Maple Ridge Teen-Ager Accidentally Killed By .22 Rifle Shot

A 14-year-old high school student, Vanamber John Morris, of Maple Ridge, died almost instantly at 2.30 p.m. Saturday when a bullet from a .22 calibre rifle he was using for target practice struck him in the head.

A son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Morris, of Maple Ridge, he was visiting his grandparents, Mr.. and Mrs. John Jackson, at their home just west of Winchester.

With his brother Joseph, 11, the boy was sitting on the fender of a car, firing at a target. He apparently slipped and the gun went off. The bullet went into his throat and lodged in his head. He died within 15 minutes. His two uncles, Charles and Warren Jackson, were nearby at the time.

Dr. W. M. Byers, of Winchester, was called and immediately sent for the coroner, Dr. C. R. Marcellus, of Iroquois. The coroner said no inquest was necessary.

Surviving, in addition to his father are his mother, the former Mabel Jackson; two brothers. Joseph and Carmen, and a sister, Evangeline.

Pinns' Double Sultana -160413- a Jersey heifer bred by J. G. Broome of Prescott, and owned and tested by William Merriman of Moose Creek, has completed a splendid junior two-year-old record. In 365 days Sultana has to her credit 8,319 lbs. milk, 419 lbs. fat with an average test of 5.04%. She is a daughter of Brampton Sir Pinnacle, formerly herd sire for Herbert Caldwell, Prescott, and from the cow Roselawn Design's Jolly.

Hybrid Corn Crop Yields $100. Net, Per Acre

In the first attempt to grow corn for shelling in this area, C. Allison Graham netted slightly over $100.00 per acre. His entry of 20 ears in the Commercial Corn Class at the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto, rewarded him with a nice cheque and Fourth Prize, which speaks well for the firt attempt.

With the idea of a cash corn crop in mind, Mr. Graham got in touch with officials at the Experimental Farm and was welcomed with open arms, because at that time the Farm had a new group of Hybrid Seed Corn that was ready for testing in this area. Mr. F. Dimmock, one of the best known agronomists in North America, had the project under his special care, and the Canada Starch Company officials at Cardinal followed the experiment with much interest. There is a ready market for all the corn of this type that can be grown.

Supplied by The Experimental Farm, the seed corn was a hybrid variety, Canbred 250 and 150. With a maturing time of 75-85 days, this corn is earlier in ripening than most grain crops. Last growing season was a headache to most farmers, and the trial seed was late in being planted. Thanks to light fall frosts, the crop ripened well and was picked by a picker sent out from the Ottawa Experimental Farm. After standing in a crib for several weeks, the Canada Starch Co. sent in a power corn sheller, the corn was shelled and delivered to the processing plant and paid for in one day. Totaled up, a net was realised of slightly over $100.00 per acre for the five acres planted.

A moral can be pointed out from this experiment. With many grain crops averaging anywhere from $15. to $25. an acre, the land could be put to much more suitable and profitable use growing cash crops.

With the development of many early-maturing plants, Eastern Ontario should enter into a more diversified agricultural program and be less dependant on the sale of milk.

TRYING TO MAKE TWO AND TWO EQUAL FIVE

Since the early days of the war, the fiscal geniuses at Ottawa decided that Canada's dollar, in relation to the U.S. dollar, was worth 90 cents. A year or so after the war, the same geniuses announced, overnight, that our dollar was worth 100 cents in American money. As the Foreign Exchange Control Board was, at that time, holding one and a half billions of U.S. exchange, on which it had paid a premium of 10 per cent that shift of opinion cost Canadian taxpayers $150,000,000.

All this, naturally, was a purely domestic arrangement. The free-money market in New York disagreed, and still does. There, currency values are still a matter of supply and demand. So, to-day, if you exchange a Canadian dollar in Buffalo, it will be discounted at least 10 per cent—Messrs. Abbott and Towers to the contrary, notwithstanding. What our dollars would be worth across the border if all restrictions were removed is anybody's guess. It might fall as low as 60 or 70 cents—who knows? But, at least, its value would be determined by the international exchange of goods, and not by the edict of some disciple of Dr. Schacht at Ottawa.

