. Maybe I am, but I think they should turn loose a little and let Tom alone. But I think he must enjoy their worrying; he can't see my side of it.

Going Nuts

DEAR GOING — A bad case of smother love. Treatment? Large doses of affection and confidence to Tom from you. Tom will grow up in spite of a hovering Mom and Dad, as he shoulders family responsibilities.

Ma-in-law will get used to doing without him. Let her see, gently, that you are managing nicely alone. You are his Number One Girl now; you can afford to be gracious.

DEAR DORIS — My oldest girl is nine. She is careless, untidy. Where things fall, there they sit. When asked to tidy up, it takes her a long time to get there. She fools around till it's time to go to school, does a lot of talking, especially after being asked to do something; when asked why nothing has been done, she says she forgot.

She never offers to help and whenever there's little jobs in sight she's gone. My other two girls who are eight and seven, keep their things in order and get things done when asked. And it will amaze you how much they can help if they want to.

What amazes me is my oldest daughter will come and say, "Mommy, you sure keep things nice, your clothes are sure nice, your drawers are sure tidy!" Yet she can't seem to let it sink into her head that her things could be just as nice if each time she put things where they belong.

We don't favor any of the children. I hate to keep harping at her all the time. Will she ever change?

Ready To Give Up

DEAR READY — Oh, don't give up. You are her best hope.

This stalling may have started as an attention-getter, way back when the two little sisters were taking you away from Number One. Then it kept on as a bad habit.

If it is your attention she is after, try following up on her spoken admiration by letting her be with you while you tidy your drawers. Let her make some of the decisions when it comes to straightening things, or thowing away what is no longer useful.

Since she likes pretty things, promise her a pretty dress when she learns to hang up her clothes. A system of reward and companionship can be miracle-working.

DEAR DORIS — Our daughter is having a ring bearer (four years old) at her wedding. Could you please tell us how the ring is attached to the cushion? Where is he in the procession?

Wants Things Right

DEAR WANTS — If he bears the actual ring, fasten it to the cushion with a few silken threads.

He marches up the aisle just ahead of the bride and her father. Sometimes the real ring is safely in the custody of the best man, with the ring bearer just here for effect. If so, he may leave the procession as it reaches the mother's pew.

He does not join the recessional.

Local Couple Mark 68th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. John Wesley Crowder of Morrisburg celebrated 68 years of marriage Thursday, August 29, 1968. "Happy, content and very confortable" is 89 year-old Mr. Crowder's opinion of life in their modern two - bedroom trailer at Hill's Trailer Court, Morrisburg.

Mrs. Crowder, 85 pears o fage, is trim and springhtly, a top notch housekeeper and a cook who takes groups of visiting relatives who arrive near dinner time right in her stride. She admits to some objection on the port of her knees when it comes to polishing floors, and so for such tasks she has help. She reports that she has always been accustomed to hard work and is not happy when idle. For over forty years the couple farmed at Inkerman and Mrs. Crowder helped in the field, with milking and other chores.

August 1900 saw them married at Inkerman by Rev. John Peever. Their attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Dan Burley, the groom's sister and her husband. For a honeymoon trip they travelled by horse and buggy to Morrisburg to spend a day at the fair.

Mr. and Mrs. Crowder, who retired from farming almost thirty years ago, came to Morrisburg at that time. They are the parents of nine children, five of whom are living.

Thursday afternoon and evening they held open house for friends and relatives, at the mobile home. The lace covered tea table was centred with a tiered anniversary cake flanked by bouquets of summer flowers. Presiding were: Mrs. Bert Nicol of Chesterville, Mrs. Wilfred Crowder and their daughter Beatrice.

farmer likely best summed up what the group had learned. He said "We have seen and heard of just about every method of growing corn, but, what we have to do to be as successful as our Western Ontario counterparts, is to follow the generally accepted guidelines, and, in addition, continually experiment with fertilizers, seeds, methods of planting, weed control and harvesting, to establish what is best suited for our own farm and our specific corn-growing program".

NNITED CO-OPS TO BENEFIT FROM NEGOTIATIONS

United Co-operatives of Ontario will benefit from sucessful conclusion of negotiations now underway between International Minerals and Chemical Corporation and Central Farmers Fertilizer Company. UCO, the only Canadian co-operative member-owner of Central Farmers, would become more basic in its fertilizer operations in Ontario.

