BODIES OF MISSING MEN RECOVERED

The bodies of Eugent McGinis and John Reardon, both of Waddington, N. Y., drowned when their boat capsized in the St. Lawrence river late Tuesday night, were recovered at Louisville Landing.

The overturned motorboat was found Thursday night, and a search for the missing men was commenced at once. The discovery of the boat near Tims Island led the searchers to the spot where the bodies were located.

It is thought the men were making for the island when a sudden gust of wind caused the boat to turn over and the roughened condition of the water prevented their swimming to safety.

HOCKEY MEETING

The annual meeting of the Morrisburg Hockey Club will be held in the Agricultural Office, Wednesday evening, Nov. 21st, at 7.30 o'clock. Everyone interested in the local team is invited and urged to be present. We hope to have a team of which Morrisburg will be justly proud, and we trust the community will support them in every way possible—Come one and all.

MAN KILLED AT LANCASTER CROSSING

Aldrich Laroux, 22, driver of a bread delivery van for J. Caron of Lancaster, was instantly killed at 1.55 o'clock Wednesday afternoon when the truck in which he was driving was struck and demolished by the Inter City, Limited, on the C. N. R. level crossing at Lancaster. Laroux was driving south across the tracks and obviously failed to notice the approach of the fast train from the east, despite the fact that warning bells were ringing at the crossing. The wrecked truck was hurled some distance by the impact and Laroux was quite dead when his body was extricated from the cab. An inquest has been ordered for Friday, November 16th, at two o'clock.

MRS. ELIZABETH WEEGAR

In the passing of Mrs. Elizabeth Weegar, Dunbar lost one of its highly respected citizens. The esteem in which she was held was testified to by the large number of relatives and friends who attended the funeral service at Dunbar Lutheran church on Saturday afternoon, November 10th. The deceased was a life-long resident of that district and an active member of the Lutheran Church. For the past few weeks she had been confined to her bed seriously ill and early Thursday morning the end came very peacefully. The deceased was in her 53rd year. Interment was made at Maple Ridge cemetery.

She is survived by her husband, Mr. George Weegar, and six childrern, Orlean, Bert and Morris, at home; Mrs. Arthur Barkley, Dunbar Mrs. Wm. Lane, of Boucks Hill; and Mr. Claude Weegar of Gallingertown. The father of the deceased, Mr. Aaron Barkley of Dunbar and two sisters and two brothers also survive. The sisters are Mrs. A. Allison of Inkerman and Mrs. Roy McMillan of Dunbar; the brothers are Mr. Bismark Barkley, Dunbar, and M. Andrew Barkley, Davenport.

MR. JOHN F. HART

(Cornwall Standard)

It is with deep regret we announce the death of Mr. John F. Hart which occurred at the home of his sister, Mrs. Charles McIntosh, 111 Eighth Street, West, Cornwall, on Saturday, November 3rd. The deceased had been about as usual till Monday, October 29th, when he suffered a severe stroke, from which he never rallied. All that kind neighbours and brothers and sisters could do was done and he passed peacefully away on Saturday evening, November 3rd. He leaves to mourn three brothers and six sisters, Mr. Freeman Hart, Potsdam, N.Y.; Mr. Ed. Hart, Cornwall; Mrs. Wm. Barr, Aultsville; Mrs. Martin Hosmer, Ludlow, Vermont; Mrs. Sam Wells, Aultsville; Mr. Allan Hart, Montreal; Mr. Charles Hart, Nudell Bush; Mrs. J. E. Cooper and Mrs. Charles McIntosh, Cornwall. Mr. Hart was born at Gallingertown on Feb. 24th, 1869, the second son of the late William and Elizabeth Hart. He spent most of his life at East Williamsburg, where he was engaged in farming, till about four years ago. Since then he has made his home in Cornwall.

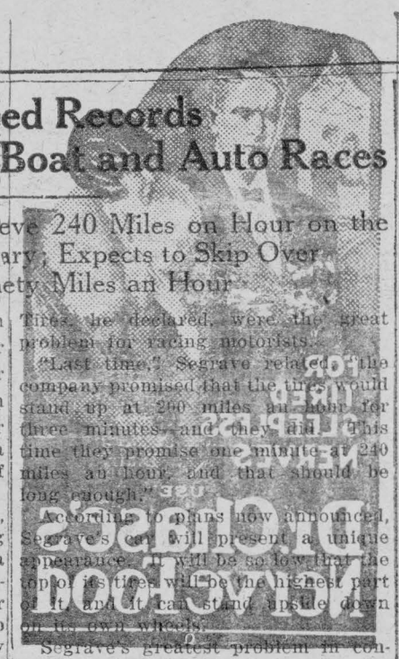
Segrave to Seek Speed Records in Motor Boat and Auto Races

British Major Hopes to Achieve 240 Miles on Hour on the Water at Ninety Miles an Hour

Daytona Track in February; Expects to Skip Over Tires, He Declared, Were the Great Problem for Racing Motorists



Here's A Friend Indeed

"Last time," Segrave related, "the company promised that the tires would stand up at 200 miles an hour for three minutes—and they did. This time they promise one minute at 240 miles an hour, and that should be long enough."

According to plans now announced, Segrave's car will present a unique appearance. It will be so low that the propeller tips will be the highest part of it and it can stand upside down on its own wheels.

Segrave's greatest problem in connection with his motor boat is to prevent it from turning over. With a single propeller the twisting strain of the engine on the hull, called "torque," suggests that there is a tendency for the boat to turn sideways instead of propelling it forward. One way out of the difficulty is to use two propellers, revolving in opposite directions. But there is twice as much resistance of the boat in the water.—A. P. dispatch.

Facts About New Warships Now on Fleet Exercises

Cruisers With Oil Kitchen Ranges and Electric Bakeries

FIRST REHEARSAL

Nelson and Rodney to Fire Broadsides From 16-in. Guns

In Moray Firth during the next few days some of the newest and most powerful ships of the Atlantic Fleet will engage in autumn exercises, some of which will be so realistic that the only substantial factor missing will be a real enemy target.

