Seeley Building Opened With Gala Dance and Program

The gala dance last Friday night, opening the new Seeley Building at the corner of Isabella St. and Riverside Drive, under the auspices of the Seeley Health Clinic, to raise funds to enable indigent children to receive treatment for their ailments, was one huge success.

The dance took the form of a floor show under the M.C.'ing of M. R. Coste and the participants included many well-known and talented Morrisburg entertainers.

During the course of the evening, the merry-makers were addressed by Reeve F. H. Broder, as well as several other prominent residents of the district, who all spoke very highly, not only of the new building, which will soon be ready for use, but also highly commending Dr. Seeley's efforts to raise funds for such a worthy cause.

A unique event during the course of the evening was a demonstration by Dr. M. R. Seeley with members of the audience as subjects, of his really wonderful talent of foot adjustments. This really marvellous technique has been the source of great benefit and almost miraculous cures to thousands of patients who have come to the Seeley Clinic from every portion of the U.S. and Canada.

If you were not fortunate enough to be present at the Friday evening festivities and feel, as every fortunate and healthy human should, that the cause is a worthy one, contributions will be thankfully received at Dr. Seeley's office.

May we have more such joyous occasions, where good neighbours can get together, be highly entertained, whilst doing a worthy deed for the unfortunate who need help.

FRACTURED PELVIS WHEN STRUCK BY AUTO

In Cornwall General Hospital with a fractured pelvis is Gerald Erratt, 24, of Aultsville, who was struck by an automobile on Saturday at midnight on the main street of Williamsburg village.

Erratt was crushed between his own car and another driven by Douglas Gibson, 21, of Cornwall, as he attempted to get into his parked automobile on the side near the travelled portion of the road. Condition of Mr. Erratt is reported as good.

Provincial Constable Earl Wellesley of Morrisburg investigated the accident, and has laid a charge of careless driving against Gibson.

PRESENTATION

At the home of Mr. Frank Stata, who left Morrisburg this week to reside with his son in Brockville, the Official Board of the United Church recognized his long service to that church with a presentation and address, as follows:

Dear Mr. Stata—The members of the Official Board of the Morrisburg United Church desire to express to you their appreciation of your faithful and devoted service, given to this church over a period of many years. No matter what difficulties faced the church, you were always willing to do your share.

Your Christian spirit and blameless life will always be an inspiration to those who had the pleasure of being associated with you.

We trust you will accept these gifts as a small evidence of our esteem and may God bless you and your good wife.

Signed on behalf of the Board

FRED H. MEIKLE,
J. H. JOHNSTON.

HONOURING NEWLYWEDS

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Barkley was the scene of a happy gathering on Tuesday evening when about 85 neighbours and friends assembled to honor Mr. and Mrs. Harry Whitteker (nee Ella Mae Barkley) upon the occasion of their recent marriage. The evening was pleasantly spent in cards and crokinole, and about 11 o'clock the young couple were called to the front of the room when an address of congratulations and best wishes was read by Miss June Whitteker. At the same time the presentation of a chest of silverware and other beautiful gifts was made to the honoured guests. The presentation was made by Misses Doris McIntosh, Doris and Lois Beckstead, who assisted by Lee Hummell had arranged for the party.

Mr. Whitteker, on behalf of himself and bride, made suitable reply, thanking all for their best wishes, the gifts and for arranging the gathering. After singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows", refreshments were served by the ladies.

Gentlemen—In reply to your request for a cheque, I have following to mention: My shattered financial condition is due to federal laws, provincial laws, municipal laws, city laws, corporation laws, liquor laws, mother-in-laws, brother-in-laws and outlaws.

Through these laws I am compelled to pay a business tax, amusement tax head tax, school tax, gas tax, oil tax, light tax, water tax, sales tax, carpet tax, poll tax and excise tax. I am required to get a business license, car license, truck license, not to mention marriage licesne and dog license.

For my own safety I am required to carry life insurance, property insurance, liability insurance, burglar insurance, tornado insurance, unemployment insurance, old age insurance and fire insurance.

In my business I am inspected, expected, suspected, disrespected, rejected, ejected, examined, re-examined, informed, required, summoned fined, commanded and compelled.

Simply because I refuse to donate something or other, I am boycotted, talked about, lied about, held up and held down and robbed until I am almost ruined.

I can also honestly say that except for the miracle that happened, I could not enclose this cheque. The wolf that comes to many doors nowadays just had pups in my kitchen. I sold them and here is the money.

Morrisburg Recreation Commission

A number of facts concerning the Morrisburg Recreation can now be made known.

It is expected and hoped that it will have the support of all in Morrisburg and community.

It has been apparent for some years that such an organization would be of real service to the town. This wish and desire is now realized. Such a committee has been operating in many cities, towns and communities in Ontario for some years very successfully. There is every reason to believe it will be a useful and helpful organization in Morrisburg.

It requires the active support and co-operation of the citizens, for the welfare of the community. Therefore this new organization deserves the support of the town.

PURPOSE: This Commission intends to strive in co-ordinating the various activities for the welfare of all in physical fitness and good citizenship. It suggests and works along the line of sports, music, choral groups, art-craft, dramatics, etc. The purpose is to provide an opportunity for veryone, especially among the youth and children. This will help us all to think in terms of the welfare of the other fellow. Many of these objectives cannot be achieved in a year, or without the active interest of the people, or without facilities with which to work.

At this time of year the Commission is concerned with winter activities.

EQUIPMENT: Everyone knows little can be accomplished without some equipment, facilities and supplies, especially a building for indoor activity. Let us not overlook this fact: that "equipment" does not apply only to buildings and rink, etc. It definitely means men and women, and youths, who are willing to give time and talents as leaders, who will be happy to give such for the welfare of others. Morrisburg is well blessed with supplies, rink, ball park and swimming. It does lack a modern building for community enterprises. This may come. The churches have done well in offering their places from time to time for some activities.

ORGANIZATION: The Commission has been authorized by the town council, Nov. 5th, 1948 with by-law no. 774. It is now being approved and registered with the Department of Education of Ontario, to carry out its purposes, aims and objects in physical and moral fitness for the village of Morrisburg.

The elected officers stand for one year or until September 15th, 1949. They have been elected by the appointed representatives of the following organizations: town council, the Board of Education, Lions Club, the Board of Trade, Women's Institute, and Canadian Legion. They may add to their numbers as they see fit. They have appointed sub-committees to direct and sponsor intermediate, juvenile, midget and town hockey; one to supervise the erecting of an open air rink. One is appointed to solicit funds to support such work. It would be well to mention his name—Mr. T. Connor. If he comes, don't turn him down. Leave your generous gift with him. The treasurer is Mr. C. Coughler, and he will also be pleased to receive any gifts any time. May the citizens respond to this new community enterprise. The appointments for hockey are: intermediate, Mr. T. R. Parker; juvenile, Mr. C. Hess; midget, V. Lynch; town league, Mr. J. S. McAuley. Organization work is now progressing. A committee is to meet the rink management to plan temporary play and practice hours.

Election Results of Williamsburg

Following are the results of the municipal election held in Williamsburg Township on Monday:

Reeve: (previously elected by acclamation), Oscar Coughler.

Deputy Reeve: Frank Darling, 500 votes; George Hess, 351 votes.

Council: (first three are elected): Donald Kyle, 550 votes; Bernice Froats, 535 votes; Keith Schell, 441 votes; Bernice Gallinger, 372 votes.

SWEATER CATCHES IN WRINGER, WINCHESTER BABY STRANGLED

The 20-months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ball, of Winchester Springs was strangled to death yesterday in the wringer of a washing machine. The baby apparently had climbed on a chair while his mother was washing, catching his sweater in the electrically operated wringer. The sweater was drawn through the wringer and tightened about the baby's throat.

