Mr. and Mrs. J.W. Weston, esteemed citizens of Morrisburg, were the recipients of the congratulations of their relatives and friends, when on Thursday, Aug. 29th, 1935, they celebrated quietly at their home, their 35th wedding anniversary. Mr. Weston, who for many years has resided in Morrisburg, is a native of Pittston, Grenville County, while Mrs. Weston, whose maiden name was Sarah Adella Dickey, was born in Dunbar, Dundas County, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Dickey. Mr. and Mrs. Weston were united in marriage at the old Dickey homestead west of Dunbar, by Rev. H. Carmichael, then pastor of Dunbar Presbyterian Church.

The members of their family comprise four young ladies, namely: Helen Alexandra, teacher at Kapuskasing Public School; Ruth Adella, B.A., a graduate of Queen's University; Mary Beatrice and Cynthia Blanche, twin sisters, fifth year students at the Morrisurg Collegiate Institute.

"The Leader" joins their many friends in wishing many more years of happiness.

RIVERSIDE W. M. S. MEETING

The W.M.S. of St. John's Lutheran Church, Riverside, met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Marcellus, Colquhoun, Thursday evening. The attendance was splendid. A special feature of the evening was the presentation of Life Membership pins and certificates to two faithful members, Mrs. Melvin Casselman, Riverside, and Mrs. Mathias Marcellus, of Aultsville. The Pastor, in his remarks, paid tribute to the work of these two ladies in years past, and based his words on the text, Matt. 16 : 24, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me". Mrs. Austin Salmon, President of the Society, presented the pins, which were in the form of a cross. Mrs. M.E. Schwerdtfeger, past-President, made the presentation of the certificates, while Mrs. John Casselman presented the honoured members with two beautiful bouquets of gladioli.

Plans were made for a weiner roast, to be held next Friday evening. Delegates for the coming Convention, which will be held in Kitchener Sept. 25 and 26, were appointed. They were: Mrs. H.A. Hayunga, Mrs. M.E. Schwerdtfeger, and Mrs. Austin Salmon. Alternates are Mrs. S. Schwerdtfeger, Mrs. H.R. Schell and Mrs. F. Casselman.

BEULA DUFFEY CONCERT

Review of Concert Played Monday Evening at the Chateau Waddington, Waddington, N.Y.

Following her appearance as soloist on Wednesday evening with Albert Stoessel and the Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra at Chautauqua, N.Y. The artist particularly excelled at this Concert in the Schumann Concerto in A Minor, to an appreciative audience of eight thousand music lovers.

At the Chateau Waddington, her program included the following numbers:

Brahms—Capriccio, B Minor.
Bach—Minuet, Jig from Bb Partita.
Grieg—Prelude, Anitras Dance.
Rachmaninoff—Polka.
Brockway—Humereske.
Chopin—Waltz Ab; Mazurka, F sharp minor; Two Etudes, F Minor and C Minor.

Each number was played by Miss Beula Duffey with clean-cut technique, and her interpretations were most convincing as to humour, pathos and the histrionic passages of the Masters were executed with ease. Her technical ability seems equal to Paderewski and Rachmaninoff, and with her charming personality, she is an outstanding star in the musical firmament. She was repeatedly recalled, and was most generous in her encores.

To those who were fortunate to hear and see Miss Duffey, engulfed in a profusion of gladioli and American Beauty roses, the setting formed a gorgeous background for her renditions, at times so tender and then again seething with emotions, one of the few grand musical entertainments of that order in this dis- The event will be remembered as trict.

The GREEN GHOST

SYNOPSIS

Maud Barron awakes with a premonition of disaster. She hears padding footsteps. Rushing into her father's study she finds him dead.

Dr. Sidney Foster, a friend, is joined by Detective "One Eye" Uttock, a mulatto, who has never lost a man.

Foster threw open the door of the cupboard and burst out to find himself entangled in a drapery that had been thrown over the door and roof of the cupboard. He tore it down. It was the portiere curtain that had been lifted and slung adroitly to blot out his view.

He ground his teeth at the simplicity with which he had been worsted. Who could have done this? Who was it who had heard the instructions that One-eye had given him in the drawing room? He had no time to consider this point for his gaze fell on something that had been laid on the table. It was the ruin of a photographic plate, cracked and split from end to end into innumerable pieces and placed on a sheet of white writing paper so that, even in its smashed state there still remained a possibility of observing that it was the plate from which the print had been taken. But no other print would ever be printed from those broken pieces of glass.

Dr. Foster drew a long breath. He did not touch the broken plate, but his lips set in a firm line as he tiptoed to the door and opened it. He thrust his head out. Nobody was about. He locked the door noiselessly and went downstairs.

One-eye was seated in the drawing-room, chewing gum calmly and unruffled. He looked up as Foster entered. The latter closed the door and advanced.

"It is there," he said, and told of his experience and the state of the plate.

The mulatto listened without a change of expression. His eye was fixed on the carpet for some time.

Then he rose and hitched his shoulders, and stared out of the window, thinking hard. Foster noticed for the first time that during periods of concentration the mulatto's single eye lost its usual keenness and became dim and vacant. He was completely absorbed in the problem that had presented itself; so absorbed that he did not hear Foster ask twice what was to be done. Several minutes passed thus. At last One-eye spoke in a husky, faint voice.

"Guess dere's no reason now why Missy Barron an' yo' doan sail f'r England in de Meridian, suh. Ah forgot t' tell you' dat de verdict ob de jury was one ob murder agen some pusson or pussons unknown. Yo' bettsh go up an' see Missy, suh, an' Ah'll hand ober de keys ob de house to de butler."

It sounded like a confession of failure to Dr. Foster and his face fell in disappointment. One-eye saw the effect of his words. He drew his fiddlewood cudgel from his sleeve and tapped it with a long forefinger.

"See dem notches, doc? Ebery one is f'r a man what thought hisself clevah. Ho, yus, bery clevah. Dem notches, doc, mean dat Ah nevah lost a man Ah set out t' get."

And something in the grim accent convinced Dr. Sidney Foster that there was not an atom of boastfulness in the statement.

Chapter VI

HUGHE'S OUTBURST

Before the Meridian sailed Foster had had a long conversation with the mulatto detective. One-eye, indeed, had come down to see the party off, and it was not so much what the mulatto had said as his manner of saying it that gave Foster condence that the mystery would be pursued to a solution. The local police authorities had assured Foster that they intended to continue their investigations and One-eye was to have his usual free hand to discover who, or what, had killed James Barron.

Every effort had been made by the authorities to trace the ownership of the gun, without avail. It was of a curious pattern, old fashioned, of French make, and its like could be seen here and there in Haiti swinging in the holster of a native colonel or general.

There was one thing that Foster carried in his luggage that he had never shown to Maud Barron nor to anyone else. This was a copy of the print which One-eye had thrown on the table at the inquest. The Mulatto had rescued the print in time to preserve the terrible features fairaccurately, but not very distinctly. The aid of a photographer had been called in to make the print permanent; and a copy of it had been given to Foster at his particular wish. He intended, when the opportunity presented itself, to show this print to Maud, and ask her if she could distinguish any characteristic.

The truth was that a lingering hope remained in Foster's mind that there might be some way of identifying this sinister face, for if, as her father had asserted, it was the face of the man with who he had quarrelled, the recognition could not lie in the greenish hue that Foster had noticed that evening when he saw it, nor could any human face have such devilish expression. The recognition must lie in some other point.

William Hughes, who was also travelling on the Meridian, was not more than civil to the doctor.

One evening when the Meridian had left the warmth of the tropics behind and had entered the colder regions in which rough seas and boisterous winds made her pitch and roll constantly, Hughes was leaning on the rail smoking his pipe and gazing across the grey, tumbling waters when Foster came on deck for the usual stroll. The two turned towards each other at the same moment and Hughes was constrained to bow; coldly enough, but the recognition caused Foster to stop.

