Seeley—Hamilton.

On the evening of Wednesday, Sept. 2nd, a quiet but very pretty wedding took place at Maple Cottage, Rowena, the home of Mrs. D. L. Hamilton, when her daughter Pearl E. was united in marriage to Mr. J. Orval Seeley, of Irena. Rev. W. C. Black, assisted by Rev. C. W. Crane, performed the ceremony. Because of a recent bereavement in the bride's home only the immediate family relatives were present.

The bride was prettily attired in a gown of neir silk with cream silk oelien covering. Many beautiful presents were received; the groom's gift to the bride was a handsome oak hall-mirror and a large oil painting. Both the young people are very popular, the bride for some time having served as organist in the Rowena Methodist church.

After a very sumptuous repast had been partaken of, the happy couple left for Toronto and Niagara where they will spend their honeymoon, the bride travelling in a suit of blue amure cloth.

An Indian Stabbed at Cornwall.

It is not often that Indians get on the war path in Cornwall as they did one day last week, when Louis Peters, a Cornwall Island brave, was stabbed in the right side below the heart, by Michael Oak, from Racket Point, on the American part of the St. Regis reservation.

A large part of the aboriginies got off the boat on their way home from the Prescott hop fields. Oak and Peters had been wrangling and scrapping on the boat, and the trouble was resumed on dry land.

Suddenly a squaw cried out, "Don't stab him," and Peters fell. Oak wiped a bloody clasp knife on his coat, put it in his pocket, and hurried through the crowd into a boat, followed by his mother and rowed for home. Peters was taken to the hospital. The wound is wide and deep, puncturing the lung; but his recovery is expected. The case is in the hands of the County Attorney Dingwall, to whose office Chief Smyth brought a crowd of eye-witnesses. Oak will no doubt be arrested and brought there for trial.

THE FUTURE BATTLESHIP

BRITAIN'S DREADNOUGHTS AND COMING DESIGNS.

Two Monster Ships Begun This Year, One of 19,200 Tons With Turbine Engines.

The coming of the Dreadnoughts, as all the world knows, has meant a complete revolution in naval construction. In the opinion of most naval officers the future is to the Power which possesses most of these ships and can use them well, writes H. W. Wilson in the London Daily Mail.

It will be of interest, then, in view of the pause which has been made during the present year in shipbuilding, to examine how the British navy stands in this latest type of ship and what are the designs likely to be adopted in the near future. The Admiralty is committed to the large battleship and it will scarcely go back. Nor would it be wise to do so in view of the fact that almost all foreign Powers are faithfully copying British designs.

For the present year two monster ships—a battleship and a cruiser—have been voted. The battleship, contrary to the reports circulated, will be similar in all important respects to the St. Vincents. That is to say, she will displace 19,200 tons or thereabouts, will carry ten or twelve 12-inch guns, and will be propelled by turbine engines actuated by steam. Thus she will make up the group of four St. Vincents, and when she is completed for sea the British navy will possess two groups, each four strong, of all big gun battleships. The other vessel will resemble the Invincibles, with improvements, and will complete the group of four 25-knot cruiser battleships.

SO MUCH FOR THE PRESENT.

It will be seen that there is nothing sensational in the design of the ships for this year which are meant to fill gaps in the existing organization. But next year it is possible that there may be new and startling departures. From hints which Ministers and others have dropped, the Admiralty will be compelled to ask for no fewer than five monster battleships. More may be needed, but this must necessarily depend on the progress which foreign ships make in the next few months.

Germany, it must be remembered, has to-day building or sanctioned seven battleships of Dreadnought type (against the British eight) and two, or possibly three, cruisers of the Invincible type (against the British four). And under her fixed programme she will lay down three more monster battleships and one more monster cruiser next year, the battleships, it is believed, displacing 21,000 tons or even more. A British programme of five battleships and one cruiser would bring the British total of Dreadnoughts up to only eighteen, as against the German total of thirteen or fourteen. The British margin of four or five ships, which would give, would be far less than what the strict two Power standard demands.

If, then, we assume that the British programme consists of five battleships and one improved Invincible—and nothing less will satisfy the claims of national security—it is probable that the Admiralty will lay down one group of four improved St. Vincents—four battleships, that is to say, each carrying twelve 12-inch guns. But the fifth battleship may quite possibly be a new type, built rapidly and tested with the object of gaining experience for a new class which will figure in the programmes of 1910 and 1911. Here much will obviously depend on the action of foreign Powers and whether the reports prove correct which credit the German Admiralty with the intention of building vessels far larger and more powerfully armed than any yet designed.

If such an experimental ship is to be built with great speed to obtain experience the orders for her guns, barbettes and machinery will be given well in advance, before she is even voted, and they may be placed in the summer or autumn of the present year. The same course was followed in the case of the Dreadnought.

The new ship will not improbably carry a new monster gun, the 13.5 inch, eight or ten of which may be mounted, and will thus carry out the policy of "out-Dreadonughting the Dreadnought." One or two of these guns, according to report, have been building for some months and the employment of them in the St. Vincent class is known to have been considered and only reluctantly abandoned. All the details are confidential, but the German naval books will supply the public what is certainly an intelligent and possibly accurate information. The new [illegible] tons, iron and tear their way through the best modern armor at battle range.

To mount guns of the size and length so that they will be able to fire on either broadside is a matter of extreme difficulty so long as funnels remain. But there is some hope of getting rid of them and thus giving

A CLEAR FIELD OF FIRE.

The Belleville company is said to be designing a boiler which needs no funnel above water to discharge the waste products of combustion and there is the bare possibility that producer gas engines might be adopted. The firm of Vickers-Maxim has prepared designs for battleships driven by producer gas, and it is understood that it is ready to turn out a Dreadnought using gas forthwith if it finds any power adventurous enough to try such an experiment. The Admiralty, however, is not at all likely to install the gas engine in battleships until it has been thoroughly tried in merchantmen and smaller cruisers. But that it will finally come may be taken as certain.

The British battleship of 1910 may thus be a vessel of 25,000 tons, mounting eight or ten 86 ton guns, which will be so arranged as to fire on either broadside. She will resemble the new Brazilian ships in carrying twenty 4.7 inch or 6 inch guns for defence against torpedo attack, and will thus be exempt from the most serious failing of the original Dreadnought—the entire absence of a medium battery.

Mademoiselle Elise

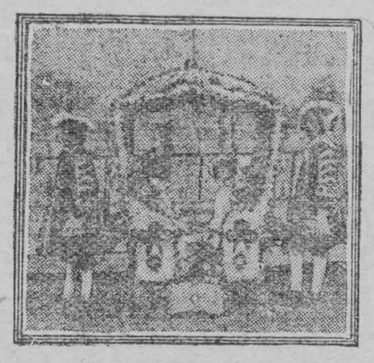
"MON PERE, I have an idea—the grandest idea one could possibly think of!" exclaimed pretty Elise.

"And what is this clever idea?" smilingly asked Elise's father.

"Eh, bien! Thou knowest how our lovely queen, Marie Antoinette, often escapes from wearisome court life and runs out to her country retreat at Trianon, where she and the noble folk play at being simple peasants. They make hay, milk the cows, and they say that even the king grinds out flour in a little mill there."

"Yes," nodded the father, "so they do."

"And why cannot I invite some of my friends out to the chateau, father?" Elise went on, enthusiastically. "Life here in Paris is, oh, so tiresome; and we would have a most splendid outing!"



"BORNE IN A CHAIR"

Elise's father gravely considered this request, and, to Elise's great delight, finally gave his consent.

Thus it was that the following week many little noble girls and boys, who were so fortunate as to possess Elise's friendship, made their way toward the charming little chateau. In all sorts of conveyances they came. Elise herself traveled in a cozy chair, and was carried from the neighboring chateau, where she had been spending a short visit.

Then how they romped! "It's such a relief," merrily remarked Mademoiselle Lucie, "to forget all one's grand manners for a time and play at being peasant children." Every one agreed with her.

You may be sure they were sorry when the day ended. And you may know that they promised themselves similar treats in the near future.

But as Queen Marie Antoinette herself was forced to forego her delightful visits to Trianon, so Mademoiselle Elise and her friends found it impossible to carry out their plans. This was because the horrible French revolution was upon them—a dreadful time when Elise's father and mother and all the other noble ladies and gentlemen were in gravest peril, and were fortunate if they escaped with their lives.

Flower Enemies

IT IS rather interesting to note that certain flowers have great dislike for each other. For instance, if you will make up a bouquet containing, among other flowers, roses and mignonettes, and place the bouquet in a vase for an hour, you will find that while the other flowers remain perfectly fresh, the roses and mignonettes have wilted—that is to say, they have killed each other.

Lilies-of-the-valley also kill without pity any other flower with which they come in close contact.

On the contrary, carnations and heliotropes have the greatest affection for each other.

Yet some people say that flowers cannot feel!

Gentleman—"Waiter, bring me some rabbit pie." Waiter—"Yes, sir. And what'll you have to follow?" Gentleman—"Indigestion, I expect."

