CAR CAPSIZES NEAR IROQUOIS

Miss Marie Flett of Georgetown, driving on the Provincial highway just east of Iroquois, met with a serious accident. She was driving a new limousine, having as passengers the daughter and son of Dr. E. H. Marcellus of Iroquois. Miss Flett, it is surmised, applied the brakes too soon at a sharp turn, and the car capsized. The occupants were pinned under the auto, and when released it was found that Miss Marcellus had a broken collarbone, injuries around the chest and cuts and bruises on the arms, legs and face. The other occupants escaped with slight injuries. The car was a complete wreck.

MORRISBURG FAIR A SUCCESS

The Morrisburg Fair, held on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week, adds another success to a large number of successful fairs. Good weather, good management, and good, wholesome attractions is a combination which must bring forth good results. The Directors are to be congratulated for procuring an exceptionally clean and interesting midway; good, high-class music; the best horse races held in Morrisburg for a number of years, and good baseball.

The grounds were beautifully illuminated and many visitors patronized the evening attractions.

The directors are pleased with the spirit of co-operation from the citizens, as manifested by the display of decorations—a mark of appreciation for what this Society is doing to keep the Morrisburg Fair up to the high standard which it was this year.

From a financial standpoint, the Morrisburg Agricultural Society has been in a flourishing condition for a number of years, and we are glad to know that the gate receipts this year, were sufficient to assure them of continued prosperity.

BRITISH SCIENTISTS APPRECIATE MORRISBURG HOSPITALITY

MOREWOOD METHODIST CHURCH JUBILEE ANNIVERSARY

On Sunday, August 10th, the anniversary of the Methodist Church was celebrated. Both morning and evening the church was filled to overflowing. Many visitors from distant places were present, and the sister church, the Presbyterian, was well represented as usual. Rev. Roy M. Pounder, M.A., S.T.L., Chesterville, had charge of the morning and evening services. Both sermons were interesting, instructive and profound. During the morning Mr. Pounder asked those to stand, who were present at the dedication; upwards of twenty responded. In addition to the Congregational singing, the choir rendered two anthems. Miss Ethel Danby sang a solo, and the male quartette gave two selections.

On the following Monday evening a very large crowd enjoyed a bountiful supper—congratulations to the Ladies' Aid. While supper was being enjoyed, bagpipers, Messrs. Jno. Carruthers and Norman Kenny, pleased all with music. After supper, a well-filled church enjoyed a good program. "How Firm a Foundation", was the opening number, after which Rev. T. P. Shaver offered prayer. Interesting and entertaining addresses were delivered by Rev. Jno. A. Weddell, Winchester; Rev. T. P. Shaver, Brinston, Rev. Jas. Earle, B. A., Missionary to China, and Rev. M. Pounder, M. A. S. T. L., Chesterville.

The Winchester Quartette greatly assisted with several splendid vocal selections very much enjoyed by all. Rev. H. Selwyn Cooke, pastor, and chairman, gave a very interesting and concise history of Methodism in this locality from 1836 to the present time. Mr. Cooke informed the audience that a committee were preparing a suitable historical souvenir. The proceeds of the evening were $222.

The Woman of To-Day

HIS ROOM.

Do you ever slip into his room,
So quiet now, so clean, so cool,
And through the shades of twilight gloom
Glimpse skates and boxing gloves, each tool
Piled on a shelf—a bat, a ball,
A tennis racket; over all
The scent of shaving soaps and creams,
The goal of early boyhood dreams--
To think of him, your boy at school!

And if a mother's heart you bear,
His room becomes a hallowed place,
And ere you think of leaving there
You kneel beside his bed; your face
Is pillowed where so oft his own
Has lain, your boy so lately grown
Into a man; and from your soul
There throbs a prayer; in calm control
You plead before the Throne of Grace:

O God of mother hearts, whose boys
Have gone from home to school or shop,
Where once their whist'ling, romping noise—
A silence, as if life would stop!
Be with them, God of tenderness;
As they are thine, their young lives bless,
And in temptation's trying hour
Give them of thine all-conqu'ring power;
O God of love, be with our boys.

MEASLES HERE!

The child who has contracted measles will probably break out with the rash fourteen days after the time of exposure. But he will show the first signs of illness three or four days before the eruption appears, and as this pre-eruptive stage is one of the most critical periods of the child's illness he must be under careful supervision from the very start. Nine or ten days after exposure the child who has contracted measles will begin to show signs of "a cold."

If the little one develops a cough, running nose, and watery eyes, keep him at home in a room that is just comfortable, neither too hot nor too cold. If he has fever keep him in bed. If the trouble is measles the rash will probably come out in four days, but bear in mind that this is not a rule without exceptions. I have seen cases in which the rash has delayed a full week without the child being the worse for the delay.

The rash of measles is first detected inside the mouth and throat. You may see it on the soft palate and the mucous membrane of the cheeks thirty-six hours before it comes on the skin. When it breaks out it generally begins on the face and around the ears and is blotchy instead of uniform. A fine, uniform rash appearing first on the chest, indicates scarlet fever, but a blotchy, rough-looking rash that comes out first on the face and has with it some swelling around the eyes is almost sure to be measles.

Do not make the mistake of cutting all air and light in the room. Keep the room at a temperature of about 70 degrees. Shade the windows enough to remove strain from the eyes but do not make the room really dark. Be careful to see that the patient does not face a window. Do not make him uncomfortably warm by too much bedding. All that is needed is to keep the skin at a comfortable temperature. Remember that the great complication of measles is broncho-pneumonia and when you overheat your patient you are giving that disease an invitation.

In the ordinary cases the rash goes away about as quickly as it came—three or four days. The fever comes up just preceding the outbreak of the rash and drops as it becomes fully developed. In a week the patient may be up in a warm room if all has gone well. It is always well to have medical care for measles but is especially important if complications occur.

WHY NOT EAT IN THE BASEMENT?

How to keep the kitchen cool is a problem in summer. One woman has solved it nicely. Here is her method:

"Use the basement. Do the cooking there and eat there. Make it your summer kitchen."

Five years ago, when her house was built, the basement was finished as carefully as the rest of the house. It was divided into four big rooms—kitchen, fruit cellar, storeroom and furnace room. The walls were plastered throughout and the woodwork and doors were painted gray.

The kitchen is 25x15 feet, extending the width of the house, with windows facing east and west.

The west end of the room is used as a dining-room. Here is found, besides the long table and chairs, an old-fashioned bookcase with two comfortable rockers. A twelve-foot square of linoleum softens the cement floor, and on the shelf beneath the neatly curtained windows are an old-fashioned clock and a couple of plants.

All woodwork and furniture in the room are painted a cool gray, and touches of color are introduced in the book bindings, the rocker-cushions and the bowl of flowers or fruit that usually graces the dining table.

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING.

Great responsibility is placed today upon the woman who is handling the food which is to furnish physical fitness, good health and give the human being sufficient energy to go forth to their daily business so that they, too, may be able to conquer the world.

You see about you the ailing folks suffering from many digestive ailments that would speedily disappear if the housewife would make a study of foods and the proper methods of cooking so as to conserve the nutritive value, as well as appearance, of the food.

Banish the thought that anything will do for a meal and give the planning of a menu special thought as to its value in muscle, bone and structure building; also that it will furnish sufficient energy and heat to enable each member of the family to be 100 per cent. efficient.

Make it a habit to have each day, two, if not three times, some succulent green food that has not been touched by heat. This means some uncooked food served in salad form.

LOCKING UP.

"Aren't you gonig to lock up?" Jane asked.

"Aren't you going to lock up?" Jane house, you mean I'd as soon think of locking up the well or the pansy bed! Of course if you'd feel safer—"

"I'd feel like breaking through the walls! That's the way I felt with Aunt Dessie."

A look of enlightenment came into Milly's eyes. "I'd forgotten—it's so many years. Does she still carry the silver upstairs?"

"She does. Every night she counts the spoons three times over, puts them to bed in the silver basket and tucks cotton flannel blankets over them and then puts the basket in her closet and wraps an old skirt round it carelessly as if it had fallen. It is a fine art; I never mastered it. Then she bolts and hooks the doors and locks the windows upstairs and down. They might use ladders, you know, or climb the gutter pipes!"

