Village Council by Acclamation

Reeve— W. Hamilton.

Councillors—T. Houlehan, A.H. Forbes, I. Pelletier, Frean Hummel

The village nomination on Monday evening attracted a large number of the substantial ratepayers of the village who gave more than casual curiosity to learn just how the affairs of the village had been handled during the past year and to form an estimate of what might be expected for the next.

The following were nominated for Reeve—Wesley Hamilton, T. Houlehan, T. J. Ellis, W. B. Lawson, T. J. MrGee.

For the Council—A. H. Forbes, Frean Hummel, Chas. Chambers, T. Houlehan, W. O. Dixon, I. Pelletier, V. Robinson, Dr. W. A. Brown, H. Fulton, J. T. Kearns

In the meeting following the nomination, of which Village Clerk Elliot was chairman, Reeve Hamilton went over the work of the council in detail during the past year and also very fully into his work at the Counties' Council. He expressed his willingness to retire it Mr. Lawson could be induced ro accept the reeveship. The latter was not at the meeting and his feelings in the matter were not known.

Mr. Houlehan went very thoroughly into Hydro matters of which he was thoroughly conversant, giving much information on the matter leading up to the present new high rate which has been laid on the municipality.

Mr. Ellis spoke for some time and was given a good hearing but failed to get at any of the points which in the interests of the rate payers, appeared to be up for discussion.

Mr. McGee did not say anything further than that he did not intend to enter the contest.

Among the councillors nominated A. H. Forbes gave a brief account of the work of the old council in the matter of roads and bridges, while among the new nominees I. Pelletier was the only one who had anything to say.

For Public School Trustees the three former members of the board—Jas. Myers, C. T. Fulton and J. G. Tate were re-elected and I. N. Harper chosen to fill the unexpired term of Robt. McEwen, who is at present in Western Canada. The other member of the board is Dr. Miles Brown.

In connection with both Public and High School Boards, a state of affairs has come to be where the ratepayers are not given an accounting of what has been done with the money supplied to the boards during the course of each year. There is no feeling that the money supplied is not spent well and economically, but with tax bills mounting up year by year and the schools absorbing half of the taxes collected in the village, for their upkeep, it seems only reasonable that the ratepayers should be given a detailed statement of receipts and expenditures. In fact the strict observance of the law calls for such statement.

Winchester Township Nominations

Reeve—S. R. Fulton, acclamation.

For Deputy-Reeve— J. W. Bogart, Wm. Hamilton.

For Councillors—H. S. Carkner, J. H. Cumming, Ed. Gillard, Geo. Quart, W. A. Servage.

Winchester Township nominations were held on Monday at Winchester with a fairly representative attendance for the nomination proper, between the hours of twelve and one o'clock, when the following names were placed in nomination,

F... S. R. Fulton, J. W. Bog... irby, Jank Fraser and ...

R...eeve—Wm... ilton... Bogart, Jake... and J... ming.

For... cillors—Ed. Gil... Geo. Qu... J. H. Cumming, S. Carl... W. A. Servage, F... ward ... and Wm. McConnell.

A g... dance of ratepayer... was ... for the afterno... mee... ...unt... the... cot...

for the coming year.

Mr. S. R. Fulton was the first of the old council to take the platform taking up the matter of the county road system explaining that very little permanent work had been attempted during the past season, the greatest attention having been paid to general repair work, which had been allowed to get behind during the years of the war. He promised that more permanent work would be taken for another year as well as general repairs throughout the whole system. He also expected that with improved conditions as to labor more attention would be given to township roads as well as to certain drains, for the repair of which the money had already been levied.

Mr. Hamilton was not satisfied with the expenditures on County roads and thought value had not been received for the money paid out.

Mr. Quart and Mr. Gilliard were very brief in their remark, expressing dissatisfaction with the manner in which statute labor is performed.

Mr. Cumming did not remain for the afternoon meeting owing to the very serious illness of his daughter.

Mr. J. W. Bogart criticised the old council for disposing of the road roller which had been purchased by the township. He thought it could have been used to good advantage by the township in building its own roads. In his mind the dissatisfaction of the ratepayers with the county road scheme was because they felt they were not getting value for their money and that necessary repairs were not made.

Messrs. Fraser, Kirby and Rae each spoke briefly expressing themselves as being satisfied with the old council.

Mr. Jake Steen thought that too much was spent on the roads for the amount of good accomplished.

Messrs. Servage and Carkner also addressed the meeting very briefly, taking up drainage matters.

Mr. J. F. Ault, as a member of the Counties' Council made a short address in explanation of different phrases of the good roads system.

Each speaker was given attentive hearing and was well received, while very little criticism was indulged in.

U.F.O. Co-Operative Club May Purchase the Wood Mill at Smiths Falls

It is understood that the Smiths Falls U.F.O. Co-operative Club may purchase the Wood Company's property, including the water power, the big grist mill, the saw mill, the bakery and all the land included in what is known as the island. A number of the members met here a few days ago to inspect the property and were greatly pleased with it, as well as favorably impressed with the possibilities of it as a profitable business enterprise. The property includes a splendid water power, a first class flour and feed mill, a saw mill, a bakery and about three acres of land in the very heart of the town. The grist mill and the saw mill are the only ones in this vicinity and big business waits on them both. If the deal goes through the U.F.O, Club will come into possession of one of the most desirable properties in the town.

Boy Shot While Hunting Rabbits Near Cornwall

Lawrence Tyo, aged 14 years, son of Alexander Tyo of Glenwalter, a few miles east of Cornwall, passed away at the Hotel Dieu hospital on Saturday afternoon as the result of an accident on Christmas day. With two or three boys, Tyo went to a bush near Paragon, a neighboring settlement, about two miles from his home, to shoot rabbits. One of the boys named Paul Struthers, spied a rabbit and took aim, but the gun did not go off. Tyo was behind him and Struthers turned around to tell him the gun would not work when in some unknown manner the gun went off and the shot took effect in Tyo's left side. The unfortunate boy was hurried to the hospital, but the shot had penetrated the bowels and he died from blood poisoning.

