ONTARIO ALL FOR; QUEBEC ALL AGAINST WATERWAY

The following significant facts transpired during the debate in the Federal Parliament, touching the matter of waterways development: Quebec members, all Liberals, were irrevocably opposed; Ontario members, irrespective of party, favored the lake-to-sea development; Progressives, all Westerners, urged cautious, thorough inquiry before embarking upon any policy.

The Prime Minister assured the House that most complete engineering and financial investigation would precede any action by the Government. The undertaking, he said, was a huge one, and the interests of every section of the Dominion, and of the Treasury, would be carefully safeguarded.

The Government would choose for the proposed National Committee only men whose qualities made them outstanding, and the Canadian experts on the Joint Engineering Board would pay close attention to such matters as the lowering of river and harbor levels, costs of power production, and possible revenue therefrom.

SUGAR-MAKING

Maple sugar is one of the legacies bequeathed by the Indians of the New World to their white conquerors. In the earliest records of Indian life are references to the tapping of the maple trees, for the sweet sap from which sugar is made. The troughs used by the Indians were made of bark, and the syrup was poured into bark boxes to cool and mould. In these holders they were sold to the pioneers to augment their scanty supplies.

Until a few years ago, crude methods were employed in making the syrup and sugar, and in marketing. Huge tubs were pulled about the weeds and the sap was gathered from wooden buckets into which it ran. Today, scientific methods are used, and the sap is run to the sugar kitchens in pipelines laid through the maple woods. The best sanitary methods are employed in the kitchens, in which the syrup is bottled by machine and the sugar moulded into convenient sizes for retail sale.

The maple tree is very sensative to climate conditions. Cold northwest winds, frosty nights and sunny days induce the best flow of sap, which flows much more readily in the daytime than at night. The flow ceases entirely during the south-west wind or at the approach of a storm. Each tree yields an average of from twelve to twenty-four gallons of sap a season.

VICTORIOUS HOCKEY TEAM SPLENDIDLY ENTERTAINED

A banquet was held at the residence of Mr. C. S. Ault, Aultsville, on the evening of March 14th, to celebrate the grand and glorious victory of the hockey boys who won the championship and silver cup of the Longue Sault Hockey League, at Victoria Rink, Cornwall, on Thursday evening, March 13th. The first part of the evening was spent playing progressive euchre, John Cross winning the greatest number of games received first prize, while Ross Beckstead received the booby prize. The ladies then announced that the table was laid and the boys proceeded to the dining room to partake of the good things that Mrs. Ault had prepared. The most prominent feature of the table decoration was the championship cup with the Aultsville colors, the pride of the community. On each side of the cup were two hockey sticks tied with the same appropriate colors, with two pucks that fitted in quite nicely. The tables were lighted with candles which gave the room a very restful effect, very appropriat after the boys playing such strenuous hockey. Cards were placed at each plate with the names of the players according to rank, station and ability, during the season.

Mr. C. S. Ault filled the position of chairman most admirably, and the company honored him by singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" The King's health was drunk and then all sat down to a magnificent turkey supper, which was already carved and waiting.

We must not go into details as to how much each man ate, etc., as we are sure some would be ashamed if they saw it written on paper, but each one surely did ample justice.

After the banquet Mr. Ault made a short speech with reference to the boys' splendid record and the beautiful trophy they had won. He then called on each man individually to get up and make a speech, and to talk just as long as he liked, and it was surprising how lengthy and appropriate the remarks were, and how gladly they responded when called upon. They then retired to the reception room where the remainder of the evening was spent playing and singing, etc.

On leaving for home all thanked Mr. and Mrs. Ault most heartily for their generous hospitality and for the very enjoyable evening they had spent, which will long be remembered as one of the happiest events of a notable and victorious hockey season.

Kirby knew that Hull was concealing something material, but he saw he could not at the present moment wring it from him. He had not, in point of fact, the faintest idea of what it was. Therefore he could not lay hold of any lever with which to pry it loose. He harked back to another point.

"Do you know that my cousin and Miss Harriman came to see my uncle that night? I mean do you know of your own eyesight that they ever reached his apartment?"

"Well, we know they reached the Paradox an' went up in the elevator. Me an' the wife watched at the window. Yore cousin James wasn't with Miss Harriman. The dude one was with her."

"Jack!" exclaimed Kirby, astonished.

"Yep."

"How do you know? How did you recognize them?"

"Saw 'em as they passed under the street light about twenty feet from our window. We couldn't 'a' been mistook as to the dude fellow. O' course we don't know Miss Harriman, but the woman walkin' beside the young fellow surely looked like the one that fainted at the inquest when you was testifyin' how you found yore uncle dead in the chair. I reckon when you said it she got to seein' a picture of one of the young fellows gunnin' their uncle."

"One of them. You just said James wasn't with her."

"No, he come first. Maybe three-four minutes before the others."

"What time did he reach the Paradox?"

"It might 'a' been ten or maybe only five minutes after we left yore uncle's room. The wife an' me was talkin' it over whether I hadn't ought to slip back upstairs and untie yore uncle before they got here. Then he come an' that settled it. I couldn't go."

"Can you give me the exact time he reached the apartment house?"

"Well, I'll say it was a quarter to ten."

"Do you know or are you guessin'?"

"I know. Our clock struck the quarter to whilst we looked at them comin' down the street."

"At them or at him?"

"At him, I mean."

"Can't stick to his own story," Olson grunted.

"A slip of the tongue. I meant him."

"And Jack and the lady were three or four minutes behind him?" Kirby reiterated.

"Yes."

"Was your clock exactly right?"

"May be five minutes fast. It gains."

"You know they turned in at the Paradox?"

"All three of 'em. Mrs. Hull she opened the door a mite an' saw 'em go up in the elevator. It moves kinda slow, you know. The heavy-set young fellow went up first. Then two-three minutes later the elevator went down an' the dude an' the young lady went up."

Kirby put his foot on the cement bench and rested his forearm on his knee. The cattleman's steady eyes were level with those of the unhappy man making the confession.

"Did you at any time here the sound of a shot?"

"Well, I—I heard somethin'. At the time I thought maybe it was a tire in the street blowin' out. But come to think of it later we figured it was a shot."

"You don't know for sure."

"Well, come to that I—I don't reckon I do. Not to say for certain sure."

A tense litheness had passed into the rough rider's figure. It was as though every sense were alert to catch and register impressions.

"At what time was it you thought you heard this shot?"

"I dunno, to the minute."

"Was it before James Cunningham went up in the elevator? Was it between the time he went up an' the other two went up? Or was it after Jack Cunningham an' Miss Harriman passed on the way up?"

"Seems to me it was—"

"Hold on." Kirby raised a hand in protest. "I don't want any guesses. You know or you don't. Which is it?"

"I reckon it was between the time yore cousin James went up an' the others followed."

"You reckon? I'm askin' for definite information. A man's life may hang on this." The cattleman's eyes were ice-cold.

Hull swallowed a lump in his fat throat before he committed himself. "Well, it was."

"Was between the two trips of the elevator, you mean?"

"Yes."

"Your wife heard this sound, too?"

"Yep. We spoke of it afterward."

"Do you know anything else that could possibly have had any bearing on my uncle's death?"

"No, sir. Honest I don't."

Olson shot a question at the man on the grill. "Did you kill the Jap servant, too, as well as his boss?"

"I didn't kill either the one or the other, so help me."

"Do you know anything at all about the Jap's death? Did you see anything suspicious going on at any time?" Kirby asked.

"No, sir. Nothin' a-tall."

The rough rider signaled the taxi-cab, which was circling the lake at the foot of the hill. Presently it came up the incline and took on its passengers.

"Drive to the Paradox Apartments," Kirby directed.