Now, what has happened as the result of this artificial, uneconomic regulation of our currency? In a matter of months the F E C B's reserves of U.S. exchange or its equivalent have been depleted by nearly a billion dollars. So, now the government must do something about it; and what did it do? Relax, or remove restrictions until things found their own level? No! That would be too simple—and politically inexpedient with a general election in the offing.

By now, anyone who has a radio or reads a newspaper knows what the government did. It announced the most ill-conceived, unintelligent plan it has ever devised for the correction of our imbalance of trade with the United States. While still maintaining the fiction that a Canadian dollar is worth an American dollar, the plan involves prohibition on the import of an extensive list of commodities; greater restrictions on the transfer of money across the border; new excise taxes, and whatnot. All of which means the employment of more civil servants, enforcement officers and, above all, bureaucrats. Already the effects of this program have made necessary the re-imposition of price ceilings on most canned fruits and vegetables.

To us, and to a great many other more competent students of the dilemma which faces this country, the simpler and more direct method of conserving our reserve of U.S. exchange would have been to remove all controls from the free transfer of the Canadian dollar in the international money marts as soon as the balance of our trade across the boundary began to make serious inroads on our reserves of American dollars. Of course, our dollar would have depreciated, thereby tending to correct the imbalanced exchange of goods with the U.S.—American imports would have cost us more; Canadian exports would have cost Americans less. Consequently, buying from the U.S. would have been automatically discouraged, and selling to them would have been stimulated. Eventually the two currencies would have found their natural, economic level. That is the way in which trading between nations used to be conducted in the days before blocked marks, valuta, and all other currency-tinkering devices were devised.

Had such a system been allowed to operate during the past year or two, there would have been no need for the government to subsidize gold production; to prohibit imports; to limit the amount of his own money a citizen might take out of the country—and, it would have made it unnecessary to engage the services of ten additional women customs officers in Fort Erie.

Ever since the world went off the gold standard, the nations needin American dollars have been usin every kind of scheme to make two and two make five. It is too bad tha the inexorable law of mathematics makes that impossible. But Mr. Abbott seems determined to test it once more.

VITAMIN C

Because of the fact that a source of vitamin C is readily available in citrus fruits, the Canadian public perhaps has generally failed to realize that there are other sources of this vitamin which is necessary in any diet.

For instance ,there are three domestic vegetables which are relatively cheap and available throughout most of the year—potatoes, turnips and cabbage—which contain vitamin C. These three, if properly prepared and properly cooked, can be used to supplement any other vitamin C source.

It is estimated that 3½ ounces of raw cabbage, or properly cooked turnips, or properly cooked potatoes, each contain more than one-half the estimated daily vitamin C requirement of an adult. It would be well to remember, however, that there is loss in vitamin content in these vegetables during winter-long storage.

Other foods, in quantities of 3½ ounces, which contain enough or more than enough vitamin C to take care of a person's estimated daily requirement include cooked black currants, red and green peppers and raw parsley. Others which contain at least half the required vitamin C include liver and canned strawberries. Tomato juice and canned raspberries also are fairly good vitamin C sources.

It should be remembered, however, that overcooking and mashing largely destroys the vitamin C content of foods. This particular vitamin is soluble in water and oxidizes when it comes in contact with air. For instance. potatoes should be cooked with their skins on—cabbage should be eaten raw or cooked with a minimum of water for a minimum length of time—and turnips should be cooked for only 20 to 30 minutes if a reasonable portion of the vitamin C is to be retained. All vegetables should be placed in boiling water—not in cold water and then brought to the boil.

Much more of the vitamin C content will be retained if cooking is done with a pressure cooker.