Shot a Wolf

(Madoc Review)

At Millbridge yesterday morning while carrying her husband's dinner to the mill, about half a mile distant, Mrs. Wm. Howe met a wolf on the road. The animal barked at her several times, and, not wishing to run any risks Mrs. Howe turned back and went to the mill by another route. Securing a rifle she returned by the road watching for the beast. She met him and he met the contents of her gun. Mrs. Howe returned home victoriously carrying with her the body of the wolf and in true hunter fashion her gun slung over her shoulder.

In Great Demand

The portrait of the Prince of Wales that goes with the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal is in great demand. It is certainly the best portrait of the Prince we have seen. The Family Herald is simply deluged with orders from new and old subscribers. The yearly subscription price, including the Prince's portrait is only $1.25 if remitted for in December, and is the best value offered anywhere. It is said the Family Herald's subscription receipts are more than double former years. It is certainly worth the price and should be in every home in this country.

Business Hours

Elsie had been a very bad girl. In a violent temper, she had thrown a fork at her brother Willie, had smashed the teapot, torn her pinafore and kicked nurse. Wherefore, her mother marched her upstairs with the object of administering suitable punishment. Matters were at their most exciting point when little Willie, attracted by the yells and the chance of seeing some sport, opened the door and peeped in. But this was too much for Elsie. In her prone position across mamma's knee, she managed to twist round her head. "Willie", she cried, "go out! Can't you see we're busy?"

MOREWOOD

The Christmas entertainments of both the churches passed off very successfully though they were not up to the mark of former years. This was due partly to the prevailing epidemic of coughs and sore throats but more largely to the fact that the children's energies were taxed with too many concerts. Two noteworthy items of the programme in the brick church were the singing of little Miss Josie Spalding and the excellent address by Dr. Williams of Ottawa, with interesting stories of the Hudson's Bay and the Indians. Gordon Countryman and Harold Barker were presented by Dr. Philp with signet rings for active service overseas, in the name of the Red Cross committee.

At the Presbyterian S. S. concert nineteen pupils received prizes for perfect attendance during the year and four pupils for repetition of Scripture. The Superintendent reported a grand total of $246 contributed for missions. Four children received Junior membership certificates through the Crusaders Mission Band.

Mr. Wm. Swerdfeger was taken to Cornwall hospital on Wednesday morning for examination and treatment. We are pleased to know that the latest reports of his condition are very encouraging.

Most of our young people spent Christmas afternoon at Cannamore, spectators of the exciting hockey match between Morewood and Cannamore The final score was 6 to 3 in favour of Morewood.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Shaver entertained a large number of returned soldiers and lady friends on Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown of Montreal, were week-end guests of Mrs. T. E. Coulthart.

The Misses Iva Marcellus and Kathleen Fraser of Russell, spent a few days among their friends here.

Pte. Gordon Casselman of Kingston, spent Christmas week at his uncle's Mr. Donald McLeod's.

BETHUNE BUSH

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hodgson spent Xmas with Mr. and Mrs. H. Sullivan of Chesterville.

Miss Gladys Rice was a recent guest at her home at Winchester Springs.

Where the Hearer Scored

It isn't often that the man in the audience has a chance against the man on the platform, yet there are certain people who recall with delight an occasion when Billy Sunday was the victim of his own wit. An over-zealous convert, when the evangelist stepped upon the platform, gave way to a burst of applause. Not in the least disconcerted, Sunday pointed his finger at the culprit and remarked scathingly; "If I had as much ivory in my head as that man has, I'd start a button factory." But imagine his chagrin when the man in the audience stood up and retorted; "And if I had as busy a mouth as the preacher, I'd start a buttonhole factory.

Tell us About it

The other day a perfectly nice young lady accosted us and with tears in her voice reproved us for not mentioning the fact that a friend visited her during a recent holiday. We told her that she did not let us know that she had a visitor. Then she said, "Well you should have known, I thought you were running a newspaper?" Wouldn't that rustle you?

Some people think that an editor ought to be a cross between Argus and Annie Eva Fay. They seem to think that our five senses are augmented by a sixth that lets us know everything that happens, even if we hear, see, feel, taste or smell it not. Dear ladies, editors are only human. If you have a friend visiting you, if you are going away or have returned from a visit out of town, if Willie breaks his arm if your husband chops his toe instead of a piece of wood, if anything happens to make you glad or sad, happa or mad, call us up. Tell us about it. That's the way to get it in the paper.

Pals of the Bluebirds

In the news correspondent of the daily press about the middle of September there appeared a little story of kindness to nesting birds that should cause any reader to feel pride in belonging to the same race of beings as the mail carriers who figure so humanely in the incidents narrated.

"Friends of small creatures", says the correspondent, "would laud Raymond Taylor, a rural mail carrier here (at Kinston) could they know the patience he has exercised toward a host of bluebirds the past few months. Route No. 3, Taylor's seems to be a favorite with the birds. They have built innumerable nests in the mail boxes along it. Taylor has endeavored to spare the nests, and the farmer owners have manifested the same consideration. 'Jap' Horner at Hines Junction, for instance, tolerated three different nests in his. As fast as one brood would be hatched and the nest torn out by Horner, another would be built. Horner finally told the bluebird mother to carry on and not mind him at all. Sometimes when Carrier Taylor has approached a box, sitting birds have disregarded him entirely, seeming to place unlimited confidence in him.—North Carolina Education.

Winter Application of Barnyard Manure

The winter handling and care of barnyard manure has been a much discussed problem for the reason that there has been considerable difficulty in finding a practical solution. It is all very well to recommend methods that will curtail the loss of valuable plant food constituents, because that is a most important factor requiring every consideration, but, unless the plan can be carried out in a practical way by the farmer with the remnants of labour left to him demanding two prices for half work, just so long will such suggestions be unheeded.

