SERVICE, to Us IMPLIES MUCH

Among the things that characterize our service are personal attention to every detail of the funeral arrangement, and little acts of thoughtfulness that serve to lessen the trying strain of the hours before and during the funeral. Quiet efficiency and smoothness are the result. That, we believe, is the kind of service that wins approval.

Calls to hospitals given prompt service.

HENRY'S Shorthand School Ottawa, Ont.

No School in Canada offers a better training, or ensures a more successful future. Henry's leads all others, and ranks among employers as "THE SCHOOL OF HIGHER EFFICIENCY"—a fact borne out by more than 600 pupils who have, since January, 1913, left other Ottawa schools to come to it.

Therefore, it is not surprising that business men, in advertising for stenographers, should specially say, "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

FAST TRAIN CRASHES AUTO AT WINCHESTER

Last evening about a quarter after seven as the fast Toronto-Montreal express passed Winchester it crashed into a Chrysler coach owned by William Lloyd, night operator at Winchester sation, stalled on the crossing just east of the station. No one was in the auto when sruck. Lloyd, who lives just south of the tracks at Winchester, was proceeding north when his car stopped on the rails and could not be started under its own power. With the assistance of Bert Smith, section foreman, Lloyd attempted to have the car pushed across but failed to clear the rails before struck by the train.

TABLET UNVEILED

On Sunday morning in St. Paul's Presbyterian church, Winchester, a brass tablet placed at the entrance to the vestry in memory of Rev. R. J. M. Glassford, who was pastor of St. Paul's church from 1918 to 1925, and Mrs. Glassford, his wife, was unveiled. Rev. Hugh Cameron of Ottawa, was the preacher on the occasion and he paid high tribute to the splendid work as a Christian minister by his friend of many years, the late Mr. Glassford. The unveiling was by Mrs. William Gardner, honorary president of the Ladies' Aid, and one of the oldest members of the congregation. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers. Rev. G. C. Graham, the pastor, presided.

INAUGURATION SERMON OF C. RITCHIE-BELL

The Church militant was the theme chosen by Mr. C. Ritchie-Bell for the inaugural sermon of his ministry at the Chesterville Presbyterian church, last Sunday morning.

"The Church of Christ," said Mr. C. Ritchie-Bell, "is a living temple, building and built upon, and is upheld today by the same power that first lifted it into being—God. What impresses even a casual student is that Jesus not only laid the foundations of this Church upon the tragic necessities of human life, but that he had to make the material out of which it was built—the disciples." Continuing he said, "Behind the churches stands the Church, and the Church is not Anglican, nor Baptist, nor United nor Presbyterian. The Church is the fellowship of souls who in the spirit are seeking or have found God. The visible churches are the fallible endeavor to express in an institution limited by human frailty the mind of man for God and the approach of God to man."

In the evening Mr. Ritchie-Bell preached on the theme, "Veiled Christianity."

14-Year-Old Dunbar Boy Fatally Injured

Last Saturday afternoon about 2.15, Elburn Barkley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Barkley of Dunbar, while working on the farm of Mr. Ernest Shane, on the Bethune Bush road, about four miles south of Chesterville, was so severely injured that he passed away within a very few minutes.

The boy, who was employed by Mr. Delbert Dillabough, was with him and other neighbors assisting at silo filling at Ernest Shane's. He had just come from the field with a load of corn to the cutter and had left his load to assist Peter Heveran handle the corn from the latter's wagon when the pipe above the blower leading to the silo became plugged. Deb. Dillabough, who owns the cutter and was feeding the stalks into it, left his work and had just removed the pipe above the blower and had not seen the boy near him when the latter apparently thrust a stick into the wheel carrying the knives, with the result that the wheel burst, the fragments striking Barkley, throwing him ten feet away. A portion of one knife struck him under the right arm, almost severing it, his left arm was broken and there was a very ugly bruise almost directly under the heart. He died before a doctor arrived. It was no part of Barkley's work to be where he was and it is said that he had been twice warned the same morning to keep away from the cutter. The pipes had been clogged earlier in the day and the stoppage removed with the use of a corn stalk by Mr. Dillabough, who would have used the same method to again clear it without incurring danger to himself or the machine.

Dr. P. McLaughlin, coroner, of Winchester, was notified and after investigation decided to leave the matter of an inquest with the Attorney-General to whom he would make his report.

The funeral of the victim was very largely attended at Dunbar Monday afternoon when the greatest sympathy was expressed for the bereaved parents and friends.

WILLIAM E. COONS DIES AT IROQUOIS

The funeral of William Ezra Coons, took place from the residence of his son-in-law, 52 Pearl street, east, Iroquois, where he died. The service was conducted by Rev. William Wells, and interment was made in Point Iroquois cemetery, with the Rev. Thos. Knowles assisting.

Deceased was born in Inkerman where he engaged some years in farming, going to Manitoba when quite a young man, returning, he again took up farming on Point Iroquois, soon, however, going into railroad work, when he, with his ramily, moved to Brockville.

He continued in the employ of the C.N.R. until last July. His wife predeceased him 13 years ago, and surviving are three daughters, and three sons.

OTTAWA WINTER FAIR PRIZE LIST NOW READY

A full classification for all breeds of grade dairy cows has been put in the prize list for the Ottawa Winter Fair. The Catalogue is now ready for distribution and contains many changes which should be of interest to farmers.

Farmers with T. B. tested grade females can now show at the Winter Fair and prizes awarded are as generous as in other classes. There is also a full classification for Guernseys and rearrangement in classes for commercial horses. In the poultry department the entry fee has been cut one-third and the prize list revised.

A horse-shoe pitching contest open to all Eastern Ontario is to be a feature attraction during the afernoon show this year. The dates of the 1928 show are from December 3rd to 7th with entries closing on November 24th.