MEAL MIXTURE MAKE BACON

Of the several swine feeding experiments recently conducted by the Animal Husbandry Division, Dominion Experimental Farms Service, two of them concerned meal mixtures suitable for bacon production when used in the self feeder. One of them involved a comparison of high barley and high oats for self feeding and the effect of following one grain by the other in the growing and finishing periods. One lot of pigs was fed high barley in both periods; a second lot, high barley in the growing period up to 100 pounds; a third lot, high oats followed by high barley; and a fourth lot was fed high oats in both periods.

There were some stimulus to growth in the two lots where there was a change over from high barley to high oats and from high oats to high barley. However, there was practically no difference in the efficiency of the various rations as measured by feed consumed per 100 pounds gain or 100 pounds carcass gain. The various rations produced only slight differences in carcass quality, the best carcasses resulting from high oats followed by high barley. These carcasses were somewhat superior in length, belly grade, and loin.

In the second experiment, the pigs were self-fed the same grain mixture from start to finish. In the three lots, oats constituted 30, 40, 50 per cent of the grains, respectively; wheat was held stationary at 20 per cent, and barley made up the remainder. Both the lots which were fed the higher percentage of oats gained faster and consumed slightly less than the lot fed only 30 per cent oats. The high oat lots also produced the better carcasses. particularly the 50 per cent oat lot, which had a more desirable finish and a better proportion of lean to fat.

TYPOGRAPHICAL ERROR

The typographic error
Is a slippery thing and sly;
You can hunt till you are dizzy,
But it somehow will get by.

Till the forms are off the presses,
It is strange how still it keeps;
It shrinks down into a corner
And it never stirs or peeps.

The typographic error
Is too small for human eyes,
Till the Ink is on the paper,
When it grows to mountain size.

The Boss, he stares with horror,
Then he grabs his hair, and groans;
The copy-reader drops his head
Upon his hands, and moans.

The remainder of the issue
May be clean as clean can be,
But that typographic error
Is the biggest thing you see.

PROFIT ON ROYAL FAMILY

Ever since 1760 when George III agreed to exchange the income from his estates, known as the Crown lands, for an annual civil list, the state has made a regular profit on the throne.

A century ago these lands, many of them in the west end of London, were worth about £200,000 a year. Last year they brought in a total of £1,958,813 and, when all expenses had been paid, £960,000 went to the exchequer.

King George VI himself received £410,000, out of which he had to pay the salaries, expenses ,and upkeep of the palaces and a substantial figure for royal bounty.

Even the royal parks and pleasure gardens belong to the treasury. For the year 1945-46 they produced a surplus of £34,519, which was £6,000 more than was expected, and this year a slightly greater profit has been forecast.

TAKE JUNK BACK

A couple of weeks ago a Windsor woman went to Detroit. She was taking a couple of Christmas gifts to friends over there. Arrived at the Detroit side, she informed the customs officer that she had a couple of gifts in the packages. She was ushered in for an interview. When she produced the bills showing each of the two gifts to be less than five dollars, the customs officer called her a liar. When she protested, he told her that if she argued, he would deport her for a year.

By this time the woman was verging on the hysterical. The customs officer took her out and put her on a bus bound for Windsor He told her to take herself and her "junk" back to Canada.

All that is not helpful in making friendly relationships between Canadians and Americans.

Be changeable when the weather weather changes! The Ontario Department of Highways suggests that motorists make it a habit to adjust their practices to fit safely into any sort of weather which may acect visibility and the surface of the roads and streets.

If pedestrians will put two and two together—two watchful eyes and two careful feet—they will find the sum equals safety. The Ontario Department of Highways urges all pedestrians to learn this rule of two-and-two to help solve the accident problem — especially during winter weather.

Motorists are reminded that a great many urban traffic accidents are caused by lack of caution in pulling out of a parking space. The wise driver will look carefully before swinging out into the stream of traffic and be sure he isn't sticking his bunper and his neck out too far and too fast. And when driving down the street he keeps an eye open for other cars nosing out of their parking places.

