Victim Identified by Cousin.

At the resumed inquest on the remains of Edwin Lowe, who was killed at the station on Monday night of last week by being run over by a train, no further light was thrown on the actions of the unfortunate fellow just preceeding his death, and no one has been brought forward who even saw him on the train and could identify him. There is no doubt as to his having been a passenger, as among the unclaimed articles found in a car of the same train which passed through here, were a hat and suit-case bearing the man's name, and an overcoat and scarf which are known to have been his. The reason, cause or circumstances of his death were not established by any evidence brought out.

Two young ladies from Winchester who boarded the train that night gave evidence, but only seemed to confirm the statement that all vestibule doors were closed except at one end of the first class car which they got on. A man was noticed trying to open a vestibule door but aroused no particular attention and another man was noticed passing from one car to another but it was not shown that either man was the dead man.

The last witness to be called was Oliver Roberts of Toronto, a cousin of the dead man, and who had come at his own expense to attend the inquest. He positively identified the watch and chain, ring and knife taken from the body as having belonged to his cousin, Edwin Lowe. The latter was an Englishman and had first come to Canada in 1910, with his wife, and had followed the occupation of pattern maker until last September when the couple returned to England, since which time Lowe had been employed as pattern maker by the Birmingham Gas Co. A couple of months ago a letter from Mrs. Lowe to a friend in Toronto said her husband would again return to Canada and would sail from Liverpool on April 7th, which he did, landing in West St. Johns on April 17th, and was on his way to Toronto, on the fatal night, where a friend the next morning was at the station to meet him. His non-arrival aroused suspicion and inquiries of the booking agent in Toronto led to the fact of the death here being investigated and leading to identification.

The jury brought in a verdict that Edwin Lowe met his death by being run over by a train and that it was probably caused accidentally.

The following were the jurors:—Thos. Wholehan, C. Chambers, T. E. Ellis, H. Masterson, Jas. Beattie, S. Fyke, Dr. Hutt, Jas. Myers, Wesley Hamilton and Pat Flynn.

Cornwall Township Loses Appeal

At Osgoode Hall yesterday the First Appellate Court gave out a number of judgments at the opening of court. Among them was the case of the Ottawa and New York Railway, and the New York Central Lines against the Township of Cornwall. The appeal was from a decision of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board with regard to the property assessment of a bridge over the St. Lawrence River. The municipal body of Cornwall Township claimed that they could assess the bridge as property within the township, and were supported by the Railway Board. The railways on the contrary, contended that the bridge was only a means of conveyance across the river on which tracks were laid, and it was the property of a separate company. The appeal was allowed in favor of the plaintiff railway companies.

INITIAL STEPS TAKEN FOR RADIAL LINE THROUGH DUNDAS

Representative meeting in Winchester

One of the most progressive movements in the history of Eastern Ontario and one that promises to have a far reaching effect in the development of the counties lying between the Ottawa and the St. Lawrence Rivers, was inaugurated at a large gathering of representatives of many municipalities in the town hall, Winchester, last Thursday afternoon. The meeting will take an important place in the economic history of the eastern counties of Ontario as the initial step taken for the introduction of the provincial hydro-radial system as a factor in building up Dundas, Russell, Carleton and the adjacent townships. The meeting, which was attended by representatives from Ottawa and a dozen other municipalities, was unanimously in favor of the construction of a radial line between Ottawa and Morrisburg. with offshoots to serve communities no touched by the main line

Delegates from the various municipalities represented promised that their councils, without delay, would pass the resolutions necessary to have the Ontario hydro-electric commission put a survey party at work, with another party to collect data to show the business which such a road would do, and the revenue it could rely upon.

The Ottawa Board of Trade was represented by ex-Mayor Chas. Hopewell and Messrs. J. Moffatt Ross and Frank Jarman.

Mr. O. D. Casselman, of Chesterville presided, and Mr. W. G. Hewson, assistant engineer of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, was present and gave a clear and detailed explanation of the new scheme which the commission has adopted for serving the rural communities of Ontario with radial railways as well as with electric light and power.

Mr. Casselman stated that it was the intention of the commission to construct railway lines radiating like the lighting and power system from the source of power. The Hydro-Electric Commission had just finished installing electric lighting systems in that district and had given the people such satisfaction that they reposed every confidence in it in this larger undertaking. He explained that the obligation for the success of the project would be upon the municipalities, so it was desirable that they be sure it would be a self-sustaining utility before the scheme was undertaken.

Mr. Hewson stated that upon receiving resolutions from the various municipalities affected the Hydro-Electric Commission would despatch a survey party to the district where the radial line was desired and another party to gather accurate information regarding the business that the proposed line could rely upon. The expense of all these preliminary investigations would be borne by the commission. In order that the construction of the line should be undertaken it was necessary that the estimated revenue should be sufficient to cover the cost of maintenance and the capital charges. The commission did not want to make these surveys and investigations unless the municipalities showed that they meant business. When the report of the surveyors and the special investigators were made, a committee should be formed from representatives of each municipality to see that the necessary agreements were made and other details attended to. The scheme was really a co-operative one between the municipalities, with the road constructed and operated by the commission. The cost of the road would be distributed among the municipalities by the commission, according to the service the railway renders to each. Debentures would be issued by the municipalities as a safeguard to cover the cost of the road, but these would be deposited in the commission's vaults, and might never have to be touched if the railway was a paying proposition, and the bonds would be guaranteed by the Provincial Government. Only in case of a deficit would it be necessary to sell any of the municipal debentures.

"Is the commission prepared to build this railway if the surveyors' and investigators' reports are favorable, and the project is endorsed by the vote of the ratepayers?" asked Mr. Casselman.

"Certainly," replied Mr. Hewson. "that is the purpose of the organization."

Mr. Hewson suggested that the first line built should be the trunk line for the radial system in Eastern Ontario and that spur lines should be built to serve other communities.

Mr. Hopewell declared that the city of Ottawa was very much in favor of this hydro radial project, and he had no doubt that the City Council would pass the necessary resolution to have the survey and investigation made. The people of Ottawa were convinced of the benefit the railway would to the city and the adjacent country, and they felt that their interests would be safer in the hands of the hydro-electric commission than with any private corporation undertaking the work. The commission had a splendid record of achievement, due to a great extent to the accurate and conservative estimates it made before undertaking any project, and it enjoyed the full confidence of the people with whom it had dealt. He pointed out that the cost of the road per mile and the debt that would be incurred was immaterial as long as the road paid its own way as a going concern. He believed that such a radial railway would do much to improve conditions in agricultural communities and keep the young men on the farms. This was one of the great needs of Canada today.

Mr. Frank Jarman stated that the securing of a provincial subsidy was vital to the success of the undertaking.

Mr. Hewson stated that the question of subsidies was now under consideration and a decision would probably be given before the survey of the proposed line was completed.

Reeve W. J. Fisher of Winchester, heartily endorsed the project and promised that his council would forthwith pass the resolution asking that the preliminary work be commenced.