GRATITUDE

Often at dawn, when all is bright,
Refreshed by sleep and thankful too
For all surrounding nature's might,
For all my hand can touch and do.

My wond'ring mind compels my heart
To feel, accept and understand
The added strength to do my part,
The trust put in a guiding hand!

Often by day through toil and love,
Depressed by sorrow, endless care,
My timid heart appeals above
In dignity and silent prayer!

Often at night when all is calm
And thoughts are far from simple strife,
My weary soul can find the balm,
The blissful rest, bestowed on life!

CARL MADSEN
Ottawa Citizen.

Letter To The Editor

To the Editor—May we, through the medium of your paper, thank all those whoh contributed to the success of our recent bingo. After all expenses, such as the cost of prizes, Hall, etc., we realized sufficient funds to finance our Christmas party for the kiddies of the community and have a little left for some of our other activities.

Morrisburg Lions Club,

YOUR WEEK-END SMILE

The other day when we were in a grocery store, a pert young woman, apparently a bride, came in. "I've brought back those eggs you gave me yesterday, they are duck eggs", and she handed the grocer a box. "Duck eggs!" replied the grocer, "You're mistaken I don't sell duck eggs."

"But I tested them", triumphed the matrimonial novice." I dropped them into water and they floated."

WHAT GOES ON IN THE WORLD

by Norman Blair

Great Britain

There are persistent reports in The Daily Herald—the official Socialist paper— to the effect that the Conservatives badly want to get rid of Winston Churchill as the party leader. Undoubtedly there is great dissatisfaction with his intermittent or absentee leadership of the Opposition, but there is one question to which nobody as yet has come up with a reasonable answer.

It amounts to this—"Assuming that Churchill's leadership is faulty and unlikely to lead toward success at the polls, just what appeal could the Tories make minus his dynamic personality?"

As far as the Socialists go, they would prefer Churchill to lead the Conservatives at the next election, rather than Anthony Eden. They think that the smooth-looking Mr. Eden might get a large share of the feminine vote, whereas the same women would be afraid of Churchill taking the nation into war with Russia.

Churchill recently made quite a come-back in the House of Commons. He has had to endure a "hot war" with the Socialists and a "cold one" with many of his own supporters; but in the debate on the second reading of the Steel Bill, he completely dominated the scene.

In fact when Sir Stafford Cripps wound up for the Government, there was a wild scene with only a minute and a half to go on the clock. Cripps, who had done well till that point, suddenly lost his head, saying that if Socialism couldn't accomplish its aims by Parliamentary means it would have to resort to some more violent method. It was a silly and unnecessary thing to say, and Churchill rose to his feet in a rage.

Cripps refused to give way and pointed to the clock. The place was in an uproar, with both sides shouting insults. Churchill's arms could be seen waving defiantly, and his raucous voice shouting "We are not afraid of your revolution." Mr. Speaker intervened and made the two sit down. But as soon as the Speaker resumed his seat they were up like two boxers at the sound of the gong.

Cripps probably did not mean anything sinister by his mention of violence; but the incident will undoubtedly add to the Government's growing unpopularity. Churchill continued to dominate the House next day and his supporters were full of enthusiasm. But they're wondering if Winston will now lose interest in Parliament until some other big issue comes up. The amount of time he spends writing his Memoirs has indubitably made the public attitude in general towards Churchill much cooler than it was a few months ago.

The United States

The problem of juvenile "gangs" and youthful vandalism is one which bothers, not not only those living in larger cities, but residents of small towns and villages as well; and it is interesting to learn that the right sort of welfare worker can get "next to"—and influence for the better—even the toughest adolescent.

At least this is the preliminary conclusion in what has been one of the world's most startling social welfare experiments—one which involved the attempted regeneration of three Harlem gangs known as The Purple Knights, the Royal Counts and The Flashes.

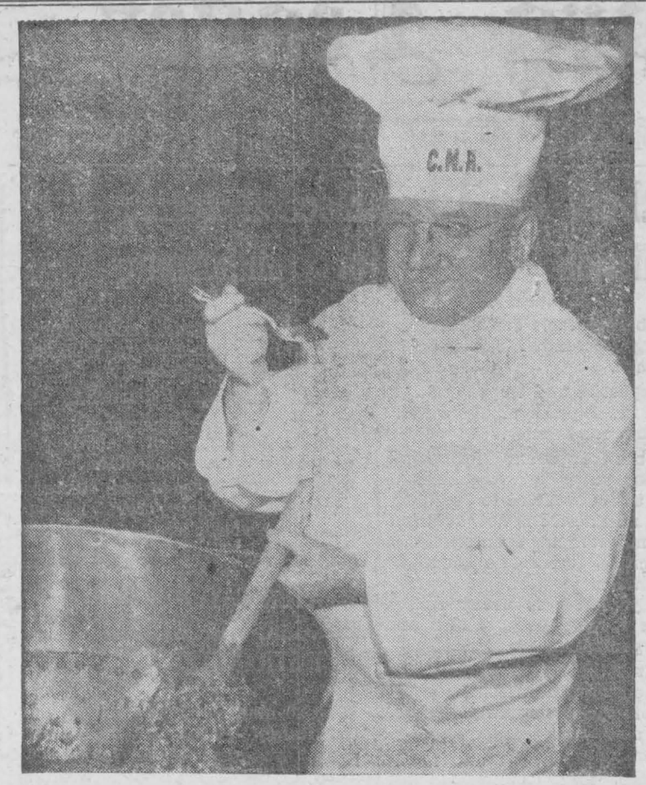
Some three years ago the Welfare Council became concerned over the amount of gang fighting going on in that city. It was estimated that there were no less than 1400 of these gangs in operation in New York City with varying amounts of weapon carrying, stealing and rows with the police.

Reporting on the first year's progress the president of the Welfare Council said, "I don't think we've worked a miracle, but the fact that these groups have not engaged in any fights during the year is sound reason to believe that their interests have shifted from undesirable activities to the better sort."

He went on to say that the field workers are not "out to break up the gangs. They are not out to tell the boys who should be their leader, but to work with the established leader. We think that the gang is an absolutely natural and potentially desirable group, and believe that efforts to break it up are doomed to failure."

The field workers use different methods to establish contacts with the gangs. One spent many hours in the boys' hangout—a candy store. Finally, they invited him to play football with them. Another was introduced by friendly members to a gang as "a guy who can help you with a basketball team and things like that."

Convinced now that it is possible to gain acceptance in such clubs, the welfare workers now plan to go on strengthening their efforts. Their success up to now might furnish an idea to those in various Ontario communities who are worried over the increase in juvenile delinquency and disrespect for the law.



PUDDING BY THE TON: Housewives work out their recipes for Christmas pudding in terms of pounds, but Fred Conway, chef instructor for the Canadian National Railways, has the annual task of preparing three tons — or 29,000 servings — of the traditional Yuletide dessert. Working in a railway dining car with two assistants, he produces this 3-ton pudding entirely by hand in the brief space of two weeks.

The special and proven CNR recipe calls for 675 pounds of sugar, 600 pounds of suet, 1200 pounds of raisins, 600 pounds of currants, 600 pounds of mixed peel, 600 pounds of bread crumbs, 300 pounds of flour, 600 pounds of dates, 300 pounds of prunes, 300 pounds of carrots, 125 pounds of assorted spices, 78 dozen lemons and 300 dozen eggs.

With a wooden spoon, Mr. Conway mixes the ingredients in a huge chrome plated bowl and measures out the pudding into 1¼ pound containers. Three hours later they are cooled, sealed and made ready for distribution to various points along the 23,500-mile CNR system.