"Our Johnny is in love!" "Pshaw! He's only a young [illegible] "All things must [illegible] He has [illegible] behin[illegible]

GERMAN "FLOWER CITY"

CITY OF ERFURT HAS 2,000 ACRES OF GARDENS.

Large Quantities of Farm Seeds Are Cultivated in Great Variety.

A correspondent writing from Weimar, says that Erfurt, a thriving commercial city of southern Prussia, with more than 100,000 inhabitants, is known throughout Germany as the "flower city." It has a world-wide reputation for flower and farm seeds and plants, the trade in which the correspondent portrays as follows:

"The origin of the industry dates from the tenth century, and it was developed by the monks of the Peters monastery. The growth to the present large proportions is of much more recent date. Since 1880 the business of raising flower and garden seeds and plants in Erfurt has increased rapidly, until it is now five times as large as it was a quarter of a century ago. When the land failed to produce good wine grapes the people turned their attention to the seed industry as a means of saving

THEIR WANING FORTUNES.

In former years the hills about Erfurt and Jena were famous for their vineyards. The wine was sold mostly at Weimar, about half way of the distance between those two cities, giving this place its original name of Weinmarkt, which was changed later to Weimar.

"The soil about Erfurt is especially adapted to the culture of vegetables and plants. It is deep, rich and well watered. The annual rainfall is heavy, and the surrounding hills afford good protection from the cool winds which sometimes sweep down from the Thuringerwald. There are 108 concerns engaged in the seed industry, also 35 seed exporters and 24 florists. An idea of the extent of this business may be gained from the area of glass employed. The total is 113,735 square meters (square meter equals 10.764 square feet), of which 30,867 square meters cover propagating houses, and 82,858 square meters are used over specially fertilized beds. Nearly 3,000 people are employed in various capacities.

"While there are no statistics available in regard to the total annual output of the Erfurt seed and plant concerns, a single firm produces each year 70,000 to 80,000 cyclamen, 400,000 lillies of the valley, 60,000 apple sprouts (in pots), 20,000 pear sprouts, 10,000 plum, apricot, peach and quince sprouts, 30,000 strawberry plants, 300,000 short stemmed and 40,000 long stemmed roses.

"About 2,000 acres of land in the city and the immediate vicinity are

DEVOTED TO GARDENS.

This land is owned by the Crown, the city and private individuals. It is leased to the various concerns at rentals depending on the location and on the productiveness of the soil. Owing to the rapid growth of the city, which rivals the percentage of a Western boom town in this country quite an area of the best garden land has been plotted into city lots and is fast being covered with fine villas and houses.

"The cultivation of the gilly flower in Erfurt dates from 1810. It first appeared in the window of a citizen, and from this one pot hundreds of thousands of these flowers have been promulgated. The estimated annual production is 680,000 plants. To the same extent, or nearly so, is the cultivation of the calceolaria, verbena, petunia, gloxiria, zinnia, pansy, carnation, balsam, phlox, hollyhock, perlargonium, fuchsia, azalia, etc., in almost endless variety. It is estimated that the annual output of flower seeds is not much under 1,000,000 marks ($238,000).

"Vegetable and farm seeds are cultivated in large quantities and in great variety. Among them are included 101 kinds of peas, 168 of beans (700 bushels shipped this year to Boston to help make up the deficit in its staple food), 269 varieties of kitchen herbs, 38 kinds of radishes and 30 of other roots, 34 of onions, etc., 65 of grass for fodder, 30 of clover, 320 species of potatoes. There are 1,542 varieties of vegetable seed cultivated in Erfurt."

QUEENS AND BULLFIGHTING.

Victoria of Spain Hopes to Win Even If Others Did Fail.

Queen Victoria of Spain is, it is said, anxious to abolish in her country the enormities of bullfighting; she has hitherto consented to attend at this favorite national sport, but the last time she went, shortly before Don Jaime's birth, what she witnessed filled her with horror and grief.

So she has caused to be revived the memory of the fact that the great Queen Isabella, when she returned from conquering the Moors, declared that it was her wish to abolish bullfighting as a cruel sport which, she asserted, had been introduced by the Paynim Moors and which was unworthy of a Christian race.

If the Spaniards of to-day are reminded that the Queen whose memory they adore was only prevented by her death from putting down the cruel sport it is hoped that they may allow their present Queen to make it at least unfashionable for ladies to attend on such sights.

Queen Christina tried to do so in the early days of her rule as widowed Regent, says the London Illustrated News, but she had so much else to contend with that she had to abandon this unpopular reform.

SON OF BELTED EARL

MAKING MONEY BY SINGING ON THE STREETS.

He Wears a Mask and Sings to the Accompaniment of a Street Piano.

That some peers' sons can eke out more than a bare living by their talents when put to it has been demonstrated during the last week in London, England. Two street musicians, dressed in immaculate evening dress, wearing across their clean-shaven faces black domino masks and attended by a servant in scarlet livery have been making their progress through the west end of London, their pathway, strewn with gold and silver, and it now transpires that one, at least, is the son of a belted earl and the other a gentleman by birth. One of the couple—the scion of the earl—has a well trained tenor voice, and sings to the accompaniment of a piano played by his companion. The liveried servant's duties consist of pulling the piano through the streets between the songs.

When the identity of the two singers was first established by a well-known London solicitor, who, by the way, refuses to pass on to the curious world the full extent of his knowledge, it was thought that the two men were engaged in their strange vocation as a lark, but according to the peer's son such is not the case.

"We went into this to see if there was any money to be made," the singer said recently between songs. "We are pretty well satisfied so far and intend to stick to it as long as we can maintain our incognito. Last week we collected about £60 (300), and are doing better this week. One evening at Earl's Court I collected £7 ($35) in less than half an hour. That's not so bad, is it?

"The majority of those who give us anything, recognizing that we are not ordinary street performers, give us silver and many of them think nothing of throwing us a half sovereign. A couple of days ago I approached a gentleman who was just leaving his house.

"'I suppose you are doing this for sport,' he remarked as he paused on the step of his motor car. 'I am sorry to say this is all I have about me in change,' and he took from his vest pocket two half sovereigns and dropped them into the collection bag.

"I will sing for two hours every evening and during that time I manage to get through about twenty songs. Then we adopt very elaborate means of throwing curious people off the scent; the piano is taken by our footman and dragged some distance when it is handed over to another man. My companion and I jump into a closed carriage and at a convenient time take off our masks. We then take a roundabout route home or, if we have reason to believe we are being followed, drive up to one of my clubs and escape through the back door. Nobody has succeeded in tracing us yet and I do not believe anybody ever will. I wouldn't have father find out about this for the world."

CHAPTER XXVII.

"Miss Leake would feel obliged by Mr. Gartmore favoring her with five minutes' conversation."

So Judith, after a few seconds' reflection, wrote, not on a sheet of note paper, but on a slip torn off a piece of foolscap, which, dispensing with the usual formalities of envelope and seal, she simply twisted up and dispatched by the hands of Mary to the ground-floor lodger.

Then she stirred the fire, and having drawn down the blinds to shut out the coming night, she seated herself ready to receive Mr. Gartmore, who shortly after entered the apartment.

She did not rise to greet him as he advanced, a courtesy to which his grey hairs and position as visitor at her summons, might well, indeed, have seemed to entitle him, but merely inclining her head in her own graceful, queenly style in return for his elaborate, old-fashioned bow, she said:

"I thank you very much for acceding to my request."

"Requests from you, madam?" he answered in his formal drawing-room manner, with which, however, there was also mingled, in the present instance, a dash of the interest wherewith [illegible]ed every one who approache[illegible] requests from you, madam, come so seldom that, even were it not a pleasure to comply with the slightest of them there would be no excuse for refusing to do so."

"Will you not be seated?" she asked. "Pray do—for I have a few words of moment to say to you, otherwise I had not intruded on your time, or broken through the rule of my own seclusion."

"An unhappy rule, whether self-imposed or imposed by others," answered Mr. Gartmore, taking possession of the chair indicated by a gesture of her hand—"a strange rule to be adopted by one so young and——"

He paused—a delicate fear of offending—a feeling that the word he was about to add, though strictly true, could scarcely fail to give her pain, stopped his further utterance.

Mr. Gartmore now inwardly mut[illegible]red the same sentence as many [illegible]efore him had done.

[illegible] choose to tell me I [illegible]w more about her

[illegible] his thoughts [illegible]ful expression [illegible]waiting a suf[illegible] to finish his [illegible]red doing so, [illegible] had intend-

"A strange rule to be adopted by [illegible]e so young and beautiful, you were about to say," she remarked. "We have all our hobby, and philosophers tell us it is well to ride the thing to death. Seclusion, in the very heart of busy, bustling, panting, suffocating London, is my whim."

"Only your whim?" he said enquiringly, fixing his keen eyes on her face so steadily that even Judith was compelled to turn aside from the scrutiny.

"Only your whim?" but she never answered.

"I sent for you to-night, Mr. Gartmore," she abruptly recommended, after an awkward silence, "to do you a favor."

The announcement really seemed to produce a startling effect upon the visitor. He was unaccustomed to having favors proffered to him in such an unhesitating manner, and his countenance expressed the fact, even though his tongue did not.