The pros and cons of different methods of conservation have been all threshed out, including storing in box-stalls and manure pits or sheds: piling in large heaps in yard and field; hauling to the field and distributing in small piles and spreading on the field direct from the stable. Each has one or more advantages but when considered from a present day practical standpoint some will not 'pass muster". (1) The box-stall and manure pit method is a most desirable practice since there is a minimum loss of valuable plant food constituents. (2) Piling in yard and field hardly meets this requirement since the piles leach away the best of their valuable plant food through a winter's wasting. (3) The distribution of manure in small heaps has an advantage over methods one and two since hauling can be done during winter when the cost of this operation is much less than at a busy season of the year and facilitates the work being done on time. The chief disadvantage is that there is an uneven distribution of fertility in the soil hence uniform crop since, invariably, the soil where the heap had been is richer in the more soluble elements of plant food. (4) The last, but by no means the least, satisfactory of the methods under discussion is that of spreading irect from the stable to the land. The outstanding advantages which this method has over all others are (a) That the labour required in handling is reduced to a minimum. (b) That the sooner manure is spread on the land after being made the greater is its value. There are, however limitations of conditions which will permit of this practice. Preferably the land should be fairly level and, if hilly, should not be frozen when application is made. Low-lying land, too, subject to flooding is an undesirable location for winter spreading.

Direct spreading has been adopted on many progressive farms and is worthy of consideration on many others. It is suggested, therefore, that the manure sleigh be pulled under the litter-car and the "direct-to-the land system" given a trial this winter. By spring an experiment will have become a custom and one only appreciated to the full when the struggle to maintain production begins, especially by those farmers who must take up the belt another notch to go ahead upon their second or third wind while the rest of humanity is squabbling whether it shall work eight hours or not at all.

A Profitable Production

A very profitable branch of farming, and one which may be carried on by almost anyone and without very great expense, is the honey business. The price of honey is double and treble what it was four years ago. In these days of sugar scarcity a plentiful supply of this wholesome and popular substitute for canned fruit would be very acceptable. Canada, with its vast stretches of field crops, and still vaster stretches of flower-growing wild land, is a country where honey can be produced in almost unlimited quantities. The fact that bees are kept successfully in every province is proof that as a productive industry it is capable of indefinite expansion, and in all parts of the Dominion. Considering the variety and profusion of Canadian flowering plants and trees, Canadian honey ought to be as well known on the markets of the world as Canadian maple sugar and Canadian cheese.

The Artless Farmer

One of those country gentlemen who owns a farm in Brown County, but lives in Indianapolis and only spends his week-ends on the farm, asked one of his neighbors down in Brown: "Did you know that T. C. Steele sold the picture that he painted on your farm?" The farmer made no reply to this and then the country gentleman told him the price Mr. Steele got for the canvas. "I just wish I had known the feller liked the place well enough to pay that for a picture of it"' the farmer said, "I'd a' sold him the farm for $200 less than that.

LEGAL BIG "WIGS."

Judges' Clothes Are Costly In the Old Land.

In England judges of the High Court, who are the highest-paid legal dignitaries, wear what are known as "full-bottom dress wigs." These wigs have long flaps at the sides that fall over the front of each shoulder. Each flap is adorned with rows upon rows of curls.

The top of this type of wig is a mass of short, dirty grey, frizzly, upright hairs.

A High Court judge's wig costs anything from £15 to £30. It is made of bleached horse-hair, and will last for many years, although the services of a wig-maker are commissioned periodically to recurl and refrizzle the frizzy part.

Correspondingly shorter and smaller wigs are worn by lesser judges — those presiding over the lower courts. They are termed "bob-wigs," reach just above the ears, and have no imposing sideflaps. Also, they have only two little vertical curls at each side, the rest of the wig being frizzled.

The best "bob-wigs" cost judges about £10 each, but cheaper ones can be bought for about £5.

Wigs worn by criminal judges are distinguished from those of civil judges by a little patch of black horse-hair on the top.

The neatest-looking wigs in the profession, and certainly the most comfortable to wear, are those donned by barristers. They are small and have two longitudinal curls over each ear.

A barrister who is dignified by the letters K.C. (King's Counsel) after his name wears an additional curl over each ear. Barrister's wigs cost about £5 each.

The robes of a High Court judge are gorgeous and imposing. They are made of rich silks and trimmed with ermine. The cost of these magnificent robes is often as much as £100, though they can be bought for about £60. Then, too, High Court judges carry, but never wear, large, three-cornered hats.

Judges who preside over lower courts wear much less gorgeous robes and do not carry three-cornered hats. A barrister's gown is made of black alpaca or some similar material, known as "stuff" in the legal profession. It is only when a barrister has become a K.C. that he may don a gown of silk.

For this reason a King's Counsel is often referred to as a "silk."—London Tit-Bits.

Ghost Causes Strike.

The strike weapon has been invoked for some very odd reasons, as, for instance, when in 1875 hundreds of the Warwickshire miners stopped work owing to the alleged presence in a disused shaft of a "luminous boy." The strike lasted nearly a year, and cost £30,000, when it was proved that the "ghost" was nothing more than a collection of fungi.

A woman employed as a messenger at one of the collieries near Oswestry was the innocent cause of another strike.

As she commenced her day's work betimes she often met the miners on their way to the pit, and as the men considered it a bad omen to meet a woman first thing in the morning, trouble arose.

By threats and persuasion they tried to get the offending female to give up her job, and, failing in this, they went in a body to the manager and flatly refused to go down until the woman had been dismissed.

All the mill-girls in a certain Yorkshire town once refused to work because their employer had painted the windows of their workroom facing the street, thus shutting off their view. This infringement of feminine curiosity was vigorously protested against, and finally they triumphed, and the paint was removed.

Nature's Fireless Cooker.

Out in New Zealand when they want a bit of soup, or are ready to have a boiled dinner they don't bother their heads about starting the fire, and the most eloquent of salesmen could never sell them a gas range, for the women folks who dwell in Whakarewarerva—which is quite unpronounceable—have a fine ready-made fireless cooker in the shape of a boiling spring.

Undoubtedly the fire is there but it is so deep down in the heart of the earth that no one has to bother to rekindle or stake it, and the water in the spring is always boiling hot, and the edges where the water is shallow are always set about with pots and kettles for the neighborhood.

At the Commercial Museum it is said that, while boiling springs occur in many parts of the world, it is the New Zealanders who use them as perpetual fireless cookers, and find this method cooking in hot water an excellent one.

As a matter of fact, it is the most modern and up-to-date of all ways of preparing food, that of packing it in utensils and then setting them in boiling water, but with the New Zealanders it is the oldest method because it is the way provided for them by nature herself.

China's Open Door.