You wish that you were wiser?
Well, suppose you make a start
By accumulating wisdom

If you want to give men knowledge
You must get it, 'ere you give.

Couldn't Take a Hint

Mrs. Brown was tired of the borrowing propensities of her neighbor, Mrs. Smith. The other day a knock came to Mrs. Brown's door. It was Mrs. Smith's little girl.

"Please, mother wants to know," she said, "if you will lend her some pepper and the big flat iron."

Mrs. Brown was determined to stop her neighbor's borrowing.

"Tell your mother I've got other fish to fry," she snapped, and the little girl went away.

She was back in a few minutes, however, with a dish.

"Please, mother wants to know if you'll lend her some of the fried fish."

Presentation To Mahlon Becksted

Elma United Church Sunday School held a Christmas supper in the church Hall Friday evening, December 12. The hall and tables were artistically decorated for the occasion.

After about eighty persons had partaken of an abundant first course, a birthday cake made by Mrs. Morley McPherson in honour of her brother, Mahlon Becksted was presented. All joined in singing "Happy Birthday to You."

Miss Jean Armstrong read the following address and Mrs. Egerton Barkley presented Mr. Becksted with a leather-bound hymnary.

Mr. Mahlon Becksted, Dear Sir:- We members and friends of Elma United Church Sunday School are happy to greet you this evening.

We wish to congratulate you on your birthday and to express appreciation of your faithful services in this church and particularly in our Sunday School.

Through many years, as Sunday School superintendent you have set an example of prompt and regular attendance and upright Christian living. By so doing you have exerted a very beneficial influence in this community.

We expect that in the future you will continue your work with the same earnest zeal as in the past. As a slight token of our respect and esteem we ask you to accept this gift which we present with the sincere wish and fervent prayer that you may have many more years of happiness in the Master's service.

Signed on behalf of those present:
F. J. Vowles (pastor),

All sang "For He's A Jolly Good Fellow". Rev. F. J. Vowles led in the singing of Christmas carols. Two small grandnieces of Mr. Becksted, Lois McPherson and Gladys Barkley sang "Away in A Manger" ;Miss Margaret Carruthers gave a piano solo, and group games were enjoyed for some time.

Santa Claus paid a visit and distributed treats to the children, and the gifts on the tree.

Rev. W. A. Morrison pronounced the benediction and brought a pleasant evening to a close.

BAD INJURIES FROM FARM ACCIDENTS

An analysis of the nature of injuries occurring on Canadian farms made by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics in its survey of farm accidents during the 12 months ended June 1, 1947, indicates that about half of the estimated 37,200 accidents were sufficiently serious to involve layoffs from work of over three weeks. It is estimated that 2,500 accidents caused partial or permanent disability.

Among the more serious injuries were fractures of arms and legs, and even of skull, spine and backbone. Head injuries were frequent, and severe cuts and other injuries of that type which resulted in open wounds, ranked high. Less serious accidents caused sprains and strains, severe bruising without open wounds, and burns and scalds.

Nearly 5,000 accidents were unclassified but included internal injuries, severe burns, injuries to nerves and spinal cord, and effects of weather and exposure.

IN MEMORIAM

CASSELMAN—In loving memory of our dear father, Mahlon Casselman, who passed away December 30th, 1946.

Remembrance is a golden chain,
Death tries to break, but all in vain;
To have, to love, and then to part,
To the greatest sorrow of one's heart
The years may wipe out many things,
But this they wipe out never,
The memory of those happy days
When we were all together.

—The Casselman Family.

PRINCIPAL CAUSES OF FIRES ON FARMS

Of the 8,000 farm fires estimated by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics to have occurred in the 12 months ended June, 1947, about 3,000 originated in the farm house, 3,600 in barns and outbuildings, and the exact place of origin of 1,400 could not be determined.