SPORTS &c

by A Sixbit Critic

Jockeys—the race-track, not the "disk" variety—have a way of going up like a sky rocket, then coming down like the stick; and it is rather saddening to look back over the years and recall the number of lads who were hailed as "second Earl Sand's" their first season out, and then faded into obscurity.

* * *

Principad reason for is, of course, is that these young jockeys, during their first year of riding or the biggest part thereof, have the advantage of their "bug allowance" which is stable slang for the several pounds weight advantage which jockeys get during their "apprentice" period. Five pounds or so less weight in the saddle often means the difference between a winner and an also-ran, and helps greatly to offset the superior knowledge and cunning which comes with experience.

* * *

So it's a little too early to try and guess whether little Clarence Picou has the makings of a great riding star, or is just another first year "flash in the pan." At all events 100 pound Clarence has been having a great year; and although betting on jockeys is said to be the speediest of all race-track ruin, anybody following his mounts and betting on everything he rode mightn't have done too badly.

* * *

Speaking of another sort of horse-racing—the "harness" variety—old-time lovers of the sport will be interested in learning that Hollywood is making a film based on the life of an animal who many think was the greatest of them all—Dan Patch no less. Who is to act as Dan's "stand-in" for the flicker we haven't heard as yet; but we wouldn't mind making a few small bets that, whoever it is, he won't be able to come through the stretch as fast as the original, who was really something to watch when he was "turning on the heat."

* * *

Wrestling fans—as we've said before—are a breed all by themselves, and there doesn't seem to be anything too raw for the promoters to offer them. They have "man against alligator" matches and the folks eat it up. They have wrestling between two-man teams and so forth. But when a Toronto promoter announced a match with no less than six of the behemoths in the ring we thought he'd gone too far even for wrestling bugs.

* * *

The result? Something like fifteen thousand or thereabouts paid attendance—and the crowd whooping their heads off just as if they didn't know, deep inside them, that it was all about 90 per cent histrionics.

* * *

As a matter of fact out in Los Angeles—another spot where the grunt-and-groan boys go over in a huge way—one of the newspapers lists news of the matches, not on the sports pages, but in the drama columns—which is just about where it belongs.

* * *

And yet, when talk gets around to athletes who showed outstanding gameness, it is always a wrestler we think of as the gamest of them all. His name was Gus Sonnenberg, who had made a big name for himself as a college footballer—Dartmouth,.. we. think—principally.. because the viciousness of his "flying tackle"— a method of bringing an adversus to a full stop which was later outlawed.

* * *

Sonnenberg was induced—by the offer of huge amounts of folding money—to cash in on his football rep by becoming a wrestler. One of the principal things a wrestler must learn is how to protect himself —how to take, apparently, a really terrific-looking and sounding tumble to the canvas, and still not break any bones. Matter of fact most top wrestlers are more tumblers and acrobats than anything else.

* * *

Sonnenberg didn't have the build for a wrestler, being fairly short and stocky; and had learned but few of the rudiments of the game, especially in this matter of self-preservation. Due to his greenness, he really took an astounding amount of punishment every time he climbed through the ropes; but he always gave the promoters—and the customers—full value for their money, and a little bit extra.

* * *

Time after time we've seen Sonnenberg throw himself through the air at an opponent—miss the target —and land smack against the ring corner post. His body was covered with bruises from ankles to neck—but he never let up for a single instant.

* * *

Yes, when they talk about game athletes, we don't wind casting a vote in favor of Gus Sonnenberg, even if he was a wrestler. He only lasted a couple of seasons, as we remember it. Any longer and he'd have undoubtedly broken his neck. It was said that Gus retired from the mat with something around a million dollars—which could have been as he surely could pack them them in. But whatever the real amount might have been, we would say that Gus the flying-tackler earned every last cent of it!

Breed of Cattle With a Past

On one English nobleman's estate in England there is a herd of Arabian horses which are descended from ancient times. These, however, are surpassed in history by a herd of some 50 white cattle on the estate of the Earl of Tankerville at Chillingworth, Northumberland, in line of descent in Britain since before the Roman era about 2,000 years ago.

The British Whites, as they are called, were themselves the descendants of the ancient aurochs, the wild oxen of prehistoric days which roamed Europe and Asia, and are mentioned several times in the Old Testament. They were, says a writer in the Belfast Telegraph, originally black, and the story of how their British descendants came to be all white—except for the tips of the horns—has been pieced together by historians and naturalists.

It appears that the aurochs, like most other "colored" creatures, ocasionally produced albino offspring. These white freaks were probably regarded with awe by the superstitious Britons, and, as the Druidic religion developed, the white cattle were adopted by the priests and were worshipped as sacred animals. Of the calves of these white cattle not all were white, but those that were not must have been carefully weeded out until the all-white strain became predominant.

By the time the Romans arrived the original black cattle were probably extinct in Britain. The British Whites continued to flourish until the Middle Ages when specialized breeds, akin to some of those we know today, were developed mostly on the Continent.

They might have become extinct long ago but for the enthusiasm of a small group of naturalists who formed a trust to ensure that these living links with the past should not altogether disappear from Britain.

Never very tame, the survivors became increasingly shy, and few visitors are permitted to intrude upon their solitude.

After more than 2,000 years the influence of their wild black forefathers is still apparent, and to this day the white cattle of Britain occasionally produce black calves.

Sun Menace

There is a tendency to exaggerate the vital importance of sunlight. Blistered sun worshippers put a strain on the kidneys, may develop toxemia or shock, and even die. People with an unstable nervous system, an overactive thyroid gland, high blood pressure, heart disease, or active tuberculosis must be especially careful about getting an overdose of sunshine.

Australian money follows the English system of pounds, shillings and pence.

JITTER — By Arthur Pointer

THE FARM FRONT

by John Russell

There are quite a number of assorted, interesting—I hope—items which I've been saving but haven't got around to using, as yet. So it looks as though this week's column might develop into a sort of hash. (Which reminds me of the old vaudeville act in which the waiter was taking the customers' orders, then shouting them out—in language of his own—to the cook. One man ordered hash. "Clean up the kitchen for one!" yelled the waiter promptly.

* * *

Over in Great Britain they're trying out a new method of storing apples and other fruits, as well as potatoes, using ordinary woodland moss to pack the stuff in. Until next June, when the 500 tons of apples packed this way as an experiment are uncovered, it won't be known whether the system is suited to British climatic conditions — but they're hoping it will spread their home-grown fruit supplies over a nine-months period, instead of six, as at present.

* * *

This system of moss storage was discovered accidentally some years ago by a Swiss engineer, who wanted to get some rare orchids he had found in the Himalayas home alive. He lined a wooden box with damp moss, gathered at random, then placed the orchids inside, and hoped for the best. When he opened the box in Switzerland, the orchids were in perfect condition

* * *

So next he experimented with fruits, and found that the moss—according to its degree of dampness—had the power of releasing moisture, or of absorbing it from the atmosphere, thereby maintaining a constant humidity. Furthermore, because of the evaporation which took place, it had a endency to lower the temperature and hold it steady. In addition, it purifies and regenerates the atmosphere, because the moss "breathes"—or absorbs air.

* * *

Now, on the continent, railway trucks are equipped with the moss system of storage—and it has even been used successfully as a method of keeping cheese fresh. The Swiss engineer has developed it on a commercial basis and is meeting with great success Sounds like something worth giving a trial.

Th "public opinion poll" boys are still at it—or maybe this one took place before the Truman-Dewey thing knocked them for a loop. Anyway, several hundred farmers were askd this qustion—How do you decide whether a man is a "successful farmer?" A good share of them replied, "He's the man who does a really good job of soil conservation." Men who got big yields, or who made a lot of money, didn't rank nearly as high in the opinion of their fellow-farmers.

Which brings up the tale of the man who was driving through some very steep hilly country and, noticing cattle grazing, asked farmers in the neighborhood just how the stock did on such "pasture." "They don't get any feed," one man jokingly replied, "but they sure do get a lot of exercise."