"That is," pursued Judith, "if you are of my opinion that it is a privilege to be able to assist our fellow-creatures."

"Quite true, madam, and anything which I can do to serve you——"

"Stay," [illegible] are [illegible]istaken [illegible]ny-

If you call your niece's marriage with the Reverend Watkyn Crepton a disgraceful transaction, I need proceed no further with my petition, for you and I can have no solitary idea or opinion in common."

"You criticize my relations freely," he replied, with a smile; "yet I am not offended—for my conviction of the matter has always been that Adelaide Crepton is a being without heart; that the Welsh curate threw himself away on her; and that having had children given her by Heaven, she had no right to fling the Divine blessing of motherhood from her. I despise and hate the woman, madam. There, is that confession of faith satisfactory to you?"

'Perfectly," she answered. "And now do you know anything of her children?"

"The Welsh grandfather adopted them, did he not?"

"Yes, but grandfathers will not live for ever," Judith replied. "Did you not read in the papers long ago about a lad being found starving in the streets of London—a grandson of Sir John Lestock,—do you not remember it? But no," she added next moment, "you cannot—you were out of England."

"How do you know where I was?" he demanded curiously.

"I know many things you might scarcely give me credit for being acquainted with," was the reply—"however, my ignorance or knowledge is nothing at present. The facts are that Evan Crepton was found starving in the streets of London—that he fled from his relations, that he went, nobody knew whither, that he may now be living or dead, for any information I have on the subject—while his sister Alice is at this moment lodging two floors above our heads, and you can aid her if you choose to do so."

"How!" Mr. Gartmore did not pronounce the monosyllable encouragingly.

"By assisting her endeavors to make an honest livelihood. She has embarked, Heaven help her, on the stormy sea of literary adventure, and is sinking for want of a strong hand to bring her to shore,—In one word, she is an authoress, and——"

"I hate authoresses, madam," interrupted Mr. Gartmore, vehemently; "a confounded set of pretentious blue-stockings; better the girl was a dairy-maid than an affected, conceited, half-educated sentimental scribbler. I cannot bear literary women;" and the speaker wheeled round in his chair, and looked [illegible]fantly at Judith as he uttered the last clause.

"That is unfortunate," she coolly remarked, "for I am one of the genus, and I suppose I may therefore take your observation as an especial compliment to myself."

"You an authoress!" he repeated. "Well, there are exceptions to all rules."

"It strikes me very forcibly, Mr. Gartmore," resumed Judith, "that there was a time when there existed a charm in the name for you—when you would have done battle for a blue-stocking, and vowed that a woman could be intellectual without vanity. In the days when you would have married one who has since blotted her manuscripts with tears, you entertained different ideas."

During the delivery of this speech Mr. Gartmore's face had worked painfully, and at its conclusion he rose from his seat and approaching Judith, demanded, in an agitated voice:—

"Who are you, that thus lay bare the secrets of my life, whom I have never spoken to before this hour, and yet whose voice and face are as familiar to me as my own—who can raise the ghosts of the past before me, and play with the hidden feelings of my heart, as if you delighted to pain and torture me? You are closely connected with me in some way—your name is not Leake—you are either a falsehood or the [illegible]il One, for you have spok[illegible] this night which no [illegible] myself and [illegible] got-known me always? Since the first time I saw you, I felt your face was not altogether a new one to me, and yet, until now, I never knew it was Lady Lestock you resembled. You must be——"

"Judith Mazingford," she finished; upon receiving which information he sat down again, and stared at her as though she had been a remarkable criminal. "You have heard of me," she ventured, when the scrutiny was becoming painful.

"Often."

"Should you like to hear the secret history of Judith Mazingford, as known only to God and herself? I can talk or remain silent at your bidding. Which shall it be?"

"Talk," he said, but there was a softer tone in his voice, and a different look in his eye—and he unconsciously bent forward to catch her words.

"You remember Lillian Ridsdale," she began; "perhaps you knew her husband, too. Mr. Renelle She was my mother, and he my father. I was the youngest of three—the one who drew my life from her death sigh—a little helpless infant. And as I lay in the first sleep of childhood, an old Welsh woman, to whom it was given to utter ominous warnings, prophesied that my life would be a wretched one—that with faces averted from me, and with hand upraised against every one, I should pass to the grave 'battling my way.'

"But I did not seem born to be loved, and to love, to be cared for, petted, caressed. Oh! my life was rich in friends and promise then. Look back at all this—then cast your eyes round this lonely, desolate room and pity me."

Almost involuntarily, he did as she bade him, and gazed round the apartment, in which, as he well knew, she had passed many a month of her wretched life. When his glance came back again to Judith, he saw she had hidden her face in her hands, and was weeping convulsively.

He could say nothing to comfort her—he sat silent, until she hushed the sound of her grief, and looking into the firelight with her dark eyes still wet with tears, she resumed.

"Then I was loved by a man, who never had a weakness, except that of loving me; and I was worthy of his affection—I know now I was—but for the plague-spot. I never varied really in my truth, but I took a senseless pleasure in tormenting him. Thus, when he asked me to be his wife, I trifled with his patience—and, you have heard, no doubt, I murdered him. It is true."

She was calm again—cold, and immovable as the ice on some polar sea, which covers briny waters of fathomless depths; and Mr. Gartmore, to whom such sudden changes seemed inexplicable, regarded her with amazement.

"I could tell," she continued, after a pause, "of how fruitlessly I followed him in his flight to death—of how I cried aloud for him to return. I could tell of hours of weeping and watching, of praying and sickening for his return, of a waking to grief, of an awful shock, and a long blank—of a restoration to life. I could tell much if it would undo the past, or take the weight off my soul. As it is——" she paused for a moment, and then hurried on.

"Misfortunes came thickly after that, and then it was Millicent Ridsdale, who bought bread for her sister's children, and roused me from utter uselessness by her noble example and unselfish exertions. Then I learned to write, and tasted the bitterness of rejection; then I vowed I would yet show the public what was in me; then my impatient spirit, chafed and disappointed, commenced its battle with the world!

"Death came once more into our home, and this time we were beggars—Lillian and I; but still I remained true to my faith, until I found that her sight was going, and that I, and I alone, could give the blessing back to her.

"For her I married—not for luxury, but for her. It was the most unselfish action of my life; wrong, I admit, but I never deceived him. It was a regular bargain between us. I gave myself to him, and ne was to give her sight, and comfort. There was nothing she wanted he was not to let her have, and I, poor deluded dupe, believed and married him. If you know Lewis Mazingford, you may conjecture how he fulfilled his part of the contract.

"So it was useless. He would do nothing for her after all, and I—when mad with his falsehood and invectives I took the matter into my own hand. Did yo[illegible] hear I forged a cheque? [illegible]ve stolen for her; and t[illegible]ot was mine—mine by [illegible] Heaven k[illegible]

About the Farm

BUMBLE FOOT.

Fowls roosting on high perches sometimes injure their feet in jumping down from the roost to the floor. An abscess forms on the sole, which becomes hard and calloused, and a condition known as bumble foot, results. The disease, if neglected, may extend upward in the leg, affecting the joints, and ultimately causing death. A fowl that has once had bumble foot is of little more use. The lameness is liable t[illegible] return at any time, and birds suffering once from this disorder very rarely become profitable producers again. The best way is to prevent trouble by making the roosting perches low, and all on the same level. The old-fashioned way of putting the roosts up, one above the other, like the rungs of a ladder, is the easiest way of laying things out for trouble of this kind. The hens crowd up to the top perches on going to roost, and when they come down in the morning jump from one perch to another. Hens of light-weight breeds, such as Leghorns, can make the descent every day of their lives without injury to the feet, but heavy-weights, like Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes or Cochins, are liable to put their feet out of business by the performance; and the Scotchman's adage about the horse holds equally true with the hen. No foot, no hen.

Frequent applications of crude petroleum is a good remedy for bumble foot in the early stages of the disease. If the trouble is neglected, it becomes necessary to open the abscesses by making two cuts across each other, in the form of an X. The matter is then washed out with warm water containing a little carbolic acid, and carbolated vaseline applied daily to the wound until a cure is effected. The hatchet treatment is used by poultrymen of experience, with rather more satisfactory results than any kind of doctoring.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Do not allow the dealer to come in and sort out the largest and finest lambs and leave the culls. Sometimes farmers sell their lambs at a fixed sum per head early in the season. The dealer will call when he needs lambs and sort out the best and never come to get the smaller ones at all.

The yearly cost for food for the average dairy cow is about $30. Unless the income from her milk exceeds this amount, the cow is clearly not paying her way. The only satisfactory method of determining this question is by weighing the milk and testing the per cent. of butter fat by the Babcock test. A cow that does not pay takes up just as much room as a profitable one.

Relatively to size, the horse has a smaller stomach than any other domestic animal. This makes it necessary that he must feed frequently, digest promptly, and have a rich material in a small bulk, thus adapting him especially to perform rapid work. In a state of nature he is under no necessity of eating too much at any one time, but replenishes the stomach lightly and at frequent intervals. There is no overtasking the organ, and no extreme exertion upon a full stomach, which so often takes place in the domesticated condition. A horse will maintain excellent health on the natural grasses, but when he is placed under the saddle or in harness and subjected to work, we take him from his natural state and the same feeding will not longer meet the demands of the system.