The negotiations with IMC are for the transfer of its Bonnie phosphate chemical fertilizer operations to Central Farmers Fertilizer Company. It includes the phosphate fertilizer units and the sulphuric acid plants which IMC operates near Bartow, Florida. The Bonnie complex has an annual capacity of 1.2 million tons of concentrated phosphate fertilizers and phosphatic feed ingredients.

IMC, a major world producer of fertilizer materials would retain the feed ingredients facility and supuply phosphate rock to the total complex. The company will continue to supply its own customers world wide with a full line of concentrated phosphate products.

Central Farmers is a Chicago-based company in the fertilizer manufacturing and distribution business. It is owned by 19 other regional co operatives as well as UCO, which purchase their fertilizer ingredients from Central Farmers.

The acquisition of this plant means that UCO will be basic in its supply of phosphate, potash, and nitrogen, the three major ingredients of farm and garden fertilizefs. UCO has five regional mixing and 15 bulk mixing plants in Ontario from which it supplies fertilizers to its branches and the retail farm supply co-operatives across the province.

WALL-TO-WALL CARPETING FOR SWIMMING POOLS

Just a year after a Kitchener, Ont., manufacturer introduced its indoor-outdoor carpeting, it is launching a campaign to encourage Canadians to use the carpeting in less conventional places — like the bottom of your swimming pool. reports Marketing. Kraus Carpet Mills report that Canadians are buying the product well enough but are "overlooking household areas which can be carpeted." One of these areas is the bottom of the family swimming pool to which the floor-covering can be applied with an adhesive that will hold fast through water and winter. "Leisure Turf", says a Kraus official, "is made of fibers that are practically industructible and they're comfortable to walk on and safer too. If you fall or stub your toe, you are far less lively to hurt yourself."

S. M. V. Signs Compulsory

Most Ontario motorists are already familiar with the bright-coloured triangle warning sign that the vehicle ahead is a slow moving vehicle.

Motorists who are not already familiar with the slow moving vehicle soon will be.

Up to now, the sign has been affixed voluntarily to many farm tractors and other implements by farmers concerned about their own safety and the safety of other users of the roads. Effective September 1, 1968, Ontario law will require ALL farm tractors and self-propelled farm implements, and any vehicle drawn by them, to carry the slow moving vehicle sign when operating on a highway.

A regulation specifying the official sign and its position on the vehicle has now been approved, the Ontario Department of Transport reports.

The sign is in the shape of a base-down, equillateral triangle, with with a 12½-inch base.

The sign is fluorscent yellow-orange in colour, with a dark red retro-reflective border, of a specified brightness. It must be bonded to a durable rigid water-proof-base surface.

It must be mounted base down in a plane perpendicular to the direction of travel of the vehicle and, where practicable, on the rear of the vehicle or combination of vehicles, at the centre of mass of the vehicle or vehicles. It must be no less than three feet or more than five feet above the roadway, and it must be clearly visible for a distance of not less than 500 feet from the rear of the vehicle or combination of vehicles.

Bare Headed Motorcyclists

Bare-headed motorcyclists will be banned from Ontario's Highways September 1st, when the change in the Highway Traffic Act, requiring operators of motorcycles AND passengers to wear helmets comes into effect.

Helmets must conform to new standards, announced today by Ontario's Minister of Transport, Hon. Irwin Haskett.

"In the past, we have encouraged the wearing of good-quality helmets," Mr. Haskett said, "but they were not required by law because there had been no standard that could be specified in order to make the law effective. However, new standards and specifications for motorcycle helmets were recently published by the Canadian Standards Association (CSA) and a regulation has now been approved in this province which will require motorcycle helmets worn by operators and passengers to conform to the CSA standards. Helmets must carry the monogram of the CSA testing laboratories."

For the convenience of motorcyclists, helmets now in use will be permitted until December 31st, 1969, provided that they have a hard smooth outer shell an dare lined with protective padding or fitted with other energy-absorption material. The helmet must be strongly attached to a strap designed to fasten under the chin, and the helmet must not be damaged.

After the December 31, 1969 deadline, helmets must conform to the CSA standard, with this exception . . . during the period from December 31, 1969 to December 31, 1971, helmets conforming to the requirements of the Snell Memorial Foundation or British Standards Institute will be permitted.

Organized living

It's customary to look forward to the end of holidays with a mixture of wistfulness and despair. They were too short; the weather was rotten; the kids all had the skitters; and you hate going back to that job that you hate.

But quite a few people go back to the routine of everyday, organized living with something like a sigh of relief.