The "open door" as applied to China means an open door for trade, or equal opportunities for all. The phrase was coined to describe a policy formulated by the American Secretary of State many years ago and upon his motion accepted by all the powers as just and equally fair to all.

Careless use of Gasoline Results in Injuries

(Carleton Place C. C.)

A very serious and painful accident occurred at the residence of Miss Kate Burroughs, Bridge street, Saturday morning, when she was very painfully burned. She was using gasoline to clean a tapestry covered couch and as the gasoline was in an open vessel and near a floor register it ignited. The flames took root in the unfortunate lady's hair, but after patting her hair for sometime she succeeded in extinguishing the blaze. By this time other parts of her clothes had caught with the result that she sustained fearful burns. Seeing that she was to have a stiff battle with the flames, Miss Burroughs did all in her power to extinguish them and as a last precaution pulled the chennile arch curtains down and rolled herself in them then rolling on the floor. Mr. White had seen the flames through the window and started out from his shop to see what was the matter. As he was about to enter the house, Miss Burroughs came to the door and called "Fire" with the result that the house was soon occupied by a great number of people when the blaze was extinguished. Though considerable damage was done to the furniture, etc., the greatest injury was received by Miss Burroughs. Her condition proved so serious that she was removed to a hospital in Ottawa that morning, where she is receiving treatment.

Church Advertising

This is the advertising age", says the Renfrew Mercury, "and advertising is spreading in directions undreamed of a decade ago. One of the most notable examples is that of church advertising. Up until a few years ago many churches did no advertising, and those that did usually confined their appeals to a half dozen lines.

"Nowadays in the cities the church page is a regular feature of the Saturday edition and the display advertisements of the churches are prepared as carefully as the merchandising advertisements.

"In the city of Brantford, for instance, the church announcements have grown from a few inches to be a whole page, and all the churches in that city use from two to six inches each week in the local paper. And why not? There are hundreds of people in every town and city who belong to no particular church, and who seldom enter the sanctuary. If the church has a message for these people it should invite them to come to hear it.

"In this day of countless distractions the church has got to make the invitation general and hearty, and its services attractive, if it is going to fill the pews".

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reached the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed. Deafness is the result. Unless the the inflamation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed for ever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

W will give One Hundred Dollars for any of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Dure Circulars free.

Cut Chore-Time in Half

Do you realize that an average farm uses one ton of water a day? How long are you going to handle this tremendous bulk by old-fashioned, wasteful methods?

Modern farmers let the wind pump and distribute their water. They cut chore-time in half. They have running water in the house, the barn and stables, and pasture.

Not with old-fashioned windmills. But with big, sturdy, efficient double-geared Toronto Windmills, constructed throughout of galvanized steel, strong and rust-proof.

A Toronto Pump and a Toronto Water-System, combined with a Toronto Windmill, gives you a real city water service.

Toronto Pumps and Water Systems can also be supplied with a gasoline engine or electric motor.

Our Windmill, Pumps and Water System booklets show you how to cut out waste time and energy on your farm—how to make more money. Write for them. They are sent free.

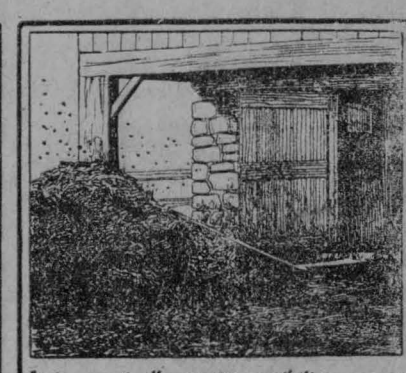
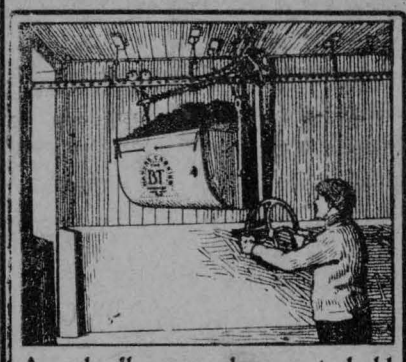
Day in and day out, the hard work of cleaning the stable has to be done. Stable cleaning with a wheelbarrow is a monotonous, hard, disagreeable chore. It is hard to wheel a heavy wheelbarrow load through a muddy yard and up a slippery plank. And the worst of it is, this hard, disagreeable chore has to be done every day.



It is practically an impossibility to get the manure far enough away from the stable. The conditions in the yard make it impossible. Manure piles right up close to the stable give off ammonia fumes that spoil paint and woodwork, rot harness and at the first opportunity breed flies.



A wheelbarrow does not hold much at a load, which means many trips before the work is done. The BT Carrier holds three times as much as a wheelbarrow. It will tackle 800 lbs. in one load.

The hard work of cleaning the stable is cut in two with a manure carrier. It runs on overhead track so it does not matter about the state of the yard. No planks to lay; no snow to shovel; no more pushing to the top of the pile with a wheelbarrow.

Counterfeit Canadian 10 cent pieces have been put in circulation in large numbers in London. The coin is of the same size as 10-cent pieces and an excellent counterfeit. The bogus money is made of aluminum and lead and has a very shiny appearance. The edging is almost perfect and the die work is very clear. The coin is marked 10 cents, Canada, 1918 It is almost impossible to distinguish the counterfeit money from the ordinary 10-cent piece, but sounds different to that of a real coin. The coin appears to have been made recently and it is possible that they are manufactured in London. The leaves on the counterfeit money are smaller than the ones on a real 10-cent piece. Hands Up!

By RALPH BEACH WALL

(Copyright.)

There was wild, unsubdued fire in her eyes. By the way she threw back her head and shouted to her mount, a sleek cayuse, one could tell at a glance that she was a girl of spirit, who did things.

Bess was not accustomed to riding alone through the gorge trail, covered only by a stage from Silverhead, a neighboring mining town. Usually Phil rode wtih her.

It was half in anger toward him that she had chosen the lonesome, some said dangerous, route.

She had seen Phil two hours before, and, as usual, had shouted an invitation for him to ride with her.

"Can't! I'm busy today. See you later," he answered, waving his hat to her and galloping on.