* * *

But lettting stock graze on such land is just about the worst thing that could be done. The cattle crop the grass short; then the water slides off the slopes as if the hillsides were greased. That water comes rushing down to gouge out new gullies on the good farmland below.

* * *

The same man drove a little further along and came to some hills that really had a lot of grass on them. He asked a Soil Conservation expert "How come?" "Those farmers fenced the stock off and let the native grasses do a come-back," was the answer. "Now they pasture those hills only about two months every other year."

* * *

This might be a good time for a reminder that water pipes less than three feet deep in the ground should be covered with straw or spoiled hay to prevent danger of freezing. Also that sparrows in poultry houses are parasite and disease carriers.. The higher openings in the poultry houses should have screens.

* * *

There have been many warnings in the past about the danger of feeding treated seed oats to livestock. But there are always a few farmers who think they can get away with using just a few bushels as feed.

* * *

Well, recently at an American University a test was made. Eight pigs were divided into four lots. Two were fed untreated oats and water. The others were fed oats treated with one half ounce of Ceresan M per bushel for periods of 10, 20 and 30 days.

* * *

What happened? The pigs that ate the treated oats for 10 days lived through the test. Pigs in the 20-day trial lived through the test period, but died later. The 30-day test couldn't be completed as the pigs died before the time was up.

* * *

Which should be just about enough hash, I imagine, for one serving.

Car Tires Made With Soap, Sugar

Motorists can look forward to better tires of synthetic rubber, made according to new recipes employing soap and sugar, according to a prominent Illinois scientist.

The quality of GR-S, the synthetic rubber blended with natural rubber in all tire treads, has been greatly improved by the recent development of an amazingly rapid 'redox" process, according to Professor Marvel, who directed an important phase of the World War II research on synthetic rubber.

This new method makes it possible to manufacture rubber at freezing or subfreezing temperatures instead of at 212 degrees Fahrenheit, the conventional temperature, he said, asserting that the quality of GR-S and similar rubbers seems to go up as the temperature goes down.

GR-S is essentially a combination of two liquid petroleum compounds, butadiene and styrene, which are made to unite (pelymerize) by a chemical stimulant (a catalyst). In the redox process, the compounds are first emulsified with a soap, and the reaction is started by a type of sugar, which is called the activator.

"Our Gracie" Works With All She Has

Everyone knows Gracie Fields, "Our Gracie," the large-hearted, humorous character, who interspersses comedy songs with serious ones, sings Schubert's "Ave Maria" after "Turn Herbert's Face to the Wall, Mother!," and gets away with it; the Lancashire mill girl who, with no pretence at being a lady or "talking posh" has endeared herself to millions of people everywhere by her inimitable personality and inexhaustible vitality. That is the Gracie heard on the air and seen on the stage. But what is she like at rehearsal?

She is amazing when she is rehearsing in a radio studio; she works hard, never questions the producer's decision, sings each song as many times as he wants without complaint, and accepts cuts, or sings extra choruses , without a word of protest. When the orchestra is reharsing alone she sits quietly resting, sometimes pushing her hand through her blonde curls, or perhaps playing with the black beret she often wears.

But when she gets to the microphone the fun begins. She will probably go up the few stairs to the stage bent almost double, lifting her legs with her hands as she makes awful clicking noises to symbolize the creaking of her ageing joints; she will sing a serious song and, noting somebody passing at the back of her, will stick out her foot and trip him; she will fling out her arms in a graceful gesture when she gets the feel of a popular number and a moment afterwards sway from side to side like a woman having a fierce argument with her butcher. She cannot resist guying a straight number and for a really comic one will erush on the beret, wearing it at some peculiar and most unorthodox angle and, letting herself go at full tilt, steps back from the microphone and screams raucously "What 'as SHE got, that I 'aven't got?" Immediately afterwards as she is singing a really sensational number, she will push the beret over her nose and pull a hideous face yet, so powerful is her control over an audience—which in this case is the orchestra, a few engineers and one or two others, that no one laughs, although she is looking extremely funny.

Guying her songs is part of her personality and not just put on for the occasion, for when Gracie has an audience, no matter how small a one, she reacts to it like a flower to the sun. At rehearsal she doesn't bother to put on any glamorous stuff; there she is, the strapping, big-boned Lancashire lass, singing away like a lark—or a jay. Audiences in the theatre, or on the air, can either take her or leave her; the vast majority take her.

How "Swat-the-Fly" Campaign Began

In the Kansas of 1905 there were too many cases of typhoid fever, too many deaths from it, and far too many flies. Residents of the State took flies for granted. They called them a nuisance, and let it go at that. How could any doctor convince them that the insects carried typhoid germs, and could even cause epidemics?

To persuade all Kansans to join in a war on flies was the job of Samuel J. Crumbine, intrepid Topeka public-health expert, who had learned through the Spanish-American War that flies meant to medicine. Crumbine published and distributed a "Fly Bulletin," explaining the menace of te inhsect. He advocated house screens, and mailed out recipes for making fly paper.

A Slogan Born

Then came what Crumbine calls "the most productive day of my life." He was watching the Western League baseball club's opening of the season. With one man out and a runner on third base, the next batter came to the plate. Excited fans yelled "Sacrifice fly!" When the batter swung and missed the first ball, a tentorian voice boomed: "Swat that ball!"

An idea began to emerge in Crumbine's brain. "I have it," he yelled. "Swat the fly!" Taking an old envelope from his pocket, he jotted down the slogan that was to sweep the country and become part of the American vocabulary.

Crumbine was born in 1862 in a log cabin. He worked his way through two years of medical school and then hung out his shingle in the cow-country capital, Dodge City, Kansas.

Always A Crusader

In those days the West was the haven of tubercular Easterners. They travelled across Kansas in trains or wagons, bearing jugs of "rock 'n' rye," the only medicine prescribed for the disease. Crumbine, as secretary of the Board of Health, began to investigate the cause and transmission of the White Plague.

One hot day in 1907, while riding a Missouri Pacific train, Crumbine went to the water cooler for a drink. Ahead of him was a tall, thin man with a racking cough, and a tow-headed 5-year-old girl. The man filled the train's only drinking cup with water and drank. Then the little girl eagerly swallowed from the same cup.

Crumbine was on his way to investigate a smallpox epidemic, but the scene on the train made that trifling. There should be a law forbidding the tin cup, attached to the chain, in every coach. The doctor went to work. The railroads objected. It took two years, but in March 1909 Kansas passed a law prohibiting the common drinking cup. Soon after that, the roller towel also met its end.

With the Movie and Radio Folks

By Grace Sharp

Right after hearing Fred Allen's first radio program—the one in which he did that screamingly funny burlesque of "Stop the Music"—I wrote something to the effect that while that sort of thing was O.K. for a "single shot", keeping it up would be a mistake. Talking too much about your competitors' goods is a bad thing in merchandising—tending to "back-fire" on your own wares—and the same thing goes in show business.

* * *

Now it's reported that "Baggy Eyes" may abandon his insurance plan which guarantees listeners against loss on "Stop the Music" payoffs while they're tuned in to the Allen show—and I hope its true because, from the way I look at it, such an offer should never have been made. No claims for such insurance have been made as yet—at least not legitimate ones. More than that, Fred's stunt hasn't affected the giveaway show's popularity, which is still ahead of Allen's.

* * *

And now they say that "Stop the Music" is considering a plan to offer—just as a gag, of course—copies of all the best jokes Allen puts on the air-waves to its own listeners on request. Sounds to me as if both sides would be better to try and "act their ages."