Basically, men like work. They are not cut out for more than a couple of weeks of the gay, abandoned life of camping, swimming, fishing. These are treats to look forward to, and to look back on. But, like many of the other treats in life, they lose their flavor if taken in large, continuous doses. Even a kid gets sick of ice cream if he gets it at every meal for a month.

So the boys tote their sunburned carcases back to the job, and fall, reasonably happy, back into the comfortable round of daily work, the casual friendships with fellow-employees, and the good, long, lazy mooch around on weekends.

For the ladies, end of holidays is often sheer delight. Especially those with school-age children. No more cuts and scrapes to look after. No more summer 'flu to cope with. No more panic at the beach when Jimmie disappears for a few minutes. No more huddling in a tent while the rain pours down.

What joy to get everybody out of the house in the morning! What bliss to sit down with a quiet cup of coffee and taste the pure pleasure of privacy! What exquisite ecstasy to know that nobody is going to burst in with a, "Hey, Mom, Billy just fell off the porch on his head."

Like many another, I don't mind the end of holidays at all. Two months of muddling and piddling around degenerates almost any man to the level of a beachcomber.

Looking back each year, the sum total of my holidays fails dismally to impress me. Long, glorious days of fun in the sun. My foot! This summer was no different. I went fishing once in the bass-infested waters of Georgian Bay, fished all day, and caught a cold. I broke 100 in golf. Once. I poured several hundred drinks for visitors. Not a glorious record of achievement.

It's the things I didn't do that makes the impressive list. I didn't go on that canoe trip up north. I didn't jog for an hour every day to get in shape. I didn't go to the Stratford Festival. I didn't take off on that swing around to see all my old friends in the weekly newspapers. I didn't make that trip to Quebec City to see son Hugh. I didn't read War and Peace. The list is endless.

That's why the opening of school in September finds me almost eager to abandon this life of sloth and meet the challenge of all those young faces in the classroom. And challenge is the word for some of them. "I defy you to teach me anything."

But there are other things that make the opening of a school a pleasant occasion. Fellow-teachers are all brown and keen and friendly. By November they'll be gray and harassed and surly, but that's all right.

There are the new teachers, wide-eyed with alarm and confusion, who ask desperately, "But where do I send these forms? What do I do with the locker money? How do you teach a poem? Who do I see to resign?"

There are the first staff meetings, those symposiums which sparkle with the wit and eloquence of a grocery list.

But first and foremost, there are the thirteen hundred students, brown of face and limb, mini-skirted to the hilt, friendly, happy and excited as they greet old class-mates, make new friends and head for another milestone on their trek through life.

Don't ask me in February, but in September, I like it.

A Tasty Dish

MARINATE BEEF TENDERLOIN

Roast marinate beef tenderloin, served with butter egg nodles, is an easily prepared gourmet treat that's recommended by Vincent Manella, Chef de Cuisine, at the Sheraton-Brock Hotel in Niagara Falls. One of his favorite recipes, the ingredients given are sufficient for three persons.

The first step in preparing this gourmet recipe is to select a stainless steel container in which you can marinate 1½ lbs. beef tenderloin with:

Ingredients

2 cups of water
1 glass of sherry
1 medium onion chopped
1 green pepper chopped
6 chopped mushrooms
4 bay leaves
1 teaspoon of salt
½ teaspoon of black pepper

Let marinate stay for at least 12 hours before taking it out of the stainless steel container.

When you're ready to complete this recipe, bring your oven up to 350 degrees and have the following extra ingredients within easy reach

Extra Ingredients

2 tablespoons cooking oil
1 level teaspoon dry mustard
1 Oxo beef bouillon cube
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
butter egg noodles

Method of Completion

In a frying pan, put about 2 tablespoons of cooking oil and 1 level teaspoon of dry mustard. Rub this all over the beef tenderloin. cover the pan, put it in your 350 degree oven and leave it there for 30 minutes.

The next step is to take the beef tenderloin out of the oven and let it settle down for 10 minutes. It should be kept in a hot place until your sauce is ready.

Chef Manella says it's important that this sauce be made with the same marinate stock which you should now strain and put into a sauce pan. Add 1 Oxo beef bouillon cube and let the stock boil for 3 minutes, stirring constantly. At the same time that it's boiling, put ina a small quantity of butter roux to make it thick. The roux can easily have been prepared by blending 2 tablespoons melted butter with 2 tablespoos of flour.