Nelson and Rodney, the Navy's latest battleships, will fire broadsides from their 16-inch guns. Hood, Renown and Repulse, ships of the battle cruiser squadron, will fire 15-inch broadsides during the attack at full power.

Cruisers, destroyers and aircraft carriers will shoot at Centurion—an old battleship which is the target ship of the Atlantic fleet—and destroyers will carry out a night attack on the Third Battle Squadron.

For the first time in autumn exercises Nelson and Rodney, the two great new battleships, are taking part.

To say that they look odd is to be polite. "Ugly" would probably not be too harsh. The effect to the eye is a lack of balance, which contrasts strongly with the fine lines of the battle cruisers.

ONE TON, ONE SHOT.

But these ships carry a bigger destructive power than the designers of British fighting ships have ever attempted.

The sixteen-inch projectile weighs just under one ton, so that a broadside means nearly nine tons of metal and explosive.

The guns have a maximum range of just under 22 miles, and it has been estimated unofficially that at ten thousand yards the projectile can pierce seventeen inches of armor.

To build the ships costs nearly seven and a half million pounds, of which about three millions represent guns and turret armor.

They carry complements of about fourteen hundred officers and men who consume two and three-quarter tons of food a day.

1,200 LOAVES DAILY.

The vast stores in the ships provide ice-cold storage for carrying naval stores and dry provisions for six months, while the refrigerating system makes it possible to carry provisions for nine weeks.

The ships' kitchens would make the average housewife green with envy. Coal is unknown. Oil, which fires the boilers, also heats the cooking ranges, and an electric bakery produces twelve hundred loaves a day.

Shaw Sees "Dark Ages" in Ireland

Dramatist Comments on Free State's Censorship of Books

London—"Ireland is going to relapse into the dark ages," is George Bernard Shaw's warning on what will happen when the Free State's censorship of books will become law.

"The Free State has apparently decided not to be a cultured country. It has decided that books, pictures and statues are dangerous, so it isn't going to have any. Ireland will sink to the cultural level of the Andaman Islands—that's all," the veteran dramatist added.

G. B. S.'s comment was called forth when an interviewer drew his attention to the fact that the Abbey Theatre, in County Galway, following instruction from the Archbishop of Tuam, has segregated all the Shavian works in special shelves not accessible to the general public.

"What the Galway libraries do today doesn't in the least matter, seeing that in a few weeks no books, pictures or sculpture will be permitted in Ireland," Shaw replied, after which he added the pessimistic prophecy quoted above.—N.Y. Herald-Tribune.

Byng Soon to Begin Police Work

Reorganization of Force Will Be Started Immediately by Its New Commander

London—Viscount Byng of Vimy has gone to Scotland Yard to begin his reorganization of the metropolitan police force. He has gone to Scotland Yard to begin through the ears of a Royal Commission headed by Lord Lee of Fareham, has been hearing what is right and wrong with police methods as they now exist.

Lord Byng, who, during the war was a soldier. He was the British Military Attache with the American forces during the Spanish American War, and filled the same post later at Washington. He married Miss Ruth Moore of New York. His present task is to find out what is wrong with London's police force, once the city's pride, but lately the recipient of more brickbats than encomiums.

Evidence so far taken has been mainly in defense of the police forces by its present heads, many of whom will retire when Lord Byng takes command. Sir William Harwood, Chief Commissioner, and Sir Wyndham Childs, Chief of the Criminal Investigation Department at Scotland Yard, who fall within this category, emphatically denied that anything like "third-degree" methods has been practised in this country.

The task of the police, they said, was to obtain from witnesses by all the artifices they could employ any information they required, but the moment those witnesses became suspected persons and started to make statements that might amount to confessions, it was the duty of the police to warn them not to say anything that might be used against them. This duty was always carried out, they said.

Sir Wyndham, however, admitted that a belief in "third-degree" methods had become rooted in the public mind.

Perhaps engendered by the prevalence of crime, suggested Lord Lee.

Some indignation has been caused in feminist circles by the blunt assertion of the Chief Commissioner that women police are still an experiment whose success has not yet been demonstrated. They have been used to watch the drug traffickers and to combat fortune-tellers, but according to Sir William Harwood, they have been found unfit for responsible work.

The role of the silk-stocking sleuth apparently is cast on hard lines in this country.

The only critic of the police yet heard has been a magistrate of long experience, and his criticism is rather of the use to which the force is being put. He pointed out the growing tendency to employ the police to prosecute and support morals rather than simply to enforce the law, which, in the long run, gave the best results.

Changes of time and custom have provided new duties for the police. Drunkenness, he states, gives them less trouble than of yore, but the increase of motor-car owners has doubled and tripled their traffic duties, while the growth of the night-club habit keeps them busy in the small hours.

An investigation is now being made by the London police chiefs to ascertain the source of the leakage of information about the recent raids on such establishments.

Czar's Treasures at Auction Soon

Soviet Government to Offer Priceless Objects for Sale

VALUE £300,000,000

Signed Masterpieces of French Furniture From Gatchina Palace

London.—The Soviet Government will offer for sale in Berlin on November 9 pictures, furniture, tapestries, and other art objects that once belonged to Czars and Russian noblemen.

The Bolsheviks have confiscated, or "nationalized," all private art collections in Russia, and by this means have become possessed of art treasures worth about £300,000,000.

If the result of the forthcoming sale of a first selection of these treasures finds buyers, it is likely to be followed by other auctions.

The works to be auctioned in Berlin next month include pictures, sculptured tapestries, bronzes and signed pieces of furniture, formerly in the Gatchina Palace, which was a favorite personal palace of the Czar, and contained 200 pictures; from the Mikhailoff Palace, the world-famous Hermitage Museum, and other "nationalized" collections.

THE WORK OF ART

The Soviet Government, as is well known, "nationalized" all the great private art collections in Russia, adding thereby four thousand masterpieces by old masters to the Hermitage Museum, which already contained eleven thousand pictures, and incalculable wealth in ecclesiastical and domestic objects of art of all kinds.