* * *

They've made movies about the doings of practically every famous personage, from Cesare Borgia to Al Jolson, now comes one about a famous horse—the great pacer, Dan Patch. Charlotte Greenwood will have a big comedy role in the flicker; and if the horse that plays the part of "Dan Patch" is as good an actor as the original, Charlotte will have her work cut out to "top" him.

* * *

For although I don't remember him personally, those that know tell me that the real Dan Patch—besides being a wonderful pacer—had a huge streak of "ham" in him. After leading his opposition to the wire he'd parade past the crowded stands, actually "bowing" in response to the applause.

* * *

Once, when he "broke" coming through the stretch—whatever that means—Dan Patch was so ashamed of himself that he refused to face the spectators but, instead, ducked through an exit and headed for the stables. And it is said that there was a standing bet that no camera man could take a picture of the horse that showed him otherwise than facing straight into the camera. He seemed to sense the presence of a camera—and try as they might to catch him sideways, before the shutter clicked, Dan would be staring proudly straight to the lens.

* * *

So, as I said before, if the new Dan Patch is anything like the actor the original was, long-legged Charlotte Greenwood will have an awful time "stealing" any scenes from the pacer.

* * *

Back to the screen, after an absence of six years, comes Anna May Wong, one of my real favorites of yore. She'll be appearing in an opus titled "Impact" along with Brian Donlevy and Ella Raines. Just why she's getting a chance to do this comeback through one of those queer switches that could take place only out in California.

* * *

The part was originally that of a Swedish maid. Then the producer decided to use San Fransico's Chinatown as a background—so instead of a "Yetta Yensen" type they decided to use the Chinese-American darkeyed beauty. At all events I'm glad that we're to have another peek at Anna May, and imagine there are plenty more like me. Which will have to be all for just now.

Just For Fun

The teacher, explaining to her young pupils that the earth was round, asked questions to bring out her point. "Herman," she asked, "could you walk around the earth?"

"No, ma'am," promptly replied little Herman.

"Why not?" asked the teacher.

"Because my mother won't allow me to leave the back yard."

"No," the youngster replied, "but I have two brothers and they have a sister." And then she joyfully added, "And I'm the sister!"

Great Lake of Pitch Source of Unlimited Supply of Asphalt

One of Nature's strangest phenomena is Trinadad's famous Lake of Pitch. During the past one hundred years or so, millions of tons of asphalt have been dug out from its surface and exported to pave the streets and highways of most of the world's principal towns and cities. Yet, for all this, the quantity of the asphalt in the lake shows no visible signs of diminishing.

Up to the present, no satisfactory mechanical device has been found for extracting the asphalt. Every pound taken from its 114-acre surface has to be laboriously dug out by hand-wielded pick and shovel.

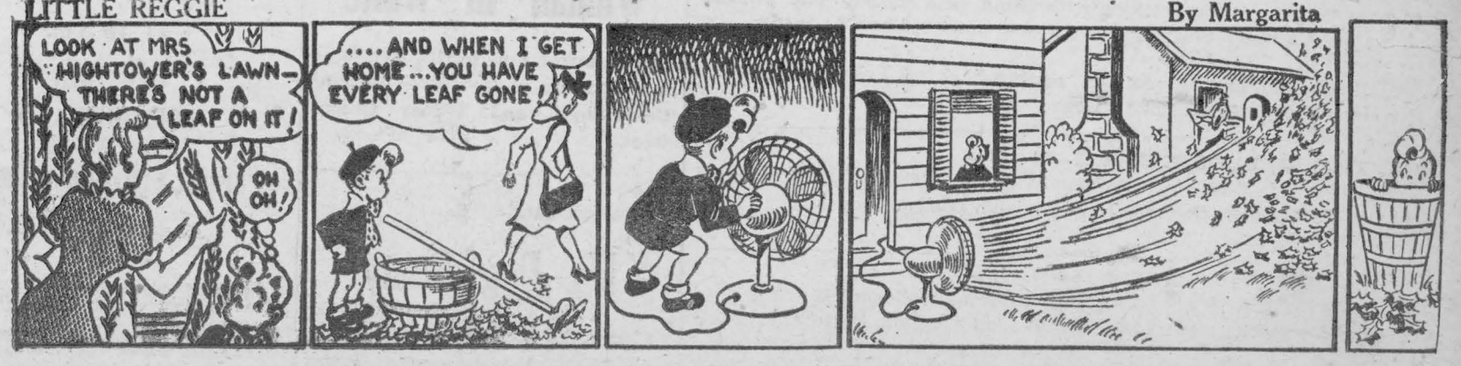
As the asphalt is removed ton by ton, pits and breakages are left in its even surface. Yet within a few days they are filled with new pitch, pushed up from below from some hidden and apparently inexhaustible source.

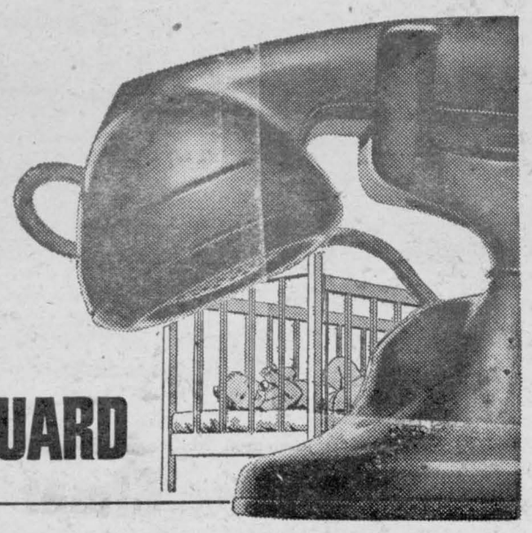
The surface of this lake is always on the move, although its movements are so slow that they escape the eye. Its mass turns and folds over upon itself continuously. Sometimes it claims for its own any object that may have been carelessly left on its surface, and at other times some ancient fossil or long-lost treasure that had disappeared many years before is expurgated.

It is because of this dangerous movement of the lake's surface that the light railway which runs out across it to carry away the asphalt as it is dug has to be relaid daily, so that it, too, shall not sink out of sight.

Scientists have not decided on the origin of the lake, but they agree that the pitch is sufficient to supply the world's needs for many generations.

You Just Cut Them Out and Blow Them Up—It is customary for Canada to import new ideas in children's toys from south of the border—but this time it's different. These new Walt Disney character toys not only show children how to use the scissors carefully but also furnish them with a lot of fun. Made of strong Vinylite plastic, each toy is equipped with a novel self-sealing valve. Of Canadian design and manufacture, the toys will soon be marketed in the United States as well as throughout the Dominion.





ON GUARD

Day and night, more dependable than ever

TODAY, telephones are four times as free from "trouble" as twenty years ago, and there are twice as many of them!

Each month 10,000 are being added so that soon all may have dependable telephone service and the security that goes with it.

This is being done in spite of rising costs, yet up to now there has been no increase in the basic telephone rates established 21 years ago.

For you, this means greater value than ever before; for us, the satisfaction of providing "the best telephone service at the lowest cost".

Bake a Batch ANYTIME...

PURITY 3 in 1 COOKIES

It's a wonderful idea—means three kinds of icebox cookies from one recipe—and economical, too. You make three rolls each a different flavour. Anytime, you can slice some off—pop them in the oven and have delicious, crispy cookies ready in no time.

Make the dough like this:

½ cup shortening
½ teaspoon vanilla
2 cups brown sugar
2 eggs
½ teaspoon cream of tartar
1 teaspoon baking soda
3½ cups sifted Purity Flour

Cream the shortening, add vanilla and brown sugar. Add well beaten eggs. Mix cream of tartar, baking soda and sifted PURITY FLOUR, and add to mixture. Divide the dough into three parts for three different cookies.

Cookie 1.
Add ½ cup chopped nuts, then form into a roll.