He left Hull outside in the cab while he went in to interview his wife. The lean woman with the forbidding countenance opened the door.

Metaphorically speaking, Kirby landed his knockout instantly. "I've come to see you on serious business, Mrs. Hull. Your husband has confessed how he did for my uncle. Unless you tell the whole truth he's likely to go to the death cell."

She gasped, her fear-filled eyes fastened on him. Her hands moved blindly to the side of the door for support.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

A FULL MORNING.

But only for an instant. A faint color dribbled back into her yellow cheeks. He could almost see courage flowing again into her veins.

"That's a lie," she said flatly.

"I don't expect you to take my word. Hull is in front of the house here under guard. Come an' see if you doubt it."

She took him promptly at his suggestion. One look at her husband's fat, huddled figure and stricken face was enough.

"You chicken-hearted louse," she spat at him scornfully.

"They had evidence. A man saw us," he pleaded.

"What man?"

"This man." His trembling hand indicated Olson. "He was standin' on the fire escape acrost the alley."

She had nothing to say. The wind had died out of the sails of her anger.

"We're not goin' to arrest Hull yet—not technically," Kirby explained to her. "I'm arrangin' to hire a private detective to be with him all the time. He'll keep him in sight from mornin' till night. Is that satisfactory, Hull? Or do you prefer to be arrested?"

The wretched man murmured that he would leave it to Lane.

"Good. Then that's the way it'll be." Kirby turned to the woman. "Mrs. Hull, I want to ask you a few questions. If you'll kindly walk into the house, please."

She moved beside him. The shock of the surprise still palsied her will.

In the main her story corroborated that of Hull. She was not quite sure when she had heard the shot in its relation to the trips of the elevator up and down. The door was closed at the time. They had heard it while standing at the window. Her impression was that the sound had come after James Cunningham had ascended to the floor above.

Kirby put one question to the woman innocently that sent the color washing out of her cheeks.

"Which of you went back upstairs to untie my uncle after you had run away in a fright?"

"N-neither of us," she answered, teeth chattering from sheer funk.

"I understood Mr. Hull to say—"

"He never said that. Y-you must be mistaken."

"Mebbe so. You didn't go back, then?"

The monosyllable "No" came quavering from her yellow throat.

"I don't want you to feel that I'm here to take an advantage of you, Mrs. Hull," Kirby said. "A good many have been suspected of these murders. Your husband is one of these suspects. I'm another. I mean to find out who killed Cunningham an' Horikawa. I think I know already. In my judgment your husband didn't do it. If he did, so much the worse for him. No innocent person has anything to fear from me. But this is the point I'm makin' now. If you like I'll leave a statement here signed by me to the effect that neither you nor your husband has confessed killing James Cunningham. It might make your mind a little easier to have it.

She hesitated. "Well, if you like."

He stepped to a desk and found paper and pen. "I'll dictate it if you'll write it, Mrs. Hull."

Not quite easy in her mind, the woman sat down and took the pen he offered.

"This is to certify—" Kirby began, and dictated a few sentences slowly.

She wrote the statement, word for word as he gave it, using her left hand. The cattleman signed it. He left the paper with her.

After the arrangement for the private detective to watch Hull had been made, Olson and Lane walked together to the hotel of the latter.

"Come up to my room a minute and let's talk things over," Kirby suggested.

As soon as the door was closed, the man from Twin Buttes turned on the farmer and flung out a swift demand at him.

"Now, Olson, I'll hear the rest of your story."

The eyes of the Swede grew hard and narrow. "What's bitin' you? I've told you my story."

"Some of it. Not all of it."

"Whadja mean?"

"You told me what you saw from the fire escape of the Wyndham, but you didn't tell what you saw from the fire escape of the Paradox."

"Who says I saw anything from there?"

"I say so."

EGGS IN MANY STYLES, AND OTHER GOOD RECIPES.

For egg nests, beat the whites of eggs to a stiff froth, salt lightly and spread roughly in the bottom of a buttered dish. Make nests, some distance apart, for the yolks of the eggs, carefully place the yolks in these nests, dust with salt and pepper, and bake until the white is a golden brown.

For Sienna eggs, slice six hard-boiled eggs, put a layer of the slices in a buttered dish, sprinkle with grated cheese. Add another layer of eggs, then more cheese, and so on until all are covered. Turn enough white sauce over the dish to moisten the crumbs thoroughly, dust with buttered crumbs and bake ten minutes.

Eggs "bonne femme" are prepared in this way: Slice two onions and fry a delicate brown in butter or olive oil. Butter a baking dish, spread the onions over it, break over them the required number of eggs, season with salt and pepper and bake in a hot oven. When done, sprinkle with fried bread crumbs and serve.

To fold an omelet properly, first run a spatula under the omelet to loosen it, then make a slight incision with a knife through the middle of the omelet at right angles to the handle of the pan. Grasp the handle of the pan in the hand, placing the back of the hand underneath with the thumb pointing away from you. With the spatula fold one-half of the omelet over the other half, then holding the pan over the platter the omelet can be turned out upon the platter.

Try baked eggs; the family will enjoy them for a change. Cover the bottom of a low china baking dish with a layer of buttered crumbs. Break as many eggs, one by one, as there are people to be served, and lay carefully in the buttered crumbs. Sift over them more crumbs, seasoned and buttered, and bake until the crumbs are brown. Or cut thin slices of bread, trim off the crusts, lay in a well-buttered dish and cover with thin slices of bread, trim off the crusts, lay in a well-buttered dish and cover with thin slices of cheese. Beat enough eggs to cover the bread, season with salt and pepper and pour over the bread. Bake in a moderate oven until the eggs are set, then serve very hot in the same dish.

Spiced raisin relish requires one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of water, one-half cupful of vinegar, one teaspoonful of whole cloves, one two-inch piece of stick cinnamon and two cupfuls of seeded or seedless raisins. Tie the spices in cheesecloth; add water, vinegar and spices to the sugar and cook very slowly until most of the syrup has been absorbed. Pour into sterilized glasses and seal. Served with meats.

Cranberry and raisins relish is made with two cupfuls, or one pint of cranberries, one orange, one lemon, two cupfuls of brown sugar, one-half cupful of vinegar, two cupfuls of seeded or seedless raisins, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one teaspoonful of nutmeg, one-half teaspoonful of cloves. Cut the cranberries in half and wash in a colander to remove seeds. Wash the orange and lemon and cut into very thin slices, then cut into small pieces. Mix the ingredients and cook very slowly until thick. Pour into sterilized glasses and seal.

Maple syrup cake is timely. To make, use one-half cupful of sugar, one-third cupful of butter or some butter substitute, three-quarters of a cupful of maple syrup, one-half cupful of milk, a pinch of salt, two and one-quarter cupfuls of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, three egg whites. Cream the sugar and butter together. Add the syrup and stir well. Add the milk and flour alternately. Fold in the beaten whites and bake in an oblong pan. When the cake is baked and cool, place it on an inverted cake-pan and cover with boiled maple frosting.

REST YOUR CALLA LILIES.

The calla lily will not bloom well unless it is given a complete rest in summer. Take the pots outside when the leaves turn yellow at the tip, and turn on the side under a clump of bushes and leave until repotting time in the fall. I start them to resting in June and repot in August or September. They will begin to bloom very shortly after being repotted. If you plan to buy a calla do not buy a small plant, but get a dormant bulb or a plant that has been started from one just potted up, for such will bloom far best. The larger the bulb the better the plant and blooms will be. —A. H.

FOR HOT KETTLES.

The housewife who for one reason or another has not yet been able to supply herself with a kitchen cabinet with a zinc or other metal top will find a plain short board or a round one, such as comes out of the top of a keg, very convenient upon which to set hot kettles or dishes that would otherwise burn holes in the table or oilcloth.