Defective chimneys and flues were the principal calse of house fires, and sparks on combustible roofs caused 400 fires to farm homes and 200 to barns and outbuildings. Overheated stoves and other heating and cooking equipment was a common cause of fires not only in the home but in barns and farm buildings. Brooder houses and tobacco kilns were frequently damaged or destroyed by faulty heating devices.

Farms, many of which lack electricity for lighting, are more subject to fires arising from overturned lamps and storm lanterns than other households. It is estimated that the use of inflammable liquids such as coal oil and gasoline caused 900 fires, 200 more than those started by lightning.

Thirty-five per cent of the fires arose from unknown causes, but past experience would suggest that a large proportion of these arose from spontaneous ignition, particularly in overheated hay and grain.

MILLIONS NEVER NOTICED ERROR ON ONTARIO MOTOR LICENSE PLATES

The Ontario Motor Vehicles branch has rectified an error which went unobserved by millions. The new motor car license plates for 1948, going on sale January 2, bear at the top the usual small Royal crest. But this time it's the King's crown. The Queen's crown had been used previously in error.

The plates have white lettering on a blue background, and for the first time since the early war years motorists will get plates for front and rear, instead of only one plate for the rear of the car.

It is better to fall among crows than flatterers; for those devour only the dead—these the living.—Antisthenes.

DON'T FORGET

Let us not forget the ancient wisdom
With which our fathers walked their earthly days:
The saying of grace above a loaf new-broken,
The Sabbath rest, the altars we should raise;
The teaching of our faith to these, our children,
The earnest study of God's Holy Word;
The telling, again and again, the whole sweet story
By which an apathetic world is stirred.

Let us not forget the ancient splendors:
The mountain-top experience that lights
The darkest valleys that our feet must travel,
Where God will be, as well as on the heights.
Let us not forget the old, old meaning
Of the sun and moon and stars above the land.
Considering these—God help us to remember
That we like they, are held in Thy great hand.

—Grace Noll Crowell.

Most any poor old fish
Can drift along and dream,
But it takes a regular live one
To swim against the stream.

Why does a chicken cross the road? For the same reason people do—to get on the other side. Why does a chicken get killed before it gets to the other side? Because it doesn't know how to be careful. People do know how to be careful—but traffic records show that scores each year fail to get to the other side of the road or street. Don't be a dumb cluck. Be alert—act like an intelligent human being—and reach the other side safely.

ENOUGH FARM SEEDS FOR CROPS IN 1948

Sufficient quantities of practically all kinds of seeds are available to all engaged in agriculture in Canada to meet requirements in 1948 and surpluses of most kinds are available for export, stated the report on seeds made to the Dominion-Provincial Agricultural Conference held in Ottawa the first week in December, to plan the 1948 farm production program. World production of many kinds of seeds, however, is much less than requirements. This is especially true with respect to winter wheat, red clover, spring vetch, sugar beet and several kinds of root and vegetable seeds.

Red and alsike clover seeds are still under international allocation, consequently they are under export permit control. Individual export control continues on registered and certified grades of seeds of cereals, field peas, field beans, corn, and oil bearing seeds of Eastern Canada origin. These seeds grown in Western Canada may, however be exported under a general export permit up to the end of the current seed year.

New Year Diaries

Remind Folk of Some Famous Journals

New diaries, of every shape and kind, will find a place in hundreds of pockets this week.

Diaries and journals are no new thing. Julius Caesar was careful to preserve records of his wars, and all down the years men and women have recorded their experiences at home and abroad. Most diaries are intensely personal accounts, and thousands must have perished without ever seeing the light of day. Some of those that have come to our notice are of tremendous interest and great historic value.

There come to mind at once the diaries of two famous Englishmen, Pepys and Evelyn. Both lived in the seventeenth century, and both kept careful records of what happened in their own homes and in the country generally. It is curious that these two men should have met, neither suspecting that the other kept a diary, and both ignorant of the fact that one day their diaries were to become famous.