HAD NOT BEEN DRINKING

A news item which appeared in the Record some time ago regarding the automobile accident which occurred to Mr. and Mrs. Asa Hutt near Cass Bridge on the evening of Winchester Fair, intimated that the driver of the car hitting Mr. Hutt's car was alleged to have been under the influence of liquor. By one who has reason to know we are informed that on the contrary the driver has never taken a glass of intoxicants in his life.

DANCE AT FINCH

To-morrow, Friday, night, Ben Hokea and his Hawaiian Troubadours will make their second appearance of the season at the Finch Arena in a dance programme. Those in attendance at the former appearance were so enthused by the delightful music that a second engagement was simply insisted upon. This is your chance for a delightful evening.

HOCKEY MEETING

A meeting for re-organizing the Hockey club will be held Monday evening, Oct. 15th, in Mr. King's office at the Nestle's Food Co.'s plant. Officers for the coming season will be elected and prospects discussed for the campaign which will be opening before many weeks. All citizens interested in hockey are invited to attend.

DUNDAS PUBLIC SCHOOLS CHAMPIONSHIP SPOTS

The third annual Athletic Meet to decide the championship in the Urban and Rural schools of Dundas County will be held at Morrisburg on Saturday afternoon of this week, the progam to commence at one o'clock sharp. The shield, donated by the Men Teachers' Federation of the County, under whose sponsorship these competitions are held, has been captured for the past two years by the Morrisburg Public school. In each of the former contests Chesterville representatives lost out by one point only. This year, the local competitors will be smaller both in number and size, but the same determination to win will accompany them when they journey to Morrisburg on Saturday.

In addition to this spirit, what the boys and girls need most is just a little encouragement in the way of interest from their parents and friends. We are looking forward to seeing more of our Public scool supporters on hand next Saturday to cheer ,the pupils in their attempts than were present last year.

Our Aim

In fitting glasses we aim to give clearness of vision combined with comfort.

In order to do this we must prescribe the lens which, without undue strain, will enable the eye to bring the rays of light to a focus on the retina.

We must also take into account the motor muscles which cause the eyes to converge or diverge and thus fix each eye on the object so that they will work in unison thus giving single vision.

WILL RAISE PURE BREDS

Messrs. Hume and Albert Grisdale of Ottawa sons of Prof. J. H. Grisdale, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, have purchased a farm property on the river road about three miles east of Iroquois, from Mrs. Dora Thompson, for $14,500, with the intention of raising fancy pure bred cattle.

Dundas County Teachers' Convention

The fifty-fourth annual meeting of the Dundas County Teachers' Institute was held in Lannin's Hall, Winchester, Oct. 4th and 5th. More than one hundred teachers from all over the County gathered for the occasion.

The convention was formally opened by the President, Miss Luella Burnside. The Roll Call and Enrolment of members was followed by the President's address. Miss Burnside gave a very interesting and lengthy account of her eventful trip to Washington, D.C., and Atlantic City, last Easter.

The minutes were read and adopted. The communications brought to the minds of all the loss of a valued member in the person of Miss Greta Earle, when Mr. Hamilton read the acknowledgement of flowers and condolences from the Earle family.

The Resolution Committee appointed was, Misses Mary Beckstead, Laura Stewart, Marguerite Sharra, Messrs. Lloyd Laporte and Raymond Coligan. The Press Committee was, Erma Durant, Chesterville; Malcolm Rae, Winchester; Robert Meredith, South Mountain; Stanley Waddell, Iroquois; and Lorne Robinson, Morrisburg.

Miss Muriel Morrison gave a paper on "Household Science in Rural Schools." She stressed the mental value and the close connection and relation of the school to the home. Miss Leila McGee told clearly how the hot lunch problems had worked out in Chesterville Public School, and emphasized the pleasantness and the benefit that the pupils received.

Thursday afternoon Mr. Herman Hamilton, the secretary, read the financial statement and auditors' report.

Mr. C. H. Edwards, B.A., B.Paed., of the Peterborough Normal School, gave an instructive talk on "Objectives in Geography."

Miss Gladys McCormick, of Winchester, taught the words "man" and "cat" to a class of beginners. Miss Helen Weston and Miss H. Davidson separately discussed and criticized the lesson.

Thursday afternoon's programme closed with a trip to the Nation Valley school, S.S. No. 5. The school certainly justifies inspection, not only by teachers but by tne ratepayers of other school sections.

A public meeting was held in the evening with Mr. A. Sweet as chairman. An Oratorical contest, in which the winners at the rural school fairs took part, was a feature. The winner was Beldric Belanger of Sount Mountain. The other participants were Wilda Fader, Brinston; Ruth Nevrille, Osnabruck Centre; Robert Durant, Maple Ridge; Samuel Telford, Williamsburg.

Medals were presented to two public school pupils who gained distinction at the Entrance examinations. The Forrester medal was presented to Veilda Watkins, Iroquois, and the Campbell medal to Doris Bowles, Morewood. The evening closed with a social gathering.

Friday morning's session opened with the Roll Call.

Nature Study in Poetry was the subject of an address by Mr. C. H Edwards, B.A., B.Paed, Peterborough Normal School. He recited interesting selections from Pauline Johnson, Byron and Brian to illustrate the visionary and immortal phrasing of the Nature Poets. "Nature helps us to get in touch and understand the universe."

Mr. H. B. Fetterly, M.A., I.PS., Winchester, outlined a number of points in a teacher's everyday duties and insisted that they be carefully performed. His handling of the subject, "Relation of Teachers to the Profession and to the Community," showed how the teacher may exercise her personality in the educational and social influences of the Section.

The officers elected by the Men's Federation of Teachers for the County are, President, R. Coligan, Morrisburg; Vice-Pres., Robert Anderson, South Mountain; Sec.-Treas., Leonard Porteous, Winchester. The lady teachers failed to join in a body.