The contents of the Hermitage Museum alone were valued by experts early this year at £50,000,000, and the total value of the Soviet's art treasures cannot be less than £300,000,000.

The pictures to be offered for this sale include works by Boucher, Greuze, Canaletto, Hubert Robert and other favorite eighteenth century masters. The furniture includes J. B. Lemoyne's celebrated marble bust of Marie Antoinette; the tapestries are Gobelins of the finest period.

One great piece of silk and wool

Empress Furniture

The French furniture consists mainly of the famous suite of Italian celebrated cabinet pieces in the reign of Louis XVI, specially executed for the Empress Catherine II.

Some estimate of the value of this section of the sale can be formed by the fact that £150,000 paid for a few pieces by the same master furniture-makers in Gobelins fetched two years ago.

Other objects of art to be offered are jewelled snuff boxes, candelabra in ormolu and lustre, exquisite French bronzes, Italian bas reliefs, French and German gold and silver work, and Limoges enamels.

The Russian royal palaces and the collections of the Russian princes, archdukes and noblemen were especially rich in French eighteenth century ort. [illegible] furniture and pictures, except the pieces made for the French Court, were commissioned by the Russian collectors at the time; and the Russian palaces and mansions all contained rooms entirely decorated with the owners' favorite artists' works. Nearly all the best pictures by Hubert Robert, for example, were in Russia.

The treasures now offered are worth a sensational total, but the collection even so is only a sample of the Soviet Government's wealth in "nationalized" art.

How Scotland Yard Observes

Detectives Trained in Constant Registering of Fact and Form

During the last few days, a noted burglar was caught in the English Midlands purely from observation of his habits, writes a student of crime in the London Daily Mail. Far too clever to leave a telltale finger-print behind, the man was caught on the afternoon following the robbery.

It has been his habit after "cracking a crib" to go to any hotel in a near-by town and ask for a room, explaining that he had travelled all night and wanted to sleep until late in the afternoon.

From observation of his habits Scotland Yard knew that [illegible] among [illegible] Mr. [illegible] covered the afternoon sleeper.

To the detectives whose mind, through long association with criminals has become a veritable picture gallery, and whose faculty for memorizing faces, has become so keenly developed, such tasks present but little difficulty.

Housed in Scotland Yard is a criminal Record Office containing nearly 200,000 portraits of criminals. A good proportion of these men are serving time, others have perished and are now good citizens, while many others have gone abroad. All these portraits are classified with the record of the particular type of crime and fall into different catalogues. Although there may be several persons wanted for similar offences, the trained mind of the detective will, in a few minutes' study of the portraits, retain a complete picture of the profile and full-faced appearance of the fugitive.

Result of Training

Acute observation can only come from a mind developed and trained in the constant registering of facts and forms.

Observation has brought many criminals to justice. The annals of criminology teem with instances. Not long ago Stewart, sentenced to death for the Bayswater murder, was arrested by a detective whose powers of observation enabled him to pick his man out of thousands on the front at Southend.

Outside the police force Sir Bernard Spilsbury, the eminent pathologist, is an outstanding example of the trained, observant, analytical mind. He is considered by the authorities to be a prince of observers.

At all times of the day and night a detective's powers of observation may be put to the test. A few months ago a Scotland Yard detective was told that a man whom he had never seen was in the stalls of a certain theatre and that a warrant had been issued for his arrest.

A few seconds' study of his photograph at the "Yard" sufficed. In the half light of the auditorium the officer, standing by an exit door, was able to pick out his man and make an arrest. There was nothing distinctive about the man's face, and to an untrained mind this task would have been impossible.

Boy Settlers' Plan

Manitoba and Saskatchewan Will Co-operate, States Forke

PURCHASE WHEN 21

Scheme of Government Loans to Aid Buyers to Finance

Ottawa.—The provincial Governments are willing to co-operate with the Dominion Government in bringing British boys to Canada and make it possible for them to buy farms for themselves with the assistance of government loans, after they have reached the age of 21 years, Hon. Robert Forke, Minister of Immigration and Colonization, announced in a statement issued on his return from a three weeks' visit to Western Canada. The purpose of his trip was to work out plans for closer co-operation with the provinces.

During his trip Mr. Forke had conferences with the Premiers and other prominent members of the Governments of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. His effort to establish closer co-operation with the provinces was in keeping with the recommendations of the select committee of parliament which conducted the immigration enquiry last session.

The Governments of both Manitoba and Saskatchewan have announced their willingness to co-operate with the Federal Department in its scheme for the settlement of British boys in Canada, said Mr. Forke. Under this scheme the Dominion, Provincial and British Governments join forces to give the boy an opportunity to become a farmer in Canada. British boys especially selected between the ages of 15 and 20, who will undertake to engage in farm work for a period of three years, will be placed in employment on Canadian farms. When a boy has attained a practical knowledge of farm work and live stock, has become 21 years of age, and has saved up about $500, the Governments concerned, will make him a loan of $2,500 for the purchase of a farm of his own, the loan to be repaid over a period of twenty years.

"Another scheme which was very favorably regarded provides for the establishement of training centres for domestics in Great Britain. One in England and one in Scotland, where a six weeks' course will be given to female domestics contemplating house work in Canada.

"With regard to the miner, harvester situation, the Minister said, it seems to be settling down quietly. So far as I could learn the great majority of the harvesters intend to take positions on Canadian farms without much difficulty.

"There were perhaps a few whose only purpose was to make as much trouble as they could, but they were quickly weeded out. Many of the harvesters now returning to Great Britain will carry good reports of Canada and probably many of them will come back as permanent settlers."

Ontario's Fiscal Year Now Closed

Temiskaming Railway Hands Over $1,300,000 Surplus Treasury

Toronto.—Ontario's fiscal year 1927-28 closed at 3 o'clock on Oct. 31st.

One of the last acts of the Treasury was to deposit a cheque for $1,300,000 from George W. Lee, chairman of the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway. This represents net operating surplus of the railway for the year, and is the same as the surplus of last year. It was stated, however, that the amount indicated the best year in the history of the road when an expenditure of $300,000 on track and right of way repairs was taken into consideration.