Secret Codes Used

It was long after Pepys and Evelyn had passed on that their volumes were read by others; and it was lon after John Wesley had written the last entry in his wonderful journa that the secret writting was translated. Once the key was found, his journal was like a doorway into eighteenth-century England, the England in which a plain man rode 250,000 miles and preached with great power.

The journals of explorers and travellers are among some of the most thrilling books ever written. The sufferings of Burke and Wills, two of Australia's noblest explorers, are revealed in the journal that was found lying by the dead body of Wills, the page open at his last entry.

Charles Waterton's wanderings in South America, Livingstone's amazing record of adventure and discoveries in Africa; Darwin's journal, kept with wonderful accuracy during the voyage of the "Beagle," all these are famous.

Few men have ever kept a journa more faithfully than the great navigator Captain Cook, and it stirs us to think that in his last days the father of the Yorkshire seaman whose name was ringing round the world was able to follow his son's daily record of discoveries in Southern seas. b

Writing With Frozen Fingers

The Polar explorers have left us priceless journals, some of them written at the cost of life itself. Who can read Nansen's record of his adventures in the Farthest North without being stirred? Or Shackleton's voyage in the "Quest" without marvelling at the courage and endurance of men like these? For all time Captain Scott's diary, written near the South Pole ill he could write no longer, must be something to inspire us.

At this time some of us will be thinking of writing a word or two in our diaries every day, but few of us will keep a diary so regularly and over such a long period as the old doctor of Tolleshunt D'Arcy in Essex. He died in 1933, and for thirty thousand days he kept a diary. It has since been published, or rather part of it, for his daily record filled eighty big volumes, beating Pepys many times over.

A village doctor for sixty-seven years, John Henry Salter was up every morning at five, beginning each day with two hours at his diary. He missed nothing. Everything he did the experiences he had, the people he met, were all put down in a diary which must remain one of the most remarkable ever written.

By The Bookworm

Dear Reader:- It has been given to us by the Grace of God to see the dawn of a New Year, which will be greeted by each one with varied emotions. Some people like to welcome the year with hilarity, fellowship and joy whilst others feel the unknown should be greeted with seriousness and the guidance of God sought at the Watchnight service. Whatever type we are, it is certainly an uneasy world which starts out upon 1948.

Wars are raging in Greece, China, India and now in Palestine, and blood is being shed.

Many of us are uneasy about the Comintern, wondering whether she will draw all of Western Europe under her domination.

Knowing the Soviet population to be about 196,000,000 people, if in a strategic sense she should gain control of Europe's 330,000,000, it would be an alliance far more powerful than any seen on earth.

We know in our inmost hearts that atomic research goes ahead, as much for destruction as for the comfort of man.

We know that in the event of another war there will be no victor, just perhaps a few survivors on a radioactive earth.

We must earnestly pray for statesmen and leaders who will guide the ship of state skilfully and safely past all the hazards and dangers which beset us, because when we look back over the past 100 years we reach one glowing conclusion. Humanitarianism one of the world's greatest constructive forces has advanced by leaps and bounds.

We know that back of the turmoil and upheaval in the world today is the ultimate betterment of the human race and the dignity of man.

There are many poems and similies applied to the New Year, I expect each of you has a favorite. Mine is about the page "all stained and blotted" which was handed in. As I do quite a bit of writing and always with a "dip pen", I am prone to smudge and blot the page, so like as in the poem, I am always glad to start a new page all "unspotted," but being a human failty I shall make more blots but I must try to make as few as possible.

You are not as superstitious as are people in the Old World. In the North of England it was very lucky if a neighbour placed a piece of coal on your fire on New Year's Day.

In Gloucestershire it was "bad luck" if a woman was the first to cross the threshold in the New Year.