On Friday afternoon Mr. P. S. Boyd, C.P.S., taught a general problem to a Sr. IV Class. He stated clearly every procedure. Messrs. H. G. Graham and G A. Foulds discussed and criticized the manner and method of the Arithmetic lesson.

The 1928-29 Executive Committee is, Hon. President, H. B. Fetterly, M. A., I.P.S, Winchester; President, Leonard Porteous, Winchester; Vice-Pres., Miss Mary Beckstead, Williamsburg; Sec.-Treas., Mr. Herman Hamilton, Iroquois; Committee, C. Ellis, South Mountain; Gertrude Weegar, Chesterville; G. A. Foulds, Morrisburg. Delegate to O.E.A., Miss Louise Curry, Hallville.

The following resolutions were adopted: That the success of the convention was due to the work and interest of the Executive Committee; That the convention was indebted to the members of the Winchester Public Schooi Staff, the citizens of Winchester, Mr. C. H. Edwards, Mr. Springstead, Mrs. Forrester and Mr. Campbell, for their kindly help and contributions to the programme; That Miss Matilda Wilson, Miss Boyd and Miss Stella Johnston be remembered in their illness and bereavement; That some annual recognition of the Rural School Fair winners' efforts be made to each contestant.

The successful 1928 convention closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

DAHLIAS AND GENTILITY

("Peter Simple" in the Morning Post.)

A Southampton correspondent is very severe with me for my remarks about the pronunciation of dahlia. "The way to discover a gentleman is by education and breeding," he says, leaving it to be inferred that no gentleman would talk of a daylia. "Even supposing," he adds, "that 80 per cent. of the public miscall dahlia 'daylia' there is no reason why 20 per cent. of the cultured should give way to them. At present there are hundreds of words and names mispronounced. but the genteel can smile when tney hear them murdered." I am afraid 20 per cent. is a gross exaggeration of the numbers of those who are genteel enough to say dah-lia. I should say that a fraction of 1 per cent. would be nearer the mark. Daylia is the pronunciation in modern dictionaries, though Dr. Murray adds "properly dalia." If, by conforming to the general use, I afford amusement to the genteel I am content. I also pronounce the final "s" in Paris— which is, of course, quite wrong.

The Reason.

Why does a duck go into the water? For divers reasons Why does it come out? For sundry purposes. Why does it go in again. To liquidate its bill. Why does it come out again? To make a little run on the bank.

DODGE BROTHERS
NEW VICTORY SIX

Smarter in Appearance—More Luxurious in Appointments—With Increased Room and Still Finer Performance

Style stands out in all nine new Victory body types. There is an inviting swagger in the sweep of the improved one-piece fenders, an assurance of power in the higher and more massive radiator and hood lines.

Bodies are not only smarter, but larger, providing increased head-room, leg-room and seat-comfort. Deeper, softer cushions and specially selected hardware and upholstery sound a distinctive note of interior luxury, while higher and wider doors facilitate entrance and exit.

The new Victory Six emphasizes the unusual structural advantages first introduced in the original Victory. The chassis frame is so bolted to the body that it literally becomes a part thereof—a simplified, more rugged, and squeak-proof construction that reduces weight, eliminates rattles and lowers the center of gravity.

This unique Victory design provides roadability and riding ease as remarkable and unusual as Victory pick-up, power and flexibility.

There is just one way to find out how different and better Victory performance really is. Drive the car yourself!

SAW HIS LIFE WORK AND TOOK IT UP

Some thirty-five years ago a young resident of Smiths Falls took a step which caused a number of his friends to think that he was committing a grave folly, that is from a financial standpoint. He had graduated from the Ontario School of Pharmacy, after passing through the Model School and the teaching profession, and, at the age of 27 graduated from the School of Medicine, with the degrees of M.D. and C.M., and seemed to have a brilliant career ahead of him. That was Dr. O. R. Avison, who at thirty-three tossed aside the brilliant spectacle and went to Korea as a Medical Missionary. Although he was said to have "lost his balance" his career has been marked by wonderful success and he has had a life of unexceptional usefulness. He did not have it all "soft," in fact he never has had, and did not want it, but he has had the knowledge throughout of knowing that he has done a wonderful amount of good to those who needed it.—Smiths Falls Record-News.

JUNIOR RED CROSS

The Peptimists held their fourth regular meeting for this term last Friday afternoon, September 28th, from three to four o'cock. The President, Betty Bolster, was in charge of the meeting and after the members received their new membership buttons, which this year are designed with a gold maple leaf on a black background, the minutes were read and approved. A good program on "The Value of Exercise and Play," was then given. Our Director then read us a letter from Dr. O'Connor, the Provincial Director of the Ontario Jr. Red Cross. As there were not enough contributions, we had no issue of "The Gossip" this week. Olive Casselman again received the Program Merit Badge for a well-prepared part. Mite-box donations amounted to 45c. —Moses Atlas, Reporter.

Willing to Oblige.

Dietitian—Yes, a few lettuce leaves, without oil, and a glass of orange juice. There, madam, that completes your daily diet.

Mrs. Overweight—Thank you so much, Doctor, but do I take this before or after meals?

ADVERTISE TO-DAY—SELL MORE TO-MORROW

THE NEWS MAY BE IN WASTE PAPER BASKET

Frequently you pick up a paper and after glancing at the headlines, wearily thrust it aside, remarking, "Nothing in the paper to-day." Did you ever stop to think what the phrase, "Nothing in the paper to-day," means? It means that in the day or week just passed, that no misfortune has befallen anyone in our town; that no fire has wiped out your neighbor's worldly goods; that the grim angel of death has crossed no threshold of a friend; that no man, driven by liquor, hatred, fear, or desire of unearned gain, has taken the life of a fellowman; that no poor devil, haunted by the past or the misdeeds of some other, has crossed the great divide by taking his own life; that no careless or drunken auto driver has run into another car and injured or killed an innocent family; that earthquake, tornado or flood has not wiped out a whole community. So the next time you are prompted to protest, "Nothing in the paper to-day," just return thanks instead of grumbling, because there is no news.—Exchange.