Full interest charges had also been met on the $6,000,000 loan negotiated in the spring to carry out an extension program.

Neither Premier Ferguson nor Provincial Treasurer Monteith would comment in regard to the condition of the Provincial purse, but it is understood that the Government expects to be able to announce a surplus of approximately $225,000.

He works with MAGIC

THIS MAN is putting up telephone poles. Early in the morning he is out making a way for the wire that is to come. At night when the gang gets back to camp he is tired.

But he likes it. There is zest in the work he is doing, for he is in new country. There have never been telephones here before.

He is blazing the trial. After him will come families and homes and stores and factories to make another city. Over the wires on the poles he plants there will be voices and laughter, business will hum, all the world will draw closer.

He works with magic. The wire transforms time and distance. Today you can lift the telephone at your elbow and within seven minutes hear the voice of your friend in England say: "Are you there?"

THIS MAGIC in the telephone has not come in a day. It has come with year after year of experiment and improvement. The telephone of today is no more like the first telephone than a machine gun is like a bow-and-arrow.

And the telephone of tomorrow will surpass the telephone of today. Tomorrow perhaps, this telephone at your elbow will bring you the face of the person you talk with, will hold new magic we now do not dream of.

THIS IS the urge to improve—to seek and to find something always better—which has been the definite policy of the telephone business since the first crude instrument reproduced the voice of its inventor fifty-odd years ago.

By no other policy could the telephone have kept pace with this country or contributed to its progress as it has done in reducing Canada's wide distances and differences of geography.

And by no other policy can the telephone now meet the responsibility of serving Canada's future.

CANADA'S FUTURE is at least twenty years of unprecedented growth and prosperity. All the signs and barometers of business point to it. All the shrewdest prophets of business predict it.

The signs and the prophets are so sure, and the future is so unmistakable, that within the next five years more money will be needed for extension of the telephone system in Ontario and Quebec than was spent by the business in all its first forty years.

THE MAN pushing poles and wire into new country and the foresight which now is planning over one hundred million dollars of new plant to meet the needs of the next five years come from the same policy and the same purpose—to give Canadians facilities of communication worthy of their country and its future.

Sunday School Lesson

November 18—Lesson VII, Paul's Experiences in Jerusalem, Acts 21: 37 to 22: 1, 22-29. Golden Text—Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might.—Ephesians 6: 10.

ANALYSIS.

I. PAUL AND THE ROMAN CAPTAIN, 21: 37 to 22: 1.

II. PAUL AND THE ANGRY MOB, 22: 22-29.

INTRODUCTION—Paul arrives at Jerusalem in May, A.D. 57, to find the city crowded with pilgrims attending the feast of Pentecost. The teachers of the church realize that the city is a dangerous place for one with the reputation of Paul. He is a marked man among the Jews because of his supposed hostility to the law. Paul is, therefore, urged to put himself right in the eyes of the people by performing a certain religious ceremony which will make it clear that he personally observes the law. But the Holy Lands in a riot, for the Jews had noticed him in company with a Gentile named Trophimus, and they rushed to the conclusion that Paul had admitted this man into the inner temple, which was a criminal offence in their eyes.

I. PAUL AND THE ROMAN CAPTAIN, 21: 37 to 22: 1.

V. 37. Lysias knows that this is responsible for the order of the city, and he naturally decides to arrest Paul. He is surprised to find that he is able to speak Greek, just as a little later the people are surprised that he can speak Aramaic.

V. 38. The captain has supposed that this man was a false prophet from Egypt, who a little while before had led a revolution against Rome, and who had escaped thus far. But Paul indignantly denies this statement and with manifest civic pride affirms that he is a citizen of Tarsus.

V. 40. The scene is very memorable and must have appealed strongly to the memory of the great apostle. Twenty-four years before this he had taken part in a similar riot over the Christian confession made by Stephen, the first Christian martyr. At that time, Paul had been on the side of the Jews, and had been a leader in the attack on the followers of Jesus. But now everything is reversed. He is back in the familiar city, filled with sad memories, and now he is pleading the cause of those whom once he persecuted. He wishes to make his defence of Christ. Many of his old Jewish friends would probably be present, and many more were there who had heard of his fame. It was thus a situation fraught with intense emotion. Paul raised his hands to call their attention as he began to speak in the Hebrew, or Aramaic language.

Ch. 22. The address opens in the ordinary way and continues to v. 22. The speech was a bold, straightforward talk. Paul mentions his early training in the Mosaic law under a great rabbi, Gamaliel, refers to his own zeal in persecuting Christians and then tells of the great revolution made in his life by the light that broke upon him on the road to Damascus. In v. 17, he mentions a vision he had in the temple, warning him of impending danger, and at this point the fury of the people breaks out.

II. PAUL AND THE ANGRY MOB, 22: 22-29.

V. 22. As already suggested this scene is much like that which is reported in connection with the death of Stephen. The Jews lose all self-control, shake their garments and cast dust into the air, as signs of their intense abhorence of the words of Paul. Some think that they threw off their outer garments i norder to be freer to cast stones at him, as in the Stephen's case.

V. 23. The Roman captain cannot understand the Aramaic, but he sees quite clearly from the actions of the mob that grave danger is at hand and he orders Paul to be taken to the castle of Antonio which lies north of the temple area. He proceeds to use scourging in order to force the prisoner to tell the trth. It was illegal to use such torture except where the prisoner had refused to confess, and it was always illegal to scourge a Roman citizen.

V. 25. Paul is accordingly tied to the post with the straps and he was about to receive these fearful blows when he is able to make the soldiers understand that he is a Roman citizen. The circumstances in which Paul claims the privilege of Rome are specially given by Luke—"It was expedient to make the reason for such apparent disloyalty to the nation quite clear."

V. 26. The centurion in charge of the band naturally hastens to report these circumstances to the captain, and Lysias is filled with even greater surprise at this astonishing prisoner.