There was something in his eyes that bothered the girl, when she remembered it. It was for that reason, half an hour later, Bess had chosen the lonely gorge road.

She wanted to be alone, to think about Phil, and weigh her father's doubts about the young fellow, who seemed to do nothing save idle his time away, and who had never been caught working since he had struck town two months before.

Why did he occasionally go off on his horse alone, and not come back till the next day? Who were the city men he often met at the daily train, and sometimes went on with for a day or two?

He had never explained his business to Bess.

The night before he had asked her to marry him. The thought had come to her so suddenly that all she could do was ask for time.

"I will answer you tomorrow evening," she had said.

She could not understand his urgency, the eagerness in his voice.

"But I have many things to think of," she protested. "You know how father is opposed to you. It's partly because you look city-bred, and still know horses and mining so well. He seems to be almost suspicious of you."

"I can easily clear up any suspicion," he had answered confidently. "But I want my answer now. Tomorrow may be too late."

Why had he repeated that ominous warning? Had he planned anything for today? Was he in danger of any kind?

At that moment the rumble of wheels behind her caused Bess to turn. She had already reached a lonely spot in the gorge, some miles from town.

It was the stage from Silverhead, carrying its cargo of silver and passengers, winding through the gully, cut sharply between high cliffs. The four horses were straining at their load, and coming along at a smart clip.

Bess whipped up her horse to gain a wider part of the road, where the coach could pass her.

The passage was uneven and full of rocks. Riding being difficult, the girl bent all her attention on the steed.

At a sharp turn in the road something scared the skittish cayuse. A second later the animal shied at a big bowlder confronting them, and Bess was hurled through the air, over his head, landing in a jut in the wall.

Her revolver flew from her belt with the jolt, and the frightened cayuse galloped on alone.

When the girl pulled herself together she found that the horse had thrown her into an opening, a little pocket in the natural stone wall at the turning which commanded a view of the road on both sides of the sharp corner.

She glanced out, and found the stage drawing near at a rapid rate; then, looking in the opposite direction, Bess saw her cayuse galloping madly, already half a mile away.

The revolver that had jolted loose was the next thing to attract her attention, and she was about to slide down and recover it from the ledge, two feet below, when a quick movement attracted her in the direction her horse had taken.

The girl's eyes dilated and she seemed frozen to the spot, as she watched three masked horsemen nearing the gully road through a narrow defile down one side.

In a moment Bess realized. The stage was thundering on.

She slipped forward to get the gun. The stage was not a hundred yards off.

Bess glanced apprehensively at the three grim horsemen, partly concealed behind a bowlder at the roadside.

The hand reaching for the revolver drew back sharply. She caught in her breath with a convulsive gasp.

Bess had recognized in that instant the leader of the bandits.

It was Phil.

Around his neck was the very handkerchief she had spent weeks embroidering for him, every stitch an expression of love and faith.

Then her eyes glinted like blue steel. Her teeth snapped together, and she made a quick grasp for the revolver.

With it secure in her hand, she hesitated but a moment; then, her cheeks white and lips drawn, she steadily aimed the revolver at her unsuspecting lover, who, with his men, awaited the stage.

There was the love of a savage and the hate of a savage in her expression. She had found out her lover at last, and had instinctively pointed the gun at him.

Bess' left hand clenched so that the tendons showed white through the skin, and the forefinger of her right hand twitched on the trigger.

Before she realized the trembling finger gave a jerk and pulled the trigger. There came a slight click, but nothing more.

The hammer had become jammed by the jolting received when it fell from her belt.

Glancing up, her wits scattered by this sudden discovery, she saw the stage rolling past the gap.

It was too late. The gun had failed, and the stage had passed before she could give the warning.

"Hands up!"

The gruff growl made Bess grow faint, and her eyes swam. For in it she recognized the same tone that she knew so well in Phil's voice, but it was so brutal, so different.

She watched, with a stifling throat and heaving bosom, as a shot rang out from Phil's gun and the driver, who had not obeyed the summons quickly enough, tumbled from his seat and flopped onto his back in the road.

Bess sprang to her feet, aflare with madness. Her wits worked rapidly; she must do something to cope with his brutality.

The bandits stopped the dashing horses, and in a moment a trembling party of travelers filed slowly from the stage.

They lined up in a row, their hands high above their heads.

Bess gave a strangled gasp, a sudden impulse seized her, and she leaped to the road, her revolver clubbed and clutched tensely.

With blind fury she flew to the hold-up scene, her nostrils dilated, her eyes red-rimmed.

The leader evidently saw her coming. He darted forward, and a minute later Bess found herself struggling and fighting in his strong arms. He knocked the revolver from her hand and tried to explain something in eager words.

But she would not listen. She screamed with rage and tore at him; his very touch was the blight. His hands seared her wherever they rested.

In the meantime his companions continued their work and paid no attention to him.

With a wild gleam in his eyes, Phil suddenly forced her back and held her tightly explaining to her, trying to get the girl to listen to his defense.

Through sheer weakness Bess finally had to listen. Then the words had their effect. Her eyes gleamed, she looked at him squarely and became more quiet.

"Wait here!" he cried suddenly. "I'll go back and get the stuff. Wait here for me."

As he dashed off Bess sank to the ground, utterly spent, and she lay sobbing weakly, while her lover rushed back to the frightened group of travelers, swooped up the valuables, tied them in a wide handkerchief, mounted his horse, fired several shots in the air, and swung down the trail to where Bess sat in a heap, wondering trying to reassure herself that all he had said was true.

Half a mile from the holdup scene he drew rein abruptly and turned to Bess with a reassuring smile.

"I had to go this far," he explained. "They need a slide in the picture of the bandits getting away, and I guess mine was some picturesque getaway.

"Your butting in helped the picture a good deal, Bess. They'll change the idea and label this part: 'Wife Pleading With Bandit Chief.'"

"Phil," she said, looking up with yearning eyes, in which the slightest suggestion of a smile was beginning to glow, "is it really true? I know it must be. But the thing seemed so real at the time. I never saw a moving picture taken before."

"Well, it won't be the last one you'll see taken, I hope," the man smiled, wiping her tear-stained face with the handkerchief she had made for him.