TEACHING CHICKS TO ROOST.

Chicks of Leghorn and other light-weight breeds will begin roosting of their own accord when six or eight weeks old. Chicks of the heavier breeds often do not roost until taught to do so by the keeper. The general practice is to keep chicks of medium-sized breeds on the floor until about three months old, and chicks of the largest breeds a month or two longer. Unless the floor is kept clean and the chicks well bedded, it is better to teach all to roost early. If suitable wide roosts are used, there is no more danger of crooked breasts than on the floor, and many poultrymen think the general advantages of getting the youngsters on the roost, where they cannot crowd and huddle in corners, and are not soiled by [illegible]own and each other's [illegible]more than compensate [illegible]e are twisted.

UNREST IN CZAR'S NAVY.

Revelations by Prince Alexander Lieven.

That the Czar's navy is seething with disaffection has for some time been an open secret to students of Russian naval affairs. Prince Alexander Lieven, a naval commander and one of the most celebrated officers in the Russian service, has recently had the courage to publish a pamphlet which supplements the criticisms of the Douma on the mismanagement of the navy and the cause of disaffection.

The Prince states plainly and without reserve that the Russian navy is not only destitute of discipline, but of esprit de corps, and that there will be no improvement in this state of things until thoroughgoing reforms are carried out in all departments.

First of all, he says, it will be essential to secure reliable and competent non-commissioned officers. The non-commissioned officers, he says, were the real leaders of the mutiny on board the Pamyat Azoff, the superior officers of that cruiser not having the slightest idea of what was in the wind until they were surprised and killed.

The question of non-commissioned officers for the Russian navy, he adds, is of the greatest importance for us, for it will cost many more of us our lives if this question is not solved in a satisfactory manner. One makes a great mistake if one imagines that the mutiny has ceased. If at the present moment the air seems to be quieter, it is only because there is a mere outward calm among the people. The truth is we are not in a position to exert any influence over our sailors. We have nothing in common with them, and they on their part allow themselves to be entirely led away by fleeting public opinion. When a still stronger popular movement breaks forth the fleet will join the people and increase the danger which threatens the Government.

"It is not the officers, but the crews, which are the real commanders of the ships of the Russian navy."

$150,000 Gone With Legislator.

St. John, N. B. Sept. 4.—One of the most sensational cases ever brought to light in this province is that of Mr. W. B. Dickson, M.P.P., who has gone to the United States after misappropriating the funds of his firm to the extent of $150,000 to $200,000. Dickson was the lumber agent in Albert County of W. M. McKay, one of the largest lumber merchants in Eastern Canada. He received from McKay large sums of money as advances against contracts for lumber to be purchased and delivered by him. In many cases the contracts were forged, Dickson also did a large business on his own accord.

Dickson was also prominent politically. With George D. Prescott he was elected at the last provincial election as a supporter of the Hazen Administration. As one of Albert County representatives he had a considerable sum of road money in his possession and took it with him.

Warrants for Dickson's arrest on charges of forgery were issued this afternoon and every effort will be made to bring him back.

Banquetted At Williamsburg.

Dr. and Mrs. Whittaker have been lured to the great west, and have decided to settle in the city of Vancouver, where Dr. Whittaker will have a city practice. They leave for the west in a few days.

Knowing this the Oddfellows tendered to Dr. and Mrs. Whittaker a farewell banquet in the lodge room Monday evening Aug. 31st The hall was most beautifully decorated and was filled to its utmost with the Oddfellows and their wives and sweethearts. A fine program was rendered, after which many addresses were given, in which all voiced their regret at the departure of Dr. and Mrs. Whittaker.

The following address of presentation was then read by the Noble Grand:—Brother Walter C. Whitaker, M. D.

We, your friends and brothers of Williamsburg Lodge, No. 349, I. O. O. F., have learned with sorrow and regret of your intention to leave us and take up your residence in another field in the far west.

We feel that we cannot let you depart from our midst without assuring you of the high esteem and respect that we entertain for you. As a citizen, we have found you public spirited and willing to help in any good work that had for its aim the advancement of the interests of our village.

As a physician, we have learned to trust in you. We have found you careful, painstaking, moral, temperate, and thus possessing the cardinal virtues of a true family physician.

As a Christian, we have found you the spirit of Christian love and sympathy and that willingness to self-sacrifice yourself for the glory of God and the good of the public.

But we believe we know you best as an enthusiastic Oddfellow. Your coming to our lodge gave us new inspiration. Your fidelity has led us to be more faithful. Your knowledge and training has brought our lodge to its excellent condition of the present. We assure you, Brother Whittaker, that we shall greatly miss you.

As a slight token of our esteem for you, we ask you to accept on behalf of the members of Williamsburg Lodge No. 349, I. O. O. F., this suit case.

While we are expressing our regret at your departure, we are not unmindful of Mrs. Whittaker, your esteemed partner in life. On behalf of her many warm friends in this lodge, we ask her to accept this ladies' hand bag.

May these presents remind you of the warm friends you are leaving behind, and of our earnest prayers for your success and happiness in your new field of labor.

Signed on behalf of Williamsburg Lodge, No. 341, I. O. O. F.

Williamsburg, Ont., Aug. 31, 08.

Dr. Whittaker made a most excellent address in reply. He expressed his great surprise at the gifts of esteem, in view of their short residence in the village. He spoke of his deep interest in the social and moral welfare of the village, and especially of his love for Oddfellowship. He thanked all for their kind words and gifts of esteem to himself and to Mrs. Whittaker. He appealed to all to be faithful and loyal to their lodge. He was sorry to go and leave so many friends behind, and especially his aged mother. He assured all that he would not forget them, and would treasure long the gifts of affection from Williamsburg Lodge, No. 349, I. O. O. F.

After the presentation, refreshments and ice-cream were served to all present, and one of the most pleasant and profitable evenings ever enjoyed in our lodge room was brought to a close.

The Rev. G. S. Reynolds Dead.

News was received at Montreal on Monday evening of the death of Rev. Geo. S. Reynolds, of Carleton Place, Ont., who was a former pastor for years of the West End Methodist Church, in Montreal, previous to the Rev. A. A. Radley, the present incumbent.

The late Mr. Reynolds had been ailing for some time from heart trouble, for the last eight weeks or so, and on Sunday suddenly passed away. He leaves a widow to mourn his loss. He has also two brothers in the ministry, the Rev. F. C. Reynolds, of Brockville, and the Rev W. E. Reynolds, of Cornwall. The funeral took place yesterday morning from his late residence in Carleton Place, the remains being taken to Cornwall for interment.

The Rev. Mr. Timberlake, of the Centenary Methodist Church, Point St. Charles, who is also president of the Montreal Conference, left Tuesday evening for Carleton Place to attend the funeral.

Highway Robbers.

Brockville, Sept. 8.—Four prisoners who were on remand here and who either pleaded guilty or were found guilty, were sentenced by Judge McDonald to terms ranging from two to five years in Kingston penitentiary this morning for highway robbery attended with violence. Wm. McGuire was given five years for burglary in Athens two weeks ago; Maurice Foley got three years, and John F. Ross, two years; Frank P. Hall, of Cornwall, for passing a worthless check for $12, got two years.

Funeral of Mrs. Empey.

The funeral of Mrs. Empey, wife of H M. Empey took place Monday morning from the residence of her son-in-law, M Milne, 419 Clark Street, Montreal, to Bonaventure depot, enroute to Aultsville Ont., for interment. The deceased was a native of Ireland, and came to Canada over 70 years ago, having emigrated with her parents, being then very young. Her maiden name was Mary O'Brien. In 1848 she married Hiram Empey at Aultsville, where the couple resided until a few years ago, and then moved to Montreal. A few mouths ago the diamond jubilee of their wedding was celebrated. The deceased was a devout adherent of the Presbyterian Church. She leaves several children and grandchildren.—Montreal Herald.

Death Takes Two Old Settlers of Smith's Falls.

Smith's Falls, Sept. 3 —The death of two venerable citizens occurred here yesterday. William Graham, who was one of the oldest residents of this part of the country, died after a long illness. He came to Smith's Falls on the first boat which carried passengers from Montreal this way, and for seventy-three years he had lived here on a farm within a few miles of here. He is survived by four sons and three daughters Deceased was ninety four years of age.

In the death of George Thompson, which also occurred yesterday, Smith's Falls loses its very oldest citizen. He had reached the great age of ninety-six years. Up to two weeks ago he enjoyed the best of health and was in the possession of all his faculties. The greater part of his life was spent at Bishop's Mills. He leaves to mourn his loss his aged wife, three sons and five daughters, besides numerous grandchildren.

Rev. S. R. Drake, of Brantford, has been elected general superintendent of the B. M. E. Church.

Daniel McKeever, a London, Ont., boy, used a rifle to knock apples off a tree. The rifle discharged, killing him instantly.