V. 29. He cannot refrain from mentioning his astonishment that a poor and apparently unpopular Jew should have received a privilege which he himself had obtained only after a heavy payment. He likely had been an alien, and had bribed some of the Emperor's freedmen who carried on a great traffic in this business. In Paul's case the citizenship had come through his father. Many of the Jews taken to Rome by Pompey as slaves had received freedom and citizenship.

V. 29. Lysias realized the danger of this action and orders them to give consideration to Paul.

Two men, waiting on the corner for the lights to change, got into a conversation. "See that man over there? I owe my fortune to him," remarked one of them. "Who is he?" remarked the other. "He is a pie-maker who supplies 95 per cent. of the restaurants in town." "Huh! And who are you?" "I am the millionaire dyspepsia tablet manufacturer."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Canadian Girl Works Island Claim as Miner

College Graduate 15 Years on Northern Venture; Lives in Pioneer's Cabin

Toronto—Women are "sitting on top of the world" in many fields of activity, but to Miss Kathleen Rice, graduate of the University of Toronto, goes the unusual distinction of active operations as a mining prospector.

Mining is one of the chief topics of conversation in Canada at present but while the home woman, the business woman and the professional woman discuss how many shares of this or that they own, Miss Rice is working her claim. Her part in the romance of mining is a definite one. At present her base camp is on an island in Herb Lake, or to use the more melodious Indian name, Wekusko Lake, northern Manitoba. From this base camp she works her claim. Here she lives in a log cabin that harks back to the days of the pioneers, and here she pioneers on one of her most promising claims, a copper and gold veld that shares, within a stone's throw of her cabin. Her fortunes are tangled up in the romance, and Miss Rice had considerable difficulty in buying the claim. Now, however, she is receiving encouraging reports from engineers on the ground have pronounced the prospects good.

Kathleen Rice is one of those "girls of the great open spaces with little guns," seen often on the screen as being typical of Canada, but very rare indeed in the Canada of real life. She would be satisfied to gain distinction in man's field by prospecting in the summer, but Miss Rice adds further laurels to her outdoor reputation by trapping in the winter. In this way she actually is successful enough to make her stake for summer operations. While she uses a gun like a veteran, she never shoots for sport. Once, when a moose fell to her rifle she preserved the meat for future use.

Devotion to animals is another of Miss Rice's characteristics. Always, in the north, she is seen with and known by her famous dogs. Despite the unwritten law of the north country, she ignores and never uses the lash. In this matter she has the full approval of her dogs, who not only shower her with devotion but repay her by being the undisputed dogs within hundreds of miles.

It is now fifteen years since Miss Rice, daughter of Henry Lincoln Rice, K.C., of Toronto, went north on a lone venture. The spirit of adventure was financed by a college chum from Chicago, who staked her when she homesteaded in the name of her brother, Lincoln Rice, of St. Mary's, Ontario. The big Canadian girl was tired of cities and classrooms. She longed for the north; felt "the call of windswept places," so she left her position as a mathematics specialist in an Ontario high school and struck out for an unknown land. The rest of the story is teeming with adventure; her richest gold quartz claim is on the shore of Herb Lake, in the line of strike with the Bingo, Rex and Kinski mines. Because Rice is a family name, she calls it the Spud claim. The name connects the Rice family with the earliest New England settlement. This claim shows not only gold but other high mineral values. She was one of the first prospectors in the north to find uranium.—N.Y. Herald-Tribune.

Australian Air Chief Criticizes Equipment — Asserts State's Planes are Obsolete

Canberra.—The Australian air force is not fit to undertake war operations owing to the obsolete type of service machines in use, says Air Marshal Sir John Salmond in his report to the Australian government.

Sir John states that the force has been established on a firm basis and developed on sound lines, but owing to the obsolete type of service machines in use and the entire absence of reserve equipment he does not consider the force fit to undertake war operations in co-operation with the army and navy.

Promontory Off Spain Popular as Health Resort

Gibraltar.—While statesmen and reformers have been discussing world disarmament, Great Britain has made this rocky promontory at the southerly extremity of Spain one of the most powerful fortresses in the world.

Gigantic guns of the latest and most deadly pattern have been placed along the ridge of the great "Rock," replacing those of smaller calibre that used to be mounted on the sea level of the famous fortress.

The most elaborate system of rangefinding has been installed. It is now possible for the big guns to fire straight into the continent of Africa, fourteen miles away. All the lessons the British learned in the World War have found concrete expression at Gibraltar in the construction of the most formidable sea fortress ever known.

Sweeps the Mediterranean

Sweeping the Mediterranean for a distance of thirty miles and operating at a height of more than 1,000 feet, these tremendous cannon have enormously increased the range, fire and general efficiency of Gibraltar as England's guardian and gateway to the Seven Seas. In addition to this, a series of great subterranean tunnels, miles, emantled walls, impregnable fortifications and several bomproof chambers have been built.

Miles of space have been reclaimed from the sea for the accommodation of huge new docks, shipways, wharves and jetties. There is an enclosed harbor of 440 acres where a entire fleet may anchor, safe from torpedo or submarine attack. This harbor can take care of the repairing, refitting and coaling of a large fleet of battleships.

The British authorities have also built a number of fine modern roads, one of the largest running into the north from the fine port and another at the back of Catalan Bay, leaning to the mouth of the tunnel. A third road and tunnel will traverse on the south side, encircling the Rock.

25,000 Live on Rock

Although Gibraltar has a total area of only two square miles in area, it is one of the most densely populated spot in the world, there being 12,000 people to the square mile. Here some places this, the greatest of the world's armed citadels, is only one-quarter of a mile wide. The residential part of Gibraltar occupies only about one-tenth of the total area of the Rock. Only a small part of the town is on level ground. Yet Gibraltar boasts nearly 25,000 population. Of this number 20,000 are civilians. The rest are naval and military forces. The langauge of the people is a corrupt Spanish.

Because of the ever-present contingency of war and the necessity of guarding intact all the secrets of the fortress, the British authorities are obliged to keep a sharp check on any increase in the present population. Whenever possible, the poorer classes are shifted from Gibraltar across the frontier into the neighboring Spanish town of La Linea de la Concepcion, which now has a population of 63,000. Spanish and other visitors are allowed to enter the island from the mainland or from boats between 5 a.m. and 10 p.m., after which hour the Rock is rigidly cleared of all aliens.