"How can anyone be so afraid of burglars as that?" said Milly incredulously.

"Well, it's partly timidity, partly reverence for inherited treasures and partly the narrowness of her life, which had to have a thrill somewhere and so invented imaginary burglars."

Milly frowned. "Hopeless!" she murmured.

"And then," Jane continued, "the flu came—flu in the country. Whole families down with it off in isolated places! Only one doctor in miles. Aunt Dessie couldn't nurse to save her life, but she could make delicious soups and jellies. She made them night and day. The doctor stopped for them and distributed them on his round. When I came back in time to put Aunt Dessie to bed to regain some of the strength she had been throwing away with both hands I hunted for three days before I found all the spoons. I learned then that she hadn't even locked the doors; she hadn't had time to!"

"Came back?" Milly inquired softly. "You were nursing—"

"Oh, I was better than nothing at a time like that. Anybody would be."

"And did Aunt Dessie lock up things afterwards?"

"Of course she did, bless her heart! I even persuaded her to carry the candlesticks upstairs; she hadn't thought of that before."

"Jane, you fraud!" Milly cried.

ICE FOR THE PICNIC.

During cold weather, a cold drink is usually preferred to a hot one for the picnic lunch. "But a piece of ice is always so bulky and melty and messy to carry in the car," someone is certain to object. True, a vacuum bottle will keep cold things cold; the only objection being insufficient capacity.

The simplest solution seems to be to chip the ice and pack it in vacuum bottles. Two bottles will hold sufficient ice to furnish cold drinks during the day for half a dozen or more persons. To get full capacity, fill the bottles with ice water when they will contain no more ice.

If a pure water supply is assured at one's destination, the problem is still further simplified, as concentrated fruit juices or very strong tea may easily be carried to be diluted and chilled whenevr someone gets thirsty.

The best rule for successful picnicking is "plenty to eat and drink but as little luggage as possible."

Rare Variety of Game Fish Being Introduced Into New Brunswick.

At the request of a number of public bodies of St. John, New Brunswick, the Department of Marine and Fisheries undertook to establish the European brown trout in loch Lomond near St. John. The first eggs for this purpose were obtained in January, 1921, from the United States Bureau of Fisheries. A small number of the fry from these eggs have been retained in the ponds at the hatchery, and in the autumn of 1923, when the fish were a little over two years old, a few of the larger and better developed yielded some 5,000 eggs, which are undergoing incubation. The eggs of the brown trout are not easily obtained in America, and in continuation of the stocking of loch Lomond, some 200,000 Loch Leven trout eggs, a variety closely related to the brown trout, were obtained through the United States Bureau of Fisheries in exchange for Atlantic salmon eggs. The Loch Leven trout eggs were secured from wild trout captured in the streams of Montana and are the result of small distributions of such fry made some years ago. An equal number of Loch Leven trout eggs are undergoing incubation in the Banff hatchery, and the resultant fry will be distributed in selected waters of the Prairie Provinces.

Barry, the Dog Hero of St. Bernard Pass

BY EVA MARCH TAPPAN.

PART III.

Barry had been watching with his head cocked to one side and his eyes shining. He knew how to do that, and he did wish that the father would call his name. "Barry!" the father called at last, with no idea that he would understand what was wanted, but Barry walked up to him with his utmost dignity and offered his paw. "Good boy!" cried the father, and patted the dog's head. This was one of the tricks that the children in Berne had taught him and he was delighted to show what he could do.

The days were full, but the kind young monk did not fail to write to Carl, and before many months had passed he wrote:

"Barry found his first traveler in the snow last night and persuaded him to rouse himself and push on to the Hospice. This is the first time that a dog with so short a training has done such a thing."

"Barry knew how it felt to be lost," said Carl to himself.

Another time the monk wrote:

"A group of peasants were overwhelmed by an avalanche. The grown people were killed, but Barry found one little girl still alive though badly bruised. Somehow he made her understand that she must lie on his back and put her arms around his neck; and what a proud little lay brother he was when he brought her safely home! How he ever thought of getting her on his back I do not know. He had not yet been taught that."

When Carl read the letter, he smiled. "We know, don't we, Barry?" he said to himself. "More than one of our little girl friends has had a ride on your back, and you learned just how to crouch so they could get on easily."

At length there came a letter which said:

"Barry is our finest dog. He has saved in all the lives of forty persons. He is happy, but sometimes he goes to the edge of the cliff and stands gazing down the long and winding path. I believe that he is thinking of you. Will you not come and visit us?" The hand that wrote this trembled, and now there were no more letters, for the young monk had died. There were no long lives on the Pass of St. Bernard. He who gave himself up to the work of saving lost travelers knew well that his days would be few.

Now that Carl had no more news of the dog, he thought of him even oftener, and before long he and his friend, Marco, started to go over the pass. Marco had friends on the other side, and Carl had a deep longing to see Barry. It was the edge of the winter, but the storms had not yet been severe, and they hoped to get through without trouble.

All went well up to the beginning of the Valley of Death. Here the snow began to fall heavily. The sky was thick and dull, and the wind was rising. It came in savage gusts, striking one precipice, flinging itself back to another, whirling the young men about with furious blows and buffetings.

"This grows worse all the time," said Carl. "Let us rest for five minutes and eat our lunch, and then push on with all our might."

"A struggle like this needs something better than bread and cheese," said Marco. "I have brought a flask of the strongest brandy for just such a time."

"My grandfather knew the mountains as well as I know our own house," said Carl, "and he always said that a mountain climber must keep his head clear. Don't drink it, Marco," he pleaded earnestly. "Don't you know the old saying: 'He who drinks brandy at the peak will never again drink wine in the valley'?"

"I'll wager that the man who wrote that never was at the peak," retorted Marco lightly. In spite of all that Carl could say, Marco took a long, deep drink from his flask and pushed forward. But the storm drove on more and more fiercely. "I must sleep just a moment, then I can go on," he said drowsily, and sank down beside a great drift.

Carl pleaded. He shook the man and pulled him, and dragged him as far as he could. But he himself stumbled and fell, and before he could get upon his feet a sudden whirlwind of snow had covered his friend. He felt about in the storm and darkness, but there was no trace of him to be found. Heavily he plodded on. Late in the night there was a ring at the Hospice door, so faint and tremulous that the good father who answered it almost believed that he had dreamed of the sound. The story was soon told.

"It may not be too late," said the monk. "Our best dogs were sent the moment we heard that a man was out. They will find him and he will be brought in."

"Has Barry gone?" asked Carl anxiously. "I have come all this way to see Barry."

"And you will see him," said the monk, soothingly, as if to a child, "but now sleep, and you shall be called as soon as he comes."

In the early gray of the morning Marco was brought in, still half dazed. Barry had found him and pawed the stifling snow away and had joyfully licked his hands and face until he began to awake. But his brain was stupid and dull, his eyes were dim and misty; wild fancies and terrors had seized upon him, and while Barry was barking joyfully for help, his only thought was that a wild beast had attacked him. He fumbled with unsteady hand, pulled out his knife, and stabbed the loving friend who, with no thought of his own suffering, was, with all his strength, struggling to drag him to shelter. The brave dog's blood reddened the snowflakes that whirled angrily around them. Barry's steps staggered more and more. At the gate he dropped and his eyes closed. The monks knelt around him and watched him tenderly.

"Barry, Barry!" cried Carl, in a voice that trembled with affection and grief.

Barry moved his head slightly. His eyes opened. He looked slowly from one to another, all around the little group, last of all at Carl. For a moment he questioned. Then there came into his eyes the light of a great joy. He made a familiar sound, faint and distant, it seemed, but yet clear and distinct. It was "Barry's welcome"—and his farewell.

So Barry died, in 1816, after twelve years of unselfish, faithful service. When the cemetery for dogs was opened in Paris the place of honor was given to a monument in his memory. This shows the little girl on his back whom he rescued after the fall of the avalanche. She is holding fast to him and Barry's head is turned a little toward her as if he was telling her to trust him and not be afraid, for he would surely carry her safely home.

(The End.)

MY ENAMELED VASE.

I had in my possession an old brown-and-white vase with very good lines, but it had an absolutely impossible red rose painted on one side.

