OPENING OF CHESTERVILLE BOWLING GREENS

If the weather man gets on his good behavior by Tuesday next Chesterville is likely to see a large influx of bowlers to spend the day, and assist the local bowlers in the official opening of the new greens. A great deal of enthusiasm is being shown locally over the completion of the new greens. The new lighting system has been installed and almost turns night into day with hardly a shadow thrown anywhere on the grounds.

It is desired that all members wishing to take part in the tournament Tuesday be on hand to-morrow evening, as the rinks are to be chosen to represent Chesterville in the competition.

MATILDA DISTRICT MEETING

The annual meeting of the Matilda District of the Montreal Conference of the Methodist church convened in Chesterville on Tuesday and Wednesday, May 20th and 21st. All ministers on the District and one candidate for the ministry attended the ministerial session.

The full district meeting assembled on Wednesday under the chairmanship of Rev. J. W. P. MacFarlane, St. L. of Cornwall. Rev. A. Hinton of South Mountain, acted as secretary while Rev. J. O. Baron of Finch, had charge of the statistics of the district. Rev. J. B. Howe of Elma, was appointed official reporter. The gathering was extra well attended by both ministerial and lay delegates.

Reports from the various secretaries of departments were received. Givings to the general Mission Fund of the Church have reached the sum of $12,102. The educational society received $489. The toal givings for all purposes showed the substantial increase of $4353 on the district.

The report of the Secretary of Religious Education was presented. The efficiency of this department was proven by increases both in the number of Sunday School scholars coming into full church membership and an increased average attendance in the schools.

Mrs. W. S. L. Merrill of Morrisburg, District Superintendent of the Woman's Missionary Society, gave a very full and encouraging report of their work for the year. The Society contributed a grand total of $4,840 for Missions, which is an increase of $693 over the previous year. Beside this creditable success the District W.M.S. has given $696 for the erection of the Margaret Craig Memorial school for girls in Japan.

Rev. W. R. Johnston of Brinston, was elected representative on the stationing committee.

It was moved by Joseph Loudon seconded by W.S.L. Merrill and carried, that we, the lay delegates of the Matilda District in session at Chesterville, Ont., request this district meeting to memorialize Conference to request the Provincial Legislature of the prov. of Ont. to pass legislation, at its next session, that will enable the councils of rural municipalities to pass by laws compelling all vendors of cigarettes to secure a license for such sale and that the minimum fee for such privilege be fifty-dollars per year; that all such vendors be required to register all sales as to the name of purchaser. Be it therefore resolved that the foregoing resolution be adopted.

This resolution received the unanimous support of the members of the District.

BREAKS OFF HER ENGAGEMENT GIRL SLAIN BY SWEETHEART

Lindsay, Ont., May 26th.— Miss Beatrice Fee, the Toronto girl who was shot in the breast on Sunday evening by a young man, Fred McGaughey, farmer, of Omemee, to whom she was engaged, died in Lindsay Hospital at 6.40 tonight. McGaughey, aged 23, is under arrest on a charge of attempted murder but a more serious charge will probably be laid in consequence of the girl's death.

Four bullet wounds were found in Miss Fee's body all in the region of the heart. The shots were believed to have been fired as the couple were riding along in McGaughey's motorcar near Lindsay. McGaughey and the girl are said to have been engaged about two years, but it is reported that Miss Fee had recently shown a disposition to break the engagement owing to her objection to living on a farm. This attitude is believed to have preyed on the young farmer's mind. Miss Fee had lived in Toronto where she had been employed for the last 18 months and she returned to Omemee only on Saturday to visit her parents.

After refusing to give a statement to the police regarding the shooting, Miss Fee finally gave in when she realized that the hand of death was upon her. About 3.30 this afternoon Crown Attorney J. E. Anderson visited the hospital and secured a statement from the dying girl. The statement was to the effect that she had some time ago promised to give Fred McGaughey an answer to his proposal of marriage. This answer was to be given on the 24th of May. She had decided torefuse the offer of marriage and did so. Then, according to her statement, McGaughey said: "Well, in that case you will not live long enough to break the heart of any other man," and with that he whipped out a large revolver and shot her four times.

As yet McGaughey had not been acquainted with the fact that the girl has died. He has been quite melancholy and morose all day, refusing to talk even to his brother, Lawrence McGaughey, who visited him in the county jail and brought him a change of clothes. Lawrence had known that his brother carried a revolver, as he had secured it in Detroit, some time ago, but never realized that he was in a dangerous frame of mind. Fred McGaughey lived practically alone on his fifty acre farm.

Provincial Officer Storey after being informed of the shooting visited the McGaughey home, but Fred McGaughey in the interval, it is alleged had attempted to end his life with a revolver, and was only prevented from doing so by his brother, Lawrence McGaughey. Officer Storey when he arrived took the revolver and searched McGaughey. He reparts that he found a bottle of liquor and also a quantity of Paris green on the man. According to a statement made by the authorities, McGaughey was under the influence of liquor.

The latest change in the design of the sleeping car alters the entire aspect of the interior. The folding headboards that usually separate upper births have become fixed partitions and so set off the twelve sections into which a car is divided as to insure the occupants a little more privacy by day. During the day the edge of the upper partition is not flush with the end of the seat; a sliding panel pulls out to the end of the seat when the berths are made up at night.

MAKE A CAPTURE ON PRESCOTT ROAD

Austin Mills, of Prescott, was arrested after an exciting chase on the Prescott highway at 10 o'clock Saturday night by License Inspector Howard Graham on a charge of a breach of the Ontario Temperance Act. Mills will be charged for transporting liquor over a public highway in Ontario. Police say that Mills purchased several cases of beer in Hull for sale across the border. He was driving the beer to Prescott, it is alleged, when License Inspector Graham and Constable Russell of the Provincial Police saw him and gave chase. Mills threw a number of bottles of beer on the road, the police say, but he was overtaken and still more of the bottles were found in the car.

THE CHEAPER CUTS OF BEEF

The pot roast which is frequently used by the thrifty housewife in the effort to keep down her butcher bill and still provide good meals, may be made from many of the cheaper cuts, such as the chuck, of the beef carcass. After being wiped with a damp cloth it is placed in a covered bake pan or casserole, with two cups or more of hot water. It should be covered tightly and baked in a moderate oven or on top of the stove, keeping the heat just below the boiling point. Phamphlet No. 43 of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, obtainable from the Publication Branch, shows how the meat bill may be reduced by utilizing the cheaper cuts of beef. One half hour's time for each pound of meat in the roast is recommended. About an hour and a quarter before serving, pared potatoes and sliced carrots and onions may be added. When ready to serve, the roast should be removed to a hot platter and the gravy thickened and seasoned. If the meat is very fat, it is advisable to remove the fat from the top of the gravy before thickening. The pamphlet contains many other receipts for utilizing the cheaper cuts of beef.

GOOD COWS DEMANDED

Good grade dairy cows are in large demand. Extra choice springing cows of good type and size and with cow testing association records of from 300 to 400 pounds of fat in a year, are selling from $125 to $250 apiece. Scrub cows are selling from $25 to $40 apiece. The farmer who raises good cows not only receives more money in the selling of his product but has a good market when he desires to dispose of a few surplus animals. It costs but little more to raise a cow that will sell for $150 to $200 than one which will bring but $40.

We may add that buyers are more concerned about the health of cows than they have been in the past. They are seeking cows from accredited areas, which means areas containing less than one half of one per cent of tuberculous animals. Not only do buyers require cattle to come from clean herds, but they are asking for a 60 and 90 retest guarantee. All of this means the dairy farmer of the future must be more efficient than he has been in the past if he is to make a success in dairying. There s a general understanding among the thinging dairy farmers that it does not pay to keep a cow unless she canproduce at least 250 lbs. fat in a year and that she must be free from tuberculosis.

We must produce capable and clean cows. That is the kind of cow the farmer needs who keeps her for milk production and it is the kind most purchasers are trying to buy.

HE SAW THE POINT

An editor once needed $100; he looked over his subscription list, and he noted some subscribers were in arrears for two years, a few three years, and one or two five years, in all amounting to five hundred dollars. He sent out some duns and one man received the missive with indignation. He went to raise a row with the editor for dunning him. The editor showed him some duns he had received himself, one for paper, one for type, one for ink, and several others. "Now," said the patient editor, "I didn't get mad when they came. I knew I owed for them, and I relied on you and others who owed me to pay for them. You see we all depend on somebody." The mad subscriber saw the force of the argument and said he was sorry he had let the bill run solong. He paid.

DEATH OF MISS NELLIE LOZOTT

Cornwall Standard—The announcement of the death of Miss Nellie Lozott, which occurred at the Hotel Dieu Hospital here on Wednesday, May 14th, came as a great shock to that young lady's many friends in town. Miss Lozott, who was born in Crysler, was a daughter of the late John Lozott and Mrs. Lozott, and was in the thirty-first year of her age. She came to Cornwall about ten years ago and for a long time was employed in the dining room of the King George Hotel, being an expert waitress and for some time previous to her retirement occupied the position of chief in the dining room. For the past year and a half she occupied the position of clerk in the office of the Miller Furniture Shoppe. She had not been in good health for a few months, but continued in her position up within a week and a half of her death, entering the hospital nine days before her demise. Miss Lozott was a pleasing young lady, very popular with all who knew her, and her early death is regretted by a wide circle of friends. She is survived by her mother; one sister, Mrs. Leonard Harper, Ogdensburg, N. Y.; two brothers, James of Crysler; and Charles of Cornwall; three half brothers, Thomas of Cornwall; William, of Morewood; and Joseph of Crysler; and two half sisters, Mrs. Gray Smirl, of Morewood; and Mrs. Fred Coyne, of Dauphin, Man.

The funeral took place on Friday from the residence of Mr. Thomas Lozott, Smith Avenue, Beaconsfield, to the O. & N. Y. depot and was attended by many local friends. The remains were taken to the old home of deceased at Crysler for interment, the Requiem Mass being celebrated in the R. C. Church by Rev. Father Leahy. There was a very large attendance of residents of the village. The pall-bearers were Messrs. Thos., Charles, Joseph, William and James Lozott, and Mr. Napoleon Champagne, of Crysler, cousin of deceased. Those who accompanied the remains from Cornwall were deceased's mother; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lozott, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lozott, Mrs. Leonard Harper, and Miss Margaret Lemoyre, a friend of deceased.

Beautiful floral offerings were placed on the casket, including a pillow, from the family, wreathe from Miller Furniture Shoppe; spray, Mr. Jacob Miller; cut flowers, Miss Agnes O'Hare, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kingston, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hartle, Mr. Jack Girard, Miss Margaret Lemoyre, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Ault.