Mr. Pat Kirby, reeve of Winchester township, stated that his council would pass the resolution next week.

One man expressed the opinion that the road might cost $45,000 a mile but Mr. Hewson asserted that the cost would be much lower than that figure and it was just possible that the line could be built and equipped for $18,000 a mile

The engineer urged the municipalities to get together an prepare a scheme big enough to assure them a good entrance into the heart of the city of Ottawa.

Reeve Menard of Russell, J. W. McPhail of Russell Village, Mr. Carkner of Kenmore, Deputy Reeve Merkley of of Williamsburg, Councillor Mulholland of Mountain, Orlan Baker of Williamsburg Village and others spoke briefly in approval of the project and promised that their councils would immediately ask the commission to start the survey.

The meeting was a representative one, and the men showed that they meant business. Pending the appointment of a committee, it was decided that Mr. Casselman should act as secretary of the provisional committee.

A striking illustration of the need of a radial line to serve this district was furnished the party from Ottawa as they were leaving for home in the large touring car in which they came to Winchester. An Ottawa commercial traveller rushed forth from the hotel and implored them to carry him to the city. It was impossible to make railway connections that day or night to enable him to reach Ottawa, and he would not get to the city until noon the following day. The Ottawa party readily agreed to oblige the traveling man, and in an hour and a half he was at his home in the city, whereas if he had to wait for train conections he woud not have arrived in Ottawa until about 20 hours later.

Cost of Spraying.

The cost of spraying varies greatly. The principal factors affecting cost are: Size of trees, thoroughness of application, kind of nozzle used, light or heavy bloom or set of fruit and weather conditions at spraying time—that is, whether windy or calm. The first application is made before the leaves are out, with a nozzle that forms a fine misty spray. This does not require much time or material, and hence this is usually the least expensive application. If there is a good bloom, the second or calyx spray is the most expensive application as a coarse nozzle is generally used and the spray must be directed at each separate cluster of calyx cups, and the latter penetrated and filled which can be accomplished well only under high pressure from the pump. The cost of the third application ordinarily is about the same as the first, but this depends entirely upon how well the fruit sets. The same is true of the fourth application. Both the third and fourth applications are made with a nozzle throwing a fine misty spray which covers fruit and leaves with a fine film of the liquid.

Inferior Lightning Rods

Prof. W. H. Day of the Department of Physics of the O. A. C. says:—Again I wish to warn the farmers against inferior lightning rods. One of the same companies that buncoed the farmers with iron-centred rods last year is reported to be selling the same rod again this year. Watch out for them.

There is no difficulty in spotting these rods. The outside covering is a thin sheet copper. Inside of the copper is a strip of galvanized steel or iron one-half inch wide and two galvanized steel or iron wires about No. 10. The copper sheath is twisted around the strip and wires giving the rod a corrugatad appearance. The steel or iron will rust out in from five to ten years. For photograph of what happened to a rod of this kind in less than eight years see Figure 34, Builetin 220, which may be had by writing the Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

An Illinois firm is circularizing the trade and others advocating the "Mast" Lightning Rod System. They declare that twisted cables are positively dangerous claiming they act like "choke coils", that tubes only should be used, that insulators must be used, etc. For concentrated essence of error these circulars surpass anything else I have seen.

Beware of the man with the iron-centred rod and the man who claims that twisted cables are dangerous. This Department will be glad to be informed regarding the operations of either.

Brief Canadian News Notes.

The offer of Capt Percival Molson and Lieut. Geo. McDonald to raise another company to supplement the Princess Patricias has been accepted by the Militia Department.

Port Arthur and Fort William were plunged into darkness for fifteen minutes by a cat climbing a pole and short-circuiting the wires and being killed, its owner, Robert Taylor, being seriously shocked when he tried to rescue it.

The announcement of the heavy casualty list, with still heavier to follow, is believed to have stopped election talk and preparations, and reduced the soldiers' voting proposal to an absurdity in face of the grim work of Canadian soldiers.

Grow Cannas And Dahlias.

To grow the best cannas, pieces of the roots containing one or two buds, should be planted in four or five inch pots now. These should be grown under glass until all danger from late Spring frosts has passed. Then the plants are turned out of their pots and bedded out. If conveniences are not had for this indoor growing, then wait until early May, when the clumps should be devided into strong divisions containing from one to three buds and planted into a well prepared soil. To have cannas at their best, incorporate a great quantity of well-rotted manure with the earth and after the plants are well up mulch the bed with the same material. Then throughout the Summer keep the plants plentifully supplied with moisture. Quantities of plant food and copious moisture will produce wonderful results with these plants. When the effect is to be a massed one, set the plants a foot to fifteen inches apart in the bed. If many shoots are desired in a limited area the whole clumps may be planted.

In growing dahlias, do not start the plants too early. Dahlias are distinctly a late Summer and early Fall flower, and late May or early June is soon enough to start the plants. Much of the poor success with these plants is in starting the plants in April or early May, which brings the plants into bloom during the heat of the Summer, just at a time the plants should be making development for later bloom In reverse to the wants of cannas, dahlias must be given a relatively poor soil, or the plants will grow all to foliage, producing few blossoms. It is well to start the clumps before dividing them, for then each division planted will be sure to produce a plant. Toward the middle to the last of May place the undivided clumps in boxes or a bed of moist sand, covering them only slightly. When the buds start divide the roots with a sharp knife, leaving one strong shoot to each piece. Then plant the divisions four feet apart in a moderately light soil, covering them with five or six inches of soil. Allow not more than two shoots to grow from each piece of root, and when these shoots have produced two joints pinch the tips to cause laterals to develop at and below the ground. Plants thus treated will require no staking, unless grown in an unprotected situation.

AUSTRALIA'S "G.O.M."

Sir George Reid Unsurpassed as a Raconteur.

"Work, but do not worry." That is the favorite motto of Sir George Reid, High Commissioner for Australia, who recently celebrated his seventieth birthday. He once remarked to the writer, as we chatted about the qualities which make most for success in life, that "care not only killed the cat, but the master, too. I know," he continued, "it is difficult at times not to worry, but it is the man who can thrust worry on one side and concentrate on his work who will accomplish things which will enable him to overcome his troubles.

As a genial raconteur Sir George is unsurpassed, but he has a serious purpose in making humorous after-dinner speeches and dining out as frequently as possible. It is part of his publicity campaign for Australia. "The more noise I make," he remarked on one occasion, "the more the papers will talk of me and the greater advertisement will result for the Commonwealth.

"My bulk"—a subtle allusion to his eighteen stone of avoirdûpois—"is a splendid advertisement in itself." And he tells an entertaining story against himself in this connection. He had seen General Sir Ian Hamilton, and had asked the General if he might do something in this war, despite the fact that he could not shoot, could not ride, and could hardly walk. "Can't you make an armored fort out of me?" he asked Sir Ian, in desperation. Sir Ian was not impressed by the suggestion. Suddenly "a gleam of intelligence," as Sir George Reid puts it, passed over Sir Ian Hamilton's face. "We could make a base of you," he said.

