District Meeting of Montreal Conference

The Matilda District of the Montreal Conference held its second or November district meeting in the Methodist Church, Morrisburg, on Tuesday, November 16th. Rev. Mr. Visser, chairman of the district, presided. The afternoon session began at 2 o'clock, and the evening, at 7.30. A number of the ministers were present, also laymen from Iroquois, Brinston, Inkerman, Chesterville, Winchester Springs and Morrisburg. In the afternoon meeting very important topics, re our Evangelistic, Educational and Missionary work were discussed, and plans adopted which we believe if carried out will insure for this old banner district one of the very best years in its history. Re Temperance work, the district meeting was unanimous in forwarding a resolution asking the Ontario Legislature for the Prohibition of the liquor traffic in so far as it is possible to prohibit it in the Province. Also another resolution to be forwarded to the License Commission, which will meet in Cornwall on Monday, November 29th, asking their permission to submit the "Canada Temperance Act" for the United Counties.

The evening session was a very interesting and profitable one. Rev Mr. Strike was chairman. The choir gave a few splendid selections. Two papers were read; the first paper had reference to "The relation of the parent to the S. School, and the other, "Weak Points in Our Sunday School." Rev. Mr. Wells wrote the first Rev. Wm. Philp, D.D., gave the second. Dr. Philp's paper was concise, logical, and very helpful and suggestive. The discussion which followed was practical and interesting. Those who took part in the discussion were Mr. J. S. Jamieson, M.A., I. Hilliard, K.C., Rev. Dr. Philp, Rev. Mr. Visser and the chairman. At the close of the session, all felt it was a few hours very profitably spent.

The meeting was closed by singing "God Save the King" and the benediction by Rev. Wm. Philp, D. D.

Gallant Action of Edmonton Soldier

Edmonton, Nov. 9.—How Alex. McQueen, son of the Rev. Dr. McQueen, of the First Presbyterian Church, picked up a shell from a German trench mortar before it exploded, and thereby saved the lives of himself and several of his comrades is explained in a letter received in the city from Charlie Cameron. Both McQueen and Cameron went from Edmonton with the 2nd Universities' Company, and joined the Princess Patricias "somewhere in France." Cameron, however, at the time of writing, was in England, having returned to take a commission in the Northamptonshires.

The letter is as follows: "I have had some rather bad news from our battalion, the Pats. Alex. McQueen's section was rather badly cut up. Most of the chaps in it belong to our 2nd. Universities' Company draft. One of them was killed outright. Bill Moyle (also a student at the University of Alberta) had a head wounded, but will recover. Another had his arm shattered. Alex. McQueen had a very heavy weight fall on his back but was not seriously injured. He did not want to be taken away from the trench, as he thought he should be there in case a further attack might be made.

"Moreover, when a shell from a German trench mortar dropped into our trench, Alex. picked it up and threw it out of the trench before it exploded, and this in spite of the fact that it might have exploded in his hands, in which case he would have been blown to pieces. Doubtless his decisive action saved the lives of several men in his trench. His splendid action was quite in keeping with his conduct throughout."

NOTE—Mr. Charlie Cameron referred to in the above article is a son of Rev. Hugh Cameron of this town.

MARRIED

MILLER—BEACH

On Wednesday, November 17th. at the home of the bride's parents, a very pretty wedding was solemnized when Miss Hazel Beach, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Beach, West River Road, was united in marriage to Mr. Roscoe Miller of Ottawa, the Rev. A. H. Visser officiating.

The bride, who wore white duchesse satin trimmed with silk lace and pearls, and carried a shower bouquet of pink and white roses, entered the parlor on the arm of her father, while Miss Annie Tindale played the wedding march. The bridal party stood under an arch of smilax and pink and white carnations. Miss Ola Beach of Ottawa, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid, the groom being assisted by his brother.. Miss Leara Gillis sang "Today" by Carrie Jacobs-Bond, while the register was being signed.

The gift of the groom to the bride was a necklace of pearls and to the bridesmaid, pianist and soloist, each a bar pin set with her birth-stone.

More than fifty guests partook of a dainty luncheon, the wedding cake being the gift of a friend in England.

The travelling suit was of navy serge and hat of black velvet with white wings, the bride wearing black fox furs, one of the gifts of her parents.

Many beautiful and costly gifts showed the esteem in which the bride was held, among them a mahogany arm-chair from the friends at White Church. The happy couple left on the noon train for Toronto and western points amid showers of good wishes, and confetti.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Miller will reside at the Bungalow Apartments, 232 Cooper street, Ottawa.

ITALY AND GERMANY AT WAR OWING TO ANCONA SINKING

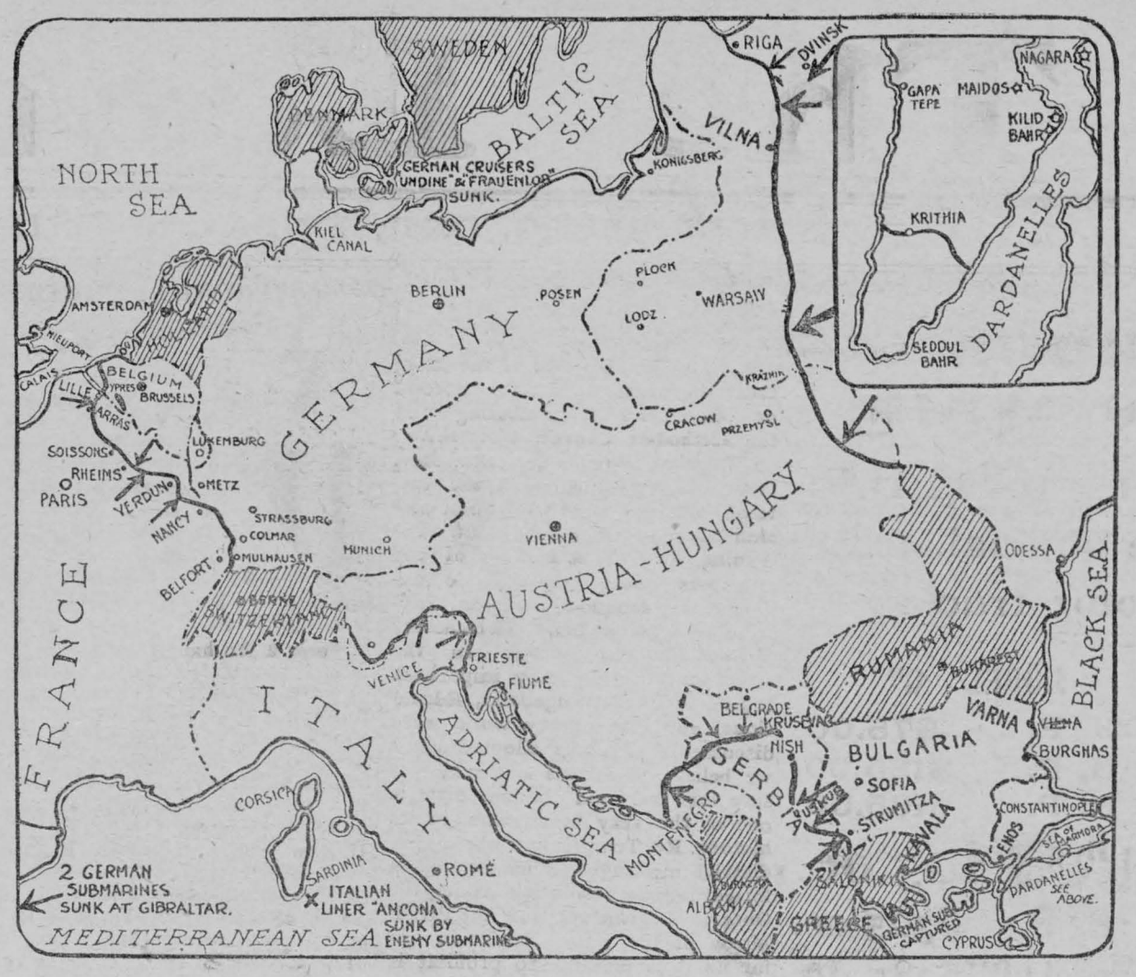
Italian Government Accepts Act as Declaration and Will Seize German Ships in Her Harbors

A despatch from Rome says: The Italian War Office has definitely announced that the submarine which sank the Ancona was German, and not Austrian. The Italian Government holds that the attack was tantamount to a declaration of war. The Government has therefore seized all German merchantmen interned when war was declared with Austria and will fit them out for service.

The official statement follows:

"The Ancona did not attempt to escape, but stopped within 33 yards after the firing of the first shot. The liner was torpedoed while boats were being lowered, and a hundred passengers were still on board.

"The submarine being German, Germany has opened hostilities against Italy without a declaration of war."



The Week's Developments in the War.

Except in the Balkans, which best opinion repeatedly says is at most a "side-show," both the initiative and the offensive have rested during the week with the Entente Allies. There have been actions near Lille, near Arras, east of Rheims and between Verdun and Nancy on the Western front begun by the French. The Germans attacked in the Champagne without success, but the French determined the nature of the fighting and always had the upper hand. Italian troops were successful both in offensive and defensive actions. Near Riga and Dvinsk and in other sectors far to the south on the 1,000-mile Eastern front, the Czar's troops were "nibbling" with some success; at all events showing the enemy that to reduce his force there for the benfit of the Balkan front was a mistaken policy. In the Serbian campaign the Teutons and Bulgarians were successful, but not continuously so, in the north. They also occupied Nish and reoccupied Veles. But French and British troops were winning ground as rapidly as their strength and transport would allow. In the Baltic British submarines were "top-dog." In the Mediterranean the civilized world had one more objective lesson in the Hun campaign of murder on the high seas with the sinking of the Italian liner "Ancona," scores of women and children being drowned. Unofficial reports told of two German submarines which had accounted for several small Allied ships, near Gibraltar, themselves being sunk. Shaded portions of the map illustrate the diminutive section of Central Europe which remains neutral.