War On.

We know there's a war in China, because the last shirts we got back from the laundry looked as if they'd been through it.

Perils Of Fast Driving

The Ontario Safety League has prepared some figures showing the distance per second an automobile will travel going at different rates of speed per hour. Here they are:

10 m.p.h. covers 14.66 ft. per second.
15 m.p.m. covers 22 ft. per second
20 m.p.h. covers 29.23 ft. per second.
25 m.p.h. covers 36.65 ft. per second.
30 m.p.h. covers 44 ft. per second.
35 m.p.h. covers 51.33 ft per second.
40 m.p.h. covers 58.66 ft. per second.
45 m.p.h. covers 66 ft. per second.
50 m.p.h. covers 73.33 ft. per second.
55 m.p.h. covers 80.66 ft per second.
60 m.p.h. covers 88 ft. per second.

Cars do not travel in towns and cities at a rate of speed higher than 20 miles per hour, at least they are not supposed to do so and it is only the reckless driver that exceeds this rate. Even at 10 miles an hour the pedestrian has little chance if a car gets within 10 feet of him. Somebody must think and act in about half a second and it must be the driver because a man or woman on the street has absolutely no chance against a car weighing anywhere from 1500 pounds to two tons. Careful drivers usually maintain a speed of about 15 miles per hour when driving through pedestrian traffic. This means that the car is moving 22 feet per second, a distance few people could designate correctly. There is more carelessness on the part of pedestrians avoiding cars than there is among drivers in keeping clear of people on foot. It is the driver whom public opinion is likely to hold responsible if a jay walker is hit and to keep himself safe liability insurance is of course necessary, but paramount to this perfect working of brakes are the first essential.

TRAP NEST RECORD BY HEN IN ALBERTA

"A.R.C.," a Wyandotte hen belonging to Thomas Hill and Sons, of Ponoka, has just completed a trap nest record of 243 eggs in 365 days under Government supervision. But more remarkable than the figure, which was beaten by another bird in this record-of-performance flock with 299 eggs to her credit, is the fact that the 243 eggs averaged 2¼ ounces, that she weighs seven pounds now and although a heavy producer, her type and plumage please the fancier of show birds. A refusal of $75 offered indicates that this queen of Alberta poultry is not for sale.

Traffic Note.

"I have a terrible rumbling on my stomach. It's like a wagon going over a bridge."

"It's most likely that truck that you ate this morning for breakfast."

Golden Eggs

According to the legend it is the goose which lays the golden egg. But according to statements from leading egg markets of the country it is the hen. Egg production by the most common of barnyard fowls this year will exceed in value all the gold taken out of the earth during the same period. Moreover, the eggs which the hens supplied, save the number which are still reposing in cold storage for future use, have been consumed at countless breakfast tables, while the gold, not being perishable, still remains in the vault or in the form of currency. The hen is not held in high regard, because of her habit of crossing the road at a time which is inconvenient for the motorist and because her elation upon discovering she has replenished the earth interferes with the slumber of the country boarder and the suburbanite. Not only is the value of the egg production greater than that of the gold output, but it is above rubies. Lacking gold, the Dominion should be able to set up other standards of values and still exist as a nation. Lacking eggs, we should be in sorry straits. It is time that the hen was esteemed at her true worth. Poultry raising has become, in recent years, one of Canada's largest industries. It has saved many farmers from bankruptcy when crops have failed and it is keeping in operation thousands of arable acres that otherwise would have been abandoned because of the grain surplus.—Perth Expositor.

BAILIFF'S EXAMINATIONS

Montreal Star—A candidate for the position of bailiff in the Montreal district has appealed against his rejection because he failed to secure the necessary number of marks in the entrance examination by one-twelfth of a mark. His protest is lodged specifically against the character of the questions he failed to answer in the examination. One of them inquired the name of the third wife of Henry VIII and another the names of all the counties of Quebec Province. This candidate will probably have the sympathy of a good many people. After all the connection between the wives of the most married of English monarchs and the duties of a bailiff here would seem to be extremely vague.

Women's Poultry Pool

Canada has long been noted for the extent and success of its farmers' co-operative marketing enterprises, which have materially aided in the solution of at least a portion of its agricultural problems.

The co-operative movement has attracted the strong support of farm women in many parts of the Dominion, an outstanding example of their activities in this line being the Saskatchewan egg and poultry pool, with a membership of 18,000, composed almost entirely of farmers' wives, with four women on its board of directors.

Last year this association handled 70 per cent. of the eggs marketed in the province and 86 per cent of those exported, its total volume of business amounting to $721,329.

This showing is all the more remarkable from the fact that the larger portion of the poultry comes not from exclusive poultry farms, but from those in which poultry raising is only a side line to grain production.

Whenever the co-operative marketing of agricultural products is seriously attempted, the active support of farm women should be diligently sought. The Saskatchewan poultry pool is a splendid example of what they can accomplish through their aptitude for intelligent co-operative effort.

Using the School House

In many country communities it is becoming more and more the custom to make use of school buildings for a variety of helpful purposes, in addition to that for which they are primarily intended.

Where no other building is available, the school house affords a convenient place for pleasant and profitable gatherings such as men's and women's clubs, boys' and girls' clubs, debating societies, singings, public speakings, entertainments and the like.

While practically every schoolhouse is utilized for some of these purposes, in many communities a complete winter program is planned, so as to make it a regular social centre, around which all neighborhood activities revolve.

This tends to foster a spirit of co-operation and neighborliness, which is extremely beneficial. With the advent of radio, these gatherings may have music and other features of broadcast programs to enliven the evening, at little expense.

By systematically using these means so readily at hand, the country school house may greatly contribute to the attractiveness of rural life.