I knew nothing of china painting, nor was the vase valuable enough to justify spending even a small amount of money. However, I had some blue enamel, bought at the ten-cent store for my oil stove.

I mixed a little black paint with it to soften it into a pretty gray and "flowed it onto the surface of the vase. It dried quickly, covered all the inartistic properties of the vase and left an object not unlike the new high-lustre vases sold in art shops.

Wild Plum Conserve—5 lbs. pitted plums, 2 lbs. seeded raisins, 5 lbs. sugar, 3 oranges, juice of 2 lemons.

Slice the oranges in thin slices, crosswise, removing seeds. Grind raisins in meat chopper. Put fruit, sugar and lemon juice in kettle with just enough water to keep fruit from sticking, bring to boiling point and simmer gently until the fruit is clear and thick and of the consistency of marmalade. Put in hot, sterilized glasses or jars, cool and seal.

Wild Plum Catsup—5 qts. wild plums, 4 lbs. sugar, 1 pt. vinegar, 1 qt. boiled water, 1½ tbsp. cinnamon, 1 tbsp. allspice, 1 tbsp. cloves.

Prepare the plums as for sauce, first boiling up with soda and then pitting. Boil vinegar, sugar, water and spices, then add pitted plums, bring to boiling point and simmer gently for about thirty minutes. Put in hot, sterilized jars or bottles and seal.

High Bush Cranberries—In September the high-bush cranberries begin to ripen. These should be picked under-ripe as they then make better jelly. Carefully wash and pick over the berries and put in a kettle with just enough water to cover. Cook gently until the fruit is tender. Strain through jelly bag. Add an equal amount of sugar to the strained juice, bring to the boiling point and simmer gently until it jellies. Pour in hot, sterilized glasses and cool and seal.

Jack's Adventures

BY LURA E. BENNETT.

PART I.

The engine choked, coughed, strangled, coughed again, and the low-hung, yellow roadster came to a standstill. As if that was not enough, bang! went a tire.

"Misery likes company," murmured Dudley Martin, sliding from his seat to interview the engine.

"What choked her, Dud?" asked Jack Allen, pausing to shake his fist at the flat tire. "You either feed her too much or starve her."

"Her ration was regular all the time," replied Dudley, scowling at the dead engine. He caught the crank, spinning it around. Another cough and wheeze, then silence. Jack glanced at the indicator.

"This thing registers two gallons. It said the same thing two hours ago. I'll bet her 'grub' has 'gin' out," and he proceeded to inspect the gas-tank. "Tee-totally, Dud!"

"How far back was that filling station?"

"A million miles, more or less," returned Jack, and began to sing:

"You're a million miles from nowhere, when you're one little—" The singer dropped behind the car, as a handful of dirt left Dudley's hand. "Shut up!" he flung along with the dirt. "I say, Jack, where are we?"

"In the Sahara, I think. A sandstorm just passed over," answered Jack, peeking over his bulwark.

Dudley looked at the speedometer. "A hundred and one miles! We've about forty more to go, to get to Aunt Lucy's. Well, oldtimer, who goes for gas?"

"Please, sir, I'd just as soon repair the damage to the tire, sir," returned Jack, his hands clasped in a devout manner.

"We'll flip," and Dudley produced a nickel. "Heads or tails?"

"Heads, and you go," returned Jack.

Dudley flipped, and heads won.

"All right," he said, "I can get a sandwich when I get there. So long."

"Gosh! Dud, I'd just as soon go." The reference to a 'am sandwich made his stomach sit up and take notice.

"Goodbye, Jack. I hope you have the tire up when I get back," and Dudley started off at a brisk pace.

"Nasty business," muttered Jack, as he took out the tools, and began his job. He finished, and no Dudley was in sight. "Jackie, your stomach is crying for refreshments. I wonder——" He looked about. Across the fields was a substantial looking farmhouse. He dug his hands in his trousers pockets. A surprised look swept over his face. He felt in the pockets of his coat, and produced a quarter. He whistled. He had forgotten to bring any money! Then he frowned. "All right, Jackie," he told himself; "I foresee an adventure. Aunt Lucy's is too slow for me. I'll show myself and everybody else, that I can start out with a quarter, and work my way a hundred miles home."

Taking a card from his pocket, he wrote: "Dud: Sometime, somewhere, we shall meet again. Shoot me for a deserter then, if you like. Do not look for me, for I will not be found. Jack." Placing the card on the car seat, and laying a stone on it to attract Dudley's attention, he vaulted over the fence and swung off across the fields in the direction of the farmhouse.

Maida Carleton threw herself into a chair near the kitchen door, literally tired out. "Oh, dear! I wish mother was here. The floor needs sweeping, all those strawberries to can, and five cows to milk to-night. Oh, dear!" A tear rolled over one cheek, another; and then a perfect deluge.

A light tap on the screen door startled her. Hastily wiping her tears away, she turned about and encountered the gaze of a strange young man. He raised his cap. "I beg your pardon. You are in trouble? Can I assist you?"

Maida first thought him a tramp, but he looked too well-dressed for a real tramp. To be sure, there were grimy smudges on his face, his clothes were dusty, but she decided he was no one of whom to be in fear. "If you know how to sweep, can strawberries, and milk cows, you can assist me," she answered, dashing aside a tear that would not be held back.

"Is that your only trouble?" he inquired. "That is easy. Now with me, I am in trouble—a serious trouble." Maida's look was a question, so placing his hand in the region of his stomach, he continued: "There is a terrible feeling of emptiness within me, and I have but a lone quarter with which to remedy my complaint." His glance took in the large pan of delicious looking strawberries on the table. "If I could—if you would exchange some of that beautiful fruit for my quarter, I am sure I could do anything for you." Maida laughed and held open the screen door. "Come in, please. I believe I haven't had any lunch either."

Jack entered and, while he washed at the kitchen sink, he also watched the left fingers of the girl as she hulled and washed the berries. In a very short time the table was set with bread, butter, cold ham, strawberries and cream, and a wonderfully good-looking cake.

When the keen edge had vanished from Jack's appetite, he said: "This is a lunch fit for a king."

Maida smiled, and wrinkled her nose. "I am sick of strawberries."

His hands went up in mock horror. "Shocking! how can you?"

She wrinkled her nose again. "If you had to pick, wash, can, preserve, and a dozen other things with them; milk cows, separate milk and all that, you would get sick of them, and everything else."

The wonder in his face was genuine. "Do you really do all that?"

She nodded. "Mother went away a week ago, to help care for an aunt, who is ill. The day after, father wrenched his ankle badly, and we have no hired man at present, so I have it all to do, and look after father besides."

Jack was thinking. "Would you hire me to help you? I am honest, but I'm 'broke.' I think I could learn to do all these things you mention."

Maida saw that he was serious. "I will speak to father, presently," she said. I think he is asleep now. You may help hull these berries, and we will consider your lunch paid for."

"You are very kind," he answered, his eyes following the trim figure as she moved about.

Presently there was a call from another room ,and Maida went in answer. Jack worked steadily at the berries, and when she returned the pan was empty.

"Father says, if you do not look as if you would rob or murder us, or burn the buildings, he will give you a dollar a day and your board."

"Done!" Jack exclaimed. "I am yours to command."

From across the field came the putt, putt, puttering of an automobile. Maida glanced out of the window, and Jack glanced over her shoulder. "There is a small yellow car on the other road," she announced. "Seems to be just starting off. Must have broken down."

"Um, probably. I imagine those machines are troublesome."

"Our 'Liz' very seldom bothers," she said, returning to her work.

Maida was a good teacher, and that afternoon, Jack learned to pick, wash, can and preserve strawberries. "What shall I call you?" she asked, and he replied: "My name is Jackson. You may call me that, for I understand servants are called by their surname."

"Jackson, I see the cows are up. Will you go and let down the bars?"

"With pleasure," he answered, and started toward the barn.

The bars proved a puzzle to Jack. "How do I let you down?" he questioned. Finally it was done. One inquisitive heifer decided to look the new hired man over, and advanced toward him.

"Shoo!" he said, backing up. She followed. He backed some more and caught his heel on an unfriendly piece of board, and suddenly sat down.

"Brr-aah!" bawled the heifer, and ran across the yard.