"It is possible that you may be back in Jamaica before me, Mr. Hughes," he said, by way of opening. "That is, if you are coming out on the next boat—"

"Why do you think I may return on the next boat?"

Hughes turned and stared across the sea.

LIFE COMPLEX FOR MODERN WOMAN

Author Of Book On Machine Age Tells Of Present-Day Problems

TORONTO, — "The commonest form of recreation among women of all classes, married and unmarried, is perhaps clothes—a feature to be pondered upon," says Mrs. M. M. Kirkwood, author of "Women and the Machine Age," and assistant professor of English in University College. Other favorite forms of recreation she notes in a pamphlet recently published by the Social Service Council of Canada, are the "movies" or "talkies," the use of the motor car, and a growing interest in athletics and outdoor sports.

The pamphlet is the seventh in the series on "The Machine Age," and come to the conclusion that there is needed a new standard of social responsibility.

Mrs. Kirkwood sees a need for a new ideal of marriage and home life combining the new liberty (brought about by the introduction of machinery) with the old seriousness and sanity. The morality based on the knowledge of birth control and the equality of women in the marriage relationship is far ffrom mature yet, she asserts in stressing the responsibilities of home building and child training. Amusement as a sole aim in life will satisfy neither man nor woman, she believes, and for the normal fullfillment of human experience education for social relationships is needed as much as for vocations and academic success.

Eight-ounce Baby Lived For A Day

New York—An eight ounce baby girl died after an all-day struggle by five physicians and two nurses to keep her alive.

The tiny infant, whose birth was premature by 4½ months, was the first child of Patrolman Terrence Borelli, 29, and his wife, Marjorie, 26.

Physicians said the baby was normal in every respect save size. She measured 13 inches in length and had a head circumference of nine inches.

The infant, born at 6:25 a.m., was placed immediately in an incubator. Late in the afternoon she seemed to stop breathing, but after a series of injections and increased applications of oxygen she appeared to rally. At 6:45 p.m., Dr. Lester Samuels pronounced her dead.

Your Handwriting Tells Your Real Character!

By GEOFFREY ST. CLAIR
(Graphologist)
All Rights Reserved.

A correspondent sends me samples of the handwriting of several well-known film stars and asks me to analyse the writings for her. There is so much of interest in these analyses that I am making them the subject of a special article.

Perhaps you have wondered why many men have been led into the different pursuits in which they have gained fame and fortune? It is immensely interesting to think what might have been if different individuals had been born with traits of character that were entirely different from the real characteristics of their nature!

Many men and women are born into this world with definite talents and abilities, that they must learn in order to take full advantage of them. Some go through life and never even learn their proper talents while others find and develop them early in life.

Take the handwriting of John Boles, a well-known star. The dominant trait in his character is self-reliance. This is the quality that makes him depend only on himself for anything he wants done. He is not surly (quite the contrary) to his many friends, but, at the same time, he looks to one man only to get what he wants—and that man is himself.

John Boles could not be anything else if he desired—there is an independence of thought and action that will not allow him to think of help when he has a problem to face. He is close-mouthed about his personal affairs, and will usually have them solved before other people have heard about them. Decisive, quick-thinking—a man of action—John Boles.

Some time ago I analysed the writing of Ramon Novarro. This film star was very fortunate in finding his talent and making it the driving force of his life. His writing shows, as all those who have seen his films know, that he is a great dramatic actor—that he can interpret a role in a way that few people can even approach, but he has also another ability and another very outstanding talent with which he has won recognition—his ability in music. The rhythm and breaks in his writing show immediately to the handwriting analyst—a talent and appreciation of the musical arts.

You, my reader, may not have any tremendous talents like these well-known film actors. On the other hand, you may have some outstanding ability with which you could, if you recognized it, and cultivated it, acquire a good position or fill a particular niche in life. But you must understand yourself; you must realise the latent abilities within yourself and once recognizing these, set to work to make the most of them.

A graphological delineation will not invest you with particular powers or abilities; it will show you whether or not you possess some outstanding talent which you ought to cultivate. And it will show you to a greater understanding of yourself and your problems.

Would you like to know what talents you have? Do you wish to know what your handwriting tells about your character and that of your friends? Send specimens of the writing you want analysed, stating birthdate in each case. Enclose 10c coin for each specimen and enclose with 3c stamped addressed envelope, to: Geoffrey St. Clair, Room 421, 73 Adelaide St. West, Toronto, Ont. All letters are confidential and replies will be mailed as quickly as the volume of mail will permit.

Iceland Isn't Such A Cold Place

An Icelandic nurse, spending six weeks in Toronto, doing public health and hospital observation work for the Red Cross, is Miss Sigviduv Bachman.

Miss Bachman is a graduate nurse of University College Hospital, London, with post-graduate work in public health at Bedford College, England. She has come to Canada at the request of the Icelandic Red Cross Society, under the Exchange Committee of the Canadian Nurses' Association, to observe methods here and take back to the work in her native land, to which she returns in the fall, the benefit of her experience.

"The Icelandic climate is not nearly so severe as people think it is—it is modified by the Gulf Stream," Miss Bachman said, in an interview. "This year we had the best May we have had in years—much warmer than it was in England."

Schools close in May, not because of the heat, but on account of the short days in winter. People like to make the most of the summer and get the children off to the country for a long vacation. Some of the days in November and December do not have more than five or six hours of daylight, she added. "The housing is quite good—'stone' houses, we call them, mostly made of cement, with general heating, of coal, with furnaces." The State hospital, as well as the houses in that area are heated from the geyser, "the biggest hot springs in the world," she said. Most of the women and girls of Iceland are adopting the Western dress, although many of the older women still cling to their national costume.

Business Better Beatty Declares

Halifax.—Canadian business generally is benefiting by a sound, steady improvement which has been in progress for a considerable time, Sir Edward Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, said here recently as he stepped down from a special train which is carrying him through the Maritimes an an annual tour of inspection of company enterprises. The only cloud on Canada's industrial recovery front, the rail chief asserted, was in Western Canada, where crop prospects were indefinite and where there was no assurance that the 1935 yield would be readily marketed.

"Quinties"

Observes the Chicago Tribune.—And now it's happened! Horror of horrors! Whither are we drifting? Some of the eastern newspapers have already published the thing in streamer headlines: "First Birthday for the Dionne Quinties!" The very sound of the thing makes one grow pale and have severe shooting pains in the neck. Not content with such awful atrocities as "eatie snoppie" and "good nightie" and "alrightey" and "kiddies" and "okie", now we have to see that awful thing "quinties" staring us in the face every now and then. And next somebody will be changing Mother's day to "Muzzies' day." Quick, Watson, the needle!

STRING BEANS

String beans are now plentiful and they should be properly cooked to retain full flavour and colour and thus appeal to the appetite and give complete food value.

String beans of either green or wax varieties are a delight to the palate when well cooked. The method recommended by the Fruit Branch, Dominion Department of Agriculture is as follows:

Wash, remove strings and ends, and either leave whole or cut in one inch lengths. Allow a very small amount of salted water and cook beans in a closely covered saucepan for thirty minutes. Place over a low fire at first until some juice is extracted, then raise the temperature. All liquid should be absorbed when beans are cooked.

The use of different sauces makes for variety.

Beans with Tomato Sauce

3 cups beans
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup tomato juice
2 tablespoons flour
Salt and pepper

Cook beans in a little water so that practically all liquid is absorbed when they are tender. Then add butter, and when melted and well mixed through the beans, sprinkle the flour over, and stir over the fire. Then slowly add tomato juice, stirring well. Cook five minutes.

Bean Pickle

Prepare and cook beans as directed above. Make a pickle mixture using:

3 lbs. sugar
3 pints vinegar
2 tablespoons celery seed
2 teaspoons tumeric
1 cup mustard
1 cup flour

Heat vinegar, mix mustard, flour and spice in a little cold vinegar, add hot vinegar gradually; cook, stirring constantly until thick as cream; add beans, cook five minutes taking care that they do not stick to the kettle, or burn. Bottle and seal at once.