Encouraging Crime

Carelessness and stupidity on the part of the victims is responsible for much of the thieving and swindling which has reached such alarming proportions in this country, amounting to many millions a year.

Some of the specific weaknesses of our "easy marks" are pointed out by a leading criminologist, who enumerates cashing checks for strangers, leaving automobiles unprotected, carrying unnecessary large sums of money, buying real estate without seeing it or investigating its title, investing in stocks and schemes without consulting a banker, trying to beat gamblers at their own games, lending money and extending credit to persons of doubtful honesty, and so on.

If people fail to exercise any caution whatever in these matters, no law or official action can effectively protect them from thieves, swindlers or dead beats.

While the punishment of criminals often occurs, it usually happens too late to do the victim any good, so far as recovering his money or property is concerned.

Honest people have it in their own power to greatly reduce losses from the above mentioned causes by merely exercising ordinary good judgment, instead of indulging in reckless practices which encourage crime.

A FLOWER GARDEN

(The following paper was given at a recent meeting of Morewood Women's Institute by Mrs. A. B. Allison.)

The one indispensible flower for early display of color in the garden is the tulip. The effect produced by a fine bed of tulips is at once striking and picturesque, as almost every variation of color is available. Tulips have no rivals in the presentation of brilliant color effects in the Spring garden and their easy culture makes them general favorites. They should be planted outdoors about the middle or latter part of October so that they may form their root growth before the ground freezes. The bed should have first a layer of horse manure, then a little sand under the bulbs to insure good drainage. Tulips should be planted 4 inches deep and 6 inches apart. Single Early Tulips bloom very early and last about two weeks. Double Tulips are very useful for bedding as they begin to bloom when the single Early Tulips are just over and thus bridge over the period before the Cottage and Darwins come into bloom. They make very showy effects in beds and have great lasting qualities. These, when cut for table bouquets, will live eight or ten days inside.

The Giant Darwin tulips are the most popular of all tulips, and are held in high regard by garden lovers everywhere. For mass effects among shrubbery, or for clumps in a perennial border they are unsurpassed. Among the most showy of the Dawins is the brilliant red with a blue base which grows from 2 to 3 feet in height.

Parrot tulips have peculiarly fringed and feathered edges and in addition to other colors combine shades of green, a peculiarity confined to this class.

Breeder tulips have large self-colored blooms many of them deliciously fragrant. They have the darker shades of brown and contrast effectively with the livelier colors of the Darwins.

Among other popular Spring flowering bulbs the Daffodils, Narcissi, Hyacinths and Crocus are favorites.

Following the Spring bulbs a perennial border will ensure a succession of flowers until Fall. Bleeding Heart and the Peonies follow the tulips. Peonies may be planted any time during the Spring or Fall, a new plant will not be at its best until the third year. Among hardy flowers for Canada peonies stand well in the foreground. Being particularly hardy they will stand our severest winter without injury. Peonies do well when planted in well-drained soil where they will receive full sun. Peonies are gross drinkers as well as gross feeders, consequently a liberal supply of water before blooming will do much toward finer blooms. When extra large flowers are desired remove the side buds as soon as they appear. This will throw all the strength into terminal bud.

The Iris is another plant which is easily grown, and which can now be secured in many shades, ranging from pure white to deep blues, violets and rose. The iris planted in clumps makes a beautiful border.

Perennial Phlox blooms all summer and far into the autumn. No other plant can compare with it in brightening the garden at a period when there is little else that can be depended upon. Practically all shades of color from pure white to deep violet are available. They should be planted in a fairly open situation and for besa results be well manured. One of the best lasting varieties is a brilliant orange-scarlet flower with a crimson eye. A border of this shade will provide abundant decorative display for a month or longer.

Lilies should have a place in your perennial border. One of the most showy, hardy types is the Tiger lily—which has rich orange flowers, spotted black, borne in large numbers on plants three to five feet high. These flower about the beginning of August. The lemon colored lily is a very hardy lily being long-lived and succeeding in almost any soil.

If you are planning to buy a new lily, get the Golden-rayed Lily of Japan. It can be purchased at Kenneth MacDonald's for 35c. It is so fragrant that a few blooms will perfume the whole garden. It has immense flowers eight to twelve inches in diameter. The flowers are white, spotted maroon with a bright yellow band through the centre of each petal. One lady who planted this lily last Spring had three healthy shoots bearing 17 blooms, the largest of which measured 8¼ inches.

Another valuable plant suited to our climate is Digitalis—or Foxglove ,—an old-fashioned dignified garden favorite, with handsome foliage and long recemes of flowers suggesting spires or bells.

Lupine is another lovely flower, also a perennial, and of course you will include the old garden favorite so stately for borders, the hollyhocks, especially the double varieties.

In order to carry a bit of your garden inside plan a dried bouquet. In it include hydrangeae, painted cattails or milk weeds, money plant and Japanese lanterns.

Debasing Cruelty

In many persons there appears to be a well defined inclination to cruelty, especially towards animals, upon which they inflict needless suffering without the slightest pity. In fact, many seem to take a fiendish delight in the agonies of unfortunate creatures.

To one of normal sensibilities, it is hard to explain this sort of depravity, which is often found among children, as well as among older persons. It must be a manifestation of animal instincts handed down from savage and brutal ancestors. Cruelty to animals indicates a certain baseness, which usually includes cruel propensities towards human beings.

Children should be taught early to avoid practices which tend to make them callous to the agonies of helpless creatures. It should be explained to them that when it is necessary to kill animals for food or for the safety of human life, it should be done as swiftly and humanely as possible; never with a desire to inflict pain.

Teachers in schools and Sunday schools might do a great deal more than is being done now in the way of humane education, while parents should especially observe and endeavor to correct tendences toward cruelty on the part of their children.

As Usual.

Teacher—Do we eat the flesh of the whale?

Scholar—Yes, ma'am.

Teacher—And what do we do with the bones?

Scholar—We leave them on the side of our plate.