"Brr-aah!" bawled Jack after her. "I hope your curiosity is satiated."

Maida witnessed the scene from the stable door. She was convulsed with laughter.

"Laughing aids the digestion," offered Jack, dusting the seat of his trousers.

Maida handed him a stool and a pail. "Can you milk?" The laughter quirks were still playing about her lips.

"Oh! that is easy," he said, and watched a moment as the milk seemed to flow into Maida's pail. Jack sat down—on the wrong side of the cow, of course. "Whoa, cow," he said, and the next instant he was picking himself up from the gutter. He was undaunted, and started back.

"Jackson, there is a right, and a wrong side to a cow," Maida's voice was shaking with laughter.

Finally Jack was settled. There was no sound of milk flowing into the pail; only a mumbling guttural voice could be heard. "Miss Carleton? Does this cow milk?"

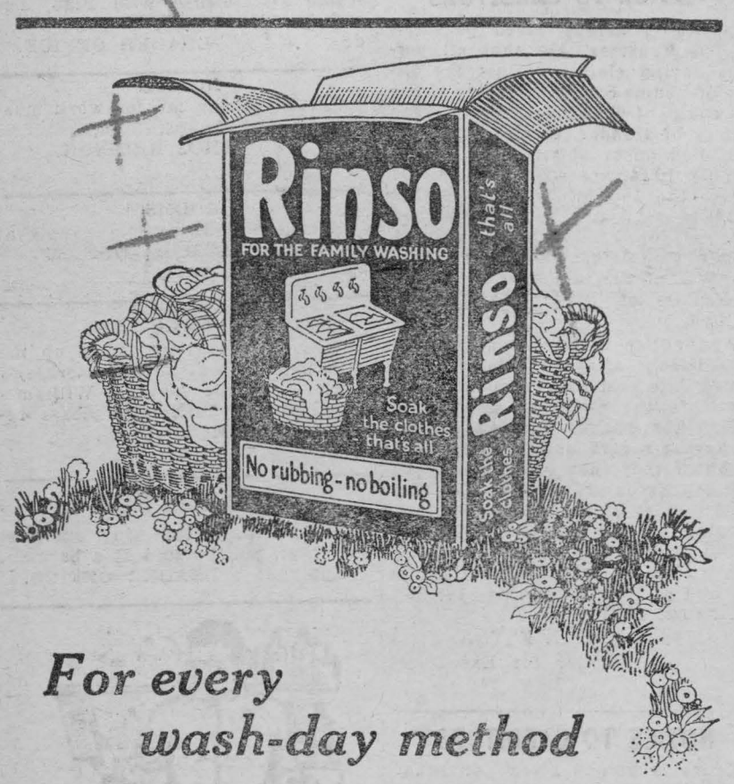

Maida emptied her pail. She was shaking with mirth as she watched him. "You have the motion of milking," she told him; "But squeeze, when your hands make the downward move."

"Oh!" The 'squeeze' was so sudden and severe, that the usually mild animal, now surprised, simply pushed him off the stool, but he came back, and managed to finish his cow by the time Maida was through.

At last the chores were finished, and Maida prepared a delicious supper. It seemed to Jack, that he never felt so hungry before, and he did ample justice to the meal.

The Woman of To-Day

LUNCH OUTFITS.

My family belongs to a number of organizations—the farmers' club, the farm and the home association, church and literary societies and young people's clubs—at which picnic lunches are frequently served, outdoors in summer and during the winter in the community hall, the church or at the home of some club member. Often silver became mixed or lost and some of the best china broken; so I finally decided to get a complete outfit to be used for this purpose.

At the ten-cent store, plates, cups, knives, forks and spoons were bought for each member of the family; also bowls for salads and hot foods, several rolls of waxed paper for wrapping sandwiches, plain white paper napkins, a box of gummed labels with which to mark the dishes, and paper cups and a ball of twine.

For thirty-five cents I got a large roll of white paper at the newspaper office. This comes about a yard wide and costs but ten cents a pound. It is used here for tablecloths at threshing time and at informal affairs, and a table can be made to look very attractive with the addition of a few vases and baskets of flowers. Then it saves the housewife laundering linen cloths.

A strong roomy basket was bought as a house-furnishing store and all these things put into it, the whole going into a convenient corner of the store room.

On the pantry shelf, ready for instant use, are a bottle of salad dressing, jars of potted meats and cheese, cans of pimentos, peanut butter, pickles and relishes, so there is no frantic rush when we are called upon to pack a lunch at short notice.

FAMILY CO-OPERATION.

As mother of seven children, six girls and one boy, the oldest thirteen years of age and the youngest nine months, I am busy at all times. As I work out of doors part of the time, we must all work together. I never give the children the same work twice in one day. The two oldest girls can cook and bake as good as mother, and so change about. The third washes dishes, while the fourth wipes them. Little sister entertains baby, and brother carries in the wood and water. When mother comes in from the garden work, everything is in order. On school days they all do up their work before leaving for school, and everyone wants to do their work the quickest and neatest.

I never buy them for work, but buy them little things I hear them speak of that they would like. When morning comes they are all eager to know what they can do during the day.

When the work is done we play a new game for an hour. One of the girls does a little plain sewing, while the other mends. After supper brother takes care of the chickens. Every evening one child plans what to do after supper, for we are never too tired to play games, sing, read, pop corn or make candy.—Mrs. F. H.

KITCHEN MEDITATION.

When our two-year-old baby climbs out of bed, he usually runs to the window and looks out. "Pitty day, Mama," he will say, "Pitty day." He has made me appreciate the "pretty days" and the beauty that it is our privilege to see and enjoy. Think how different life would be if you could not see a pretty day.

Sister Nellie just wishes her children's lives away. When they're babies she wishes they were big enough to walk; when they're walking she wishes they were older so that they'd know enough not to run away; when they're older she wishes they could go to school, and so on. I suppose when they're getting married she'll cry and wish that they were babies again.

As Mrs. "Jake" and Mrs. "Louis" were coming home from the Sunday School picnic with me they were commenting on Mrs. "Jim's" clothes. She must spend a lot of money for them, they both agreed—she always looks so nice. Now I know that Mrs. "Jim" doesn't have anything nicer than either of them—she just takes better care of her clothes. But I don't quite like to tell them htat.

Grandma Jones was crying the other day when I dropped in to see ser. It seems that when she had last visited at her son's she noticed that the large photograph of his father had been taken down from the wall of the front room and relegated to the attic. "They aren't keeping pictures like that around any more Mother," her daughter-in-law Jane told her.

"Well, maybe they aren't," said Grandma, "But I notice you're mighty glad to hold onto the farm Grandpa left you and John."

Now, wouldn't it have been nice if Jane and John had had a small picture of Grandpa made and appropriately framed and rehung in the living-room? This way they have inflicted a lifelong hurt on Grandma—there are some things more important than "style" in a house.

Young Dick, who works for us, laughed when he heard his father tell an insurance agent that Dick wasn't worth taking out an insurance for, but I've noticed he's been blue and hasn't acted the same toward him ever since. Why aren't people a little more careful in what they say?—E. M. Clark.

POTATO STARTER FOR BREAD.

So many people use the liquid starter for yeast, or what is known as potato beer, that I am venturing to send the recipe. So many times one's starter is lost or runs out and there is no one near who uses this method.

Here is the recipe: Pare three large or four small old potatoes; boil until done, mash fine through a strainer to avoid lumps, add one cupful of granulated sugar, half a cupful of salt, two cakes of good dry yeast, previously dissolved in a little lukewarm water. Stir all together thoroughly in an earthen crock and add two quarts of lukewarm water. Do this at noon, cover and let stand overnight. Next morning stir well, take out a generous pint of the liquid and put in a glass jar with cover adjusted loosely and set in your cellar or a cool place to serve as your next starter. Do not put in an ice box, as this kills the yearst.

To the remainder of your starter in the crock add one pint of lukewarm water, one level tablespoonful of salt and two tablespoonfuls of sugar—these depend on your personal taste, however, and after one baking you can tell if this is too much or too little of either to suit your own ideas—sift and stir in flour enough to form a soft dough a little heavier than pancake batter; sprinkle flour from the sifter over the top of this and set in a warm place. Allow to rise until there are huge cracks in the floured surface. Mix into hard loaf, adding lard if liked, and knead until the bread feels satiny under the hands. Allow to rise again, mix down thoroughly once more, and let rise. This second kneading is not a necessity, but I find it makes a better texture in the finished loaf. Now put into loaves, allow it to rise once more and bake as you would any bread.