In Scotland people go "First-footing," to greet the year and the neighbours, and at the finish the "first foot' often drags a bit.

The new year will dawn on our our peaceful little village where kindness, helpfulness and good will abounds. We must cling to our friends even when they upset us and not lose lightly that which was years in the making.

We must remember no one really knows the other fellow's troubles: no one ever knows another's secret heart. Human nature is too complex to be fully understood but we can be certain it needs sympathy, kindness and co-operation.

We must treat every new day as the miracle it is, and we shall find the world is full of many good things.

Happy New Year. God Bless You All.

Your Friend—The Bookworm.

Behind The Scenes In The BBC

Every listener realises that the BBC's huge staff includes producers, musicians, and actors and actresses, but not so many people visualise the large numbers of cooks, waitresses, managers and cleaners, accountants, secretaries, clerks and administrators of all kinds who are needed to keep the organization in being. Many these people who devote their lives to the service of broadcasting never see a microphone, a studio or a broadcaster. They are back-room boys and girls in a very real sense, people without whom broadcasting could not function adequately, but people who see none of the glamour of radio. They send out the artists' contracts, wash the office floors, type the scripts, book the hours for which studios will be needed for rehearsals and transmissions, and there the matter ends.

Some weeks ago one of these back-room girls, we'll call her Miss Clerk, went to see the head of her department to clear up a query. She was a woman who for twenty years had been intimately connected with details of programme routine, but in the BBC she had never yet been inside a studio. Her astonished superior officer said at once, "Well, wouldn't you like to see one?" Miss Clerk agreed eagerly and was then and there taken into the building's biggest studio. It was refreshing to see her intense interest in everything from the control panel in the listening room to the walls, specially treated with a sound-absorbent substance that to the unintiated looks like cattle-cake. Her first sight of a microphone, the piece of apparatus towards which so many BBC employees' work is ultimately directed, was a great event, though it seemed a very tiny thing to hold such an important place in broadcasting. Near it she found a fantastic array of novelties: a small door built into a special frame, a door with noisy knocker, bell and letter box which was in constant use i productions such as 'Itma'; a telephone with bell, but unattached t any wire; a tray of sand in which programme engineers trod to portray approaching footsteps and in which Miss Clerk trampled blissfully up down to test its efficacy.

This, then, was a studio, the wonderful, almost magical room where her week's work came to fruition, and in which the work of many of her colleagues took final shape. Miss Clerk cast a last enraptured glance at it and went back to her desk a new woman.

SHIP OF HOPE

Beginning early in 1948, new Canadians to the number of 800 displaced persons and other immigrants will arrive in this country with each voyage of the Canadian Pacific Steamships' 16-knot diesel-electric liner Beaverbrae, seen above alongside her refitting berth at Sorel, Que. Formerly the German vessel Huascaran of the Hamburg-Amerika Line, she was captured, virtually undamaged, by Allied forces in a Norwegian fjord where she had acted as repair and "mother" ship to U-boats seeking their toll of shipping in the North Atlantic, and handed over to Canada as part reparations payment.

Master of the Beaverbrae is Captain G. O. Baugh, O.B.E., R.D., a Royal Canadian Navy veteran of the Battle of the Atlantic, who quite possibly tangled with some submarines which had been based alongside his new commond.

HOLIDAY PARTIES

Best wishes for a Happy New Year! We trust you have made some good resolutions and hope you will be able to abide by them. Our resolution is to give you practical, economical ideas and to write a newsy Mixing Bowl column every week. We appreciate your helpful letters at all times. Thank you kindly for your festive messages, and for enquiries throughout the past year.

RESOLUTIONS

Resolve to allocate your food allowance: One-third for milk and meat; one-third for fruits and vegetables and one-third for cereals, sugar and butter.

To cook food nutritiously—only until tender and in wise proportions. Consider health and fuel.

To store perishables and leftovers carefully.

To oprate the home wisely.

Resolve to be happy and content with the comforts in the home.