Sometimes when I come home from school,
And mother is away.
The house seems awful quiet,

At the Ship Repair Yard.

Here in this ship repair yard are they strung,
Craft from the misty main and inland flows,
Square riggers from the seas whose bells were rung
On romanced tideways where the trade wind blows.
A rusty freighter from the Tyne that shows
The scars and markings of the seven seas,
While here a harbor tug whose trailing tows
Are far forgotten in this lengthening ease.

And in this place there is no rank or caste,
Chack liners with drab lighters lie abreast;
While yacht aristocrats with gilded past
Consort with battered barges, tide caressed.
They seem to hint of graceful, slow decay,
At variance with the bustling seaboard day.

Fear the Only Devil.

Fear is the only devil we have. We fear everything. We live in the thought of fear. Whenever we can eliminate fear from consciousness, it is banished from our world—we are masters. There are but two qualities of thought which are necessary to banish fear. One is consciousness of who you are; the other is consciousness of your power.

Sarcasm.

First Student—"Are you writing to the old man for money?"

Second Student—"No; I am writing a love letter to my father."

Two Very Good Reasons.

A man was travelling on foot in a deserted part of Ireland one evening when he was overtaken by a thunderstorm. About two hundred yards in front of him he saw a cottage, and he made for it as hard as he could go in order to shelter.

On entering he saw an Irishman sitting in the corner of the downstairs room. Water was pouring through the ceiling, indicating that the roof was in a bad state of repair. In fact the spot where the Irishman sat was the only dry one in the house.

"Pat," said the traveller, "why don't you mend it when it's not raining?"

"Oh shure, when it's not raining it don't need fixing, bedad!"

The hour which gives us life begins to take it away.

My Mother's Gown.

My mother wore a cotton gown;
It brushed the ground, where she did pass,
It cast a shadow round about
And touched caressingly the grass.
I used to watch that cotton gown
And clutch with little loving hands.
Oh, would that it could pass again
Across the grey cold winter lands.

The world goes by in silken frocks,
The hurrying world bent on its way;
Yet all my dreams are centred in
Her cotton frock of yesterday.
And when my years come to an end
And greater roads I'm turning down,
I guess I'll find my mother there
Dressed in her simple cotton gown.

A Newly Discovered Tune.

The saying about the little one half of the world knows of how the other half lives is as true in musical matters as in others, and an amusing confirmation of it occurred a few months ago. A famous foreign violinist and composer, who had been visiting the British Isles frequently during a period of twenty years or so, was walking in the streets of Edinburgh when he heard a boy, who evidently was uncultured and unlearned, whistling a tune that was obviously a folksong. This, thought the artist, was a real discovery, and giving the boy a substantial tip, he made him repeat the tune till he himself had fixed it in his mind. Returning to his hotel he arranged it as a piece for violin or piano, and his press agent sent 'round to the papers the good news of his discovery. And then it turned out that the tune was the "Londonderry Air," which, for many years past had been one of the most popular both as a song and as a theme for bigger works! And the violinist did not know it!

BROKEN IN HEALTH

After An Attack of Influenza—Health Now Restored.

"I am writing to tell you what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me," says Mrs. J. H. Oulton, Firdale, Man. "A few years ago I was in a badly rundown condition, so much so that I was subject to fainting spells which would leave me in such a condition that I could hardly go about. Then I was stricken with influenza, which was epidemic at that time, and this still further weakened me, and throughout the whole winter I remained in this condition. I was constantly taking doctor's medicine, but as it did not seem to help me, my mother advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I got a couple of boxes to start on. When these were done I seemed to feel an improvement and I got a further supply to continue the treatment. I took in all about a dozen boxes, and by that time I was in the best of health and had gained in weight. My faith in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is now unbounded, and I keep a supply on hand and take them occasionally if I am not feeling quite well. I often recommend them to others, and cannot praise them enough for restoring my health."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are useful in all cases where the blood is thin and watery as their mission is to build up and purify the blood. That is why they give new strength and vigor after an attack of influenza, and it is also the reason why they are beneficial in nervous disorders, neuralgia, rheumatism and that condition generally described as all run down."

You can get the pills from your druggist, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

He Picked a Professor to Win the War.

General Foch was almost unknown in England before he became generalissimo of the allied forces. Not until after 1918 did the editors of Who's Who include him among the thousands of notable men and women. But there was one Englishman at least who years before the war understood his remarkable qualities. In Celebrities Mr. Coulson Kernahan pays tribute to the prescience of Lord Roberts, the "man who knew."

Lord Roberts, writes Mr. Kernahan, was not only a great soldier but also a keen observer and shrewd judge of character; he took a man's measure wholly uninfluenced by what was or was not written or said of the man. He had his own opinion of Foch. Speaking on July 29, 1908, he said:

"They refuse to believe me, and we sleep under a false security, for I do not hesitate to affirm that we shall have a frightful war in Europe, and that England and France will have the hardest experience of their existence. They will in fact see defeat very near, but the war will finally be won by the genius of a French general named Ferdinand Foch, professor at the military school at Paris."

Thus almost exactly six years before the war Lord Roberts predicted precisely what would happen in the war when it came. That in itself was a memorable fact. But that he should thus have marked out a professor and a lecturer in the schools, who was a second lieutenant in 1874, between which time and 1908 he had had no opportunity of proving his military abilities by commanding troops in actions of any importance, if indeed he had seen any action at all, and that he should have marked him as the man who was to lead the allied cause to victory, is surely one of the most remarkable examples of prescience in all history.

His Hearing Restored.

The invisible ear drum invented by A. O. Leonard, which is a miniature megaphone, fitting inside the ear entirely out of sight, is restoring the hearing of hundreds of people in New York city. Mr. Leonard invented this drum to relieve himself of deafness and head noises, and it does this so successfully that no one could tell he is a deaf man. It is effective when deafness is caused by catarrh or by perforated or wholly destroyed natural drums. A request for information to A. O. Leonard, Suite 437, 70 Fifth avenue, New York city, will be given a prompt reply. advt

Life would be frightfully dull without obstacles to overcome. We can get about anything in this world if we go after it. All we have to do is to keep our hands, our minds, and our sense of humor working. Opportunity isn't just around the corner—but it's around the next corner too—and around the corner after that! And, too, if you should happen to live where there are no corners,—well, it's there just the same.—E. A. Paddock.

Tanlac Saved Life Says Ottawa Lady

Mrs. Varalo Tells of Recovery From Complication of Troubles — Gives Tanlac Full Credit.

'That I am alive and in good health to-day I can attribute to nothing but Tanlac," is the remarkable statement recently made by Mrs. Eva Varalo, 233 Cumberland St., Ottawa, Ontario, Canada.

For two long years I suffered terribly from indigestion, constipation, extreme nervousness, sleeplessness, palpitation of the heart, almost continuous sick headaches and shortness of breath, until life seemed a burden to me and I had given up hopes of ever regaining my health.

"But Tanlac helped me the very first day I took it, and now after using seven bottles my health and strength are as fine as can be, and everyone remarks how well I look. I eat heartily, my food digests just perfectly, my nerves are steady, I sleep sound, my heart never troubles me and work is like play. Really, the way the treatment restored me to perfect health seems almost miraculous. Tanlac is simply grand."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Surnames and Their Origin

SAVILLE

Variation—Sayville.

Racial Origin — Norman-French and English.

Source—A locality or a given name.

In the given instance it is not possible to tell without genealogical research whether this family name is derived from a place name or a given name. The chances are, however, that in the majority of cases this particular family name is the development of a place name.