There Are Two Seas---

There are two seas in Palestine. One is fresh, and fish in it. Splashes of green adorn its banks. Trees spread their branches over it, and stretch out their thirsty roots to sip of its healing waters.

Along its shores the children play, as children played when He was there. He loved it. He could look across its silver surface when He spoke His parables. And on a rolling plain not far away he led five thousand people.

The river Jordan makes this sea with sparkling water from the hills. So it laughs in the sunshine. And men build their houses near to it, and birds their nests; and every kind of life is happier because it is there.

The river Jordan flows south into anothes sea. Here is no splash of fish, no fluttering leaf, no song of birds, no children's laughter. Travellers choose another route, unless on urgent business. The air hangs heavy above its waters, and neither man nor beast nor fowl will drink.

What makes this mighty difference in these neighbor seas? Not the river Jordan. It empties the same good water into both. Not the soil in which they lie; not the country round about. This is the difference. The Sea of Galilee receives but does not keep the Jordan. For every drop that flows into it another drop flows out. The giving and receiving go on in equal measure.

The other sea is shrewder, hoarding its income jealously.

It will not be tempted into any generous impulse. Every drop it gets, it keeps.

The Sea of Galilee gives and lives. This other sea gives nothing. It is named the Dead.

There are two kinds of people in the world.

There are two seas in Palestine.—By Bruce Barton.

LEW BRADY'S PARTNER

(This is Lew Bradys story and it seems best to give it in his own words, with as few changes as possible.)

Along in October there was a new man came on the wrecking crew. His name was Wilson and he was as raw as beef on the hoof. The first night he was there, when the boys got around and gave him the usual dose of big yarns, he just sat on a bench with his eyes popping and his mouth wide open, letting them float down his throat. You can see the boys wouldn't like him any the better for this. And after a little while it got around that he had a pull,—his father was a superintendent or something on one of the western divisions,—and maybe then they didn't rub it into him. It was his own fault, as much as anybody's; he was easy and soft until he began to get onto the work a little, and then he turned cocky and got a sort of "I'm the General-Manager, who are you?" way about him. Don't think that this is going to be a history of Burt Wilson, for it isn't.

I had to take Wilson as a partner, for none of the other boys would. You see, there's a good deal of work can be done by two or three working together, and it goes better if the same ones generally do it, so they can get used to each other. "Dad" Burns believed in this. And it was natural that the boys that worked together should eat and sleep together more or less. It wasn't necessary, you understand, but it generally happened that way. I didn't like Wilson much better than the rest of them did, but I minded my own business pretty close, and I didn't need to listen much when he got to talking about himself. There were a good many little things to put up with; he had a way of forgetting things and muddling himself up. If I hadn't known it wouldn't do any good, I'd have told him what I thought of him. And then there were times when I thought maybe he'd outgrow himself and turn out alright. So we just kind of slid along, the best we could.

One night in November—just before Thanksgiving, it was—we were called to Huntville, fifty miles out, up on the old single-track branch. It was a mean sort of a night, not really so very cold, you know, but damp and raw, and your hands and feet would chill up quicker than in a real cold snap. There was snow everywhere, and more was coming down. I had to go out to couple the engine, and the snow was flurrving around in little stinging flakes.

I don't know whether I can explain the thing—how it happened, I mean—so you can understand it; but I can't do less than try. You see, most people are ignorant when it comes to railroads. I know all about it because when I was wiping in the round house I boarded over on the West Side, and a fellow there—he drove one of Field's wagons—that had always tried to make me believe he knew a heap about everything asked me if the joining iron" on an engine didn't sometimes get hot; and I didn't find out till he'd been talking a long time that he meant the apron all the time. You wouldn't think any man that was old enough to know a bullmoose from a hot box would ask such a fool question, anyhow.

Well, it was this way: Huntville isn't really much more than a long siding and a twelve-by-sixteen station—it's where the farmers bring grain to ship east, and there's a row of corncribs and a little receiving-house by the siding; take it any time it ain't a cheerful place, and on a winter night, with snow flying so you can't see fifty feet to make anything out, it's what I call gloomy. About halfway between the two switches there was a little drift; it wasn't bad at all, as drifts go, but there was a two-coach passenger local there with a hand-out of an engine—'72 model, I guess—that had tried to buck through it, and the bogies wheels of the engine (they're the little wheels in front) had slipped off the track.

That wasn't a very tough proposition. Dad had Bill McGee pull up behind the train, and he went ahead with a couple of patent frogs. Wilson and I were doing the switching and coupling in those days, and so we tumbled out. I knew what Dad wanted, clear as day (and, do you know, I hadn't found Dad near so hard to get along with as some of the boys made out; he expected to use your head and be square, that's all); I went up to couple our engine to their last car and sent Wilson back to tend the switch, for I saw we'd have to use the siding. Oh, hold on—maybe you don't know about patent frogs. It's when a truck has slipped off that you use them—they're just a piece of steel that you clamp over the rail so that one end slopes down to the ground. Then when you haul your car back the wheels run right up the slope and on to the rail, easy as you please. Well, pretty soon I saw Dad's lantern swing around, and it made a queer circle of light in the whirling snow. Bill McGee rang his bell and backed slowly, while I passed the signal onto Wilson I could see his lantern back there at the switch. There was a little bumping and scraping, up ahead, and then you could tell by the easy running that she was on the rails all right.

I caught the hand rail of the forward passenger coach and found Dad there too.

"We'll run her back on the siding so that Bill can buck through," he said. "Who's on the switch?"

"Wilson," said I.

He kind of grunted, but, "You'd better come back with us, Lew, and be ready at the upper end of the siding," was all he said.