SUFFERS NO MORE WITH HEADACHES

"Fruit-a-tives" freed her from years of pain

The Fruit Treatment seems to be the only way of completely ridding the system of the cause of Headaches.

Miss Annie Ward, of 112 Hazen St., St. John, N.B., says: "I was a great sufferer for many years from Nervous Headaches and Constipation. I tried everything, but nothing seemed to help me until I tried "Fruit-a-tives".

After taking several boxes, I was completely relieved and have been well ever since".

Practically all Headaches come from poisoned blood—that is, the blood is laden with impurities which should be carried from the body by the kidneys and bowels.

"Fruit-a-tives"—made from the juices of oranges, apples, figs and prunes—regulate the vital organs of the body—insure a pure blood supply—and completely relieve Headaches.

PITY TWAS NOT DONE

A group of fly Americans sitting at a table in a restaurant in Ottawa were volubly, also vividly, speaking in terms of deprecation and derision of all things Canadian—its climate, its people, its scenery, its food, A clergyman with a distinctly Irish intonation, and of the Presbyterian faith, a noted preacher of the Capital, sat near enough to hear the talk. The loud laughter impregnating the comments arrested his ear. He grew warmer and warmer and finally reached the boiling point. Leaving his dessert he strode quickly across and towered above the roysterers. His tongue let loose its trigger: " If you don't stop such blatant nonsense I' ll throw you all out of the window." There was a gurgle like a death rattle among the hitherto reckless shouters of discord and silence came that healed the wound of sound.—Carleton Place C. C.

CALLED HIM A "DEADHEAD."

Harry Woods, editor of the Wellington, Kansas, news, went to a church supper some time ago to which he had been given a "free" ticket. As he neared the portals he heard one good sister whisper to another, "Here comes one of those deadheads." Reflectively he ate his chicken wing and returned to his office and got out his trusty pencil. He found that he had given that particular supper just $3.45 worth of free advertising and in return therefor had received one chicken wing, and the name "deadhead." Since that day he has collected cash for all church suppers, and all pay-functions , has never accepted a free ticket to anything, and he also gets the choice part of the chicken, which he purchases for himself with the cash paid for advertising which he used to give gratuitously.

FEAR BEER VOTE MORE THAN TEST ON HARD LIQUOR

In order to prepare for a possible plebiscite on the Ontario Temperance Act, the Ontario Grand Lodge of the Order of Good Templars sat from Saturday morning right through until well after midnight on Sunday morning in Toronto.

Although the general view expressed was that the result of the vote would be vindication of the Ontario Temperance Act it was felt that the issue might be clouded by the form in which it was put before the electors. It was considered that the most dangerous amendment to the O.T.A. which might be subjected to a vote was the proposal for beer, or beer and wine, sale under regulation. This, it was believed, would probably be a harder question to fight than a system of straight government control, as in the latter event it would be an out-and-out battle on the liquor question. In regard to beer and light wine proposals speakers said it would be necessary to impress upon the public of the Province that they were no less harmful that spirituous liquor, such as whiskey and gin.

HAS DEATH RAY FOR THE NEXT WAR

T, F. Wall, lecturer in electrical research in Sheffield University claims to have discouvered a "death ray". He has applied for a patent covering "means of transmitting electrical energy in any direction without the use of any intermediate transmission wires." Dr. Wall expressed the belief that his invention will be capable of destroying life, stopping airplanes in flight, and bringing motor cars to a standstill, although he has not made tests on a large scale as yet.

Not His Party

Mr. Mulligan was lying upon his death-bed. Mrs. Mulligan was seated at his side, , giving whatsmall consolation she could offer in the circumstances.

"Sure, Mike," said she, "is there innything I cud do fer yez before yuh lav us?"

"Margaret, me darlint," said he, "I think I smell the odor of roastin' pork. I belave I cud eat a bit of it."

"I'm sorry, Mike," said she, "but I can't cut into that pork roast. We're savin' it for the wake."

Every motoring party likes to choose a naturally beautiful spot for the roadside picnic, but, if the place is littered with broken bottles, tin cans, newspapers and a discarded tire or two, the beauty is spoiled. The first rule for picnic parties is to leave the grounds, not as they found them, but as they would like to find them.

GREAT ONWARD

Standard Bred Stallion

Race Record 2.11¼

Son of Peter the Great, the Greatest Sire in the World

DESCRIPTION

GREAT ONWARD, 2:11¼ is a golden chestnut, stands 16 hands, weighs 1200 lbs., his race record 2:11¼. Has been a mile on mile track in 2:05¼, half-mile track 2:08 and has stepped a half-mile in one minute, and only for an accident to one of his front legs (from which he is altogether recovered) he would have been close to a 2 minute pacer.

GREAT ONWARD as a green pacer cost Mr. A. D. Chaplain of Chatham, $3,000 and was considered the greatest green pacer in Canada at that time. His sire, Peter the Great, at 21 years of age sold for $50,000.00 and stood for a service fee of $1,000.00 until his death.

GREAT ONWARD AS A RACE HORSE

Great Onward started out the season of 1914, a green pacer, winning at Port Huron in 2:12½ 2:11¼ 2:11¼, Saginaw, Mich., in 2:11¼ 2:13¼ 2:12¼, St. Thomas in 2:15¼ 2:15¼ 2.15¼. Had it not been for a slight accident to one of his fore legs, from which he has altogether recovered, Great Onward would have a mark better than 2:04. He is the product of the union of the blood of two great families. Through his sire he traces to Pilot Medium, son of Happy Medium, son of the Great Hambletonian 10; through his dam Mary Onward by Onward, he traces to the Great George Wilkes. The second dam of Great Onward 2:11¼ was Mary Marshall 2:12½, a trotter which was the world's record for her at that time for a three year old in a race, she being campaigned down the Grand Circuit. She became the dam of Nathan Strauss 2:03½ and May Marshall 2:08½.

The fastest recorded Peter the Great Stallion standing for service in Ontario. His sire, Peter the Great, 2:07¼, known as the wonder sire, is in a class by himself as no other stallion near approaches him as a producer of extreme speed. His family are breeding on as his son Azoff 2:14¼ at 2 years, is the sire of Peter Manning 1.56¾, trotting the world's record trotter.

Great Onward himself will become a great sire if given an opportunity. A couple of his colts in Western Ontario better than 2:10. This horse stands in a class by himself in this country, both in regards to breeding and speed. His record was taken on half--mile track in a race.

Will make the season of 1924 from May 1st, until July 13th, at James McAvoy's stable, Chesterville, Ont., at a service fee of $12.00. $2.00 at time of service and $10.00 if mare prove in foal. Mares tried and not returned will be held for the season. Parties disposing of mares will be held for the season charge.

All mares at owner's risk.

SILAS BARKLEY PASSES AT AGE OF 86 YEARS

Vassar Mich. News—Silas Barkley, an old and respected resident of Tuscola county, passed away at his farm home, 4½ miles south of Vassar on Thursday, April 17, 1924, at the age of 86 years, six months and 15 days.

He was born at Dunbar in Dundas, Ontario, October 2, 1837 and was married to Sarah E. Beckstead, also of Dundas. To this union were born ten children, four of whom have passed on before him, six children surviving, Labon of Morrisburg, Ont., Andrew of Millington, Noah of Vassar, Mrs. George Kingsbury and Bernard at home, two sisters and one brother, Aaron Barkley, Mrs. Samuel Allison and Miss Catharine Barkley, all of Dundas.

Mr. Barkley came to Michigan 28 years ago and settled on the farm where he died. He was a kind and loving father.

The funeral was held from his late home on Saturday at 2 o'clock, Rev. E. O. Sutherland in charge. Interment was in Riverside cemetery.

FIND TOY EXPRESS WAGON HAS NO RIGHTS ON ROAD

A jury before Mr. Justice Rose in the Civil Assize Court at Toronto Monday afternoon dismissed the suit for $5,000 damages brought against Henry Sibley by Fred Bakewell for injuries sustained by the latter's son, Norman, aged 12, who was injured by the motor car of the defendant. The plaintiff claimed that when his son was crossing the intersection of Glenholme and O'Leary Avenues, on November 3 last, with a hand express wagon, he was run down by the motor car of the defendant and seriously injured. The defendant, on the other hand, held that the accident had been due to the boy with the toy express failing to take proper care, such as looking out for approaching traffic, and also held that it was contrary to law for him to have been on the roadway with a hand express cart.

UNION BATTLE OFF NOW UNTIL JUNE 5

The battle over the Church Union Bill in the Commons' private bills committee was yesterday morning postponed till Thursday of next week. The proceedings lasted only a few minutes.

As soon as the committee was called to order, Chairman McGiverin asked G. W. Mason, K. C., counsel for the bill, what had been the result of the conference between the two sides over the amendments regarding non-concurring members which were submitted yesterday.

"There are several crucial points," replied Mr. Mason, "on which we are unable to agree. There are several points on which we agree in principle, but for lack of time could not arrive at the necessary 'phraseology."

THE OLD GARDENER SAYS:

If you can grow only one kind of beet in your garden, by all means choose Detroit Dark Red. This is the best beet for the amatelr which has ever been found. It is good for early use, and yet keeps well when stored for winter. It will thrive in almost all soils and climates, matures in from 65 to 70 days, is round, anl has a deep red color. Moreover, there is no beet which makes a better growth of top for greens. Beets which are to be used for canning or for late summer should be planted now. Small beets put up in cans are really better for winter use than large beets that have been stored in the cellar.

RESTORED TO HER CHILDREN AFTER FOURTEEN YEARS

Living only a few miles away but unseen and unheard of for fourteen years, three children of Mrs. Samuel Davis of Dummer Township, have been restorel to her.

While very young, Ernest, Joe and Dorothy were placed in an institution, and a few years ago went to work on a farm near Millbrook. This Spring Ernest heard of his mother and communicated with her, with the result that the family is reunited and a home has been secured by the children to which their mother has moved with her remaining three sons.

THE FOUNDATION OF THRIFT

There are various foundations of thrift, and it is well that there are, for there are none too many, and we are wise to cultivate and cherish every one of them. There are, for example, accounts, the habit of knowing exactly where you stand even to the last penny; and even if you do not follow the last peuny, the last dollar is only too likely to escape your grasp. There is foresight, system planning your needs and your means and your necessary and your desirable expenditure, adjusting the facilities of life to its possibilities. And intelligent thrift is absolutely dependent upon method of this kind.