Although primarily and essentially a naval base, Gibraltar in recent years has become something of a health resort. It is a favorite stopping place for American tourist ships on Mediterranean cruises.

Christianity Is Waning, Bishop Warns England

Cheltenham, England.—Europe today is weltering in a "chos of immorality," to judge from the statement of Dr. Hensley Henson, Bishop of Durham, before the Church Congress here.

"What reason is there," Dr. Henson asked, "for feeling confident that the Christianity of England in 1928 is more firmly fixed in the national acceptance than that of France and Russia on the eve of their revolutions?"

However, the existing situation may be viewed, Dr. Henson continued, "one feature is equally incontestable and disquieting—the general and increasing ignorance of the Christian faith and morals which mark our population.

"The record of revolution suggests that the two points on which the attack on Christianity is soonest made are sex morality and educationa. The two pillars on which sex morality in Christiandom has hitherto rested have been the conception of the marriage union as permanent, by divine law, and the claim of children as the normal product of the marriage union.

"Both of these have been removed by the pernicious theorie now largely accepted in Europe. Hence the chaos into which sexual morality has fallen throughout Western civilization."

Remodeling Garments

Styles by ANETTE Paris—New York

If there are many alterations to make, it is best to rip the old garment entirely apart, sponge or otherwise treat the material or send it to the cleaners, and press the pieces. Woolen goods may be washed in mild soap and lukewarm water, rinsed thoroughly in clear water of the same temperature with a slightly sudsy rinse at the last to preserve the softness of the material, and carefully pressed on the wrong side when it is dry. A hot iron on wet woolen cloth will shrink and harden it beyond repair. Remove the wrinkles by steaming, keeping a damp cloth between the dry material and the iron.

It often happens that the wrong side of woolen material looks like new while the right side is worn and shiny. Under such circumstances, what has the wrong side of goods in the skirt or garment should be the right side in the new and the pressing done accordingly. If this is impossible, remove the tailored pockets, after pressing carefully. Mend the slits with a backing of the goods, and later conceal the place by a patch pocket. This necessity must be kept in mind when adjusting the new pattern to the material.

The patterns used in remodeling old garments should be as simple as possible. The note of variety in clothes for children and young girls, especially lies chiefly in clever trimming arrangements and the addition of smart dainty accessories. The dresses themselves are on the simplest lines, for however fahion may demand the ornamental for adults, childhood and youth are beautiful in themselves and simplicity will always remain the correct thing, and the smartest for children up to at least 17.

An expert advises that in remodeling clothes for children the surplus edge on the printed pattern be removed, regardless of the manufacturers directions. This saves confusion in cutting and enables one to exactly gauge her limited material.

Pin the front and back sections of the pattern together at the shoulder seams, adjust to the figure and pin along the under arm seam to determine whether or not any alterations should be made in the pattern before it is laid on the goods. Alterations in length should be made three inches above the waist and four inches below the waist. Alterations as to width are made on a line parallel to the centre front and four inches away from it. Sleeves are lengthened both above and below the elbow.

"Sizes over 40 should have a dart from the shoulders or from the underarm to give sufficient fullness at the bust. A three-quarter inch allowance on the shoulder seam of the back portion of the pattern should be made for people inclined to be round-shouldered as that gives additional width at the back. If many alterations are necessary, choose a plain pattern and make them, then company the other pattern with this. By following these suggestions instead of the incorrect methods followed by most amateurs for seam alterations, the garment will fit properly because the correct proportions have been maintained.

"There are a few inexorable rules to follow in regard to making over garments. One is never undertake to make over materials that, after thorough cleaning and pressing, do not look like new. But successful 'made-over' never looks like a made-over. On the other hand, it is amazing what can be done sometimes by a clever woman with seemingly impossible materials.

"Always determine upon a model that requires as little extra expense as possible. It rarely pays to buy much that is new to go with old material, although there are exceptions to this rule, of course. Also choose a model for reproduction that involves as little cutting up of the original garment as possible. Yet keep in mind that you dare to be original with used material when your new self occasionally hesitate to experiment.—Christian Science Monitor.

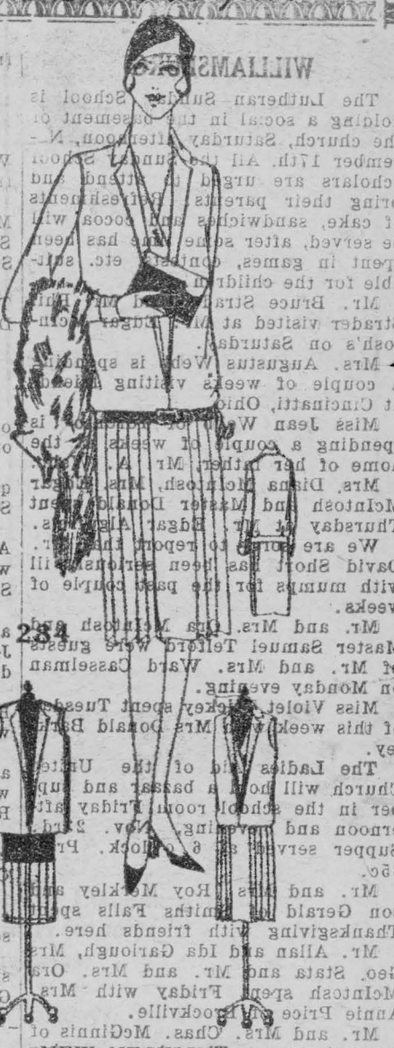
Alfonso Displays Interest in Bees

Spanish Monarch Owner of 1000 Hives, Made Head of Agriculturists

Madrid.—The acceptance by King Alfonso of the honorary presidency of the Society of Agriculture should stimulate the introduction of more modern methods, since the King himself takes a keen interest in bee-keeping and owns over 1,000 hives.