By that time we were passing through the switch, where Wilson was standing, with his lantern under his arm and hands in his coat pockets. In a minute more we were slowing down, so I jumped off, hurried back and uncoupled the two trains. Then the local ran up on the switch, where there was some snow, but not so much as on the main track, for that was a drift. They only went up a little ways, and then they waited for us. Wilson closed the switch and we started up pretty lively. I climbed into the cab, where I could have something to hang on to, for I'd heard the boys tell how Bill McGee had away of slamming through drifts that was as likely as not to break every window in the caboose. Sure enough we went by the local, lying there on the siding, at thirty-five miles an hour, easy, and our big plow knocked that drift into rainbows. We hardly felt the shock.

We didn't get slowed down until we were past the upper end of the siding. I swung off and got back to the upper switch, as fast as I could, for I could see the lights of the other train—they all looked hazy through the storm—moving back on the main track. You see, their engineer hadn't the nerve to plow around the siding, which would have been the easiest way, for then they needn't have backed at all; but instead they just crawled back on the track, expecting us to take the switch backward and have the track cleared for them. But that wasn't so bad as it sounds, because, as I told, I had noticed that the drifts wasn't near so deep on the siding. So I opened the switch and signalled Bill to come on; and away down the track I could see Wilson's lantern waving the local to go ahead. I let our train out on the siding, then I closed the switch, and while I was running along the path of Bill's headlight, with my hand over my eyes so I wouldn't get blinded, the local went rattling by on her way up the line as lively as if she'd never jumped the track in her life.

We had to do a little more switching to get headed around for home. I rode on the pilot of the engine and handled the upper switch, and then all I had to do was to be carried around until we had come back on the switch from the other end and I could couple up to the caboose. We ran her home that way, wrong end to. I made a quick job of the coupling, signalled Bill, and jumped on Wilson would have time to close it after us and get aboard.

Now this ought to be the end of the story; but it isn't—it's the beginning. You see, most of the boys hadn't been needed at all, and those that had been had come right back and stretched out for a nap. After a year or two on the wrecking train a fellow doesn't care much what happens if he can only get his three meals a day and plenty of sleep. So now they were most of them snoring, except Dad, who was sitting at the little desk at the other end of the car, making out his report. You know how it generally is in a caboose, kind of dim and shadowy and smoky. I was sitting by the stove, with my chair on its hind legs and my feet up, when Wilson came in, slamming the door to keep out the snow, and then stamping and shaking out his clothes.

"Mean night, ain't it?" said he.

"That's true too," said I.

He hauled up a chair and put up his feet alongside of mine. We started to talk—I don't remember what about, only it seems to me he was a little more swelled-headed than usual, for you see switching seemed like mighty responsible work to him. If I remember right, I said something about the up-state freight just then. That was a through freight that would meet us at the Waterton siding, eighteen or nineteen miles away. It's no matter now what I said, only before I'd got the words out his feet dropped down as if somebody'd hit them, and the front legs of his chair came to the floor with a bang, and he sat staring into the fire with such a funny look on his face that I thought he must be sick. He had turned white, and his hand was shaking on the arm of the chair, and his head was kind of sunk into his shoulders.

"What's the row?" I said, not knowing what I ought to do. "Weather too much for you?"

He looked up at me with a funny weak sort of a grin that gave me the crawls.

"The switch—" he said, all husky and whispery. "I can't remember—I don't believe I closed it."

He looked as if he was going on, but he didn't; just stopped and gave me another one of those grins. Honest, I never in my life saw such a knock-out. It came to him all at once and took the starch clean out of him. I tried to find out about it, but I couldn't get another word out of him. So I just sat still and thought fast. It would be easy enough to tell one of the freight boys at Waterton; but then it struck me that, if we said a word to anybody, some one would get fired from the wrecking crew—for, if there's one thing a railroad man never gets a chance to do twice, it's playhorse with a switch. I took a look at Wilson, but he was no use—all done up and breathing heavy; he thought he was done for.

Now, you know, because I told you, that I hadn't much liking for Wilson; but when it comes to seeing a man thrown out of a job and maybe, as it likely would be with a kid like him, started on the down grade for keeps—well, I couldn't sit still and let him drop out without giving him a hand. maybe some folks are mean enough, but I ain't, and I'm not ashamed to say it. I never said another word, but just gabbed my hat and lantern and with a squint to see that Dad wasn't watching I slipped out the door, grabbed the hand rail and swung off.

Every time I think about it I'm glad there was snow on the ground that night. It was bad enough as it was, —I lost my cap, and smashed my lantern, and nearly caved in one shin,—but, if I'd had to take that forty-foot roll and slide and bump into the section house on rock ballast and the ends of cross ties, I wouldn't be here now; more like, if I was living at all, I'd be sitting on the sidewalk on State Street, without my arms or legs or anything selling pencils. The first thing I thought of when I got on my pins, was Wilson,—say, it's lucky for him I didn't have hold of him then for about three minutes. Then I remembered about the open switch and the up-state freight, and I started up the track for Huntville. There was no use looking for my hat in the snow, though I did poke around for a minute or so.

Im going to cut this short. I never tell it without getting riled up worse than Dad was the time the hoisting rope broke and dropped the express company's safe that he was lifting from the Valley View bridge wreck into the Rock River. You see, I had to walk a mile and a half in the face of a snow storm, without my cap or a lantern, to get to the siding, and then I found—well, I must have been about three rods from the switch when the wind let down for a minute, and there I saw a white light shining away as peaceful as you like, where I was looking for a red one. First I thought I was mistaken; but no, I got up to the switch and looked it over, and it was closed and locked as well as anybody could have done it.

It took me a minute to get it into my head that I'd had that tramp for nothing; and then I just sat down on a pile of spare ties and amused myself thinking up the names I was going to call Wilson when I got hold of him. I didn't say them, though when I ran across him next day, because when a thing's past and done, whats the use? Besides, when a man hasn't any more brains than Wilson had, you can't help being sort of sorry for him. Well, there it was,—another case of his getting balled up,—and there I was holding my handkerchief down over my head in place of my cap and wondering whether I'd sit still and freeze or walk around and freeze. (It wasn't really freezing cold, you know, but that's how it felt.) Pretty soon the freight came by, and the lights in her caboose looked mighty warm.