BREAKFAST SETS THE PACE

The food you give your family at breakfast will set the pace for the whole day—for we must never lose sight of the fact that a long time has elapsed since the evening meal the night before. Appetites will awaken at the sight of an icy cold half melon, filled to overflowing with golden, crisp corn flakes. This is delicious eating and a dish to give the family quick energy for work or play.

Toasties Melon Cup

Chill small ripe cantaloupe. Cut in halves, allowing one half to each serving. Remove seeds. Cut thin slice from bottom of each half so that cantaloupe will rest firmly on plate. Fill center with corn flakes. Serve with light cream and powdered sugar.

THE HUMBLE PICKLE

6,000,000 bushels cucumbers are required by pickle manufacturers annually to supply the normal demand.

The British Army and Navy recognize pickles as an essential part of a well-balanced ration.

The sugar content of sweet pickles has much food value.

The lactic acid contained in dill pickles is recognized by dietitians as an aid to digestion.

Sour pickles eaten by sailors on long sea voyages prevent scurvy.

Commander Byrd in his requisition for supplies for the Antarctic Expedition provided for a large supply of pickles.

A pickle added to a dry sandwich luncheon converts it into a palatable meal.

The aromatic aroma and flavor of pickles when eaten excite the gastric juices, which greatly aid digestion.

Dr. Woods Hutchison, the celebrated physician and dietitian, stated in the public press recently that pickles are loaded with vitamins, hence have pronounced food value.

The Hollanders consume large quantities of pickles and the Frauleins set great store by them for beauty's sake, as they improve the complexion.

Pickles are recommended by the eminent physicians of England, Holland and Germany, who recommend them as a remedy for dizziness and heartburn.

French physicians for many years have recommended pickles as a preventative of freckles and for clearing and heightening the complexion through their corrective action on digestion and the cleansing of the blood.

The further south you go, the more popular sour pickles are, due to the natural craving for the cooling and healthful action of the acid.

The calory value of sour spiced pickles is greater than that of apples, oranges, peaches, pears and three times the fuel value of bean soup, nearly double the value of spinach, asparagus, onions and other vegetables, also codfish and black bass.

(The above 14 points are based upon the very best medical authorities and statistics.)

EMERGENCY SHELF

Do you have an emergency shelf in your pantry? It's first aid to hospitality when some friend happens in unexpectedly, providing that extra company touch for a pot-luck meal. And when the man of the family telephones at the last minute that he's bringing someone home to dinner, it saves the terrors of being unprepared.

In stocking the emergency shelf choose only the best canned meats and vegetables, fruits and condiments. They require less time dressing up.

Plan definitely, too, just how each article will be used in the emergency. You may have a rainiature grocery store at your elbow, but without a variety that will prove adequate for a well-balanced and appetizing meal, the emergency shelf won't be of the help it should be.

The shelf should contain the makings of a full meal—soup, meat, vegtables, salad and dessert. Though all need not be used for the same meal.

Keep a can of nut meats ready to use, a tin box of marshmallows, a tin of extra fine salad wafers, a bottle of olives, a jar of mayonnaise and a package of long-keeping variety of cheese.

Home-made catsup or chilli sauce added to the mayonnaise will make a Russian dressing to serve with head lettuce for a dinner salad that nearly everybody likes. Or nuts and olives finely chopped may be combined with cheese and made into tiny balls served on lettuce leaves. The salad wafers lightly buttered and toasted add much to any salad and are particularly acceptable if the portions are small.

Salmon, tuna fish, crab meat, shrimp, boned chicken, ham or corned beef will solve the luncheon salad, or may be made into delicious hot dishes.

Canned soups, of course, are invaluable. Some need only to be reheated while others must be diluted with milk or water.

Macaroons keep almost indefinitely in tightly closed cans. Many varieties of canned puddings and quickly mixed packages of dessert that are delicious and easy to use and quickly prepared.

Last, but not least, replace each item from the shelf as you use it—or the emergency shelf will be useless.

WHEN A MAN LAYS THE TABLE

It is very seldom that a man tells us what he really thinks about the way the table at which he takes his meals is arranged. Usually he accepts his wife's taste in the matter unquestioningly.

But does he like it? I wondered that as I walked round an exhibition of table-setting at which men architects and designers were responsible for one or two tables each.

Two well-known architects flatly refused from the first to allow any cloth or mats to be used. The were Wells Coates and Frederick Gibberd, the latter only 27, and therefore very modern in his ideas.

His choice was a set of cream yellow china with a pale grey flower and a dull red circle. It stands on a walnut tabe edged with sycamore; the latter wood, like the tweed-covered chairs, harmonising with the color of the china.

Wells Coates chose "curves" Round plates and oval dishes with concentric circles of green and silver stand on a walnut table with rounded edges and curved legs.

One of the most interesting tables was arranged by Oliver Hill, who was the architect of five sections of the British Art in Industry Exhibition at Burlington House.

Its motif was diagonal lines, its color green and silver. The corners of the table were cut diagonally to correspond with the position of the oblong glass ashtrays, while the centrepiece was a set of four oblong glass dishes, filled with the heads of white flowers and ingeniously placed side to side.

As on other masculine tables, an ashtray was placed at each corner. Hostesses, please note!

Most men, apparently, like low centrepieces and tall candles. Mr. J. Emberton, architect of the new Olympia, is an exception. On a walnut table, again without mats, he sets jasmine china with orange and gold bands, two very tall candles, and a large centrepiece of china flowers, standing on mirror glass.

COSTUMES FOR AUTUMN SHOW MUCH BLACK

Although there are incidental colors which attract the attention, the big story for autumn is black, in simple little school girl dresses which are smart for daytime wear, in chic little suits of lightweight woollen which are of the type every woman could wear, in soft afternoon frocks which contrast dull and lustrous sides of a novelty pin point jacquard. Black suits in velvet are brightened by flat collars of gilet or ermine and flowing fullness at front is an interesting quality of black afternoon dresses.

Breaking into the clever parade of smart blacks are tweeds which tend to such off shades as bois de rose, a light prune, grayed to the fur trimming, a wisteria shade in novelty woollen and black and white mixtures which give various tones of gray.

In trimming and combinations there are brighter tones, velveteen blouses and scarfs with tweed suits, velvet trimmings on black frocks in such bright hues as ruby red and sapphire. Deep gold bracelets are another bright trimming which offsets the somberness of a black frock, sometimes with the response of a golden brooch. One black frock opens coatwise over an underdress of bright satin and the little suit costumes introduce the pipings of velvet which are a feature of this season.

Sunday School Lesson

PAUL (WORKER WITH HAND AND BRAIN). — Acts 20:33-35; Phillippians 4:4-13. GOLDEN TEXT.— In all things I gave you an example, that so laboring ye ought to help the weak. Acts 20:35.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

TIME and PLACE. — The actual dates for the various events in the life of the Apostle Paul have proved a subject of wide disagreement. Harnack places the conversion of Paul in 30 A.D., and his death in 64 A.D. Ramsay makes the two dates, respectively, 32 A.D. and 67 A.D. Probably his death occurred 66 or 67 A.D. Paul was born possibly three or four years after the Lord Jesus was born. The places of his labor are too numerous to enumerate here.

"I coveted no mint silver, or gold or apparel." Thus was Paul free from all suspicion or false accusation concerning money matters in all the collections which were taken for the poor, and in the matter of his own support.

"Ye yourselves know that these hands ministerd unto necessities, and to them that were with me." Cf. 1 Cor. 4:12. As he held his hands up, they saw a tongue of truth in every seam that marked them.

"In all things I gave you an example, that so laboring ye ought to help the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, that he himself said, It is more blessed to give than to receive." This is the only saying of Jesus recorded in the New Testament not to be found in the Gospels.