LOCAL AND [illegible]

Cha[illegible]

John Webster for Brockville.

Brockville, Ont., Sept. 6.—If yesterday's Conservative convention is any criterion, Hon. G. P. Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, will have an exceedingly hard fight to hold his seat for Brockville riding at the approaching Dominion elections, as it is a foregone conclusion that he will be the Government candidate. The Conservatives of this constituency flocked here yesterday afternoon in numbers that overflowed the big room at the court house to select a candidate for the Commons. The meeting was an enthusiastic and harmonious one.

The choice fell on John Webster, president of the association, and a well known cheese buyer of Brockville for 25 years.

Six names were placed in nomination, viz: John Culbert, ex-M.P., ex-Mayor H. A. Stewart, K.C., G. A. Wright, Wm. Stafford, ex-Mayor W. H. Harrison and John Webster. Messrs. Culbert, Stewart, Stafford and Wright retired. The convention divided on Mr. Harrison and Mr. Webster the latter winning by forty-three majority. The choice was made unanimous amid great applause.

Mr. Webster, on coming forward, was tendered an ovation and returned his warmest thanks for the support accorded him.

Have You Stomach Trouble.

When you wake up with headache and bad taste in the mouth, something to settle the stomach is needed. That dull, heavy feeling must be lifted, and appetite must be created. Get a tumbler of water some sugar, and then pour in a stiff dose of Nerviline. You'll feel tip top in a few minutes. Nerviline invigorates, braces tones puts vim and snap into your movements. You'll be fitted for a hard days work by taking Nerviline—nothing better. Large bottle, 25c. everywhere.

Back From Northern Ontario.

Mr. T. H. Dunn, C. E. returned Monday from his trip into Northern Ontario where he spent a couple of months surveying townships for the Ontario Government. Mr. Dunn and his party left Metagami station on the C. P. R. on June 22. From there they canoed up the Spanish river and through a series of small lakes until they got over the height of land when they entered the Mettagami river, proceeding up this until they reached a point one hundred miles north of Fort Mettagami a Hudson Bay post. Here they built a cache for their provisions and started work on July 6th surveying the townships of Kingsmill and Laidlaw. The weather was fine and the work proceeded smoothly, consequently rapid progress was made. The survey was completed and the party ready to start on their return home on Aug. 21st, Metagami station being reached on Aug. 28th. The land in Kingsmill and Laidlaw township is level Mr. Dunn says, with very little rock outcrop. The soil for the most part is a good clay and is well timbered with spruce of all sizes.

When the party began work the weather was hot in the day time and cool at nights. Frost came the latter part of August, and on the 25th it was severe enough to freeze the leaves on the trees but not kill them. One of the features this year was the enormous quantity of berries Mr. Dunn witnessed. All kinds were found in profusion. He also enjoyed splendid new potatoes in the far north, securing them from Joe Moore, a noted Indian character, who had a fine patch on his plantation by the Kenogmissee river, an expansion of the Metagami river. These potatoes were not up when the party went in. Mr. Dunn considers the townships he surveyed good agricultural land for the most part. The season is open until about October 25th, when some of the smaller lakes freeze up, the larger ones later. Mr Dunn returns in good health and was acompanied by Messrs. F. M. Eagleson and J. E. Underwood, who will assist him to rush through the large amount of work that has accumulated on his hands.—Winchester Press.

Broke Jail at Kenora.

Kenora, Sept. 8.—Four prisoners confined in jail here made their escape through a hole bored by them in the outer stone wall Sunday evening. The prisoners were: George Johnston, awaiting trial for the murder of Mrs. Ella Ackerman on the 27th of July last; Dan Cavanagh, sentenced to eighteen months in Central Prison, Toronto, for attempted highway robbery on Aug. 18th; A. S. Darling, serving a two months' sentence for the same offence committed at the same time; and R. H. Griffin, sentenced to nine months in Central Prison for theft.

Later Johnston was located hiding near some houses on the outskirts of the town, and was captured by Constable Sherman. Griffin was captured a couple of hours later The other two are still at large.

The jail is totally inadequate for the secure housing of prisoners, and it was owing to all the cells being filled that fourteen men were confined in the corridor.

Gold Mine in Brock[illegible]

Stormont County Contest.

A four-cornered canvas is anticipated in Stormont county for the coming Dominion elections. The candidates will likely be R. A. Pringle, K-C., M. P., of Cornwall, the choice of the Conservative convention; Col. R. Smith, K.C, Cornwall, the choice of the Liberal convention. The canddates in the field other than those chosen by the conventions will likely be Ambrose Mulhern, also of Cornwall, Liberal, and Geo. Kerr of Farran's Point, Liberal-Conservative. Mr. Kerr carried the county for the Ontario Legislature in 1904. He has received many petitions to become a candidate and will likely consent. He conducts stores at Wales, Farran's Point and Osnabruck and his family has been settled in the county and identified with its farming and mercantile interests for many years.

weakens Every Part of the Body. Causes Organic Diseases.

Just as strength is the natural outcome of pure blood, so is debility and sickness the result of impure blood.

To know how quickly how surely Ferrozone cures, to see how it rebuilds and restores, you have only to read the following letters—read them carefully—see if the symptoms resemble yours.

Miss Evelyn M. Gaetz of Kingston, writes: "I have had an attack of blood disorder which broke out in horrid looking pimples They were ugly red disfiguring blotches that ruined the appearance of my face. I tried all sorts of medicine but the pimples did'nt leave. I was recommended Ferrozone and gave it a trial. I noticed an improvement after the second box, and kept up the treatment which finally cleared my skin. As the result of Ferrozone I have a clear healthy complexion and can recommend it to all other young women similarly affected."

Another young lady well known in society circles of Springfield, who derived exceptional benefit from Ferrozone says: "I felt it my duty to make known the value of Ferrozone. My trouble was poor weak blood, and as a consequence my lips were pallid, and my cheeks had no color. I was'nt at all strong, and required a bracing tonic. Ferrozone soon brought color to my cheeks, improved my appetie and made me stronger than I had been in years. I favor Ferrozone because it is so simple to take and works so quickly.".

No blood remedy exists that has the power to cure, to heal, to restore like Ferrozone; try it, 50c per box at any drug-store.

Cristopher J. McRae Dead.

Alexandria, Sept. 5.—His Lordship the Bishop of Alexandria, Vicar-General Corbett, of Cornwall, numerous priests of the diocese, and representative laymen, a vast concourse, this morning followed to their last resting-place in St. Raphael's cemetery, the remains of the late Christopher J. McRae, of Glen [illegible] County. The end came peacefully after a long illness, on Wednesday afternoon, in the 78th year of his age. Deceased was born in Dundee, Que. When yet a young man he went to California, and after 11 years returned to Glen Nevis, whither his parents had removed in the meantime. He started business as a lumber dealer and general merchant at Glen Roy, and married Margaret, a sister of Vicar-General Corbett. To them were born three children, one of whom, a son, was killed by being thrown from a horse. The widow, one son, Rev. Corbett McRae, and a daughter, Flora Mary, survive. Mr. McRae was for many years postmaster, and continued to efficiently discharge its duties till he was then superseded by a Liberal appointee. He was a good citizen, a stauch Conservative, a wise counsellor, a successful merchant, extremely charitable and devoted to his religious duties. His death was widely mourned, as shown by the immense cortage which followed the remains to the cemetery.

WILLIAMSBURG.

The bountiful harvest has been safely garnered in. Everywhere there is optimism and good cheer because of the abundant harvest. Those who have threshed say the yield is very heavy and the sample excellent. Just now the farmers are starting at the corn harvest It bids fair to be the best yet.

Harley Buchan is rushing up his new house and intends to fill in a beautiful lawn. Church street is certainly prospering.

Mr. Boyce deserves great praise for the way in which he has painted and beautified his home. This is a beautiful world—let us have beautiful homes beautiful lives.

A goodly number of our citizens took in the 1000 Islands excursion, and all report a grand time.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Lundy drove to Finch on Monday to attend the reopening services of the new Finch Presbyterian church. They report a beautiful church; excellent harvest home dinner; good addresses; fine music by the Dunbar Brass Band, and a most excellent concert by the famous Hiawatha Quartette, of Ottawa.

A lawn tennis society has lately been organized in our village, and a fine tennis court has been made on the manse grounds. All wishing to play and to become members, are askked to give in their names to Mr. Driver at the bank.

Re-opening services in connection with the Presbyterian church here, are to be held on Sunday, Sept. 13th. followed by a grand concert by the Hiawatha Quartette, of Ottawa. This is Canada's premier quartette. It will be a rare chance to hear this famous quartette and a good exhibit and good attendance.

Mr. Myers, of Morewood, and Miss Eastman, of Russell, are our new school teachers. We extend to them a very hearty welcome to our midst, and join in wishing them great success in their noble vacation.

They just "cure" that's all.

WINCHESTER. SPRINGS.

On Thursday evening, Sept. 3rd, there passed away Mr. Joseph Niblock of this place. Deceased was in 55th year and was a life long resident of Winchester Springs and highly respected by all who knew him. He had been in ill-health for over two years having had a severe attack of pleurisy, which later developed consumption. He bore his suffering with great patience and christian fortitude. All that kind care and willing hands could do was of no aaail. The funeral was conducted in the Presbyterian church, of which he was a member.