Cookie 2.
Add 1 ounce unsweetened chocolate, melted, then form into a roll. Just before baking sprinkle each cookie with a few shreds of cocoanut.

Cookie 3.
Add ½ cup mixed red and green cherries that have been cut into eighths, then form into a roll.

Each roll should be wrapped in waxed paper and chilled in refrigerator, then, or whenever you wish, cut off thin slices from rolls and bake on greased sheet in hot oven (375°-400°F.) for 8-10 mins.

Remember, this grand recipe was created and tested in the Purity Flour kitchens,—so, for the new 3 in 1 cookies—and for all your baking—Purity Flour is best. It's the flour milled from Canada's fine hard wheat. For tender pie crust, light biscuits, wonderful rolls and feathery cakes, if you depend on Purity Flour you can depend on compliments.

THE SYLVESTER DIAMOND

By BLANCHE ROBERTS

Synopsis

Honey Monroe succeeds in taking the Sylvester Diamond from a woman in a Los Angeles department store and concealing it in her apartment. But Joe Danburne, professional thief whom she has known for some months, becomes suspicious when she doesn't admit having the stone and follows her to the apartment of Dan Brewster, district attorney, with whom she is in love. When the two men get into a fight she makes a hurried escape. Knowing that Joe will kill her to get the stone, she boards a plane for San Francisco. A dense fog rises and the plane, making a forced landing, crashes into the sea.

CHAPTER VI.

Honey did not know where she was and she hated to open her eyes to find out. But her whole body ached and she was cold and very wet and lying in a most uncomfortable position with her head resting on something hard—not a pillow, to be sure. As her senses returned to normal, she became aware of motion and a chug-chug-ging noise like a small boat would make. She waited several minutes, trying in vain to identify some familiar sound, then she opened her eyes slowly.

Pea-soup fog was the first thing she saw above her. She lowered the line of her vision and made out the form of a man near by. He was gazing out to sea and sat very still, hunched over in deep thought, a pipe between his lips.

"Where am I?" she called, teeth chattering, and lifting her head from its hard resting place.

Her voice startled the man and he turned quickly to face her.

"Thank goodness you're alive." There was downright relief in his voice. "I was afraid . . . ." He did not finish the sentence.

It was then that realization of what had happened to her came back to her mind. The air liner had crashed. She shuddered like she had a chill.

"Are—are the others——?" She could not go on with her question, but he guessed what she was trying to ask.

"I only found you," he said and his voice was gentle and soothing. "Are you all right?"

"Yes." At least she felt no pain and presumed she was not hurt.

* * *

There was no more conversation until they made land. He helped her out of the boat at a deserted old wharf in the cove. She looked at him then. He was young and tall, slightly stooped of shoulders and very sun-tanned.

"I will take you to my house," he told her and there was a softness to his voice that betrayed culture. "I know you're cold with those wet clothes on. Ma'll loan you some of hers. She is no more than a mite herself—just about like you." He smiled down at her and Honey liked his face instantly, so open and honest.

"I really am freezing," she said simply and started to follow him and discovered that her equilibrium was not what it used to be. He took her arm and she leaned on his strength as they climbed the rocky cliffs to a little house sitting at the end of the trail, overlooking the ocean below. Even in the fog, Honey marveled at the brightly colored flowers surrounding the house, the restful atmosphere everywhere that spelled peace.

"Ma!" the young man called and there was a caress even when he lifted his voice to shout.

A little white-haired woman came to the door in answer to his summons.

* * *

"Sakes, Art!" she cried and came forward to meet them. "Who is that with you? Why, she is wet as a drowned kitten."

"I certainly am," smiled Honey convincingly. "I have been in the ocean and he fished me out." She found that lightness came back to her voice without much effort. "You were fishing, weren't you?"

"Honest, I was fishing. I have never caught one so big before, nor half as pretty."

"Come in, young lady. Don't pay any attention to that son of mine. He likes to chatter." It was easy to see that she adored him. "I'll give you some dry things to put on before you catch pneumonia."

Inside the house, Art reached to take her coat off, but just then Honey remembered the stone fastened in her pocket, and she huddled deeper into the wrap. After all the dangers she had been through for the diamond she was not going to take a chance of losing it now.

"Not yet," she told him with a smile, and followed the woman into the small bedroom.

"Art probably didn't think to introduce himself," said her hostess. "I am his mother, Mrs. Carey. He is a nice boy but he forgets his manners now and then." Mrs. Carey looked at Honey inquiringly.

"I am so glad to know you. My name is Honey—ah—Honey Roe." She smiled with relief when she saw that the woman did not notice the hesitation over her name. She hated to lie about anything, but on the moment it seemed the wisest course to take. She was not ready to advertise her true identity.

"That is a right pretty name." Mrs. Carey pulled things from the dresser drawers and put them on the bed. "Kind of romantic, too. Well, here is everything now. You hurry and change," and she left the room.

Honey slipped quickly out of her wet things. And as she dressed, she asked herself: "I wonder how far we are from San Francisco? I must get there as soon as I can."

* * *

The light woolen dress fitted perfectly. She took the diamond from the fur coat and dropped it into the pocket of the borrowed dress whose skirt was rather full and hid the sag to some extent where the box weighted it down. When she came out of the room, there was a nice hot cup of coffee, toast and preserves waiting for her. Art was smoking his pipe and looking out of the window. He turned as she came in.

"I guess we should ride into town and notify the authorities of your safety," he suggested.

Honey shook her head quickly. That was the one thing she did not want.

"Please don't. I have no relatives to inform and I hate to be bothered by reporters. I would rather forget the crash for a while—if I can, she added wistfully. "There is no one to worry about whether I was saved or not." Her heart cried: "Except Dan, and he may hate you by now for what he thinks you are. A thief." A shudder passed quickly over her.

"You poor lamb," consoled Mrs. Carey sympathetically. "We won't mention it again. And if any one sees you here . . . Well, I can always invent a daughter or an old school chum.

"Or," drawled Art and his eyes twinkled with fun, "I did know some girls in school, ma. I could have a visitor."

Right after lunch, which seemed the best meal she had ever eaten, the fog lifted and Honey went for a walk along the rugged shore with Art. The breakers pounding hard against the rocks, was calming to Honey's over-wrought nerves and she breathed deeply of the salty air. As they walked, she learned that Art was a lawyer of profession but that he and his mother were in California for his health. And now that he was well again, they would be going back to the Middle Western town to take up life where they left off.

ANNE HIRST
Your Family Counselor

"DEAR ANNE HIRST: I am a mother 58 years old. My married daughter, her husband and baby live with me. Two months ago she started selling for a concern, and t keeps her away from 9 to 10 hours a day. That leaves the care of the baby to me.

"Please don't get me wrong. I love to take care of the baby. But for four years I've been under a doctor's care, who is warning me against a breakdown. I have a large home to look after. So you see between the baby, the house, and preparing meals, at the end of the day I'm so nervous I can't sleep.

"They live with me, because places are hard to get. I can't bear to tell them to leave.

"I've explained how things are to my daughter, but she doesn't seem to care. I've even asked her husband to help with the baby evenings, but he said he works all day and won't be tied down at night. Please tell me what to do! . . . And God bless you for the help you give others.

"NERVOUS MOTHER."