"Rejoice in the Lord always: again I will say, Rejoice." To rejoice in the Lord does not mean that a man is to be insensible to sorrow and distress, to suffering or to sin, either in his own life or in the lives about him; but it does mean that these dark realities will not be allowed to master him, nor to blind him from the radiance which streams from the face of his living Lord.

"Let your forbearance be known unto all men." The word here translated forbearance means that disposition which is opposed to a spirit of contention and self-seeking. "The Lord is at hand." The lesson for all of us is not that the Lord is coming, which is true, but because the Lord is nigh, his presence is with us.

"In nothing be anxious." The word here translated anxious comes from a word meaning to divide, to separate, to pull apart. An anxious heart is one which is divided and torn in its division. "But in everything by prayer and supplication." The first word refers to the general offering up of the wishes and desires to God; the second implies special petition for the supply of wants. "With thanksgiving." No greater barrier to progress in prayer can be set up than ingratitude to God. "Let your reuests be made known unto God." This is the only abiding, permanent cure for anxiety. Tell it to the Lord in prayer.

"And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding." The innermost tranquillity caused by contact with him, blended by his Spirit into ours, the peace which transcends all mind, for no reasoning can explain its nature and its consciousness. "Shall guard your hearts and your thoughts in Christ Jesus." The word here translated guard means to protect by a military guard, i.e., to post sentries at the gates to protect a city from invasion.

"Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honorable, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." The last phrase, if there be any praise, does not mean only the commendation of others, but it describes moral approbation, whether of kings or of men, or even of God. Such high thinking cannot fail to result in nobility of character and worthy deeds.

"The things which ye both learned and received and heard and saw in me, these things do." Here, as often, Paul commends his own life and practice to his converts as an example which they are to follow, and, when every minister and teacher can support his words and writings by an acknowledged sincerity of life, the power of his teaching is tremendously multiplied. "And the God of peace shall be with you." Wherever you go, whatever you do, down deep below the surface.

"But I rejoice in the Lord greatly, that now at length ye have revived your thought for me." Literally, you shot forth (as a branch) thought in my behalf. "Wherein ye did indeed take thought, but ye lacked opportunity." Lightfoot translates it "in which ye did indeed interest yourselves. Paul's purpose in writing the Philippians really was to thank them for their kindness to him, but many other things were so much on his heart that he postpones this material matter to the end of the Epistle.

"Not that I speak in respect of want: for I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therein to be content". "I know how to be abased." In classical Greek this verb is used of the failing of a river in drought. "And I know also how to abound: in everything and in all things have I learned the secret of both to be filled and to be hungry, both to abound and to be in want." He is able to be calm and confident in the midst of the most disturbing circumstances.

"I can do all things in him that strengtheneth me." This is only one of the many phrases found in Paul's letters which reveal him as one mastered by Christ.

A scientist discovers that the slowest thinkers live longest. That the kind of proposition that cannot be proved on a busy highway.

Little Man, You'll Have A Dizzy Day

One black morning you waken with a woolly brain and limbs that ache.

Some mysterious force pulls your head back every time you try to raise it from the pillow.

Dizzily you go through your ablutions, and at the breakfast table you are oblivious of the shining morning faces, the newspapers, the letters, or the friendly little wag of the dog's tail.

The bacon and eggs, the coffee, the toast, what are they to you? Black spots fly across your eyes, cold shivers play scales on your spine, and sweat pours into your palms.

The mirror will tell you why it was wrong to eat mayonnaise at midnight.

Those eyeballs, tinged with yellow, that sallow cheek, that tongue that looks as if it had been out all night in the frost—all these indicate that the liver is literally fed up with you and your silly ways of fatty feeding.

The sooner you realize that you must swear repentance the better. Begin by taking a large dose of salts, and follow this up by pints and pints of pure cold water at regular intervals. Refuse every form of food, even milk, and go away to some spot where you can be like the great Garbo, alone.

By evening you will feel less like a man under sentence of death and more affable towards a pork chop.

But touch neither crumb nor crust until next morning, when you will realize the good that has been done by salts, starvation and solitude.

News And Information For The Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Preventing Bees from Swarming

Work done by the Bee Division of the Dominion Experimental Farms has shown that the desire of bees to swarm may be suppressed to the minimum by eliminating the exciting causes. This is done by keeping every colony headed by young and vigorous queens, by providing sufficient space for maximum brood production and storage of nectar at all times, by using only good drawn comb in the brood chambers, and by providing shade for the colonies during the hottest part of the summer or proper ventilation for the hives.

Cleaning the Hen House

At this time of year, hen houses should e thoroughly cleaned, disinfected, and whitewashed. At the Poultry Division, Central Experimental Farm, the following whitewash mixture has been used with good results:

Slake ½ bushel of lime with boiling water, strain and add 1 peck of salt, dissolved in warm water. Put 3 pounds of ground rice in boiling water, and boil to a thin paste. Dissolve ½ pound of powdered Spanish whiting and 1 pound of clear glue in warm water. Mix all these well together and let stand for several days. Keep over a portable furnace and apply hot with brushes.

Water for the Poultry

Extremely warm weather often causes heat prostration among poultry, therefore an abundant supply of clean, fresh water should be available to the growing and laying flock. Since water makes up 66 per cent. of an egg, its use is imperative. Cleanw ater is necessary, not only from the standpoint of sanitation, but also to help control egg flavour.

At What Stage of Maturity Should Crops be Harvested?

Experiments by the Field Husbandry Division of the Dominion Experimental Farms, show that crops cut at the following stages give highest yields of best quality:

HAY—Alfalfa one tenth in bloom, red clover full bloom, timothy when the bloom has fallen, grain for hay when the kernels are in the milk stage.

GRAIN—All grain crops should be cut when the kernels are firm and before the heads are too easily shattered.

SILAGE—Corn late dough, sunflowers 50 per cent. in bloom, red clover full bloom, alfalfa full bloom and wilted 5 hours after cutting, oats and peas when oats are in the dough stage.

ROOTS—As late in the fall as possible.

POTATOES—When the tops are all dead.

Weaning the Lambs

Lambs should be weaned at about 5 months of age. The practice of letting the lambs wean themselves is to be discouraged since it prevents the mother getting a well deserved rest before the mating season, which is necessary for her health and vitality.

Young weaned lambs should have the run of some good fresh pasture. A good after-math or a piece of rape that has been sown in the spring will be greatly enjoyed by them. Such a pasture is necessary to avoid a check in their growth as a result of the loss of their mother's milk. It will also help to prevent parasitic infestation, so detrimental to growing lambs.

Cutting Soybean Hay

With an increasing number of farmers growing soybeans for hay, it is important that growers should cut the crop at the proper time. Soybeans for hay should be cut when the pods are about half filled out. The most desirable combination of quality and feed value is obtained at this stage. Cutting should be done with the mower in the morning after the dew is off. It is usual to leave the crop in the swath for a day, or until the leaves are thoroughly wilter, then rake into windrows and allow to cure. Or it may be left two or three days in the windrows and then put into small cocks. The hay should be thoroughly cured before hauling, and handled in such a way as to preserve the leaves as much as possible.

Early Topping of Turnips

The practice of "topping" turnips some weeks before the date of pulling, in order to use the leaves while still green in thee feedgin of live stock, has been common in certain parts of the Dominion, and the question whether it is an economical operation or not has been settled by practical demonstrations. The data obtained showed that turnips from the non-topped crops had the higher food value. The inquiry also furnished satisfactory evidence of the marked growth of the untopped crop during the latter weeks of the season, the leaves during this period continuing to function as lungs and stomach, resulting in a heavier yield. The practice of topping the crop three weeks or a month prior to the date of pulling has shown to result in a lower yield per acre of nutrients, and is therefore non-economic.

Some Poultry Parasites Easily Controlled

At this season, red mites and body lice frequently cause serious loss in production, deaths may follow a bad infestation among both the young and the old stock, and considerable time and care may be required to bring the flock back into condition after the trouble has been located.