A Philanthropist.

A lavish moon smiled down on every brook,
And lent her loveliness to each lagoon;
Glowing at midnight like a rose at noon
In lustrous splendour, she forgot to look
On no least hidden and enchanted nook
Which beauty makes her own. She bent to peep
Wherever fragrant gardens lay asleep,
And shim'ring silver on their petals shook.

Then, chatting with the clouds, she drifted down
The sky, where stars, like blossoms, gay with bloom,
Lighted her way into a weary town
So dark with grime her rays scarce pierced the gloom,
And here she dropped a dower of sparkling beams,
That all the children might have happy dreams!

His Answer.

A young man who was deeply in love with a girl who lived in another town decided to offer his hand and heart. So he went to the telegraph office and sent this message:

"Will you marry me? Twenty-word answer paid for."

An hour later he got his answer: "You are too extravagant. Why pay for nineteen words too many? No."

Self-confidence is only sometimes the result of actual performances; more usually it's based on what we think we could do if we get the chance.

Good-Will.

Good-will is the greatest power in the world.

Good-will is the respect and confidence of other people.

Good-will is more than gold—any banker will tell you that. Only about one-seventh of the business of the world is done on cash. Six-sevenths is done on credit, which means good-will.

Every worker who is ambitious must ask—"How much respect have I earned as well as my wages? How much good-will have I stored up?"

A PROMISING DISTRICT IN MANITOBA

(By R. Casselman)

During the past two years it has been my privilege and pleasure to visit a large number of localities in the West and last winter I took an extensive trip East and while there I could not help thinking that a great many people could better their livelihood by coming to some of these localities where better opportunities present themselves. Quietly and unassumingly during my little trips here and there I formed opinions of certain farming communities, one of these has left upon me a very lasting impression "fourteen years ago the land there were open for Homesteading." The railroad was coming through and many honest and god-fearing settlers took up land in that district until in a short time many changes were to be seen. I refer to the dstrict of Eriksdale, which is situated eighty-six miles from Winnipeg within four hours' run of the best market in the Dominion, making it an ideal community for both mixed farming and grain growing. After the railroad had gone through that district it made steady progress and in the year 1918 the Municipality was formed and through the efforts of this organization there has been a trunk road built right through the municipality for a distance of twenty-five miles with branch roads leading into every part, this opened up both East and West of the town. In the North-West portion of this locality we find grain growing predominating where some farmers have between two and three hundred acres under cultivation. This shows energy has been expended, as practically all that district had been scrub land, and several soil experts who have visited this district claim it to be of the best. East and South-East the farmers have gone in for mixed farming and we find several pure bred herds of cattle while others have made hogs and sheep their specialty. Due West and South-West we find the farmers going in for extensive ranching, especially along the Lake Shore. In the winter these same farmrs add much to their revenue from fish which is shipped fresh daily to Chicago and other Eastern points.

The town of Eriksdale is located in the centre of about 430 square miles of ideal farm land and has about three hundred of a population. It has five general stores; three implement agencies; a large creamery with a capacity of 1,000,000 pounds of butter per year. The amount of cash paid out each day by this enterprise is considerable. There are also Elevators; Loading Platforms; Stock Yards, Oil Tanks, Bank, Hotels, Churches, and Schools besides a Doctor, Veterinary, Blacksmiths, Butcher, Harness Maker, Baker, Drug Store, Lumber Yards, Livery Barns, Garages and etc. Indeed everything that goes to make up an ideal town. All this has been accomplished within the last twelve years, since the railroad passed through.

Further insertions may be looked for in this paper, Re the District of Eriksdale, Manitoba.

"Best Thing in the World For Delicate Girls"

Mrs. John Bennett, Boggy Creek, Man., writes:
"My little girl had organic nervous trouble, could not sleep, had severe headaches and fainting spells. This went on for three years, and three doctors helped her very little. After reading of what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food had done for others, I got some for her. She is now so well that she is like a different child. She is fourteen years old and looks the picture of health.

"We have used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for different members of the family, when recovering from "flu" and scarlet fever, and it has always helped them."

THE TRIUMPH OF A GREAT WOMAN

Thirty-seven years ago, in the village of Chard, Somerset, a small, brown-haired girl was teaching boys in a Board school. She herself was then only thirteen years of age. The passage of time has brought many changes into that child-teacher's life, until to-day she finds herself the first woman in history to be a member of a British Government.

Miss Margaret Bondfield

One of the most remarkable women of our time, she brings hard, practical experience to bear on her onerous duties as Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Labor, for, after spending a few years as a teacher, she entered the world of industry as a shop assistant, and was destined to tramp the streets to look for a job.

At the age of fifteen Margaret Bondfield migrated to Brighton, where she found employment as an assistant in an outfitter's shop. Later she moved to London, where, in subsequent years, she was to experience unemployment and the discouragement of walking from shop to shop looking for a situation. Altogether she spent ten years behind various counters in London and the provinces, at a time when shop assistants were badly organized, poorly paid, and overworked.

These conditions moved her to agitate for improvement, and started her on a career which is, perhaps, unparalleled in the history of working-class movements. Now known affectionately as "Our Maggie" to thousands of Britons in every walk of life, she has won this description through her great charm and her ability to put her life and soul into everything she does.

In 1898 she became Assistant Secretary of the Shop Assistants' Union, and held this post for ten years, until she succeeded the late Mrs. Ramsay MacDonald as Organizing Secretary of the Women's Labor League. Her great eloquence, sincerity, organizing ability, and active work in all women's movements, and her assistance in the creation of the National Federation of Women Workers, were later rewarded by her appointment as Chief Officer of the Women's Section of the National Union of General Workers. It was this post that she resigned upon appointment to the Government.

Miss Bondfield was the only woman delegate at the historic Trade Union Congress at Plymouth in 1899, when the resolution was moved which resulted in the formation of the Labor Party. It was, therefore, a fitting tribute to her great abilities and service that at the Plymouth Congress last year she should have been appointed to perhaps the most important trade union post in the world—that of Chairman of the General Council of the Trade Union Congress, whose membership exceeds 6,000,000.

No woman had ever held the post before, and her abilities were soon tested by the recent boiler-makers' strike, which involved some 70,000 workers, and had, until Miss Bondfield approached the problem, been in progress for seven months. Her skill as a negotiator was proved by the settlement of this dispute, which she achieved in a remarkably short time after her appointment.

Slight in stature, with hazel eyes that smile at one from a charming face, to see her foxtrotting at a Half Circle Club dance, or enjoying a joke among a group of friends, one feels that her charm is different from that of anyone else. But to see her on a platform at the Albert Hall, rousing her audience by her eloquence and blazing sincerity, is the picture which remains in the minds of all who have witnessed it.

Miss Bondfield sails for Canada on September 13 to make a survey of conditions in the Dominion.

The Regent of Abyssinia, accompanied by the Duke of York, is shown leaving his residence at Albert Gate to visit the King at Buckingham Palace.

Harvest Moon Not Weather Prophet, Says Probs.

The harvest moon is set in the heavens to illumine the late labors of the harvest field, not to act as a weather prophet, meteorologists say. Western farmers who have been predicting that if the full moon passes without a frost there will be none until the crop is harvested, are deluding themselves, state the weather sharps, who do their prophesying by rule and reason and not by guess.

The moon has absolutely nothing to do with weather conditions, according to Sir Frederic Stupart, of the Meteorological Office, Toronto, when approached for an opinion on the popular theory that if there is no frost before the full moon passes, there will be none until the crop is harvested.

"We do not consider that the moon has anything to do with it," he stated. "It is just an old wives' tale."

Wheat Crop in Australia Promises Well

A despatch from London says:—Prospects of a large Australian wheat crop are most promising, according to authoritative sources quoted by the Sydney correspondent of The Daily Telegraph. Assuming there are no adverse circumstances before the harvest season, the crop is expected to total approximately 140,000,000 bushels, as compared with 123,000,000 last year.