A FIRM HAND

* THESE TWO seem to need a * firm hand. They are not facing
* unwelcome facts, or, knowing
* them, they refuse to be discom* moded. You had better set an * hour to talk with them together,

* Is your daughter working be* cause she has to? In that case, it * is little enough for her husband * to relieve you in the evening, and
* cheerfully, and do everything he
* can do to lessen your household
* burden. When you are providing
* a home for his wife and baby, he * should show his gratitude in the
* many practical ways a man can
* around that home.
* If your daughter is working be-
* cause she wants to (finding call* ing on people more interesting * than looking after her baby) then
* she shoulld give up the job and * care for her own child, as well as
* helping you out.
* This should be your ultimatum.
* Otherwise, they will have to move
* elsewhere — and you will give * them a reasonable time to find a * place of their own. If you con* vince them that this need is im* mediate, on your doctor's orders,
* they will be impressed.
* What alternative is there? A * breakdown for you, with the con* sequent necessity that your
* daughter stay at home altogether.
* Many a young couple have
* thoughtlessly rushed into mar* riage during the past few years,
* secure in the knowledge that
* "Mom" would take them in. They * could not be persuaded to wait
* until their future was more * secure. Mom, as usual, was more * than willing—
* But when it is a question of a * mother's health, then it becomes a

Damaged Enough

An ambulance-chasing lawyer picked up a lady who had been knocked down by a Washington streetcar. "Here's my card, lady," he said, "I'll get you damages."

"Don't be an idiot," snapped the lady as she dusted herself off. "I "I don't need no more damages. What I need now is repairs."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Rev. R. Barclay Warren

Letters In The Bible
Philippians 1:1-11; 4:8-9.

Golden Text:—These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life. —1 John 5:13.

Twenty-one of the twenty-seven books of the New Testament are epistles or letters, most of them written by Paul. Sometimes because a person was about to make a journey to some church or churches, or to some place where a friend was, Paul would send a letter along, as he did to Titus in Crete. Because the church at Philippi had sent a present to Paul in Rome, Paul sent back a "thank-you" letter by this same messenger when he returned—the letter to the Philippians.

Paul's affection for the churches is especially evident in this lesson. He was writing from a Roman prison, and doubtless recalled his prison experience when he first visited Philippi. Though he and Silas had been beaten and their feet fastened in the stocks, at midnight they prayed and sang praises unto God. This same dauntless spirit possessed him now. He was no whiner. He was praying with joy, confident "that He which hath begun a good work in you will perfect it until the day of Jesus Christ."

While one faces the fact of physical illness it is indisputable that a considerable proportion of ailments arise from unhealthful thinking. Worry is the greatest disease. Paul gives us good advice, "Whatsoever things are true,—honest,—just,—pure,—lovely,—of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think of these things."

HANDY HINTS

A power emery-wheel is the fastest cutting tool one can use for sharpening dull edges. Lacking this grinder, a thick blade can be reduced to usable shape by careful work with a file, taking off the excess metal until it is thin enough. Then it is brought to a keen cutting edge on a whetstone. Always work from the back towards the edge.

* * *

A number of different sized screw-drivers are always handy. Dress down the ends till there are sizes to turn most standard makes of screws.

* * *

If a tack or brad is pressed through a narrow strip of cardboard, the nail can be held in hard-to-get-at-places, without danger to fingers, etc.

* * *

For a noon-day lunch in winter, a hole should be dug with the snowshoe down to earth, and a fire built where it is sheltered from winds, and still not melt down and be quenched.

* * *

A switch with prongs about four inches long can be used to hold bacon, bread, etc., until cooked. Small cubes of meat can be impaled on each prong till broiled.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM

by Gwendoline P. Clarke

We sold some hens last Monday. When the buyer came in and offered us a price, we accepted, providing he took them all—either that or none at all. He agreed. There were about forty. Then he started catching them. Presently he threw one down—"That's a cull," he explained. "Just a minute," said Partner, "you said you would take them all at the price we agreed on." The man started to hedge but Partner stood his ground. That kind of thing has happened before. A buyer comes in, takes his pick of the flock, and then tries to leave us with the poorer birds. This time it didn't work. Partner did not try to force a sale, in fact he repeatedly told the man to put back what he had caught and we would sell to someone else. But no, he wouldn't do that. Finally he took them all—and after that he got away in a hurry. I'm telling you Partner was really mad! And yet all the birds weren't sold after all. One got away and we haven't been able to catch her since! Now our Light Sussex pullets are in the hen-house. It is going to be interesting to see which pullets put on the best show . . . in another pen we have hybrids—a cross between Barred Rocks and White Leghorns. Both breeds are new to us.

Friday just about everything happened—and it was Partner's birthday. He didn't remember it, and Bob and I did not remind him until we had been down town and got some birthday pipes and cigars. Then I also produced a card from daughter which had arrived in the mail that morning. When Partner came in from the barn I was singing—"Happy Birthday to You!" And what answer do you suppose I got? Just the "Call the 'Vet' will you—Queen is sick!" Oh . . . oh! However, it wasn't as bad as it might have been The "Vet", fortunately, was at home and after he had given the mare a hypo she was soon all right again.

After supper came another shock . . . a telephone call . . . "Fort William calling Mr. Clarke." My heart just about skipped a beat. You know how you can imagine all kinds of things in the space of a few minutes. But the call wasn't about Daughter — it was FROM her—just a call to wish her Dad many happy returns of the day. That was her birthday present—and she couldn't have hit on a better one. It was just wonderful to hear her voice, and from her happy laughter we knew she was all right. Daughter could have sent a wire, and it would have brought her message, but there was a lot more satisfaction in hearing her voice. It was also doubly welcome since there is no possible chance of her being home for Christmas.

Well, after Partner's telephone call he went down to the barn again, just to make sure everything was all right. He always does that some time during the evening anyway as he says if there is anything wrong with the animals that it is the most likely time for it to show. He thinks to leave them from one chore time to chore time next morning without looking at them at all is too long altogether. Coming back he sang out as he opened the kitchen door—"What's the use of a birthday if you can't have things go right?" Here's what happened. He took a warmish drink of water to Queen—and she wouldn't touch it. He gave the bull a pail of water in his manger—and he promptly upset it. He thought one cow was looking as if she wanted a drink so he put a pail of water in her manger. She snuffled around it with her nose until it, too, was upset. It all had to be cleaned up. Then Partner took a look at the heifers he has running loose in the barnyard—and they weren't there! Somehow or other they had nosed open the back door of the barnyard and were running around in the muddiest part of the outside yard. And it was muddy after the heavy rain we had had. So Partner was quite ready to say with Gracie Fields—"What's the use of a Birthday?"

Speaking of Christmas . . . we haven't any plans at all—although it is open house here for any of our friends who care to come. But I am thinking I had better start spring housecleaning in the middle of winter! Partner's sister in England says she hopes to visit us this summer—and there is just a chance two cousins may also be coming.

Secret of Health

Grandpa Cartmell was celebrating his 100th birthday and everybody complimented him on how athletic and well preserved he appeared. "I will tell you the secret of my success," he cackled. "My wife and I were married 75 years ago. On our wedding night we made a solemn pledge that whenever we had a fight, the one who was proved wrong would go out and take a walk. Gentlemen, I have been in the open air practically continuously for 75 years."

Facts, Not Alibis, Wanted on Hydro

The present power breakdown is the greatest industrial calamity that has ever hit Ontario.

Over wide areas of the most highly developed part of Canada, factories are shut down for hours daily, business is disrupted, workers' income is cut, housewives are seriously inconvenienced and property is endangered. Production is being lost and employment is being sacrificed. And as yet there has been no adequate or convincing explanation of this colossal failure from the authorities who have been responsible, says The Financial Post.

Now this issue has been pitched into party politics which will further confuse the issue, and further postpone its correction.

CCF'ers are making the Hydro affair a major weapon in their fight against George Drew.

This is a precarious limb for them to go out on.

It was under public ownership, which means political direction of Hydro, that Ontario was dragged into its present mess, and one that threatens to be with us for years.

Yet, the CCF is the party that wants more public ownership, more political interference with productive processes.

So, in effect the CCF is saying: We'll give you more of the same thing that has ended in the present Hydro schemozzle.