Carelessness or unsanitary conditions are usually responsible for the presence of these pests. They thrive on dirty hens and multiply rapidly in filth if it is allowed to accumulate in corners or cracks and crevices of the henhouse.

Lice live entirely on the body of the bird, and irritate by crawling and biting. Their eggs are laid at the base of the feather, usually around the vent or under the wing. Fortunately, they are easily controlled and by using ordinary precautions, the flock may be kept free and clean. The usual practice at the Experimental Station Harrow is to apply Blue Ointment, which can be obtained at any drug store. A portion of blue ointment about the size of a pea is smeared between the thumb and first and second fingers, and rubbed in around the vent and at the base of the wing close to the body. One thorough application when the birds are being placed in their winter quarters is usually sufficient to keep them clean for the year. However, the birds should be examined at intervals because a reinfestation may occur during hot weather.

The red mites do not stay on the birds constantly. As a rule they spend the day in some crack or crevice or on the underside of the roosts, preying on the birds at night by piercing the skin and gorging themselves with blood. The control is comparatively simple. A solution of 1 to 3 crude carbolic and kerosene or one of the good coal tar preparations usually used as a disinfectant may be applied with a brush to the dropping boards, roosts and nests after they have been thoroughly scraped and cleaned. In the case of a bad infestation, when the mites have migrated to all parts of the house, a thorough cleaning and spraying with one of these agents will be necessary and should be repeated after an interval of two or three days.

ELMA MISSION BAND

The regular monthly meeting of the Elma Mission Band was held on Saturday, August 11th, in the United Church there. Following the business part of the meeting, taken by the president, Leda Burton, reports were given by the mite box convenor, Lila Merkley; world friends convenor, Miriam Wallace; treasurer, Joye Dillabough, and sick visitors committee, Lois Robinson and Miriam Wallace. Worship was conducted by the leader of the Band, and a story entitled "The Legend of Saint Christopher," was then told by Mrs. Woodwark, a visitor to the Band. The meeting closed with the prayer, 'Our Father".

FAITH IN HUMANITY

Chinese laundryman in Bronxville, N.Y., went for a holiday and left a note in the window telling people to get their laundry as the door was not locked. We doubt whether this gentleman has been thoroughly civilized and Christianized since coming to this country. — Stratford Beacon-Herald.

PAINTING BARNS

After a lapse of five full years, Canadian farmers are beginning to paint their barns again. There is no general rush, but here and there through most of the mixed farming areas, examples are readily noted. While important enough in itself in view of the immense area to be covered in familiar red, green or white, the significance of the return of barn paint is that it means the first real indication of a return of permanently better times to Canadian agriculture. — Financial Post.

GOOD SALESMAN

If the large number of people who have visited the Canada Shop in London since its opening last week is maintained until the date of closing, the promoters should be more than pleased with the publicity given to Canadian food products through this practical advertising medium. On Saturday last the number of visitors was checked. No fewer than 2,300 passed along the counters and inspected the food stuffs. The majority of them purchased samples, as a result of which it is reasonable to anticipate enhanced sales by retailers in the locality and in such other localities as were represented by the visitors. — Canada's Weekly, London.

FARM PRICES RISING

The most satisfactory year for livestock production since 1930, is the report made by a packing company.

There are many other evidences of this condition. Prices in all lines of livestock have advanced a long way from the low point registered about four years ago. The same thing applies to most of the other minor products of the farm — dairy produce, poultry and eggs, and all the many products from which the well-anaged farm derives much of its revenue. — Winnipeg Tribune.

PITY POOR MOTORIST

Hard is indeed is the lot of the drunken motorist who gets caught. Most courts will fine him $10 to $25, occasionally give him ten days in jail, and sometimes actually deprive him of the privilege of driving a car for as such as a few months. And all of this simply because he deliberately placed a large number of fellow citizens in danger of instant death or of the loss of limbs or of horrible and painful lacerations. — Toronto Telegram.

A DEFENDER OF MODERN GIRLS

No hankerer after a period sometimes referred to as "the good old times" is, apparently, Mr. Lloyd George who, in spite of years that are occasionally considered rather advanced, is sufficiently youthful in spirit and outlook to refrain from the fault-finding in regard to the rising generation of which older people are so often guilty.

Far from bemoaning what he finds in modern youth, the former Prime Minister evidently considers that it is quite all right, at least the feminine part of it. He said so the other day when he (a product of the Victorian era) denounced it as "prim and grim" and remarked that he preferred the modern girl and the education which makes her what she is. "The old academies for young ladies—they were not girls in those days," he went on to say, "at best were an expensive joke, and at their worst they were an atrocity." — Brockville Recorder and Times.

LEPROSY IN CANADA

Leprosy is waning in this country and as Dr. Murray MacLaren said when Minister of Health, the danger of contagion is very much exaggerated. But Dr. C. P. Brown, chief of the division of quarantine and medical immigration for the Dominion, if he is being properly quoted, goes much further. The idea that a healthy person can get leprosy by touching a leper is "mere nonsense," he said. "No doctor or nurse treating lepers has ever been known to fall prey to the disease." Then he adds the more astonishing statement: "A native Canadian never has been known to contract the disease." — Moncton Times.

KNEE PLUS ULTRA

Paris reports that the season's first Winter style showing at Chanel's this week revealed the feminine knee. You may remember that joint, it was much in evidence before the depression. Then, along with stocks and things in general, skirt hems came crashing down. For the past five years it has been discreetly concealed almost everywhere except in the nudist camps.

May there not be an outside chance that business and fashions are related in some way or another? Certainly, business is looking up. And now skirts are apparently following suit. Chanel has chopped off three inches at one stroke, an upswing as convincing as anything provided by economists' charts.

When the coy patella once more blossoms forth in all its pristine perfection we shall perhaps known the corner has been turned and that we are again to find ourselves knee-deep in prosperity. — Windsor Star.

SUN TANNERS BEWARE!

Intense sunlight has the same effect on the body as it has on the top of an automobile. It causes dehydration and premature wrinkling. —Hamilton Herald.

LESS RELIEF AT THE SOO

There are one-third fewer families on relief in the Sault at the present time than there were a year ago, the figure now being about 400 compared to 600 at the end of July, 1934.

That is a welcome improvement in conditions, and contrasted to the figure of over 1,500 families on relief in May, 1933, shows a steady gain since that time.

This is due to a large measure to the betterment of industrial conditions here, resulting from the reorganization of the steel plant and from the general advance in business and employment throughout Canada.

There are indications, too, that things will continue to improve unless some untoward event happens to cause the present trend to be upset —Sault Ste. Marie Star.

WAS COSTLY LESSON

Twenty-one years ago — June 28, to be exact — a Bosnian youth fired a shot into Europe's powder box and set the world on fire. The nightmare that followed resulted in the death of 10,000,000 soldiers and 13,000,000 civilians, in 20,000,000 maimed, in dollar losses of 500,000,000,000. Every nation lost, and every nation still is paying for its defeat, says the Pittsburgh Press.

On the surface, the world appears to have forgotten the frightful lessons of 1914-18. Yet, has it?

Viscount Cecil has made public in London the results of a great peace referendum. The English electorate voted 11,000,000 to 335,000 for Britain to remain in the League of Nations; 10,000,000 to 800,000 for a general arms reduction; 10,000,000 to 700,000 for taking the profit out of arms traffic; 10,000,000 to 600,000 to apply economic pressure to attacking nations. Here was a popular vote for law and peace voice, as Lord Cecil said, in "passionate intensity."

When the masses are willing to fight the warmakers as passionately as they have been fighting imaginary enemies, the sword-rattling rulers of earth will find themselves without armies to fight and without taxpayers to pay for their follies.— St. Catharines Standard.

HARDER TO MARRY

It is harder for young men to marry now than it was years ago, according to the United States Commissioner of Education, owing to the broader outlook of women. He holds that marriage is not very attractive to many of these bright modern girls—certainly not so attractive as to their grandmothers. They have the alternative choice of careers and consequent independence. — Kingston Whig-Standard.