While making a speech, he referred to the time when he would be passing "to that bourne from which no traveler returns," and a voice rang out from the audience, "By Jove, George, the fat would be in the fire then!"

Sir George is generally equal to the task of dealing with the heckler.

On one occasion, not content with uproar, some of the audience threw missles, and one, a bag of flour, hit its mark. Sir George stood calm and unmoved, surveying the angry countenances through his monocle, while he deftly dusted his shoulders. "Even my enemies," he observed, slowly, "are at pains to show my whiteness as a politician."

Soldiers' Knapsacks.

A British "Tommy's" knapsack—he invariably refers to it as his "pack," by the way—contains a larger assortment of things than most people, judging by its size and general appearance, are apt to imagine.

It is his suit-case, wardrobe, and many other things combined. Besides a complete change of underclothing, including a couple of pairs of socks and a pair of "ammunition" boots, there is stowed therein a reserve pair of trousers, brushes, and a tin of blacking, a brass button-stick and brush for polishing his tunic buttons, and a hold-all containing, amongst other things, a knife, fork, spoon, razor, shaving-brush, and comb. There is also a spare towel and a cake of soap, a Bible and prayer-book, and his pocket ledger—known to "Tommy" as his "small book"—in which are entered up his pay and allowances, war services, decorations, wounds, etc. Herein also he stows away his emergency ration; and a broad flannel bandage or belt, to be worn next the skin in cold, wet weather, and which is dubbed by him a "cholera belt."

Ireland Short of Flax.

The shortage of flax and flax seed is a very serious matter for Ireland, and to a question by Sir John Lonsdale, in the House of Commons, as to what steps the Government is taking to obtain a supply, Mr. Russell makes the following reply: "The Department of Agriculture have fully recognized the importance of procuring raw flax and flax seed for Ireland. They have been, and are at present, in communication on the subject with the Foreign Office and with various associations and persons in the North of Ireland interested in the flax industry. A considerable quantity of flax seed has already been imported for this year's sowing, and the Department understands that more Russian seed is on its way to Ireland. There appears, however, to be difficulty in obtaining guarantees of the nature required by the Russian Government in regard to the destination of consignments."

Perfumes at £20 an Ounce.

Genuine attar of roses comes from the Orient, says London Tit-Bits. When perfectly pure it is of almost fabulous value. The secret of its preparation is carefully guarded, and the finest product is usually sold in quantities not exceeding a few drops. Violet is one of the perfumes that have been so closely imitated that thoughtless people never stop to discriminate, and buy the manufactured for the genuine article. The recent discovery of a chemical process by which a perfume can be produced which cannot, even by experts, be distinguished from true violet extract is a matter of importance, as this is one of the most popular of odors. The substance, however, is worth £20 per ounce wholesale. Lavender is a British-grown perfume.

Locusts In Eastern Canada.

Few people who have not experienced a plague of locusts can appreciate how terribly destructive the pest can be. In Circular No. 5, of the Entomological Branch of the Federal Department of Agriculture, Mr. Arthur Gibson, Chief Assistant Entomologist, tells something about locusts or "grasshoppers" that every tiller of the soil should know. He states that for the past three years the pest has been extremely destructive in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec. In one district of Lanark County alone an estimated loss of $6,000 was caused representing 75 per cent of the crops. In a number of instances fields of oats and barley were cut green to save for feed, while in other cases in the province of Quebec farms have been abandoned owing to the prevalence of locusts. The insects are most impartial in their attention, attacking all kinds of grain and vegetables. After describing the different species which are liable to infest any part of Canada, Mr. Gibson suggests as an efficacious poison a bran mash that has been well tried consisting of:

Bran	20 pounds
Paris green or white arsenic	1 pound
Molasses	2 quarts
Oranges and Lemons	3 fruits
Water	3½ gallons

It is said that the oranges and lemons make the bait more attractive and hence to the undoing of the locust. Experiments made with this mixture, which can be concocted at small cost, have proved most successful, in one case no fewer than from 900 to 1,200 dead locusts being counted to the square yard. Besides illustrating the efficiency of the poison this statement also proves the alarming and overwhelming nature of the creatures. As every farmer should be prepared to protect his crops against the pest he should see to it that as soon as possible he becomes possessed of this invaluable circular, and this he can do by applying to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

The Bugle Blast to Canada.

Readers of the newspapers and followers of the course of the war must long ago have become convinced that the situation grows more and more intense and critical day by day. Great Britain is faced not alone by outside enemies, but by labor troubles and by lack of those immense internal resources in the matter of food production that Germany and Austria-Hungary possess. She cannot feed herself, and is compelled to rely largely on other countries for a supply of the necessaries of life. In such case the duty of her children is distinctly plain. It is noteworthy of her enemies that they are not only thoroughly united but that they are enduring with what fortitude they possess the rigid military enforcements that are placed upon them for the conservation both of food and material. Every man, woman and child, from the Kaiser down, have been put on rations. The idea is three-fold, to guard against any possible emergencies, to mislead the foe into over-confidence and by thoroughness to bring such pressure to bear as will hasten the final decision. Britain is pursuing the same course. She has not yet found it necessary to place her population individually on short rations but she has found it desirable to take over munition factories in order to ensure supplies that mean either life or death to the nation. Meantime, Germany by cowardly submarine assassination is endeavoring to starve her people and cripple her resources.

With such a state of affairs existent it is hardly necessary to explain to stay-at home Canadians how best they can fulfil their manifest duty and show the burden-bearers how completely they possess their sympathy. But the bugle blast has its rallying power in peace as in war. To all the people, and to farmers, breeders and settlers in particular, the Patriotism and Production movement that is in progress is blowing its bugle, or, in other words, carrying its message. Its object is to arouse all and sundry to the part they are called on to play. That part does not of necessity mean harder work nor increased acreage; but it does imply in order to secure increased and improved production, by which alone cultivators of the soil can contribute towards the credit of the country and empire, the greatest care in the selection of seed, in the breeding of live stock and in economy of the land.

"An' I believe Marse Tom, yassuh. I believe him, an' I save, an' save, an' when de Winter come it ain't got no hardships, an' dere I was wid all dat money just thrown on my hands!"

How to Paint for Less Money

We'll tell you how in three words—use less gallons. That's the thing to go by in Paint—not the price per gallon, but the number of gallons required plus the length of time it will wear and look well.

"100% Pure" Paint costs about half as much, counting the surface it covers, and wears two or three times as long as ordinary paint.

You pay by the gallon—both for the paint and for putting it on. The Paint that is cheapest for you is the paint that spreads easiest and covers the most surface.

MARTIN-SENOUR

Canadians In The Brunt.