The CCF, furthermore, is the party which so vociferously predicted that depression would set in right after the war. On that reasoning, the CCF would have had Hydro in a worse mess.

Right now, there is a great scurrying around to find a scapegoat. Municipal, provincial and federal politicians are leaping into the maelstrom, each blaming somebody else. Daily newspapers are thundering at each other, each from its own partisan perch. All this is significant proof that Hydro is up to its neck in politics.

And that's the real cause of today's trouble. No further hunt for alibis and scapegoats need be made. The culprit is public ownership, which means, inevitably and irrevocably, political control of Hydro.

In the private or stockholder business the management has the authority and the responsibility of doing all that is necessary to assure the present and future welfare of the enterprise. If it mismanages of miscalculates its reserves, it collapses or goes broke. The same happens when it fails to give its customers the service they want.

But enterprises run by politicians inevitably get into trouble because the interests and problems of the politicians are different to those of the businessman.

In the Hydro mess, Canada has a demonstration of what the Socialists offer on a scale multiplied many times.

Corporation Finance

By C. A. Ashley

The Professor of Commerce at the University of Toronto has written a book which, while it may not have any great appeal to the general reading public, will undoubtedly become a "must" for all forward-looking business executives. It will be all the more welcome because there is very little Canadian material of recent date easily available on the subject.

In this book Professor Ashley deals with the forms of business organization, the formation and control of companies; the capital market and the stock market; shares, bonds, borrowing, financial structure, combination and monopoly and a host of other matters and all in a manner both clear and concise. He is a recognized authority on such subjects and was elected a Fellow of the Institute of Chartered Accountants in 1947.

Much Work, Small Pay

From the archives of the Director of Education in Manila (quite some time ago, we assure you) someone has abstracted, or copied, this heart-rendering letter of resignation penned by a harassed native teacher:

"Dear Sir, I have the honour to resignate as my works are many and my salary are few. Besides which my supervising teacher makes many loving to me to which I only reply, 'Oh, not, Oh, not!'

"Very respectfully

TABLE TALKS

by Jane Andrews.

Graham-Cracker Crust

10 Finely Crushed Graham Crackers
1 Teaspoon Flour
¼ Cup Sugar
⅛ Teaspoon Salt
⅛ Teaspoon Nutmeg
⅛ Teaspoon Cinnamon
4 Tablespoons Melted Shortening

Combine ingredients and mix well. Press into an 8-inch pie plate. Chill thoroughly.

Any favorite pie filling will do nicely with that quickly-prepared crust. If you have a refrigerator, I can strongly recommend this one, especially timely now that pumpkins are so plentiful.

Pumpkin Ice-Cream Pie

½ Cup Sugar
1 Teaspoon Vanilla
2 Cups Light Cream
⅔ Cup Pumpkin (Cooked and Mashed)
⅓ Cup Brown Sugar
½ Teaspoon Cinnamon
⅛ Teaspoon Nutmeg
¼ Teaspoon Salt
Graham-Cracker Crust

Add sugar and vanilla to light cream. Stir to blend well. Mix pumpkin, brown sugar, cinnamon, nutmeg and salt, and add to cream mixture. Pour into refrigerator tray and freeze until firm. Remove to bowl and beat with rotary beater until free from lumps but still a hard mush. Return to refrigerator tray and finish freezing. Fill graham-cracker crust with ice cream and sprinkle top with graham-cracker crumbs.

* * *

There's one thing I had better warn you about regarding this Banana Cake. It doesn't last long. (I don't mean "keep" but "last"). That's because, whenever it's served, second and third helpings are the order of the day.

Banana Cake

½ Cup Shortening
1 Cup Sugar
1 Egg
1¼ Cups (Approximately 3) Mashed Bananas
1½ Cup Sifted Cake Flour
2 Teaspoons Baking Powder
¼ Teaspoon Salt
2 Tablespoons Milk
1 Teaspoon Vanilla

Cream shortening and sugar together until light and fluffy. Add egg and mix well. Stir in bananas. Sift together the dry ingredients and add with milk and vanilla. Blend thoroughly. Pour into two greased 8-inch layer tins and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 45 minutes. Frost with banana frosting.

And in conclusion, here's the most easily made frosting I've ever run across—not only for banana cake, but for almost any other kind. I'm sure you'll get a surprise at how much powdered sugar the mashed bananas will take up, and, by the way, you can leave the butter out if you choose, although the texture may not be quite so creamy. Fully ripe bananas are best.

Banana Frosting

1 Tablespoon Butter
⅔ Cup (Approximately 2) Mashed Bananas
4 Cups Sifted Confestioners' Sugar

Cream butter. Add bananas and sugar. Mix until creamy and smooth. Add more sugar if necessary for proper stiffness. Fills and frosts two 8-inch layers.

When your BACK ACHES...

Backache is often caused by lazy kidney action. When kidneys get out of order excess acids and poisons remain in the system. Then backache, headache, rheumatic pain, disturbed rest or that 'tired out' feeling may soon follow. To help keep your kidneys working properly—use Dodd's Kidney Pills. "Do you love me more than anything else in the whole wide world?"

"Why sure, Darling! Except, of course, there's honey-golden . . . "

"Honey Golden, eh? I knew it — a blonde! I'm going home to mother!"

"Hey, wait a minute! I mean honey-golden, malty-rich, oh-so-wonderful Post's Grape-Nuts Flakes!"

"Oh, that's different!"

"Sure they're different! That famous Grape-Nuts flavor is different from any other cereal flavor in the world."

"I know, I know—because they're made from two grains instead of one."

"Sure — and loaded with carbohydrates and minerals and other food essentials."

"You win. Go ahead and have another bowlful — and I think I'll join you!"

IN MEMORIAM

CASSELMAN—In loving memory of my dear husband, Jesse I. Casselman, who departed this life on December 9th, 1947.
When evening shades are falling,
And we sit in quiet alone,
To our hearts there comes a longing
If he only could come home.
Friends may think w have forgotten
When at times they see us smile
But they little know the heartaches
Oursmiles hide all the while.
—Sadly missed by Wife and Family.

SHEETS—In loving memory of my dear husband, and father Easton Sheets, who passed away suddenly Dec. 13, 1947.
It's lonesome here without you
And sad we feel today,
For life seems not the same to us
Since he was called away.
His last parting wish we would like to have heard,
And breathed in his ear our last parting word,
Only those who have lost are able to tell
The pain in the heart is not farewell.
—Lovingly remembered by his Wife and Family.
Farran's Point, Ont.

REID—In loving memory of our dear son, Graham, who departed this life December 8th, 1932.
Today we are thinking of someone,
Who was loving, kind and true;
Whose smile was as dear as the sunshine
That someone, dear Graham, was you.
—Ever remembered by Mother and Father, Mr. and Mrs. Merch Reid and Family.

BOWMAN— In fond and loving memory of my dear wife, Elodia Mae Bowman, who departed this life, December 11th, 1947.
A year has passed and gone since one we loved so well,
Was taken from her home on earth, with Jesus Christ to dwell.
The flowers I placed upon her grave may wither and decay,
But the love of her who sleeps beneath shall never pass away.
I have lost my sole companion, a life linked with my own,
And day by day I miss her more as I walk through life alone.
—Ever remembered by her Husband, Will.

GOOD CITIZENSHIP
is a lot of little things

DON'T CROWD—THERE'S LOTS OF ROOM
Christmas is just around the corner . . . everybody's in a rush—stores are packed with shoppers—so are the streets and the transportation system. Now's a good time to practice patience. There'll be time to make that purchase even if the counter is surrounded by other eager buyers. There'll be another bus or street car along in a little while. Christmas is a season of unselfishness—of living up to the rules of "Good Citizenship".
You can help this public service effort. Make a note of some of the little things which, in your opinion, contribute to Good Citizenship.