ABUNDANCE OF CROPS

Nature has been good to Canada this year. Right across the Dominion from Nova Scotia to British Columbia there are bountiful crops. It is doubtful if Ontario, and particularly Western Ontario, ever had such abundance of crops. Hay, wheat, oats, corn, vegetables, fruit, everything grown in this fertile peninsula will have yields above the average. — London Free Press.

THE EMPIRE

It was revealed last week that the donor of the Anonymous Education Fund for the children of officers of the Royal Air Force, which, since 1928, has expended nearly £4,000, was the late Mr. T. E. Shaw — Colonel Lawrence of Arabia. The fund was financed by the money received from the publication of Lawrence's book, "Revolt in the Desert."

The decision to make this fact known was reached at a meeting of the council of the Royal Air Force Benevolent Fund over which Lord Wakefield presided.

In a letter to the Press Lord Wakefield said:

"Mr. T. E. Shaw allowed himself no share in the financial success of his book, 'Revolt in the Desert,' and £15,000 received from this source was invested, so as to establish an educational fund for the benefit of the children of officers of the Royal Air Force.

"The Anonymous Education Fund, as it has always been known in deference to his wishes, has since 1928 expended nearly £4,000; during 1934 alone it was able to provide £795 towards the education of 42 children, the majority of whom are fatherless."

In future, Lord Wakefield said, the fund will be known as "The Lawrence of Arabia Educational Fund." — London Times.

Value of Advertising Shown By Actual Test With Product

NEW YORK,—Advertising doubles the number of persons familiar with a brand, triples the number who try it and quintuplets the number of users.

These figures are averages from a study of bond paper made by Charles C. Stech, research expert in advertising. Actually the scanty advertiser gets a smaller rate of return than his average, while the big one gets an increase much greater.

Stetch studied the use of 27 brands of bond paper by printers. He learned the percentage familiar with each brand, the percentage who tried out each one and the percentage who became regular users.

There were three brands of paper know to more than 75 per cent of the printers. Of these 72 per cent tried out the three brands and 20.4 per cent were regular users of them.

At the bottom were seven brands of paper, known to 14 per cent of the printers. Six per cent had tried them out and less than half of one per cent of these printers used the seven.

When the average of persons knowing about the brands was raised to 35 per cent, in a different group of bond papers, the trials rose to 15 per cent but the regular customers rose only a tenth of one per cent.

But when the papers were reached known to 50 per cent of the printers the users rose to nine per cent.

Above that came the phenomenal jump to 20.4 customers in the topmost three kinds of bond paper.

The study showed an unusually large increase in steady customers when nearly everyone was familiar with the brand. No saturation point was revealed. The highest single brand was known to 96 per cent of the printers, and apparently its regular users were far greater in proportion than those of any of the lesser known papers.

To Get Inside Story Of Asylum Reporter Patient Seven Days

"SEVEN DAYS IN THE MADHOUSE"

The above banner line appeared recently on the Chicago Daily Times front page, referring to the experience of Frank Smith, Daily Times reporter, who spent seven days and nights in an asylum. The sensational story was the result of Smith being "committed" to the Kankakee, Ill State Hospital.

For the occasion Willis O'Roarke, another Daily Times reporter, became Smith's "brother," and committed his to the state insane hospital, following the receipt of numerous complaints by the Daily Times that conditions were particularly bad at the Kankakee institution. To ascertain conditions, Smith, a former college football player and life guard, who tips the scales at 200 pounds, was asked to do a series of articles. In addition to interviewing officials and other persons, he undertook to spend a week as an inmate in the hospital.

His story of brutal treatment, being subjected to unsanitary conditions, including 15 hours in a tub of dirty flowing river water to cure his feigned violence, is appearing in a series of articles this week. The Daily Times' circulation jumped nearly 10,000 yesterday, as a result of the story, according to Louis Ruppel, managing editor.

All marks of identification were removed from Smith's clothing before he and O'Rourke set out for Kankakee. In relating his struggle with hospital attendants preparatory to being subjected to the "water treatment," Smith states:

"With something like pardonable shame I have to admit here and now that if I could have made myself heard, I would have given up unconditionally. I'd have confessed to everything. To hell with the investigation. To hell with the job."

After being released from the hydrotherapy ward, Smith participated in the routine of a patient, subjected to the common drinking cup, vile food and general over-crowded conditions. He said in his story he particularly criticized over-crowded conditions.

World Weary

Lay me down in the arms of Sleep,
in the comfort of her breast,
For I am weary of all but her and fain would be at rest.
Hide me close from the cares that haunt the futile, waking hours,
And round and over me shed the scent of unremembered flow-
'rs.

Bid the darkness to fold me, the stars to veil their light,
And mute the pulse of eternal life—the music of the night.
Hush the murmur of waters' flow,
and let there be no song,
But only an untouched silence in a night deep and long.

Send me nought but oblivion: no thought, no dream, no pain;
Whisper not through the darkness
that I must wake again,
But lay me down in the arms of
Sleep, over and ever blest,
For I am weary of all but her,
and fain would be at rest.
—Angela K. Dawes.

It is vain to gather virtues without humility; for the Spirit of God delighteth to dwell in the hearts of the humble.—Erasmus.

Marriage Makes For Long Life

According To Statistics Those Who Are Wed Live Longer Than Those Whose Lot Is Single Blessedness

There are nearly 6,000 marriages every week in England; 857 a day, or nearly thirty-six an hour! A careful analysis of the British Registrar-General's latest review shows that, on an average, thirteen out of each 857 marriages will end in the Divorce Court. Superstitious people, please take note. That dreaded number thirteen.

Consider, though, how small a percentage thirteen in every 857 represents. Immediately someone is divorced all the old tales about six-month marriages are dug out and paraded with much shaking of heads. It's so unfair. Divorce is not nearly as popular as some people would have us believe. Roughly, about 1½ per cent. of our marriages end in divorce. A very small proportion surely?

"People can't afford to marry young today—they leave it till later in life." "We are marrying later." How often have you heard those remarks? They have no foundation in fact.

PEOPLE MARRY EARLY

Let us take you back to the Registrar-General. His accuracy is quite ruthless, his figures unquestionable. And what do we find? Out of 307,000 marriages in 1932 over 5,000 men married before they were twenty, 13,000 married under twenty-one and another 150,000 by the time they were twenty-six. These figures of course, concern bachelor bride-grooms. Thus, more marriages in England take place at or under the age of twenty-six than at any other time. Why tell us then, that men have ceased to marry young? Twenty-six is barely a bath-chair age.

With spinster brides it is the same: 47,000 married before they were over twenty, 49,000 under twenty-one and 161,000 before they were more than twenty-six.

The average age of the bridegroom today is twenty-seven, and of the bride twenty-five. Youthful enough.

Incidentally, there has been little variation in this average for the last thirty years. Between 1901 and 1905 the actual average was 25.37 for spinster brides, and 26.90 for bachelor bridegrooms.

Extremely youthful marriages still occur. In 1932 sixteen men were married at the age of sixteen, and over 5,000 before they were twenty. With women no fewer than 758 were married at sixteen, and 28,000 before they were twenty.

At the other extreme 1,811 men and 694 women married between the ages of sixty-five and sixty-nine. To cap even that — eighty-six men and ten women married when they were past eighty.

Which is the most dangerous year of wedlock? People talk learnedly from experience, of the seventh with its entire lack of glamour and romance, its dreaded monotony. Or perhaps they will warn you against the first.

Examined in the cold light of facts and figures, both seem wrong. More marriages are wrecked in the tenth year than at any other time.

Unions to the number of 1,04 which had lasted between five and ten years were dissolved in 1932, and 1,442 of between ten and twenty years' duration. Only ninety-five sought separation after less than two years, and under 450 after more than twenty years. So scrap your fears about the notorious number thirteen and beware of matrimonial bickerings in the tenth year of marriage.