Spain, a land of sunshine and flowers, is almost unrivalled as a bee-keeping country, yet the primitive conditions under which bees were until quite recently managed are to a large extent, have deprived the people of what may now promise to become a source of considerable income. Old tree trunks, roughly hollowed out and rough clay receptacles are still used throughout Spain reminiscent of the prehistoric methods such as can be seen pictured on the walls of the La Arana caves near Valencia in the rough carvings of the primitive hunters of bees and their lives.

There now exists in Madrid a State School of Agriculture. Lectures and demonstrations are being given, and hundreds of beekeepers have adopted the new ideas.

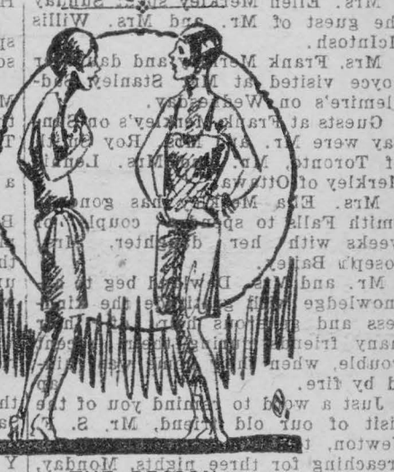


NEW NECKLINE.

Smart women are choosing the black crepe satin frock, because it adapts itself so perfectly for everyday occasions, particularly in semi-sports styling, as seen in Design No. 284. The deep French V, toned in revers, notched collar, and diagonal closing vestee, do much toward attaining slender silhouette. The kilted effect of skirt is youthful fashion to provide fullness without interfering with its slender line. Long tight sleeves have turn-back fitted cuffs. The vestee, never fading, cuffs and collar are made of the dull surface of crepe. Printed sheer tweed with cantonerlaine vestee, autumn-leaf brown flat silk crepe with beige, printed velvet with tailleur crepe, black rayon velvet with beige canton-faille crepe, and printed velvet jersey with plain jersey are popular combinations. Pattern in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust. Price 20c in stamps or coin (coin is preferred). Wrap coin carefully.

HOW TO ORDER PATTERNS.

Write your name and address plainly, giving number and size of such patterns as you want. Enclose 20c in stamps or coin (coin preferred; wrap it carefully) for each number and address your order to Wilson Pattern Service, 73 West Adelaide St., Toronto. Patterns sent by return mail.



THE REASON.

CHANCE

A certain hotel a card sharper made the acquaintance of a fairly intelligent-looking old man, and suggested a game of cards.

He never learned, friend agreed, and they started to play without more ado.

Unfortunately the manager of the hotel did not allow this sort of thing on the premises and interrupted them.

"I am afraid, gentlemen," he said courteously, "that games of chance are not allowed here."

"It isn't a game of chance," snapped the sharper angrily. "My friend here has no chance at all."

"My dear, called a wife to her husband in the next room, what are you opening that can with?" "Why," he said, "with a can-opener. What did you think I was opening it with?" "Well," replied his wife, "I thought from your remarks you were opening it with a prayer."

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Need Rich, Red Blood to Maintain Good Health

After passing the age of forty every woman has reason to grow anxious about her health. This time of trial, with its attacks of faintness and fits of depression, sleepless nights, violent headaches and back aches, is rightly dreaded by women, but if reasonable steps are taken to safeguard the health no serious ill effects will arise. At this turning point in life Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have given a helping hand to thousands of suffering women and by their use a hopeless battle against poor health and waning strength has been changed to one of splendid victory.

The very best help for any woman of middle age is the health help given by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills reinforce the blood supply, enrich and purify it. In giving this they nourish the starved and overtaxed nerves and give new strength and health to the whole system. By this natural process Dr. Williams' Pink Pills completely drive all pains and weakness and a better, happier condition of health and spirits arises. Every woman of middle age should take advantage now of the wonder-working health-help of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Empire Producing Much Raw Cotton

Industry Will Soon Be Self-Contained Within Limits of British Territory

London.—The British Empire now produces 30 per cent. of the world's raw cotton. This statement is made by the Empire Marketing Board in an announcement which it makes regarding the remarkable progress of British cotton growing, and showing how for centuries Britain was the largest consumer of cotton goods while raw cotton all came from overseas, largely from the southern States of America.

The American crop failed during the American Civil War, spreading misery and famine among hundreds of thousands of Lancashire workers. Thirty years ago one of the master spinners of Lancashire sent tens of cotton seed to Egypt and Central Africa. The experiment succeeded.

Since then vast areas in the waste spaces of the Empire are being planted and sown to insure a supply of raw cotton for the spindles and looms of Lancashire.

The supply now comes from East and West Africa, the Sudan, Rhodesia, South Africa, India, Australia and the British West Indies. The Empire's production of fine staple raw cotton to-day amounts to between 3,000,000,000 and 4,000,000,000 pounds yearly. So that before long it is predicted that the cotton industry will be self-contained within the limits of British territory.

Greatness

Greatness is to goodness what marvel is to porphyry; the one is a movable accumulation, event along the surface of the earth, the other stands fixed, and alone, above the violence of war and of the tempest; above all that is residuous of a wasted world. Little men build up great ones; but the snow comforts [illegible]; the good stand under the eye of God; and therefore stand.

FINANCIAL NEWS

Umbrella

It was estimated early this week that the short interest in Wall Street in Nickel must amount to at least 100,000 shares. With the market weak for a brief period, it would seem though the shorts had increased rather than drawn in their lines, as [illegible] opportunity offered in yesterday's lower levels. If this is the case their position is unenviable, to say the least, for the situation is that the stock which they have sold short is liable to be called for deposit immediately. It does not appear likely that anyone who had enough confidence in Nickel to stay with it through the somewhat stormy going that has obtained recently, will hold up their deposits of stock to accommodate those who have sold short and done their best to destroy confidence in the company itself, and all the factors that have gone to inspire confidence in the stock. Shareholders will immediately start depositing their stock, and it looks as though the shorts would have to stand some calling for orrowed stock. They will either have to buy in their lines or [illegible] next few days will be somewhat slim, although, of course, the shorts can make adjustments with the certificates of deposit. The fact that London is a heavy buyer of the metal is indicating a value of nearly 200 for the present stock, naturally cannot offer much consolation for those who find themselves short, but it is a very interesting situation, and appearances are that those Canadians have scored again.