But perhaps the surest foundation of thrift is to have few wants. The trouble with our complicated modern civilized life is that with our abundance of creature comforts we have built up around our souls an enormous scaffolding of habit, so that innumerable little things are indispensable to us, without our even having a definite appreciation of what they are—till we loose them. The immigrant who comes from the lowest poverty of Europe and throws himself into the struggle here has an immense advantage in being trained to want so little. He can save and get ahead if he has industry and intelligence because he is not hampered by costly little requirements of cleanliness and decency.

To be sure, wants are in a sense the charm of life. Our little desires for all sorts of pretty pleasant things are like gay blossoms strewn over the barren surface of necessity. We pluck one here, reach for another there and forget the daily iteration of common duties in the grace of pursuit. The bare restraint, the grim stoicism, of early New England ideal had something arid about it, something wearily negative. It was a Puritan philosopher who said, "The ideal of life is to be able to have everything you want and to want nothing.." No doubt that leads to thrift, but it also leads to a terrible emptiness.

The true secret is to have your wants thoroughly under your command; to recognize the attraction of all lovely and delightful things, but to gauge their proportion to one another and to your own means and needs; to admit that you want, but that at some times and in some circumstances you cannot have and to act rigidly on that admission. There is a thrift in pleasure as well as in money, and only on that basis can you long enjoy both, not allowing the greedy satisfaction of the present to rob you of the long security and comfort of the years to come.

THE DOG AS A CARRIER OF DISEASE

Youth's Companion—It is an unwelcome thought to many who love their pets, whether cats or dogs, that the animals may on occasion be a source of great danger to the persons who dwell in the same house with them. Nevertheless it is a fact and must be faced in the interest of the health both of children and of adults. Children are in a greater danger, for they not only roll on the floor with the dog and caress him but the dog may transmit.

Tuberculosis is not an uncommon disease in dogs; they acquire it either from persons or from other dogs. Hydrophobia is the most dangerous and fatal of all canine disorders, but fortunately it is rare. A victim of the disease, running amuck and biting a number of animals as well as men, may start an epidemic. It is a commendable precaution to have your own dogs vaccinated against rabies. Such forethought may save not only the dogs life but human life as well. Ringworm is probably transmissible from the child to the dog, and vice versa, though true mange is said not to be. However, when a dog shows mangy patches in his skin he should be kept away from the family and should be treated for the eruption.

Dogs are susceptible to tapeworm; and some of the worms the dog harbors may grow in the human intestine. One of them is small, but makes up in numbers what it lacks in size. Fleas take up the eggs of this worm and so may carry them to members of the family. The bladder worm is the most dangerous of the parasites that the dog may transfer to man. It is the larva of a species of tapeworm not uncommon in the dog, and, though it is small, it often occurs in great numbers. The symptoms are obscure, since the dog tolerates even large numbers of the worm. The most common system is an itching under the tail, which causes the dog to drag himself across the floor in a sitting posture. The larvae may reach the child when the dog licks the childs hands or, worse, his face and lips. These larvae form cysts in the organs of the host as an intermediate stage of their existence, and it is the cysts that constitute the danger to man. It is a good plan to have a veterinarian examine every pet dog at regular intervals. Or, if no veterinarian is to be had, it will do no harm to give the animal a dose of worm medicine from time to time.

Why They Smiled

Stumps was shaving himself, when he made a slight cut on the end of his nose, He called to his wife for sticking plaster, and was told to look in her sewing basket. At the office everyone who entered his sanctum smiled. Considerably annoyed, he asked his partner if there was anything wrong with his appearance.

"I should say there is," was the reply. "What's on your nose?"

"Sticking plaster."

"No! It is the label from a spool of cotton, and it says, 'Warranted 300 yards.' "

Fair-minded To The End

"So you propose to take my daughter from me without any warning?"

Nervous Young Man—"Not at all. If there is anything concerning her you want to warn me about, I'm willing to listen."

ANNUAL AGRICULTURAL STATISTICS OF CANADA, 1924

During the course of next month the Dominion and Provincial Governments of Canada will proceed with their joint annual enumeration of the areas sown to field crops and of the numbers of farm live stock.

In all the provinces the returns will be collected through the rural schools, except in Prince Edward Island and British Columbia, where they will be sent through the mails.

The present system has now been annually in force throughout Canada since 1918, and at an Interprovincial Conference on Agricultural Statistics, held in Ottawa on January 29-31, 1924, the existing plans were endorsed for continuance during the present year and until such time as it may prove possible to evolve better.

At the Conference referred to, certain improvements were effected in the cardboard schedule issued for farmers to fill up, and on this card the Dominion and Provincial Governments make an earnest appeal to all farmers to give the information required, urging the following seven specific reasons why they shoul do so: (1) The statistics are collected and published primarily in the farmer's own interest; (2) They are his protection aganst misleading reports by speculators interested in controlling or manipulating prices; (3) They provide information which determine prices, and so ensure fair play all round; (4) they enable transportation companies to judge of the volume of the crop and to make adequate and timely arrangements for its movement; (5) Bankers require accurate information for the extension of credit facilities; (6) Manufacturers, wholesale and retail merchants and others require knowledge of crop conditions for the establishment of profitable local enterprises which react favourably upon the farming industry; (7) No one can prevent the issue of crop estimates; but farmers can help to ensure the accuracy of the government estimates by returning the schedule required. The larger the number of returns, the greater will be the value of the estimates based thereon. It is further pointed out that the completed schedules will be treated as absolutely confidential, and no individual returns will be divulged. The facts supplied will not be used in any way for taxation purposes or for the imposition of any other liability.

In most branches of national effort, the necessity for accurate statistics is being more and more realized. When it is considered that Canada is now one of the world's leading wheat-growing and exporting countries, and that the prices received by wheat growers are determined by world conditions of supply and demand, farmers too should realize that upon the timely publication of accurate information depends largely the welfare of the great agricultural industry as a whole and consequently that of each individual concerned init.

If any farmer in this district should not receive the cardboard schedule through the rural school or otherwise by the middle of June, immediate application for it should be made either to the Public School teacher of the School District in which he resides, the provincial Department of Agriculture at the capital of his province, or the Dominion Statistician at Ottawa.

IT MIGHT BE WORSE

If you are blessed with good health surrounded by friends, able to work and enjoying the sunshine, flowers, outings and other opportunities, you have no kick coming. If you, with all the modern advantages and sixteen hours out of every twenty-four for freedom and rest, think you are having a hard lot in life, what of the blind and lame, and halt, the sick and dying tossing on beds of pain? In this life we all should have just enough pain to cause us to appreciate pleasure. We should have just enough trouble to make us thankful that we are not hopelessly crippled or without the light of day. Trouble is a medicine that our Physician prescribes, and sometimes it takes a big dose to bring us to a full understanding that there are no crown-wearers who have not been cross-bearers.

One More Than Usual

Here and There

Shipments of grain from Vancouver for the 1923-24 season have now passed the 41,000,000 bushel mark. Officials estimate that the 50,000,000 bushel mark set for the season will be surpassed in the near future.

Reports from England state that it has been universally conceded that Canada's pavilion was in the best condition when the King opened the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley on April 23rd. "It was the Canadian building," the reports said, "spick and span and complete to the last nail that led all others in the race to the finish in time for to-day's official opening."

Over 3,000 settlers left Liverpool for Canada on April 24th. Thirteen hundred of these sailed on the Canadian Pacific liner "Montcalm," including a party of 200 skilled workers from Manchester, 38 belonging to engineering trades, 40 to building trades and 42 farm hands. Eighty skilled workers from Leeds and a party of engineers from Barrow-in-Furness were also on board.

A total of 40,000,000 salmon trout eggs has been collected during the last season by the Department of Marine and Fisheries in Lake Huron, Georgian Bay and Lake Superior. The total number obtained compares favorably with the average collections of recent years and is sufficient to fill all the hatcheries on the Great Lakes engaged in the propagation of salmon trout.

Graphic and interesting educational motion pictures will bring Alberta's various resources to the eyes of those who attend the British Empire Exhibition this year. In addition to pictures illustrating the life of Alberta's citizens on the farms, on the ranches and in the mining districts, charts will be used to bring out interesting compilations of statistics illustrative of the province's agricultural and industrial output.

Carrying an invitation to the President of the United States to attend the celebrations of the 140th anniversary of the settlement of Upper Canada by the United Empire Loyalists, which will be held in June, Miss G. Lazier, herself a descendant of the Loyalists, left Belleville recently on horseback to ride to Washington alone, a distance of 600 miles. Elaborate arrangements for the celebrations are being made and it is expected that thousands of visitors will attend.

An attractive booklet entitled, "A Week in Quebec in the Spring," by Betty Thornley, internationally known writer associated with "Vogue" and other magazines, has just been added to the series of artistic pamphlets published by the Canadian Pacific Railway. It describes the Ancient Capital and its environs, is illustrated by many striking photographs and bound in a cover which reproduces in natural colors the pattern of cloth called catalogne, woven by Quebec habitant women.

That the Indian village of Hochelaga, which stood on the site of the present city of Montreal, was a place of about fifty wooden houses having a population of some 4,000 souls when Jacques Cartier sailed up the St. Lawrence, was the assertion made by Dr. W. D. Lighthall before the Antiquarian and Numismatic Society of Montreal recently. Dr. Lighthall was able to give the boundaries of the village and described it as resembling the home of Cedric the Saxon, in "Ivanhoe."

Apropos of the recent "Save the Forest Week," E. W. Beatty, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, stated: "A week's concentration on saving the forests of Canada is well worth while—much better to make it a 'Forest Saving Year' and, if the forest resources of this country are to be conserved to adequately avail the greater Canada of a few years hence it must be a 'Forest Saving Generation.' Forest wastage is to-day tragically too great and we Canadians must pay and are paying for the loss."

MRS. NELLIE McCLUNG ON GOVERNMENT SALE IN B.C.

Mrs. McClung, well known in Ontario as a lecturer and authoress, nas been living in British Columbia, and has this to say of its much vaunted Government Sale law:—

"The liquor interests, even with all their money, can never win a victory over the forces of intelligence and morality, if only the people know the truth about the vague thing called Government Control.

"Here in B.C. there is no 'Control' about it. The Government acts as the distributors for the brewers and distillers. As one of the Police Commissioners of this city (Victoria) puts it—'The Governments policy is to alcoholize the people for profit. It is a policy of saturation, rather than control.' "

"In Government reports the business is called 'good,' when the sales are large. One member of the Liquor Control Board is advocating the dotting of this City with Liquor Stores, kept open at night. He says:—'Now that we are in the booze business, we might as well get in good and plenty; for that is the only way to compete with the bootlegger."