Resolve to take care of your health and your family's health.

Resolve to consider the little things you can do for others.

Resolve to be a good citizen of your community and of your country.

TAKE A TIP

1. If you cook in dishes that you can bring right to the table, food will stay hot longer and you will save dishwashing.

2. Sift flour onto a sheet of waxed paper or paper towelling. You will not have to wash a bowl! Do not throw the waxed paper away after using. Fold it and store in sifter.

3. Grease new pans slightly and then put in a warm oven and they will be much less likely to rust.

4. Use ammonia (except where glass is trimmed with gold) to wash dishes, glass and silver.

5. Be careful not to start preheating the oven too far in advance. The ringing telephone or doorbell is also the signal to turn off the oven if you are not prepared to use it.

6. You don't have to baste meats if the oven heat is constant. The fewer times you open the door, the more heat and electricity you save.

7. A great deal of cooking can be done with heat stored in the electric oven after the current has been turned off.

8. In surface cookery, when foods come to a full steam, switch to one of the lower positions. It will help conserve vitamins, too.

9. Do not use a higher heat than necessary. The temperature of boiling water is the same, whether boiling easily or madly.

10. If you soak dried fruit before cooking, do not toss away the water. Cook the fruit in it. It is far more healthful.

THE QUESTION BOX

Mrs. H. C. asks: If there are any precautions to be observed in the use of a heating pad?

Answer: Do not fold the pad. Carry the pad by the pad itself—not by the cord.

Never allow warming pad to get wet.

Never use pins or other metallic means to fasten the pad in place.

Adjust the switch to the desired setting for comfort. Be sure to turn to Off when the pad is not in use.

Mrs. W. H. asks: How to remove candlewax from linen?

Answer: Scrape off excess with dull knife. Place stained portion over several thicknesses of plain blotting paper. Touch gently with a lukewarm iron.

Mrs. S. M. asks: Should I use a pressing cloth with my new steam iron?

Answer: It is not necessary, especially with an automatic controlled steam iron—although it is wise to do so when ironing wool, gabardine and serge.

William L. McNair Passes Away In Hospital

In 1909 he married Sara A. Barkley of Williamsburg who survives, also surviving are one sister, Miss Edith McNair of Toronto; a half-sister, Mrs. Brown of Kitchener, a half-brother, Harold Wales of Peterborough, a sister-in-law, Mrs. C. Harold WalesMcNair of Toronto.

Mrs. McNair of Toronto and Mr. Harold Wales of Peterborough, attended the funeral. Interment was in Maple Ridge Cemetery.

Poor visibility is an ever-recurring traffic hazard at this time of year. Frost or spattered mud may cloud the windshield. Snow flurries may put an extra strain on the driver's vision. Early darkness brings an added handicap. So the Ontario Department of Highways cautions: Keep windshield and headlights clean and eyes sharp, and see what happens.

CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL AT HOLY TRINITY CHURCH

The Holy Eucharist and Blessing of the Crib ushered in the Christmas Festival at Holy Trinity Anglican Church on Christmas Eve. There was a good congregation in attendance and also a choir. Mrs. R. Smith presided at the organ. The service was in charge of the Rev. Leon Adams, Rector.

On Holy Innocents' Day, December 28th, the Sacrament of Holy Baptism was administered at Holy Trinity Church, when the Rector baptized Julia Margaret, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ebenezer Johnstone of town. The Godparents were Mrs. W. Collingridge and Mr. and Mrs. John Sutherland.

On the same afternoon the Rector officiated at Evensong said at the Crib. This was a special service for the Sunday School children who were all present, most of them with their parents. At the end of the service, each child present received a Christmas stocking from the Crib, and all attended a children's party afterwards at the home of Mrs. Garland Sharkey. The stockings were made by Mrs. A. Morris, and the party sponsored by Holy Trinity Ladies' Guild, of which Mrs. J. Sutherland is president.