It is met with quite frequently in the medieval English records as "de Sevele" and "de Sayville," and under circumstances that leave little doubt as to its being born by personages in the service of William the Conqueror or his successors.

But there is some doubt as to the place referred to. It would be going too far to say that it did not mean the modern city of Seville, though this would appear unlikely. On the other hand, it is conceivable that it could have come from the place in Belgium called Serville. Yet the letter "r" is not to be found in the earlier forms of the surname, and though possible, it is not likely that it was injected at a later period into the name of the town.

TABOR

Variation—Taber.

Source—An occupation, or an inn sign.

This family name may be a development either of the word "tabourer" (sometimes "taburer") or "tabur."

You'd probably laugh to-day if you should run across such a family name as "Basedrummer," but this is virtually the meaning of the name of Tabor.

The "tabur" of the medieval period was a drum. The "taburer" was the man who beat the drum, and there were many of them, for there were many traveling orchestras in those days, with their reed instruments, their six-stringed viols and their drums.

In many instances, however, innkeepers and shopkeepers, in that period when it was useless to hang lettered signs above their doors, owing to the inability of most of the population to read, used to identify their inns and shops with pictorial signs, seizing upon any subject or combination of subjects for illustration, in order to distinguish his place from those of his neighbors. It was natural that the drum should often be used for such an illustration, and it was quite common to shorten such a name as "William at the Tabur" into simply "William Tabor."

HEALTHY CHILDREN ALWAYS SLEEP WELL

The healthy child sleeps well and during its waking hours is never cross but always happy and laughing. It is olny the sickly child that is cross and peevish. Mothers, if your children do not sleep well; if they are cross and cry a great deal, give them Baby's Own Tablets and they will soon be well and happy again. The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach, banish constipation, colic and indigestion and promote healthful sleep. They are absolutely guaranteed free from opiates and may be given to the new-born babe with perfect safety. The new sales tax will not increase the price of Baby's Own Tablets, as the company pays the tax. You can still obtain the Tablets through any medicine dealer at 25 cents a box, or by mail, post paid, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The World's Tallest Man?

One of the tallest men alive to-day, possibly the tallest, is Armand Bronner, who hails from the Jura Mountains. He is 7ft. 5½in. in height, and his stretch from finger-tip to finger-tip is close on 8ft., while, as his boots are 17¾in. long, his patronage is eagerly sought by the bootmakers in his locality.

Bronner was born in 1890, and only ceased to grow when he was thirty years of age. It is a remarkable fact that he only weighed 4½lb. when born. His great height is not shared by any other member of his family, the tallest being 5ft. 9in.

Unlike most giants, who outgrow their strength, Bronner is exceedingly strong, and can carry a weight of nearly half a ton with ease. His health is excellent, and so is his appetite. He eats little meat, but consumes a huge quantity of vegetables.

Food and clothing necessarily cost him about twice what an ordinary man would have to pay, and his tailor, when fitting him, requires a step-ladder to reach his shoulders. At present this giant is touring Europe, and hopes shortly to visit England.

A Protective Periwig.

"Treat 'em rough!" seems to have been the motto that guided Mr. W. D. M. Bell in his dealings with the Karamojans of Africa. The way to be successful with the wild tribesmen, as he points out in the Country Life, is to get the upper hand at the first brush. Therefore when several insolent fellows tried to prevent him from watering his animals he acted on that rule.

I seized a cutting-edged club from a by-stander, he says, sprang over to one of the obstructors and dealt him the hardest blow on the head I possibly could. To my astonishment the club flew to pieces, and the native turned on me and smiled. I had hit his shock-absorbing periwig of hair and plastered mud. I might as well have struck a fully inflated automobile tire!

It was rather a setback; the only good effect was that everyone except myself roared with laughter. But then when even I began to see the humor of it I spotted a mischievous fellow calmly jabbing his spear through our water-proof ground sheet. That would not do! I drew my pistol. Now those natives were then at a most dangerous stage of ignorance regarding firearms; they firmly believed that all they had to do to avoid being struck by the bullet was to duck when they saw the smoke. Therefore when I covered them no one moved; they were waiting for the smoke. When they heard the vicious bang of the little weapon and saw no smoke the laugh was on them and especially on the fellow who had been so busy on my ground sheet; for with a ridiculous air of surprised injury he now stood looking at a half-severed and completely spoilt spear in his hand. Then the natives began to edge nervously away.

YOU CANNOT JUDGE BY APPEARANCE.

It is impossible to tell the quality of tea by the appearance of the leaf. A rough, coarse, unevenly rolled tea may taste much better in the cup than a closely rolled, well tipped tea that LOOKS much finer. The only way to be sure of getting tea of reliable quality is to buy a tea like "SALADA," whose goodness and purity are guaranteed.

The Home of History.

No. 10 Downing Street has been the official residence of British Prime Ministers for nearly two hundred years. It is well called "the centre of the British Empire," for many fateful decisions have been made within its walls.

Few people are aware that Downing Street is named after a man named George Downing, who went to America at the age of fifteen, afterwards returning and entering Parliament. He became a baronet, and was a great favorite of Charles II., who gave him the land in Whitehall upon which he built the famous street.

Sir Robert Walpole was the first Prime Minister to occupy No. 10. This was in 1731, and since that time most of his successors have lived there.

By and by I will provide warmth the birds will come and nest in me. By and by I will be shelter from the storm to those who have gone under the roof. By and by I will be the strong ribs of the great vessels, and the tempest will beat against me in vain while I carry men across the Atlantic." "O foolish little acorn, wilt thou be all this?" I ask. "Health Is After All Your Biggest Asset"

EXCESSIVE mental strain—worries and anxieties consequent on the ups and downs of business—

The difficulties in estimating what the future holds in store—

These are some of the causes which have hastened the end for many prominent men during recent years:

Employer and employee alike have been subjected to greater strain of brain and nerves than ever before.

Too often the value of guarding the health has been overlooked and the results are a warning to the survivors to remember that health after all is our biggest asset.

It is comparatively easy to restore the exhausted nerves by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food provided treatment is begun in reasonable time.

When digestion breaks down—when you cannot rest or sleep—when you find yourself nervous and irritable you may be sure it is time to ease up and begin the use of this restorative treatment.

The brain and nerve cells are not getting proper nutrition. Nor will they so long as too much nervous energy is wasted in worry and anxiety and too little left to control the organs of digestion.

There is no magical way in which the depleted nerve cells can be restored.

They must be patiently nourished back to health and strength.

This restorative process is best brought about by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This has been proven in so many thousands of cases that evidence is to be found in almost every community. Ask your friends and be master of your health by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

You will notice that while the price of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has been increased to 60c. the box now contains 60 pills instead of 50 as formerly.

Likewise Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are 35c. for 35 pills, instead of 25c. for 25 pills.

Why Ford Predominates

Many Reasons From Many Users

If you were to ask the next fifty Ford owners you meet why they prefer Fords, you would get a wide variety of answers.

Some would say, "Because they seem never to wear out;" others would answer, "Because they cost so little." Many would reply "Because I can get service anywhere;" and just as many, "Because it is the only car I can afford to own."

All would tell you, "Because they master a bad road in any weather," a woman driver would respond, "Because I can drive it so easily." From the fleet-owners you would hear, "Because I can buy two or three or four Ford Trucks for the price of one big truck.

Wherever you might inquire you would hear expressed these basic reasons why Ford predominates —why, year after year, Ford sales equal the total sales of all other cars combined.

Dominion News in Brief

Halifax, N.S.—Since he beginning of the new year, the seventh of Canada's direction finding stations has been completed for service by the radio branch of the Dept. of Marine and Fisheries to serve the boats which navigate the Bay of Fundy and the stretch of coastal waters to Boston. Once a ship in distress is within 400 miles of the Canadian shore, no matter where on the Atlantic or Pacific sides, it is possible for the wireless operator to press the spring and get location from a finding station, specially built for the purpose and equipped with special apparatus.