"That's my business. The people in the stage-coach and my confederates are all actors; the man who did the stage-fall from the driver's seat is my brother. We're in partnership in the business."

"But why didn't you explain all this before?" queried the girl, the smile succeeding in erasing some of the tragic tensity of her features.

"Well, people are curious about moving pictures; they want to butt in and see them taken. That spoils the whole thing, and I didn't want to be bothered."

"Haven't I bothered you, Phil, just a little?" she asked, the smile asserting itself boldly for the first time.

"You've bothered me more than anything has for a long time," he cried, reaching toward her eagerly.

"Well," she said, having recovered her natural spirit entirely. "I guess I'll fix it up with you and a justice of the peace, so I can have the exclusive privilege of bothering you all the rest of your life."

"So you've made up your mind at last," he cried, inclosing her in a tender embrace.

She threw off his arms playfully and spurred the horse into action; they galloped back to the moving-picture party and announced their engagement.

Then Bess told of how she had almost tried to kill the bandit chief, assuring them, however, that even if the hammer hadn't been jammed, she couldn't have hit him with such a trembly hand.

The German Badge of Cruelty.

In the Canadian war trophies exhibit is a winter head-dress which belonged to Prince Joachim, the Kaiser's youngest son. This head-dress is topped with a huge bunch of "aigrette" plumes.

What could be more suitable tor a German princeling's hat than this badge of cruelty? What woman in Canada wishes to follow his style and flaunt similar plumes before the eyes of many who know the story of the egret?

In case you have never heard the reason for calling an egret plume the German badge of cruelty, a little of the sordid story is told. Some of the most beautiful birds on this continent have been reduced to a piteous remnant to provide these plumes.

The species which has suffered most in North America to provide the "aigrette" plumes of commerce have been the Egret and the Snowy Egret, which is also called the Snowy Heron. Both species are believed to wander northward after the breeding season and have been recorded from several of the provinces of Canada in the late summer. These beautiful travellers might be more numerous and of more than accidental occurrence in the north if these two species had not disappeared as breeding birds in the middle United States.

If we suppose that the birds, which occur occasionally in Canada, come north from the most northern rookeries, we are less likely to see these birds here now when the most northern colonies are in North Carolina that when the northern rookeries were in New Jersey or Wisconsin.

They now breed from North Carolina southward to Chili and Argentina. Although they are protected in North America by treaty between the United States and Canada they will be slaughtered elsewhere in their range as long as their plumes are in demand in the feather market, and this demand is created by the use of their plumes for millinery purposes.

The plume hunter visits the nesting ground of the Snowy Heron, or of the Egret, as the birds grow these plumes only during the nesting season, and kills the old birds as they return to feed the young birds in the nest. The young are left to starve and the plume hunter, after cutting the "osprey" or "aigrette" plumes from the parent bird, leaves its beautiful body to rot in the swamp where it made its home, while he pursues his bloody course.

Nor has the plume hunter stopped at bird slaughter. The Audubon Society appointed a warden to guard a colony of Egrets at Cuthbert Rookery, which was located in Southern Florida. His name was Guy Bradley and he lived on a coral key with his wife and two babies. The plume-hunters shot him dead and then shot all the adult birds in the rookery to obtain the snow-white plumes—perhaps the identical ones that were used to ornament the winter head-dress of the Kaiser's son and also the fashionable hats of many women in this country.

Remember the cruel side of the "aigrette" story whenever you see the dainty feathers, remember the slaughter of the old birds and the starving young ones and remember the murder of the warden who was faithfully guarding the birds in his care, and the very sight of a spray of "aigrette" feathers will fill you with loathing.

Although much has been said and very much written about this subject of the egret it is doubtful whether the public conscience is yet awakened to the wrong and cruelty which has been connected with the traffic. The following incident is mentioned to emphasize the point.

At a motion picture theatre was shown recently a series of very beautiful views of the snowy herons and egrets at home. Creatures of marvellous grace, they were, and one could only believe that people, who buy their bridal plumes, and thereby pay for their destruction, do not know of the devastation they cause in the egret rookeries. It is certain that everyone who saw those birds, so realistically pictured in their native haunts, was lost in adimration of them.

The very next film shown on the screen portrayed an actress dancing for an enchanted audience. It was surely a strange coincidence that in her coiffure was fastened a spray of aigrette plumes of truly barbaric proportions.

How many watching those two pictures knew the story of the slaughter of the beautifnl and innocent birds to provide that head-dress.

Fortunately, it is now contrary to law to import the plumage of these birds into Canada. Canada and the United States have agreed by treaty to protect many beautiful and useful forms of bird life and this treaty is being adequately enforced in both countries. All the herons, to which family the egrets belong are protected throughout the year in both countries. Severe penalties are provided in Canada for buying, selling, or having in possession any portion of these birds.

It is hoped that in this instance civilization will triumph over barbarism and that the German badge of cruelty will disappear from our midst.

Improvement Everywhere

A farmer's good wife, blessed with a sense of humor, says The Southampton Beacon, writing to her father the other day, declared that already there had been a great improvement in farm conditions, since the women got the vote. The cows were giving more and richer milk; the hens were laying larger eggs, the pigs were cutting down on the squeal and adding to their weight; the hired man was acquiring the habit of getting up at first call instead of sleeping half the morning away and not being on deck till 4 a. m.; the rats in the bin were sorting over the grain and eating only the cull stuff; the windmill runs with a less amount of wind; it takes fewer apples to make a barrel of cider; fisteners on the rural telephone find the gossip juicier; the water in the creek doesn't get so muddy after a rain, and so on right through, one improvement after another.—Exchange.

Sometimes Better

Bobby, just home from his first visit to the country, was telling the folks of its wonders. "And say, ma," he said, "out on the farm they get milk from cows, and its just as good as any."

Ormond, Jan. 6th, 1920.

MOREWOOD

Miss Edna McGregor arrived home from the West on New Year's Eve.

Miss Cameron and Miss Eva MacMillan of Finch, were the guests of Miss Jennie Smirl for a few days.