25 AMERICANS ON THE ANCONA

Believed the Majority Went Down With the Submarined Liner.

A despatch from London says: The Italian liner Ancona, sunk by a submarine in the Mediterranean, had on board 83 first cabin passengers, 60 second cabin and 339 steerage, the majority women and children, intending to make their homes in America.

The owners of the Ancona at Naples have received advices that 320 of those aboard the Ancona have been landed at ports in Tunis. Of 161 brought by a mine-sweeper and torpedo boat to Bizerta four died. Forty-one members of the crew and four passengers have also been landed at Tunis.

The survivors include Cecile Greil, 143 Italians, 16 Greeks and one Russian. It is asserted that 24 of the Ancona's passengers were naturalized Americans.

Berlin was quick to send out word to the effect that the Ancona's destroyer was not a German submarine. The first despatch from the German capital was one transmitting a message by the Overseas News Agency, a bureau enjoying the special attention and censorship of the German Government and generally regarded as the official mouthpiece for overseas news service. This statement said:

"Information from a reliable source is to the effect that the steamship Ancona was sunk by an Austro-Hungarian submarine. She attempted to escape and thus compelled the submarine to use her guns."

There is no report from any source, however, indicating that the vessel was warned previous to the attack.

Rome and Milan despatches allege that when the submarine gave chase, the Ancona increased her speed, but the submarine slowly caught up to her and began firing, repeatedly hitting the stern of the vessel.

Scenes of panic occurred aboard the Ancona, when eventually the captain gave up his attempt to escape, whereupon, after further shelling, the submarine fired a torpedo.

The Ancona listed and began to sink. There was no time to lower all the boats. Many of the passengers, who were rescued, jumped overboard with life belts.

A wireless call for help brought the French steamer Pledan (Plaidan) and several launches to the rescue. They made many rescues.

It is thought possible that the same submarine sank the Marseilles steamer France, which had disembarked a thousand French troops at Mudros, Lemnos Island.

The new trans-Atlantic liner Giuseppe Verdi left Naples a few hours after the Ancona and has arrived safely at Gibraltar.

A Tunis despatch to the Giornale d'Italia gives a dramatic, though brief, account of the attack.

"A submarine approached the Ancona," says this account, "and as soon as the steamer saw it, an attempt was made to escape at full speed. The Ancona was overtaken and stopped. Then the submarine fired on the Ancona, sinking her amid the desperate cries of the passengers.

"The lifeboats were next attacked, the submarine likewise firing on them. A woman, a man and two children were killed; their bodies are at Bizerta."

TROOPS POURING INTO BALKANS

Continued Landing of Allies Has Alarmed Bulgaria and Turkey.

A despatch from London says: The continued landing of British and French troops at Salonica is causing some uneasiness to Bulgaria and Turkey, and the Ministers of those two powers have again protested to the Greek Government, which has taken formal notice of their protest.

The determination of the Entente allies in their Balkan campaign is shown by the large force they are sending to the Balkans, and news has been received from Rome that Italy also has decided to intervene in this region "in a manner worthy of her greatness," and to give sufficient support to the British and French to assure a complete triumph. This is said to have had some influence on Greece and Roumania. Roumania, however, is waiting for the developments of the Russian plant.

The life-or-death battle of the main Serbian army with the Teutonic invaders is now in progress.

The theory that this army is in wild flight toward the Montenegrin frontier, to escape from the iron ring gradually being closed around them, has been exploded by the receipt of two official Serbian War Office reports, which show that the chief defending force of the little kingdom is in touch with the Teutons in Central Serbia, with fierce fighting being in progress south and east of Kraljevo.

No naval secret is more carefully guarded than that of the code-book. The box in which this volume is kept is weighted with lead and perforated, so that it will sink on being thrown overboard—the last act of a captain when a ship is taken into action.

BULGARIAN ARMY MAY BE CUT OFF

Both Anglo-French and Serb Forces Win Important Battles.

Paris.—The Serbian Legation here made public the following official communication: "Although Veles is not yet in the hands of the French and British troops, the Bulgarian are hard pressed, and the fall of the town is imminent. The Bulgarians in the region of Veles have suffered enormous losses, and have requested an armistice to bury their dead."

A despatch from London says: While the Serbian army in the north is putting up an heroic resistance against the Austro-Hungarian invaders, holding, as they have held ever since the fall of Nish, the main part of the line based on the mountain slopes to the south of the western Morava River, the smaller body of Serbs in the south, operating north-west of the left flank of the Anglo-French line, are reported to have inflicted a severe check on the Bulgarians at the Katchanik Pass. So stubborn has been the resistance of the Serbians that the Bulgarians have had to call for assistance from the Austro-German artillery in their effort to drive the defenders out of Katchanik Pass. Thus far they have been unsuccessful.

Reports from Salonica and Athens report the Bulgarians as having met with a severe defeat at this point. According to these reports, the Serbians have cleared the enemy from the pass, and the situation is developing in a striking way in favor of the Serbians. Meanwhile the reports state, without giving particulars, that the Anglo-French line to the south-east is very active. Other despatches have told of additional Franco-British troops joining the allied line in Southern Serbia daily, and it may be presumed that the allied offensive in this quarter will develop gradually as the number of men available increases.

A Salonica despatch says: "The Anglo-French forces have occupied Hill No. 350 between Radvovo and Strumitsa, dominating the left side of the pass through which runs the Dojpan-Strumitsa Railway. They have also taken Hill No. 516, on the opposite side of the same pass, putting the pass completely in the power of the Anglo-French troops.

BRITISH TRANSPORT ESCAPES AFTER FIGHT WITH U-BOAT

About 100 of Those on Board Killed or Wounded by Gunfire—A Number of Others Missing

A despatch from London says: Twenty-three men were killed and fifty wounded in an attack by gunfire on the British transport Mercian in the Mediterranean. The Mercian escaped and reached port. Announcement of the attack on the Mercian was made by the British War Office as follows:

"The outward bound transport Mercian was attacked by gunfire from an enemy submarine in the Mediterranean. She reached harbor safely with casualties of 23 killed, 30 missing and 50 wounded, who were landed and are in a hospital."

The Mercian is a vessel of 6,305 tons gross and 400 feet long. She was built in 1908 and is owned in Liverpool.

Although some of the German U-boats, the number is not known, succeeded in getting through the Straits, two more which attempted to follow them were sunk by a British cruiser off Gibraltar, according to a despatch received from Algeciras, received at Madrid.

GERMANS WORN BY PRIVATIONS

They Now Surrender Readily in Whole Companies and Battalions.

A despatch from London says: The latest news from the eastern front indicates that von Hindenburg's campaign in the Riga-Dvinsk region is apparently ended, and that the counter-movement of the Russian armies under Gen. Ruzsky is gaining momentum. The Russians, continuing their attacks between Olai and the west of Lake Babit, are reported by Petrograd to be forcing the Germans into the woods and marshes, which greatly hamper the movements of the Teutons. In an effort to overcome these difficulties the Germans are exerting every energy to complete the railroads which they are building in Courland.

Gen. Ruzsky, who is conducting an aggressive campaign against the Austro-Germans in Russia, in an interview published in the Bourse Gazette, spoke confidently of conditions at the front. He said:

"Without indulging in prophecy, which would be imprudent, I may say that we are now guaranteed against unpleasant surprises on the part of the enemy. The time for surprises is past. But it would be irresponsible frivolity to describe the enemy as exhausted or in the death throes. On the contrary, he is strong, but not so strong that we need fear surprises either here or on the western front.

"By not advancing the enemy is really retreating. The Germans now surrender readily, in whole companies and battalions, and this, in my opinion, is an ominous sign. Their men are worn out by privations, cold and the spectre of winter, and, instead of their former self-confidence, show depression."

Gen. Ruzsky said he considered the Balkan campaign merely an episode of secondary importance.

"It is not there," he declared, "that the fate of nations will be decided."

This is the first war in which submarines have been used.

RIGA AND DVINSK BEYOND REACH

Germans Have Abandoned Hope of Progressing Further for the Present.

A despatch from London says: Operations on the eastern front have assumed a new importance. In the north the Germans apparently have abandoned any hope of reaching Riga and Dvinsk, and are being driven back from the Dvina, which was their objective. The Russians in the Riga region are attempting an outflanking movement, and their recent successes have brought them within striking distance of the Takum-Mitau railway, which connects the German fighting front with the fortress of Windau. The Germans are also falling back before Dvinsk as the result of the Russian offensive near Lake Swenton, while in the south Gen. Ivanoff has continued to harass the invaders by repeated thrusts, which during the past five weeks, according to Petrograd officials, have brought him over 125,000 prisoners. In the most recent of these thrusts, near Rudka, the bag totalled 6,000, many of whom were Germans.

The retirement of the German troops under Field Marshal von Hindenburg, which had been attempting to reach Riga, was not due to rain, as was claimed in the Berlin official report, but was the direct result of the Russian offensive. A Petrograd official report states: "In the region of Schlok our troops have advanced to the west of Raggatz, fighting all the time. After eleven days of almost uninterrupted fighting in the marsh region our troops captured Kammern and Anting. The Germans, who suffered heavy losses, were thrown back to the west."

BOMBS DROPPED ON VERONA KILL AND MAIM 80 CIVILIANS

Majority of Victims Were Attending the Market, One Shell Killing Nineteen

A despatch from Rome says: Thirty persons are dead in Verona as a result of three Austrian areoplanes dropping bombs on the city. Thirty other persons were seriously and nineteen slightly injured.

The bombs of the aircraft found most of their victims in the principal square of the city, where citizens and peasants from the outlying districts were attending the market. Nineteen persons were killed by one bomb.

The aeroplanes visited various parts of the city, but none of the missiles dropped by them fell near any of the military buildings.