"Bootleggers under Government Control! ! Yes, indeed. According to the B. C. press, this is 'the Bootlegger's Paradise.' Hundreds of places in Vancouver sell liquor, openly and flagrantly, in defiance of the law."

"I have no hesitation in saying that Government Control, as seen here, is worse than the old bar system. Dozens of people in Vancouver have told me they would welcome the return of the bar, in preference to what they have: and they give as reasons:

(1)—"The women would not frequent the bars as they do the Government Liquor Stores.

(2)—"It would be easy to get convictions against the men who violate the law under a private sale system; for the government would have no reason for sheltering them.

(3)—"There would be more arrests for drunkenness. No business wants to penalize its own customers. The Government being the liquor seller, and the town constable. finds the dual capacity confusing.

"In brief—this new liquor system has not lowered the taxes. Vancouver citizens spend $8.00 on liquor in order to get $1.00 back.

"It has not saved the homes. I hear weird and terrible tales of home drinking.

"It has not decreased the Drug evil."

"Hand in hand with violations of the Drink Act, go violations of the Narcotic Drug Act—until it does look as though unless our people can be aroused to the danger, the Anglo-Saxon race is doomed."

Let every Ontario woman spread the information she gathers, amongst her friends. There are no neutrals in this war. One must be for, or against.

THE WHOOP-LA MULES

The summer when my brother Grant and I went into the business of scientific collecting we bought a pair of small desert mules from an old prospector named Jim Elder. According to the repeated assertions of Elder both the animals were "as gentle as dogs." Finally, however, as he was carefully putting the purchase money into his pocket he did remember to mention: "But they're Mexican broke, boys, so of course they're kind of whoop-la on the start. Jack, he's as nervous as a horse, and that mak-John a little nervous too. You'll have to watch them of a cold morning."

Grant and I found that we certainly did have to "watch them" on cold mornings—and also on hot mornings. In fact it turned out that the old prospector had expressed himself conservatively about the matutinal nervousness of Jack and John. By saying that they were "kind of whoop-la on the start" he meant that they were both dead set on running madly for the first half mile. When they had done that they would calm down and be demure enough for the rest of the day.

The old prospector was doubtless correct when he attributed their behavior to the fact that they had been "Mexican broke"— that is, lassoed when they were young and wild, harnessed somehow or other, hitched to a wagon and allowed to stampede across a mesa where there was plenty of room for them to run. The embarrassing part for Grant and me was that the excitable little rascals were bound to begin the race the moment we began to hitch them to the wagon. Although they were exceptionally small, they were wiery and spirited; it was pretty hard to hold them and at the same time fasten the traces while they were rearing and plunging. If we held them back too long, Jack the Firebrand, as we called him, would throw himself flat on the ground. We had a good many lively fracases with Jack and John that summer. On one occasion when Grant and I were trying to get a family of campers out of a burning canon the antics of Jack the Firebrand and his faithful follower John proved to be anything but a laughing matter.

At the time we were collecting mammals in a heavily-timbered canon high up in the San Jacinto Mountains. Camped near us was an old family friend, a shoe dealer from Los Angeles named Chandle, who was enjoying a summer outing with his wife and child. Early one morning when we had been there about a week we discovered that a forest fire had broken out just over the ridge, and we decided at once that we must move quickly to a large wet meadow five miles distant. Chandle immediately set out after his horse, which had broken loose during the night, and Grant and I started in the opposite direction to bring in our string traps.

An hour or so later Grant and I, returning to camp at almost the same time, found Mrs. Chandle greatly perturbed because her husband had not yet returned. Stopping only to say what we could to reassure her, we set off on a run in the direction that Chandle had taken. Now that it was too late, we blamed ourselves heartily for allowing our friend to go after his horse alone, for we knew that he was not an adept at mountaineering.

We had no trouble in picking up Chandle's trail. Incidentally we found where his horse had dragged its picket rope straight down the road that led out of the mountains. An hour later after many windings we traced Chandle up a deep, heavily-timbered gorge a mile and a half from camp. Presently Grant halted and said:

"He's lost, that's sure. Here is where he worried and began to run. He's heading straight for the fire, but he couldn't see the smoke on account of the timber, so of course he didn't know it. I'll have to keep going and overtake him if I can. You hurry back to camp before that poor little wife of his worries herself into distraction. Fire the shotgun every ten minutes and get everything ready so we can pull out in a hurry."

I dreaded going back to camp with such a burden of dismal tidings, but there was no way out ofit. So I returned and with as great a show of hopefulness as I could muster told Mrs. Chandle what the situation was. She bore up with more fortitude than I had expected.

The smoke indicated that the fire was now spreading rapidly in our direction, and I began to make ready for a race with the flames. First I harnessed Jack and John. As usual Jack the Firebrand began to champ his bit the moment the bridle was on. Soon a fiery, determined light appeared in his eyes. I knew that he was waiting for the fray, and I tied him to a stout tree, hoping that he would not have to wait long.

Once the mules were harnessed I fired the shotgun; then I stripped our waggon of its load and, soaking the Chandles' tent and all our bedding in the spring, put them back on the wagon. Then I put a wet blanket on Jack and another on John, but apparently neither of the uncivilized rascals had ever before worn a blanket of any kind, much less one that was wet and dripping. They continued to squat and cringe dramatically all the time I was making their covering fast to the harness. While I was finishing that work the fire topped the ridge about a mile above our camp. Fortunately, it would have to burn down hill and against the wind to reach us; still I judged that our canon would burn out within an hour.

At that moment I saw that Mrs. Chandle was almost beside herself with anxiety; so to make it appear that I fully expected to escape from the canon and also to give her something with which to occupy her mind I asked her to put up a good substantial luncheon for the five of us. Then in the intervals of signaling with the shotgun I carried our camp dunnage to a near-by washout, where I covered it with dirt and turf as a protection from fire.

The firing of the shotgun was an event of great interest to little Joe, Chandle's four-year-old boy. After every shot he would ask eagerly whether that was for father and whether father would hear it and come. Each time I could see that it was very hard for the mother to control herself, but she always answerel steadily, "Yes, Joe, father will hear and come."

Half an hour passed. I had buried all of the camp equipage except a few articles that were too bulky, and there was nothing left to do except fire the shotgun and time the interminable waits between.

Thus far I had been encouraged because the flames had not progressed so fast as I had expected, but now a shifting of the wind suddenly sent a hot breath from the fire down the canon. I knew then that it would be only a short time—there was no telling how soon—before the timber round us would be a mass of flames. Some time before I had tried to persuade Mrs. Chandle to take little Joe and start on down the road, and now I bitterly regretted that I had not insisted. Needless to say, I would have given anything for a pair of mules that I could have hitched up alone.

The next few moments were the most rackingly anxious time of my life. I believe I did nothing except fire the shotgun as fast as I could load. At any rate I found it so hot in my hands that I could hardly hold it. And then suddenly from the timbered slope above us came a faint shout from Grant. I was so glad that I felt light enough to fly; I flung aside the shotgun and ran to meet my brother.

At first I thought that Grant was alone, but as his outline showed more plainly through the smoke I saw that he was supporting Chandle. I immediately turned and shouted the glad news to Mrs. Chandle, who was following distractedly with little Joe.

Grant was panting so that he could hardly talk, but as I joined him he managed to gasp out: "Fire headed him back this way; then he heard the shotgun. He came toward camp then, but got pocketed in the brush. Lucky I found him.

Grant was so nearly exhausted that he had to lie flat on the ground for a while after he reached camp. Chandle was limp; it was all his wife and I could do to hoist him into the bed of the wagon. As soon as I could get Mrs. Chandle and Joe aboard I had them lie down beside Mr. Chandle, and then I covered them all with the wet tent. Then I ran for the mules.

First I got John and tied him to the same tree with Jack. Thereupon Jack immediately began to paw the ground, and John of course immediately did the same. After coupling them together with the lines I ran to the wagon, took the neck yoke off the end of the pole, hastened back with it and fastened the straps to the collars of my champing steeds. Then Grant came, and the fracas began.

I had never seen Jack and John so much excited. The long wait, the firing of the shotgun, the wet blankets on their backs and the roaring and heat from the rapidly-approaching fire combined to make them wildly eager for their half mile run.

Grant's first move was to cut the mules loose with a couple of hasty slashes of his sharp knife. Then, taking each a mule by the bit, we led them to the wagon and made John step over the pole. Grant immediately raised the end of the pole, but before he could insert it in the ring of the neck yoke Jack reared on his hind legs and lunged forward. John instantly lunged also, and in spite of our strenuous efforts they dragged us thirty feet before we could check them. When we turned round we had a hard time making them face the heat and the smoke of the approaching flames.

At that moment Chandle's pallid face appeared from behind the wagon seat. "You boys want any help?" he asked anxiously.

"Lots of it!" said Grant desperately. "You get up in the seat and hold the lines; then my brother can hitch the traces while I hold their heads. First, though, we've got to take those blankets off—that must be what's making them so crazy."

It took us only an instant to strip off the wet blankets, but, if removing them had any soothing effect on Jack and John, I did not notice it. When we had driven them to the wagon and again made John step over the pole both mules simultan-shot forward. They nearly dragged Chandle out over the dashboard before he could let go the lines, and they pulled Grant and me along over the ground for nearly a hundred feet. When they were excited Jack and John had mouths like iron.

For a few moments Grant and I stood staring blankly into each other's face. Meanwhile Jack and John were pawing and champing like a pair of furies, and the fire, drawing dangerously close, was filling the canon with its crackling roar.

Suddenly Grant's eye lighted. "I know," he sail. "Hobble them!"

While I held both mules by the bits Grant hastily took off the remnant of the tie rope that was dangling from Jack's neck. Using a hitch employed by Mexicans when hobbling animals with a thong, he fastened the firebrand's" forefeet close together. That was a difficult task with an animal so possessed with the determination to bolt, but Grant finished it in an astonishing short time. Tying John's forelegs was comparatively easy.

The moment Grant had made the last knot fast he rose and, running back to the wagon picked up the pole. "Throw off the brake!" he called to Chandle. "I'm going to roll the wagon down to the mules."

There was a great grade, and Grant came on a trot. In a few moments he had guided the pole between the mules and was fitting the end of it into the ring of the neck yoke.

"Let me hold them!" cried Grant. "You hand the lines to Chandle; then hitch the traces."

The hobbles evidently had a subduing or a confusing effect on John, for he now stood stock still. So it was with Jack too until he felt the first trace being hitched. That had always been the signal for Jack to go, and instantly now with all his accustomed fiery ardor he started on his half mile run. Thanks to the hobbles, when he lunged forward he tripped and fell to his knees. Immediately Grant seized him by the ears and forced his head down to the ground.