Dominion News in Brief

Halifax, N.S.—From August 4th to 16th Halifax, the oldest of British settled cities in Canada, celebrated the 175th anniversary of its birth. The British Special Service Squadron, accompanied by a warship representing Australia, aided in the celebration. A program of yacht races, pageants, and sports of all kinds featured the period of carnival.

Toronto, Ont.—More comprehensive than ever will be the exhibit of the Federation of British Industries at this year's Canadian National Exhibition, according to the exhibition manager for the Federation who has arrived at Toronto from London. Both British and French exhibits are to be open to the trade five days before the formal opening of the exhibition. This year's display, it is announced, is to include a far more representative showing than last year, a number of British manufacturers spurred on by the marked success of those who showed last year, having entered the Canadian field for the first time. Between thirty and forty separate exhibitors will this year form part of the British showing at the International Building.

Winnipeg, Man.—For the year which closed June 30th, the profits on the cattle pool of the United States Growers, Ltd., amounted to $30,870, which will make possible a distribution of one per cent. on the value of their cattle to be paid to shippers in addition to the full market value which they have already received. Since the pool was inaugurated in February, 1923, it has sold more than 100,000 cattle of a value of $3,200,000.

Regina, Sask.—The pure seed growers of Saskatchewan are making preparations for organized merchandising of the best quality products under the standards and regulations of the Canadian Seed Growers' Ass'n. Whilst the marketing association is only getting under way a substantial quantity for export each year is already assured, among the leading varieties and kinds of seed to be handled being: Marquis wheat, Banner and Victory oats, O.A.C. No. 21 and Canadian Thorpe barley; Premost flax, Prolific rye, Arctic sweet clover, Grimm alfalfa, Superior brome grass, and Western rye grass.

Calgary, Alta.—Irrigated farm lands at Taber, in South Alberta, are attracting prospective settlers from the United States and Eastern Canada and several land scouts have been sent to the vicinity by colonization organizations.

Dawson, Y.T.—A rich strike of silver lead ore has been made on claims on Galena Hill. One is eighteen feet in width and seventy per cent. lead with 30 to 50 ounces of silver. Several big mining interests are now becoming interested in the area, according to report.

COOL WEATHER IN WEST RETARDS RUST SPREAD

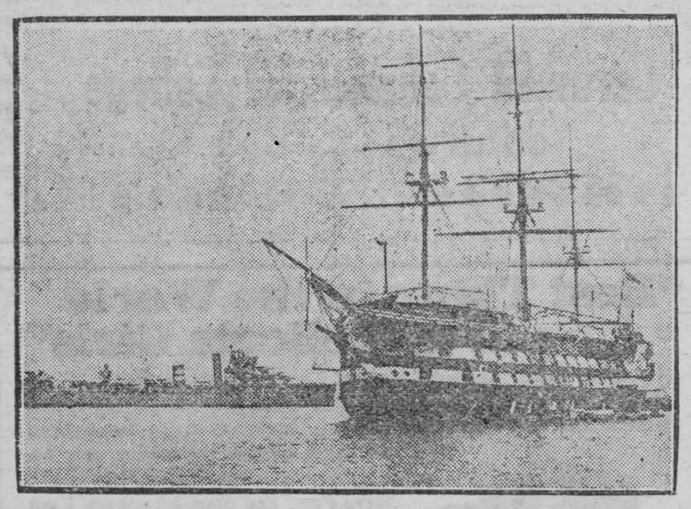

Although Lack of Warmth Delays Ripening Process, Harvest Has Begun.

A despatch from Winnipeg says:—Crops in Manitoba and Southern Alberta are ripening fast under favorable weather conditions. Some wheat is being harvested and harvest will be pretty general in the districts mentioned by Monday next. New crop of rye is already coming on the market. Lake of the Woods Milling Co. bought three cars from S. Manon Thursday, graded 2 C.W. fine sample. Crop in Manitoba will be made in a few days of the present weather.

The fine, cool weather of recent days has retarded development of rust in Southern Manitoba, but at the same time it has held back the ripening processes of the grain crops. It is claimed that there has been actual damage from rust only in isolated fields, and it is expected now that rust damage will not be general in any way. A situation which threatened to be serious was relieved by favorable weather.

Rye harvesting is general in the Brandon district and many farmers will start work on barley next week. In the district of Tilney, in Southern Saskatchewan, wheat is being cut and harvesting will be fairly general in a week. Southern Alberta reports considerable cutting.

Recent rains have caused great improvement in the hay crop everywhere and in pasture.

FLOODS SWEEP CHINA 50,000 PERSONS PERISH

Widespread Destruction of Property Rendering Millions Homeless in Large Areas.

A despatch from Shanghai says:—Millions have been rendered homeless, and at least 50,000 persons have been drowned in devastating floods which are sweeping widespread areas of China, submerging tens of thousands of villages. Thousands of refugees are pouring into Pekin. It is impossible to get even an approximate estimate of the fatalities, but 50,000 is said to be a conservative estimate.

Unusually devastating floods, with accompanying widespread destruction of property have been reported from various sections of China during the last few weeks. Late in July there were serious inundations in the Provinces of Chihli and Hunan. On Saturday further floods were reported from Kwangsi and Sinkiang, but it was reported that the loss of life had been up until that time comparatively small.

A despatch from Washington says:—Ten million people are affected by famine in China, according to an announcement by the China International Famine Commission, obtained for the American Red Cross by Jacob Gould Schurman, the American Minister in Pekin. The estimate is that $10,000,000 will be needed for relief operations. The emergency relief measures now under way are carried on by various Chinese philanthropic organizations, and Dr. Schurman reports that the Famine Commission is laying plans to meet the distress which will follow the destruction of the crops.

A later despatch from Pekin says:—The international famine relief committee announced on Thursday that the latest estimate of the number of deaths from the floods which have been sweeping China is 14,115. The committee estimates that 15,000,000 persons are affected in the flooded areas in the Provinces of Hunan, Chihli, Kiangsi, Fukien, Kwangtung, Shangtung, Honan and Hupeh.

Narrow Escape of Italian Climbers on 11,000-Foot Peak

A despatch from Chamonix, France, says:—Three Italian mountain climbers underwent the terrifying experience of hanging for five hours from a rope over a 300-foot precipice before being rescued. Unaccompanied by guides, they had reached the summit of the Aiguille De Grepon, an 11,000-foot feak, without mishap, and were on the way back when one slipped, dragging the others with him down the side of the mountain. The rope between the second and third men, however, caught on a rock as they went over the edge of the precipice. The trio were pulled up with great difficulty.

Kaslo, B.C.—The Canadian Mines Merger Co., Ltd., with capital of $11,200,000 has been registered in British Columbia with office at Kaslo. A group of properties in this area will come under the merger.

PLAN TO MAKE EMPIRE ALL SELF-SUPPORTING

Two-fold Need: Development and Conservation, in Canada Especially, of Resources.

A despatch from London says:—Measures to safeguard the Empire against the possibility of a world famine in timber as foreshadowed in a paper read at the meeting of the British Association at Toronto on Wednesday are outlined in an interview which Prof. Fraser Story, technical officer to the Forestry Commission, has given the Times. Prof. Story is of the opinion that at no distant date the Empire may become self-supporting provided there is a reasonable development at home, with adequate conservation of resources throughout the Empire, particularly in Canada. Only twenty per cent. of the present British timber imports come from within the Empire, with Canada as the principal source. The resources of the Dominion, which by themselves would be capable of making the Empire self-supporting, were almost unlimited; the loss from forest fires, however, was appalling.

During the last five years no fewer than ten million acres of timber had been destroyed in Canada by fire. The only real remedy for forest fires was to educate public opinion in the areas concerned, and to get settlers and others to realize the importance of Canada's timber resources to the Empire. Prof. Story says the United Kingdom has five million acres of unproductive land suitable for cultivation for the purpose of a forest station. There was scarcely a country in the world except British Columbia and California, where soft woods could be grown so well. The Forestry Commission has acquired 127,000 acres for planting.