TWO BELGIAN WOMEN REPRIEVED BY KAISER

A despatch from Amsterdam says: A despatch to the Tijd from Belgium confirms the report that Emperor William has commuted to penal servitude for life the death sentence pronounced by a German court martial against the Countess Johanna De Belleville, Mlle. Louise Thulier, a school teacher, and Louis Severin, a chemist. These three persons were mentioned in the official proclamation announcing the execution of Miss Edith Cavell, a British nurse, as having been sentenced to death by the German authorities in Belgium.

COMPULSION AFTER NOV. 30 IF YOUNG MEN FAIL TO RECRUIT

Lord Derby, With Authority of Prime Minister, Serves Notice on Medically Fit of Great Britain

A despatch from London says: A strong intimation of compulsion at an early date is contained in a statement by the Earl of Derby, Director of Recruiting. This statement is made, Lord Derby declares, with the authority of the Prime Minister. It says:

"If young men medically fit and not indispensable in any business of national importance or any business conducted for the general good of the community do not come forward voluntarily before November 30, the Government will, after that date, take the necessary steps to redeem the pledge made on November 2."

On the date referred to Premier Asquith announced in the House of Commons that if young men did not come forward voluntarily and enlist "other and compulsory means would be taken before married men were called upon to fill their engagement to serve."

Lord Derby adds: "Whether a man is indispensable or not to his business will be decided, not by the man or his employer, but by competent authorities and tribunals which are being set up to consider such cases."

About the Household

Tested Recipes.

Cut stale bread into thin pieces. Put two pieces together with grated cheese between them; dip into a mixture of egg, well beaten and thinned with a little milk and fry, and you will call it good.

Owl Cakes.—Choose dates of good size. With icing mark eyes and beaks of owls on them. Cut and shape top of dates into ears. Have ready freshly baked and frosted molasses spice cakes. Press dates into these, use citron to form branches on which owl sits and with chocolate icing outline feet.

Hobgoblin Cups.—Use cups made of oranges with pulp removed in which to serve the sherbet, first marking faces with different expressions on outside of skins with chocolate icing. Set on plate surrounded with paper pumpkin leaves. To make cider sherbet, sweeten cider to taste and add a little lemon juice. When frozen to a mush add one quart cream to every quart of cider used and finish freezing.

Lemon Syrup.—Grate the rind of six lemons into the juice of 12 and let it stand over night. Make a thick syrup, using 12 cups of white sugar. When it is quite cool strain the lemon juice into it, squeezing some of the oil from the grated rind. Bottle and set away for use. A tablespoonful in a glass of water makes a delicious drink for a hot day.

A "Make Over" Meat Pie.—Chop cold meat very fine. To each cupful add one saltspoonful of salt and one and one-half saltspoonfuls of pepper, a pinch of Summer savory and one-half cupful of stock. Put into a baking dish and cover with a crust of mashed potatoes. Brush over the top with milk and bake in an oven to a golden brown.

Sandwich biscuits require four cupfuls of flour, four tablespoonfuls of baking powder, a teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of meat drippings, half a cup of milk and water to complete the wetting to the ordinary biscuit consistency. Roll the dough thin, like pie crust; cut, spread half the rounds with butter, add a filling of seasoned, finely ground, cooked ham; then lay on the covers and bake.

This is a nice way to cook cabbage: Chop one head of cabbage fine, clean it thoroughly and boil in salted water for 20 minutes. When cooked spread it out to dry. Make half a pint of sauce with butter, milk and flour. Spread a layer of cabbage in the casserole, then a layer of sauce and sprinkle over it some grated cheese. Continue these layers, finishing off the top of the dish with several tablespoonfuls of bread crumbs. Bake for 20 minutes and serve in the casserole.

Children are very fond of molasses pie. To make this you will need 1 lb. of flour, ¼ lb. of breadcrumbs, ¼ lb. of molasses, 6 ozs. of dripping, juice of one lemon, and one teaspoonful of baking powder. Make a paste of the flour, dripping, baking powder, a little water, then line a greased pie-dish with part of it; warm the molasses in a basin and work in the breadcrumbs gradually; lastly add the lemon juice. Then spread a layer of this mixture in the paste, now put another layer of paste, then more molasses, repeating till the dish is full, but finish up with paste. Bake in a good oven for three quarters of an hour.

Mixed Meat Loaf.—Two pounds lean veal, one-half pound pork tenderloin, one-half pound sweetbreads, one-half pound lean ham, three eggs, one cup white breadcrumbs, three tablespoons cream, one tablespoon salt, one-half teaspoon pepper, one teaspoon onion juice and one cup of canned mushrooms, cut in pieces. Put all of the meat through the food chopper twice, then add all of the other ingredients and mix thoroughly. Pack in a bread pan, cover with buttered paper, and bake in a brisk oven for one hour. Uncover and cook one-half hour longer. Serve cold, sliced thin.

Household Hints.

Buttermilk with a tablespoonful of freshly grated horseradish will remove freckles.

Some coffee needs boiling and some does not—one must experiment to find out.

When pans are scorched, use a stiff wire whisk to get the burned food off the bottom.

If you use cleaning powder for saucepans be sure to wash out the pan afterward with cold water.

The good housekeeper should go over her supplies every day. By this means she can avoid food spoiling.

Figs are nice soaked in lemon juice, stuffed with marshmallow or nuts, and rolled in powdered sugar.

Putting a coat of varnish on the linoleum yearly will make it last for years, and look bright and new.

A little salt added when cooking sour fruits greatly reduces the quantity of sugar required for sweetening.

It is best to give linens a long soaking before washing. If this method is followed stains will wash out easily.

When boiling cabbage put a small head of celery into the saucepan. This will greatly improve the flavor.

To give a delicious flavor to corn mush drop in a few chopped dates just before removing from the fire. Children love it.

To wash anything that is greasy, use hot soda water. The alkali turns the grease into soap, which will do its own cleaning.

If the piano keys are washed with a soft flannel dipped in alcohol they will retain their color and not grow yellow as they do when washed with water.

To preserve rubber heels, scrape all grit and mud out of them when cleaning the boots. Grit and small stones wear out the rubber as it revolves on the screw, making it fall off long before the heel is really worn out.

The best way to warm up a joint of meat is to wrap it in thickly greased paper and keep it covered while in the oven. By having it covered thus the steam will prevent the meat from becoming hard and dry, and the joint will get hot through in less time.

When a child has the slightest tendency to crooked legs he should have a very special treatment. His bones are too soft, and he needs more lime and iron. He should be taken off his feet at once, and have salt water bathing and massage.

Here is an excellent way to kill moths in carpets which never fails. Wring a coarse crash towel out of water and spread it smoothly on the carpet; iron it dry with a good hot iron, repeating the operation on all parts of the carpet infested with the moths. There is no need to press hard, and neither the pile nor the color of the carpet will be injured, and the moths will be destroyed by the heat and steam.

It is appalling to see the amount of succulent juices which many cooks send swirling down the sink. The water in which vegetables are cooked should always be saved. Onion water, for instance, gives the necessary flavor to a tomato or vegetable soup. No matter how carefully we boil our foods, more or less of the flavor and mineral salts are lost. Cabbage and cauliflower waters make a good foundation for a cream or vegetable soup without meat. Only potato water and the first water in which old beans are cooked are not desirable. The last water in which beans are boiled, before they are baked, may be seasoned with tomato and served as a bean bouillon. When you boil rice use plenty of water and save it, then use it to add nutriment to a vegetable soup, or boil it down and make blanc mange of it.

THE MONTH OF BATTLES.

October Is, Above All Others, the Battle Month.

There is not a day in October that does not commemorate some victory, or two, or three. It is the month of Hastings, Sebastopol, Trafalgar, Edgehill, Agincourt and Balaclava. Also it commemorates victories won by the present Allies against the present enemy. On October 7, 1571, the Italian (with the Spanish) obliterated the Turkish fleet at Lepanto; October 10, 1806, France defeated Prussia, at Sealfield; October 12, 1860, Peking was taken by English and French troops; on October 14, 1806, Napoleon defeated the Prussians, and later entered Berlin; October 15, 1877, the Turks were overwhelmed by the Russians, at Aladja Daga; October 20, 1805, the flower of the Austrian army surrendered to Ney, and on October 22, 1876, Turkish forces were captured by an inferior Montenegrin force at Medun.

CHANGE

Quit Tea and Coffee and Got Well.

A woman's tea and coffee experience is interesting: "For two weeks at a time I have taken no food but skim milk, for solid food would ferment and cause such distress that I could hardly breathe at times, also excrutiating pain and heart palpitation and all the time I was so nervous and restless.

"From childhood up I had been a tea and coffee drinker, and for the past 20 years I had been trying different physicians, but could get only temporary relief. Then I read an article telling how some one had been helped by leaving off tea and coffee and drinking Postum, and it seemed so pleasant just to read about good health I decided to try Postum.

"I made the change to Postum, and there is such a difference in me that I don't feel like the same person. We all found Postum delicious and like it better than coffee. My health now is wonderfully good.

"As soon as I made the shift to Postum I got better, and now my troubles are gone. I am fleshy, my food assimilates, the pressure in the chest and palpitation are all gone, my bowels are regular, have no more stomach trouble, and my headaches are gone. Remember, I did not use medicines at all—just left off tea and coffee and used Postum steadily." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

Postum comes in two forms:

Postum Cereal—the original form—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—a soluble powder—dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water, and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious and cost about the same per cup.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

GERMAN MARRIAGE MARKET.

Future Royal Weddings Must Leave Them Out of Account.

Princess Catherine Radiziwill points out in her gossipy and interesting volume, "The Royal Marriage Market of Europe," that the great war places German royalties in complete isolation as regards matrimonial alliances. It also effectually crushes the cherished ambition among German princes to become allied with the Russian Imperial house. Apropos, the princess tells an amusing anecdote circulated at the beginning of the war, relating to a certain German princess, mother of a goodly bunch of daughters, who, when she heard that the German Emperor had sent an ultimatum to Russia, exclaimed:

"How could he do such a thing? It is perfectly monstrous; we shall never now be able to marry our girls to a grand duke!"