Long practice had taught me to fasten those traces quickly under any ordinary difficulties, and I made good time now in spite of the heat and smoke and Jack's unusual position. As I made the last trace fast Grant yelled:

"Come on wth your jacknife! Come on! Hurry!"

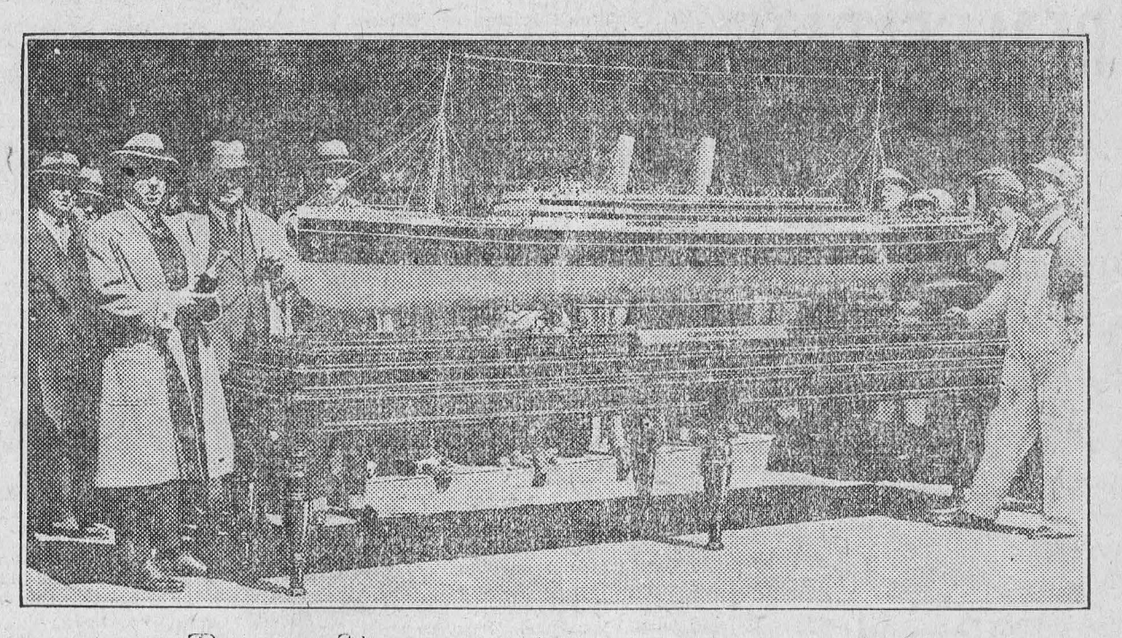
The canon was like a kiln, and the fire roared so near us that I almost despaired ofescaping.

"Turn them loose when Jack gets up!" Grant shouted to Chandle. "Don't worry about us; we'll catch on behind."

A moment later Grant was yelling to me, "Cut away!" Then with simultaneous slashes of our sharp knives we set the mules free. As Grant and I made our rush for the end gate of the wagon Jack scrambled to his feet and was off like a shot. John, who was never first and yet never far behind, made an expeditious flying start also.

The wagon was lurching violently as Grant and I climbed in over the end. I expected that we should be wrecked every moment until Grant had his foot on the brakes and the lines in his hands. Then with both mules running like jack rabbits and Grant making his blacksnake whip pop like a pistol in the space between them, I began to feel safer, for I had unlimited faith in the mules ability to run and in Grant's ability to drive them.

Fortunately, our road led down a sparsely-timbered flat carpeted with pine needles. At first we drew rapidly away from the fire, but later when the road turned uphill the flames pressed us so close that for a time it seemed doubtful whether we could escape from the canon. However, in less than an hour from the time of their flying start a pair of very demure little mules drew our wagon out into a broad, wet meadow where no forest fire could follow.



Twenty Thousand Dollar Baby Christened.

THERE was a christening at the Mount Royal Hotel, Montreal, recently, and, quite apropos, it was of the Montroyal. The Canadian Pacific, having on hand a very fine model of their Atlantic steamer, the Empress of Britain, placed it in drydock in Montreal about the same time that the Empress herself went into dock in the Old Country for overhauling and renaming. Upon being overhauled, the model was sent to the Mount Royal Hotel where it will remain on exhibition and where Mr. Vernon G. Cardy, resident manager of the hotel, "cracked" a bottle of champagne over the bow. thus christening the Montroyal as she moved to her new berth.

The model of the Montroyal is complete in every particular and is indeed such an excellent replica on a small scale of the former Empress that it has been insured for $20.000. The model is fourteen feet in length and provides a deal of entertainment for the visitor whether adult or juvenile.

GASOLINE WAR AT WOODSTOCK CUTS PRICE TO 23 CENTS

The motorists of city and vicinity are enjoying a price-war staged by the gasoline merchants of the city, and today gas could be purchased at 23 cents a gallon, while yesterday it retailed at 32 and 34 cents. Some of the best grades are retailing at 25 cents. It would not be surprising to see a further drop within the next few days.

BANKS WIDE OPEN

Toronto Globe—Have you walked about the downtown district in Minneapolis on a Saturday evening lately? asks the Minnetonka Record. The conditions are shocking. There are streams of people hurrying in to leave part of their week's wages. It seems terrible the amount of money that is laid away in those banks on a Saturday night. In the old days of booze the banks were dark on a Saturday night and the saloons were swarming with wage-earners who had just been paid off.

FOUND $1,700 IN SILVER HIDDEN IN TRAFALGAR HOME

After Charles Hanham, a Trafalgar Township farmer, had been taken to a Toronto hospital, a search of his house was made and about seventeen hundred dollars, all in silver coin was discovered hidden in various places. The money included two hundred dollars in American nickels.

Mr. Hanham had been living alone for years and would never accept paper money for any of his farm produce. He always insisted on having silver money. When the tax collector went for the taxes each year the payment was made in silver.

THE FARMER'S FRIEND

From the big white farmhouse behind the trees at the foot of the mountain appeared a little black dot moving swiftly straight across the broad field of the valley floor, swinging in rhythmic motion, growing ever larger as it approached. I neglected my trout fishing to watch.

Larger and larger grew the black dot, a swiftly-moving, rippling ball of fur, until down through the long lane easily and swiftly came a joyous laughing, tricolor collie dog stretched out at his swiftest pace. Only the long shadows creeping out from the foot of the western mountains and certain little black and white specks far up the western slope gave me a clue to the dog's mission. It was time to get the cows!

The collie passed swiftly with four white feet in rhythmic beat. Swiftly he diminished in size as he raced along up through the stump-dotted pasture until he again became a black speck, moving against the dark green far up at the edge of the woods. Then there came floating down to my ears a succession of sharp, staccato barks, distinct orders to the herd:

"Up! Up! Up! Home! Up! Up! Up!"

If I had been nearer, I doubtless should have seen that the big black and white Holsteins in the upland pasture did not hesitate, but with one accord turned their heads homeward. The dog stood and watched them for half a minute, as if counting; then he wheeled into the woods, and soon two more cows and a calf came out and joined the herd.

By the winding paths that made descent of the steep easy the herd came slowly homeward. The collie danced behind them barking with joy. He did not hurry them, but kept them moving constantly. At the stream he lay down and waited while the cows drank.

It is nearly two miles from the farmhouse among the maples to the distant borders of that mountain pasture, and yet every night at a word from his master the dog goes up there and brings back the herd. For a man to do that would require nearly two hours every day, and it would mean climbing the steep mountain side on many a hot afternoon. Moreover, in fly time some of the herd doubtless would be hidden away in the thickest part of the cool wood, where a man could find them only after a hard search.

Dogs have always been associated with the farm and have always helped with the farm work. Since the beginning of flocks their have been dogs to guard them; no sooner had the American farmer cleared his acres and acquired a few head of stock than he bought a dog to help him. He took the English sheep dog, the old-fashioned square-nosed, wide-headed collie, and made a cow dog of it. Those dogs must not be confused with the big shaggy-haired English sheep dog. That is another breed. Shep's ancestors were collies; the old collie before it had been breed to a long narrow head and a sharp nose. Both the long-haired and the short-haired collies were brought over, although the short-haired dogs were not seen so frequently. The prevailing color was black and white with now and then a touch of brown. A little later orange and white or yellow and white dogs began to appear. They were all broad between the eyes, square of nose, strong and capable of running the treadmill for churning if necessary. And it generally was! Regardless of color, those dogs were of about the same weight and size; they weighed from forty-five to sixty pounds. They were known as "shepnerd dogs," and thousands of them were named Shep; they are the same dogs that still handle the sheep in Scotland, in Northern England and in Wales. The old breed of shepherd dog is scarce in this country now; the modern sharp-nosed collie has taken his place.

I do not hold with those who think that the modern narrow-headed collie is not so good a dog as those of the old breed. A narrow head does not indicate a lack of brains; our collies are every whit as intelligent as the old dogs.

The intelligence of some of these stock dogs ranks with the highest in the canine world. Dogs that will "go and get the cows" are common enough, but merely driving home a herd of stock is not by any means the limit of the breed's intelligence . Let me tell of a few instances.

A farmer who sometimes bought and sold stock was driving a herd to Albany. He and a man who was helping him were riding in a wagon at a considerable distance behind the herd, leaving the task of keeping the animals on the move and in the road to a very wise yellow and white collie. Only in the villages was it necessary for the men to leave the wagon and help. While they were going up a steep hill over which the herd had already passed the dog came running back toward his master, barking loudly.

"Cow's got an apple in her throat," said the driver, whipping up.

Much to the amazement of the assistant they found a young Jersey beside the road under an apple tree, choking to death. But the farmer had a piece of rubber hose and a can of soft soap in the wagon for just such an emergency, and they saved the cow. Twice again before the herd reached Albany the dog came back and informed the master that a cow was choking.

A cattle buyer went into a neighboring county and bought some fifty head of stock of all sizes and ages. Night found him far from home; so he put up at a country hotel and, herding the stock into a near-by barnyard, left the dog in the barn to watch them. About midnight he was awakened by a loud barking. He jumped out of bed and called his herder. The stock had broken out and were running back up the road homeward. The assistant came tumbling out of bed, flying into his clothes.

"Take your time," said the cattle buyer. "They won't go far."

"I guess you don't know cows!"

"I guess you don't know dogs!"

A quarter of a mile up the road where there was a fence on both sides the home-ward-bound herd had stopped. The dog had headed them on his own initiative and was standing there, guarding the road.