St. John, N.B.—The past month has been very favorable for work in the lumber woods and good progress has been made with the work. Most operators finished cutting operations some days ago and their crews are busilly engaged in hauling the logs to the brows. It is expected that the work will be pretty well advanced before the end of the present month.

Montreal, P.Q.—The total value of pulp and paper exports for January was $7,821,000, an increase of about $17,000 over December, according to a report of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association. Of this the United States took $7,283,000 and the United Kingdom $188,503.

Ottawa, Ont.—Canada's harvest of the sea during January is valued at $1,238,551, according to a bulletin issued by the Dept. of Mines and Fisheries. During the month 376,330 cwts. of sea fish were marketed commercially on both Atlantic and Pacific coasts. In January, 1923, 175,787 cwts., valued at $628,201 were landed on both coasts.

Winnipeg, Man.—In conjunction with the extension service of the provincial department of agriculture, the C.P.R. will operate special cars over its Manitoba lines to demonstrate field and fodder crops. A carload of all varieties of seed will be carried for distribution at the points visited. Forty districts will be visited.

Regina, Sask.—The average value of occupied farm lands in Canada declined last year, according to a report issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. It is now returned as $37 per acre, as compared with $40 in 1922 and 1921. This includes both improved and unimproved lands, with dwelling houses, barns, stables and other farm buildings. By provinces, the highest value is in British Columbia, i.e., $100, the remaining provinces showing values of per acre as follows: Ontario, $64; Quebec, $56; Brunswick, $32; Nova Scotia, $31; Manitoba, $28; Saskatchewan, $24, and Alberta, $24.

Prince Edward Island, $51; New

Edmonton, Alta.—The total enrolment at the Alberta University this term, according to the annual report, is 1,314, of which 696 are in Arts and Sciences, and 190 in Medicine. There are 900 men and 414 women students. British-born students total 1,003, Canadians 762, foreign 239, of which 188 are from the United States.

Victoria, B.C.—A despatch from London, Eng., states that the Sudan Government, through Capt. E. C. Midwinter, general manager of railways and steamers, Sudan, Africa, has accepted a tender from a British Columbia firm for 150,000 railway ties of Douglas fir. The contract expressly stipulates that the railway ties shall be of Canadian origin.

CANADA RECEIVES $8,000,000 WAR DEBT

Britain Makes Final Settlement of War Accounts Between Two Governments.

A despatch from London says:—Canada will receive from the British Treasury next week the sum of $8,000,000 in final settlement of war accounts between the two Governments. The British Treasury is returning to Canada at the same time the $67,000,000 of Canadian bonds which were received in the early days of the war as a loan, but were never marketed, the securities being used merely as collateral. The British Government at first asked Canada to credit her to the extent of the face value of the bonds, $67,000,000, but Canada pointed out that as they bear interest at only 3½ and 4 per cent., they could be marketed among post-war investors here only at a big discount. It would, therefore, be much cheaper to let the bonds remain in England until the date of maturity, 1945. After negotiations between Chancellor Philip Snowden and Canada's representative, P. C. Larkin, the British Treasury agreed to accept a rate of .48 for the bonds. Providing the bonds are cancelled, Canada's war debt will be reduced by between $8,000,000 and $9,000,000 by this adjustment.

Mail for Russia Must be Addressed "Soviet Republic"

A despatch from Paris says:—Russia as such no longer exists and mail addressed to that country in the near future will be refused to the frontier of what was once the domain of the Romanoffs. These facts are revealed in instructions received by Bolshevist agents here, which order them to expunge the name Russia from all maps and records in their possession, substituting "Federation of Soviet Republics."

This action follows the change of name in the case of Petrograd to Leningrad and is believed to be the first instance in history where a Government has repudiated the country it governs.

Lighthouse for Automobiles on Dangerous Hill in England

A despatch from London says:—Great Britain now has its first inland lighthouse. It has been erected on a dangerous hill between Birmingham and Manchester for the guidance of automobiles.

CANADIAN HONORED FOR GALLANTRY

Capt. Robinson Receives Silver Medal of Order of St. John of Jerusalem.

A despatch from Ottawa says:—The Order of St. John of Jerusalem, of which his Majesty the King is Patron, and H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught President, at the instance of the Canadian Branch of the St. John Ambulance Association, has awarded the silver medal of the Order to Capt. Robinson, C.B.E., of the Canadian Pacific S.S. Empress of Australia, for his gallant action in saving his ship and passengers, as well as thousands of refugees, on the occasion of the disastrous earthquake in Japan in September last. Word to this effect has just been received at the head office of the association in this city.

This is only the second time that the medal has been awarded to a Canadian, the first occasion being some years ago, when the recipient was Conductor Reynolds of the C.P.R.

The medal of the Order, originally instituted in 1874, is awarded for gallantry in saving life.

Arrangements will be made to present the medal to Captain Robinson on his return from his present trip around the world in command of the Empress of Australia.

Choir of 10,000 Singers for British Empire Show

A despatch from London says:—One of the outstanding features of the British Empire Exhibition this summer will be the imperial choir of 10,000 singers. The scores which will be used in the six concerts to be given weigh fully twenty tons. There will be more than 500 instrumentalists. The expenses for the rehearsals now taking place, including bus and train fares, will come to approximately $100,000. Already 3,000 members of the choir are engaged in rehearsals.

British Unemployed Have Received $1,960,000,000

A despatch from London says:—The remarkable sum, approximately, of £392,000,000 ($1,960,000,000) has been contributed by the British Exchequer for the relief of the unemployed since the signing of the armistice. This includes over £100,000,000 ($500,000,000) used in resettling ex-service men, but does not include £100,000,000 ($500,000,000) contributed to the unemployment fund by employers and workers.

Vancouver will be represented at the Empire Exhibition at Wembley this spring by the three members of "E" Division, Royal Canadian Mounted Police, pictured above. They are: Constable H. C. Foster, Sergeant L. G. Sampson, and Constable D. L. McGibbon.

FREE STATE TO PROBE INTO ARMY REVOLT

President Cosgrave to Assume the Office of Minister of Defence.

A despatch from Dublin says:—President Cosgrave will assume the office of Minister of Defence, from which Richard Mulcahy has resigned. The Dail Eireann, after an exciting debate, adopted without division the motion of Kevin O'Higgins, Minister of Home Affairs, that the President be appointed to the post. Mr. O'Higgins added that during Mr. Cosgrave's illness he himself would act for him as Defence Minister.

A striking feature of the debate was the testimony of Major Bryan Cooper, who was British press censor in Ireland during the war, that the rank and file of the army had beeen absolutely true to their oath, and that the insubordination had been limited to officers. Demobilization had nearly provoked a mutiny in the British army in 1919, but in Ireland, he asserted, the men had stood firm.

The Army Council had put themselves indefensibly in the wrong. Remarking the Ireland was not yet out of the woods, Major Cooper appealed for unity and the banishment of personal considerations.

Professor John MacNeil, Minister of Education, contributed a moderating speech to the discussion. Anybody expecting unusual or abnormal things not to happen in the new Irish State, he said, expected miracles. Secret combinations in the army were once necessary, but the Government's task was to enable the army to grow out of that state. Mutiny by subordinate officers might be bad, but the deliberate and conscious setting aside of the authority of the Government by the Army Council was worse than mutiny, and a Defence Minister who stood for it had no option but to resign.

General Mulcahy then gave his version of the incident. Neither the Chief of Staff nor the Quartermaster-General, he said, had anything to do with the raid, which was carried out under the direction of the Adjutant-General. He intended to deal before the Cabinet tribunal with the question of brotherhoods and secret societies in the army, and he considered that the personnel of the tribunal should be extended to include members other than the Ministerial party.