The pastor, Rev. Lundy, conducted the services. The text was taken from the 1st Chapter second Timothy last clause, 12th verse. There are left to mourn the loss of a kind and loving husband and brother his widow one brother and two sisters, namely Robert of Sarnia and Martha and Sarah of Parkhill.

The latter was present at his bedside at the time of his death.

The many friends snd neighbors extend their heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved.

Mrs. Niblock of Athens, attended the funeral of her brother-in-law here Joseph Niblock last week.

Mr. John Servage is the proud father of a bouncing boy born on Sept. 2nd.

Anniversary services will be conducted in the Presbyterian church next Sabbath in the morning at 11 o'clock and in the evening at 7.30 by the Rev. W. D. Bell of Finch, assisted by local clergymen.

The Hiawatha Quartette of Ottawa will favor the Springs on the evening of the 15th Sept in the Presbyterian church.

ST. VITUS DANCE

A Severe Case Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

St. Vitus' dance is a disease of the nerves brought on by a morbid condition of the blood. It is a common disease with children and attacks females oftener than males. The only cure lies in plenty of pure blood, because good blood is the life food of the nerves. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure even the most severe forms of this trouble because they enrich the blood supply, thus carrying the necessary food to the nerves. In proof of this we have the statement of Mrs. Alex. Cameron, Summerside P. E. I., who says:— "Some years ago my daughter Lena, then a child of ten years, became afflicted with St. Vitus dance. At that time she was attending school and the first indication I had that something was wrong, was that she appeared easily discouraged in her studies. She was naturally a spirited child, not given to tears, but she would cry over what I thought should be easy work for her. The disease progressed so rapidly that in the course of a few weeks she became unable to hold anything in her hands, and we were obliged to take her out of school. She became so afflicted that she could not hold a cup to her lips without suddenly losing hold of it. I knew from the first by the symptoms that her ailment was St. Vitus dance, and dispaired of seeing her cured, as it was looked on as such a hopeless ailment. She became so bad that she could not hold herself still for the space of ten seconds. Her hands or feet were continually moving and last of all she would contort her features so that she was losing her natural expression. At this stage I chanced on a paper containing a testimonial in favor of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, describing the cure of a little girl afflicted as mine was. I hastened to get a couple of boxes of the Pills, and by the time she had used them I noticed a decided change for the better, and purchased a further supply. By the time she had taken seven boxes she was entirely cured. Although she seemed thoroughly cured I was afraid the disease might return again, but it never did, and she has since enjoyed the best of health. I cannot thank Dr. Williams' Pink Pills enough for what they did for my child, and I hope my experience may be of benefit to someone afflicted as my daughter was."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be obtained by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HIS ALTERNATIVE.

It is best to keep one's personal dignity at whatever cost. A befitting sense of what is due one never comes amiss, even within prison precincts. This truth was appreciated by an Irishman whose expression of it is quoted by Michael MacDonagh, in "Irish Life and Character." The prisoner, refractory and obstinate, flatly refused to work in the treadmill.

The man was brought before the governor of the prison for disobedience. The governor asked him what reason he could give for not following out his orders.

"Me go on the treadmill!" exclaimed the prisoner, drawing himself up to his full height of offended dignity. "Never, sir! I'd rather lave the jail first!"

GETTING ITS STRENGTH OUT.

Mrs. Wickersham had advertised for an experienced cook. The first applicant who came in answer to the advertisement was a stout, red-haired young woman. Mrs. Wickersham propounded several questions to her, which she answered in a fairly satisfactory manner. Then she asked her:

"How long do you boil tea?"

"Well, mem," said the young woman, "some folks biles it longer, an' some shorter. It's all a matter o' taste."

"But you do boil it, don't you?"

"Oh, yes, certainly; but I've allus thought that two hours was long enough to bile any tea. You can git all the stren'th out of it in that time."

SHEEP MUTILATED.

Wanton Acts by Organized Groups of Marauders.

Under the title of "Savage Sardinia," Il Messaggero, the principal Roman morning newspaper, directed attention to the astonishing prevalence of lawless crimes in that island by organized groups of marauders and savages, who oftentimes turn out to consist of some of the most prominent and highly respected farmers in the provinces.

The other night eight masked individuals, armed with guns and daggers, invaded a farm belonging to a benevolent proprietor named Calvisi, on the mountain side near Sassari. There they seized the shepherd watching the flock, beat him senseless, robbed him of the small cash he had on his person, and left him bound hand and foot and gagged. They then drove 500 sheep delivered to his custody a distance of a couple of miles to a lonely valley, where they ripped open 300 of these animals, and thrust their daggers into every one of the rest.

Sardinia continues, as from time immemorial, to hold the record in all Italy for brutality, homicides, cattle wounding, incendiary fires and allied forms of damage to property. The criminal convictions for the latter crime are 4.32 in every 100,000 of the population.

In the single commune of Bitti, wherein the above vendetta has just taken place, no fewer than 1,500 sheep and 400 bullocks have been maliciously hamstrung since the beginning of this year. This extraordinary state of things is attributed largely to the notable deficiency of police and a rooted unbelief in the official administration of justice.

The change of dietary that comes with spring and summer has the effect in weak stomachs of setting up inflammation, resulting in dysentery and cholera morbus. The abnormal condition will continue if not attended to and will cause an exhaustive drain on the system. The best available medicine is Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. It clears the stomach and bowels of irritants, counteracts the inflammation and restores the organs to healthy action.

MONARCHS AND THEIR SAVINGS.

The Sultan of Turkey, who has an official income of about $4,000,000 a year, has long been depositing his savings with the Bank of France. The same institution is likewise honored with the patronage of King George of Greece and King Leopold. The Czar has preferred to keep his ready cash in the vaults of the Bank of England, where, it is said, he has at his command nearly $16,250,000 in Russian gold. The gold deposited by these monarchs, unlike other funds which come into the banks, never goes out again into circulation, unless it be by express command of the Royal depositor.

MONTREAL AND QUEBEC.

A veritable edition de luxe amongst railroad pamphlets has just been issued by the Grand Trunk to proclaim amongst tourists the glories of the cities of Montreal and Quebec. The brochure is beautifully printed, and generally arranged in the artistic style of earlier days, when the ornamentation of a volume was regarded as an important incident to its presentation of reading matter. It is also very well written, and gives an interesting description of the most interesting cities in Canada, with many illustrations from photographs that have not hitherto been published. Sent to any address on receipt of a two-cent stamp. Apply to J. D. McDonald, D. P. A., Toronto, Ont.

Suffer no More.—There are thousands who live miserable lives because dyspepsia dulls the faculties and shadows existence with the cloud of depression. One way to dispel the vapors that beset the victims of this disorder is to order them a course of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which are among the best vegetable pills known being easy to take and are most efficacious in their action. A trial of them will prove this.

A new recruit was instructed that letters addressed to him must be inscribed, "Private." He told his friends, and letters duly arrived addressed to "Mr. John Smith, 'Strictly Private.'"

2. Things You Don't See in a Sewing Machine

¶ Don't judge any sewing machine just by the way it looks.

¶ Enamel paint and shiny varnish are good things, but they don't make a machine run well or last long.

¶ Experience and judgment and intent combined with manufacturing facilities, are the things you should consider before buying.

¶ These points, combined with a rigid system of inspection and tests, give a lasting value to every Singer Sewing Machine.

¶ You can't see them, but you learn them in the easy, effective working of every part—and their value becomes more plain to you after years of service.

¶ Every Singer is perfect when it leaves the factory—your daughter will say it's still perfect when you have no more use for it.

GREAT FIRE AT ST. REMI

Small Quebec Village Narrowly Escapes Destruction.

A despatch from Montreal says: The village of St. Remi, 35 miles from here, narrowly escaped the fate of Three Rivers, when a fire broke out early on Friday morning. Aid was asked for from Montreal, and a special train with a section of the fire brigade, engines, etc., went out and soon had the fire under control. The loss will amount to about $150,444. Ten houses and stores were burned, beside a number of sheds and outbuildings. The fire started in the general store of Mr. Lazure, situated in the center of the village, just in front of the parish church. The flames soon spread to adjoining buildings, and but for aid from Montreal the whole town would have burned. Four individuals were seen prowling around the village on Friday morning. As they were believed to be the bandits of St. Eustache, they were ordered to leave within an hour, or they would be arrested. Among the destroyed buildings are the restaurant of Alex. Tayrent, Dr. Trudeau's office, the residence of M. J. D. Black, the Ste. Marie store, and the residences of Mr. A. Taillon and Mr. Lesame. The townspeople put up a plucky fight, but were badly handicapped for the want of proper apparatus.

C. P. R. BRIDGE BURNED.

Main Line Between White River and Schreiber Cut.