In a neighboring village there is a good cow dog that considers it as his duty and privilege to fetch the cows off the mountain every evening. One day his master sold one of the cows to a neighbor and forgot to explain to the dog. That afternoon when the dog went after the cows he was gone an unusually long time, but after a while he returned, driving the missing cow. He had gone a mile over into a neighbors pasture and made the cow jump fences until he could driveher home! The next day the master went with the dog and carefully explained that the cow was sold, and the dog never bothered her again.

I know another dog that will go after the cows and faithfully cut the non-milkers out of the herd and bring home only those that are being milked

Instances of dogs coming to the house and barking for help when one of the herd is in trouble are too numerous to mention. In the West it is not uncommon for a good sheep dog to put all the rams of a flock into one corral and all the ewes into another. In addition to their work with cows and sheep these dogs can be taught to go and get the horses, to keep the chickens out of the dooryards and the garden, to guard the children, to watch over the farm property and to keep down rats, woodchucks and other vermin.

There is no sense in getting a dog that is too young. The longer you wait the older the pup is and the less trouble and risk you will have in bringing him up. Pups eight weeks old can be weaned, but they are too young to take away from their mother. Three to four months is young enough, and six months is better. By the end of six months they have for the most part passed the "destructive age" and are not so likely to chew shoes and the leg of chairs. At ten months the ordinary dog has his growth; he may become heavier, but not taller.

Most dead pups were killed with kindness. That is a fact! A fat pup isn't long for this world. Give any pup a chance and he will commit suicide at the feed dish. I never heard of a pup's starving to death. If a pup is tall, raw-boned, thin, active eager and hungry he is in good condition. A round-bellied, six-months-old pup that turns away from its feed dish in disgust is sick; he is being killed by the hand that feeds him. Strange to say, pups that have always had too much to eat will survive heavy feeding better than pups from kennels where they have been kept hungry. When hungry dogs from kennels get a chance to gorge they will make the most of it. Be careful in feeding a new dog from kennels.

FISHING FOR SKUNKS

The odor of skunk, writes a contributor, brings to my mind a certain laughable picture even after twenty years. It was a frosty October night; father and John. the hired man, had been putting potatoes into the cellar that day, dumping them through the window into a wooden shoot down which they slid into a big bin. Father had neglected to put the window back into its place.

About two o'clock in the morning I heard a knock on the door of the room adjoining the one where we three youngsters were sleeping. Then I heard my father's voice: "John! John! Get up. We're going fishing!"

The bed springs creaked.. "All right," came the muffled reply, and then the thump of feet on the floor. By that time John was awake. "Did you say fishin'?" he called.

"Yes," replied father. "Fishing—in the cellar." I heard him chuckle.

That was enough for us three youngsters. We hopped out of bed, lit the lamp and started down stairs before John even thought of appearing. Then we began to sniff. "Smells like skunk!" one of us remarked, and the two others agreed, "Yes, it does smell like skunk!"

"It is skunk!" said father. "Three of them in the cellar!"

"But you said we were going fishing, father!" my brother protested.

"Wait and see."

John came down sniffing.

"Come with me, John," said father. "We have uninvited guests in the cellar."

He opened the cellar door. My! The air seemed thick with skunk odor! The two men went below with lanterns. We three went down just far enough to see.

"Here they are in this corner," said father. I noticed that John hung back. "Put that plank up into the opening; they don't seem to like the potato shoot."

Father and John tried their best to make those skunks go up the long plank, but the skunks seemed to want to go everywhere else. Finally they took refuge under the potato bin.

"I thought we'd have to come to it," said father. "The only thing I can see to do is to fasten a large hook on a long bamboo pole and fish 'em out."

John looked longingly towards the stairs.

When they had the pole rigged the fun began in earnest. There was only a space of six inches between the bottom of the bin and the dirt floor, and the light of the lanterns hardly reached the quarry. Whenever a skunk was pricked by the hook it snarled, and the odor became stronger.

Suddenly there was an angry clawing and snarling under the bin, and while John issued incoherent orders to father a fighting ball of black and white went hurling through the window into the darkness.

"Whew!" said father, blinking. "Two more!"

Finally they cleared the cellar of skunks, but the odor remained. I remember seeing father's "fishing" clothes in the wagon shed for many days thereafter. Our apples tasted of skunk; our vegetables tasted of skunk; our potatoes—oh, my! Our clothes smelled of skunk, and we dreamed of skunk. Mother said she was afraid we might all turn into skunks! But there was one consolation; our kindly neighbor Aunt Sarah remarked gently: "Well, they say skunk odor keeps colds away."

BAD SEEDING WEATHER

The weather of the past week has been very backward for seeding purposes and with Old Probs predicting cool and showery weather for to-day it does not look very promising for much being done this week. During last week end the almost continual down pour of Saturday and Sunday put the low lying land in bad shape for anything being done until we have had several days of sun and wind.

A GOOD WORLD

Oh, everything is bully in this gay world of our's and all my paths are fully begarlanded with flowers. It's true I have the measles, the shingles and a wen, and bobcats, skunks or weasles have killed my old gray hen; but illness or reverses can't make me sprinkle tears, or hand out vulgar curses that might offend your ears. Cold winds no longer hound us, and balmy winds come through. The day is bright and smiling and any man's a swins who stands around reviling a world so good and fine. It's true my teeth are aching, and certain joints are sore, where rheumatism is making itself a beastly bore; it's true my spotted heifer has foot and mouth disease—but oh, that scented zephyr, that fragrant vernal breeze. It comes from lands of spices, from islands in the sea and in a brace of trices, it brings relief to me! This good old world we dwell in, in which we play our game, and paw around and yell in is all the blue prints claim. Sometimes the skies are cloudy and winds chant sad laments; sometimes the days are dowdy and look like fourteen cents; but take things all together, the world is bright and fair; and much I question whether it's equalled anywhere. Walt Mason.

THE OLD GARDENER SAYS:

If you are setting out an asparagus bed by all means plant the new Washington variety. This asparagus, developed for the express purpose of producing a strain that is resistant to rust, is the best kind for the amateur's garden. Gardenmakers who grow asparagus and allow the hens to run in the patch will have little or no trouble with rust or beetles and will obtain generous crops. Two or three years are required to get an asparagus bed into bearing but when once established it can be cropped for a dozen years with but little attention except to keep the weeds down and apply manure. Gardenmakers who own their homes will find an asparagus bed a real investment.

CARLYLE TO HIS MOTHER

"No able man ever had a fool for a mother," said sharp-tongued, clear-minded Thomas Carlyle. Neither did any good man have a bad woman for a mother. It would be simple enough to find a hundred expressions of love and gratitude that famous sons have written about the mothers that bore and bred them, but is not all that they could say summed up in this charming letter written by Carlyle to his mother on his birthday.

"Dear old mother, weak and sick and dear to me, what a day this has been in my solitary thoughts! For except a few words to Jane I have not spoken to anyone, nor indeed hardly seen anyone, it being dusk and dark before I went out—a dim, silent Sabbath day, the sky foggy, dark with damp, and a universal stillness the consequence, and it is this day gone fifty-eight years that I was born. And my poor mother! Well, we are all in God's hands; surely God is good. Surely we ought to trust Him, or what is there for the son's of men? O my dear mother let itever be a comfort to you, however weak you are, that you did your part honorably and well while in strength and were a noble mother to me and to us all. I am now myself grown old, and have various things to do and suffer for so many years that there is nothing I ever had to be so much thankful for as the mother I had. That is a truth which I know well, and perhaps this day again it may be some comfort to you. Yes, surely, for if there has been any good in the things I have uttered in the world's hearing, it was your voice essentially that was speaking through me, essentially what you and my brave father meant and taught me to mean; this was the purport of all I spoke and wrote. And if in the few years that may remain to me I am to get any more written for the world, the essence of it, far as it is worthy andgood, will still be yours.

"May God reward you, dearest mother, for all you have done for me. I never can. Ah, no, but will think of it with gratitude and pious love so long as I have the power of thinking, and I will pray God's blessing on you now and always."

Cross Purposes

A well dressed man stood for several minutes watching a brawny expressman tugging at a heavily laden box almost as wide as the doorway through which he was trying to move it. Presently the onlooker approached and said: " Like to have a lift?" "Thanks, I would," the other replied and for the next five minutes the two men, on opposite sides of the box, worked, lifted tugged and wheezed, but the object of their intentions did not move an inch. Finally the well-dressed gentleman straightened up and said between puffs: "I don't believe we can get it out." "Get it out," the drayman roared. "Why, you idiot, I'm trying to get it in."

FIVE MEN TO FACE MURDER CHARGE HOLDUP RESULT

Montreal, May 13.—True Bills against Tony Frank, ex-detective Louis Morel, Frank Gambino, Leo Davis and Mike Valentino were returned late this afternoon by the Grand Jury in the Court of King's Bench, following the formal adjournment of the court after 45 other true bills and one "no bill" had been presented.

The five men above mentioned are charged with the murders of Henri Cleroux, chauffeur of the Banque D'Hochelago, and Harry Stone, one of the bandits who held up the bank collection car here April 1, when $142,288 was stolen. The formal arraignments will be on Thursday.

30 BABIES ARE BAPTIZED AT OPENING OF NEW CHURCH

Oshawa, May 13.—At the first baptismal service held in new St. George's Church on Sunday afternoon the water used in the ceremonial came from the River Jordan, and was presented to the rector, Rev. C. E. Depencier, for the occasion by Mrs. F. W. Cowan, who recently returned from a trip abroad. Thirty babies were christened during the service, the first being triplets, children of Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Carlyle.

UNITES IN WARNING ON MIXED MARRIAGES

Toronto, May 13.—In the coming issue of the Christian Guardian, an editorial will appear discussing a recent editorial in the Catholic Register which has voiced disapproval of marriages between Roman Catholics and Protestants. The Register has stressed the fact that so-called "mixed marriages," were sometimes sanctioned by the Roman Catholic Church by granting "dispensations," but always under protest.

"The Protestant Churches," the Christian Guardian will say, "also see too much of the results of such marriages to view them with any favor, and yet we face the fact that no matter how the church objects these marriages are being consummated every year to a very considerable extent. In 1922, the last year for which we have the figures, in Ontario alone, 615 Roman Catholic men married Protestant women, and 602 Roman Catholic women married Protestant women 132 were Methodists and of the Protestant men 121 were Methodists." In concluding, the Guardian says it ventures to unite its voice with that of the Catholic Register and warn its readers against "mixed marriages."