Canadian regiments helped to stem the terrible tide of the renewed German attacks on the Allies' line in the neighborhood of Ypres. The troops adjoining the Canadian division on the latter's left having been forced back, the Canadians nad also to give ground, and for a short time four of our 6-inch guns that had been placed in the rear of the line immediately to our left were in the hands of the enemy. They were brilliantly recovered by our men, whose behavior was described as magnificent in a message of congratulations cabled to our Minister of Militia by Lord Brooke, of Sir John French's staff.

Our men seem to have been in the path of one of the fiercest drives made by the German army in Flanders. The Kaiser's troops in that part of the field had evidently been very strongly reinforced, doubtless for the purpose of carrying out a movement to penetrate to the coast of France. It was not expected that the enemy would try that again. The former desperate and long-sustained attempts to reach Calais having been so successfully withstood and attended with such terrible losses, the enemy might well give up hope of ever getting through to the English Channel. But now the weather is less unfavorable and floods are not the obstructions they were. Germany feels that she must get to the English Channel if she is not at last to be altogether at the mercy of her adversaries. It looks as if her concentration of great forces in the vicinity of Ypres and her furious fighting there were part of a programme of military and naval co-operation. For some reason her navy has shown itself again in the North Sea. Its scouting submarines and aircraft may have led it to believe that a dash for a French port might be successful. The German forces in Flanders are therefore trying to smash their way through to Calais, or even Boulogne. The object is to get the largest possible force within striking distance of Britain and make her control of the sea routes less assured. The German navy may be expected to be ready for any enterprise of daring. The situation has become desperate for Germany. To try to stop the progress of Russia in the East she would have to send more troops from the West, and they would have to go farther East than ever. Thus the railway zone would be left behind and the distance between the German armies on the West and those on the East would be lengthened.

If the throwing away of half a million of her soldiers' lives would ensure the opening of a way to Calais, Germany would readily make the sacrifice. It is against such a spirit of desperation animating a huge force that the Canadians have been fighting the last few days. Alas, it is by the evidence of many casualties our troops are proving their bravery and efficiency against the foe.

The Country

Spring, in her gorgeous raiment of budding flowers and bursting blooms, brings a message of hope and courage, of vigor and activity, of purpose of planning, of planting—the gladdest, best message of all the year.

The city man is sick of the noise, the confusion, the dirt, the smoke, the unending bustle and rush and roar and rattle, and of the unsatisfying results of it all. His racked nerves cry for quiet, for peace, for open space, for air that is pure and sunshine that is clean and clear.

His soul urges him to the good green country, to the roads that run beyond the narrow valley, to the fields that are great grass seas with delectable islands of wild flower bloom, to the woods with their greening canopies of lacing boughs, with their deeps of fragrant gloom, with their downy couches where he may lie next to dear Mother Nature's heart, as when a child, and hear once more her sweet whisperings of universal harmony and love,—to the streams that laugh and dance in welcome.

Here may he drink, through every quickened sense and with grateful reverence, the cup that Nature hase filled for him, a happy draught unmixed with pain, untainted with disapointments, unpoisoned with strivings that lead to naught.

Sick of the smoke and dust and glare of the streets, he longs for his dull, aching eyes to get a good clear look at God again and to be cleansed and strengthened that he may for a little while face life with a better gaze and a truer grasp of its beauties and its duties.

CANADIANS WERE SURROUNDED BY GERMAN ARMY.

London, April 26.—The following appears in to-night's Evening News, as from a Canadian who took part in the Ypres engagement:

"After the breaking of the line on our left, we received orders to stand to by the side of the canal. Then we had orders to proceed immediately to the north of Ypres.

"We set off without any food or water, nothing except wet equipment, each taking 400 rounds of ammunition. We waited at this point from early day until nearly midnight when two battalions formed in a line, half companies extended. Then the order was received to break through and charge the enemy about 500 yards away.

"We were at once mowed down like sheep by the enemey's artillery some 2,500 of us had attacked a wood, where there were 7,000 Germans. The place was full of Maxim guns.

"We drove them from their trenches, in front of the wood and went right through about 500 yards to the other side. Then we got surrounded and had to retire to the trenches, which we had taken.

"Here we dug ourselves in, remaining till Friday morning, the enemy shelling us all the time with shrapnel. Then we had to file out Saturday morning to make room for reinforcements.

"In our advance we were enfiladed with heavy fire on both sides, but in spite of this we mowed them before us and recovered three howitzers which the French had left behind in the wood. These we blew up, and then succeeded in recapturing our own four 4.7 guns, which the enemy had taken.

"At this point we surrounded sixty Germans, bayonetted forty-five. One officer just in front of me blew out his brains.

"We could not estimate the number of Germans slain, but we saw their searchlights at work the whole night through, looking for dead.

"It was certainly a terrible time, the most awful time I have ever known. They seemed to have encircled us completely at the beginning, but we got them on the run.

"We had the Prussian Guard in front of us and they ran like cowards. The Germans didn't mind where they fired. They were continuously shelling dressing stations with the Red Cross flag.

"They certainly planned the attack most carefully. Maxim guns were pointing at the mouth of almost every trench. We all lost everything we had."

"We were 42 hours without any food. Some of the men were 72 hours. We lost most of our officers. The dressing stations are full of wounded but it was fine to see as I came down, the troops going up to hold the position we had won, Indian lancers, French lancers, and heaps of British troops."

Margaret, the four-year-old daughter of Mr. J. McManus, 5th line of Bathurst, fell into a milk can of water on Monday evening and was drowned. Her aunt had left her playing around the house for a few moments while she had gone over to the barn, and missing the child when she returned she began a search for her, and found her lifeless body in a can of water.

Mr. John Millward of Froatburn, one of the old settlers of that district is reported as very ill at present but hopes are held out that he will soon be on the road to recovery.

Bumper Crop In West if Rain Falls Soon.

Rain is needed in the west, and with its advent there is promise of a bumper crop all through the country. Practically all the wheat is in now, most of it earlier than usual, and all through the southern sections, where the drought obtained last year, the moisture now in the soil is the heaviest on record.

There has been a tendency in the past to sow wheat on stubble land, with practically no preparation, but this year such lands have been thoroughly prepared, a very large percentage ploughed in the fall and all in fine condition, and as a large amount of rain fell subsequent to the ploughing, these lands are almost equivalent to those which had been summer fallowed. Taking it all round, the grain conditions of the west are of the most promising kind.

TROTTING STALLION

CRYSTAL WORTHY No. 58 & 53969 is a beautiful bay in color with star and four ankles white, height 16 hands and weight 1310 lbs. This horse is strongly built with good conformation and style and plenty of substance and bone with the very best of feet and one that commands attention at first sight. He is a bold going trotter with the proper knee action and wonderful propelling power at the rear and when properly trained will make one of the fastest sons of Axworthy, at 3 years 2.15½. Crystal Worthy was inspected and enroled on the 3rd day of Nov. 1914 and found to be sound and free from the malformations and diseases named in the Regulations under the Said Act, Enrolment No. 1521.