The princess notes that, with Germany beyond the pale, and leaving out Italy as too Catholic a country to admit of mixed marriages, the only countries in Europe that can furnish princesses with whom English and Russian princes can be united are Denmark, Sweden and Norway.

Princess Radiziwill refers to the current rumor in Berlin that little Princess Juliana of Holland, now only six years old, is destined by German diplomacy for one of the sons of the Crown Prince—a marriage which, if ever contracted, would bring Holland definitely into the sphere of German influence. But Holland, she adds, "does not care to become a German Province, nor even to be tied down by an alliance to Germany." Some interesting pages are devoted to that independent lady, the Grand Duchess of Luxemburg, the youngest sovereign in Europe, who has so far refused all her suitors, and therefore "remains the despair of all the ambitious royal mothers, whose sons would be in the position to aspire to the hand of the richest heiress in Europe":

She is extremely beautiful, very talented, and moreover possessed of a strong will, which she never showed more bravely than when, alone in her motor-car, she met the German army which was invading her Grand Duchy and protested in person against the violation of its integrity and neutrality. She is a staunch Catholic.

Some fascinating speculations come into this book as to the future of the Czar's charming daughters—"the greatest matches in Europe." Thus a marriage with Prince Carol of Rumania is predicted for the Grand Duchess Tatiana; while for her elder sister, the Grand Duchess Olga, no foreign prince who did not profess the Greek faith would be popular—unless (says Princess Radiziwill) it were with a personage whose choice is looked forward to most eagerly all over Europe, and whose entry into the Imperial family would be hailed with the wildest bursts of enthusiasm; I mean the Prince of Wales.

. . . Holy Russia would look through her fingers if one of the daughters of its Czar would consent to embrace the Anglican faith after her marriage to the heir to the English Crown.

One of the Czar's daughters might conceivably be given to the Crown Prince of Serbia, whose sister Helene married Prince John of Russia.

NEW HYMN OF HATE.

German Chant of Sword Expresses Pride in Wanton Murder.

The Berne correspondent of The Pall Mall Gazette says Germany's "Hymn of Hate" has been supplanted by "The Chant of the German Sword"—a composition brought out in Leipsic a week or so ago, which has already run into half a dozen editions.

This is what the anonymous author makes the "German sword" say:

"It is no duty of mine to be either just or compassionate; it suffices that I am sanctified by my exalted mission, and that I blind the eyes of my enemies with such streams of tears as shall make the proudest of them cringe in terfor under the vault of heaven.

"I have slaughtered the old and the sorrowful; I have struck off the breasts of women; I have run through the body of children who gazed at me with the eyes of the wounded lion.

"Day after day I ride aloft on the shadowy horse in the Valley of Cypresses; and as I ride I draw forth the life blood from every enemy's son that dares to dispute my path.

"It is meet and right that I should cry aloud my pride, for am I not the flaming messenger of the Lord Almighty?

"Germany is so far above and beyond all the other nations that all the rest of the earth, be they who they may, should feel themselves well done by when they are allowed to fight with the dogs for the crumbs that fall from her table.

"When Germany the divine is happy, then the rest of the world basks in smiles; but when Germany suffers, God in person is rent with anguish, and, wrathful and avenging, He turns all the waters into rivers of blood."

THOUGHTS FOR THE DAY.

To lead a dissipated life may be called a kind of death.—Ovid.

No man is born into the world whose work is not born with him; there is always work, and tools to work withal, for those who will; and blessed are the horny hands of toil.—Lowell.

The literature of a people must spring from the sense of its nationality, and nationality is impossible without self-respect, and self-respect is impossible without liberty.—Mrs. Stowe.

The art of life is much more like the wrestler's art than the dancer's in respect of this—that it should stand ready and firm to meet onsets which are sudden and unexpected. —Antonius.

BRITISH TARS' RATION OF RUM

A CAREFUL MEASURE IS MADE FOR ALL.

Spirits, Mixed With Water, Served to Men of Navy From a Big Tub.

The complete story of how sailors and officers in the British navy get their "mutiny," or grog, as they are supposed to call it, is very entertainingly told by a well known naval writer, John S. Margerison, in the London Daily Mail. His account follows:

They don't trouble much about little details, such as who was the first man who introduced the spirit ration in the navy; they don't clink their glasses—they oftener drink out of basins—and say, "The King—God bless him!" as the naval novelists say they do. In short, they make little or no fuss about their daily whack of rum and water, save that they look forward to it with an anticipation that never under any circumstances loses its keenness.

Rum, like everything else that the sailor drinks, eats, wears or washes himself with, officially comes under the head of "paymaster's stores." That is to say, the paymaster is in charge of the spirit and responsible for its daily issue. He checks every pint of it when it comes aboard and occasionally tests it to see that the spirit has lost none of its proof strength.

Rum and Naval Custom.

He is father and mother to the rum and daily superintends its issue, being present when it leaves the stores, when it is poured into the rum tub, when the water is mixed with it and when it is served out to the sailors. And yet, I strongly doubt, whether any paymaster in the whole of the King's navee has ever tasted the spirit in its raw state. You see they get so used to it that they never trouble the slightest bit about sampling it, knowing full well that if there was anything wrong with it when it was issued to the messes they would learn exactly what was the matter from the men themselves.

Every day, about 11 o'clock in the forenoon, the paymaster, with the ship's steward and the captain of the hold, descend into the spirit room and measure out the exact quantity of spirit which is required for the ship's company's grog. At this time, too, all those men—chief petty officers and sergeants of marines—who are allowed to have their spirit ration issued to them undiluted muster at the spirit room and, under the supervision of the paymaster, the half gills which form the portion allowed to these higher branches of the service are measured out into their bottles. When all this is finished the remaining rum for the day's issue is placed in a special barrel called a "breaker" and taken to the half deck, where, with the spirit room key, it is placed under the watchful eye of a sentry.

After the raw spirit is disposed of the paymaster goes forward to the grog tub and inspects it to see that it is perfectly clean. Then, as he personally measures every drop of water that goes into the tub, the pumping party carry great kettles to and from the fresh water tanks, ceasing only when the paymaster calls, "Hold, enough!"

Checking up the Grog.

Meanwhile the steward has been checking his books ready for the issue of grog, finding out who is under stoppage of rum for punishment, who is on leave, and who will be absent from the ship during the dinner hour. In the case of the first named men he will deduct their allowance from the total allowed to their mess and return that portion to the stores after the issue. In the second he will also deduct the amount from the totals, but here he will enter up the money allowance which the sailor draws in lieu of his rum; while in the last the quantities will have to be kept aside and replaced under the sentry's charge until the men—boat's crews, patrols and the like—return to the ship, when they will be served out with their grog separately.

And then, at a quarter to 12, the bugler sounds off "Cooks." The men whose duty it is to prepare the day's food for their messmates come down from their work on the upper deck and hasten to the rum tub to await their turn for the rum ration. As they hurry aft they take their places in the waiting queue and wait for 12 o'clock. Two minutes before that hour the breaker, released from its imprisonment under the sentry's eye and escorted by the paymaster and the petty officer of the day, makes its appearance, hailed by a suppressed and exceedingly muffled cheer from the waiting men. The key is produced and the padlock taken off. Then the bung is withdrawn and the rich brown fluid gushes forth and mingles with the water in the tub.

Measuring Out the Ration.

The petty officer rolls back his sleeves, the steward produces his book and the cooper hastens up with the copper measures, varying from half a pint to four gallons. These are now inspected by the paymaster, and as 12 o'clock rings out and the bosun's mate pipes dinner and the bugler sends forth the "grog" call the paymaster says, "Carry on."

The first man in the queue steps forward.

"No. 15 mess," he says.

The steward runs his eye down his list.

"Half out of eight," he orders, and immediately the petty officer fills up the eight pint measure to the brim and pours it into the mess utensil held out by the waiting sailor. You will notice that, although the steward has ordered only seven pints and a half—the rations for fifteen men—to be issued, eight pints are placed into the man's kettle and then the half pint measure full is taken out. The reason for this is that there is always a certain amount of spilling, and if the mess had to lose it there would be trouble, while the tub always contains a spare half pint to make up for leakages.

I remember a case where a bluejacket was washed overboard in the Bay of Biscay at a time when a storm was at its height. In spite of the huge waves and the almost certainty of death a messmate dived in after him and assisted him to keep afloat until the ship threw them a line—it was too rough for any boat to be launched—and hauled them aboard. As they stood on the upper deck dripping, yet quite unhurt, the rescued man turned to his chum.

"I can't thank ye, Jim," he said. "But ye can take my rum for a week."

Not Necessarily.

"Do you believe in marrying for love?" asked the sentimental girl whose face was her principal misfortune.

"Not necessarily," replied the gray-haired parson. "As a rule, I usually marry for money."

Many a man fails to arrive because he started with cold feet.

At 16 a girl declares she will marry only for love, and at 26 she proceeds to fall in love with a rich man.

That Superannuation Bill

The following article, written by Mr. Arthur Brown of Morrisburg is a clear illustration of how "That Superannuation Bill" deals unfairly with the rural teacher, particularly the female teachers, as the latter constitute 84 per cent. of the total number.

"In a previous letter on this subject the relation of the female teachers in the rural public schools to the proposed superannuation scheme was discussed. It was shown that these teachers would contribute yearly $53,592 to the fund, a sum sufficient to pension off at once at $400 per annum and on a basis of 40 years' service all the rural teachers, male and female, who have taught 25 years and upwards, and this without touching the contributions by male teachers. Trustee Boards and Government. It remains now to consider how the public school teachers in the towns and villages would be affected by the bill. The cities having their own scheme of superannuation, need not be considered.