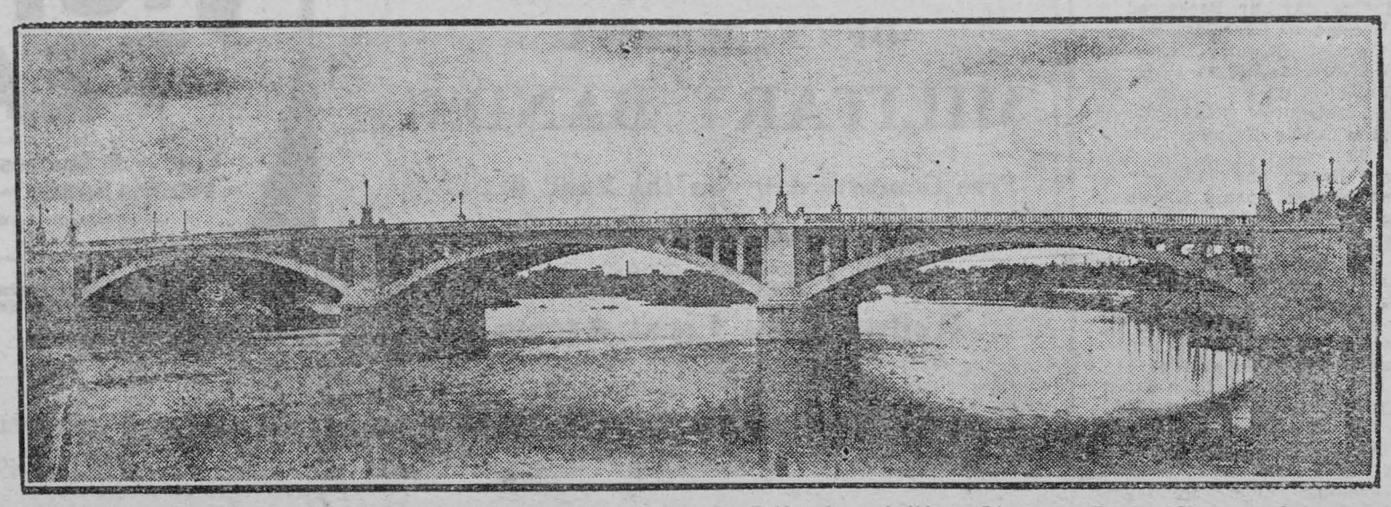

The Greatest Delusion.

Selfishness always defeats its own purpose, because it violates the very purpose of our being. Whenever we do petty, mean, selfish things, we are up against an inexorable law; and the law that we have violated will punish us and make us repay to the last farthing.

Whittier tells us:—

That to be saved is only this—
Salvation from our selfishness.

The poet is right. If it were not for selfishness there would be no poverty and very little crime or suffering in the world. If it were not for selfishness, there would have been no war in 1914. If it were not for selfishness the great nations of the earth would not be split by hatreds and jealousies and wrangling over non-essentials, as they are to-day. If it were not for selfishness this world would be a Paradise. Selfishness is the greatest delusion of the human race.

On August 11 Brantford celebrated the formal opening of the new Lorne Bridge by a holiday. Lieutenant-Governor Harry Cockshutt officially pronounced the bridge open for traffic, and Hon. George S. Henry, minister of highways, was present. The bridge is 428 feet long, 64 feet wide and cost $335,000. It is already recognized as one of the most beautiful structures in the province.

RED ROSE ORANGE PEKOE

Surnames and Their Origin

BEVERLY

Racial Origin—Anglo-Saxon of Norman French.
Source—A locality.

This family name quite clearly belongs in the classification of those which have been derived from the names of places, for it is traceable through the early documents with the prefixed "de," meaning of.

It is paradoxical that the smaller communities in all lands have given more family names than the big centres of population. The reason for this is, in the first place, that people flocked from the small communities, where there was not so great a need for additional names, to the big centres, where there was not only need, but where the mention of a small place served the purpose of differentiation quite accurately. In the second place, the big communities gave rise to comparatively few family names because it constituted little differentiation to speak of "Roger de London," when there were thousands of "Rogers from London" to be found all over the country.

Authorities differ as to the origin of the place name of Beverly, which is in Yorkshire. Some derive it from "belvoir" (beautiful view) and "ley," a meadow or field. It is more probable, however, that the place already had been named by the Anglo-Saxons as "Beverlac," or beaver-lake.

MacCORKILL

Variation—MacCorkle.
Racial Origin—Scottish.
Source—A given name.

Here is a family name which, though purely Scottish Gaelic in it sorigin as such, traces back ultimately to Norse sources, and if you bear this name there is a good chance that you have a line of ancestry reaching back to the Vikings through Scotland.

The name of MacCorkill or MacCorkle was borne by one of the branches or septs of the Clan Gunn, which was decidedly one of the fighting clans of the Highlands, its history vying with that of the MacGregors in records of desperate fighting.

But the given name from which MacCorkill is derived is Thorketil, a relic of the old pagan Norse religion, and the meaning of which is "Thor's kettle." The kettle or cauldron was a utensil which played a large part, figuratively, in the worship of the Vikings, and is found to-day as an element in a lot of family names, and even still is given names in the Scandinavian countries.

There is a great deal of Norse blood in Scotland, principally along the north and west coasts. At one period a considerably part of the coast was in the hands of Norwegian settlers who retained their allegiance to the Norse kings, and who later took their places among the Celts of the Highlands in full Gaelic clan organization.

Children of Chance.

"How did he ever think of that?"

We often hear this, or some similar remark at the Royal Academy or any other picture exhibition. Very often, the true answer would be "chance." It is frequently a purely accidental circumstance that suggests a picture to a knight of the palette.

Everyone who has been to St. Paul's Cathedral has seen Holman Hunt's beautiful picture, "The Light of the World." Concerning this the painter says:

"I had been re-reading the Testament, and had read as far as Revelations when, anxious to finish the book one evening, I took my Bible up to my bedroom, and suddenly came upon a passage which, as by a flash, impressed the picture on my brain."

Two of Sir Luke Fildes' pictures were inspired by accidental circumstances. These are "The Return of the Penitent" and "The Widower."

The idea for the first-named painting came one day when the artist was passing down a village street and saw a miserable-looking woman walk by him, with downcast eyes, amidst the sneers of the inhabitants. The scene so impressed him that he made inquiries concerning the woman, learnt her history—she had been imprisoned for child-murder—and painted his tragic picture.

"The Widower' owes its conception to an equally pathetic incident. Sir Luke had hired a broken man off the streets to sit, nursing a baby, for his picture, "The Casual Ward." During a rest period Sir Luke caught his model looking at and petting the baby as tenderly as any woman, and so impressed was he with the unrehearsed scene that he put it on canvas.

Secular as well as sacred literature has inspired pictures. Marcus Stone was so impressed by Dickens' description of Mr. Dombey's Joy at the birth of Paul, and his consequent neglect of Florence, that he painted the scene.

Similarly, two tragic stanzas from "Yeast," by Charles Kingsley, inspired that striking picture, "The Poacher's Widow." The verses run:

A poacher's widow sat sighing
On the side of the white chalk-bank,
Where under the gloomy fir-woods
One spot in the ley throve rank.

"She watched a long tuft of clover,
Where rabbit or hare never ran,
For its black sour haulm covered over
The blood of a murdered man.'

The following couplet, from "The Rubaiyat," seen by chance, induced Briton Riviere to paint that wonderful canvas "Persepolis":

"They say the Lion and the Lizard keep
The courts where Jamshyd gloried and drank deep."

The Morning and the Evening.

The wings of the morning are silver and pearl,
With flushes of rose where the plumes half uncurl.
They're burnished with azure and dusted with gold,
And preened till they glisten with lustre untold.
They poise at the zenith and send a soft breath
Of quickening hope to the chamber of death.
O, winnowing wings, how the fog wraiths retreat
Before thy wide fanning and rhythmical beat!

The wings of the evening are sable and gray,
Though barred by the sunset and streaked by the day,
Yet they are spread at the bidding of night,
A veiling of sapphire diffuses the light,
Invests all the twilight with glamour afresh,
And 'prisons a star in its billowing mesh.
O, sheltering wings, let no trouble intrude
As over my valley you hover and brood!