TO THE PUBLIC

In apportioning to the various living stallions their places in the ranks of speed Axworthy at three years, 2.15½, the sire of Crystal Worthy, becomes the living head of the wonderful branch of the Wilkes family established by that greatest trotter of his time, Axtel at 3 years, 2-12. Not only does Axworthy get the honor without dispute, but he also ranks as one of the three greatest living sires of extreme speed today, the placing of the three, differing with different judges, Axworthy's standing in the 2.10 list has to do entirely with performers of the trotting gait, as not a single one of his extremely fast performers is a pacer, his list as will be seen is headed by the world's fastest race trotter, Hamburg Belle, 2.01¼. Hundreds of other cases could be given when Axworthy's Get has produced early speed and has left its influence on this great sire. Its in the blood and its bound to come out, it will pay any breeder to watch families that sire early speed, also sires with good size and constitution, as the old saying is like begets like.

An Honorable Career.

The Cornwall Standard says:—Mr. S. T. Loucks, of Aultsville, who was recently superannuated by the Grand Trunk Railway after forty-five years' service, was in town last week on his way home from a visit to friends in Montreal. Mr. Loucks commenced his service as station agent in Iroquois in 1870. He afterwards opened the Bainsville station and was for a time at Summerstown. For the past thirty-eight years he was agent at Aultsville, where he was born. Mr. Loucks is one of three brothers who have had a notable record in the G. T. R. service. Mr. Silas Loucks, who retired from the position as agent at Morrisburg about six years ago, was an official of the road for fifty-three years, and the other brother, Mr. T. S. Loucks, who lives in Montreal, has a record of forty-five years and three months, having been chief despatcher at the city station for twenty-nine years. It is a remarkable fact that in their long terms of service not a single accident was recorded against either of the brothers.

Enemy's Regiments Were Destroyed

Paris, April 26.—"Whole regiments of German troops have been destroyed in the futile attempt to capture Ypres," says a despatch received today from St. Omer. "After recovering from the first terrific attack of the German hosts, the allied troops stood their ground like stone walls, literally annihilating the masses of German Soldiers who were haried forward.

"At the first sign of wavering in the German attack, the British and French troops opened a counter-attack. This was followed by another and a third and a fourth. The German line broke. No living man could resist. Cut off from their retreating comrades, scores of the Germans surrendered.

"Another effort by the Kaiser's army to hack its way to the French coast has collapsed before being well started."

The view set in the concluding sentence of the St. Omer despatch is reflected in French official circles to-day. They declare that the German offensive at Ypres, believed to be the final effort of the Germans to reach the coast, has completely failed. That the Germans made some initial gains is frankly admitted, but most of the ground lost has already been regained, it is asserted.

The sudden drive by the Germans is attributed here to the belief at Berlin that the arrival of the entire new army of Lord Kitchener in France would remove the chance of the Germans to reach the coast, that by an offensive at this time the Germans would be able to "get the jump" on the allies.

"The sentiment at Berlin is pretty well known here. The War Office has received reliable information that seven German generals were retired as the result of previous failures in Flanders, two having been driven from the army after receiving bitter censure from Emperor William personally."

NEW BRASSIERE.

Made of Cluny Lace, Embroidered Linen and Ribbon Bows.

PRETTY UNDERWAIST

Nothing is more desired by the feminine heart in the springtime than handsome new "undies," as our English cousins call them. One department of underwear which the spring maid and matron cannot supply too lavishly is the brassiere department. One handsome illustration of these very necessary adjuncts to milady's toilet is shown in the illustration. Hand embroidered linen with real cluny lace is used in its development, and ribbon bows are used to further beautify it. A feature of this waist is the neatly beaded seams, which do away with the usual bulk where a seam occurs.

HER SHOES.

What the Woman Who Is Well Dressed Will Not Do.

The woman who is really well dressed does not wear a smart frock and a becoming hat and then ruin her whole appearance by clothing her feet in a pair of shoddy shoes, run down at the heel and perhaps unpolished. And yet many women who are fastidious as to their appearance, who would not think of going out of the house without their suits being well pressed, their blouses being fresh and dainty, their veils adjusted in just the right way, will forget entirely to look at the condition of their shoes. Perhaps these will be worn and dusty and will be made still uglier by being worn with a pair of soiled and crumpled spats.

There is nothing prettier than well shod feet, nothing uglier than a pair of neglected, rundown, soiled shoes. And now that abbreviated skirts are fashionable the girl who wants to be well dressed will take great pains in selecting her shoes, and once she has purchased an appropriate and pretty pair she will take still greater pains to keep them in good condition.

Never take off a pair of shoes without putting a pair of trees in them immediately. This will help them to keep their shape and also will help to prolong the life of the boots. When there is the least suspicion of the heels becoming run down send them to the bootmaker's immediately and have them straightened. Nothing looks so shabby as a pair of crooked heels.

Now as to some of the novelties to be seen this spring. In the first place the light top boot, which has made such a favorable impression this winter, remains in vogue for spring, all the smartest shoes having either light tan or light gray uppers. Gun metal leather and dark gray tops are also considered smart, while a tan shoe with a tan upper is very chic.

Common Sense Creed.

Almost twenty five years ago, when life was less strenuous than it is now, the following "common sense creed" was formulated. If its need was felt then how much more will it be appreciated today!

Don't worry.

Don't hurry. "Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow."

Simplify, simplify, simplify!

Don't overeat. Don't starve. Let your moderation be known to all men.

Court the fresh air day and night. "Oh, if you knew what is in the air!"

Sleep and rest abundantly. Sleep is nature's benediction.

Spend less nervous energy each day than you make.

Be cheerful. "A light heart lives long."

Think only beautiful thoughts. "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he."

Work like a man, but don't be worked to death.

Avoid passion and excitement. A moment's anger may be fatal.

Never despair. "Lost hope is a fatal disease."

"If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."

A POSITIVE CURE FOR RHEUMATISM

Hundreds of People Have Found "Fruit-a-tives" Their Only Help

READ THIS LETTER

Superintendent of Sunday School in Toronto Tells How He Cured Himself of Chronic Rheumatism After Suffering for Years.

55 DOVERCOURT ROAD, Oct., 1st. 1913.

"For a long time, I have thought of writing you regarding what I term a most remarkable cure effected by your remedy "Fruit-a-tives". I suffered from Rheumatism, especially in my hands. I have spent a lot of money without any good results. I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" for 18 months now, and am pleased to tell you that I am cured. All the enlargement has not left my hands and perhaps never will, but the soreness is all gone and I can do any kind of work. I have gained 35 pounds in 18 months".

R. A. WAUGH

Rheumatism is no longer the dreaded disease it once was. Rheumatism is no longer one of the "incurable diseases". "Fruit-a-tives" has proved its marvellous powers over Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago—in fact, over all such diseases which arise from some derangement of stomach, bowels, kidneys or skin.

"Fruit-a tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Delicious Potato Rolls.