"The report of the Minister of Education for 1914 shows that in the village public schools there were 90 male and 426 female teachers; that the average salary of the former was $802 and of the latter $517; that the yearly contribution of the former would be $1,443.60 and of the latter (minimum salary $550 for contribution purposes) $4,636. A further examination of the tables shows that out of the total of 515 teachers, there were but 3 who had taught 30 years, 2 for 31 years, 5 for 32 years, 4 for 33 years, 3 for 34 years, 3 for 35 years, 2 for 36 years, none for 37 or 38 or 39 years, and but 5 for 40 years and upwards. The yearly contribution of the female teachers would pay a retiring allowance of $550 to each of the 5 (pretty certainly all men) who have served 40 years and upwards, and leave a balance of nearly $2,000, and leave the contributions of the men and School Boards and Government untouched.

It is unnecessary in considering the conditions in the towns to go fully into details. They differ from those in the villages only in degree. The contribution to the fund by the 151 male teachers would be $3,086, by the 1,087 female teachers $02,082, and the latter sum would pay one year's male teachers $12,082, and the 7 teachers (most likely all men) who have taught for 40 years and upwards, and again leave nearly $1,000 to add to the unused contributions of male teachers, boards and Government.

"Some peculiarities in the bill may be referred to.

"Section 11 (1) contains the proviso that in order to share in its advantages the teacher must have taught during the year in which the bill becomes law. This shuts out the teacher who is out of employment during that year or who is taking a year off to attend school, literary or professional with a view of bettering himself for his work, or the one who has enlisted to serve his country in the war.

S. S. (b) specifies that years of service prior to contribution to the fund shall count but as half years. This at one stroke cuts in half the claim of all female teachers for service up to the present, and of all male teachers who may have taught 30 years or less, because contributions by female teachers have always been optional, but from 1871 to 1885 they were compulsory upon male teachers. In 1885 a change was made by which those who were contributing might continue or not as they choose, on the list. Would it not be fair now to allow those thus discriminated against the privilege of paying for these years so as to put all on an equal basis?

"To sum up: Out of the 7,5[illegible] public school teachers intown, village and rural schools, there are but 32 who have taught for 40 years and upwards, less than one half of one per cent., so that the clause is more ornamental than useful for male teachers, and neither ornamental nor useful for female teachers.

"The clause providing for superannuation after fifteen years' service in the case of those who have become "physically incapacitated" is the most generous one in the bill, and as just as it is generous, providing there is not a 'string to it' in the 'half year' clause.

"These articles have dealt with the provisions of the bill as they affect the female teachers, particularly those in the rural schools, because the latter constitute 84 per cent. of the total number, and the indications are that this proportion will not be reduced, were it desirable. These teachers have to contend with disadvantages which other teachers are not subject, such as greater exposure to inclement weather, bad roads, uncomfortable school buildings, distant boarding places, more frequent changes of schools and lack of privileges enjoyed in urban situations. The teacher after forty years' service would find himself or herself nearly, if not quite, 65 years of age. It seems evident that if one purpose of the scheme be to secure greater permanency of service, the period of voluntary retirement upon pension should be reduced to 30 years for men and 25 for women."

MATILDA COUNCIL

Regular meeting of Matilda Council was held in Gilson's Hall, Brinston, Thursday, Nov. 4, 1915.

Members all present.

Motion Mr. Louden and Mr. Robertson, the Clerk was instructed to write to the Ontario Bridge Company to meet this Council regarding two steel bridges.

Live Stock Judging Demonstration

The Live Stock Judging Demonstrations conducted by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Morrisburg, have been the most popular form of meetings that have been arranged during recent years.

At these demonstrations everyone is given the opportunity of judging the classes of animals in the ring and discussing their placing with the Demonstrater in charge and also with their neighbors. This discussion brings out many features that would otherwise be overlooked and serves to give everyone a better idea of the most desirable type and conformation for the various classes of live stock brought before them.

We are particularly fortunate this year in securing two very able men to conduct these demonstrations. Mr. G. A. Brethen of Norwood, Ont., is a farmer who has had more than ordinary success in building up his dairy herd. He is now recognized as one of the most prominent breeders in Ontario.

Dr. H. G. Reed, formerly a veterinarian of Georgetown, Ont., is one of the most widely known horsemen on Short Course work in the Province. His lectures are always interesting, full of valuable information, and right to the point.

The Live Stock Judging Competition for young men under 25 years of age is a feature of these Courses that every young farmer should take advantage of. This occupies the first half hour of each afternoon.

A detailed programme of one of these Demonstrations will be found in another column of this paper. These are the first and only Short Courses that will be held in Dundas and Stormont Counties during this season and it is to be hoped that a large number of farmers will take this opportunity of hearing two prominent Live Stock men give lectures and demonstrations on these important subjects.

Cornwall Man Loses An Arm

John Denney, of Cornwall, the well-known young defence player of the Cornwall lacrosse team, lost a portion of his left arm, as the result of being drawn into a plater at the paper mill on Tuesday afternoon. He was taken to the Hotel Dieu hospital, where it was found that the arm was so badly crushed that it had to be amputated at the albow.

Denneny was one of the youngest members of the C.L.C. and proved a great find for the club. He was also fast coming forward as a hockey player. He is a brother of Cyril, and Corbet Denneny, who played hockey last year in the City League in Toronto during the past Summer. He is but 16 years of age and had a bright athletic future before him.

Are you Bilious?

Don't let it run too long, it will lead to chronic indigestion. In the meanwhile you suffer from miserable, sick headaches, nervousness, depression and sallow complexion. Just try CHAMBERLAIN'S STOMACH & LIVER TABLETS. They relieve fermentation, indigestion — gently but surely cleanse the system and keep the stomach and liver in perfect running order.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

How They Cure

PLESSISVILLE, QUE.

"I suffered from Kidney Trouble for several years, and tried numerous remedies and doctors' prescriptions without permanent relief, my case being chronic. After seeing about Gin Pills, and as it is a well known fact that Juniper, without alcohol, is excellent for the Kidneys, I decided to try Gin Pills. One single pill gave me great relief. I have now taken four boxes of Gin Pills and find myself completely cured. No more bad humor—increase in weight—clear eyes—fresh color—more strength and vigor. This is what Gin Pills have done for me."

WOMAN IN TERRIBLE STATE

Finds Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cape Wolfe, Canada.—"Last March I was a complete wreck. I had given up all hope of getting better or living any length of time, as I was such a sufferer from female troubles. But I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am in good health and have a pair of twin boys two months old and growing finely. I surprised doctors and neighbors for they all know what a wreck I was.

"Now I am healthy, happy and hearty, and owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies. You may publish this letter if you like. I think if more women used your remedies they would have better health."—Mrs. J. T. COOK, Lot No. 7, Cape Wolfe, P.E.I., Canada.

Because your case is a difficult one, and doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has remedied many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and it may be exactly what you need.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of women—ills that deal out despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

"If I didn't know differently now," she declared, "I would be willing to make solemn oath that this is Aunt Lois's; there is not the least difference between them. And that dreadful ring is really inside it?"

"Bless you, I wouldn't swear to it. I know that I put it there and snapped down the lid—" She looked startled and I stopped.

"Could it have been stolen, do you suppose?" she asked apprehensively.

'I don't think so. In fact, I'm pretty certain that nobody has molested it. I was merely going to say that everything relating to this puzzle has a way of doing the unexpected and the unreasonable—even the impossible—and I shouldn't be at all surprised to see that the ring has transformed itself into something else, or that it has developed a volition of its own and vanished utterly."

"Please don't joke about it," she protested. "I was thinking of what might happen if it fell into somebody's hands who was ignorant of its deadly properties, or somebody acquainted with them who might use it without scruple."

"I have thought of the same thing myself," I responded; "that's why—one of the reasons, at least—I try to keep it hidden.

"But, seriously," I pursued, "what I said is not altogether a joke. While I was first making the ring's acquaintance, the engraved character on the jade set was what is technically known, I believe, as an incised design—that is, cut into the stone. When about to place it in the safe that memorable Saturday afternoon, for some unexplained cause I lifted the lid and took a final glimpse at it. I got a jar that made me think I was seeing crooked: the symbol was no longer incised, but stood out in relief."

"Honestly?" she cried, openly incredulous.

"Cross my heart and hope to die," I solemnly assured her, "if I'm not speaking truth. The circumstance partly reveals the ring's secret. The ideograph is movable. The slightest touch upon the set releases some sort of concealed mechanism that projects the ideograph forcibly outward, possibly an eighth of an inch, and its sharp edges gash the skin just enough to let the deadly poison contained in the hollow metal part enter the blood. Whatever ancient secret toxic it might be, we know that it is swift and sure in its effect, and that it also possesses the property of discoloring the flesh—thus the print of the ideograph is accounted for."

"Isn't it horrible!" gasped my listener.

"My dear girl," I protested eloquently, because I was keenly sensible of the painful train of reflection the ring was bound to awaken in her mind—"my dear girl, why regard it so seriously? If we can't show a brave, healthy contempt for the tools that are the devil's, it means that they have found pliant subjects upon which to work. This lethal jewel, now that we are conversant with its power for evil, is harmless as far as we are concerned. Our defences are up against it, and they are impregnable. It can not cause a ripple in our lives. We scorn its potency. We refuse to take it seriously."

Had it been sentient, how the infernal thing might have grinned at this!

Neither of us, however, had prescience to look even a few minutes ahead to the one set for the supreme surprise. With characteristic malevolence, it held back until the moment was ripe, steadfastly refusing to foreshadow what it was to stand for in the life of this beautiful, sweet-tempered girl.

Regardless of the fact that we were discussing a topic about which clung only unpleasant memories, I was enjoying myself immensely. It was seldom we found time thus to sit down together, not as employer and employee, but simply as a man and a woman in whom the tide of youth and a keen zest for the desirable things of life ran high, and I was not reluctant to lengthen the period and let my work go hang.