A later despatch from Dublin says:—The Free State is breathing freely again after the sensation of the last fortnight. The feeling of calm is enhanced by the announcement of the release of Colonels McCrea, Thornton, O'Malley, Slattery, Commandants Dolan, Griffin, Byrne, Halpin, ex-Commandant Shanahan and ex-Captains Collins and Leahy, all of whom were arrested in connection with the military siege of a public house in Parnell Square on Tuesday night in the search for Major-General Tobin and Colonel Dalton.

All accepted and approved the cautions laid down by General Mulcahy when he was Defence Minister that all arms, ammunition and stores taken from certain barracks during the recent mutiny be surrendered to the officers at present in charge of those barracks, and that all the officers concerned surrender, and on presenting parole be allowed out under open arrest, the same conditions also embracing all absentees from duty.

Thus it appears that the whole of the present trouble has blown over, though skeptics think only for the present, as cleavages still remain in the army.

Total grade figures for the month of January show a favorable balance of over $3,000,000 as compared with the same month a year ago, is reported by the Bureau of Statitstics. The total trade for January, 1924, was $136,043,327, as against $132,744,787 in the corresponding period of 1923. Exports for the past month totalled $69,575,167, while imports amounted to $66,468,069, leaving a favorable trade balance of $3,107,107.

FREE STATE ARMY MUTINEERS SHOOT DOWN PARTY OF BRITISH SOLDIERS

A despatch from Cork says:—A British soldier was killed, four are dying and thirty-one others, including two women, were wounded Friday night by four men dressed as Free State officers, who bore down on a military pier in an automobile and fired a machine gun on a leave party of Royal Garrison Artillery, numbering fifty, who had just landed from Spike Island, a British naval base under the treaty.

As the four men drove off, they are said to have shouted: "Up Tobin." Major-General Tobin headed the Free State army mutiny last week and escaped.

Driving back to Queenstown, the four men fired on the destroyer Hythe. No casualties were reported among the crew. Free State soldiers are sweeping the countryside in automobiles to find the firing party. The wounded soldiers were taken back to Spike Island garrison.

President Cosgrave has telegraphed from Dublin to Premier MacDonald as follows:

"I am shocked to learn that British troops were fired upon in Cork Harbor this evening. I hasten to assure you that this cowardly crime will arouse the same horror and detestation throughout Ireland as it has caused to myself and my colleagues.

"Whether the criminals were masquerading in Free State uniforms or otherwise yet remains to be determined. No efforts will be spared to bring them to account. The relatives of the victims and the British nation can rely upon the sympathy and justice of my Government in everything relating to this tragedy."

Mr. A. L. Joliffe
Has recently been appointed Commissioner of Immigration for Canada, with headquarters at Ottawa. He has been for the past five years Commissioner of Immigration at Vancouver.

Churchill Loses Election by Only 43 Votes

A despatch from London says:—By the margin of only 43 votse, Winston Churchill was defeated in his fight for election to Parliament for the Abbey Division of Westminster. He received 8,144 votes, to 8,187 for Otto Nicholson, the official Conservative candidate. The Labor representative, Fenner Brockway, was a good third with 6,156, while Scott Duckers, the Liberal champion, scored the extraordinarily small number of 291.

Drama surrounded this unusual election up to the last moment. The result was in doubt until after the last ballot had been counted, and the newspapers were actually announcing that Churchill had won.

Burglar Leaves Involuntary Aid to Science

A despatch from Paris says:—The recent attempt to loot the Weights and Measures Bureau in Paris has resulted in gain for that institution. A scientific instrument found on the floor turned out to be an automatic lock detector most ingeniously and skillfully made.

Placed over a lock with a lever penetrating the keyhole, the lock detector registers on a sliding scale the position and size of every one of the wards, knowledge indispensable to the making of false keys. Expert locksmiths declare that with the instrument it is possible to make easily and rapidly keys to fit most of the complicated modern safety locks.

VARIETIES RECOMMENDED BY THE O.A.C.

For increased acre yields, it is not only important to use seeds of high quality, but it is very desirable to use those varieties which have proven superior, so says Dr. C. A. Zavitz of the Ontario Agricultural College. The Field Husbandry Dept. has done much in importing, testing, selecting and hybridizing varieties, not only with the object of supplying the most reliable information but also with the aim of originating new varieties which are superior to any already in existence. This is no easy matter to accomplish. We believe, however, that in some of our most important crops of Ontario, varieties of superior merit have been originated. The following list gives our latest information regarding a few of the most desirable varieties of farm crops for use in Ontario:

Oats—O.A.C. No. 72, Banner, and O.A.C. No. 3.

Barley—O.A.C. No. 21.

Winter Wheat—O.A.C. No. 104, Dawson's Golden Chaff, and Imperial Amber.

Spring Wheat—O.A.C. No. 85, Marquis, and Wild Goose.

Spring Rye—O.A.C. No. 61.

Winter Rye—Rosen, New Invincible and Petkus.

Emmer—Common.

Buckwheat—Rye.

Field Peas—O.A.C. No. 181, Arthur and Canadian Beauty.

Field Beans—Pearce's Improved Tree and Pea Beans.

Soy Beans—O.A.C. No. 211.

Vetches—Hairy.

Flint Corn—Gold Nugget, Longfellow, and Salzer's North Dakota.

Dent Corn—Golden Glow, White Cap Yellow Dent, Wisconsin No. 7, and Bailey.

Sweet Corn—Golden Bantam.

Sorghum—Early Amber.

Sunflowers—Black Giant, and Mammoth Russian.

Mangels—O.A.C. No. 2 (strain of Yellow Leviathan).

Swede Turnips—Good Luck, and Hall's Westbury.

Millet—Japanese Panicle, and Japanese Barnyard.

Pasture Rape—Dwarf Essex.

Cow Cabbage—Sutton's Earliest Drumhead.

Early Potatoes—Irish Cobbler.

Late Potatoes—Dooley, and Green Mountain.

Alfalfa—Grimm, and Ontario Variegated.

Sweet Clover—White Blossomed Biennial.

Grasses—Orchard, Tall Oat, and Meadow or Tall Fescue.

Prevention of Losses Among Chicks

By S. W. Knipe

Recent figures show that there are only about 55 chicks raised out of every 100 hatched, and this is on farms where there exists a better average of poultry conditions. Many poultry raisers try to reduce their loss by "doctoring" sick and weakly chicks. They lose sight of the fact that for the previous 9 or 10 months the stock these chicks were raised from had not the care and attention necessary to produce sturdy chickens, and so care of breeding stock results in chicks hatched with weak constitutions, unable to live under ordinary farm conditions. A strong, vigorous chicken, with good brooding system, clean and proper feeding, should be easily raised to maturity. The greatest loss is owing to lack of vitality, which may be caused by poor parent stock, poor care of eggs before they are set, or poor incubation. On farms, where the fowl are allowed to forage for themselves most of the year, there are many mistakes made in breeding, the fault often being due to both male and female. The males, often late hatched, lack vigor and are small in size. Because such birds give a high percentage of fertility in eggs does by no means warrant the assumption that the chicks hatched will be sturdy. Good hens are almost as important as good males. For best results it is not wise to mate the entire flock, better pick out only the best females and mate them to the best males procurable. Never mate cockerels and pullets. Never use hens which have been sick and out of condition. Bowel trouble and diarrhoea are sometimes caused by infection of the eggs, therefore the necessity of not breeding from any birds thus infected. The best of eggs may be ruined by faulty incubation, not only artificial, but when broody hen is used. If the hen is flighty she should not be used. Nests should be in a place easily accessible, where water and food are conveniently obtained. Incubator chicks are just as strong as hen hatched if they are properly hatched. Too high or too low a temperature, not enough fresh air, and wrong moisture conditions, are the most common faults of weak chicks from artificial incubation. Do away with these causes and you hatch good, vigorous, healthy chicks. Good incubators are usually obtained by poultry raisers, yet a great number of these people make the "penny wise" and pound foolish" mistake of thinking they can make a brooder at home quite good enough to brood the small number of chicks they raise. Too often these home-made brooders do not keep the proper temperature nor supply the ventilation necessary. Again, if the brooding system is too small for number of chickens hatched there is apt to be "crowding," causing loss through suffocation. Coops without floors for hen-hatched chicks often result in chilling the little birds. Chills usually bring along bowel trouble.