The opening event on our new skating rink was a lively game of hockey on New Year's afternoon between Chesterville and Morewood when the home team scored 7 to 2. There was a good crowd of enthusiastic spectators and it was very interesting to see so many of the old veterans of the Garnet and Grey together once more on the ice such as Hubert Shaver, Donald Gollan, Douglas Hunter, Kellock Moffatt, Grant McGregor and Gerald Bouck. Among the younger players who are going to keep up the credit of the old team in future we notice Lyle Loughridge and Leslie Marcellus.

The holiday week has been a very gay one this week—a party every night and some nights two to attend.

Donald and Ian Gollan spent a few days at home at New Year's.

We all regret to learn of the sudden illness of Mr. Matthew Wilson, an esteemed elder in the Presbyterian church here.

Ray Meyers was home for the week end and received his gold signet ring from the Red Cross Committee for his services overseas.

Mr. William Swerdfeger returned from the Cornwall hospital on Saturday evening very much improved.

We are sorry to report Charlie Coulthart on the sick list, confined to bed with an abcess on his leg.

ELMA

Mr. and Mrs. H. Thorpe and Mr. Thomas Nesbitt of Winchester Springs, were guests of Mr and Mrs. R. Harper on Wednesday.

Mrs. Earl Froats and little daughter spent a few days at her home here.

Mrs. W. A. McMillan and her little sons have returned home from their holidays spent at Hallville.

Mr. R. H. McKay of Regina, Sask., was the guest of his sister Mrs. R. Harper New Year's week.

Miss Marion Sullivan has returned to her studies in Otttawa.

Miss Rubena MacGregor has returned to resume her duties here as school teacher.

COMMUNICATION

Editor Record

In your last issue you very properly voice the feelings of the ratepayers for more light on the recipts and expenditures for school purposes—referring particularly to the High and Public Schools.

As a representative of the Public Sohool, I wish to say the Public School Board is always ready to give any information desired by any ratepayer in connection with the school. I might say that previous to the inauguration of the Separate School, when all the ratepayers were interested in the Public School finances it was the custom of the Board to issue a financial statement, which was handed out by the clerk at Nomination meeting, with the Municipal financial statement. As only a part of the village is now interested in the Public School, that custom has fallen into disuse, but the law does not, as some suppose, require it to publish a financial statement. The law provides, however, (see section 73, subsection q. of the Public School Act) that the Municipal Auditors shall audit the school accounts, and publish an abstract of the same in the local newspaper.

Doubtless that report will be forthcoming in due time.

Miles Brown.

The Labor Supply and Price of Milk

In the recent milk price trouble in New York an attempt was made to prevent a rise in price by the consumers instituting a boycott of milk for three days of each week. This consumers' strike, as it happened, failed to do any great amount of damage. but, if ever there was an instance of cutting off one's nose to spite one's face, this was it. The originator of the idea must have had little knowledge of the difficulties surrounding the delivery of milk to city customers day by day, and maintaining the supply in a fit condition for consumption. Did that person expect that the producer who lost a day's milk, as a result of the consumer's refusal to buy, would not soon find other means of disposing of the product, or if that failed, finding a means of disposing of the cows responsible for the supply of milk? Had the strike continued long enough to enforce the adoption of the latter course, the consumers would have been in a pretty awkward position, while the producer would still be a producer, and as well situated financially as before, only his line of production would have been altered.

The evasion of the high-price milkman cannot be accomplished by any hasty method. Possibly the consumer of fresh milk might wean himself by substituting the canned variety by degrees, so allowing the milk producer to turn gradually to the milk factory as a place for disposing of this product, and the latter could stand this change much better than the consumer could stand the change from fresh to canned milk. However, if the entire supply of milk in the country were forced into the condenseries, cheese and butter factories, etc., it is possible that a drop in prices for milk for manufacture might result and that the attractions of the city milk supply business might appeal more strongly to the producer.

It is only natural to suppose that a move in the above direction was made in connection with the consumers' strike referred to. Doubtless the majority of those who "laid off" fresh milk on three days of the week, took canned as substitute. If they had liked it better than the fresh article, they would doubtless have won the strike. As it turned, they didn't—either like it or win the strike. The fact is that fresh milk is an absolute necessity of life in the cities, and it must also be admitted that the farmer must exist in order that the milk supply can be arranged for. Therefore, the farmer should receive a price that will enable him to live on the proceeds of his milk business.

Although it is admitted that the farmer has a right to a living—and a profit—from his business of milk production, it should be pointed out that a farmer-milk producer should be one who farms. The trouble just now is that not every milk producer is a farmer in the proper sense of the word, and in many cases he is little more than a person who is preventing some other farmer from producing milk at a cheaper rate than he is doing himself. Grain raised for stock feeding should be fed where it is raised, as much as possible, and the right place for milk producing is a farm that can grow enough grain and other feeds to go a long way toward supporting the herd kept theron. By-products of milling grain should be considered as additions to cattle rations; not made the chief constituent, and the price paid for them should be in exact accordance with their feed value as compared with that of grains raised on the farm.

A reduction of the cost of milk cannot be accomplished in a hurry. Reduction to a certain extent always does come with the arrival of Summer pasture, but this reduction is only temporary, and even at that, the actual price of Summer milk advances every year; this, however, is only in accordance with the lower value of the dollar. This reduction from the Winter price, which is possible each Spring, is, however, the sign of what is needed to reduce the average price for the year, that is, cheaper feed for the cattle, and what is needed to ensure this cheaper feed is better farming and more of it. Let the milk producer be a crop producer; then he can be independent as he likes and out of his independence can afford to give the consumer a chance to live.

The principle cause of interference with producing milk at a reasonable cost now-a-days is the high cost of bran, shorts and oil-cake, yet milk producers seem more than ever inclined to depend on these feeds which were but very little used in this country, when milk was being produced to sell at a price that raised no objection by the consumer in general. It took great effort on the part ot feed experts, including agricultural college professors, and boosting by the millers to induce Canadian farmers to use as much bran and shorts as good for their cattle; but once the idea took hold, and the saving of labor possible in using such feed was realized, the feeders went to the other extreme and seem now to have forgotten that cattle grew and gave milk long before bran and shorts were thought of. Entirely different to the city raised emigrant's idea that he could sow bran and raise a crop is the present-day farmer's apparent idea that bran and by-products are mined in some far-off country or made from air in a flour mill.