Truly, I did not realize at the time how strongly I was drawn to her, nor how comfortable and satisfied I was during these bright intervals of relaxation in her company. I have always been one of those unfortunate chaps who are awkward and ungainly in the presence of ladies, and it were far easier for me to relieve Sisyphus than manufacture small talk, or even words to carry on with them a serious conversation; but I was never sensible of this gagging restraint in the presence of Lois Fox.

As for her, I believe she viewed with a calm, happy contentment the footing of sympathetic and discerning friendship into which our constant daily contact and association had ripened. It was unlike anything that had ever come into her life before, and she appreciated and fostered it accordingly. We had, in short, grown to be good pals before we were aware of it.

I began with the time six years previously, when Mr. Unruh, the public administrator, first gave me the ring and told me the circumstances of Charley Yen's death. I recounted all I knew of its history—how it had been found among my father's effects; how fatal it was to anybody touching the green jade set; how it left upon each victim's skin an imprint of the peculiar ideograph which nobody seemed able to decipher, and, in short, everything respecting it that has already been related.

Now, it had not been a part of my purpose to show her the ring, believing that to do so would be asking too much of her fortitude. One does not heedlessly go about showing a refined and sensitive girl the tool by which her father met a dishonorable death—even though she owned no recollection of ever having seen him, held him in abhorrence while he lived, and cherished no veneration for his memory now that he was dead. So I was surprised when she calmly asked to see it.

"I do not ask out of curiosity," she explained on noting my expression. "It may have played some part in my past that I have forgotten; sight of it may awaken my memory."

"True," I agreed. "I believe you ought to look at it."

I opened the box and shook the ring out upon my desk; and the Lord knows that what it did presently awaken we had not the slightest premonition of.

However, Miss Fox first of all drew away from it with an irrepressible shudder of repugnance, yet could not refrain from looking at it with a sort of frightened, fascinated curiosity that made me laugh at her.

"Don't have to warn you not to touch it, do I?" I observed, cautiously picking it up by the metal part and extending it toward her so that she could view the set and the symbol.

She saw it. In a flash the last atom of my enjoyment vanished. A sudden realization of the ring's hidden venom, of its diabolical secret mechanism for dealing death indiscriminately and impartially, of the appalling possibilities for destruction that lay unseen in the harmless looking bit of green jade, swept over me with demoralizing force.

It was emphatically borne in upon me that the thing, after all, was not to be made light of; that its nature was, in very truth, about as wholesome and inviting as a cobra's.

The girl's first half-timid look changed swiftly to a fixed stare. Her eyes widened; the color ebbed from her cheeks, leaving them as pale as tuberoses.

Next instant she went reeling backward toward the wall, where she stood, the back of one hand before her eyes shutting out further sight of the poisonous object, which seemed to bear some awful meaning to her, while the other hand was extended palm outward, as if she feared it was about to leap at her.

The ring dropped from my nerveless fingers to the blotting-pad, and in a palsy of terror I sprang from my chair.

"Good Heavens!" I shouted. "Did the thing touch you?"

"No, no, no!" she answered in a strangled, excited voice. "I'm not hurt."

To some extent she gradually recovered her poise, while I stood trembling and looking helplessly on. What it all meant I had not the faintest conception of, and so my terror was speechless. It was evident that she was shaken to the very pith and marrow of her being. It seemed impossible for her to tear away her gaze from the ring. Her arms lowered, but shudder after shudder continued to shake her body.

Also she seemed to have forgotten my presence, for after a moment I heard her mutter, as if to herself; as if she were confirming in her own mind the now indisputable existence of some hitherto amazing, stupendous, unbelievable possibility. Strange and mystifying words they were ,too, that she uttered.

"The Kiss of the Silent Death! So it's true, then. How awful!—how awful! Now I know what it means."

In the swift reaction from terror, now that I was convinced that she was unharmed, I slumped weakly back into my chair.

"Then for the love of Heaven," I pleaded in a trembling voice, "tell me too."

Seconds passed, and she appeared not to have heard. Then with an obvious effort she wrested her gaze from the ring and looked at me. Her expression was that of one who has seen visions of inferno.

She stood unresponsive until her self-possession was quite restored, then she advanced a step or two closer to me. Without a word she calmly removed her collar, reached back and unfastened some of the upper buttons of her shirtwaist and drew it down in front an inch or two, thus exposing perhaps a hand's breadth of marmoreal loveliness at the base of her rounded throat. No thought of the unconventionality of the act entered either of our heads at that palpitating moment; the occasion was too crowded with portentous possibilities.

"Look," she said tensely, her eyes glowing.

I did, in a blind, uncomprehending way, and next instant was once more starting from my chair.

On the white flesh, like a green tattoo-mark, was an unmistakable imprint of the death seal; the dread sign which, whatever it might mean to those who could read it, had spelt death to all whom it had touched.

Again our eyes met and we looked long into each other's eyes awed to silence. The same dumfounding thought was flooding both our minds, rendering the situation too full for words.

We were thinking of Strang's inquiry about a tattooed design.

CHAPTER XIV.

Notwithstanding Lois's assurance that she had suffered no harm from the ring, I still must have remained panic-stricken but for one thing. The symbol on the satiny white background at the base of her throat was noticeably larger than the symbol on the set, so it could not have been caused by contact with the latter. And when at last I fully realized this fact, I stammered:

"H-h-how in the name of all that's good did that get there?"

Her calmness and self-possession were now in marked contrast with my flustered state. She looked at me clear-eyed as she buttoned her waist again and refastened her collar.

"How can I tell after this? Birthmark, indeed! Aunt Lois has deliberately deceived me about it. That ring tells me that some monstrous cause made her do so. That's what shocked me so—the stunning conviction that I'm doomed to be allied with crime and evil and bloodshed whether I will or not." She laughed a hard, bitter laugh. "If that's my destiny, what's the use of fighting against it?" she added. "Why not be a crook right? I could."

"Lois!"

It was the first time I had ever addressed her by her first name. It leaped from me in an outburst of reproach and honest indignation—not at her so much as at the cruel, unjust conditions that had provoked and aggravated her present dark mood. Yet I was hurt too; I felt that I did not deserve this.

She sank into a chair and began to cry softly. Instinctively I knew that I had said enough, so I remained silent and waited.

I did not have to wait long. She was not demonstrative by nature and quickly gained control of her feelings.

"I did not mean that," she said by and by, "and I was inconsiderate of you to give way like that. But I'm so reckless and miserable that I hope you'll forgive me. You will, won't you?"

Her tone was all at once coaxing; she smiled; I would have forgiven her anything.

"My dear," I said, "my heart is only full of compassion for you. Go on and tell me all about it; you will feel better. Then we can meet whatever's to come like good sports. Don't forget that I'm with you."

"I shan't—again." Then she went on:

"The instant I saw the character on the set of course I recognized it; then I was overwhelmed with the hideous associations of crime and murder and sudden death that it conjured up.

"Why, Mr. Ferrie, just think of it!" She laid a hand upon her bosom. "This must be a tattoo-mark; James Strang knows. But how did he learn of it? Who could have put it there, and for what earthly reason? It's the most perplexing thing I ever heard of!"

It was, indeed. And I could not offer her a grain of comfort, or advance even a reasonable theory to relieve in some degree her troubled mind.

"But sight of the ideograph awoke some other association in your mind," I reminded her presently. "I don't know whether you are aware of it, but you voiced the thought. You uttered some strange words—what do they mean?"

"That is true. I'll explain; then you'll know as much about it as I do.

"At the time I showed you the Strang letters I honestly believed this to be a birthmark. Why shouldn't I? My aunt and foster-mother assured me it was; I can't remember when it wasn't there. It is just the irregular, purposeless sort of figure that most birthmarks are. But my mind flew back to something that happened years ago—when I was a very little tot—and in the light of to-day's revelation it seems to contain a special significance that I can not get.

"I woke up one night with a feeling that somebody had kissed my throat. It was not a startling kiss, but gentle, like a mother's might have been. I was not frightened, only thoroughly, drowsily comfortable in my crib. In a dim, half-waking, half-sleeping way, I saw Aunt Lois bending over me, crying. She was kneeling on the floor.

VALUE OF SKIM MILK.

Two and a Half Quarts as Nutritive as a Pound of Beefsteak.

The value of skim milk as a practical and economical food is being urged by the United States Department of Agriculture. Recent tests have demonstrated that skim milk, frequently thrown away as a waste product, contains nearly all the food values of whole milk, despite that it is nine-tenths water. Two and a half quarts of skim milk, costing 10 cents, has about the same nutritive value as a pound of beefsteak costing 20 cents or more.

Whole milk, as every one knows, is an indispensable food for the young, and even in the diet of the adult it is comparatively economical. The only nutrient taken from it in skimming is the butter fat. There is left, therefore, in the skim milk, not only all of the sugar, which amounts to about four and one-half parts in every 100, and all of the mineral substances but also all of the protein.

The last named substance is important because, besides serving as a fuel for the body, as fats, sugars and starches do, it also supplies nitrogenous tissue building material. The proportion of protein in skim milk, as well as of the mineral constituents, which are also valuable for body building, is even greater than in whole milk.

Since the nutritive part of skim milk consists very largely of protein, it is to be classed, as whole milk is, with such food materials as eggs, meat, fish, poultry and cheese (though it is much more delicate than those foods) rather than with such substances as sugar, which serve only as fuel.

Two and a half quarts of skim milk contain almost as much protein and yield about the same amount of energy as a pound of beef. When skim milk sells for 4 cents a quart, or about 2 cents a pound, and round of beef for 20 cents a pound, a dime, or any other sum of money spent for skim milk will provide nearly twice as much nourishment as it will if spent for round steak. Round of beef, of course, is one of the lower priced meats and when compared with the more expensive cuts skim milk makes a still better showing from the standpoint of economy.