The close confinement of baby chicks is often claimed to cause leg-weakness, something which rarely is seen in chicks which are allowed on outside run, ever for a few minutes, after they are about a week old. Of course, in stormy or wet weather this is impossible, therefore for such occasions keep sand or fine litter on the floor. Feed grain in dry litter to induce exercise. Keep brooder house well ventilated. Supply green feed such as sprouted oats, lettuce, green alfalfa or clover cuttings.

No matter how brooded the chickens must be kept free from vermin, must be kept dry, must have plenty of exercise, and small birds should not be allowed to run with half-grown ones, as the little chaps don't have a chance to get the proper amount of food if compelled to fight with much larger birds for it. Keep your baby chicks growing every minute till they mature, which can be done by proper feeding. Improper feeding is feeding too soon and without making chicks work for their meals. Positively, do not feed chicks before they are 48 hours old. The yolk of the egg provides food for at least that length of time. Additional food is over-loading a small stomach and causes digestive troubles.

To sum up the matter, the remedy for the great loss of chicks is "prevention." "Eternal vigilance" is the price which must be paid to reduce the loss to a minimum. Careful feed and attention from the day the chicks are hatched, for remember, these chicks may eventually be the breeders you are going to depend on, and must have every chance to mature into well-developed, vigorous pullets and cockerels.

SHEEP.

Sheep like fresh air and sunshine. If allowed to run at will they seldom seek protection from chilling winds and cold weather. So long as their fleeces are kept dry, they enjoy freedom.

My experience has been that there is danger of housing breeding ewes too closely during the winter months. Like many other flock-owners, I have on cold stormy nights closed the doors and neglected to open windows for ventilation. The following morning the air would be distressingly foul. This, I am thoroughly convinced, is not for the best health of the animals.

Breeding ewes need every advantage. Fresh air is not only essential to their well-being, but it costs little or nothing to provide. Opening the windows from the direction opposite to the prevailing winds generally will give the result sought. This arrangement prevents draughts which cause colds.—L. C. R.

DAIRY.

Cows, like people, are creatures of habit. They eat most of what they like best, if they can choose their diet. It is very natural for them to consume first the food that is most palatable. A searching for the finest morsels, a delicate feeder often throws her feed out in the manger until it has become soiled or mussed up, and then refuses to eat the amount necessary to produce her maximum flow of milk.

The appetite of a cow depends upon the condition of the digestive tract. Often the digestion becomes sluggish from an excess of food low in digestible nutrients. The way to overcome this condition is to feed something that will keep the digestive organs active. Silage will do this. So will roots. Succulent food is, therefore, important when teaching the cow to consume the required amount of the foods she should have.

Select Bacon Hogs.

Ontario showed a good increase in select bacon hogs in January compared with the corresponding month of last year, the number being 29,207 against 13,815. Alberta showed a slight increase, being 4,185 against a slight increase being 1,669 against 1,386. Quebec showed a decrease, being 4,185 against 7,152, and Manitoba's figures this January were 2,793 compared with 3,708 in the corresponding month of last year.

It takes a big man to live up to the estimate of his youthful son.

We hear that dog meat is being eaten in Germany. Maybe some of our mutton-flavored canines could profitably be exported.

Record of Performance for Dairy Cattle.

The popularity of the Record of Performance test work for pure bred dairy cattle, carried on by the Dept. of Agriculture at Ottawa, is brought out by the Hon. Mr. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture, in the report of the work of his Dept. for the year ending March 31st last. In that year alone applications for entry were accepted for 3,868 cows, which was an increase of 882 over the preceding year, and cows were entered for the test from 1,720 farms throughout the Dominion.

A recent modification of the rules governing the test has been brought into effect. This provides for the accepting of entries only from owners who place all their pure bred milking, untested, normal cows in the test. The object of this rule is to stop the practice of some breeders entering one or two of their cows and giving them special care in order to make records that are in many instances considerably higher than the average production of the entire herd.

An interesting fact brought out in the Report is that the Minister's own Department was at that time the owner of the highest producing cow in the Dominion—the Holstein-Friesion "Agassiz Segis May Echo," located at the Experimental Farm, Agassiz, B.C. At the time the report was made, this cow held the world's butter fat record for all breeds and ages, having produced within the year 30,886 pounds of milk containing 1,345 pounds of butter fat. This record has since been slightly exceeded by another Canadian bred cow, "DeKol Plus Segis Dixie," which produced 33,477 pounds of milk and 1,686.5 pounds of butter in 365 days.

Pasture for Hogs.

It is generally acknowledged by successful hog raisers that there is economy in pasturing hogs during the growing period. This practice not only develops general thrift but is conducive to the healthy growth so essential to hogs of the "select" bacon type. The question then arises, What pastures are best for hog raising? According to experiments conducted at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, Japanese millet has proved to be a more economical producer of pork than either oat and barley pasture or sweet clover and oats. The sweet clover and oat pasture came second, barley pasture third, and oat pasture at the foot of the list. During the pasturing period, the hogs were fed a similar grain diet in all experiments, as well as milk to drink.

With the millet pastured hogs, gains were made at a cost of 4.01 cents per pound as compared with 4.79 from sweet clover and oats, 5.46 from the oat pasture, and 5.87 from the barley pasture lot. The pasture crops were sown on the 5th of June, and the hogs were placed in the plots one month and one day later when the growth of forage averaged from 6 to 9 inches in length.

Of the several crops tested, Japanese millet proved to have the greater stock carrying capacity. Nine hogs on a plot 115 by 30 feet in size were unable to consume this crop quickly enough, and it was found necessary, after a few weeks, to divide the plot into halves, and place six other pigs on the second half of the lot. The grain ration consisted of a mixture of middlings, shorts, ground oats, ground corn and tankage, with skim milk.

Supplying Bacon Type Sows.

The introduction of hog grading has created a general demand for brood sows of the bacon type. To assist farmers in securing these, the Live Stock Branch of the Dept. of Agriculture at Ottawa, through the agency of field men, makes suitable stock available in districts where it is most needed. According to the Report of the Dominion Minister of Agriculture for the past fiscal year, 757 head of bacon type sows were purchased in Ontario and shipped for sale direct to farmers in various parts of Quebec. Besides these, more than three hundred Quebec brood sows were turned over from the breeders to districts that had not been supplied. In the Province of Alberta, according to this Report, 42 young sows of the Yorkshire breed were purchased and sold to pig club members, and a quantity of similar stock was made available to Ukranian settlers. That this work will produce good results in due time is shown from the experience of the Peace River District, which was supplied with bacon type hogs of both sexes two years ago. The stock coming out of the district the year following the introduction comprised a much higher percentage of select stock than that marketed from other parts of Alberta.

How to Treat Garget.