Doctors often advise their patients to get married. "It is man't natural state." they say, "and the one in which he is likely to be most healthy." Very true. Statistics wholeheartedly support that view.

A comparison of length-of-life and marriage statistics reveals the fact that married people live longer, on the whole, than unmarried.

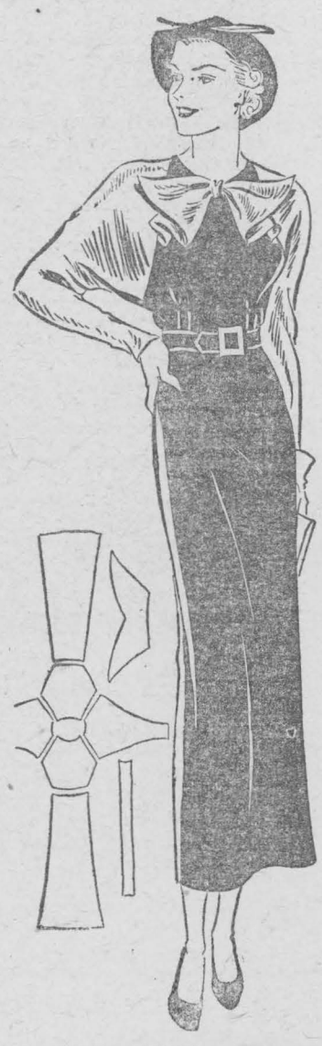

BRIDEGROOM'S AGE — 88 !

We hear much talk of second marriages these days. Certainly they are becoming more popular. It is argued, very reasonably, that people who have married and failed once are not likely to make the same mistakes if they marry a second time. In 1932 some 14,50 widows married again, 6,800 to bachelors and 7,700 to widowers. In the same year approximately 23,000 widowers remarried, 15,500 to spinsters and 7,500 to widows. From this it appears that widowers are twice as likely to remarry as widows, while widowers are far more fascinating to spinsters than to widows. Actually, in the year 1932, one of of every sixteen people married was married a second time.

Both the widow and widower are becoming far more cautious of marrying again. Widowers, in particular, leave it until late in life. Thus the greatest number of widowers remarried in 1932 between the ages of fifty and fifty-four. Over 2,000 left it until sixty — sixty-four. One Peter Pan suddenly got the spring madness in his veins at the age of ninety! The greatest number of widows remarried between thirty-five—thirty-nine. Nevertheless, 516 waited until sixty-five—sixty-nine, and one even developed a soul-storm at eighty-eight. The average age of widower bridegrooms is forty-nine, and of widow brides forty-four.

When bachelors marry widows they usually choose one about their own age, but when widowers marry spinsters the widower is, on an average, ten years older than his bride.

Simple Type — First Fall Days

Dark Thought For 1936

While we naturally admire the horticultural or biological expert with a taste for research who by combining the best qualities of differing fruits gives us a new and better fruit, or by careful selection and breeding furnishes us with thicker and tenderer beefsteaks, we may not sufficiently reflect upon what might happen if Nature turned her hand toward the production of bigger and better pests. Yet something of the kind is happening in the insect world if we are to believe Winnipeg despatches. A mosquito has made its appearance there which has so far improved upon the ordinary mosquito bite—from the mosquito point of view—that it can remove a small segment of the human form divine with every nip. Evidently, here is something new, a grafting of the black-fly bite technique upon that blight of the Canadian verandah, the ordinary house mosquito, that ventures where the black-fly dare not show its head. The next step is manifestly to improve the mobility of this new type pest. Our good old-fashioned mosquito is a bit slow on the wing and even slower a-foot,—its most serious handicap is the work of rendering human life miserable. Armed with a black-fly bite and the house-by's nimbleness and speed of wing, and perhaps slightly streamlined, next year's model of the mosquito ought to be something that will lift Canada out of the depression,—or anything else it may be sitting in. If man can produce the buffalo and the ugli, why should Nature not come back with a patent mosquito?—Montreal aily Star.

One hundred and two years ago, June 13th, 1893, John Wilson and Robert Lyon, two young students-at-law at Perth, fought a duel in North Elmsley near the Tay River on the outskirts of the town, the latter being shot dead. Wilson afterwards became a Justice of the Supreme Court of Ontario.—Courier.

DO YOU KNOW YOUR SALT FACTS?

Can Be Used In A Hundred Ways On The Farm

Of all materials purchased for farm use, salt, properly applied, is the most consistent money maker and money saver. It is truer economy to buy a bag too much than one pound too little. The things that interest a practical farmer are such topics as lard, livestock, field crops, barns fertilizers, butter and cheese, meat and eggs. For all of these, salt has some definite, practical, money saving or money making use. In feeding of livestock, it has been shown by Dominion Government tests that the cost of salt, properly fed, is returned to the farmer 3 to 14 times over.

Because salt is so universally necessary, it often used a vehicle to carry other food necessities which nature fails to supply. This is the reason for such products as iodized stock salt and iodized table salt. There are large areas in Ontario and the Western Provinces where natural foods contain almost no iodine. Iodized stock salt, in block form or loose, should be given the farm stock. This simple step saves thousands of young pigs, calves, lambs and foals, for the farmers of Canada every year. Take no chances; if you suspect iodine deficiency, use "Windsor" Iodized Salt regularly. It means stronger, healthier, more productive livestock, in any case.

CHOOSING FARM SALT

Coarse salt is salt or large grain size; fine salt is salt of relatively small grain: that is all that the words "coarse" and "fine" imply. As applied to salt neither word has any reference to quality, purity, or price. "Coarse" does not mean "crude and cheap," nor does "fine" mean "refined and dear."

Coarse salt is made by the "open pan" evaporation of brine which uses heat less efficiently than the "closed pan" method employed to make fine salt and it is therefore more expensive to produce than fine salt.

Fine salt is purer and drier than coarse salt; it contains more actual salt per 100 pounds. Because it is in smaller grains it is more adaptable to mixing with feeds, for spreading on hay, etc. Fine salt is actually cheaper.

Coarse salt should be purchased only for such special uses as curing hides and for freezing mixtures. For those purposes specify coarse salt. For other farm needs specify fine salt.

SALT FACTS

A mixture of ice and salt, three parts ice to one part salt will give a temperature well below freezing, in which many dainty desserts may be readily frozen. Remember this on hot summer days. Use coarse salt for this purpose.

A top dresing of salt binds dirt roads and paths, making the mhard and smooth. It dampens and lays the dust, yet prevents excessive mudding in wet weather. Keeps dirt from being tracked into the home.

The cause of heat cramps and heat exhaustion is loss of salt through excesive perspiration. Salt in drinking water makes up the loss and prevents such conditions. At haying and harvest time give your work horses extra salt. They will work better.

Salt is a controlling factor in an animal's use of mineral substances, such as calcium, phosphorous, iodine and iron. No mineral supplement is complete without salt. Proper feeding of salt increases the value of mineral mixtures.

THOSE "IN-LAW PROBLEMS

I suppose the "In-Law" problem has been a problem ever since the world began. It is a very real one. Sometimes it is a difficult one. A young married man writes to me as follows:

"I have been married three years. No quarrel that I know of has taken place between my wife and my mother, but try as I can, I seem to be quite unable to get them to be on friendly terms. It is a difficult situation and sometimes, when I get to thinking about it, I wonder whether it will not yet wreck my happiness in married life."

Well, whatever else I would do, I would take care that this situation was not allowed to wreck my marriage and especially if I felt that my wife and I were suited to each other and could hit it off well together.

"No quarrel that I know of". Perhaps the key to your problem lies just there. Ill-feeling is but the expression of an inward spirit. Sometimes it comes out in words. Sometimes it never comes out in words but remains there in the form of an undercurrent.

Whether it comes out or not, it is always capable of working havoc. It pollutes and poisons the whole atmosphere.