The comparison with oysters is very significant; a quart of oysters contains less than twice as much nourishment as a quart of skim milk and yet it often costs several times as much. Both are useful, wholesome foods, and in the oyster one has a special flavor. A combination of the two in oyster stew or creamed oysters is an economical way of using the oysters, since it makes a given quantity "go further."

Almanacks are in existence that were compiled in the fourteenth century, but they are only in manuscript; the first printed almanack was issued about the year 1475.

"Every one in our family is some kind of animal," said Jimmie to the amazed preacher. "Why, you should not say that!" the good man exclaimed. "Well," said Jimmie, "Mother's a dear, the baby is mother's little lamb, I'm the kid, and dad's the goat."

PRACTICAL FARMING

Standardizing Canadian Eggs.

From present indications it would appear that one of the most important developments to date in the improvement of the Canadian egg trade was the action taken by the Canadian Produce Association last winter in adopting definite standards for Canadian eggs.

Hitherto each market and in most markets each dealer had a system of grading peculiar to his own trade. This resulted in endless confusion to the consumer, and great difficulty was experienced at times on the part of the producer in finding a satisfactory market for his product.

Realizing the importance of having definite standards for all live stock products the Live Stock Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture has endeavored by means of pamphlets, placards, and other means, to give the standards for eggs as much publicity as possible. The co-operation of exhibition association has also been secured, prominent among which has been that of the Canadian National Exhibition Association, at whose exhibition in Toronto this year, in response to prizes offered, probably the largest collection of eggs ever brought together in one exhibition of the American continent was displayed. Some 7,000 dozen in all were on exhibition. The prize list for eggs was prepared in accordance with the standards, and the judges made their awards according to the accuracy of the interpretation, on the part of the exhibitor, of the definitions of the various grades.

At a number of exhibitions where no extensive classes for eggs have been offered, the Live Stock Branch has made a display of eggs graded in accordance with the standards, and in each instance has supplemented the display with actual demonstrations in a candling booth specially designed for the purpose, of the way in which eggs of the various grades appear when candled.

In order that the consumers and producers generally may become more familiar with the various classes and grades, the following explanation is given:

Three general classes for eggs are provided under the standards, viz:—

"Fresh gathered," "Storage," and "Cracked and Dirties." Four grades are provided in the first class, three in the second, and two in the third.

The grades in the "Fresh Gathered" class are "Specials," "Extras," "No. 1's," and "No. 2's." The grade "Specials" is omitted from the "Storage" class, and both specials and extras from the class for "Cracked and Dirties."

"Specials," according to the standards are eggs of uniform size weighing over 24 ounces to the dozen or over 45 pounds net to the 30 dozen case; absolutely clean, strong and sound in shell; air cell small, not over 3/16 of an inch in depth; white of egg firm and clear, and yolk dimly visible; free from blood clots.

"Extras" are eggs of good size, weighing at least 24 ounces to the dozen or 45 pounds net to the 30 dozen case; clean, sound in shell; air cell less than 3/8 of an inch in depth; with white of egg firm, and yolk slightly visible.

"No. 1's" are eggs weighing at least 23 ounces to the dozen or 43 pounds net to the 30 dozen case; clean, sound in shell; air cell less than 1/2 inch in depth; white of egg reasonably firm; yolk visible but mobile, not stuck to the shell or seriously out of place.

"No. 2's" are eggs clean; sound in shell; may contain weak watery eggs, and eggs with heavy yolks, and all other eggs sound in shell and fit for food.

Consumers, in order to protect themselves in the matter of purchasing eggs, should acquaint themselves with these standards and the above definitions of the grades. Only by creating a demand for certain grades of eggs will the supply be forthcoming, and the demand can come only with a thorough knowledge on the part of the consumer as to what constitutes the various grades. It has also been frequently suggested that since the adoption of the standards consumers generally, in order to safeguard themselves, would do well to insist that all eggs as offered for sale be labelled in accordance with their proper grade.

Producers, too, would do well to more systematically grade their eggs before marketing, and, know definitely what they have in hand, be in a better position to demand a price commensurate with the quality supplied.

DISEASES OF THE NERVES

Are Due to Poor Blood and Only Curable Through the Blood.

There is an excellent reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured the most severe cases of neuralgia, sciatica and other complaints in the group known as disorders of the nerves. This group also included nervousness and excitability. Each of these complaints exists because the nerves are not getting a proper nourishment from the blood. The reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure nervous disorders is because they make the rich, red blood upon which the nerves depend for proper tone. It is thus seen that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure nervous disorders because they go to the root of the trouble in the blood, and while they are doing this they strengthen and fortify the whole system against disease. Among the many who have found relief from pain through this great medicine is Miss Ethel Smith, residing near Burford, Ont., who says:—"Some years ago I was seized with a great pain in my right leg, between the hip and knee. It became so bad that I got no rest, day or night, and often cried with the pain. The doctor said the trouble was rheumatism of the sciatic nerve. Liniments were used until they actually took the skin off, and still the pain grew worse and worse. Then all the other nerves in the limb seemed to be affected, and it kept jerking and twitching until it would have to be held to keep it still. Then the doctor put the limb in a papier mache case, but it was not long until the trouble began in my other limb, and it had to be treated in the same way. I lay in that condition for three years with my whole servous system so badly shattered that it would make me scream if any one walked across the floor. Then my throat became partially paralyzed and I could scarcely speak. During this time I had been attended by three different doctors, who did all in their power, but each said I would never be able to walk again. Then my father decided to get me Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before I had used them long I felt them helping me. This so encouraged us that the use of the pills was continued and in a few months I was able to walk half a mile each day to get the mail. I used in all eighteen or twenty boxes of the Pills and they did what three years of doctoring had not been able to do. I am as well as ever I was in my life, and have had no return of the trouble. My family and friends think my cure was a miracle, but we give all the credit to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LITTLE OF REAL ROMANCE.

In Life of Comptroller Fortescue of Royal N. W. M. P.

One of the chief regrets of Comptroller Fortescue, now about to retire from the Royal North-West Mounted Police of Canada, with whom he has served for over 40 years, when interviewed, is that in spite of his long service and the distinction that he has attained, he has missed practically all the romance and adventure that the public are apt to associate with the "riders of the plains."

"My work has been almost entirely in the offices at headquarters," said he. "The rounding up of Indians and outlaws and the active work of keeping order has been for others, and I don't want to tell other men's stories."

Comptroller Fortescue said that he joined the police in 1873, when the force came into existence, and was one of the original party that came out West to Winnipeg nearly a dozen years before the laying of the railway. The main business of the force was, curiously enough, the protection of the Indians, who were being exploited by the white traders and being demoralized by the whiskey, which was the traders' chief stock in trade for the bartering of furs.

In the first year he was out in the West, however, Constable Fortescue, as he then was, was taken ill with typhoid, and was invalided to the East. As a man familiar with the work of the force was then needed at headquarters, Constable Fortescue was taken into the office, and there adventure, as far as the future comptroller was concerned, came to an end, for though the rise of the young constable to supreme control of the famous force is not without romance, the [illegible] which he was engaged as Comptroller Fortescue remarked, does not lend itself to the telling of stories. The comptroller is now in his 71st year.

Throw Away Your Eye-Glasses!

A Free Prescription

You Can Have Filled and Use at Home

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye-weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time, and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefitted by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto. Fill a two-ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one Bon-Opto tablet and allow to dissolve. With this liquid, bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start, and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now, before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

BRITAIN'S FAST TRAINS.

Rigid Economies in Operation Have Not Cut Down Speed.

In spite of wartime economies and alterations in railway timetables, England still has the fastest trains, the longest non-stop runs and the lowest fares in the world, according to the London Daily Chronicle.

The fastest train "for a fair distance," it is explained, is the morning express from London to Bristol, which makes this run of 119½ miles daily in 120 minutes. A special test trip over this route was made several years ago in exactly 84 minutes.

The longest non-stop run is by the Cornish Express. London to Exeter, 174 miles in 180 minutes. The cheapest fare is the round-trip excursion rate between London and Skegness, which offers a 262-mile trip for 75 cents, or about ¼ cent per mile.

Dangerous Throat Troubles Prevented by Nerviline

IT ENDS MISERY OF COLDS QUICKLY.

Don't wait till night.

Get after your cold now,—this very minute, before it grows dangerous you should apply old-time "Nerviline."

Rub your chest and throat, rub them thoroughly with Nerviline. Relief will be immediate.

Nerviline will save you from lying awake to-night, coughing, choking and suffering from congestion in the chest and acute pain in the throat.

Nerviline will break up that dull neuralgic headache—will kill the cold and chill at its very beginning—will save you from perhaps a serious illness.

To take away hoarseness, to break up a grippy cold, to cure a sore throat or bad cold in the chest, you can use nothing so speedy and effective as Nerviline. For forty years it has been the most largely used family remedy in the Dominion. Time has proved its merit, so can you by keeping handy on the shelf the large 50c. family size bottle; small trial size 25c., sold by any dealer anywhere.

A FEW RULES.

Be Conscientious in the Discharge of Every Duty.

Dishonesty seldom makes one rich, and when it does riches are a curse. There is no such thing as dishonest success. The world is not going to pay you for nothing. Ninety per cent. of what men call luck is only talent for hard work. Do not lean on others to do your thinking or to conquer your difficulties. Be conscientious in the discharge of every duty. Do your work thoroughly. No one can rise who slights work. Do not try to begin at the top. Begin at the bottom and you will have a chance to rise, and will be surer of reaching the top some time. Be punctual. Keep your appointments. Be there a minute before time if you have to lose your dinner to do it. Be polite. Every smile, every gentle bow, is money in your pocket. Be generous. Meanness makes enemies and breeds distrust. Spend less than you earn. Do not run in debt. Watch the little leaks, and you can live on your salary.

Not His Funeral.

It is the kindly custom in a certain English village for the well-to-do inhabitants to make good any loss that the villagers sustain through the death of live stock. The retired manufacturer who had only recently settled in the village was ignorant of that fact, and was much puzzled by the visit of a laborer's wife, who said that she had lost a pig.