THE HEBRIDEANS SETTLING DOWN

Of the 580 settlers from the Hebrides brought out under the auspices of the Federal Government all have been placed on farms except four families; all those placed have remained on the farms; none are in arrears for the repayment of their passage money and none have gone to the United States. These facts were brought out in answer to a series of questions in the House of Commons. The answer points out that in addition to this 580, two parties were brought out by the Ontario Government.

IN HEAVEN

Janet sat by the bed of her sick husband, when the following dialogue ensued:

Sandy—"Janet, I ken I'm gawn tae dee, and when I'm dead I want ye tae marry Jock Myles."

Janet—"Na, na, Sandy; I canna abide the idea o' havin' twa husbands in Heaven."

Sandy—"Janet, dinna fear for that, Jock Myles is yin o' the Presbyterians wha favor Church Union."

NOT IN OUR TOWN!

They took a little gravel,
And took a little tar,,
With various ingredients
Imported from afar;
They hammered it and rolled it,
And when they went away
They said they had a pavement
To last for many aday.

They came with picks and smote it,
To lay a water main,
And they called the workmen
To put it back again;
To lay a railway cable
They took it up oncemore,
And then they put it back again
Just where it was before.

They took it up for conduits,
To run the telephone,
And then they putit back again
As hard as any stone;
They tore it up for wires,
To feed the 'lectric light.
And then they put it back again
Which was no more than right.

Oh, the pavement's full of furrows.
There are patches everywhere;
You'd like to ride upon it,
But it's seldom that you dare.
It's a very handsome pavement,
A credit to the town;
They're always digging of it up
Or puttin' of it down.

MICHIGAN MOTORIST HELD CHARGED WITH INJURING GIRL ON HIGHWAY

Brantford, Ont., May 13.—Appearing before County Magistrate Blake on Saturday, Horace Spicer, motorist, of Dearborn, Michigan, was held on bail of $10,000 awaiting developments in the condition of Annabell Thomson, eight-year-old daughter of Wm. Thomson, Langford, on the Hamilton Highway, who was struck, it is charged, by Spicer's car on Friday afternoon when trying to get across the road to go to school. He failed to secure the necessary money. It is charged that his car and two others, all containing members of a fraternal organization on their way to a Hamilton Lodge, were travelling at 45 miles an hour, and after the accident none stopped to find out how seriously injured was the child. The arrest was effected at Hamilton. Residents of the highway, who have for some time past, been alarmed by the utter disregard of the speed laws on the Hamilton Highway, are urging that steps be taken to keep the speedsters in order, forty-five miles an hour by no means being the maximum.

MISSING ROUND WORLD FLIERS TURN UP SAFE IN ALASKA

Cordova, Alaska, May 13.—Major Frederick L. Martin and his mechanic, Staff Sergeant Alva L. Harvey, who have been missing since April 30, when they left Chignik, on their round-the-world flight, are safe at Port Moller, Alaska. A radio message was received here from Major Martin this morning.

The plane struck a mountain near Port Moller an hour and a half after leaving Chignik, according to Major Martin's message. Although the ship was completely wrecked neither of the aviators was hurt, he said. Port Moller is 199 miles west of Chignik.

The aviators owed their existence, the radiogram said, to "concentrated food and nerve." Exhausted, the flight commander and his mechanic finally reached a trapper's cabin at the southernmost point of Port Moller bay on the morning of May 7. There they found food and regained sufficient strength to walk the beach three days before they were rescued.

HELD FOR MURDER ON QUEBEC FARM

Plattsburgh, N.Y., May 13.—George Benton, of Roxam, Que., died in the hospital here yesterday from loss of blood aggravated by blood poisoning caused by gunshot wounds received in a hold-up at his farm Thursday night. Francis Aiken, 16, and his brother Charles, 18, of Whitehall, are being held in the county jail here charged with murder.

The boys, arrested at a garage here on their way south, had in their possession about $150, said to have been taken from Benton. It is said they confessed to the sheriff.

THE WILL TO SAFETY

In athoughtful address delivered before the recent Safety Convention in Toronto, Dr. H. J. Cody used a phrase that will linger in the minds of those who heard him. That phrase was "the will to safety." We have all heard of the "will to power" and Dr. Cody's desire was to persuade both management and men to think safety and achieve it.

The reports received so far in 1924 by the Workmen's Compensation Board indicate that 18,710 accidents have been reported during the first four months of the year and that the total compensation awarded by the Board in the same period has been $2,071,058.60. This is a very large sum and, with the constant desire of everyone in the country to reduce costs, appears to offer a legitimate point of attack in the effort to reduce unnecessary expenses. The safety movement is largely educational in its methods and if, by intensive work in our industries, the will to safety can be developed, there will be fewer accidents.

THE USEFUL INNER TUBE

Do not throw away the inner tube of tires that haveserved their purpose. There are numerous ways they can be used, either whole or in pieces.

Cut into strips of even width and woven together in basket weaves, they make a good floormat. The end strips should be made of double width turned over and cemented in place with a good rubber cement. A similar mat, smaller in size, is excellent for use in the sink.

When cut across in widths suited to the use to which they are to be put they make good rubber bands. They will supply elastic for the bottom of the legs of bloomers, and they make good shirt sleeve supporters.

Half soles cut from inner tubes will add materially to the life of a pair of shoes. Both the shoes and the rubber must be clean, and the surfaces should be well sand-papered before the soles are cemented with the rubber cement.

Pieces cut from an inner-tube make durable stair treads. A section tied or cemented on the broom handle, the coal shovel, the garden rake and other garden or household tools make them much easier on the hands. A strip cemented in the door casing lessens the sound when the screen is slammed. Used whole or with the blown-out part cut away and the ends securely tied the tube when inflated slightly makes a serviceable air cushion. Encased in a tube of unbleached muslin or similiar fabric, the tube may be inflated more and used as a support in learning to swim.

GREAT ONWARD

Standard Bred Stallion

Race Record 2.11¼

Son of Peter the Great, the Greatest Sire in the World

DESCRIPTION

GREAT ONWARD, 2:11¼ is a golden chestnut, stands 16 hands, weighs 1200 lbs., his race record 2:11¼. Has been a mile on mile track in 2:05¼, half-mile track 2:08 and has stepped a half-mile in one minute, and only for an accident to one of his front legs (from which he is altogether recovered) he would have been close to a 2 minute pacer.

GREAT ONWARD as a green pacer cost Mr. A. D. Chaplain of Chatham, $3,000 and was considered the greatest green pacer in Canada at that time. His sire, Peter the Great, at 21 years of age sold for $50,000.00 and stood for a service fee of $1,000.00 until his death.

GREAT ONWARD AS A RACE HORSE

Great Onward started out the season of 1914, a green pacer, winning at Port Huron in 2:12½ 2:11¼ 2:11¼, Saginaw, Mich., in 2:11¼ 2:13¼ 2:12¼, St. Thomas in 2:15¼ 2:15¼ 2.15¼. Had it not been for a slight accident to one of his fore legs, from which he has altogether recovered, Great Onward would have a mark better than 2:04. He is the product of the union of the blood of two great families. Through his sire he traces to Pilot Medium, son of Happy Medium, son of the Great Hambletonian 10; through his dam Mary Onward by Onward, he traces to the Great George Wilkes. The second dam of Great Onward 2:11¼ was Mary Marshall 2:12½, a trotter which was the world's record for her at that time for a three year old in a race, she being campaigned down the Grand Circuit. She became the dam of Nathan Strauss 2:03½ and May Marshall 2:08½.

The fastest recorded Peter the Great Stallion standing for service in Ontario. His sire, Peter the Great, 2:07¼, known as the wonder sire, is in a class by himself as no other stallion near approaches him as a producer of extreme speed. His family are breeding on as his son Azoff 2:14¼ at 2 years, is the sire of Peter Manning 1.56¾, trotting the world's record trotter.

Great Onward himself will become a great sire if given an opportunity. A couple of his colts in Western Ontario better than 2:10. This horse stands in a class by himself in this country, both in regards to breeding and speed. His record was taken on half--mile track in a race.

Will make the season of 1924 from May 1st, until July 13th, at James McAvoy's stable, Chesterville, Ont., at a service fee of $12.00. $2.00 at time of service and $10.00 if mare prove in foal. Mares tried and not returned will be held for the season. Parties disposing of mares will be held for the season charge.

All mares at owner's risk.

RESTORES LIFE TO BUSINESS
(Montreal Herald.)

A periodical devoted to business has completed a census of 2000 businesses on this continent on the question of "the summer slump." Seventy-six per cent. of the business men interviewed knew of no hot weather slump in their business. Ten per cent. reported fair summer business and fourteen per cent. are experiencing business depression every summer.

Until quite recent years all business was seasonal. One business was active in winter but inactive in summer. Others by the nature of their trade were prosperous in summer but had to struggle through the winter. Some time or other in every year business had no business.

What do these 2000 modern businessmen give as the miraculous cure for the "summer slump?" They agree on twelve remedies and the first of these is increased newspaper advertising. They work on the known fact that the business is to be had if they go after it.

Some of the summer advertising suggestions offered by the 2000 businessmen for retail merchants are increased regular advertising space in the newspapers, well advertised special sales, feature advertisements, and advertising of summer bargains and seasonal merchandise. They all did in eliminating the summer slump, but none is effective without insistent and large scale newspaper advertising.

The retail merchants in Montreal who know no business "summer depression" are those who have learned the value of newspaper advertising and knowing the means obtain the desired results through every desirable medium. The buying public appreciates the merchants who have something to offer them and who tell them of their offers through the medium of newspaper advertising. There is no end to the public's needs, so it follows that a summer slump in business denies the public a continuous gratification of its needs and desires.

HIGHLAND REGIMENT ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the officers of the Dundas, Stormont, and Glengary Highland Regiment took place recently at the rooms of the Cornwall Club. Lieut. Col. W. H. Magwood, O.C., presided. Major General Sir Archilbald Cameron McDonell, K.C.B., D.S.O., commandant Royal Military College, Kingston, and Honorary Colonel of the regiment, was present, and gave a very interesting address on the Battle of Waterloo, which was much appreciated and closely followed by all present. Major General McDonell presented Major John A. Gillies with the Colonial Auxiliary Officers decoration and complimented Major Gillies on his long and efficient services with the regiment.

Colonel Magwood and officers accepted their honorary colonel's invitation to the next meeting at the Royal Military College, Kingston where General McDonell promises an interesting and enjoyable entertainment.

Colonel Magwood gave a detailed report of the regiment's activities for the past year and stated that the O.C., M.D., No. 3, complimented the regiment on their annual inspection which was found to be of high standing.