As I see it, the real problem in your particular case is where to place the blame. Not at all an easy problem. And your case is by no means an isolated one. I have come across scores of cases just similar. From experience I have no hesitation in saying that, in such cases it is safe to assume that the blame may be fairly accurately fixed at fifty-fifty. I doubt if enyone could bridge the gulf between those two women. It is obviously a case of disputed possession. A fond mother unable to reconcile herself to the fact that someone else has exercised the right to share her son's affections, and a young wife who instinctively feels it mentally resents it, and who, unconsciously perhaps, dreads interference if friendship is allowed to develop.

But what can be done about it? There is nothing that you can do except that you must absolutely refuse to be drawn into conversation by either one concerning the other. You should endeavor to maintain your relationship with both as well as you can, and try to go merrily on your way ignoring the trouble.

If by your life, you can show both mother and wife that happiness is only real when it comes through sharing, then maybe before long, they will both come to see how foolish they have been and your problem will vanish into thin air.

At all events, let us hope so!

Increase In Fire Losses For Week

Toronto.—Fire losses in Canada during the week ended August 7, 1935, were estimated by the Monetary Times at $161,500 as compared with $122,000 for the preceding week, and with $140,200 during the corresponding week of last year. Fire losses since January 1 to August 7, 1935, totalled $7,274,425, compared with $9,861,750 for the corresponding period of last year.

HORSES DIE OF EPIDEMIC

Strange Disease Strikes Quick And Sure At Manitoba Equines — 75 Already Taken.

WINNIPEG—New supplies of serum were being rushed to Manitoba to combat an outbreak of disease which is killing horses in central and southwest sections of the province.

Provincial and Dominion authorities co-operated to fight the strange ailment.

The nature of the disease, which has taken a toll of at least 75 horses, was not definitely known, but it was believed to be encephalomyelitis, which attacks the brain and spinal columns of horses. The bite of a new type of mosquito was thought to transmit the minute virus.

Viscera of the dead animals has been sent to Ottawa for laboratory diagnosis.. In the meantime, local quarantine measures in the infected areas are being enforced.

At a meeting, at which preventive measures were discussed, Hon. D. G. McKenzie, Manitoba minister of agriculture, promised the co-operation of his department with the Dominion health of animals branch. Whatever measures may be ordered by federal authorities will be backed by the province.

Serum for combating the outbreak has been exhausted, and orders have been rushed for fresh supplies. The serum is difficult to obtain and is expensive, the three applications recommended by veterinaries costing $25 per horse.

The outbreak first appeared in southwestern Manitoba, rapidly spread north and northeastward. Provincial authorities have no accurate estimate of deaths, or the number of horses attacked. One report told of 126 deaths in one area. Reports of new outbreaks were received from Hartney, Elgin, Boisseyain and Pearson.

EXPECT 3 MILLION IN A YEAR FROM AMUSEMENT TAX

Two Months' Revenue Amounts to $504,574 for Treasury of the Government.

Toronto.—Based on returns for the first two months' operation of the new Act, the Provincial Treasury will be enriched more than $3,000,000 through the amusements tax in 12 months at the expense of theatre owners, sport organizations and patrons, according to statistics compiled by the Allied Sports and Amusement Association.

Taking Heavy Toll

This will be more than four times greater than the Amusements Tax revenue of $745,056 for the fiscal year of 1934 and 200 percent. greater than the tax total of $1,016,793 collected in 1932 when the Government granted exemption on admissions of 25 cents and under.

"Amusements tax returns for the last two months plainly indicate how the people of moderate means and children are being badly hit by the new impost," declared W. M. Gladish, secretary of the association which is waging a campaign against the entertainment levy. "The chief changes in the new Amusements Tax Act were the wiping out of the exemption on low-priced admissions and a tax increase of 150 percent. on the 30-cent ticket, which was the lowest admision previously assessed. The tax revenue for July was five times greater than that for the same month one year ago. Therefore it is the ordinary man and his family who are shouldering the burden. The figures only emphasize the need for amusements tax modifications without delay."

FOR COLLECTORS

"Indians of Canada," by Diamond Jenness, published by the National Museum of Canada ($2.00), beautifully printed and bound, is a book everyone who prides himself on his library should have. Many photos and illustrations throughout the four hundred pages lend interest and are highly instructive. The chapter on "The Eskimo" I found exceptionally informative as these people living in the far northern hinterlands have always fascinated me. An Eskimo Song, music and words, is reproduced on page 207. I found it a charming little melody.—M.M.

MR. ANDREW CHRISTIE

Andrew Christie, one of the best known citizens of the Ottawa Valley, died Monday at an Ottawa hospital, following a brief illness. He was in his 82nd year.

A resident of Winchester during the major part of his life, Mr. Christie was active in fire insurance for many yeears, and his work brought him in intimate contact with hundreds of citizens, who held him in the highest esteem. Born at Mountain, he took an active interest in affairs in his community.

Surviving are three sons: Kenneth, a member of the Toronto Hydro Electric Commission; Duncan, of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, and Harold, branch manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia, Toronto; two sisters, Mrs. L. Walker, Winchester, and Mrs. C. Pelton, Toronto. His wife predeceased him one year ago.

The funeral was held on Thursday afternoon at the Winchester United Church, with interment following in Maple Ridge cemetery.

BELGIAN QUEEN KILLED IN CAR DRIVEN BY KING

Kussnacht, Switzerland, Aug. 29— Queen Astrid of the Belgians, 29 years of age and the mother of three children, was fatally injured today when thrown from a car which King Leopold, her husband, was driving.

She died in his arms on the roadside, while a village priest gave extreme unction.

King Leopold was cut about the head. He was severely affected by nervous shock, and was grief-stricken, but doctors said he was in no danger.

Swiss authorities will hold an official inquiry into the accident.

An official Belgian communique tonight said:

"Still under the shock of the tragic death of King Albert, Belgium weeps for the Queen whose youth, grace and kindness has conquered her people".

"The whole country is in consternation. It shares the immense sorrow of the King. It is gathered faithfully and close around him. It bows with deepfelt tenderness over the Royal Princes and Princesses who have a mother no longer."

From the lowlands near Antwerp to the wooded Aix-la-Chapelle hills, the red, yellow and black of the national colours flapped limply at half-staff in a fitful breeze atop public buildings and private homes, sign that swift tragedy had again overtaken the nation."

The body of the Queen was placed in a casket and taken to her Swiss villa. From there tonight Leopold began the sorrowful journey with it back home. A special Swiss train was ordered, which will be met by a Belgian train at the frontier.

Miss Muriel Stirtan, of Spencerville, was the guest of honour at a miscellaneous shower held at the home of Mrs. P.A. MacIntosh, Spencerville, on Saturday afternoon.

The guests were received by the hostess, and numbered seventy-two friends of the bride-elect. The guest of honour was presented with numerous beautiful gifts in a decorated basket by little Patricia MacIntosh, of Morrisburg, and little Joyce Simon who were dressed as a bride and groom, and the little twins, Greta and Reta Reddick, acted as train bearers. The Misses Annie MacIntosh and Beryl Fairbairn assisted the bride-elect.

The tea table was beautifully centered with a silver flower holder, holding yellow calendulas and blue nigellas, and at either end silver candle holders, with blue and yellow tapers. Luncheon was served by a number of girl friends. Among those assisting the hostess was Mrs. E.F. MacIntosh, of Morrisburg.

BRUNO OFFERS NEW DEFENSE

Hollywood, Cal., Aug. 29— G. Lloyd Fisher and Vincent A. Marco, attorneys for Richard Bruno Hauptmann, issued a joint statement here today that their investigators have located a child in Long Island under circumstances indicating "there was more than a possibility it might be the missing Lindbergh child."

Fisher came from New Jersey to confer with Mrs. Emma Gloeckner, sister of Hauptmann, announcing that he plans new legal steps in an effort to save from execution the man convicted of kidnapping Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh's child.

The two attorneys declined to amplify the statement.