Take one cupful of flour, one cupful of warm mashed potatoes, three-fourths cupful of lard, one cupful of scalded milk, two well beaten eggs, one-half cupful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one cake of compressed yeast and one-half cupful of lukewarm water. Mix the lard with the potatoes, flour, sugar and salt. Add the eggs well beaten, and the milk and yeast cake dissolved in the water. Set to rise for two hours, then add six cupfuls of flour and let rise for one and one-half hours. Knead, roll out and cut with a biscuit cutter. Fold over like Parker house rolls. Lay on a buttered baking tin and let rise for one and one-half hours. Bake in a hot oven for twenty minutes.

Whole Wheat Bread.

Dissolve a yeast cake in two tablespoonfuls of tepid water. Add a pint of milk to a pint of boiling water and let stand until lukewarm; then add the dissolved yeast, a teaspoonful of salt and enough whole wheat flour to make a thick batter. Beat this batter for about fifteen minutes. It will become quite soft and liquid. Add enough flour to make a dough. Turn it on to a board and knead a few minutes. Return to the pan and let rise until it is light. About three hours is correct.

Scalloped Steak.

Cut the remains of the steak left from dinner into cubes, boil the bones for half an hour with very little water, add a little kitchen bouquet or a beef cube to this broth and season highly. Place a layer of rice remaining from boiled rice on the bottom of a greased dish, cover with a layer of beef, then another layer of rice, then beef, until the ingredients are used, pour the broth over all, cover with a thin layer of breadcrumbs and bake till brown.

Boy Scouts Growing.

The ratio of increase of the Boy Scouts of America is indicated by a striking paragraph from the chief scout executive's report. From Oct. 1, 1914, to Feb. 5, 1915, 45,330 boys were enrolled, as compared with 32,929 for the same period of 1913 and 1914; 839 new troops were organized, as compared with 533 for the same period last year. Commissions were granted to 4,113 men to serve as scoutmasters and assistants as compared with 2,251 for the same period of last year.

Transposition.

What in winter you feel,
When the frost's on the ground
Transposed it will reveal
(And it is truth I'll be bound).
A name that to rustics we give,
Who in clownish simplicity live.

Answer—Cold, clod.

ROYAL YEAST MAKES PERFECT BREAD

DAINTY FROCK.

Valenciennes Lace Profusely Trims Dress Made of Dotted Muslin.

LINGERIE CREATION

The little kiddie has her inning in the little frock shown here. Nothing is ever more charming than dotted muslin and when combined with val is irresistible. The gown has a jacket effect bodice with an underlining of sheer batiste, to which the skirt is attached. The skirt is full, with insets of val insertion, outlined by ruffles of val edging.

A blue satin sash and a blue satin hair ribbon contribute the touch of color to the costume, with which are worn white silk stockings and white kid buttoned boots.

SASH CURTAINS.

Materials For Making Them and Their Fashioning.

Sash curtains should be measured from the top of the inside of the window casement to the sill, allowing two inches at the top and bottom. The top is turned and stitched through the center, which allows for a small heading and the casing for the brass rod. The hem is turned in at the bottom, so that the curtains just escape the sill.

The curtains may be perfectly plain or finished with a lace edging. A narrow gimp braid is sometimes used as a finish for sash curtains. The French striped net or brussels net is always nice.

Scrim and a quality of voile made for curtain purposes are also used, especially where a less transparent material than net is desired.

Is Meat a Fighting Diet?

Circumstances have brought to light again the question of man's need of red meat diet to make him a fighting warrior. An advocate of meat diet declared some time ago that the Belgians were losing their vital efficiency because they are a race of non-meat eaters. But, although they had done no fighting for a hundred years, they have given a good account of themselves of late.

Modern scientists assert that meat makes a dog or a man irritable, but gives neither courage nor endurance, both of which are essential fighting qualities. Attention is called to the fruit eating gorilla as the most dreaded fighter of the African forest. Not a lion is found in all the region where this great forest man reigns, untamed and untamable, a real king of beasts.

The lion, the traditional king of beasts, fights when brought to bay only because he is short winded and cannot run away. Every experienced hunter has borne testimony to the ability of the grass eating bison as a most courageous fighter with few equals.

BE CONSTRUCTIVE.

It so often happens that many so called "good" people have no force. If they would only put half the energy into being constructive that an active mischief maker puts into being destructive we should see more justice in the world.

Michael O'Leary.

(Sergt. Michael O'Leary is the hero of the British Empire to-day. For his exploits at Cuinchy, France, he won the Victoria Cross and was promoted from lance corporal to sergeant on the field. The terse official report of the Irishman's bravery follows: "For conspicuous bravery—When forming one of the storming party which advanced against the enemy's barricade, O'Leary rushed to the front and himself killed five Germans who were holding the first barricade, after which he attacked the second barricade, about 60 yards further on, which he captured after killing three of the enemy and making prisoners of two more." O'Leary was formerly in the North-West Mounted Police.)

You may talk of the Rebels of Ulster
And the shindy we had to chuck;
But we don't give a rap for a family scrap
When the Prooshuns is running amuck.
Did you hear how Lance-Corporal O'Leary,
Mike O'Leary of the Guards,
With his own two mits tore a forthress to bits
Like a blissed conthraption of cards?

Ie'd a shmile, had Mike, that 'ud span a dyke,
And a fist that 'ud fell a horse,
And he ripped through the mire of blood and barbed wire
Like a bull through a bunch of gorse.

Whin he waded in, sure 'twas a sin
The way that he bashed and bruk 'em;
He dropped on thim Huns like forty tons
And they niver knew what had struck 'em.

"Poor dears," says Mike, "I'm thinking belike
And the news they've been told is lies,
So it's up to me, 'ere its kilt they be,
To put the poor divils wise.

"Thim Huns, I'm told, while outrageous bold,
Is over a trifle dull,
Sure, if that's a fact, 'tis a friendly act
To hammer it through their skull.

"So here's for insulting o'd Erin,
By thinking a traitor she'd be!
And here's for your Imperor sneerin'!
'Contemptible army,' says he.

"Here's one for the mothers whose pleadin'
You stopped with a shot and a curse,
And one for the girls dead and bleedin'
And the girls that you spared—for worse.

"For the churches you shelled and the priests you felled,
Here's one! And the women, too,
You held for a shield on the battlefield,
And the innocent babies you slew."

Whin O'Leary had done, there was divil a one
Left to tumble to what he said—
Barrin' only ten, which I'm wrong again,
For eight av the ten was dead.
—Oliver Herford, in Harper's Weekly.

An Explanation

The chairman of the program committee was embarrassed. After much chocking he said:

"I am very sorry, ladies and gentlemen, I am very sorry indeed, gentlemen and ladies—It gives me deep regret, ladies and gentlemen, to be compelled, gentlemen and ladies, to come before you with an excusion; but, ladies and gentlemen, the lady who will sing next is not here. We suppose, gentlemen and ladies, that she has been providentially detained."—New York Post.

Will Raise Company For Princess Pats

Montreal, April 26.—The offer of Captain Percival Molson and Lieut. George McDonald, of McGill to raise another company for the Princess Patricias, to supplement the force organized by Major Hamilton Gault, which has suffered considerable loss in the war, has been accepted by the Militia Department at Ottawa. Word was received here to-day to this effect.