A despatch from North Bay says: Passenger traffic on the C. P. R. was disorganized on Thursday by two accidents, which cap the climax of a series of events during the week which have kept the officials constantly on the jump. Serious washouts tied up the line west of Fort William, followed by a pitch-in east of Port Arthur on Wednesday, when a light engine crashed into the rear end of a freight train, smashing the engine, caboose and one car. No one was injured. Hardly had the tracks been fixed and traffic again got moving before an even more serious event occurred on Thursday, in the burning of the six hundred-foot bridge between White River and Schreiber, which will take at least three days to rebuild. Bush fires are supposed to have ignited the bridge. The Imperial Limited express, which left North Bay on Wednesday night for Winnipeg, reached White River, and will have to return to Sudbury and go over the Soo line, via Minneapolis, to Winnipeg. Trains from Winnipeg will also have to use the Soo line, via Minneapolis, until the bridge is replaced.

WOMAN ACROBAT HURT.

Fell Forty Feet at the Toronto Exhibition.

A despatch from Toronto says: While Mlle. Marie La Blonche was performing her sensational ride through space in front of the grand stand at the Fair on Monday about 3.30 p.m., she was thrown to the earth and sustained serious injuries to her spine and abdomen. The woman, hanging by her teeth to a small wheel, traverses a wire rope strung up from the tower to a pole at the front of the stand about 40 feet above the ground. After she had gone about half way the wire commenced to sag, and a moment later the woman fell amidst scenes of the wildest excitement among the spectators. She lit on her feet, fell backwards, and rolled prone upon the ground. Dr. Adam Wright and Dr. Mills made an examination, and had her taken to the General Hospital.

TRITD TO STORM CATHEDRAL.

Riot by the Glasgow Socialists and Unemployed.

A despatch from Glasgow says: Two thousand Socialists and unemployed, after an open-air meeting on Sunday, at which violent speeches were made, attempted forcibly to invade the Cathedral during services. A large body of police, which had been specially stationed there to prevent just such an occurrence, frustrated the designs of the mob by charging it with their batons. Several of the rioters were injured and the mob was finally dispersed.

USED RIFLE AS CLUB.

Boy Was Killed While Knocking Down Apples.

A despatch from London, Ont., says: Daniel McKeever, seventeen years old, residing on Hamilton road, was killed near Pottersburg on Monday. He was out shooting with some companions, and, seeing an apple tree in a field, jumped a fence, and, using his rifle as a club, tried to knock the apples down. The gun exploded, the shot entering his body above the heart, tearing a gaping wound. Death was instantaneous.

FROM THE WESTERN STATES.

One Thousand Settlers Arrive at Northport, Sask.

A despatch from Northport, Sask., says: The regular train from Minneapolis and St. Paul arrived on Friday in two sections of fifteen cars each. The trains brought in about one thousand settlers and homeseekers from the western States, all of whom were of a desirable class. Large quantities of household effects and farm implements are following by freight. All are enthusiastic over their prospects. Many had made previous trips to s... ...e land.

WRECK ON GRAND TRUNK

Seven Coaches Leave the Rails---Eight Passengers Injured.

A despatch from Woodstock, Ont., says: A trainload of passengers had a miraculous escape in an accident just west of Gobles station, ten miles east of here, at five o'clock on Thursday morning. No. 4 G. T. R. eastbound express was running along through a deep bush at the rate, it is said, of fifty miles an hour, when the train apparently struck a broken rail. The engine and front end of the first car kept the track, then the next seven coaches were tumbled over the tracks and rear coach stayed on.

Two of the coaches left the tracks and were half buried in the earth. Fortunately all kept upright, and it was probably due to this that passengers escaped so well.

Several received minor injuries. One man had his head bruised and another a foot injured. All the passengers received a terrible shaking up as the coaches bumped along the ties and came to a sudden stop.

The list of injured is as follows: Mrs. H. Howland, address unknown, old lady in bad condition from shock, taken to Brantford; Mrs. Eugene Butrel, of Chicago, recently passed through operation, dangerous condition from shock; Henry Barlow, Woodstock, lacerated and bruised; Eugene Cruch, New York, internal injuries; Mrs. E. M. Bendur, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., bone in hand broken; W. S. Burton, sprained ankle; G. B. Daniel, knee hurt; H. A. Schebah, Chicago, abrasions of shoulder.

THOUSANDS HOMELESS.

Disastrous Fire in a Nevada Mining Camp.

A despatch from Rawhide, Nev., says: Three thousand people homeless, a score or more injured and a property loss of over $750,000 is the result of a disastrous fire which started on Friday morning in the Rawhide Drug Company's building. Fanned by a gale, the fire swept rapidly south and east to Balloon avenue and up Rawhide avenue to within sixty yards of the People's Hospital. Over a ton and a half of dynamite was used in the demolition of buildings, which in a measure stayed the flames' progress. The volunteer fire department and five hundred miners worked heroically, but owing to the inflammable construction of the buildings they were swept away like tinder. At 11 a.m. the business portion of Rawhide avenue was a smoldering ruin, the flames being finally checked south of Balloon avenue. Collin's hardware store, containing two tons of dynamite, exploded, hurling burning planks and boards a great distance and setting fire to numbers of buildings simultaneously. Many persons were injured by flying debris, but none seriously.

GOOD NEWS FOR THE SOO.

The Algoma Steel Works to Start Again Soon.

A despatch from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., says: Superintendent D. D. Lewis of the Algoma Steel Company announced on Friday afternoon that the plant will be running in full force by October 1. Notices have been posted at the works saying that the blast furnaces will resume operations on Tuesday, September 15, and the Bessemer open hearth blooming and rail mills will start up again at 6 o'clock on Tuesday morning, October 1. It is understood that the company has received several satisfactory orders of late, and with the brightening of the financial horizon it is hoped the mills will be enabled to continue running for a long time.

BRAKES TAMPERED WITH.

Rubber Tubes Under the Cars Found to be Cut.

A despatch from Montreal says: A criminal attempt to interfere with a railway train was made on Tuesday night by parties unknown. As a train of freight cars was pulling out of the C. P. R. yard in Hochelaga it was noticed by a brakeman that the pneumatic brakes were not working properly. The train was stopped, and it was found that about 50 rubber air tubes had been maliciously cut under the cars. If this had not been noticed in time the train crew believed it would have been the cause of a serious wreck, with loss of life. Detectives have been notified, and arrests are likely to follow.

RIOT AT GLASGOW.

Four Hundred Men Made a Raid on the City Hall.

A despatch from Glasgow, Scotland, says: Four hundred unemployed workmen secretly assembled on Thursday afternoon, rushed to the municipal building, and almost got into the Council Hall, where the weekly meeting was proceeding. The chamber doors were locked just in time to prevent the mob from entering. The unemployed men held the members of the Council prisoners, kicking the massive oak doors until the police arrived, and eventually dispersed the crowd. The unemployed, on Thursday evening, issued a manifesto threatening a recurrence of the bread riots and declaring that 60,000 men and women and 100,000 children were crying for bread in a city of plenty.

THE WORLD AGAINST BRITAIN

Combined Crusade Will Proceed on the New Patent Law.

A despatch from London says: A despatch to the London Daily Mail from Berlin says the great manufacturing nations of the world have taken preliminary steps in a crusade against the new British patent law. The project originated with the Trade and Patent Congress, which was in session at Stockholm, from Aug. 26 to Aug. 30. All the delegates to the congress, including those from the United States, expressed the opinion that radical measures were necessary to bring Great Britain to terms. It was decided that this could be attained by the various nations passing more restrictive patent laws, and by negotiating patent treaties between nations which will waive the domestic patent laws so far as the treaty power is concerned.

Arrangements for a coalition against Great Britain will proceed without delay. It is expected that the discussion in congress of the proposed new American Patent Act will give an impetus to the movement, and it is hoped that the matter will by Spring have progressed to a point where Great Britain will be effectually isolated. It is believed that British manufacturers will then be compelled to press the Government to repeal the Act, or make treaties with other countries. Germany intends to repeal her present patent law, which is not enforced rigidly. She will then be in a position to combine with other nations against Great Britain.

AS OTHERS THINK.

Everyone in Chesterville Has a Right to His Own Opinion.

While everyone has a right to his own opinion, yet it is wise to always consider what others think and profit by it.

Nothing makes life so miserable, or interferes so widely with the usefulness of the average person, as indigestion, and it is well for us to give fair consideration to what others think about this remarkable affliction.

Walter G. Bolster is positive that in Mi-o-na stomach tablets he has an absolute cure for indigestion and the many disagreeable symptoms that follow this disease, such as distress after eating, coated tongue, bad taste in the mouth, dizziness, flatulence and nervousness.

They sell Mi-o-na with satisfaction guaranteed or money back. They believe in it and so may you.

Shot at a Party.

Cornwall, Ont., Sept. 3.—Royal Aubret, of North Bangor, N. Y., was brought here on a stretcher and was operated on at the General Hospital for an ugly gunshot wound received at Dickson Centre, on Tuesday evening. He was one of a crowd that visited a house where a party was being held. They were evidently unwelcome, and in the trouble that followed some one in the house discharged a shotgun, and one of the slugs or shots with which it was loaded, struck Aubret in the abdomen. He is in a very critical condition.

Women Grabbed Thief.