Mining Briefs

A despatch from Rouyn states that the "H" ore ody at Noranda has been opened up for 75 feet on the 500-foot level, and that this has een drilled into for an additional 325 feet, showing massive high grade sulphide ore for the combined distance—400 feet. Officials of the company and engineers estimate that this recent development will produce approximately $40,000,000 to ore reserves.

The scene of the latest find is reported to be Duparquet Township, Quebec, where Jack Cochglan is said to have discovered an important copper-gold deposit for the Duguis Syndicate. It is stated that engineers of the Bunker Hill Extension Mines are examining the showing with a possible view to acquisition. The discovery is said to run about 6 per cent. copper, with substantial gold values, over a width of about 9 feet. It is located aout 30 miles north of Noranda.

Further news on Noranda is to the effect that excellent results are being obtained at the concentrator with concentrates running 22 per cent. copper. The new reverberatory furnace, it is said, will be finished in three weeks.

The Australian Treaty

Manitoba Free Press (Lib.): (A delegation from British Columbia is urging the Government to ask Australia for further tariff concessions.) Propositions made by Canada to Australia looking to enlarged opportunities for the sale of Canadian products in the Commonwealth will be met by inquiries as to what Canada has to offer in return. Great Britain, which now has a preferred tariff position in Australia, takes the great bulk of Australia's exports, and the favorable treatment given British goods is a tangible sign of appreciation of that fact. Canada has not been very successful in giving Australia special consideration in return for partial preferences given to Canadian goods under the Australian tariff, the balance of trade is in our favor, something like three to one.

THOUSANDS OF MOTHERS USE NO OTHER MEDICINE

Baby's Own Tablets Are the Ideal Remedy for Babies and Young Children

Canadian mothers are noted for the care they give their little ones. The health of the baby is most jealously guarded and the mother is always on the lookout for a remedy which is efficient and at the same time absolutely safe. Thousands of mothers have found such a remedy in Baby's Own Tablets and many of them use nothing else for the ailments of their little ones. Among them is Mrs. Howard King, of Truro, N.S., who says: "I can strongly recommend Baby's Own Tablets to mothers of young children as I know of nothing to equal them for little ones."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Point of Call Now

Lonely Islanders of Tristan da Cunha Find Visits from Liners Increasing

London.—It would seem that a new chapter has been opened up for the lonely islanders of Tristan da Cunha by the voluntary visits of big liners in their passage across the South Atlantic on world tours.

In 1926 the Royal Mail steamer Orca called, but it was too rough to land. In 1927 the Asturias paid a visit which was a great success; the weather was ideal, a large amount of stores was landed and 60 of the islanders visited the largest ship which had ever called at the island. A few weeks later the Suveric called and landed over 40 tons of stores.

In 1928 the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of France called and the visit marked a red letter day for the women and children of Tristan for they were received as guests and feted. Quickly following this visit came another by the Harrison liner Author, which landed stores.

There is a problem now of the stimulation of Tristan da Cunha ships that call on their way from South Africa always go on to South America so that the necessity is for a ship that goes to and fro. Two schemes are being considered; one is that a suitable vessel, manned as far as possible by islanders, should be purchased and should be worked under charter when not required for trips to the island. The other is for a vessel of a Cape steamship line to make a yearly visit to the island and back. The older inhabitants cling to Tristan, but some of the younger ones might be induced to launch out and settle at the Cape. The Cape Government has undertaken an inspection of Walfish Bay with a view to such a settlement.

Tristan da Cunha has the distinction of owning a new bird hitherto unknown to naturalists. This is the flightless rail or "Atlantisia Rogersi" to give it its full title.

Feeding Trees

Why should shade trees be expected to thrive on a scanty food supply? Yet there are thousands of tree owners who do not realize that the trees under their care need special help because of exigencies of city life.

In woods and forests there is a constant yearly feeding of trees by natural processes. The process by which she feeds the trees is almost miraculous, for a forest is like a gigantic chemical laboratory. The leaves of the trees absorb a certain amount of nourishment from the air, but it is from the soil that the trees obtain their maximum amount of food, and in woodlands the falling leaves remain on the ground and are acted upon by the elements until they decay and form humus or natural plant food. Under the artificial conditions in which the trees on lawns attempt to thrive, they are deprived of this refunding of food as the lawns are usually kept mown and as a result, the soil becomes impoverished. Then, gradually, trees under such conditions are weakened, are attacked by insects and fungi, and decay sets in in this way many a stately tree has been lost. Thousands of trees in the United States are annually destroyed in this way.

How Can We Feed Them?

How are trees artificially fed? To answer this question we must consider how a tree is formed. It has a trunk and foliage, we know, and it has roots, too, but just how does it feed, we wonder? The sap, which is spread from the trunk to the farthest leaf and the roots spread approximately the same distance in the ground. At the ends of the roots are a number of fine hair-like feeding rootlets which take up the nourishment in the form of liquid salts and this is transported through the whole system by the sap in the trees.

Trees seek certain nourishment that is their food, and these can be given in the form of a commercial fertilizer which, with the action of moisture, releases just what the tree requires.

Bore 18-Inch Holes

For feeding deciduous trees, a standard commercial tree food should be purchased from a seed store, and a number of holes 18 inches deep and two feet apart should be bored under the extremities of the branch spread. Each hole should then be filled to within about four inches and the hole plugged with soil. Then, after fertilizing, the land should be watered, turning the hose on it and leaving it until the land is almost sodden—about eight to 10 hours.

Deciduous trees fed every second or third year will well repay the extra care and attention and be far healthier than those which are not provided with food.

A Test

The first test of a truly great man is his humility. Little men may not only know their littleness, but usually know that they know it, and are not only right in their main opinions but inclined to be positive about trifles in them; only they do not think much of themselves on that account and they usually have something divine in every other human being.