Major-General Hughes announced that the third and fourth contingents would be mobilized at the earliest possible moment.

Robert Bean, a farmer, of Colborne township, near Goderich, was shot in the back and killed while driving home late Sunday night.

ROTHSCHILD'S CAREER

HIS ASTONISHING SPECULATION FORMED BASIS OF FORTUNES.

Death of Croesus Baron Recalls Origin of Family. Its Curious and Apparently Harmless Intermarriages and Its Spread of Control of the Financial Capitals of Europe.

Baron Nathan Mayer Rothschild, head of the English branch of the great banking family and titular head of all the Rothschild connection, who died at his home in London, was the first Rothschild to be raised to the peerage of Great Britain.

His death recalls naturally the origin of the family, its astonishing speculations, its curious and apparently harmless intermarriages, its spread to the control of the financial capitals of Europe and its rise socially. The first of the Rothschilds was Mayer Amschel, called Rothschild, who lived in the ghetto at Frankfort-on-the-Main. As he lay dying he called his five sons to his bedside and commanded them to be loyal to the faith of Moses, to remain united to the end, to intermarry and to obey their mother in all things.

The wise old man, who had already made his hand felt in the bourses and chancelleries of Europe, parceled out the continent as a conqueror divides subjugated territory. To London he sent Nathan Mayer grandfather of the Lord Rothschild who died in his Piccadilly mansion. To Vienna went Solomon. Charles was directed to Naples to found the Italian branch of the family, while Jacob James Mayer, one of the great Rothschilds, the railroad builder of France, became the head of the Paris house. There were five daughters also

Perhaps the first of the English Rothschilds, Nathan Mayer, was the greatest financial genius of the family. His greatest achievements were based on getting exclusive news earlier than anybody else. To get such rapid advance information he established a service of carrier pigeons. The world is familiar with his achievement at the time of the battle of Waterloo. He was in Paris when he received private information that Napoleon had been defeated. He drove in hot haste to the battlefield, verified the story, reached England and London in incredible time for such days, employed agents to buy up Government consols and such stocks as were certain to advance with the news of British triumph and made as a result a vast fortune. He lived like a prince and entertained royalty. He had a superstition that bad luck was contagious, and he would have nothing to do with unsuccessful persons. He left a fortune of £18,000,000 ($90,000,000).

He was succeeded by his son Lionel, who bore an Austrian title of baron. He did much toward advancing the prestige of the house. He arranged immense foreign loans, helping among other things to fund the debt of the United States Government after the civil war, advancing $20,000,000 to the British Government to purchase the Khedive's Ismail's canal shares in 1875 and after the Franco-Prussian war heading the syndicate of bankers who agreed to maintain the integrity of foreign exchange, thus facilitating the payment of France's huge indemnity.

He was the first Jew to be elected to Parliament, an honor which he obtained in 1847, but it was not until 1858 that the law was so amended that he could take his seat by giving oath on the Old Testament alone, as he had persistently insisted upon doing.

Upon his death in 1879 the headship of the Rothschilds fell to the late Lord Nathan Mayer, who in 1876 had inherited the baronetcy of his uncle, Sir Anthony, and who was himself raised to the peerage in 1885. Lord Nathan was widely known for his great wealth and his philanthropic labors. His town house in Piccadilly as well as his great country seat at Tring Park, Herts, was famous for brilliant gatherings of persons socially prominent. He was educated in England and in 1867 married Emma Louisa, daughter of Baron Mayer Carl de Rothschild of Frankfort-on-the-Main.

It is one of the most extraordinary facts about the Rothschild family that there could have been so many intermarriages without a weakening of the virility and a dulling of the genius of the race. Baron James, head of the Paris branch for many years, married his niece. Baron Lionel of London married his first cousin. Alphonse, the successor of Baron James, married Evalina, daughter of Baron Lionel.

Lord Rothschild is survived by Lady Rothschild and their three children—the Hon. Lionel Walter, heir to the barony; the Hon. Charlotte Louisa Adela Evalina, who is married to Capt. Clive B. Behrens, of the Royal Artillery, and the Hon. Nathan Charles. It is the latter who will succeed, it is supposed, to the active headship of the financial affairs of the English house, since the new Baron Lionel is not a business man in any sense, but is noted for scientific attainments, particularly in zoology.

Monster Tomato.

A monster tomato grown at Rosettenville in the Transvaal was recently exhibited in Johannesburg. It measured 17 inches in circumference and weighed 1 pound 6 1-2 ounces. It is stated that there are others still unpicked of equal if not greater size.

NURSING THE WOUNDED.

Lady Sarah Wilson Is at Her Old Task.

At the Hotel Christol, Boulogne, has been established a hospital, with accommodation for 200 beds, which was really founded by one of the most remarkable and venturesome women of to-day—Lady Sarah Wilson. One might search for a long time in "Who's Who" for a more interesting life-story than that of this lady who, although wealthy, an intimate friend of royalty, and a leading hostess in society, has preferred a life of adventure and excitement to one of leisured ease.

As a child Lady Sarah lived in the semi-regal state of Dublin Castle during the viceroyalty of her father, the seventh Duke of Marlborough. A woman of striking originality, she was not long out of her teens before she made a special position for herself by her brilliant and facile pen, and a certain capable directness of character.

Called after Sarah Jennings, wife of the first Duke of Marlborough Lady Sarah Wilson seems to have inherited some of that ancestress's lack of conventionality and love of adventure. In years gone by she has startled her friends by suddenly disappearing from the haunts of society and hiding herself in remote regions, where she has gratified her fondness for big-game shooting, exploration, and yachting. And when it is mentioned that during the South African war she did invaluable work as a nurse, holding the Royal Red Cross, and is, moreover, a Lady of Grace of the Order of St John of Jerusalem, it will be readily understood why her proposal to establish a hospital at Boulogne was welcomed by the authorities.

It was the Boer war which brought Lady Sarah into the greatest prominence. She went out to the front as correspondent for a daily newspaper. A message was sent her by carrier pigeon, but the bird flew into the Boer camp, where the message was read, and an escort was sest out to capture her, as it was thought she was a spy. She was taken prisoner, and eventually exchanged for Viljoen.

Lady Sarah then went to Mafeking, where she was shut up during the siege. Of that campaign Lady Sarah has published her reminiscences, while a burlesque account of her adventures is to be found in "The Dop Doctor."

In 1891 Lady Sarah married Lieutenant-Colonel Gordon Wilson of the "Blues," who inherited a large fortune from his father, Sir Samuel Wilson, an Australian millionaire squatter, King Edward, then Prince of Wales, attending the ceremony. Lady Sarah was a special favorite with both King Edward and Queen Alexandra.

Fireproof Clothes.