In cases of garget, give one pound of Epsom salt in three pints of tepid water well sweetened with molasses; then one-half ounce each of powdered saltpeter and poke root, in feed, once or twice daily. In severe cases give two to four drams of formaldehyde twice daily in water, instead of above medicines. Rub into udder once or twice daily a mixture of one part each of turpentine and fluid extracts of belladonna leaves and poke root, and five parts of melted and unsalted lard or warm sweet oil. In severe cases rub in a mixture of equal quantities of carbolized oil, comphorated oil, and compound soap liniment.—Dr. A. S. Alexander.

THE CHILDREN'S HOUR

TWO LITTLE SOMETHINGS.

When little Jackie Rabbit and Billie Woodchuck, Junior, returned from school one afternoon, they found their mothers were not at home. This was very unusual, and they were quite pleased. You see, they lived right next door to each other, so it meant they could have a nice long play together and their mothers would not be there to call them to do some little task.

"Come over and play in my yard, Billie," said Jackie, as he saw his little friend coming out of the house munching a big sugar cookie. (Jackie was enjoying a big ginger one with a raisin in the middle).

Billie didn't need a second invitation, because Jackie had a big swing in the maple tree in the back yard. Of all the things he liked to do, Billie thought he liked swinging the best. To go as fast as the wind to and fro up among the leaves was heaps of fun. And this is what Mother Rabbit and Mother Woodchuck found their children doing when they returned home.

"Come here, Jackie," called his mother from the back door. And off Jackie went running, with Billie following as fast as his chubby legs could carry him.

"I want you to go on an errand, Jackie. Take this package down to Sammie Squirrel's house. Mrs. Squirrel has a big surprise for you, two little somethings. Billie's mother says he may go with you."

"What do you mean by two little somethings, Mother?" asked Jackie.

"Run along, children, and you will see," she answered, "but be sure and hurry back."

"Two little somethings," questioned Billie and Jackie, "what do you think they can be?"

"I bet they are two little cars," said Jackie, "and maybe we can ride in them."

"I'll bet they are two swings, and I can have a swing in each one," said Billie.

"Rap, tap, tap," on Sammie Squirrel's door.

A pretty lady squirrel all in white opened the door for them.

"Come in boys," she said.

"Please, ma'am, mother sent this package to you," said Jackie. "And she said you had two little somethings to show us."

"That's right, I have, boys. Just wait a minute." And she went tiptoeing off into the bedroom.

In a minute she was back. "Come right in this way, boys," she said. "Here are the two little somethings that your mother told you about."

And weren't they surprised when they peeked into the bedroom, for there in a snow white cradle were two little baby squirrels.

The boys wanted them to come out and play, but the nurse said they must wait until they had grown to be a little stronger.

"What's their names?" asked Billie.

"This one is Sue, and this one is Sally," said the nurse as she tucked them in more closely.

The boys wanted to stay longer, but it was time for the baby squirrels to have their nap, so the nurse had to send them home.

"We'll be back to see Sue and Sally to-morrow," said Jackie.

"You bet we will," said Billie, "and maybe they won't be so sleepy then."

As one rotten apple will spoil a bushel, so will one scrub bull damage the whole herd a decade hence.

Teaching Our Boys and Girls How to Accept Responsibility

BY HELEN GREGG GREEN.

"I don't understand Aileen! She is positively lazy about the house," complained Aileen's mother. "She'd let me wait on her hand and foot, if I'd do it. And I guess I nearly do."

"My dear," spluttered Aunt Emmy Lou, "I can explain the case. You started wrong with Aileen. When she was a wee girl you were always doing things for her. "Wait, dear, it's raining. Let mother get your overshoes and umbrella. If you asked her to dry the dishes, and she wanted to play instead, you would say, 'Run along, dear, mother will do them!' Yes, you were Ailee's servant. There's no doubt about that."

The mother winced. "Oh, surely—"

"Yes, it's true!" Aunt Emmy Lou interrupted. "I believe in being a child's aid, friend and mother, but never his servant. No wonder Aileen is lazy now. You've taught her to be, encouraged it!"

"Oh, Aunt Emmy Lou, don't be cross with me," Virginia smiled. "But I guess you're right. I never thought of her laziness being my fault before. Why does it take us so long to wake up? From now on, I'll have a different system with my little girl."

But she was just twelve years too late beginning the proper "system."

It's not a kindness to a child to do the hundred and one little things that he should be taught to do for himself. We must teach our children initiative, and to do this they must have little responsibilities of their own. As they grow older these may be increased so that they will gradually become more efficient and better able to face the responsibilities of life.

One of the most unhappy girls I know is one who had a great deal of responsibility thrust upon her when she was wholly unprepared for it. Of course she was not equal to it. Her parents had shielded her all her life from the responsibilities she should have had. Even very small children should be given a small amount of responsibility; first in homeopathic poses, to be increased as the child grows older. Then in time he will be able to accept all that comes in his way in a capable, experienced manner.

Registered Silver Foxes.

The Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Dominion Minister of Agriculture, in the report of his department for the year 1922-23, makes reference to silver fox farming. This industry, the Minister points out, had its inception in Prince Edward Island, in the vicinity of Tignish, somewhere in the early eighties. It has now spread from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and is firmly established on a business basis. According to this Report, the Canadian Silver Fox Breeders' Association was incorporated in 1920, when a stud book was opened for the registration of all foxes that came up to a required standard and which had been bred in captivity for a certain number of generations. Up to the end of March, last year, 10,000 foxes had been accepted for registration and were tatooed on the ears for identification.

The Live Stock Branch of the Department, at the request of breeders, recently took over the inspection of the foundation stock. The period of the year in which inspection can be made is limited from late September until the middle of January. Inspection has to be delayed until this date owing to the fact that it is the quality of the fur that makes silver foxes valuable and some cold weather must be experienced before the quality of the winter coats can be judged. The stopping of inspection in the middle of January is said to be due to the commencement of the breeding season at that time, when ranches have to be closed to all except those in charge.

With respect to the production feature of the silver fox industry, it is stated that there is a steadily increasing demand for furs of all kinds, and at the same time the supply from the wilds is just as steadily decreasing. Accordingly, in order to keep up the supply, it will be necessary to breed more and more fur bearing animals in captivity. As the silver black fox produces a high priced fur and one that cannot be successfully imitated, a demand for his pelt is bound to continue.

The wiseacre who said that it is good for one to do something disagreeable each day, apparently did not realize that most of us fulfilled that unpleasant duty by getting up in the morning.

Have the harnesses been repaired and oiled, the wagons been greased, and other tools put in repair? If not, it is likely to be now or never. It will pay to make it now instead of never.

Real Value

The man who places his repair work with a handy man or sends it to a cut rate establishment, for the sake of, what is frequently, a purely visionary saving of a dollar or two, is very apt to later find that instead of a saving, the transaction actually stands him a considerable loss.

You certainly have a right to expect real value for the money you expend in repairs, at a legitimate repair shop.

The TRUE VALUE of repairs, properly executed, can perhaps be better reckoned in days, weeks, and months of subsequent satisfactory performance, than in terms of mere dollars and cents of initial cost.

We believe we are giving the public the cheapest service obtainable in this locality today (all things considered) We aim to deliver real and true value on every transaction and if we succeed in this our customers must surely profit as well as ourselves.

Help us to succeed, and come in for your full share of the customers profits.

HAVE GLASSES GONE UP IN PRICE?

This is a question we often are asked. Our answer is

VERY LITTLE

Ten years ago you could get a pair of ordinary glasses for about $5.00 to-day you can get the same thing for about $7.00. In those days the cheapest Bifocals were about $9.00, today the same quality costs you about $10 00.

BUT HERE IS THE DIFFERENCE

To-day, people want the best that can be had, and the best cost from $15.00 to $20.00, but you can have the cheaper kind if you want them.

IT'S UP TO YOU.