GUARD BABY'S HEALTH IN THE SUMMER

The summer months are the most dangerous to children. The complaints of that season, which are cholera infantum, colic diarrhoea, and dysentery, come on so quickly that often a little one is beyond aid before the mother realizes he is ill. The mother must be on her guard to prevent these troubles, or if they do come on suddenly to banish them. No other medicine is of such aid to mothers during hot weather as is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the stomach and bowels and are absolutely safe. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Vain Counsel.

She is very foolish if she loves a sailor.
In the night a little wind can blow her lids apart,
Or if a norther rattles like a crazy man at the shutters
The hours of his anger drive straight upon her heart.

There is no more peace for her—she has given the sea a hostage,
Perhaps she sees a petal on a brooklet in the park
Tossing in jeopardy: she hears without a reason
The horror of a ship's bell clattered in the dark.

She is very foolish. Men there are aplenty
Who carry their umbrellas and like a cozy life.
Why should her heart cry seaward, like a petrel, like a shearwater?
So she never can become a calm, contented wife.

Shepherds, charcoal burners, mountaineers and sailors
All have watched the sun rise on strange sights alone.
She is very foolish if she loves a sailor,
But she says she never meant to; it happened unbeknown.

Picnic Time.

When father's whistling 'round the yard and noticing the sky,
And Grandma puts her knitting down and says—"It will be dry;"
When mother's packing baskets full and auntie's helping too,
Then I can run some errands for there's lots of things to do.

When brother's working at the car and makes it fairly shine,
And looks the fishing tackle up and tests each rod and line,
it somehow seems the nicest world, and how could one feel sad?
It's picnic time at our house, and oh, but I am glad!

STOMACH TROUBLE DUE TO THIN BLOOD

It Usually Disappears When the Blood is Made Rich and Red.

Thin blood is one of the most common causes of stomach trouble. It affects the digestion very quickly. The glands that furnish the digestive fluids are diminished in their activity, the stomach muscles are weakened and there is a loss of nerve force. In this state of health nothing will more quickly restore the appetite, digestion and normal nutrition than good, rich, red blood.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills act directly on the blood, making it rich and red, and this enriched blood strengthens weak nerves, stimulates tired muscles and awakens to normal activity the glands that supply the digestive fluids. This is shown by an improved appetite, and soon the effect of these blood enriching pills is evident throughout the whole system. You find that what you eat does not distress you, and that you are vigorous instead of irritable and listless. If your appetite is fickle, if you have any of the distressing pains and symptoms of indigestion, you should at once take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and profit by the better condition in which they will put your blood.

These pills are sold by all dealers in medicine, or you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Advertising Laughs.

Amusing specimens of national humor in advertisements have been collected by the "Canadian Digest," which says of them that "some are conscious, some unconscious, and some merely stunned.

Some of the examples are:—

Irish.—"Hay, straw, bran, oats, and dripping sold here, and the fiddle taught after six o'clock."

French.—Inscription (or epitaph) on a tin of imported sardines: "The oil is guarantee. The fish she is very small."

South America.—Alongside a huge restaurant was a little Chinese chop-suey restaurant. The big place put out a gigantic electric sign, "We never close." The Chinaman hung out a card, "Me wakee, too."

Aberdeen.—"To let, a good shop in the Jewish quarter."

Boston (Mass).—"Keep off the grass. If you want to roam, join the Navy."

Japan.—"My marvellous paper is as solid as the hide of an elephant. My goods are forwarded with the speed of a bullet.'

Asthmador Guaranteed to Relieve Asthma.

"I have arranged with all druggists here, as well as in all other towns of Canada, that every sufferer from Asthma, Hay Fever, Bronchial Asthma or difficult breathing in this locality can try my treatment entirely at my risk," Dr. R. Schiffman announces. He says: "Buy a package of my Asthmador, try it, and if it does not afford you immediate relief, or if you do not find it the best remedy you have ever used, take it back to your druggist and he will return your money, cheerfully and without any question whatever. After seeing the grateful relief it has afforded in hundreds of cases which had been considered incurable, and which had been given up in despair, I know what it will do. I am so sure that it will do the same for others that I am not afraid to guarantee it will relieve instantaneously. Druggists, anywhere, handling Asthmador will return your money if you say so. You are to be the sole judge and under this positive guarantee absolutely no risk is run in buying." Persons preferring to try it before buying will be sent a free sample.

On Niagara's Brink.

Only two men, so far as we know, have ever passed a night virtually on the brink of the Horseshoe Fall of Niagara. Those men, says a writer in Wide World Magazine, are Gustave F. Lofberg and James H. Harris, who were employed as dredgers. On an afternoon in August, 1923, their scow broke its cable, and they were at the mercy of the swift current above the falls. There seemed to be no hope for them. Down they swept, and then suddenly the heavy scow ran aground almost on the brink!

The minds of the watchers on shore, says the writer, worked like lightning. They quickly decided on a line and a breeches buoy as a method of rescue. The Coast Guard station at the mouth of the Niagara River, fifteen miles or so distant, was immediately called on the telephone, and Capt. A. D. Nelson and his crew were asked to come to the rescue.

It was about three o'clock when the scow broke adrift; at a quarter past four Captain Nelson and a squad of men started for Niagara Falls in a big army motor truck. They carried with them the life-line cannon and other necessary apparatus. The question that agitated every mind was whether the fierce current would lick the scow away before the men could be saved? It was a race between the river and the rescuers.

When Captain Nelson and his men arrived they quickly set up the life-line cannon on the shore east of the power house. The captain sighted it and fired. High out over the river the projectile hurtled. It made a remarkable flight and then settled directly over the scow.

Lofberg and Harris grabbed the small line as it fell and at a signal began drawing it in. Attached to the shore end was a heavier rope, but the two men had a hard time hauling it across the swift current. Though those on shore helped all they could, it took two hours to get the rope over. Then those on shore carried the end up on top of the power house and made it secure.

As the work progressed night came on, and big searchlights were brought into play. For a time the rescuers kept at their task, but after a while they reluctantly agreed that their efforts must cease until daylight.

Out on the scow Lofberg and Harris were seen to lie down to rest, if rest were possible for men aboard a stranded scow that at any minute might be picked up on a rising flood and tumbled over the brink of Niagara. It was a night of awful suspense, not only for the poor fellows on the scow and the men engaged in their rescue but for the thousands of men, women and children who had lingered on the scene.

Daylight on the morning of August 7 saw everyone alert. The scow still lay where it had run aground, though it might move at any moment. Quickly all the lines were cleared, and after a little delay the breeches buoy was sent out to the castaways. Lofberg helped his companion into the buoy, and before long he landed safe on the roof of the power house. Again the buoy was sent out over the rapids; when it reached the scow Lofberg climbed into it. Only a few minutes were required to land him on the roof, and then a great cheer went up from the watching crowds.

Open Ocean.

We two who found the haven snug and safe—
The riding faultless, sheltered, pleasant, warm,
Learn now at last how any rope must chafe,
And put to sea again and face the storm.
Knowing no separate ports at which we touch
Can ever equal this, or offer more,
We know as well, at last, that vessels such
As we were not intended for the shore.

The danger is not small—we count the cost
Of climbing tide and wave, of seeing sail
Across the water, vanishing and lost,
The other—to be swallowed in the gale.
But we are built of too imperious stuff
To rank this harbor-happiness enough.

Winnipeg, Man.—"I cannot speak too highly of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was a nervous wreck and I just had to force myself to do my work. Even the sound of my own children playing made me feel as if I must scream if they did not get away from me. I could not even speak right to my husband. The doctor said he could do nothing for me. My husband's mother advised me to take the Vegetable Compound and I started it at once. I was able to do my work once more and it was a pleasure, not a burden. Now I have a fine bouncing baby and am able to nurse her and enjoy doing my work. I cannot help recommending such a medicine, and any one seeing me before I took it, and seeing me now, can see what it does for me. Good Eyes
—AND—
Good Health

How few of us ever stop to think of the relation between good eyes and good health in spite of the fact that we would part with almost any member of the body rather than our eyes, we abuse and neglect our eyesight more than any other human function.

We know that eyestrain is often responsible for headaches and nervous spells. For other ailments, we run to the Physician on the slightest provocation. We are even learning to make regular visits to the Dentist. Why do we not as regularly have our eyes examined by an Optometrist.

Efficiency is the watchword of to-day. You cannot be efficient with poor eyes.