"Well, I haven't got it," explained the puzzled newcomer.

"What I mean is, of course, the pig died," nervously explained the woman.

"Well, what do you want me to do?" cried the thoroughly bewildered man. "Send a wreath?"

DR. JACKSON'S ROMAN MEAL IS A FOOD, NOT A FRAUD.

Many so-called cereal foods are frauds. To prove it, try to live entirely upon them for a few days. Many live entirely upon Roman Meal. A recent letter from California says: Dear Dr. Jackson: A friend of mine has lived upon Roman Meal for thirteen months. His case had been pronounced hopeless. He is now in perfect health." No fraud here. Roman Meal is scientifically balanced by an expert dietitian. It's the perfect food, and positively relieves constipation. Ask your doctor. Make it in porridge, pancakes, gems. At grocers', 10 and 25 cents.

Why He Resigned.

In a small New England town the janitor of the schoolhouse, much to the surprise of his friends, resigned his office. When he was asked why he did so he said:—"I'm honest, and mean to be above suspicion. If I find anything when sweepin' the school I allus return it. A few days ago I read on the blackboard, 'Find the greatest common divisor.' Well, I looked all over for it, but I wouldn't know the blamed thing if I bumped into it. Last night, in big writin' on the board, it said, 'Find the least common multiple.' So I says to myself, 'Both these things are lost now, and I'll be accused of takin' 'em.' So I just got up and left."

His Self-Denial.

Ernest," she gasped, choking back her tears, "father has lost all!"

"Eh?"

"Father has lost all," she reiterated.

"Not all!" he exclaimed.

"Yes, all."

"Never," he said bravely, pulling himself together. "You, Miranda still are left to him. I could not be so cruel as to take the last of his wealth."

"Ernest!"

"No!" Firmly he held her off. "Tell him, Miranda, tell him from me, that his generosity towards me demands that I leave what little lies in my power!"

Prohibition Favors Tea-Drinking.

Well-informed members of the tea trade say that the figures for the year show an astonishingly large increase of tea drinking throughout the world. Prohibition is largely to account for this, and, when a great country like Russia prohibits the sale of strong drink and the people turn to tea, it means an immense drain on the resources of the gardens whence comes the world's supply. In the last few months the cost of tea has risen 12 or 14 cents a pound.

In December, 1913, national savings in Russia amounted to £70,000; in December, 1914, however, after the sale of vodka had been stopped, the savings had reached nearly three million sterling.

Steel Points.

The expression "well-tempered" or "finely-tempered" steel is generally misused. It is usually taken to indicate steel of extra hardness, whereas the reverse is the case, though very few people are aware of the fact. The greater the degree of tempering the softer the steel. The steel worker measures the degree of tempering by the color of the metal. Thus the hardest—i.e., the least tempered steel is light straw in color, while the softest kind is white. Between these extremes, commencing from the hard end of the scale, are the following shades: Straw, dark straw, light bronze, bronze, dark bronze, light blue, blue, dark blue. Tempering steel is a very delicate business, and one calling for that sense of what is "just right" which is found in good cooks.

She Explains.

Mabel—You and Harold seem inseparable.

Gertrude—We are together a good deal. You see, Mabel, I take a peculiar interest in him.

Mabel—Oh, do you?

Gertrude—Yes. I was engaged to him at one time, and in love with him at another.

Minard's Liniment Cures Diphtheria.

His Orders.

"Remember," said the sergeant "no one is allowed to dismount without orders."

Murphy was no sooner in the saddle than he was thrown to the ground.

"Murphy," yelled the sergeant, when he discovered him lying breathless on the ground, "you dismounted."

"I did."

"Did you have orders?"

"I did."

"From headquarters, I suppose?"

"No, sir; from hindquarters."

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Gentlemen,—Last winter I received great benefit from the use of MINARD'S LINIMENT in a severe attack of LaGrippe, and I have frequently proved it to be very effective in cases of Inflammation.

Yours,
W. A. HUTCHINSON.

No Chance to Try it.

A man who sells shower baths on five days' trial told this story:

"I sent one out to a man in the rural districts. I told him to use the shower bath five days and if at the end of this time he was not satisfied to send it back. This is the letter I received:

"Your shower bath looks good, and perhaps is all right. I don't know whether it is or not because the five days for trial passed before Saturday night come around, and I didn't have a chance to try it out."

If a man snores he has a good excuse for remaining away from church.

MUNITION PLANT DESTROYED.

Russian Factory Near Kobe Blown Up by Spies.

It is reported here that German spies have blown up one of the ammunition factories at Aboshi, near Kobe, Japan. The plant is owned by the Japan Celluloid Company, but has been equipped for the manufacture of explosives, especially guncotton, for Russia. The facts as to the reported destruction of one of the factories are withheld.

Now that Japan has decided to increase her output of munitions extra military guards are being placed around all property used for the manufacture of munitions and suplies.

How Sickly Women May Get Health

If they could only be made to see that half their ills are caused by impure blood, it wouldn't take long to cure them with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Truly a wonderful Medicine that invigorates, strengthens, renews. Every tired, worn out, woman that tries Dr. Hamilton's Pills will improve rapidly, will have better color, increased appetite and better digestion.

No better rebuilding tonic can be found than Dr. Hamilton's Pills which are safe, mild and health giving. For forty years Dr. Hamilton's Pills have been America's most valued family medicine, 25c. per box at all dealers.

Not Annoying.

Mr. Thomas A. Edison, the wonderful inventor, has suffered for years from deafness. Once asked whether he did not find his affliction annoying he replied—"No; there are so many things people say that one doesn't want to hear."

Minard's Liniment Cures Garget in Cows

More than 200 ships in the Navy are driven by oil. For steam-raising purposes three tons of oil will take the place of four tons of coal.

Nelson's old ship, the Foudroyant, was sold to the Germans in 1892, bought back by public subscription, and finally wrecked at Blackpool in 1897; whereupon the wood and metal salved from her were made into hundreds of pieces of furniture and dainty nicknacks.

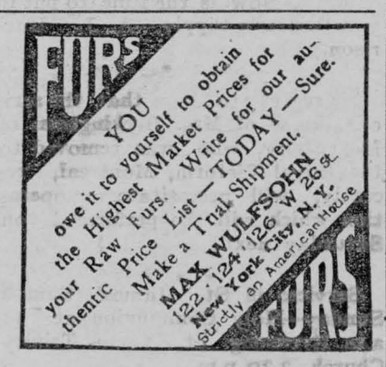
GREAT CHEMIST PRAISES ZAM-BUK

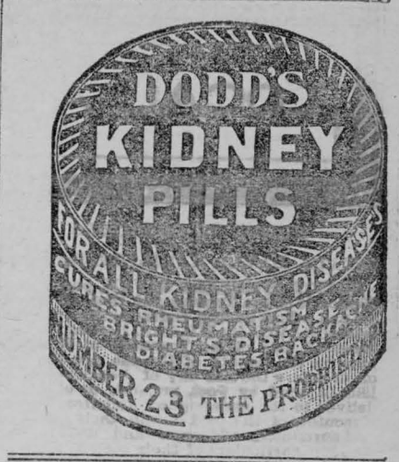
Mothers Who Use This Famous Balm Have Backing of Science

Mothers who use Zam-Buk, because they have proved it to be a splendid healer, will be interested to hear the result of a test of Zam-Buk by Mr. W. Lascelles Scott, the great English chemist. He says:—"I have made an exhaustive analytical examination of Zam-Buk and find its active constituents are of exclusive vegetable origin. It contains none of the impure and irritating mineral drugs and animal fats present in ordinary ointments. The antiseptic and bactericidal (germ-destroying) powers of this preparation are proved by my tests to exceed those of carbolic acid, yet Zam-Buk neither cauterizes nor inflames even a very sensitive skin, but ends skin disorders.

"I have no hesitation in certifying the purity of Zam-Buk and its value for skin injuries and disorders."

Mothers who have not yet tried Zam-Buk should profit by the above. Zam-Buk is unequalled for eczema, cuts, burns, ulcers, running sores, piles, cold sores, abscesses, chapped hands, etc. All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box, 3 boxes $1.25.





Courage.

"Pa, what is courage?"

"Courage, my boy, is what your father shows when he keeps his shoes on when he comes into the house several hours later than he told your mother he would be."

On Tuesday morning, Mr. J. B. Baker, whose home is about a mile north of Aultsville, was visited by a man with an unreasonable desire. Upon entering Mr. Baker's home the man demanded his dinner and proceeded to take possession of the house, ordering every one out of the house. Mr. Baker at once notified the authorities and a detachment from the local staff of officers, assisted Mr. Baker in removing the Maniac from his house. On Wednesday afternoon the unfortunate was arraigned before Justice Eager, and an examination revealed that the man was insane. He is now in charge of Chief Cassel, pending his removal to the Brockville asylum.

The patriotic spirit in Morrisburg has spread to even the little folk, not yet in their teens, as instanced by the concert given in the Music Hall by the little girls—Evelyn Marsh, Helen Merkley, Maxiline Moore, Patricia Colligan, Lauretta VanAllen, Gwynneth Davy Jane Williams and Mary Heagle. They realized $8.30 by selling tickets at five cents each :or adults and one cent for children's, and donated the proceeds to the Red Cross. Mr. Merkley, as usual, encouraged the good work by giving them the use of the hall. Their spirit is commendable and we wish it might be emulated by the young people of the town.

* * *

The annual donation to the Cornwall General Hospital collected from the people of Morrisburg and vicinity was duly shipped and consisted of one barrel and one large box of canned fruit, thirteen bags of vegetables, besides the goodly sum of $73.75. It is a pleasure to collect for this worthy cause as every one receives the collectors kindly and gives willingly. A grateful acknowledgement of the goods has been received from the superintendent, Miss Thompson, and of the money from Mr. F. D. McLennan, Sec.-Treas.