To bring about cheaper milk production we must first have greater production of feeding crops, including grain on the dairy farm, and to make this possible it is necessary that the dairy farmer shall have a better supply of labor at a reasonable price. The farmers have done all they could in the past few years and it has been the hip shortage that has driven them to try to raise milk and make it pay by feeding their cattle on stuff that could be secured elsewhere than on their own farms. The reduction of milk prices lies largely with the consumers themselves, in that it is possible for a great number of them to get out of the consumer class and help the producers with their field and barn work, with advantage to themselves and everybody else concerned.

The Liberty Calender

A certain doctor claims our present calendar is a "ferocious mess" and he is exactly right. A more inconvenient arrangement could hardly be conceived. There is no regularity in its construction and its months are of several different lengths.

The new Liberty Calendar, will give us months of exactly four weeks each. This is done in the following manner :

First, New Year Day becomes an independent legal holiday. It is not included in any week or month.

Second, another independent legal holiday, called "Correction Day" is provided for leap years. It is not included in any week or month.

Third, the remaining 364 days are divided into 13 months of exactly four weeks each, every month commencing with Monday.

Neither the number nor length of our months is governed by the moon or any natural law. hence they can be changed as we see fit. The months in this new form are: January, February, Liberty, March, etc.

The use of the word "Liberty" is especially fitting, and in more ways than one.

The advantages of this form cannot be overestimated. The saving of time and mental effort would be immense. All holidays and anniversaries would always fall on the same day of the week. A promissory note given for any number of weeks would always come due on the same day of the week it was given. The plan also provides that Good Friday and Easter Sunday shall always be observed on certain fixed dates. This was contemplated when our present calendar was adopted.

This splendid simplified form has been approved by the highest authorities. It could be adopted to take effect on Sunday the first day of the year 1922, and the change would cause scarcely any jar or friction whatever.

Market Slogan of Chicago Women

The Women's Fair Price Commission for Illinois will have an official slogan to impress conservation on the 70,000 club women who are assisting in the campaign against the high cost of living. The slogan, Mrs. Maude A. Turley secretary of the committee announced to-day, reads:—

"To market, to market,
To buy a fat pig,
Home again, home again,
Prices too big."

Sir Wm. Hearst has been appointed to a position on the International Commission with a salary of $6000 per year. The Commission has jursdiction over matters connected with waterways.

Two feet of snow blocked the roads up around Owen Sound, while there is not yet enough ior sleighing in Dundas County.

Adventurous British Will Attempt Once More To Reach the South Pole

THE old call of the land of Eternal Silence is upon many British seamen. With the war ended, the adventurous spirits are anxious to be off on voyages to the Antarctic; to the South Sea Islands; to the uttermost ends of the earth. This call of the unknown is strong upon Britishers who have inherited through long lines of ancestors the desire to explore and conquer.

A newly-formed Antarctic expedition is to be led by John L. Cope, who was with the Shackleton expedition from 1914 to 1917. He expects to remain in the frozen regions nearly six years.

"There are those who may express the opinion that further expedition to the Antarctic is hardly necessary," said the explorer, in talking of his undertaking, "but those who are in on the plans will admit this is untrue. They have been laying the foundation and building stepping stones whereby civilization may receive permanent benefits.

"To assist as much as possible in that wished for consummation will be the endeavor of the British Imperial Antarctic Expedition.

"We hope to start from England in the early summer of next year on Scott's old ship, the Terra Nova, with a roll of some fifty-eight souls, including the shore and ship parties.

"Our objects will be:

"1. To ascertain the position and extent of the mineral and other deposits already known to exist in Antarctic, and obtain data for their practical development as a further source of imperial wealth.

"2. To obtain further evidence of the localities and migrations of whales of economic value, and to create British industries in this trade.

"3. To investigate the meteorological and magnetic conditions in the Ross Sea area and at Cape Ann in connection with their influence in Australasia and South Africa, respectively.

"4. The circumnavigation of the Antarctic continent.

"5. The obtaining of further scientific data of economic importance.

"It is an ambitious program, but we shall have plenty of time in which to carry it out, as the expedition will not be returning until 1926.

"The first year we intend 'Wintering' on the 'Great Ice Barrier,' that huge mass of ice between King Edward VII., Westward and South Victoria. No party has hitherto spent a winter there, so that it will be a novel experience for us.

"Accompanying us on the Terra Nova will be an airplane in which, at a suitable 'start off' point, some of us hope to fly to the South Pole.

"To provide against failure the machine will be equipped with sledge, provisions and tent, as a forced landing in polar regions under such conditions may well entail a very long 'halt.'

"I hope, though, for success, in which case a return journey to the South Pole from the 'barrier' should easily be made within the twenty-four hours.

"That there are possibilities of commercial development of the Antarctic regions is well known. The capability of the economic resources being once proved and aerial navigation made a more or less usual affair, the good that will accrue will be incalculable.

"The cost of the expedition, which, by the way, is being organized in connection with the Falkland Island Dependencies, will be somewhere around $500,000. Already kind offers of assistance in various ways are reaching us.

"For our chief of scientific staff we shall possess a first rate man in R. C. Mossman, F.R.S.E. ,meteorologist to the Scottish National Antarctic Expedition and to the Argentine Government.

"It is, of course, true that from a strictly commercial point of view polar exploration has produced no direct profits, but from the scientific point of view man is richer by the vast amount of practical knowledge so obtained. The relations of meteorological conditions in the Antarctic and the Antipodes speak for themselves. They have spelled a direct commercial gain.

"It is to further open the gates of commercial exploration that next year's expedition is being made. Few fields of commercial exploration offer such wide scope as the Antarctic continent and the islands lying in its approach.

"There are wonderful harbors which, in the northern parts can be worked for at least six months in a year.

"The climate is easier to live in and the natural forces more easily contested than in Siberia or Klondyke.

"Manganese, coal, granite, marble and rubies have already been found there, while experts are of the opinion that there is more than a possibility of finding gold."

Bric-a-Brac.

"You used to call that vase a vahse. Now you call it a mug."

"I don't want to run the risk of having to pay a luxury on it."

Catarrnal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reached the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the the inflamation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed for ever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Dure Circulars free.