I don't know how long I sat there. It was hours, anyhow. And then the way freight came along, running slow, and I flipped on and gave the boys some kind of a yarn so they'd take me back to Chicago with them.

I showed up at the yards at nine o'clock next morning and reported to Dad. He was looking pretty cool.

"Well," he said, "where have you been?"

"I got left behind last night," said I.

He just looked me over, and said, "Lew, that ain't so. You started back with us last night. You go to your work. You've got a chance to stay on my crew if you behave yourself, but you've got to walk straight to do it."

I didn't say a word. But I was boiling up inside, and for a few weeks things wasn't very cheerful all around. You see, when the boss is down on anybody the boys get on to it in no time, and then they're pretty careful how they treat him. I don't exactly blame them; they're none of them any too sure of their own jobs. So I just kept my mouth shut and attended to business. But before long Wilson made some more breaks,—you see that sort always will,—and Dad laid him off—said he wasn't just the man for wrecking work, but he might do in some other line. Wilson was sore—he came around and told me all about it, and while he was there I made him pay for the cap I'd lost; but that pull of his came to the rescue, and the next time we hear of him he was firing on a passenger train on the Milwaukee division.

It was in February that the Valley View bridge disaster happened. That was an awful time; I don't like to think about it. It was cold, you know, and one of the cars stood right on one end in the river, with the other end up on the bank; and the ice was minding at it and breaking in the windows. I had to dive to the end of that car, inside it, pulling myself down under water by what was left of the seats. It seems to me I went down three or four times, but I don't remember much about the last time. And then I had fever and put in a few weeks at the hospital. The good thing about it was, it kind of cleared things up between Dad and me. He didn't come to the hospital,—didn't have the time, I suppose,—but the first day I was able to get down to the yards he heard about it and hunted me up and said some things I like to remember, for I know how hard it is for Dad to talk that way. Finally he said:

"Look here, Lew, what was it about that Huntville business?'

I just corked up and shook my head.

"Oh, it's all right," said he; "I guess you're afraid of hurting Wilson, aren't you?"

I must have looked surprised; but I needn't have, for Dad's got a good pair of eyes in his head, and he can size up a man about as quick as anybody.

"You needn't worry about Wilson, Lew. He's off the line long ago."

"Why," said I, "ain't he firing on the Milwaukee division?"

"Laid off two weeks ago for incompetency."

It didn't look to me that there was any good in keeping still then, so I told him all about it. Dad never laughs, but his eyes looked kind of funny for a minute.

"So that was it, eh?" was all he said.

Then we got to talking, and finally he asked me what it was I wanted to do.

"Well," I said, "I wish that firing job that Wilson had was still open.

He looked surprised.

"Why, that ain't any better job than you've got now, far as pay goes.',

"I know it," I said, "but this don't lead nowhere, and if I took that I might work up and get an engine some day." You see, I wouldn't have said this only I knew from the way Dad was talking he was a pretty good friend of mine.

He thought for a minute, then he said, "I guess that place is filled, Lew but if you're sure you want it I ought to be able to get you on an engine."

"I certainly do," said I.

I knew he wouldn't have said it at all if he hadn't meant business; and, sure enough, a little after the first of March I said good bye to the boys on the wrecking train and started in shoveling coal and polishing bright work for "Tommy Atkins," the old Englishman, one of the best engineers on the line—though I will say, for my part, I've seen mighty few men that for nerve and for getting the best out of an engine could beat Bill McGee.

Spots Before the Eyes.

In darkest Africa two natives were watching a leopard chasing a large fat white man.

"Can you spot the winner?" said one.

The winner is spotted',' retorted the other."

Father's One Best Bet.

"Is your boy Josh going to be a help to you on the old place?"

"I think so," answered Farmer Corntossel. "If he improves a little more on the saxophone he may get a job that will enable him to pay his board."

Magnanimous Generosity.

Johnnie (at lessons) : "What's magnanimous generosity, Father?"

Aberdonian: "Dinna ask me, laddie, we didna take thae subjects when I was a loon at the schule."

How Fires Start

If your home or business building burns down it will generally be due to one of six preventable causes, according to the National Fire Waste Council, which names these:

1, Improper building construction.

2 Defective wiring or other improper installation of equipment furnishing heat, power and lights.

3. Careless storage or handling of explosives and inflammable liquids.

4. Handling and use of nitro-cellulose films.

5. Accumulations of trash and rubbish.

6. Carelessness with matches and in disposing of cigar and cigarette butts.

With the exception of the first named, all the above causes of fires may be largely eliminated with little or no expense. Summed up, the fact is that at least two-thirds of the fires which destroy more than $500,000,000 worth of property and about 15,000 human lives each year may be traced directly to pure carelessness.

It is a terrible price to pay for stupidity and reckless disregard of danger.

TO A DOG POISONER

Mosfortune swift and dour and dire
Your soul o'erwhelm;
Be you condemned to stoke the fire
In Pluto's realm.
Like Dive's shriek from burning throat
For cooling drink, while devils gloat
To see you shrink and squirm and grin
While flames curl up your scorching skin.
And may the dog that guards the gate
To that dread place, forever howl
With drooping laps and grinning jowl,
Into your ears the combined hate
Of all dog lovers ever known
And joyful leap to hear you groan,—
This surse is human, dogs are kind
And do not keep their wrongs in mind.

His Unfortunate Client.

There was once a poor young barrister who was conducting his first case. He began something like this: "M'lud, ahem! M'lud, my unfortunate client, ahem! M'lud, my unfortunate client—"

He got no further. The judge scowled down upon him.

"Get on with it, Mr. Dash, get on with it," he admonished. "So far as you have gone the court is entirely with you."