Montreal, Sept. 6.—Armed with a bulldog revolver, a daring young thief named Harve Desjardins, 21 years of age entered the Roman Catholic church at St. Henri early to-day and filched from the worshippers their purses, handkerchiefs and prayer beads. Desjardins stole into the church and seated himself in a quiet corner. He kept tab on the women, and as soon as they would leave their pews to go to the confessional box he would quietly slip over and take their purses and any other articles that they might leave in the seat. In a few minutes he had collected a pile, and was just about to escape with his bundle when he was noticed by Mr. Isaie Nolet, who gave the alarm.

Several women whose purses he had stolen left their seats and grabbed the thief, and, despite his struggles, held him till the police came. He pleaded guilty, and will be sentenced on Tuesday.

Former Toronto Pastor Victim of Apoplexy.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 4.—Rev. Dr. William Patterson, pastor of Bethany Presbyterian Church, and formerly of Cooke's Church, Toronto, was stricken with apoplexy this afternoon while transacting business in the Franklin National Bank. He was taken to the Presbyterian Hospital, where late to night he was said to be seriously ill, though resting easily. Mrs. Patterson, who has been spending a few days at Cape May Point, was notified by wire of Dr. Patterson's illness.

While standing before the paying teller's window, Dr. Patterson was seen to reel by a bank attache, who ran to his assistance, catching him in his arms before he fell. At the Presbyterian Hospital it was found that the lower half of the minister's body had been affected, although he still retained consciousness, and could converse freely and intelligently. Dr. WilliamP atterson is one of the best known clergymen in this country. He has a wide reputation as a public speaker.

A Double Funeral.

Alexandria, Sept. 5.—A joint funeral, the interment of the remains of Mary, wife of Mr. James Wier, and their daughter, Christine, aged 18 years, was the unusual spectacle presented this afternoon to the citizens of this town. The daughter died yesterday, and early this morning, not twenty hours later, the mother passed away, both victims of typhoid fever. Six other members of the family are down with the disease, and but slight hopes are entertained for the recovery of several of them. Two trained nurses have been in constant attendance, and the humble home is a veritable hospital. These conditions dictated an early burial of the remains, and accordingly this afternoon, at 3 o'clock, St. Finnan's cathedral bell tolled the solemn announce[illegible]

What It Means To Be The Father of a Girl.

There are few men who realize before marriage what it means to be the father of a girl. There are even married men who scarcely realize all their responsibilities toward their daughter or daughters. Bacon wrote: "He that hath wife and children hath given hostages to fortune."

The father who has money has little to worry him in the possession of daughters. He can provide for them. But take the case of the average father—he should take a quiet hour to himself and do some thinking.

The future of a boy can hold small terrors for a father. A boy can always get on. He will look after himself when the time comes. He has his father's spirit; he will carve his way to the front. If you have no money to start him in business it is not a fearful thought. He may be better man for having to make his own future. But the future of a girl! If you have no money laid by, no insurance, what about the daughter or the daugters, when they are left to face the world alone? The world remains a cruel and a wicked place; the young girl, going her way, is pierced by thorns, bruised by stones. Your girl, thrown to this merciless monster world, is likely enough to know the pangs of hunger, to bruise her hands knocking at the door of every crowded labor-mart. At last she gains work perhaps, and usually very long hours for very little pay.

There is always the chance that she may get married, but it is a chance. Look around and see the number of unmarried females on every side. They were once as young and as fair as your daughter.

The moral is as clear as daylight. If you are a monied man make provision for your daughter or daughters now. If you are but one of the most numerous class, the man who works for a living see to it that your daughter or daughters learns something beside piano playing and parlor manners. While they are still girls let them learn something useful, typewriting, stenography, dressmaking, millinery, something that they can later in life teach to others, and use to make good and not a drudging living from. And it is also your duty to save every cent possible for that daughter or those daughters. It would be a fine thing if every father would determine to save enough to give his daughter a thousand dollars, either at his death or when she reached womanhood, and was ready to start herself in business. The American father has quite a little to learn from the parents of the older nations. In Europe the father works hard to prepare a dot or marriage portion for his daughter. This is an example worth following in this country.

The gain of comfort there is for the father of daughters nowadays lies in the fact that during the last twenty years women have learned wonderfully how to look after themselves and that there is scarcely a single avenue of business or salaried position which they have not successfully entered.

Prepare For Old Age.

Ottawa, Sept. 4.—By the end of the present month all arrangements will have been completed for bringing into operation the law passed last session providing for the sale of Government old-age annuities. It is the intention of Sir Richard Cartwright, who is the minister in charge of the new department, to conduct an educational campaign throughout Canada by means of public lectures to be delivered by agents specially selected to inform the public as to the extent and utility of this progressive scheme of Goverment insurance against risk of penury in old age

The Government is prepared to guarantee at maturity a return of four per cent. compound interest on premiums paid in to purchase annuities. In case of annuities. In case of death prior to the time the annuities matures, the interest rate guaranteed is three per cent., and the purchaser is assured of a full return of all the moneys paid in, with interest compounded at the above rates. The Government assumes the whole cost of the operation of the act, and the purand the interest returns to the investor have been calculated on that basis.

The public is already showing a considerable interest in the scheme, and Mr. S. T. Bastedo, superintendent of the annuities branch of the Trade and Commerce Department, is daily receiving many letters of inquiry as to the conditions on which annuities can be purchased. It is proposed to issue literature shortly detailing the advantages of the Government annuities and giving full information as to interest returns, method of purchase, etc. Postmasters throughout the country will be instructed to receive premium payments as soon as the act comes into force by proclamation of the Governor General in Council. First applications for annuities must be made direct to the department in Ottawa.

John Lasure Gets Three Years for Thefts.

Cobourg, Sept. 5—John Lasure, a Peterboro youth of eighteen years, made quite a criminal record for himself in this vicinity. Thursday he came to Cobourg, and spent the day, returned to Peterboro that night, where, it is alleged, he stole a bicycle and rode to Cobourg, arriving here Friday evening. It was further alleged that he went to the Balmoral hotel here, broke into a trunk belonging to Charles Moirs, took from it an overcoat, vest, shirt, gloves, hat and opera glasses.

At 9.15 he took a horse and buggy belonging to W. Johnston, of Grafton, from the Hotel Sted, and drove to Peterboro. Arriving there he left [illegible]se and rig in Jackson Park, and [illegible]

EMERGENCY DANGER.

When a Harsh, Catarrhal Cold Fastens on the Breathing Organs a Life is Threatened.

There are times when a Hyomei outfit is worth a life and having it at hand will save a life, no safer precaution can be suggested than calling at W. G. Bolster's drug store and getting a supply for use in following cases:

When a child shows the first sign of croup; a breath of Hyomei through the inhaler will check the trouble permanently.

When through catching cold you seem to be choking up, difficulty to breathe, pain or soreness over the lungs and other symptoms of pneumonia, the instant relief from Hyomei air is marvelous.

It penetrates quickly to the inner recesses of the bronchial tubes and lungs where no liquid or moist medicine can reach.

When an asthmatic condition presents unusual wheezing and oppressed breathing, Hyomei will bring rest, complete outfit $1.00.

$100,000 Fire.

Montreal Sept. 4.—In a fire at St. Remi this morning nine houses and stores were destroyes at a loss estimated at $100,000

Aid was sent out from Montreal but little good could be done as the water supply was poor. Hand pumps had to be used and in that way the fire was got under control after being in progress three hours.

Fire at L'Original.

L'Original, Ont., Sept 5.—Fire started in F. Grouix's jewellery store and spread to the postmaster's residence, then to the post-office, which adjoins, then caught on to Mr. Cetlain's residence, on the other side. The Sterling Bank of Canada caught, and the fire spread to B. R. Poulin's residence, before it was controlled. All the buildings are destroyed. Loss about twenty thousand dollars, partly covered by insurance. Cause unknown.

Goat Ate Bank Note.

Berlin, Sept. 4 —An old goatherd recently fell asleep, and one of his animals pulled out the contents of his knapsack, and among other things devoured a £50 note, constituting the goatherd's savings during many years.

The goatherd travelled to Berlin, and went to the office of the German Imperial Bank, where he put before the officials a strange, pulpy mass, wrapped up in leather, and asked them to examine it for the purpose of establishing the fact that it contained the remnants of a £50 note. It was the interior of the unhappy goat, which had had to pay for it's fondness for dainties with its life. The officials sent the deposit to an expert for examination, and after he had given his verdict that the goatherd's story was true the old man was paid.

Train Load Chinaman Run Into Ravine.

North Bay, Ont., Sept. 9.—At six o'clock this morning, six miles west of White River, on the C.P.R., the first section of the Atlantic express, east bound, ran into a ravine, the bridge spanning the chasm being in flames. The passengers were all Chinamen, passing through in bond from the coast, and escaped injury. Engineer Nice, of Schreiber, was probably fatally injured and his fireman suffered a broken leg. The engine turned over on its side and the mail and baggage cars were burned. How the passengers escaped seemed miraculous. The bridge, which is six hundred feet long, is still burning, and no estimate can be made of the duration of the tie-up until the flames subside.