Dr. William H. Perkin, the English chemist, has found a method of making cloth absolutely fireproof, so that it will not burn even when held in a gas-flame. One fireproof garment was unharmed by twenty washings, and another which had been worn for two years and washed every week. Neither could be burned, though the latter was worn almost to rags. This fireproof cloth costs about a penny a yard more than untreated cloth.

Not only will this fireproofed material be found suitable for the manufacture of clothes for firemen, but it may also be used by women for the finest party dresses, the most delicately-colored fabrics being unharmed by the process and even given a softer appearance. For children's clothes it should be particularly desirable, since it is likely to prevent many accidents.

Uniforms at 15 a Minute.

Army uniforms are being turned out by the manufacturers of Leeds, England, at the rate of fifteen a minute, or 7,200 for a day of eight hours or 42,200 a week.

In a model factory the piece of khaki cloth, measuring from fifty-five yards to sixty-five yards in length and weighing twenty-one to twenty-two ounces to the yard, enters the cutting room and after passing through only four other departments is presented to the Government as pressed and completed uniforms. They are made in eighteen sizes.

Never in all its history has Leeds turned out so many boots as in the past few months. War Office inspectors insist on the best and examine all material. The boots cost the Government $5 a pair.

"Tommy's" Welsh Letters.

The father of four Welsh soldiers complains strongly, says The South Wales Daily News, of the War Office restrictions against letters written in Welsh. "There are thousands of mothers who cannot write in English," he says. "My wife used to write Welsh letters to her boys, but they never reached them, and one of my boys writes to say he has been warned not to write in Welsh. If Welsh blood is good enough to be spilt on the plains of Flanders the Welsh language is good enough to be written."

Needed an Interpreter.

Mr. Arthur H. Engelbach, in his collection of ancedotes of the bench tells this story about Lord Braxfield, who was among the last of the Scots judges who rigidly adhered to the broad Scots dialect. "Hae ye ony counsel, mon?" he said to Maurice Margot, when placed at the bar. "No," was the reply. "Do ye want to hae ony appointit?" continued the judge. "No," said Margot; "I only want an interpreter to make me understand what your lordship says."

English Suffer Most.

A Red Cross worker, lately returned wounded from the front, says that one of the facts which forced itself on him after two months' experience was the far greater number of English than French wounded who suffered from shock after operations.

Why India Fights.

One of the most surprising outcomes of the warfare now raging in Europe, a warfare remarkable for its surprises, has been the loyalty of India. For the last eight years the assertion has been dinned into our ears that India is seditious. We had come to take it for granted that Great Britain's next military crisis would be India's opportunity to shake off the so-called British tyranny.

But, India is not fighting the Germans for the sake of Great Britain; she is fighting out of loyalty to her Emperor, the visible successor to the great moguls. She has no great love for Britain as Britain, but she has much loyalty and even worship for the occupant of the Delhi throne.

MOTHERS OF DELICATE CHILDREN

Should Read the Following Letter—Mrs. Slack's Story About Her Child's Recovery Is Entirely Reliable.

Palmyra, Pa.—"Three years ago my little girl had black measles which left her with a chronic cough and so awfully thin you could count all her ribs, and she coughed so much she had no appetite.

"Nothing we gave her seemed to help her at all until one day Mrs. Neibert told me how much good Vinol had done her little girl, so I decided to try it for my little one, and it has done her so much good she is hungry all the time, her cough is gone, she is stouter and more healthy in color and this is the first winter she has been able to play out in the snow, coasting and snow-balling without any ill effects."—Mrs. ALFRED SLACK, Palmyra, Pa.

We know Vinol will build up your little ones and make them healthy, strong and robust, therefore we ask parents of every frail and sickly child in this vicinity to try a bottle of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil.

If we can induce you to try a bottle of Vinol as a body-builder and strength-creator for your child, and you do not find it is all we claim, we will return your money on demand.

Barn Fired by Lightning.

Yesterday at the noon hour as a slight electrical storm passed to the south of town, lightning struck the barn on Wm. McLean's farm, four miles south, in the Eighth concession of Williamsburg, and it was completely destroyed together with hay and seed grain, the property of the tenant, Wm. Newvine. A horse also belonging to the latter was killed by the bolt as it stood in its stall. Another horse which had been left untied, luckily had just wandered out from its mate and escaped. A cow belonging to McLean, which was out in the yard was also killed, while two others close by were momentarily knocked down by the shock.

The force of the shock was not confined to the animals as Mr. Newvine and one of his children were rendered unconscious for some minutes.

Flying embers were carried by the wind to David Allison's barn which caught fire but was noticed in time and saved.

Mr. Newvine had insurance on the contents but Mr. McLean's loss will be heavy as we understand the insurance had been allowed to lapse a short time ago.

Never In Trouble.

The chief of the St. Louis detective force puts out this chunk of wisdom: "I am frequently asked what is the type of man who goes wrong. The answer is that there is no particular type. There is a clear type of man who never is in trouble, however. That is the man who lives within his means, who saves a part of his earnings each day and week and year. It does not matter much just so he lives within his income and saves.

There is always somebody to take the joy out of life. First was a man who said that germs lurked in kisses and therefore kisses ought to be done away with. For years the Chautauqua salute, consisting in the waving of handkerchiefs, has been popular to show enthusiasm at large gatherings. Now the health officer at Paterson, N. J. declares that this is unsanitary because it scatters germs over a multitude of people, and that it must not be given at the Billy Sunday meetings. But Billy aims to make them soak their handkerchiefs so that ought to keep the germs from flying.

2000 Canadians Rout 7000 Germans

London, April 27.—A member of the Canadian Scottish who has just been received in hospital here with a bullet wound in the arm gave a graphic description of the famous charge of the Canadians which led to the recapturing of their four lost guns. "For nearly an hour last Thursday," he said, "we had been digging when we received orders to march through Ypres to St. Julien. We had no packs, no food, no water, and no overcoats. We had in the Webb equipment 150 rounds of cartridges and we were served out with bandoliers containing in addition 200 rounds. Those of us who had not eaten had no time to go back and feed. After we marched to St. Julien we met the Tenth Canadians there. We laid down in a field with orders to extend in half companies. There were about twenty lines of us.

"Before us, about 500 yards away, were the German trenches; behind which was a little wood a sort of thickly wooded spinney. It was our business to take those trenches and clear that wood. The 10th had orders to make an advance, supported by us. At the order we charged. No German soldier was visible in the trenches or wood. We charged against the unseen enemy. We did not know what we would find in the trenches or in the wood which lay behind. As we went on we were met by a heavy machine gun and rifle fire, and the men were mown down line after line, but those who remained standing never faltered.

"Our men went at the trenches. It was bullets and bayonets. We turned the Germans out by some quick work, and pushed on through the trenches into the wood, and 500 yards behind the trenches were little sandbag forts, defended by little bands of Germans with machine guns and rifles. The attack had evidently taken the enemy by surprise, for we found horses still tied up in that wood and in the trenches were 7,000 Germans, but our 2,000 cleared them out. There was little maxim fire to support us, but it was bullets and bayonets throughout."