Slice the beef tenderloin so that each piece is about ½ inch thick. Serve with your special gourmet sauce and with butter egg noodles.

"... I can't get up!"

Post Office Savings Bank Service Cancelled

The Post Office Savings Bank which was naugurated 100 years ago "to encourage savings among people of low and medium incomes", will be phased out, Postmaster General, the Honourable Eric Kierans announced today.

Starting September 3, no new accounts will be opened and no deposits accepted for established accounts. While all depositors will be requested to withdraw their money from the Savings Bank the closeout operation would be expedited if owners of inactive accounts would make application now to clear their remaining balances. The phase out is planned to span a sixteen month period during which time Parliament will be asked to consider legislation which will close the book on this chapter of post office history by January 1, 1970.

In the past Royal Commissions have recommended the closing of the Savings Bank as an economic measure but the Government of the day always took a second look at the service aspect and gave the institution a reprieve.

There can be no further extensions, the Postmaster General said, since the expanded services rendered by other financial institutions have made the operations of the Savings Bank economically unjustifiable. Interest rates higher than 2½% paid by other financial organizations, increased competition for savings and the improved transportation to larger centres have accelerated the decline in the Post Office Savings Bank deposits.

The Savings Bank was never a large operation and deposits today are less than half what they were 15 years ago when the system hit an all time high with deposits totalling $39.3 million. While there are 296 thousand accounts, 206 thousand of them have been inactive for over 10 years. Of the 90 thousand active accounts, 73 thousand have balances of less than $100.00.

Only 1,500 out of a possible 9,200 post offices are povidding banking service today. In 1,240 of these communities chartered banking facilities are available and in most of the remaining 260 communities some form of banking and savings service is provided through credit societies or other institutions.

My fearless forecast

The greatest aerial attack since the Blitz of Britain will take place at Toronto's Canadian National Exhibition field on Grey Cup day, when the Ottawa Rough Riders and Calgary Stampeders do battle for the battered mug which is emblematic of supremacy in Canadian football.

Only an unforseen catastrophe can prevent a meeting between these two giants of the CFL.

Earlier we wrote that four clubs: Ottawa, Calgary, Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Saskatchewan Roughriders were the premier teams in Canada. The reasons for this were listed.

Forget that column!

Calgary and Ottawa have shown such awesome power with "the bomb" that either of them could threaten world peace. These two teams are lethal weapons, and even in this nuclear age, nobody can push enough buttons to stop their course of total destruction.

Wally Gabler, the much-maligned quarterback with the much-maligned Toronto Argonauts, stated that no team would win a division with an impressive won-and-lost record. He predicted a division champion would be declared with a record of about eight wins in the east and around nine in the west.

In the east they play 14 games and out west it's 16 times for regular season play.

If either Calgary or Ottawa loses more than two games their winning opponents should be given saliva tests.

Russ Jackson (Ottawa) and Peter Liske (Calgary), if they continue their aerial circus, may establish passing records which will never be threatened in CFL history. They both are so pass conscious that a first down on an opponent's two-yard line doesn't constitute a running play over tackle.

Instead, either of them is more likely to drop back and throw a 30-yard pitch into the end zone.

Ottawa has one slight advantage over the Stampeders in that Jackson can marshall some semblance of a ground attack with his company of fine runners such as Bo Scott, Ronnie Stewart and Lovell Coleman.

Peter Liske's foot soldiers consist of one man — Ted Woods — and an eight-yard gain for him is exceptional. If Liske falters through the air the Cowboys from the plains are dead.

Both Calgary and Ottawa have rock-ribbed defences which are capable of containing their foe in the air or on the land. Even on an off day when their defences allow 25 or 30 points, it probably won't be enough.

The awesome power of the two offences is geared toward 40 and 50 point efforts. And this is the rule rather than the exception.

Both of these teams could hold their own in the American Football League right today. Perhaps they wouldn't win a championship, but you can bet they'd make it most uncomfortable for the top two teams. Most of their first stringers could catch a berth with teams like San Diego, Oakland, Houston, New York or Buffalo.

At this time we won't prognosticate on who will win the Grey Cup.

However, we think it would only be fair to predict a score. Weighing the facts carefully and judging both teams on the first one-third of the season, we would have to assume the following score to be reasonably accurate: 42-31.

If anyone doubts the validity of this fearless forecast they know the address.

P.S. Also, if you care to make any wager, please don't hesitate to do so.