Colonel Magwood also advised that his tenure of command would expire in a short time and asked the officers to give Major J. A. Gillies, who would likely be called upon to command the regiment, the loyal support that had been given him and that he himself would continue to assist as far as was in his power. Mr. Duncan Monroe, the Grand Old Man of Cornwall, was present and although advanced in years still takes an active interest in all activities of counties kilted regiments.

DOES SCIENCE PAY

The man on the farm is inclined to smile at the theories of the man in the lecture room or the library. He knows that no one can make a successful farmer simply by studying books; but he should remember that the real scientific student of agriculture is today much more than a man of books. The scientific student is also a man of the labratory and the experimental station. His theories are rigidly tested in the fields before they reach the farmer. Moreover, the farm agent has come in to explain the new methods in person and to help the farmer to apply them.

A Southern banker, whose business depends in large measure upon the prosperity of farmers testifies to some of the results in the South.

Since the fram agents began their work, 1,700 farm clubs, with 50,000 members have been organized in the Southern States; 30,000 meetings, with a total attendance of 1,200,000, have been held, and more than 1,000,000 government bulletins dealing with the farmers problems, have been distributed. Nearly 90,000 boys and girls, moreover, have been enrolled in clubs at which they discuss such subjects as the proper rotation of crops and getting the best yield from an acre.

Did the meetings and discussions amount to anything?

The banker's answer is very confident. He says that more than 50,000 pure bred or high grade animals have been imported into the States as a result of the new interest in better farming— a step of especial importance in view of the fact that during the last fifteen years live stock has tended to decrease in that region. Some 20,000 farmers had faith enough in demonstration methods to try them last year, with the result that their production to the acre was distinctly higher than the average and that the increase in the product of their farms was estimated at $4,000,000 in cotton and over $7,000,000 in corn. As long as the demonstration farms can on the average raise 1,077 pounds of seed cotton to the acre as against 623 lb on ordinary farms, their neighbors will have under their eyes a standing illustration of the fact that the best crops are fertilized with brains.

It is worth noting again that the facts were brought out at a convention of investment bankers and have been cited in a prominent financial journal. The progressive banker realizes as never before that his own success is closely related to the prosperity of the farmer. On his side, the farmer must realize that the man who is alert to learn and to use the best methods in his farming will find it most easy to get credit.

$75,000 AT SIXTY-TWO AND HOW THIS AMOUNT GATHERS

Do you want to guarantee yourself a fortune of $75,000 by the time you are sixty-two years of age, with the further provision that, should you die any time after your twenty-sixth birthday, and you are to leave an estate of not less than $7,750? The answer is here.:

Can you save $5 a week from twenty to twenty-six years of age (a total period of six years), or, if you are already twenty-six years of age, have you around $1,750 to start with?

Can you save $10 a week from twenty-six to thirty-six years of age?

Can you save $15 a week from thirty-six to fifty years of age?

After fifty years of age you are not required to save anything.

If you want only $25,000, can you save a third of these amounts? If you want $50,000, can you save two-thirds? This plan can, of course, be carried out by people of the other ages—the later you start the later you will complete.

The success of this plan does not depend on any highly speculative matters. It simply depends on your ability and willingness.

First—Begin by starting to save $5 a week on your twentieth birthday, or have $260 (for the year) ready on your twenty-first birthday. As rapidly as possible invest this money at 6 per cent. interest, preferably in secure bonds, re-investing the interest as far as possible each time.

On your twenty-sixth birthday you will have at least $1,750. If there are odd sums of money that cannot find investment at 6 per cent. they will not greatly affect the final result. For the first six years we have made general allowances for that. These small amounts can accumulate in the savings bank until there is enough to buy a secure six per cent. bond. Later on this difficulty will disappear as you begin to accumulate larger sums and the interest payments to you become larger.

Second—Out of the $1,750 you will set aside approximately $1,000, the interest on which will be used to buy term insurance during the next ten years. The $60 interest money will pay the premium on around $6,000 of this type of insurance. The interest from the other $750 will be reinvested each year, along with your future savings. Thus, should you die any time within the next ten years, you will be certain of leaving an estate of at least $7,750. This will protect you and your family while you are going ahead with the rest of the plan. Of course, if you begin at a later age than that specified, you will not be able to carry so much term insurance of the $60.

Third—But when twenty-six years of age, you are to begin saving $10 every week. On your thirty-sixth birthday this saving at 6 per, cent compound interest will amount to $6,850. The $750 which you left invested should now have grown to $1,340 and you still have the $1,000 the interest on which was used for paying for the term insurance. This will give you in round figures better than $9,190 in securities.

You may now drop the term insurance, having bridged over the gap when your earnings were small.

Fourth—From thirty-six to fifty years of age you are to save $15 a week. These should be the years of your big earning capacity. During these years you will accumulate over $16,390. The $9,190 which you had at thirty-six years of age has now grown, at 6 per cent compound interest, to over $20,770. Thus, on your fiftieth birthday, you have better than $37,160. Money at 6 per cent compound interest more than doubles in twelve years. By sixty-two years of age this money will have grown to $74,765. Less than a month after your sixty-second birthday the fund will cross the $75,000 mark. You can now begin paying yourself an annual of $4,500 and still leave an estate of $75,000 when you die.

All sums are figured at 6 per cent interest, compounded annually, and no interest is figured on the weekly payments until the entire year's amount has been accumulated. By compounding your money. semi-annually, it would be possible to arrive at the $75,000 in advance of sixty-two years.

Easy, isn't it?

All Day Suckers Dangerous

The danger of all day suckers to children have been brought home by announcement of the Health Department that two children have been reported as having had the roofs of their mouths severely lacerated falling while having the candy sticks in their mouth. It is also contended that the spread of measles in Brantford has been largely aided by the all day suckers.

Thrift, Horatio, Thrift!

An old Scotsman on a visit to London had just got into his bed at the hotel when one of the porters hurriedly entered the room.

"Get up sir, make haste," he burst out. The hotel is on fire."

The visitor slowly raised himself on one elbow and looked at the intruder for a moment.

"Mind ye," he said with an air of determination, "if I get up I won't pay for the bed."

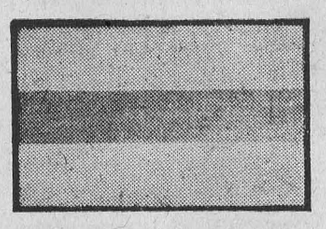
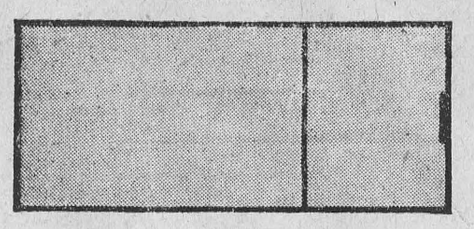
Cheap Paint? Here is the Answer!

No. 1
(From an actual photograph)
A measure of so called "cheap" paint at $4.00 per gal., brushed out on wood. It covered 612 sq. feet.



No. 2
(From an actual photograph)
An equal measure of Lowe Brothers' "High Standard" paint at $5.75 per gal., brushed out on a similar surface, covered 1,000 sq. feet.



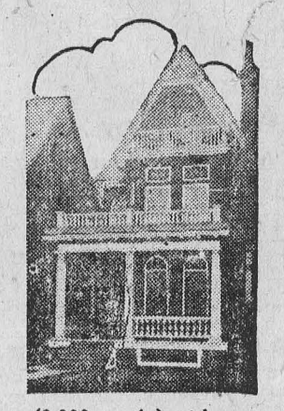
USING an equal measure of each paint, and brushing them out on the same surface, we obtained the results pictured above

Observe that Lowe Brothers' "High-Standard" Paint covered approximately 50% more surface and covered it better than the so called "cheap" paint.

From this actual test it will be seen that it would take approximately 3 gallons of "Cheap" paint to do a job that would require only 2 gallons of Lowe Brothers' "High Standard" Paint.

Practically applied to a house it would work out this way:—

These houses are both of the same type, and each has a painting area of 2,000 square feet.



To paint this house (2,000 sq. ft.) with "cheap" paint Mr. A. required 6½ gals. at $4.00 per gal.	$26.00	To paint this house (2,000 sq. ft.) with Lowe Brothers' High Standard Paint, Mr. B. required 4 gals. at $5.75	$23.00
It takes a painter 1 day to apply 1 gal. of paint, therefore to apply 6½ gals. of "cheap" paint it took 6½ days at $5.00 per day	$32.50	A painter can usually apply in a day more Lowe Brothers' High Standard Paint than any other, but figuring on an equal basis of 1 gal. per day, it took 4 days at $5.00 per day	$20.00
Total cost	$58.50	Total cost	$43.00

By using Lowe Brothers' High Standard Paint Mr. B. saved $3.00 on the cost of paint and $12.50 on the cost of labor—a total saving of $15.50 on the complete job.

Never Figure the Cost of Paint by what it costs "per gallon." So-called "cheap" paint is the dearest you can buy measured by "job" cost, which is the only true measure of paint performance.

Before you paint consult us. We will be glad to show you how to paint most economically, and to give you color cards and other information for your guidance.

NO RACE SUICIDE HERE

Several French-Canadian gentlemen, with the aid of the writer, spent weeks in making enquiries as to what French-Canadian family in the Province of Ontario had the largest family. Replies came in from all parts of Ontario, east, north and south.

The astounding revelation that 48 French-Canadian families had 701 children, or an average of 14 children to a family, was one result of the enquiry.

Men in all the humbler walks of life replied and in each case declared that they were happy with their wives and little ones. In most cases the man had been married only once and his wife was still alive. The children counted were all alive.

After the replies to some of the enquiries had been received the results were studied and found to be very surprising.

Francis Xavier Bourdages, aged 54 years, of Sault Ste. Marie, apparently holds the Ontario Championship. He is the exceptionally proud parent of 23 sons, and all are living and well.

Albert Schingh, a salesman of Ottawa, will probably be the champion parent of the world if he keeps on. He is now 41 years old and has 21 children. (He also has a motor car.)

Francois Xavier Lacelle, a building contractor of Ottawa East, is aged 90 years. His children number 21. His oldest son has 20 children and one of his daughters has 23 children.

Another happy Canadian is Josephant Maisonneuve, aged 48, a farmer of Wendover. His family number 18 and are all happy.

The mothers in nearly all the enquiries returned were "alive and well." Mother was probably too busy to put in any comment.

Northern Ontario has many large French Canadian families and included among these is the family of Jules Rouleau, a 61-year-old farmer of Earlton. Jules has a family of 21, nine boys and 12 girls.

Another feature of the survey was the replies from French-Canadian fathers pioneering in unsettled districts of Ontario.

Leaders in public life in Old France were informed of the large families of the French-Canadians in Ontario.
